Clarendon museum gets recognized for annual cookoff

The American Chuck Wagon Association announced this week that Clarendon's Saints' Roost Museum is the recipient of the ACWA's 2014 Event Award for the museum's annual Col. Charles Goodnight Chuckwagon Cookoff.

The ACWA awards program is designed to honor those outstanding individuals and teams who have contributed to the ACWA in an effort to better the organization through their commitment, leadership, dedication, public outreach and service in preserving the time period of the chuck wagon heritage.

The Event Award is bestowed upon an event that is considered to best exemplify what competitors feel best exemplifies "the best run chuck wagon cook off." ACWA members may nominate events for the award, which is then selected by the organization's board of directors.

The Museum will be recognized at the ACWA annual meeting in Fort Davis on November 1.

City aldermen look at signs and crosses

The Clarendon Board of Aldermen last week took its first official look at religious markers that have been turning the heads of travelers on US 287 for more than two years.

The discussion about 40 or more ten-foot crosses and more than a dozen four-foot by eight-foot religious signs was brought to the table at the October 14 city meeting by Alderman Sandy Skelton, who said he wanted the board to consider possibly adopting an ordinance to govern future signs and markers.

"I requested this issue to be placed on the agenda for discussion simply because of the strong feelings it has generated among city residents and visitors traveling through Clarendon," Skelton told the board. "Some like the crosses and signs, and others say they over the top - too many signs and crosses - and that they send a message of intolerance toward other religions." Skelton went on to say that was not proposing anything be done about the signs and crosses that are currently existing, but that rules should be considered for the future. He also said he thinks most residents would agree that too many signs within the city limits with the same message is excessive and takes away from the attractiveness of the city.

City Secretary Machiel Covey noted that the city does have a sign ordinance. She said the rules were approved by the board of aldermen in 1995, are six pages long, and require a permit to be issued for all new signage in the city.

Jim Griffin, the man responsible for the signs and crosses, said he approached the city about any needed permits before installing them and was told by then city administrator Lambert Little that he did not need one. Addressing the board, Griffin said he is a servant of Jesus Christ and that he doesn't consider the cross to be a sign.

"It's a symbol of Jesus' love for you," he said. "He shed his blood on that cross."

Griffin said he has had nothing but positive feedback from travelers, and he said his mission is to witness to every person who comes through Clarendon.

Griffin also said he had no problem with rules governing signs and markers as long as the work he has done is grandfathered.

While Griffin has received only good comments, other travelers' statements to the Clarendon Visitor Center and the Enterprise have reflected mixed reactions. Some people have liked the crosses, but others say the crosses and signage are too much and make the town look bad.

Aldermen took no action on the subject last Tuesday, and it's not clear what - if anything - may be done in the future. City Hall said this week that officials have compared Clarendon's sign ordinance to other cities' and found the rules to be similar. The sign ordinance is not scheduled to be on next week's agenda.

In other city business, the board discussed a "perpetual" garage sale that was going on for some time on US 287 and operated by Lynn Floyd. City officials said the sale should be cleaned up soon with the cooperation of the property owner, but an ordinance governing garage sales and limiting how long they can operate will be presented at the next meeting.

