DISAPPOINTING

The fact that cotton acreage reduction bills and no cotton bills proposed and passed by several southern state legislatures failed to stimulate the cotton market materially is somewhat discouraging to the cotton growers as well as others in the community dependent on the cotton industry. It indicates conclusively that unless some uniform plan of acreage reduction is adopted the cotton farmer can expect little or no immediate benefits.

What the cotton farmer needs to do is to make a voluntary reduction in acreage another year notwithstanding the fact that it is conceded to be an almost impossible task. It can be done however, if every farmer is willing to lay selfishness aside. The idea that New Mexico ought to be left alone to grow her little patch of cotton is just as bad as the east Texas farmer, who thinks he would starve to death if he were to fail to plant his entire forty acres in cotton. Ideas such as these have made it next to impossible to regulate production of a farm crop. They are conceived in selfishness and will make the cotton grower an easy prey of the politician, unless legislative regulation works differently in this particular case than the ordinary one.

A good many people thought the farm board would offer a miraculous cure for the farmers ills, but instead the board has proved to be the biggest farce yet perpetrated on the American people.

KEEPING TAXES DOWN

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has about faced on the proposition of public expenditures and has declared itself against a further increase in the tax rate. Folks are finding out that one must pay the fiddler if one is to enjoy the music. This fact was overlooked while times were good and everyone had a little money. Public improvements cost money. They must be paid in taxes, but taxes can not be cut and county, state and federal governments can not trench in hard times as private business does.

Now about one out of every ten persons is supported by the government. If the ratio increases in the next ten years as it has in the past ten, half of the people will be supporting the other half. Just let the federal government have a little more leeway and establish a few more bureaus and commissions and a few more boards to bust the farmers, we will have reached this sorry state of affairs long before ten years have passed.

NOBODY READS THE PAPER

"Nobody reads the paper" is the answer we get occasionally from a man when he is asked to advertise. And other men live in the town year after year without subscribing for the paper. "There's nothing in it," they say. But let one of these men get into trouble with the law or let some scandal threaten his peace and immediately he rushes to the newspaper to be sure nothing is published about it. At a time like that he knows that "everybody reads the paper." It reminds us of the editor of a paper "that nobody reads" who put a notice in his paper advising the business man who had been kissing his stenographer to immediately discharge her or his name would be published in the next issue. Twenty-four hours later 20 stenographers were looking for jobs and the editor found out that "somebody did read his paper."—Rio Grande Farmer.

THEY ASK A VOICE

New Mexico's delegation to the American Legion convention at Detroit voted unanimously for the successful resolution asking congress to re-submit the prohibition question to the people.

The delegation is to be congratulated for having the courage of its conviction, which was and is that prohibition has become a sad mess and that something should be done about it.

These New Mexico Legionnaires will probably be criticized by dregs and dry organizations. Please recall that these men were deprived of an opportunity to express themselves on a public issue. They now ask that privilege.

Is it wrong for them to ask a voice in the laws that govern them?—State Tribune.

AT LAST

President Hoover has finally admitted that these commissions appointed to suggest a remedy for government ills are a failure. The commissions are no good except to use as a buck passer, but it took about three years and two billion dollars or more in money to find this out. Take the Wickersham commission for an example, whose findings are said to have cost the government between a half million and a million dollars. The average person does not know as much about what is wrong with our national prohibition system as he did before he read what the commission had to say.

A number of delinquent tax collectors over the state are going after the fellows, who have evaded the personal property tax in the years passed. Despite the fact that the county funds are low at the present time and badly needed, the collectors have chosen a rather inopportune season for collections at this particular time, for its hard times with the individual as well as the county. The pay as you go system will operate much smoother, once it is started.

And the democrats have finally oked the two-bit notary fee connected with the sale of auto license and the road debentures used to finance the highways. Now that the two parties have agreed on these two issues, it ought to cut at least thirty minutes from the average political speech in 1932.

With as much food stuff as we now have access to before the close of the growing season, there is no excuse for suffering or privation this winter among ninety per cent of the families now living in our midst.

"SAVE THE SURPLUS" FOOD PLANS AIDED BY FEDERAL INFORMATION

Assistance for housewives and welfare organizations which are centering their attention right now on saving the surplus fruit and vegetable crop is offered by the bureau of home economics and other bureaus of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in the form of information on canning, preserving, pickling, drying and storing practically all native fruits and vegetables.

With the passing of the day when each family had to make most of the preparations itself for the winter's supply of food, the practice of home canning and preserving has gradually declined. During emergencies such as the World War and in the present economic situation there is a revival of individual and community effort to put away foods, while they are plenty, for winter use. Encouraged by large crops and attendant low costs many persons are working to save the surplus, not only for their own personal use, but for relief distribution.

