Campaign For Decency.

Throughout both territories there is a strong movement against gambling, disorderly saloons, and vice in all its forms. There is a general recognition of the fact that crime and disorder do not pay, and town after town is taking up in earnest the fight for decency.

Like El Paso in past years, many of the territorial towns have been noted for their wide open resorts of vice, but like El Paso, since the people realized their true interest, these towns are one by one shutting up the worst resorts and putting the criminals out of business. With open gambling are inseparably connected debaucheries of other sorts, and with the gamblers gone the disorderly elements diminish greatly.

Tucson and Roswell have cleansed themselves. Douglas votes today on the proposition. Phoenix will come next. Carlsbad, Los Vegas and Albuquerque are stirring. Other cities and towns will follow, when they see the hordes of the lawless and disreputable flocking in from clean towns.

With such a wide-spread movement for decency and law, El Paso will have to be doubly vigilant, lest she be made the dumping ground for all the human refuse of other places. We want no more of the old regime, and this city, whose name is now used to conjure with in the great fight against crime and vice, because she was successful against fearful odds, cannot afford to relax one whit.—El Paso Herald.

The election in Douglas, referred to in the above, resulted in the defeat of the gamblers.

In this county the grand jury, aided by an expert accountant, found on examination of the books, that one-half of the court expenses of Eddy county are the result of open gambling in Carlsbad.

Carlsbad cannot claim that this is a matter in which the principle of home rule, or of personal liberty will apply. The people of that city cannot invoke the principle that every individual or town has a moral right to do anything that does not infringe on the rights of others. For when extra costs are piled up on the rest of the county by the crimes resulting from gambling, and that town secures revenue from the institution, it has the effect of taxation without representation.

There is talk in Roswell of organizing another automobile company for carrying the mails between here and Amarillo. Trains might continue to run occasionally on the railroad for the movement of non-perishable articles of freight, but automobiles would be much superior to the present train service for mail and passengers.—Roswell Record.

Not only has the Republican majority been reduced in Maine to one-sixth its usual size, but Arkansas has just given Governor Little 63,714 majority, the largest ever given a candidate in that state. All of which goes to show that Bryan's New York speech was just terribly destructive to Democratic chances.

The Santa Fe New Mexican of September 19 contained a write-up of the Pecos Valley.

The Error of The Register-Tribune.

As The Advocate is not a protagonist of public ownership of railroads it may seem strange that it should devote its leading editorial to that question again this week. However, so much misrepresentation has been indulged in by the anti-Bryan press, that we feel that fairness demands the refutation of certain errors, now freely circulated.

Bryan's Louisville speech was but an amplification of his New York address, yet certain great dailies did not hesitate to intimate by misleading headlines, that it was a retraction or an apology—a construction that the text would not justify.

Among the smaller papers that attempted to set forth a lucid explanation of the gist of things, was the Register-Tribune, of Roswell, from which we quote the following, from its issue of two weeks ago:

Bryan is nothing if not a fantastic, but his latest break in announcing public ownership as an issue has set the whole country talking. It has been a common thing for the great Nebraskan to travel out of line with the tradition of his party, but to thus take up one of the arch principles of socialism out-herds even Herod. It is only a step from this point to general confiscation, and Mr. Bryan can easily reach that by the time of the next presidential election.

The careless spirit with which able and conscientious editors approach the discussion of public questions is well illustrated by the above clipping. The errors are manifold and are excusable only on the ground that the Register-Tribune has been playing "follow your leader," or has depended too closely on the assertions of the Dallas News, which, while one of the ablest purveyors of news in the great Southwest, is none too Democratic in sentiment.

For instance, the Roswell paper refers to "his latest break, in announcing for public ownership, as an issue." Now, Bryan did not announce this question as an issue, and as we showed recently, his New York utterances do not bear such an interpretation. Besides, as we also showed, the "break," if such it was, was nearly two years old.

Then, the statement that this is "one of the arch principles of socialism" is not true in the sense in which it is used in the context. Bryan opposes socialism, but favors government ownership, because he fears that in this case, where natural forces tend so strongly toward monopoly, regulation will prove ineffective. He favors it because he believes that the rebates arising from monopoly will destroy the competitive system which he desires to preserve. He also proposes to pay for the roads in full. The socialists desire to take over the roads and everything else; the farm, factory, mill—the trade of "the butcher, the baker, the candle-stick maker;" without compensation other than making the fellow thus relieved of his property or of his burden, an equal shareholder in the proposed co-operative commonwealth. The socialists wish to destroy competition; Bryan wants to maintain it. Hence their purpose for obtaining government ownership and their method of securing it are wholly different from his.

