Texas voters to decide transportation funding

Proposition 1 on the November 4th ballot adds new funding for transportation – if approved by Texas voters.

The funds will come from oil and gas production taxes. These taxes now go to the Rainy Day Fund, officially known as the Economic Stabilization Fund.

The proposed amendment would re-direct half of the revenue from oil and gas production taxes to the State Highway Fund. Since the Rainy Day Fund usually receives 75 percent of the oil and gas production taxes, the Rainy Day Fund portion of the revenue would be lowered to 37.5 percent. The State Highway Fund would also receive 37.5 percent of the taxes.

While Proposition 1 would authorize a dedicated funding stream for transportation projects, it also would allow the Legislature to take necessary means to ensure that a minimum balance in the rainy day fund is available to respond to natural disasters and fiscal emergencies. HB 1, the amendment's enabling legislation, calls for the appointment of a committee of legislators to determine a sufficient balance for the Rainy Day Fund. If the Fund falls below that balance, no general revenue would be transferred to the State Highway Fund.

The Texas Department of Transportation estimates that it needs $4 billion for constructing and maintaining public, non-tolled roads, and $1 billion for new highways. Proposition 1 could be used only for constructing, maintaining, and acquiring rights of way for public roadways other than toll roads.

Elaine Wiant, President of the League of Women Voters of Texas says the measure isn't enough.

"The need for more transportation funding is no longer in question, in fact, it is a crisis," Wiant said. "The funds provided by Proposition 1 will not be sufficient to meet the transportation needs in Texas. Additional funds will be necessary, even if the voters approved Proposition 1."

According to Sen. Robert Nichols, author of the bill which created Prop. 1, the state needs a solution to its transportation funding.

"As our population continues to increase, traffic rises and our highway system ages, it is important to ensure we have a continuous funding source to maintain our states highway system," Nichols said. "Transportation is a core function of state government and has been substantially underfunded for more than the last decade."

"Proposition 1 will authorize annual deposits, generated by oil and gas production, to be constitutionally dedicated to the highway fund for construction and maintenance of the state's non-tolled roads and bridges, without raising fees or taxes. I strongly endorse Proposition 1 as part of the overall transportation funding solution."

Those in favor of the amendment think that the need is great and these funds would help with the $5 billion need for transportation. If Prop. 1 passes, an estimated $1.6 billion would go toward the current and future transportation needs. Furthermore, the Rainy Day Fund will be watched over by a committee to see that it maintains a sufficient balance.

Those opposed to the amendment think that it deprives the Rainy Day Fund of revenues that will be needed to respond to natural and fiscal emergencies. Other opponents think that it is an insufficient remedy, as Rainy Day Funds could be unstable and the funds produced are not enough.

Kids will be out Trick-or-Treating this Friday, October 31, and residents are urged to watch out for little ghosts and goblins crossing streets.

Cotton Council plans area producer workshops

The National Cotton Council (NCC) has scheduled 25 educational meetings across the Cotton Belt to provide its members with in-depth information regarding insurance options for cotton under The Agricultural Act of 2014.

The first meeting will be on November 10 and the last two meetings on December 10.

The meetings will provide an in-depth look at the new Stacked Income Protection Plan (STAX) and the Supplemental Coverage Option. Coverage levels, expected yields and premium rates will be covered in detail in order to better equip producers with the information necessary to evaluate the insurance options for 2015. The sessions also will include an update on overall farm bill implementation. Each meeting will include a question/answer session.

NCC President/CEO Mark Lange said, "This new five-year comprehensive farm law features a greater reliance on crop insurance programs, and our producer members need to understand their options."

"As with our previous farm bill educational meetings in February, the Council encourages all producers, cotton industry firms and agribusinesses to attend any of these important meetings."

Meetings close to producers in Donley County will be held in Amarillo on December 9 at 9 a.m. at the AgriLife Extension Center, 6500 Amarillo Boulevard West; in Lubbock on December 10 at 1 p.m. at the Bayer Museum of Agriculture, 1121 Canyon Lake Drive; and in Plainview on December 9 at 2:30 p.m. Plainview Country Club, 2902 West 4th Street.

CC runner to be in national meet

Clarendon College Cross Country runner Isela Sandoval finished 9th at the Region 5 Cross Country Championships Saturday morning at Harry McAdams Park in Hobbs, New Mexico.

Isela navigated the 5,000-meter course with a time of 20 minutes, 14.54 seconds, and has qualified to run at the NJCAA National Cross Country Meet to be held in Lubbock on November 8. She is also the first female cross country runner from Clarendon to accomplish this feat.