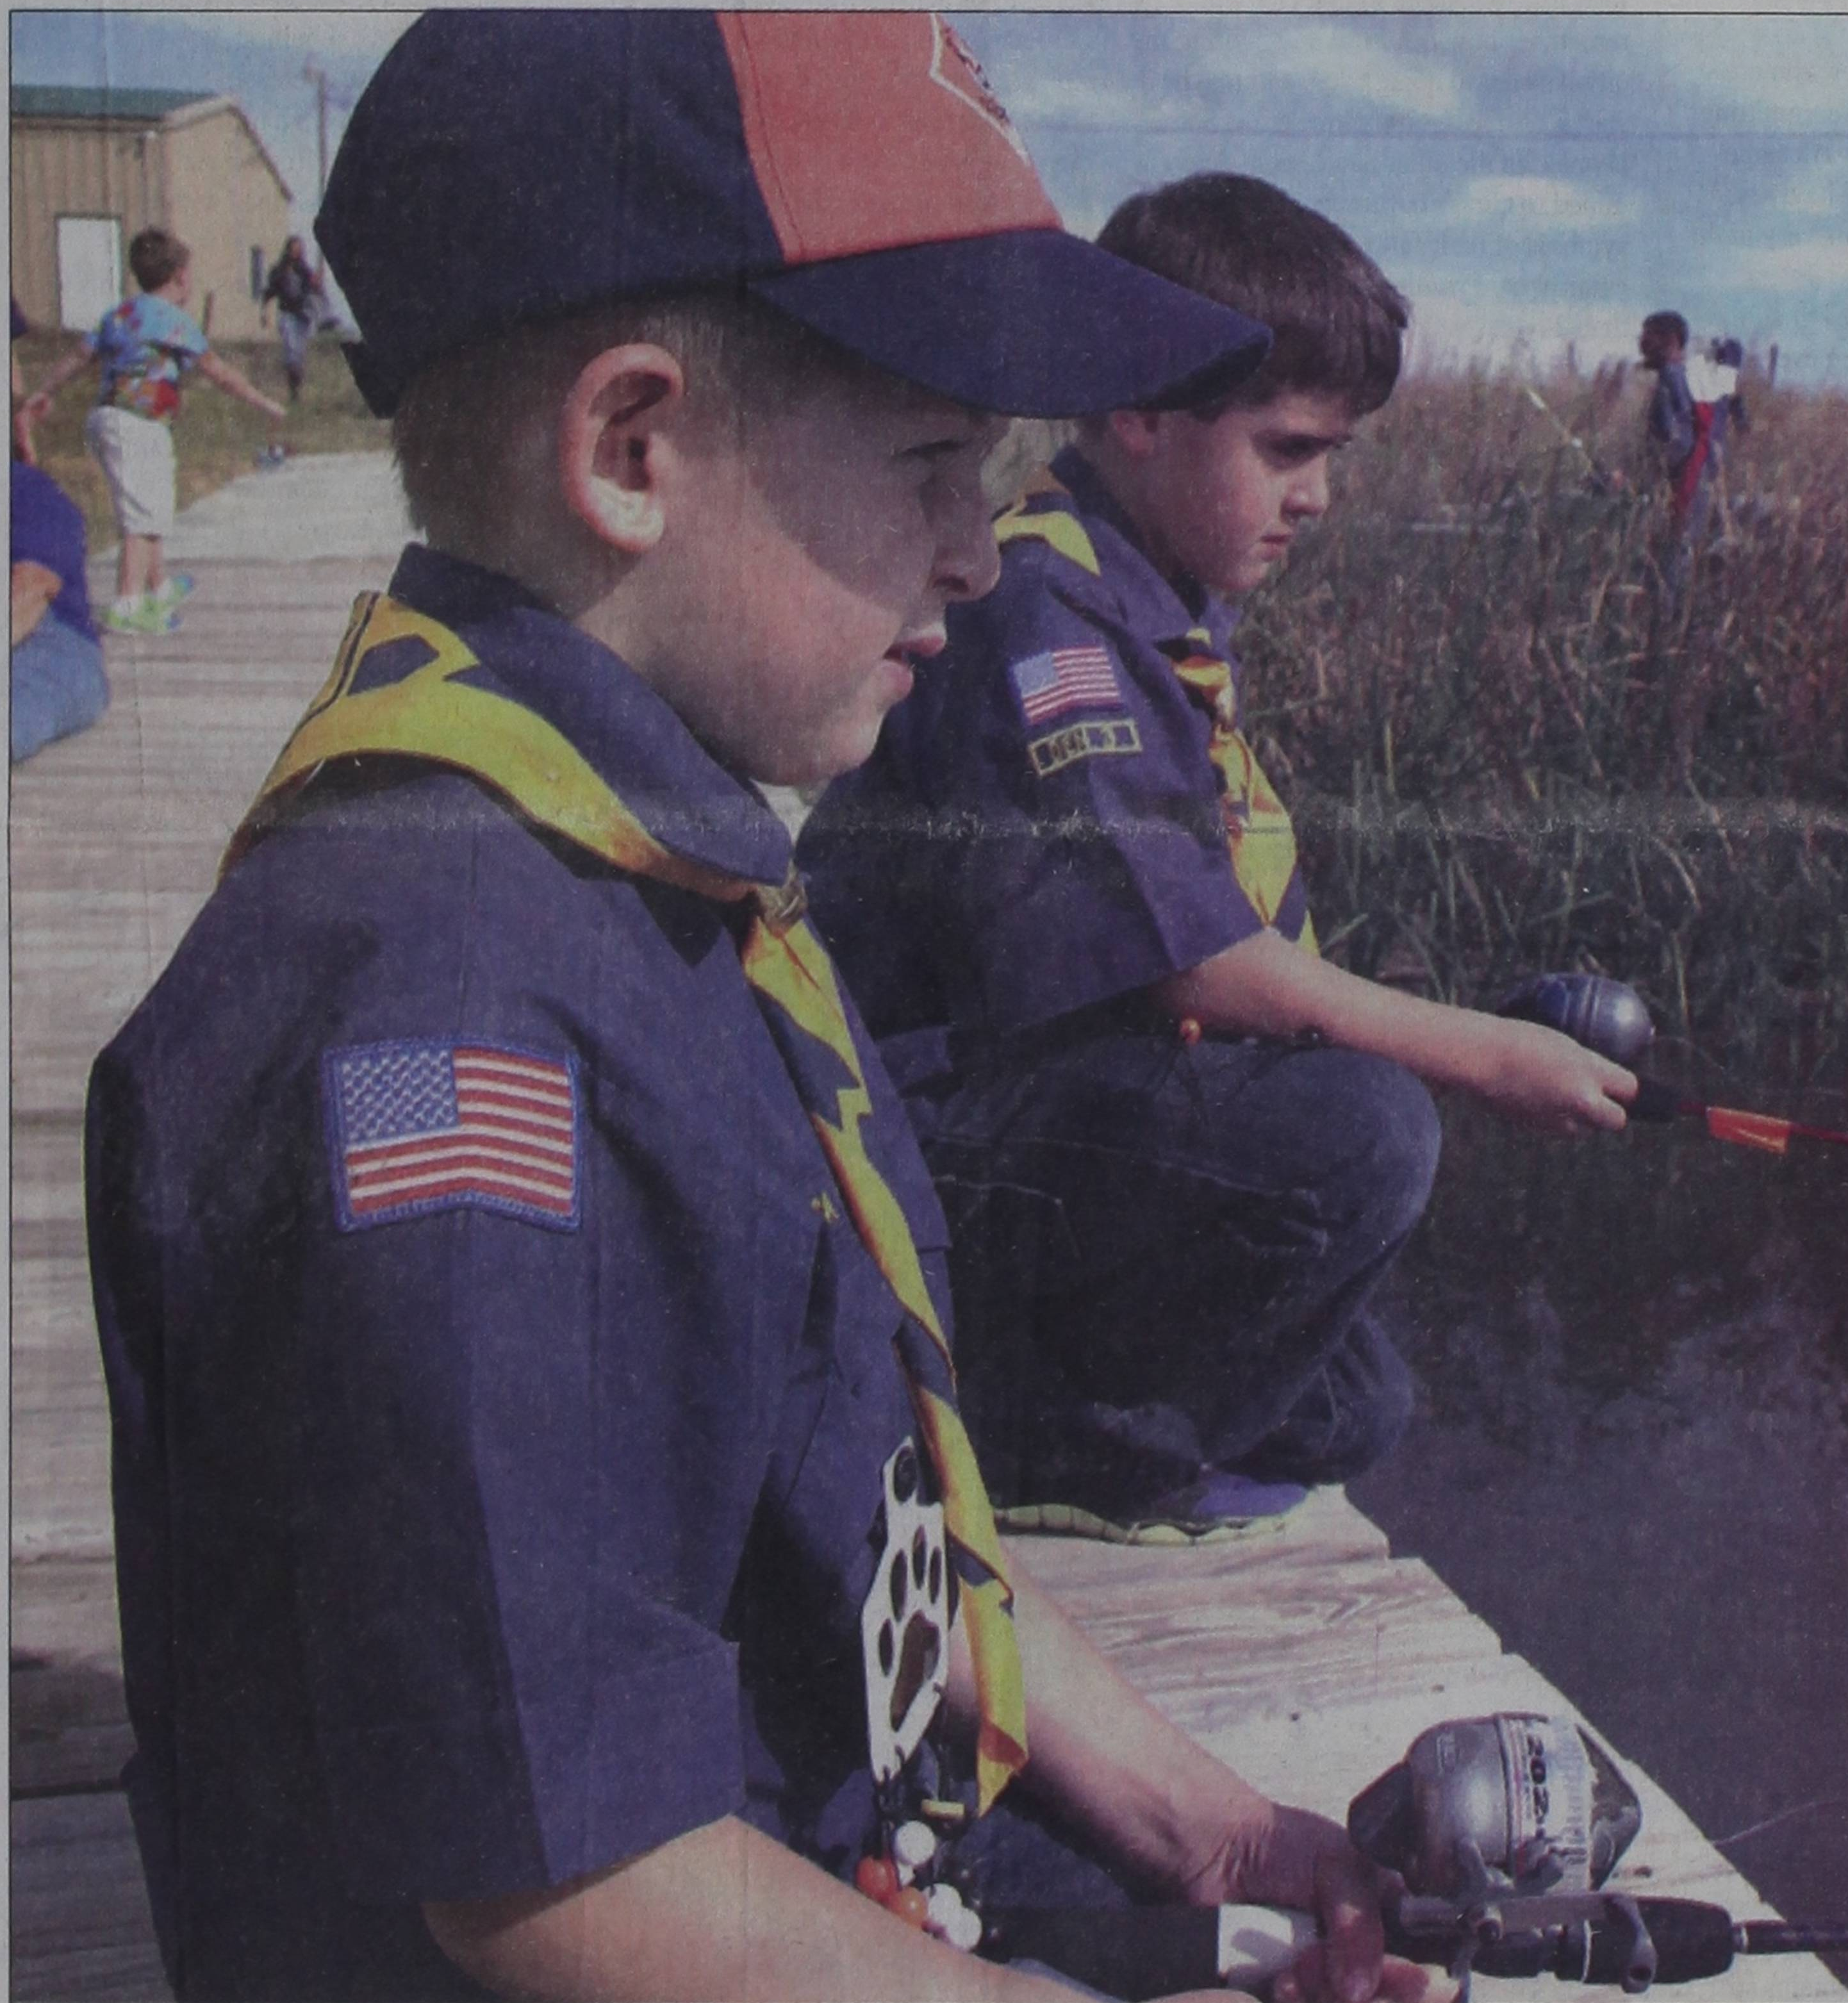

Aldermen also considered the date and frequency of the regular city meetings. Alderman Larry Jeffers, who was absent last week due to illness, has lobbied for reducing the number of regular city meetings from twice a month to once a month. But Alderman Skelton said he was not in favor of the idea.

"We don't have a city manager, and we have so much to do," Skelton said. "We have a full agenda every time, and I want to see us keep moving forward."

The board took no action on the subject, choosing instead to wait until Jeffers could be present to discuss the matter further.

Alderman considered purchasing a street sweeper for the city and agreed to purchase one for an amount not to exceed $50,000. Mayor Larry Hicks had said he thought the city could get a used sweeper for about $35,000, but Alderman Doug Kidd said he was in favor of spending the money to get something good.

Les Beaux Arts Festival to be this weekend

The sixth annual Clarendon Arts Festival will be held this week October 23, 25, and 26 at the Donley County Activity Center located one mile north of the city on State Hwy. 70.

The event, sponsored by Clarendon's Les Beaux Arts Club, begins with the Preferred Buyers Reception held Thursday evening, October 23, where buyers will be delighted with the variety being offered at the Clarendon Arts Festival this year.

Many art works were checked in this week at the Clarendon Arts Festival. Anyone is welcome at Thursday's reception; and if you haven't already pre-paid as a preferred buyer, you can pay that night at the door.

As well as the large selection of art being offered, buyers enjoy the heavy hors d'oeuvres prepared by the ladies of Les Beaux Arts Club.

The Clarendon Arts Festival opens to the public Saturday at 9:00 a.m. and again at noon on Sunday. Those attending the Festival Sunday can enjoy St. Mary's famous Annual Enchilada Dinner.

In addition to the art show, there are many artists setting up booths with hand-constructed items for sale.

The 2014 Clarendon Arts Festival is sponsored by the Clarendon Economic Development Corporation and Hotel Occupancy Tax, Donley County Activity Center, and Clarendon Family Medical. With all the fine art and crafts showing here this weekend, everyone should be able to find a unique gift or treasure.

Early vote underway in general election

Sixty-one people already cast ballots in this year's General Election following the first day of early voting Monday at the Donley County Courthouse Annex.

Early voting by personal appearance continues through next Friday at the County Clerk's office, and two races are of particular local interest.

Precinct 4 voters are deciding if they want to keep incumbent Republican Dan Sawyer as their county commissioner or if they would prefer Democratic challenger Ricky Rattan.

And voters in Precincts 1 & 2 can cast ballots for Republican Pam Mason to serve as their Justice of the Peace, or they can vote for the late Connie Havens. The incumbent Democrat passed away September 16, but her name is still on the ballot. If Havens gets the most votes, county commissioners would have to appoint someone to that post after the election is canvassed.

Local candidates running unopposed include incumbents County Clerk Fay Vargas (D) and County Treasurer Wanda Smith (R) as well as John Howard (R) for County Judge and Daniel Ford (R) for Commissioner of Pct. 2.

Also of local interest, US Representative Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) is challenged by Democrat Mike Miner, Libertarian Emily Pivoda, and Green Party candidate Don Cook.

State Rep. Ken King (R-Canadian) faces opposition from Libertarian Kerry McKennon, and State Sen. Kel Seliger (R-Amarillo) is joined on the ballot by Libertarian Steven Gibson.

Texans are also determining several statewide and area races, including governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, and others as well as several judicial seats. Voters will also consider a state constitutional amendment regarding funding transportation improvements. Voters are urged to get informed on the issue and the races before them on the ballot.

This year's general election will be held Tuesday, November 4.

Love in the abstract and the concrete

We non-celebrities of the world – and there are millions of us – are fueled by whirling curiosity about show business folks of glitz and glamour abiding comfortably in luxury's lap. On familial matters of the rich and famous, we are happily outside the loop – some of us further outside than others.

Citizens old enough to have observed, heard about or experienced life for multiple decades, thrive on accounts of relationships – even if they are bittersweet – like the one between the late Henry Fonda with his daughter Jane.

the idle american
by don newbury

On a TV talk show the other night, she spoke warmly of her dad – with whom she claims she had only two serious disagreements. One was her memorable, animated – and often asinine – opposition to the Viet Nam War. It was heart-breaking for her dad and many other Americans. And it likely left a crack in her heart, too....

Did she ever have detractors! She was the butt of jokes, the subject of sneers and a ready reason for ridicule.

When Al Capp – the artist/philosopher who created Li'l Abner – went around the country committing speeches back in the '70s, Jane's name always came up. "People think I don't like Jane Fonda," he'd say. "Why, I'd like to send her a dozen roses this very night if I only knew which jail she's in!"

He also responded to questions planted in audiences. For instance, "Does your woman leg ever bother you?" "Only when I forget to grease it."

Back to Jane. Now 76 and acting like it, she spoke warmly of Henry, and the eagerness with which she accepted her On Golden Pond role some 33 years ago. Maybe that "nailed down" a healing relationship with her dad in this classic movie that included Katharine Hepburn in a starring role.

During the several months of movie-making in New Hampshire, many "I'm sorrys" no doubt were exchanged – her to him and him to her.

She treasures her placement on the Chinese Theater's "Walk of Fame" in Hollywood. Her hand and footprints pressed down there last year, right next to her father's, implanted in 1942. They let her add a little peace symbol – perhaps mostly to him, but to millions of others as well. That did it; I've got to watch On Golden Pond again.... Her dad waited a long time for an Oscar, finally earning one for his crusty retired college professor role in Pond – a half-century into his acting career....

A colorful guy with the Midas touch didn't have to wait nearly so long for recognition. He has been a national figure now in the limelight for several decades, but he entertained in a different way.

Few people realize that he was behind the clever verses Burma-Shave used to display on fence posts across the nation. His office confirmed to me that he indeed wrote for Burma-Shave more than 60 years ago.

The signs represented an advertising budget of leanest proportions, but wound up selling boxcar loads of shaving cream, as well as amusing millions of motorists....

It doesn't strike me as the sort of thing a University of Nebraska student would have done. However, many of us had unlikely jobs for extra cash during college years. He was creative then, and remains so now, applying his genius in the business world. He has accrued billions of dollars. His record of generosity, a portfolio packed with the fruits of good judgment and his smiles and eye twinkles make him easy to trust. We follow him eagerly, this most successful investor of the 20th century who has pledged 99% of his fortune to philanthropy.

He makes clever remarks and is quoted regularly. His love for humankind has long since blown past Nebraska's borders. Thank you, Warren Buffett. I wish you'd run for something. Whichever office you'd seek, you'd win in a landslide. No need for a run-off.

How fortunate America is to have men like Fonda and Buffett as icons. Most of us see them only from afar, yet, in many ways, they've seemed only heartbeats away....

Clarendon – The New Appian Way

Last week, the Clarendon Board of Aldermen addressed the religious billboards and staggering number of sewer-pipe crosses – sort of, that is. Alderman Sandy Skelton brought the issue up of regulating signs. We have an ordinance. However, that was about it as far as it went.

A passing reference was made that perhaps it might be a good thing if the city council looked into the matter further, perhaps in a future meeting. I get the feeling that this council would just as soon leave this issue alone, until it festers to the point where serious disagreement blossoms, things get out of hand, and the sheriff has to intervene. I think that they are kicking the can down the road hoping the issue will go away. It ain't gonna happen, unfortunately. This issue needs to be addressed and resolved.

At the moment, no one seems what can or cannot be done to address this problem. A few people (mainly those putting the infernal things up) like the signs and crosses, while many others don't like them and think that they demean the City of Clarendon. I'm in the second group.

I think the signs and sewer-pipe crosses are cheap, trashy, and embarrassing to the community. Most cities, as a matter of course, do beautification projects in order to put their best foot forward, so visitors to that city will remember how beautiful and inviting the city is, want to come back, and maybe start a business. You know, grow. Some people, on the other hand, seem determined to clutter our town with cheap symbols of their faith, which do not necessarily agree with other expressions of the Christian faith.