In fact, no people are more radically opposed to government ownership, as an end, than the socialists. In their last national platform but one they declared that, "The Democratic, Republican, the bourgeois Public Ownership parties, and all other parties, which do not stand for the complete overthrow of the capitalist system of production, are alike representatives of the capitalist class." That such is the socialist position the Register-Tribune man seems rather to feel than to recognize, and not being quite sure of the force of his argument he adds, "It is only a step from this point to confiscation." It is only a step from the exercise of the right of eminent domain to confiscation but that step has not been taken and nobody suggests that it should be taken. Three fourths of the nations of the world own all or part of their railroad systems, but none have confiscated them. Italy and Japan are now adopting government ownership, but they are not confiscating the roads. And for the benefit of the Register-Tribune which seems to be a little rusty on the subject, we might say that in every nation where government ownership is adopted, it has been brought about by the anti-socialists and generally in opposition to the socialistic parties. So it our Roswell contemporary had posted up a little it would not have been so hasty in insinuating that Bryan is an advocate of confiscation.

Bryan, like the rest of us, hopes regulation will prove effective. And, by the way, he advocated it before the Republican party did and advised Democrats to vote for it. He fears that it will fail. In that event he favors government ownership. President Roosevelt, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Wall Street Journal, all show that they think its failure is within the range of possibilities.

If regulation should prove ineffective what remedy have the Republicans to suggest? What does the Register-Tribune propose to do about it? We hope rebates will really be abolished by restrictive legislation. But suppose they are not? If they are, we shall forever oppose government ownership. If they are not, we may be driven to adopt Bryan's ideas, unless the President and his Roswell organ have some better plan. If you have such a plan, trot it out, brothers, and let's look it over.

Our Republican brethren are making themselves ridiculous by their abuse of the Democrats for endorsing Governor Hagerman and joint statehood. Governor Hagerman has been an able, honest, fearless executive. He found graft and incompetence in the ranks of his own party. He assailed the crooked politicians and put them to flight. For this reason the Democrats applauded him, and were abused by many Republican papers as a result. This doesn't look well for the fellows who are traducing the Democratic admirers of the governor.

Arrangements have been made for a series of games between Lakewood and Artesia to take place here next week. It is also hoped that Carlsbad will agree to play a series next week.

Manager Burt was in Roswell last Sunday. He was approached by several of the Dexter team who congratulate him warmly as a representative of the Artesian team on account of the courtesy shown Dexter by the Artesian team during their contests with each other. The baseball season will close by a game between that team and the home team.

"No matter what heat may develop in the territorial campaign, no just criticism can be made of Hon. O. O. Larrazolo, the Democratic candidate for delegate to congress. He is a scholar and a gentleman, whose patriotism and ability are far beyond the average.—Roswell Register-Tribune (Rep.)"

"The success or failure of the Democratic party in 1908 lies altogether with the Democratic party," says the Weatherford, Texas, Herald. "It will be Bryan and success or anti-Bryan and failure. On which side will you stand, dear reader?"

H. Hutsonpiller, of Des Moines, Iowa, came in last night. He owns a fine farm North of the Pecos, which he bought from S. P. Gilbert.

Pain From a Burn Promptly Relieved by Chamberlain's Pain Balm.

A little child of Michael Strauss, of Vernon, Conn., was recently in great pain from a burn on the hand, and as cold applications only increased the inflammation, Mr. Strass came to Mr. James N. I have used this liniment myself and recommend it very often for cuts, burns, strains and lame back, and have never known it to disappoint." For sale by Pecos Valley Drug Co.

Buy Homes---

Not Porkers.

Two Oklahomans will Purchase Farms. Came to Buy Hogs.

A search for hogs brought M. E. Hufford and J. H. Dob, from near Woodward, Okla., to Artesia, and the advantages of the situation induced them to decide to invest and to come here with their families.

A week or so ago Cliff Chisholm of Roswell advertised a lot of hogs for sale in papers outside the territory, and copies of those containing the ad fell into the hands of the gentlemen referred to. They wanted the hogs and determined to come down and look them over. By the time they arrived Mr. Chisholm had sold the porkers. Being in the country they determined to look around, prompted only by motives of curiosity. This feeling rapidly gave way to one of interest. A thorough investigation led to the conclusion that they could make more money on fruit and alfalfa alfalfa around Artesia than they could on their Oklahoma farms. They decided to purchase near Artesia and have gone back to settle up their affairs at home and they will then close the deals in which they are interested here.