"I am proud of Isela. She has worked very hard to earn this," CC Cross Country Coach Zack Leggett said.

Isela is a sophomore from Ennis, Texas.

St. Stephen's Church to get state marker

The Donley County Historical Commission received welcome news last week regarding one of the Texas Panhandle's most historic churches.

Officials with the Texas Historical Commission affirmed that St. Stephen's Baptist Church has been approved to receive an official Texas Historical Marker through the under-told marker program.

Since 2006, the program has provided funds to address historical gaps, promote diversity of topics, and proactively document significant underrepresented subjects or untold stories.

Established in 1897 by legendary cowboy Bones Hooks and other local pioneers, St. Stephen's was the first black church in the Panhandle and continues operating today.

Several church members have been working with the local historical commission to apply for this state recognition.

The THC will announce at a later date when the marker for St. Stephen's will be delivered.

Election will be Tuesday

Voters in Donley County and across Texas will head to the polls next Tuesday, November 4, to cast ballots in this year's General Election.

Early voting by personal appearance continues this week through Friday, October 31, at the Donley County Courthouse Annex.

Voters in three precincts will decide two races are of particular local interest this year.

Precinct 4 voters are deciding if they want to keep incumbent Republican Dan Sawyer as their county commissioner or if they would prefer Democratic challenger Ricky Rattan.

And voters in Precincts 1 & 2 can cast ballots for Republican Pam Mason to serve as their Justice of the Peace, or they can vote for the late Connie Havens.

The incumbent Democrat passed away September 16, but her name is still on the ballot. If Havens gets the most votes, county commissioners would have to appoint someone to that post after the election is canvassed.

Local candidates running unopposed include incumbents County Clerk Fay Vargas (D), County Treasurer Wanda Smith (R), and Pct. 3&4 Justice of the Peace Denise Bertrand (R) as well as John Howard (R) for County Judge and Daniel Ford (R) for Commissioner of Pct. 2.

Also of local interest, US Representative Mac Thornberry (R-Clarendon) is challenged by Democrat Mike Miner, Libertarian Emily Pivoda, and Green Party candidate Don Cook.

State Rep. Ken King (R-Canadian) faces opposition from Libertarian Kerry McKennon, and State Sen. Kel Seliger (R-Amarillo) is joined on the ballot by Libertarian Steven Gibson.

Texans are also determining several statewide and area races, including governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, and others as well as several judicial seats. Voters will also consider a state constitutional amendment regarding funding transportation improvements.

Check your voter registration card to determine your voting precinct. Polling on November 4 will be at the following locations: Precinct 101 – Clarendon College Bairfield Activity Center, Precinct 102 – Howardwick City Hall, Precinct 201 – Donley County Courthouse, Precinct 301 – Assembly of God Fellowship Hall, Precinct 303 – Hedley First Baptist Church, and Precinct 401 – Clarendon Church of Christ Family Life Center.

Polls will be open Tuesday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. After the polls close, follow the Enterprise on Facebook for up to the minute election results at www.facebook.com/TheEnterprise. Election results will be posted Wednesday at ClarendonLive.com.

Think about the effect of crosses, signs

The crosses and signs proclaiming Clarendon's religiosity generate strong feelings among residents and travelers and even recently drew the attention of city officials. But the question remains as to what... if anything... should be done about them.

Alderman Sandy Skelton brought the subject up at the October 14 city meeting, but even he only sought a remedy for future signs and markers and did not propose doing anything about what already exists. That launched a discussion about a possible sign ordinance, which lead to the dusting off of the sign ordinance that has already been on the books for 19 years.

Interestingly, the biggest revelation at the meeting about the "end of the world" signs came from the man responsible for them. While the city ordinance requires a permit for signs and markers, Jim Griffin said he was told by former city administrator Lambert Little that he didn't need a permit for what he was doing.

So basically, the city had an opportunity to have some modicum of regulation over the situation and didn't do it. Now the chariots have left the coliseum, and there's no rounding them back up.

The situation is, in part, an example of the city not properly enforcing the ordinances on its books. Why do we need all these rules and regulations? Well, in part, to keep Clarendon from looking like The New Apian Way, as Fred Gray described it last week.

Almost any eyesore in this town could be remedied by proper enforcement of the rules in place. But too often the city just looks at making new rules instead of enforcing the current ones.

A perfect example of this is the amendment passed this summer that changed the allowable weed and grass height from four feet (which does seem high) down to 18 inches. But then the city had lots of places where its own grass was over 18 inches. Maybe we should get all the properties under the four-foot level first.