For example, when entering Clarendon, folks see a billboard exclaiming, "Clarendon, Texas, Believers in the Cross and Jesus Crucified." Well, this may be true for some people, but it is certainly not true for me and I don't appreciate anyone else presuming to speak for my beliefs. I believe in the Risen Christ, not the cross, an instrument of death! Does this signage speak for the entire town? Is this our new town motto? Who decided that this message accurately reflects the sentiments of the majority of the citizens of Clarendon? Actually, I'm appalled that people see this message coming into town and then have to read it again when leaving town.

Another sign proclaims, "911 Tragedy Worse Things Coming Find Jesus." Really? Are we stooping so low as to use the tragic deaths of thousands of Americans to sell how religious we are? 9-11 was not only a tragedy; 9-11 was an act of war! How can we be so callous as to use such a horrific event to sell our particular brand of righteousness? Furthermore, who says worse things are coming? Who approved this message for the town?

I realize that these signs and crosses are very important to some people's feelings and beliefs. Naturally, they are going to be sensitive about any criticism of them. I also realize that the people who are putting these signs up may not have the deepest pockets in town, and therefore have to use cheap, ugly materials instead of high quality materials that actually enhance the town's beauty. Their message seems to be more important than that getting it across with dignity and class.

Coming into town from the north on Hwy. 70, a billboard proclaims, "Lovers of Pleasure More than God?" Hmmm? What does this mean? Are pleasures and God mutually exclusive? What are people to think when they

the quick, the dead, & fred
by fred gray

drive by such a bizarre billboard? Is the sign directed to the patrons of a certain business located just east of Howardwick? Perhaps visitors will think we are accusing them of loving pleasures more than God. Does it mean that there are no pleasures to be found in Clarendon?