Mr. Hufford who lives in an irrigated country and knows the value of land in such a situation says it will not be long until all the land in the irrigated region of the Pecos Valley will bring $300 per acre.

Three fourths of the nations of the world own all or part of their railroad systems, but none have confiscated them. Italy and Japan are now adopting government ownership, but they are not confiscating the roads. And for the benefit of the Register-Tribune which seems to be a little rusty on the subject, we might say that in every nation where government ownership is adopted, it has been brought about by the anti-socialists and generally in opposition to the socialistic parties. So it our Roswell contemporary had posted up a little it would not have been so hasty in insinuating that Bryan is an advocate of confiscation.

↑ ↑ ↑ ↑
Bryan, like the rest of us, hopes regulation will prove effective. And, by the way, he advocated it before the Republican party did and advised Democrats to vote for it. He fears that it will fail. In that event he favors government ownership. President Roosevelt, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and the Wall Street Journal, all show that they think its failure is within the range of possibilities.

If regulation should prove ineffective what remedy have the Republicans to suggest? What does the Register-Tribune propose to do about it? We hope rebates will really be abolished by restrictive legislation. But suppose they are not? If they are, we shall forever oppose government ownership. If they are not, we may be driven to adopt Bryan's ideas, unless the President and his Roswell organ have some better plan. If you have such a plan, trot it out, brothers, and let's look it over.

Our Republican brethren are making themselves ridiculous by their abuse of the Democrats for endorsing Governor Hagerman and joint statehood. Governor Hagerman has been an able, honest, fearless executive. He found graft and incompetence in the ranks of his own party. He assailed the crooked politicians and put them to flight. For this reason the Democrats applauded him, and were abused by many Republican papers as a result. This doesn't look well for the fellows who are traducing the Democratic admirers of the governor.

Arrangements have been made for a series of games between Lakewood and Artesia to take place here next week. It is also hoped that Carlsbad will agree to play a series next week.

He was approached by several of the Dexter team who congratulate him warmly as a representative of the Artesian team on account of the courtesy shown Dexter by the Artesian team during their contests with each other. The baseball season will close by a game between that team and the home team.

"No matter what heat may develop in the Territorial campaign, no just criticism can be made of Hon. O. O. Larrazolo, the Democratic candidate for delegate to congress. He is a scholar and a gentleman, whose patriotism and ability are far beyond the average.—Roswell Register-Tribune (Rep.)

"The success or failure of the Democratic party in 1908 lies altogether with the Democratic party," says the Weatherford, Texas, Herald. "It will be Bryan and success or anti-Bryan and failure. On which side will you stand, dear reader?"

Registration of Voters.

The registration law of New Mexico requires the board of registration for each precinct to meet at least thirty days prior to any general election, for the purpose of registering the qualified voters of each precinct. J. E. Swebston, J. C. Gage, and John A. Orr constitute the registration board for this precinct, (No. 6.) which board will open the registration books at the office of J. E. Swebston, in the bank of Artesia building, on Thursday, October 4, and will hold said books open for the purpose mentioned until Saturday evening at six o'clock, October 6th. It is important that the Artesia country have full registration this year, and as no one can vote without first having been registered, every voter in the precinct is urged to present himself for registration on one of the days denominated. See, also, that your neighbors does not neglect this important duty.

Pain From a Burn Promptly Relieved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

A little child of Michael Strauss, of Vernon, Conn., was recently in great pain from a burn on the hand, and as cold applications only increased the inflammation, Mr. Strauss came to Mr. James N. I have used this liniment myself and recommend it very often for cuts, burns, strains and lame back, and have never known it to disappoint." For sale by Pecos Valley Drug Co.

Buy Homes---

Not Porkers.

Two Oklahomans will Purchase Farms. Came to Buy Hogs.

A search for hogs brought M. E. Hufford and J. H. Dob, from near Woodward, Okla., to Artesia, and the advantages of the situation induced them to decide to invest and to come here with their families.

A week or so ago Cliff Chisholm of Roswell advertised a lot of hogs for sale in papers outside the territory, and copies of those containing the ad fell into the hands of the gentlemen referred to. They wanted the hogs and determined to come down and look them over. By the time they arrived Mr. Chisholm had sold the porkers. Being in the country they determined to look around, prompted only by motives of curiosity. This feeling rapidly gave away to one of interest. A thorough investigation led to the conclusion that they could make more money on fruit and alfalfa alfalfa around Artesia than they could on their Oklahoma farms. They decided to purchase near Artesia and have gone back to settle up their affairs at home and they will then close the deals in which they are interested here.