As to the crosses and signs, Mr. Griffin told the city council that he sees himself as a servant of Jesus Christ and that it is his mission to make sure that every person coming through Clarendon gets witnessed to about Jesus.

The biggest problem with that is that not everyone wants to be the recipient of Mr. Griffin's witnessing. Several travelers have even taken the time to write the ENTERPRISE or the Chamber of Commerce to express their disgust, displeasure, or discomfort with the plethora of crosses and signs. This includes some Christians who feel the symbols are over the top.

Now in fairness, there are people who like the crosses and signs. An example is an email the ENTERPRISE received this week and reprinted with the letters in this issue. However, it is probably safe to say that the people who are most excited about Mr. Griffin's work and take the time to look him up and thank him or send us a comment are also probably people who are very devout and don't need to be witnessed to. In other words, it's preaching to the choir.

So what should be done about this issue? There probably isn't much that can be done officially. Enforcement of the sign ordinance might have slowed the phenomenon or moved it back from the highway some, but it would not have prevented harsh messages like "9-11 Tragedy. Worse things to come!" Trying to stop that or remove it opens a whole can of constitutional questions about religious freedom, freedom of speech, and private property rights.

No, government rules are not the answer here. What Clarendon needs is for business and property owners to think about the cumulative effect these markers are having on our community as it is perceived by visitors. The cross or the sign in front of your business may be fine; but when it's combined with dozens of others, it's too much for some people.

As a businessman, I don't care if you're Christian, Hindu, Buddhist, Muslim, atheist, or some worshipper of Greek gods. I just want you to come in and buy a subscription or place an ad for your garage sale. Likewise, I don't care about the religiosity of passers-by. I just want them to stop for a bite to eat, pick up a gift at a local merchant, and possibly Stay All Night or Stay A Little Longer! And, if while you're here, you are impressed with the good morals of our community and wish to receive some witnessing, feel free to attend one of our 18 (at last count) churches.

Goodwill is a valuable thing and one that is not easily regained once lost. Like the old shampoo commercial used to say, "You only get one chance to make a first impression."

Literally thousands of dollars are spent each year from the city's economic development corporation and hotel occupancy tax trying to make Clarendon a destination, an attractive place for visitors, a place you want to stop for a while, or place to relocate. Money and time are spent on marketing this community and putting our best foot forward. And then someone puts up four dozen sewer pipe crosses and starts freaking out the guests.

Thankfully, some of these signs and crosses have already come down. More need to. We want people to come here. We don't need to give anyone an excuse to say they will never stop or shop our town.

Obama makes Carter look good

President Obama's foreign policy has been a disaster. Actually, his entire presidency has been a disaster. Perhaps the worst ever. Dubya is smiling and enjoying his art in Dallas, because President Obama has proven to be such a national disaster that it has taken much of the tarnish off of Dubya's presidency. As our eastern neighbors say, Dubya is happy, happy, happy.

This is so, according to those in the know, because of his reliance upon loyalty over ability, when selecting staff and administration personnel to carry out his policies—which are usually ill conceived and fatally flawed. Take President Obama's security team, for example. According to one former, high-ranking general, who was in a senior command position, "It's a pathetically weak team." Both the Secretary of Defense, Chuck Hagel, and National Security Advisor, Susan Rice, are to be blamed for the ineptness of this administration.

Also, the president has more czars than Russia had in its entire history. Furthermore, our czars have proven to be even more inept than the Russian czars, excepting Putin, who continues to toy with Obama much like a Siberian tiger toys with a red deer before consuming it. It concerns me greatly that Putin's intelligence is vastly superior to Obama's so-called intellectual capabilities. He may be a fine talker, writer, and consensus builder, but he is no match for the Russian in matters of international relations. Putin also has better pecks. Obama has pretty much done nothing to stop Putin in the Crimean, Ukraine, and central Europe.

It's no great secret that Putin is doing his best to rebuild the old Soviet Union, step-by-step. What are Europe and America doing about it? We seem to be more interested in installing another czar; this one is Vice-President Biden's former chief of staff. He is our new Ebola czar, and probably knows very little about Ebola, except for a river located somewhere in dark Africa, known as the Ebola River—where the original Ebola outbreak first erupted back in the early '70s. Actually, the virus was named after the Ebola River.