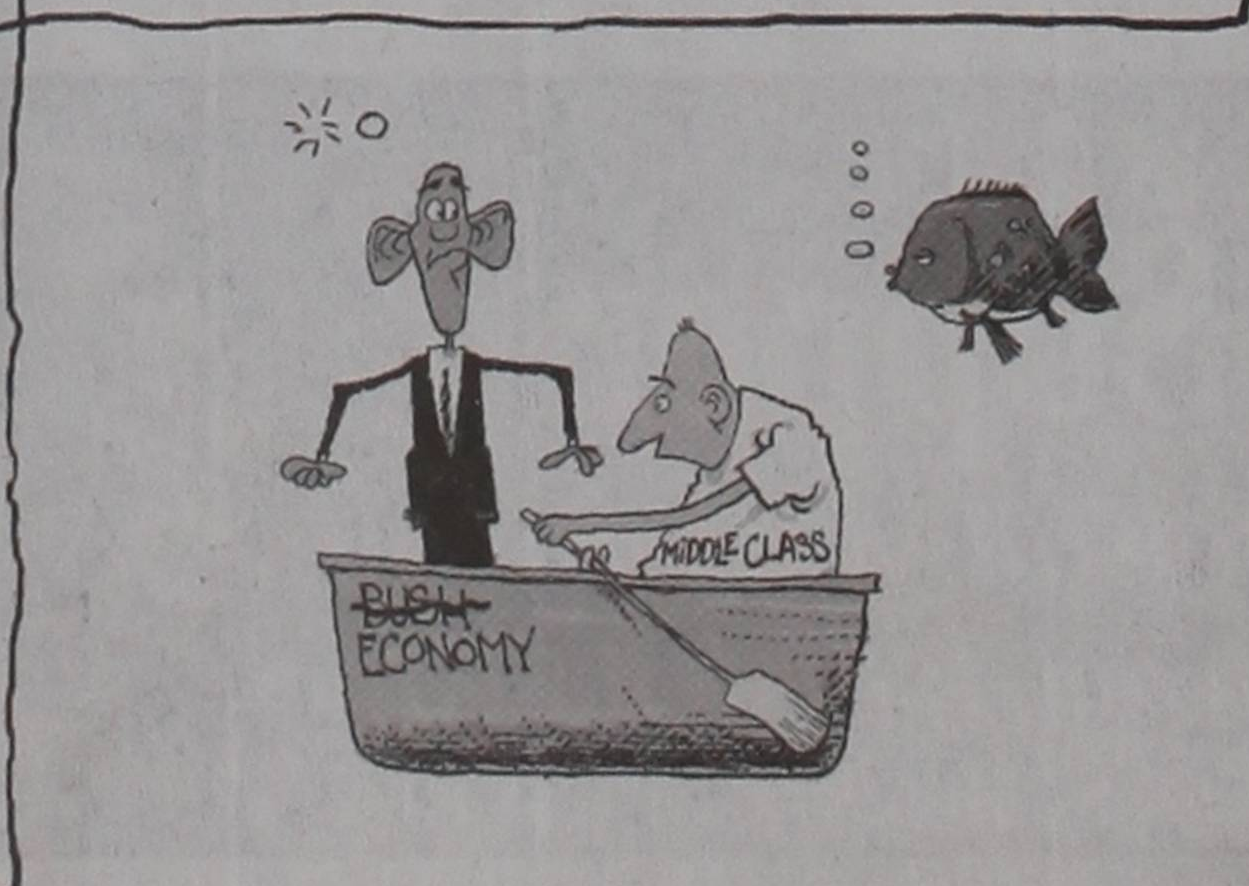

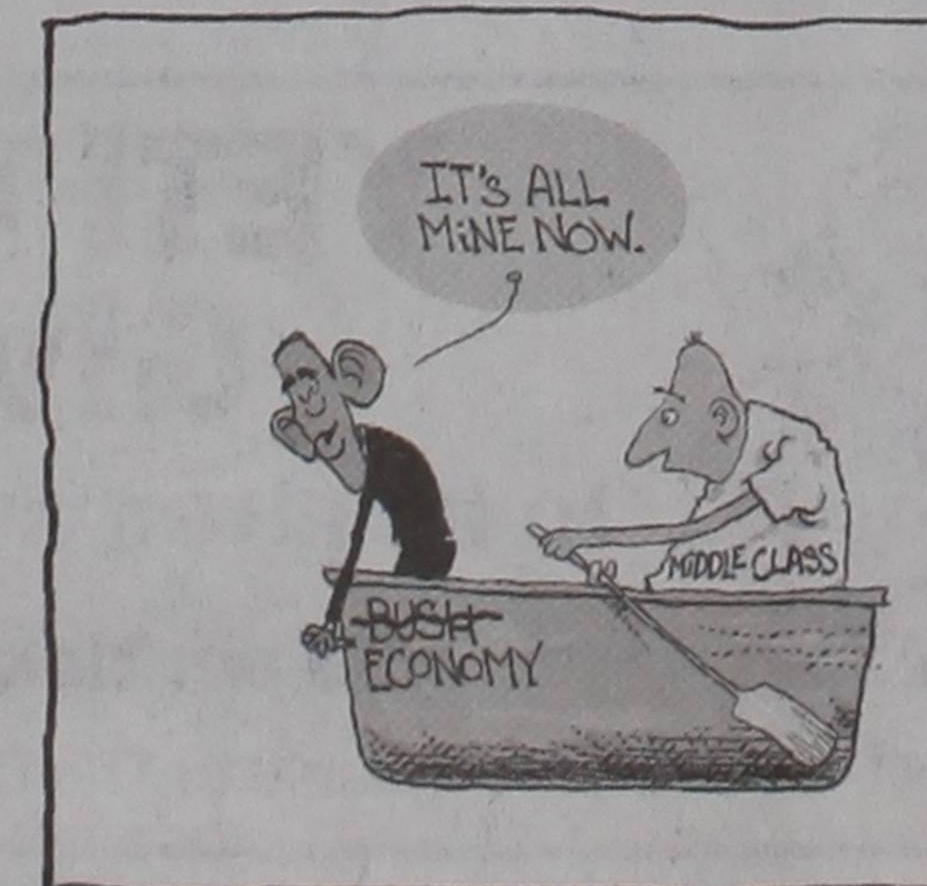

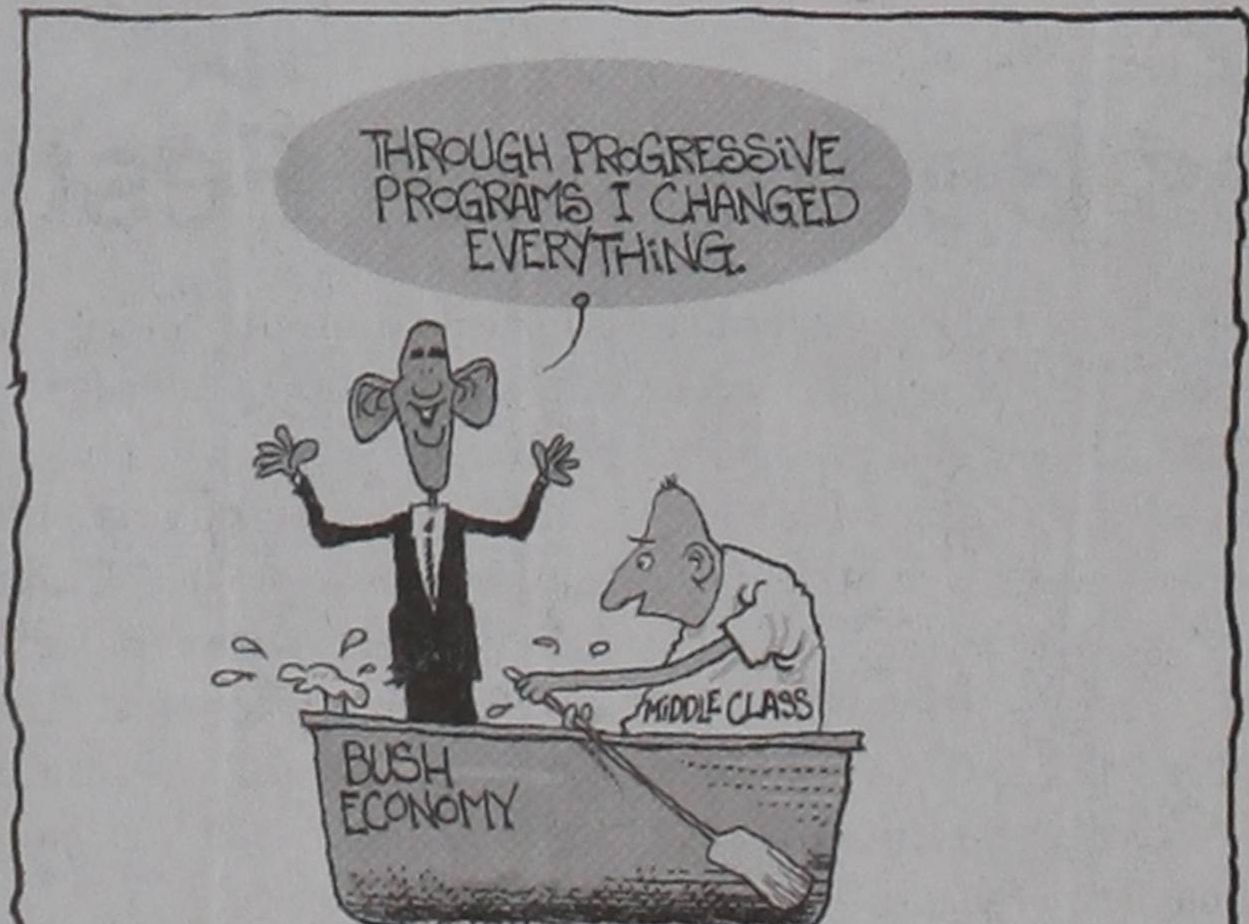

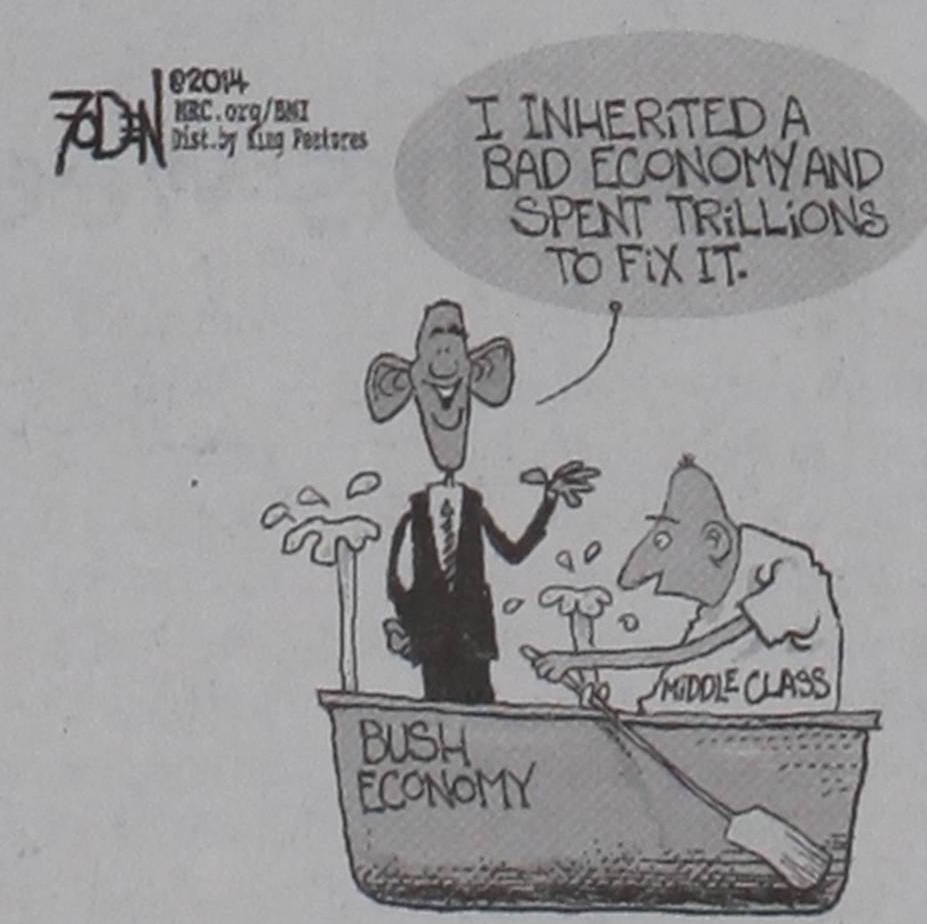

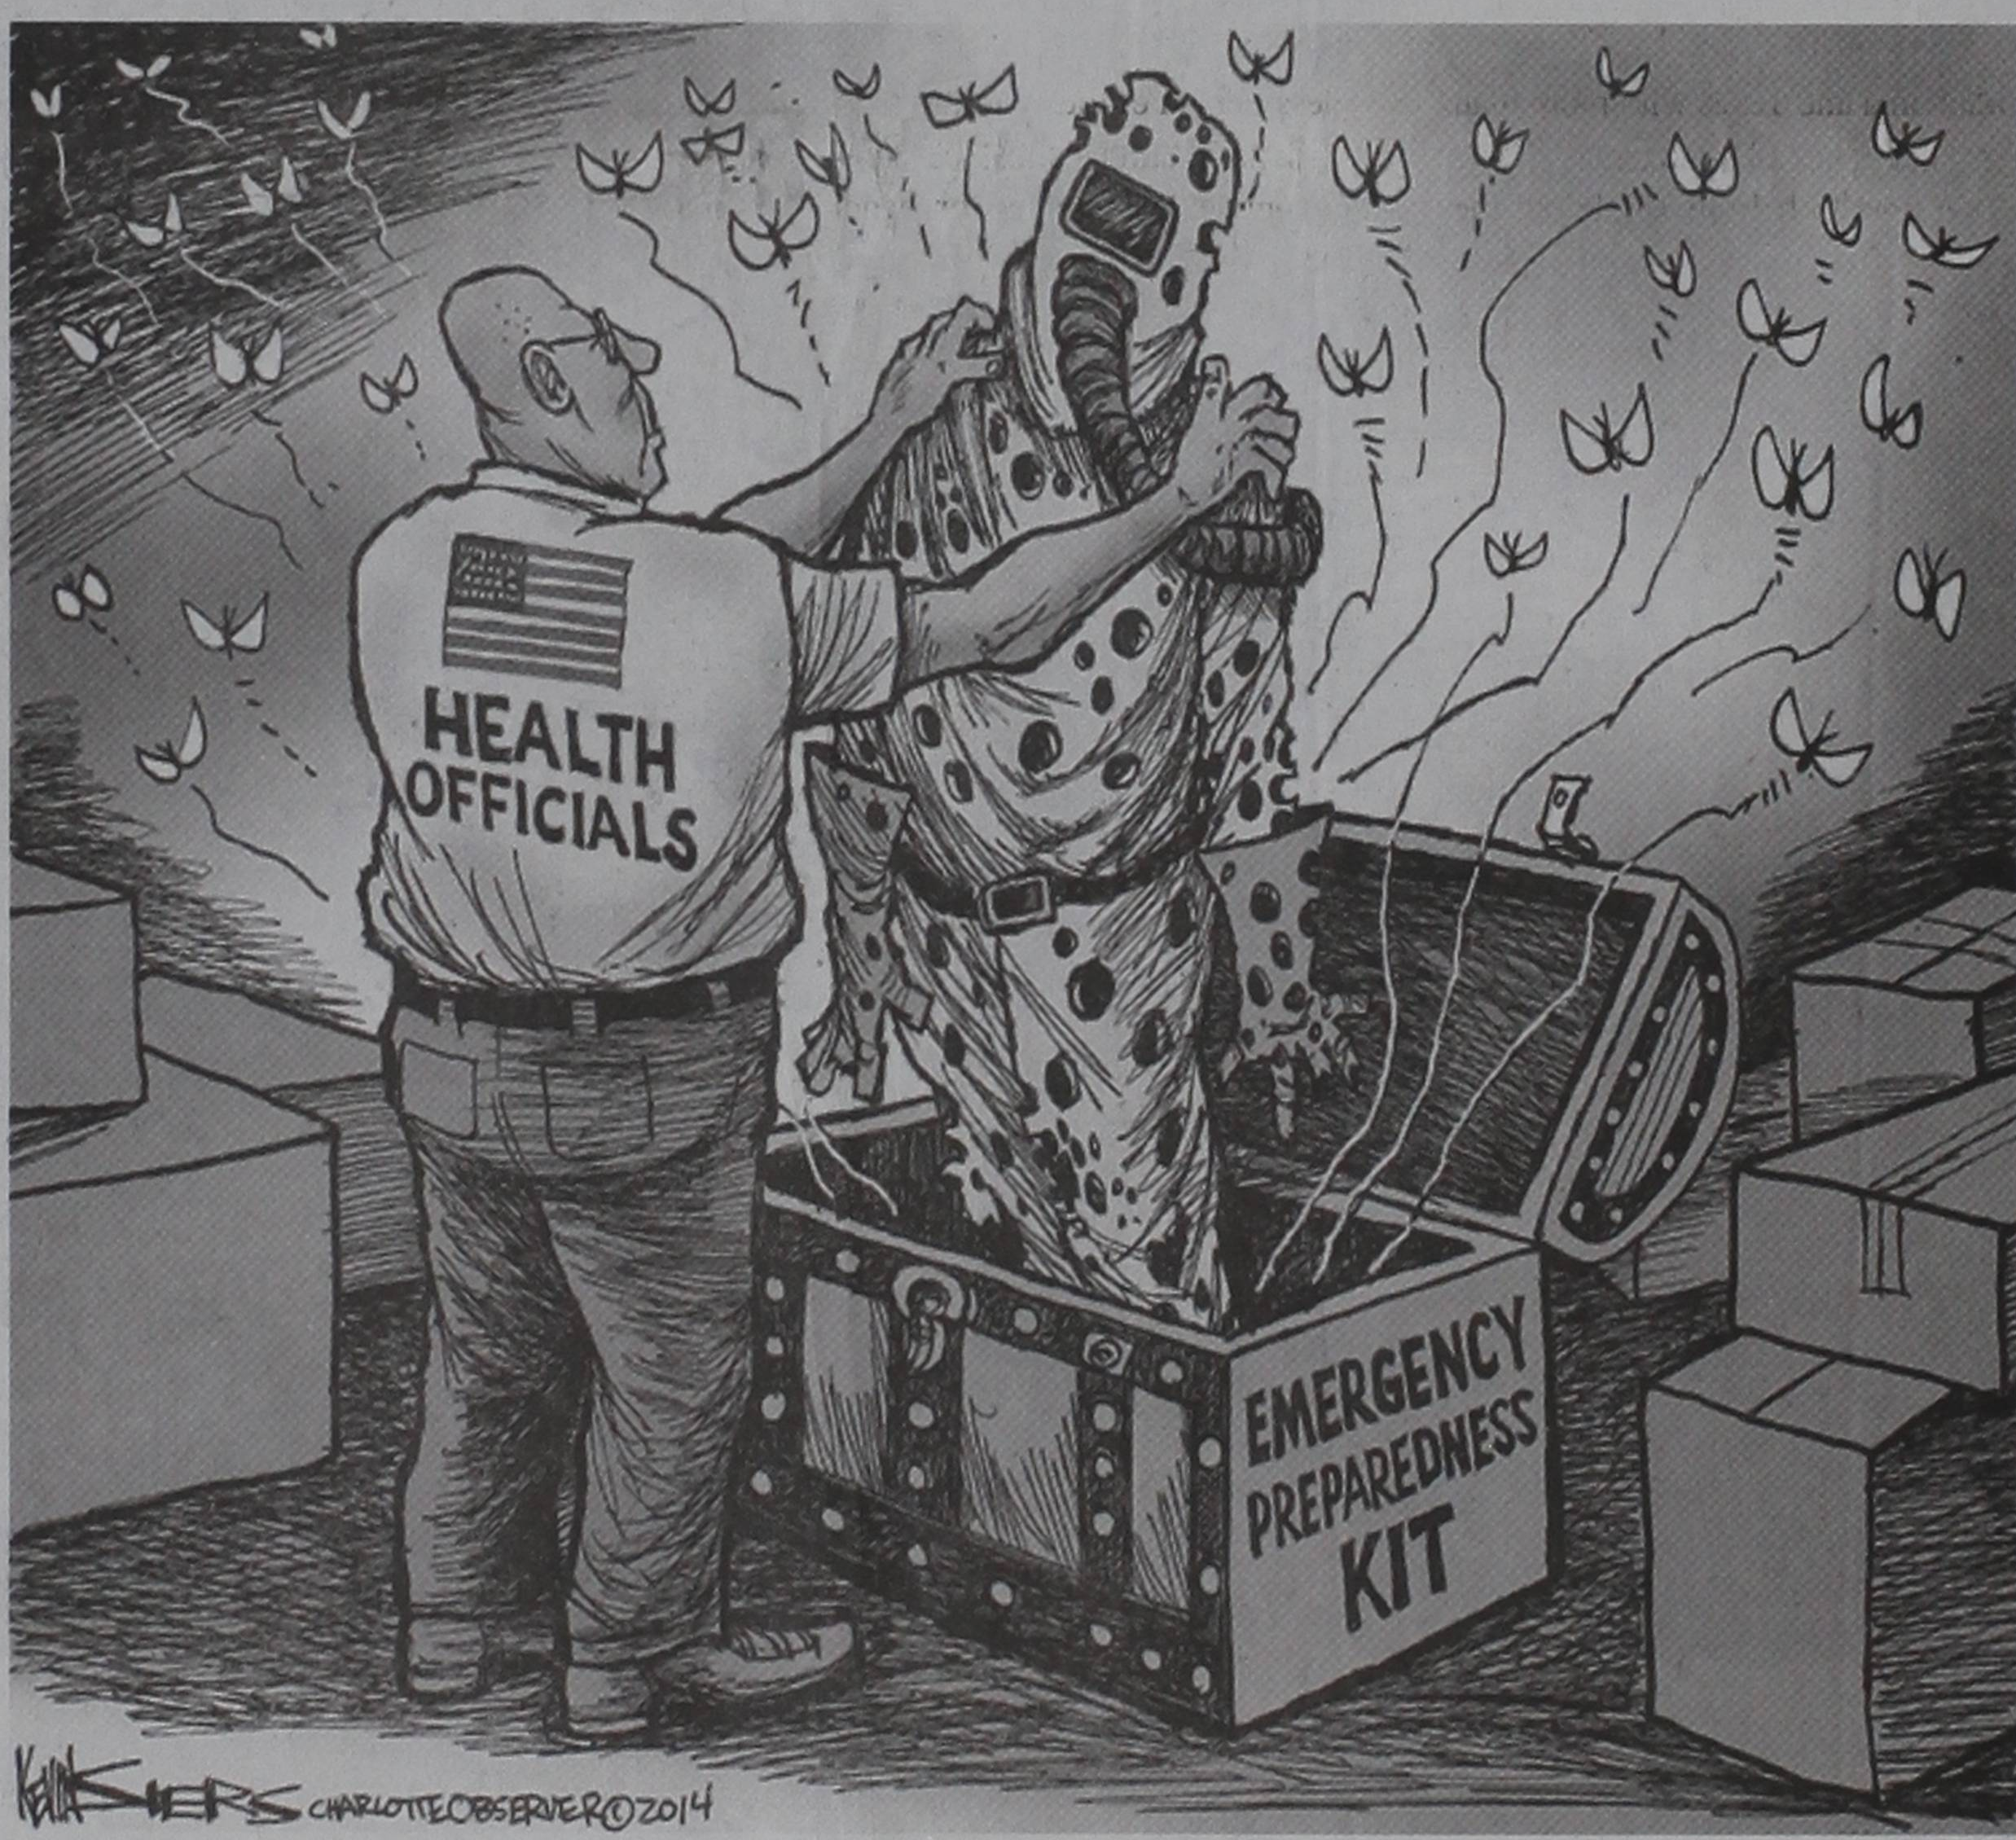

My point is that these signs are not only tacky and trashy, the messages they proclaim may or may not be true, and are certainly open to debate. Of course, they are constitutionally protected by freedom of speech and freedom of religion clauses, but being constitutional does not necessarily mean that they put our best foot forward. Ugly is still ugly.

There are, of course, other meanings to the cross.

Perhaps we should rename our portion of Hwy. 287 to the Appian Way. In 73 B.C., a former slave and gladiator, the famous Spartacus, led a rebellion of escaped slaves against the Roman Republic. A prominent senator, Marcus Licinius Crassus, raised an army at his own expense, became their general, and two years later led them into battle and crushed Spartacus and his slave rebellion. Crassus was the wealthiest man in the Roman Empire. Fabulously wealthy, Crassus was wealthier than any of the Roman emperors, Egyptian pharaohs or European kings. Of course Crassus's wealth was built on the backs of slaves, and thus his motivation to crush Spartacus and the slave rebellion.

After Crassus defeated Spartacus the senator was given a triumph on the Appian Way – the Roman victory parade. The road was lined with 6,000 crosses! Upon each cross was a crucified slave. The message was clear: This was how Rome dealt with threats to their interests. This event, as much as any, established crucifixion as the symbol of Roman ruthlessness when it came to suppressing their enemies.

Goodbye, Rome. Hello, Clarendon! What are our crosses really saying to our visitors about us?

LBJ's role in Alaskan statehood explored

CANYON – Lyndon Baines Johnson was instrumental in Alaska's statehood, and Dr. Terrence M. Cole, director of the University of Alaska Fairbanks Office of Public History, will share his thoughts on the senator's strategy in a public lecture at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 30 at the Jack B. Kelley Student Center, Legacy Hall.

Few people are aware that Johnson played a role in making the Territory of Alaska the 49th state in 1959, but Cole examines the Texan's motives in his lecture, "Bigger than Texas: How LBJ Made Texas the Second Largest State."

Johnson fought for the admission of the state over the objections of Texans who didn't want a state bigger than Texas, and fellow southerners who were afraid a new northern state would affect their ability to filibuster civil rights. But the Texas senator saw Alaska in an entirely different light.

Johnson used Alaska's admission as a way to paint himself as a progressive westerner instead of a segregationist southerner. It was a plan to expand his appeal to northern liberals without distancing his southern associates. As Cole puts it, "Alaska was part of Johnson's makeover to become the first of the Texas cowboys to ride into the White House."

Cole, who is a professor of history and northern studies, has written five books about Alaskan history, including "Crooked Past," a history of the founding of Fairbanks, and "Nome: City of the Golden Beaches," a history of the Nome gold rush. His latest book is a study of the Alaska statehood movement, "Fighting for the 49th Star."

He is a frequent guest lecturer at public conferences and schools and has appeared on the BBC, NPR, PBS, the History Channel, TLC, the Weather Channel, the Discovery Channel and ABC's Good Morning America.

He has been the recipient of numerous awards for his teaching and public service, including the Emil Usibelli Teaching Award from University of Alaska Fairbanks and the Edith Bullock Service Award from the UAF Foundation. Students at UAF have selected him twice as the Outstanding Teacher of the Year. In 2007 he received the Governor of Alaska's Distinguished Service to the Humanities Award and in 2011, he and his twin brother, Dermot, were recognized as outstanding citizens of Fairbanks.

Cole came to Alaska 40 years ago and earned his undergraduate degree at the University of Alaska in 1976 and his Ph.D. in American history at the University of Washington in 1983.

2015 sign-up and acreage reporting deadline

AMARILLO – The deadline is nearing for Pasture, Rangeland and Forage Insurance, designed to provide livestock and hay producers protection against acreage losses, said DeDe Jones, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service risk management specialist in Amarillo.

The 2015 sign-up and acreage reporting deadline for this U.S. Department of Agriculture Risk Management Agency program is Nov. 15, and notices of premiums due will be sent by July 1, 2015, Jones said.