Mr. Hufford who lives in an irrigated country and knows the value of land in such situation says it will not be long until all the land in the irrigated region of the Pecos Valley will bring $300 per acre.

Deacon Andrews' Joke.

Old Deacon Andrews, who died some years ago in Centre Lovell, Me., was a noted wit in that vicinity. One evening he had occasion to go to a neighboring town to get some provisions and other things. It was late at night when he returned, and a cold, penetrating wind was blowing. He stopped his horse in front of a neighbor's house, and getting out of his carriage, knocked loudly at the door.

After Mr. Andrews had knocked for some while the neighbor came down, partially dressed and shivering from the cold.

"Good evening, Seth," said the deacon. "Have you lost a little pearl-handled penknife?"

"No," was the reply. "Have you found one?"

"No, I haven't," drawled Mr. Andrews, "but I didn't know but what I might."

Short and to the Point.

The captain of one of the Cunard liners is a gruff old Britisher who is on record as never having spoken a civil word to a passenger. There was surprise therefore among the first cabin travelers one morning on a trip across lately, when a New York tourist was seen to light his cigar in the companionway, and then halt the captain and exchange remarks with him. When the captain passed on the others gathered about the fortunate and favored man. "Yes," he explained, "we really had quite a conversation. I said 'good morning, captain,' like that, and he said: 'You blankety-blank lunkhead, don't you know better than to smoke in the after companionway?'"

The Circus.

'Twas a good circus and a great day for Artesia. A great day for the small boy and little girl who had been raised in the Pecos valley and who had never seen a real circus; a still greater day for the weary journalist who enjoyed the double benefit of a vacation and a comp; the greatest day for the young man who took Her and who over the brim of the copious goblet of red lemonade, saw in those loving eyes the answer he longed to receive, to the fateful question he feared to ask.

Everybody from the surrounding country was in, and large crowds arrived from Dayton, Lake Arthur, Hagerman, Lakewood and Hope; those thriving towns which constitute the suburbs of Artesia, and whose citizens came to rejoice with the people of the "Queen City of the Pecos Valley." It was a creditable affair all through and was all the more appreciated because so many bum operative (?) companies have imposed upon the good nature of the people.

For fear that some one who is familiar with the facts might be inclined to question our condition on circus day, we desire to say that the passage about the red lemonade and loving eyes is not to be literally construed. It is simply a poetical ebullition of the editor. Between ourselves the lemonade wasn't red at all though there was some scarlet cider on the ground; but in the phraseology in which circuses have been written up from the earliest ages, red lemonade has an established place. In tradition it is associated with the show as Santa Claus is associated with yuletide. It cannot be dispensed with; therefore red lemonade it must be, and red lemonade it is, and was, all direct evidence to the contrary notwithstanding.

The part relating to the loving eyes is also an example of poetic license. It is purely original and we think it a mighty fine sentiment, even if it doesn't quite jibe with the facts in the case.

But Campbell Brothers do give a good performance and have a first rate menagery.

Lower Penasco.

Sept. 19, '06.

Editor Artesia Advocate:

With pleasure I can report a fine crop for the Penasco, especially of corn and fruit. Beginning at Mr. Tillson's we find a fine crop of hay and corn, with which he contemplates fattening something like a hundred head of stock. On Mr. Boyce William's place we find an enormous crop of corn, tended by Mr. Sowell and Mr. Beal. "The entire crop about 60 acres will average 50 bushels per acre. Next we have a view from the road of Mr. Rathgeber's and Mr. Cadenheads farms. On the one we note there will soon be a great time soon, hog killing; on the other we see a thrifty young orchard just yielding its first fruit. Next, as we climb the grade we have a fine view of the E. O. Peck farm, with its alfalfa, corn and young orchard, all green in the distance. The Penasco makes several falls through this farm. The rapid descent gives fine opportunities for water power. Mr. Peck intends using some of this power in the near future by putting up a grist mill. Descending the grade we passed the well improved Powell farm whose every nook and corner shows the careful hand of its master, who passed that shady threshold on the first of the month to where there is no returning. It is hoped his four grown sons will be able to keep up the old home for the family in as royal a manner as their father kept it. Mr. J. C. Cook has been engaged in ditching the past few weeks improving his place. Mr. Wasson has a good crop on J. R. Peck's place and his own. He is building a new house. He commenced on his contract as U. S. Mail carrier in July. Now we have only reached the postoffice and for fear the editor says enough, we will add a few locals and postpone the rest of the description of our little valley until another time.