Heck, even the Arabs, who have not been known to possess brilliant minds in the last 1500 years or so, are eating his lunch in the arena called the Middle East. Sure, most of the Arab leaders are sneaky and sly, but few of them possess the intelligence needed to successfully deal with those evil Islamic terrorists types. I'm shocked that we don't have a Muslim czar—someone to help us understand exactly why everyone always goes out of their way to reinforce the notion that Islam is actually a very peaceful religion, except for the notable exceptions that have the nasty habit of beheading, hanging, and stoning infidels.

The Koran is full of verses and chapters (serahs) that advocate extreme violence and a gruesome death for those who don't believe as they should. Other than the many examples of genocide written about in the Old Testament, the Christian faith generally doesn't advocate slaughtering unbelievers—at least since the Crusades of yore ended. Of course, most Christians rightly put greater emphasis on the writings of the New Testament, which advocates a kinder, gentler attitude towards unbelievers. Surely, we need an Islamic czar to help us muddle through the many different Islamic State types who seem to be growing exponentially.

A broad consensus is emerging across the ideological spectrum about the war against the Islamic State: President Obama's strategy to "degrade and eventually destroy" the terrorist entity is unworkable," the Washington Post wrote in an editorial on Sunday. The most that can be achieved with the paltry military means Obama has supplied so far is some sort of suppression, but the Post editors said that won't work because "the infection of the Islamic State is spreading. Militant groups around the Middle East and Levant are rallying to its cause, volunteers continue to rush to Syria, and popular support for it is dangerously obvious in countries such as Turkey, Lebanon and Jordan."

We have an important election coming up. Hopefully, the Republican Party will be able to take over the Senate as well as the House. If this happens, perhaps they will be able to prove that they can govern effectively and a Republican president can then be elected in another two years. Of course, if the Republicans cannot effectively govern, being more interested in prosecuting the Democrats rather than working with them to solve our many problems, then we will really be in a pickle.

It is doubtful that the United States has ever had a worse president. President Obama even makes the bumbling administration of Jimmy Carter look Reganesque. The president has proven without a doubt that he cannot govern, think strategically, or effectively communicate with the people.

His presidency has also been the most opaque of any previous administration; including the administration of Nixon, who was the king of opaqueness. Obama has filed criminal charges and taken other federal action against more reporters—for more dubious reasons than all the previous presidents combined. This president has not been a friend of the press, preferring to suppress accurate reporting.

If we can survive the next two years without too much self-inflicted damage to our great land, then perhaps we will have a chance to elect a government that can actually work across the aisle and get something positive done. If not, I hate to think about the plethora of troubles heading our way.

President Obama, Susan Rice, and Chuck Hagel are not up to the task of effectively defining and executing a cogent foreign policy. Seldom has any previous president faced so many serious international problems at the same time. Unfortunately, they have proven that they are incapable of projecting American power abroad.

This president has selected his people based primarily upon their personal loyalty to him. That is why his administration is so bankrupt in talent and ability.

Cockerham recalls 'forgotten war'

This is in regard to the wonderful article Peggy Cockerham wrote on the forgotten war. My late husband, Lon Jackson, was on the front line in Korea. This was early 1951 and 1952. It really made him have the PTSD the rest of his life and was hard on family because we could not make any noise at night or suddenly.

I heard stories about Heartbreak Ridge, Pork Chop Hill, and Mae West Ridges, the last one they called that for a reason men think of. White Horse and Triangle Hill I do not recall. We were not married at the time since I am younger by 12 years. He always said that he liked for the guard dogs to be in the foxhole with them because you could tell if something was around.

I have written down some of the things he said for the grandchildren later if they will be interested. One is why he hated Spam canned meat. It was because he and another soldier had to drive the troops up the mountain and not get back in time for supper, and they were not allowed in the mess hall, so they took a lot of Spam and ate way too much and got real sick.

He was never real close to children or anyone, although he loved them, because was taught to not to have a close buddy in war because if they were wounded, you would go to them and that was a no, no... you kept on fighting. He said that before he and another one got off the ship in California, they changed to civilian clothes because of hearing the crowd.

Lon was from Memphis and Clarendon. I grew up on a farm south of Lelia Lake, the home of Earl Shields now. I graduated from Lelia Lake school and was back the first of October for a reunion. My sister, Nell Gray, still lives in Clarendon. She gives me the Enterprise for a Christmas gift every year, and I read it all. Hope you keep your news column. That is about all the news I hear is what is in the paper since I have no computer.

Crosses, signs impress

We drove through your town last week on our way to Louisiana, and we were very impressed with the crosses and signs on your main street. We would like you to know that we returned to your city on our way back through in order to patronize your businesses. We appreciate the stand you take on this issue, and we hope we can visit again sometime soon!