"Insurance is a critical component in producers' risk management portfolios during periods of drought or uncertainty," she said. "This policy benefited many cattle producers around the Panhandle in 2011 and 2012 due to the low rainfall conditions. Even though 2014 is off to a much better start, having this insurance may still be worth considering."

Payment is not determined by individual damages, but rather area losses based on a grid system, Jones explained. Producers can select any portion of acres to insure, but they must also choose a minimum of two, two-month intervals or a maximum of six two-month intervals per year to insure. Coverage levels between 70 and 90 percent are available, she said. Once coverage is selected, the producer chooses a productivity factor between 60 and 150 percent. The productivity factor is a percentage of the established county base value for forage.

The base value is a standard rate published by the Risk Management Agency for each county. It is calculated based on the estimated per-acre cost of grazing, Jones said. For example, Hansford County's value is $8.11 per acre.

She said Texas uses a rainfall index to determine the insurance coverage. The rainfall index uses National Oceanic and Atmospheric Climate Prediction Center data and a 12-by-12 mile grid system.

A decision-support tool to help producers determine coverage levels and intervals can be found at: <http://agforceusa.com/rma/ri/prf/dst>.

For more information about the insurance and how it fits into a risk management plan, contact Jones at 806-677-5600 or djones@ag.tamu.edu.

Avoid 'click baiting,' watch where you click

Hi, gang! Have you been downtown at night lately? If not you need to drive by the beautiful Mulkey Theater. It is an outstanding advertisement on how our town is beginning to look.

We need to get behind the movement to Save the Mulkey. Drive down Kearney and observe all the new stores fronts. Our town is changing, and we sometimes fail to notice these changes as they occur slowly. Let's all work together to continue to improve our city.

As part of National Cyber Security Awareness Month, BBB warns against online Click Baiting schemes designed to compromise computers and make them vulnerable to identity theft. Click baiting is a way to get consumers to inadvertently click on a scam link by grabbing their attention online. Scammers do this by offering something too intriguing to ignore: messages claiming new videos, "shocking" information or scandalous news on celebrities, newsmakers and other famous people. Many consumers are unaware of the risks that exist when searching for celebrity and entertainment news. Often, the click bait leads to a sketchy website or a link that downloads malware on the user's computer or smart phone.

In an attempt to educate consumers to the danger, BBB partner McAfee has released a list of "The Most Dangerous Celebrities" for the eighth straight year.

The list includes celebrities used to lure computer and smart phone users into click bait schemes. The riskiest personalities on the Web are:

1. Jimmy Kimmel (comedian, actor, talk show host)
2. Armin van Buuren (Dutch DJ and music producer)
3. Ciara (singer-songwriter, dancer)
4. Flo Rida (rapper, People's Choice award winner)
5. Bruce Springsteen (rock legend)
6. Blake Shelton (country singer, judge on "The Voice")
7. Britney Spears (pop singer)
8. Jon Bon Jovi (singer-songwriter)
9. Chelsea Handler (comedian, writer, talk show host)
10. Christina Aguilera (pop singer, actress)

"Always be proactive in protecting personal data - don't wait to practice this after you've had a negative experience," said Janna Kiehl, BBB CEO.

Consumers can do their part by being vigilant in practicing safe online behavior. BBB and McAfee recommend the following: Don't download videos from suspect sites. Most news clips can easily be found on official video sites and don't require you to download anything. Beware of clicking on third-party links. You should access content directly from official websites of content providers.

For example, visit ABC.com to find Jimmy Kimmel's latest episodes. Always use password protection on your phone and other mobile devices. If you don't and your phone is lost or stolen, anyone who picks up the device could have access to your personal information online. Using the cloud is like "using someone else's computer" - and some friends may have good security while others may not. Consumers should treat the cloud as any other asset that requires protecting. Find out more about scams and sign up for scam alerts at BBB Scam Stopper at bbb.org/scam.

Start with Trust. BBB serving the Texas Panhandle drives consumers to trustworthy businesses by maintaining standards for truthful advertising; investigating and exposing fraud against consumers and businesses.