Mr. Will Morrison and wife, with their little girl and two baby boys, has spent the past month in this valley.

Mrs. Brownfield and daughter, Ida, have been visiting here and Mrs. Rush has made an extended visit, but these good people have returned to their homes in Crow Flat.

NAPOLEON'S CODE FOR WOMEN.

Some Criticism of Ideas Held by the "Great Frenchman."

Napoleon said at St. Helena that his glory consisted not in having won forty battles, but in the civil code and in the deliberations of the council of state.

Savigny and Charles Austin condemned the civil code as "a mechanical mixture of the results of the revolution and the old regime of Roman law and the customs," three-fourths of its contents having been extracted by draftsmen from a printed treatise. The code, in a word, was not a substantive mass of law, but "an index to an immense body of jurisprudence existing outside of itself."

One of the dictator's objectionable hobbies was his desire for the degradation of the civil status of woman, who is treated by the code as a "fickle, defenseless, mindless being." When asked in committee if widely obedience was prescribed by old French law, the first consul sharply replied: "Do you not know that the angel told Eve to obey her husband? Morality has written this article in all languages."—London Spectator.

He Had Them All Placed.

A prominent Melrose lady was having the season's coal put in, and a little, bent old man was left behind to level it off in the bins. The lady noticed his worn and heated condition, and, calling him, gave him a nice large cool drink and something to eat with it. When the old man had finished with this, he said to the giver:

"Thank you kindly, ma'am. If I was treated like this at every place, it's another house I would have."

As she was judging from outside appearance, the good woman was a little surprised. "Why," said she, "do you own a house now?"

"I do, ma'am," he answered; "I own four," and, with the characteristic frankness of his race, added: "And I've a daughter in college and a son in jail."—Boston Herald.

The Life of Bells.

Comparatively few people know that ringing a bell ruins it. That is, a bell has a definite length of life, and after so many blows will break. A 900 pound bell, struck blows of 178 foot pounds of force, broke after 11,000 blows. A 4,000 pound bell broke after 18,000 blows of 350 foot pounds force. A steel composition bell weighing 1,000 pounds broke after 24 blows of 150 foot pounds, but its maker said it was calculated for a lighter blow.

"Who is a Christian;" or, "What it is to be a Christian."

Subject Discussed by Rev. E. E. Mathes, Pastor, at the Presbyterian Church last Sabbath Morning.

After reading Acts 11:26 and 28:25 the preacher stated that it was not his desire or purpose to discuss either text exegetically or exclusively but only suggestively. He said in part as follows: "This morning I desire to discuss a subject of great importance and one about which there is much confusion in this age of the world.

It might be of interest to us, and might prove profitable, to discuss the name 'Christian' historically, to ascertain how the name came to be applied to the Disciples at Antioch and from whom given; for what purpose; and what was received by them, and so on.

Or we might with both pleasure and profit seek to find out the meaning of Agrippa's mind and heart when he said to Paul, 'Almost thou hast persuaded me to be a Christian;' whether he was under deep conviction of sin and felt the need of a Savior of whom Paul had been speaking; or whether he addressed him in a flippant and irreverent manner, or in derision and scorn. These are important and interesting questions and worthy of careful thought and investigation. But these we shall not consider at this time. Our purpose is to consider the real meaning of the name "Christian" today, in the light of what the Disciples were when they were first called Christians, and in light of what Agrippa would have been had he become "fully persuaded" to be such as Paul was except his bonds, or "what it really means to be a Christian." And I am sure, my friends, that about this subject there is much confusion today and a great deal of misunderstanding and many misconceptions. And it is well for us to get these misconceptions cleared up, if possible; important that we have clear views of the subject, for error here would be fatal. No truth, therefore, more important to know than this, "What does it really mean to be a Christian, what makes one a Christian and who are entitled to be called Christian." These are some of the questions which confront us at the very beginning of our discussion.