CC Rodeo Team competes at Tech

The Clarendon College Rodeo Team competed at Texas Tech October 17-18 and ended the fall semester with a bang.

Colton Jackson won second in the first round of Saddle Bronc Riding with a score of 75. He failed to cover his short round horse, but still ended up second in the average.

Wyatt Casper also made it back in the Saddle Bronc Riding. He also got bucked off in the short round but still ended up 8th in the average.

Cooper Kirkpatrick really stepped up in the steer wrestling. He got a different horse this last week to compete on and it made all the difference. He was 5.5 in the 1st round and ended up tied 8th and 9th. He came back to the short round with a winning attitude and was 4.3 in the short round. That was good enough to tie 2nd and 3rd in the short round and win 4th in the average.

The Clarendon College team ended up 8th out of the fifteen teams in the region in Lubbock.

Jackson is sitting 3rd in the year end in the Saddle Bronc Riding, and Kirkpatrick moved into the top 20 in the Steer Wrestling. Clarendon College Men's Team is currently sitting 9th in the region.

Broncos fight hard in district loss to Crosbyton

By Sandy Anderberg

The Clarendon Broncos have fought battle after battle and Friday night was no different for the young squad.

After playing top ten-ranked Crosbyton very tough, the Broncos were in a good spot through the final quarter when the Chiefs broke the game open. A pass interference call in the end zone that went against us and a dropped pass for six points were crucial to the momentum for the Broncos. The final was 26-43.

The Broncos struck first when senior workhorse Charles Mason teamed up with quarterback Bryce Hatley on a 53-yard pass for six points. After Zack LaRoe added the bonus, the Broncos were up by seven. Crosbyton answered back with two scores. But right before half, Mason made good on a two-yard run and Jonathon Taylor added the extra point to tie the score at 14-14.

In the third quarter the Broncos held their opponent to only one score, but Crosbyton opened it up and put up 10 more points than the Broncos in the fourth period. Junior Cenicerros grabbed a 15-yard pass from LaRoe for six and Cedrick McCampbell scored on a five-yard pass.

Head coach Gary Jack was proud of the kids' effort in the game. "The kids played a good solid game," Jack said. "We went into halftime tied with a really good undefeated team. I have to give our coaching staff and kids a lot of credit. We are getting better."

Defensively, Jack thought the kids gave a great effort.

"We had several kids have good games and played very solid. Nick Shadle came in and had 11 tackles on defense and played his best game of the season."

Jack also noted that Keandre Cortez had 12 tackles, Clay Koetting had 9, Caleb Cobb had 11, and Montana Hysinger played solid once again. Taylor, Taylon Knorpp, McCampbell, and Hatley had good defensive games.

Offensively, the Broncos struggled on the ground, but put up 204 yards passing.

"Our offense moved the ball well for us," Jack said. "We had a few mistakes, but they fought hard."

The Broncos are still looking to the play offs and according to Jack they still have a chance.

"We are in the same position as we were last year," Jack said. "We have two games left and we have to win to have a chance. We will gear up for Ralls this week. I like our chances and we will keep working hard."

The Broncos will take on Ralls at home in Bronco Stadium Friday, October 31, at 7:00 p.m.

Colts blast Crosbyton

The Clarendon Colts are setting the bar high this season and their game with Crosbyton was no exception.

The Colts annihilated their opponent 22-8 on the road Thursday night.

After a shaky start and trailing by eight, the Colts kicked it into high gear in the second quarter when Ryan McCleskey scored from 10 yards out and Noab Elam hit Bear Smith for the bonus to tie the game. The Colts grabbed the momentum change and after Payton Hicks caused a fumble that Ryan Ward recovered, they put it in the end zone in less than a minute. Elam found Smith again in the air and Smith scored from 25 yards out. Elam teamed up once again with Smith for the two-point conversion to give the Colts the lead at the break.

It was the defense's time to shine in the second half and there were able to dominate by causing fumbles and playing determined football.

"The front line of Hicks, Isaac Dunham, and Ward shut them down and dominated," Elam said. "Cole Franks and Gavin Word also made good tackles on defense." Elam was just as happy with his team's offensive play. "McCleskey had a good game running the ball and linemen Dunham, Clay Ward, Ryan Ward, Caton Grahn and Hicks did an outstanding job opening holes for the running backs."

Preston Elam earned the final score for the Colts that gave them the win.

The Colts will be in action again Thursday, October 30, at Ralls beginning at 5:00 p.m.