Stay safe out there and watch where you click.

You sure missed a good time if you missed seeing old people play basketball. Funny, funny, funny! After all that fun the Reunion Dinner fed 43 ex-students and was catered by Steven Maddox of Memphis.

The Booster Club is taking donations to repair the Hedley tennis courts. Please help if you can as they are a safety hazard right now.

Les Beaux Art Club's artist spotlights

The Clarendon Arts Festival will be October 25 and 26, and featured artist this week are Dallas Meyer, Chris Johnson, and Nancy Ryder.

Dallas Meyer is an Oklahoma Panhandle artist, and is part of the Palo Duro Plein Air Painters. Her art was chosen to be displayed in the "TEXAS" musical drama and souvenir program for the 2014 season. This is her first showing at the Clarendon Arts Festival, and she will be bringing 7 works this year.

Chris Johnson is a Texas artist that lives in Amarillo. He is also new to the Clarendon Arts Festival. His work is done primarily in pastels and oils. He paints portraits, caricatures, cartoons, and people in general. Chris also paints murals, including the one on the wall outside of the Amarillo Art Institute.

Nancy Ryder graduated from West Texas A&M University in Canyon and then taught school in Amarillo for 30 years. Upon her retirement, she and her husband moved to the foot of the Smoky Mountains in east Tennessee and lived there for 14 years. Now they have become snowbirds and live in both states on-and-off. Nancy has taken an interest in western art and likes to do paintings that tell a humorous story.

Scouts visit SpookORee

When I went to SpookORee at Camp MK Brown on Saturday, I got to go shooting BB guns and shoot a bow and arrows, and I got to go on a hay ride and go on the monkey bridge and it was very slick on the monkey bridge.

And we got to go fishing, and I caught six fish and I did not eat them. We used corn and worms to catch the fish. The worms were better at catching the fish.

Then me and my dad went to the trading post which is a gift shop; and since I was good my dad got me a canteen that was for wolf scouts. Then we went to a flag ceremony where they burned a flag that had been flying for about 16 years. After the ceremony we remained silent to go back and eat dinner in the dining hall. After dinner we waited for it to get dark. Once it was dark, we went on a spook walk. It was kind of scary.

Last Thursday, I learned how to play chess with my cousin Freddy. It was at the Clarendon College Library, and they had pretzel sticks and Sierra Mist and Pepsi there.

Lady Bulldogs sweep Lamar Community College

By Fred Gray

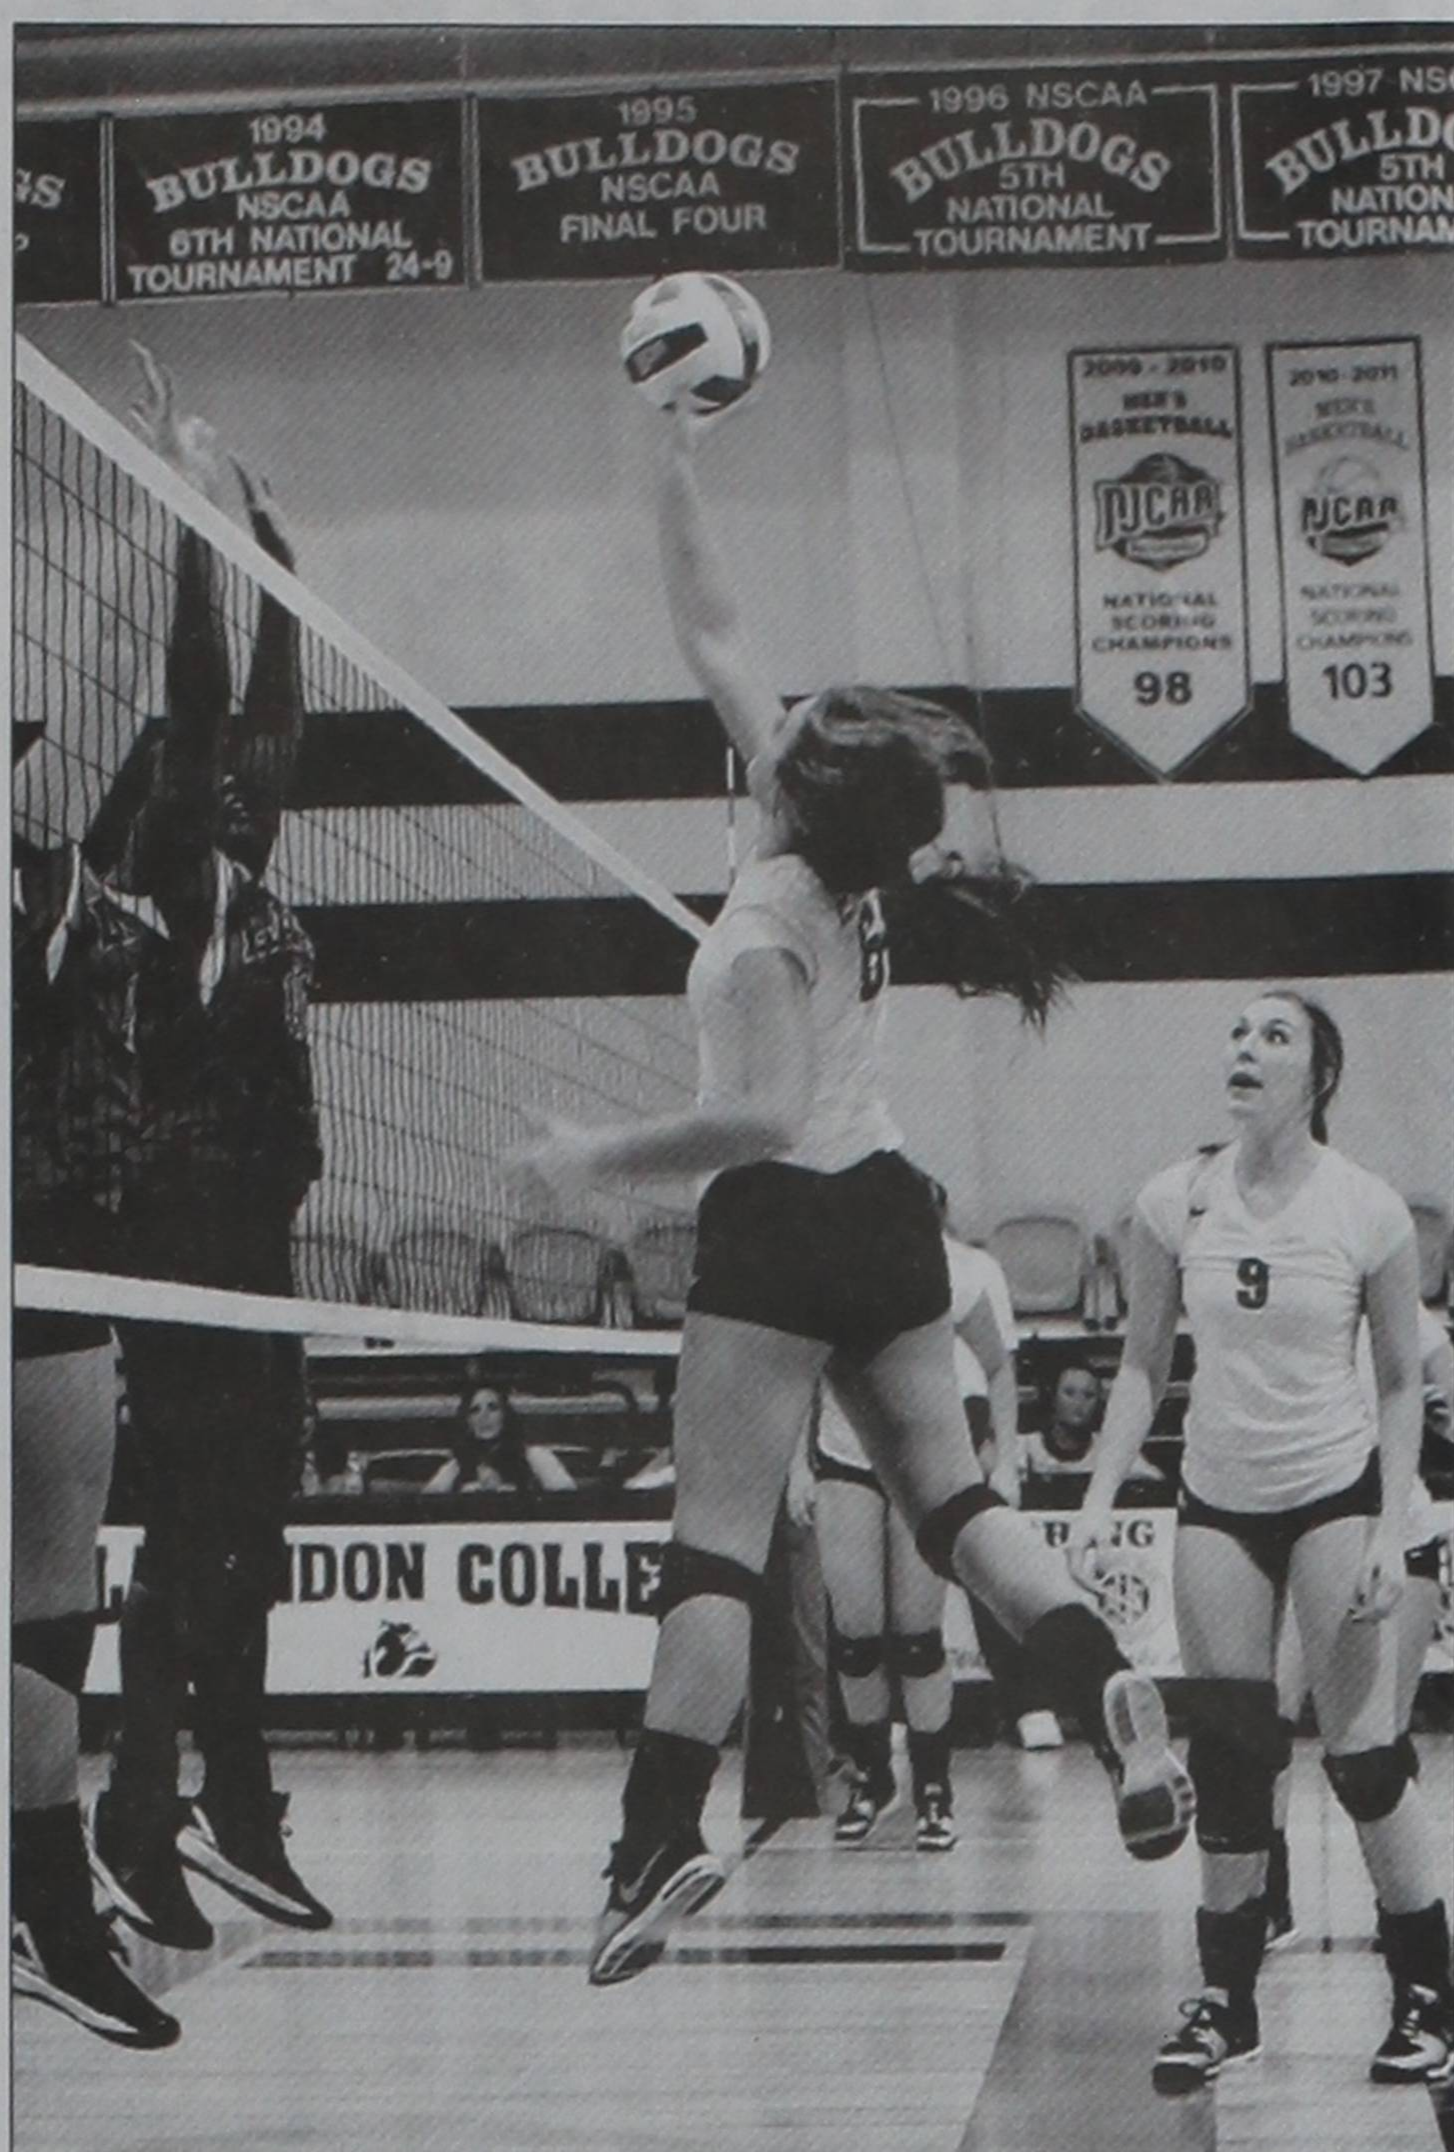

Last week the Clarendon College Lady Bulldogs swept Lamar Community College three sets; 25-16, 25-16, 25-16. They seem to be coming together as a team and have been very competitive in each match, regardless of the ultimate outcome.