Hence we at once see that the subject is many sided and takes wide range, and many and varied are the answers given to these queries. Answers more or less biased because the subject is considered from each one's own point of view. Many things taken into the account, some relevant, others irrelevant. Various standards as to what constitutes a Christian. Many things excluded and many included, environment, early training and all these must be taken into account. Hence many tests are applied, good, bad and indifferent, some too exclusive, some too inclusive. First of all, may we not be helped to a solution of the problem, by the process of elimination; eliminate some things that are often considered sure and self evident tests.

"That which so frequently passes for Christianity today is morality, or that which is considered as the vital and all embracing test as to whether one is a Christian or not—morality, and first a negative morality at that. "I don't do so and so, I don't drink, I don't swear, I don't lie" and so forth, ad infinitum. A series of don'ts and that's all. Then, there are those who have a sort of positive morality, which they consider all inclusive and entitles them to be considered and called Christians. "I pay my debts, I am kind and neighborly, I go to church and help pay the preacher," and so on and so on. Illustration: One came to a preacher to get his indorsement that he (the one coming) was a Christian. The preacher knowing the character of the man said, "Are you a christian?" and he at once replied, "Why, I'm an old soldier," as if that settled the matter. Often such erroneous views are held about what it is to be a Christian.

Now, we have nothing to say against morality. Morality is good and necessary and has a real and vital place in Christianity, and it is the standard of conduct for all; the standard of moral attainment for all, and no one is exempt from its binding force. But let it be said and remembered that morality never makes one a christian. Something more is necessary.

Nor does morality linked with church relationship make one a Christian. There is a great deal of church-ianity today where there is no Christianity. Joining the church is all right and the proper thing for one who is a Christian to do. But joining the church and receiving the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's supper and conforming to all the rites and ceremonies of the church do not necessarily and essentially make one a Christian.

Nor does a mere belief in God and even in the historic Christ necessarily make one a Christian. "The devils believe and tremble" and yet are not Christians.

Nor does a belief in the Bible and a future life and heaven make one a Christian. A Christian believes all these things does all these things, but these things do not make a christian.

But to be a christian means to hold some relation to Christ, to be his followers, his pupils, "Christians," belonging to Christ, allied to him and so forth. This was the conception that the early disciples had. They regarded themselves as identified with the master; not only associated with him but united to him—one with him—his very nature imparted to them, "partakers of the divine nature" as Peter expresses it, "And Paul speaks of the Christian as one who is 'a new creature' or 'new creation, in Christ Jesus. Thus he could say, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," and "for me to live is Christ."

From all this it will be seen at once that to be a christian means to be in close and vital relation with the Lord Jesus Christ, and that relationship is mutual. Christ is something to or has done something for the one who becomes a christian and the one becoming a christian is something to or does something for Christ. And this mutual relationship is expressed in several different ways in the scriptures, but always meaning the same thing. First, Jesus offers himself as a savior, and the sinner realizing his need, repents of his sin, and accepts Christ as his savior; (a) Savior from the guilt and punishment of sin when pardons bestowed; (b) Savior from the power and dominion of sin in times of trial and temptation.

Second, Jesus comes to us as a teacher and we, believing in him as savior, become his pupils or "followers" and he becomes our teacher and so forth.

Then again Christ offers himself as master and we yield ourselves to him in loving and cheerful obedience, recognizing His Kingship in all things and making our wills submissive and subordinate to His will. All who do these things are christians.

After developing the points stated above the speaker closed with an earnest exhortation to any present who were not christians to become such at once by accepting him as Savior, Teacher and Master, and then to go forth rejoicing in his salvation, to engage in His service, Christ in them, their hope and strength in this life and of that which is to come.

New Church at Hope.

Rev. E. Ward returned Wednesday from Hope where he has been arranging for the laying of the foundation of a new Baptist meeting house. Everything is in readiness and work will begin Monday under the superintendence of Messrs. Williamson, of Artesia, and Eakin, of Hope.

The new structure will be 28x46 in dimensions and will be a very creditable building. The people of Hope have shown an active interest in the matter. It is hoped that the building will be ready for use early in November.

Rev. Ward is interested along with

Jesse D. McBride, of Artesia, in a fine farm one mile from Hope, and adjoining the Reed farm of which we made mention last week in regard to its enormous yield of peaches. He says the people of Hope are hustling for the cause of the town and its surroundings.

At the meeting of the Pastor's Association Monday morning, Rev. E. Ward read an able paper on "How to conduct and maintain a successful prayer meeting." This was followed by an interesting discussion. The next meeting will take place Monday morning, Oct. 8, at which time Rev. E. E. Mathes will present a paper on "expository preaching."

We give a cordial invitation to all to attend our church.