According to head coach Melvin Balogh, the Lady Bulldogs are a very hardworking group, take excellent care of the ball, and compete well until the final point. They never, ever give up. He says that even though they are coming up a bit short, they are mastering the team concept, and serve as well as anyone in their conference, with four of the top servers in the conference. They take most of their matches to five games.

Olivia Ortega leads this fine group of servers and the rest of the team supports them with hustle and extra effort on every point.

To date, the Lady Bulldogs are 6-21; 1-2 at home, and 2-9 on the road, and 3-10 at neutral sites. The other teams in their conference (WJAC) are: Odessa Community College, Midland Community College, Western Texas, New Mexico Military Institute, and Frank Phillips College.

The Lady Bulldogs are home, hosting Frank Phillips this Wednesday, October 22, at 7 P.M., then host NMMI this Saturday, October 25. Match times are 1 and 3 P.M.

Drugs in the News

A Drug Implant is Approved for the Eye

The FDA has approved the Argus II Retinal Prosthesis System. This is the first FDA approved implant for the human eye to help treat adults with a condition called with advanced retinitis pigmentosa (RP). The device consists of four units that together help the affected eye transmit electrical impulses. These impulses help the eye identify light and dark objects and the movement of people and objects. RP is a rare genetic condition of the eye that damages the light sensitive cells that line the retina of the eye. The condition causes a gradual loss of vision, which may lead to blindness.

The Argus II Retinal Prosthesis System was approved as a humanitarian use device. This type of device designation is given to products that may help with conditions that affect a small percentage of the population. In the clinical trial that led to this approval, studies showed that people were able to perform better activities related to vision than people who did not have the device. The adverse events that were reported during the clinical trials include retinal detachment, inflammation, low eye pressure, and erosion of the covering of the eyeball.

Young Broncos win south zone championship

The Clarendon Bronco 5th & 6th Grade football team will be playing for the championship of the Eastern Panhandle/Western Oklahoma football league next week against the Wheeler Mustangs in Wheeler.

The Broncos are south zone champions after defeating Wellington 16-0 last Saturday and running their overall record to 5-1 against Wellington, Sayre (Okla.), and Memphis.

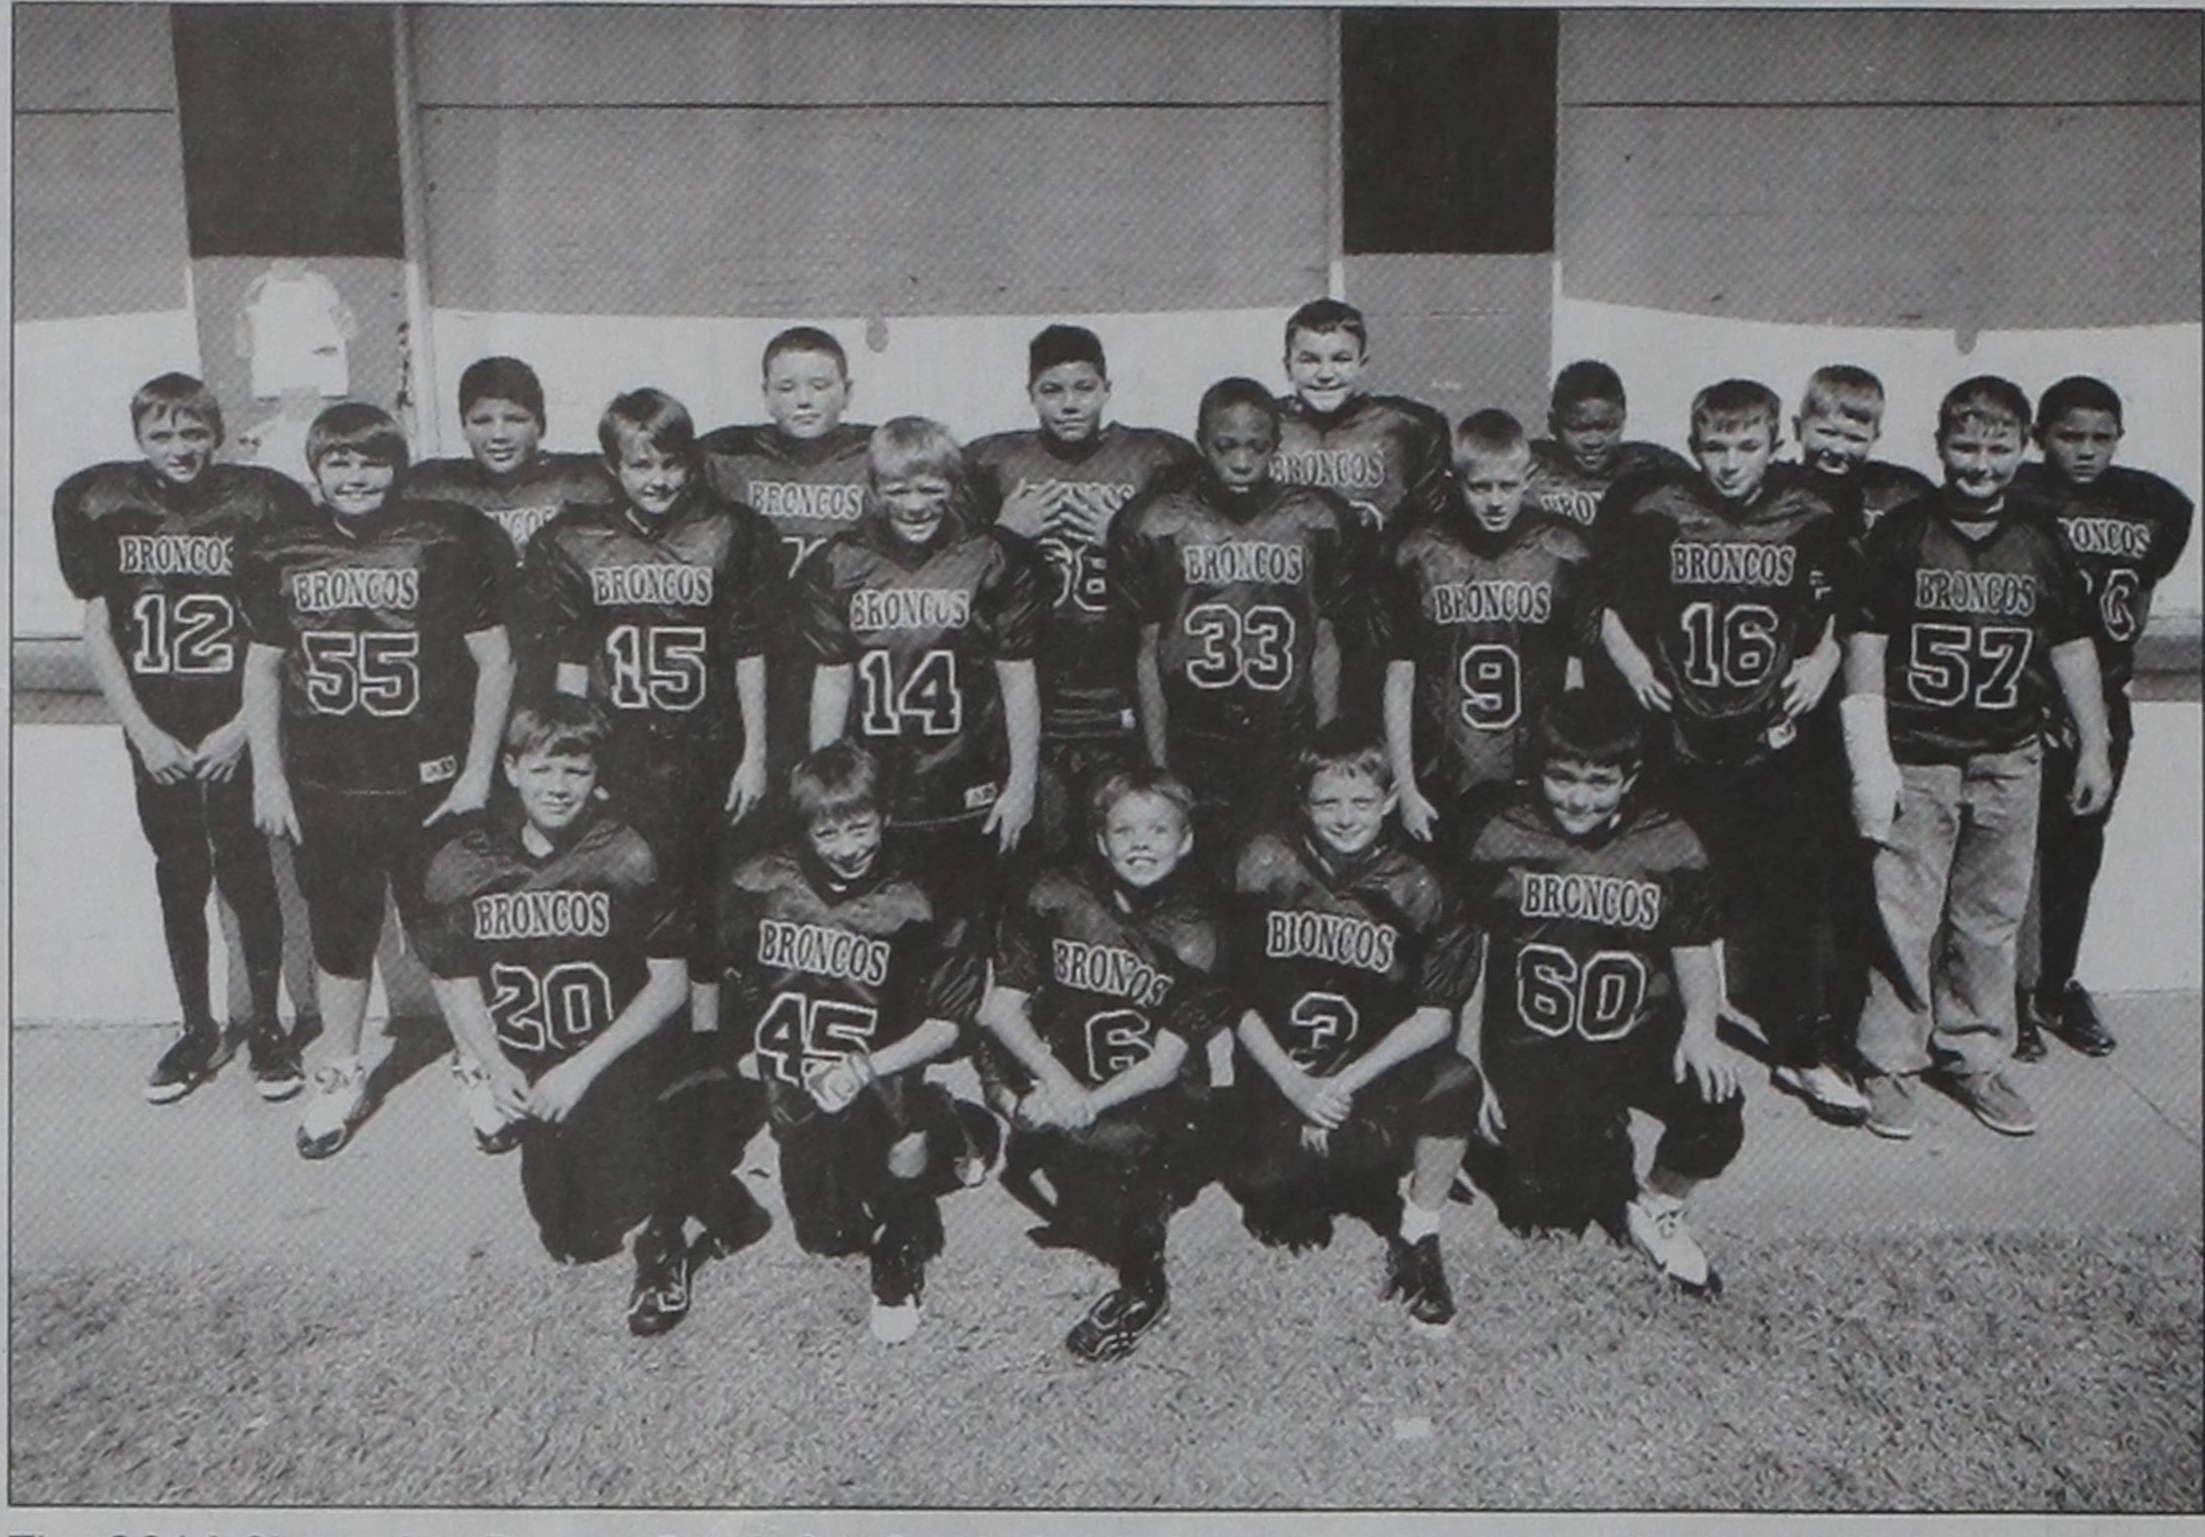

The Broncos got on the scoreboard after a long first quarter drive as Sylvester Ballard scored on a sweep. In the second quarter, facing a third and long, quarterback Brock Hatley threw a deep ball to Aaron Roys, and Roys came down with the ball and the touchdown to put the Broncos up by two scores.

The way the defense played those two scores were more than enough points to win the game. Defensive linemen Jordan Evans, Chase Gwin, Cutter Goodpasture, Gavin Nazario, Ivan Gonzalez, and Matthew Powell controlled the interior, with strong play from linebackers Antwan Bassett, Harm Drenth, and Robert McGuire.

Defensive ends Brock Hatley and Josiah Howard turned the Skyrocket running game inside, and Wellington was forced to try and throw the ball. Fortunately for the Broncos, cornerbacks Sylvester Ballard, Koyt Tucek, and Jodee Pigg defended well, aided by safeties Levi Eytcheson and Aaron Roys. Roys had two interceptions on the day as the secondary kept the Skyrocket passing game contained.

Hayden Alston and Eric and Jacob Jahay also contributed to the big win. Parents, coaches, and players all look forward to this Saturday's showdown in Wheeler to battle for the top spot in the Eastern Panhandle. The Mustangs won their zone over Hollis (Okla.), Canadian, and Shamrock.

Panhandle youth compete in District 4-H Food Challenge

Three Donley County teams competed in the District 4H Food Challenge in Pampa on October 14, 2014.

A total of 285 youth from 17 Panhandle counties competed in the 4-H Food Challenge sponsored by Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service on Oct. 14 at MK Brown Memorial Auditorium and Civic Center.

The Donley County Junior Team consisting of Laney Gates, Levi Gates, Jayde Gribble, McKenna Shadle, Haley Wilson and placed 3rd in the Breads and Cereals Group. In the Intermediate Age group, Kailee Osburn, Malorie Simpson, and Roxie Adams placed first in the Bread and Cereals Group. By placing first, they received embroidered green aprons. Also competing in the intermediate group was Izzy Craft, Chardy Craft, Jenci Hernandez, and Tanner Burch in the healthy snacks category.

The Food Challenge is modeled after such competitions as the Food Network's Iron Chef, said Shawnte Clawson, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service 4-H and youth specialist in Amarillo.

The 4-H Food Challenge allows teams of three to five 4-H members to create a dish using a predetermined set of ingredients. From these ingredients, 4-H members must identify, prepare and then present information related to the preparation process, nutritional value, serving size and cost of the dish.

Throughout this process, 4-H members are applying the knowledge and skills gained through participation in the 4-H foods and nutrition project, demonstrating their culinary and food safety skills, and continuing to learn about making healthier food choices, Clawson said.

Broncos come up short against Quanah

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Broncos have fought tough opponents and injuries all year and Friday night was no different as they lost 21-34 in Quanah. The loss put them at 1-6 overall and 1-1 in district play.

The Broncos battled hard in the first half of play according to head coach Gary Jack, but were unable to find the consistency they needed on offense to put points on the board.

"We had our chances to win," Jack said. "We got behind in the first quarter."

However, the Broncos worked their way back into the game and shared the lead with the Indians at the break at thirteen each.

Quanah took the lead back in the third quarter and the Broncos had to play catch up once again.

"We had opportunities and should have finished them off when we had the chance, but we just didn't capitalize."

The Broncos have been moving people around all season due to lack of experience and injured players. Friday night was no exception.

"We are still playing young kids," Jack said. "We are switching players at the quarterback position between Bryce Hatley and Zack LaRoe and switching in other positions as well. A couple of kids were injured and probably won't be able to play this coming week."

So, the Broncos will continue on as they have all season. But quitting is not an option for the players.

"The kids are not giving up," Jack said. "They are in their battling every week and we are still in the mix. But we have to get healthy and stay healthy."

Jack noted that Montana Hysinger has played well all season on both sides of the ball and finished with 10 tackles Friday night. Also, Hatley had 10 tackles, Caleb Cobb racked up 12 tackles and Clay Koetting finished with 10.

Offensively, Charles Mason was a workhorse once again and posted 124 yards in the game on the ground and in the air. Cedrick McCampbell also made several good catches according to Jack.

The Broncos will host Crosbyton at home Friday, October 24, at 7:00 p.m. Jack knows it will be tough as they are ranked in the top ten and undefeated on the year.

"We will have our hands full," Jack said. "But we will meet the challenge and will survive these last games to get a spot in the playoffs."

Colts fall short in second half

The Clarendon Colts led the Quanah Indians for a bit, but could not convert in the second half of the game. The Colts narrowly lost to Quanah 16-20.

The Indians struck first after the first series, but the Colts rallied back on the following kickoff when Preston Elam returned the ball 80 yards for a touchdown.

Noab Elam hit Bear Smith for the two-point bonus and the Colts led 8-6. As the game continued, Isaac Dunham forced the Indians to fumble to give the Colts the ball.

According to coach Brad Elam, the Colts did a great job of moving the ball down the field and once again the Elam/Smith duo connected on a ten-yard score and the two-point conversion to give the Colts a four-point lead going into the half after Quanah put six more points on the board before the break.

"We were unable to hold the lead and Quanah was able to take the lead on a long touchdown run," Elam said. "We had our chances, but were unable to score in the second half. Dunham and Ryan Ward played well on defense."

The Colts will face Crosbyton on the road October 23 at 5:00 p.m.

Subpoenas for sermons in Houston draw outrage

By Aman Batheja, The Texas Tribune

A legal battle between the city of Houston and religious leaders has erupted into a national debate last week about religious liberty and freedom of speech, even as Mayor Annise Parker argued the controversy was based on a misunderstanding.

Conservative lawmakers and activists expressed outrage upon learning that lawyers acting on behalf of the city had sent subpoenas this month to pastors who had vocally supported a failed petition drive aimed at repealing Houston's equal rights ordinance. The ordinance, better known by its acronym, HERO, expanded the city's ban on discrimination to include sexual orientation. It applies to businesses that serve the public, as well as city contractors and municipal workers. The City Council approved it in May after an intense public debate.

In August, city officials announced that an effort by conservative activists and pastors to put the ordinance's repeal to voters failed to draw enough signatures. Opponents of the ordinance have since taken the issue to the courts, alleging in a lawsuit that the city inappropriately disqualified some of the signatures.

The subpoenas, sent to some outspoken pastors and religious leaders who had opposed the ordinance, had asked for "all speeches, presentations, or sermons related to HERO, the Petition, Mayor Annise Parker, homosexuality, or gender identity prepared by, delivered by, revised by, or approved by you or in your possession."

Various public officials, including religious liberty advocates, have condemned the subpoenas as censorship and an attack on religious liberty.

"This week, the government of Houston, Texas, sent a subpoena to silence prayers," U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz said Thursday at a news conference in Houston.

Attorney General Greg Abbott sent a letter to Houston City Attorney David Feldman urging him to withdraw the subpoenas.

"No matter what public policy is at stake, government officials must exercise the utmost care when our work touches on religious matters," Abbott wrote. "If we err, it must be on the side of preserving the autonomy of religious institutions and the liberty of religious believers. Your aggressive and invasive subpoenas show no regard for the very serious First Amendment considerations at stake."

State Sen. Ken Paxton, the Republican candidate to replace Abbott as attorney general, called the subpoenas "unacceptable."

"Not only does this infringe upon the right to Freedom of Speech, but it also grossly encroaches upon our Freedom of Religion — both fundamental rights protected by the U.S. Constitution," Paxton said.

Both Parker and Feldman have said that they did not approve the subpoenas ahead of time and first saw the language used in them on Tuesday. The subpoenas were handled by outside lawyers working on behalf of the city. Both agreed that the language in the subpoenas was overly broad and would be clarified.

"We are not interested at all in what some person may have preached about me or the GLBT community," Parker said Wednesday at a news conference. "People are rightly concerned if a government entity tries to in any way inhibit religious speech. That is not the intent."

Parker said the goal of the subpoenas was to see if there were any specific instructions given by pastors about how the petitions should be filled out. She suggested that the outrage over the word "sermon" in the subpoenas may have been due to "deliberate misinterpretation."

"Let me just say that one word in a very long legal document which I know nothing about and would never have read and I'm vilified coast to coast — it's a normal day at the office for me," Parker said.

But Cruz echoed other conservatives Thursday in framing the issue as a severe threat to religious liberty.

"This is a country that was formed centuries ago by people fleeing religious persecution seeking a land where you do not need to seek the permission of a king or queen or president to preach the word of God, because we serve a higher authority," Cruz said.

On Thursday, Cruz tweeted a website purchased a day earlier: standwithpastors.com. Visitors to the site were redirected to a petition on Cruz's campaign website.