Recipes for the various methods of food preservation were formerly a matter of great family pride. But, with the shift to commercially prepared foods, the home has lost much of this sort of knowledge so that this season when this "save the surplus" campaign got underway, canners had to seek outside information. Moreover the "surplus savers" are canning kinds of fruits and vegetables which they have never before canned. And for some of these there has been little or no satisfactory canning information in the homes.

In this category are included the non-acid vegetables, such as peas, beans, corn, okra and squash which are difficult to sterilize. They require temperatures of about 240° to 250° F. that can be obtained only in a steam pressure cooker. It is dangerous and it is wasteful to take chances on inadequately sterilized canned foods. Canned goods that spoil waste the food itself and also the labor and expense of canning. Spoiled food is dangerous. The saving of non-acid vegetables by canning should not be undertaken the bureau says, unless they can be obtained fresh and held under cold storage if canning is to be delayed even briefly. Many of these vegetables, however, can be dried successfully and some may be preserved by salting.

The bureau of home economics has available to the public a bulletin on canning fruits and vegetables at home, which was revised this year and which contains detailed information on the various methods of home canning. Other publications of the bureau discuss jelly making, pickles and relishes, jellied grapefruit and lemon peel; jams and conserves; and some special ways of utilizing peaches.

Other bureaus of the Department of Agriculture have published bulletins on homemade fruit butters, which include peach, plum and pear, as well as the better known apple butter; home drying of fruits and vegetables; vinegar making; unfermented apple juice; unfermented grape juice; home storage of vegetables; and the making of fermented pickles; and commercial production of sauerkraut.

Any or all of these may be had free of charge upon request to the bureau of home economics, or the Office of Information of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

URGE DRASTIC BAN ON FOREIGN OIL IMPORTS

Drastic limitation of oil imports for the remainder of this year was urged on Secretary Lamont Monday by representatives of the mid-continent oil field.

They urged the secretary of commerce to ask petroleum importers to bring no more refined oil products into this country this year and to limit imports of crude oil to not more than 140,000 barrels daily.

The request was presented by Thurman P. Hill, of the Kansas Public Service Commission.

It is also requested that the ban on refined products and by-products be continued as the stabilization program was enforced by the principal oil producing states.

The petroleum industry is in a better statistical position than it has been for years. Crude oil production so far this year is about 68,000,000 barrels less than during the similar period last year. Sixty-eight million barrels is a lot of crude. Crude oil stocks on August 1 were more than 40,000,000 barrels less than last year while gasoline stocks were nearly 6,000,000 barrels less. Under the plan of holding production in the United States to 2,376,000 barrels daily, 75,000 barrels daily would have to be supplied from storage. This with Oklahoma producing 546,000 barrels. With Oklahoma flush fields still shut in, that state is producing 285,000 barrels daily less than its allowable under the new plan, consequently the requirements for crude must be supplied by withdrawals of more than 350,000 barrels daily from storage.

FIND HOBBS MAN GUILTY OF MURDER

M. C. Riddle, of Hobbs, charged with the murder of his wife, was found guilty of second degree murder by a jury in the district court at Lovington, Monday morning. The case went to the jury at 12:55 o'clock Saturday afternoon, where it was deliberated all night. The verdict was read before Judge Luis Armijo Sunday morning.

The state was represented in the case by District Attorney Judson G. Osburn. Tom Neal, of Lovington, was defense attorney. Riddle was arrested after he had slashed his wife's throat near their home in Hobbs on the night of August 28.

DOVE-PIGEON COMPANIONS

How a dove and pigeon developed into inseparable companions is told by J. W. Turknett, Artesia pioneer. The dove and pigeon ranged near the home of Mr. Turknett and during the summer months were seen constantly together. The fact that the pigeon and dove appeared to take up with each other is a very strange phenomenon according to Mr. Turknett, who has lived long enough to know.

Somebody evidently killed the dove recently as it has not been seen lately. The pigeon has hatched off some young birds, but Mr. Turknett has not had an opportunity to examine them. He thinks that the pigeon and dove might have mated.

Proved to Be No Wallflower

By JANE OSBORN

"O H, HELLO, Ida. Didn't expect to see you here. This is jolly. That's so, mother did say she'd asked you. Big dance tonight. That's why you're here. Over at the county club. Well, so long, Ida. I'd stick around only I've got a date with a girl. See you tonight at the club. Don't forget to save me a dance. I'm coming a shade late, so hold off the mob till I get there."

Those were the words that Ned Roland spoke when, one Saturday afternoon in spring, he came home early from the office and, whistling his carefree way into the family living room, came upon Ida Martin—a sort of a cousin of his, as he himself introduced her, though the actual connection was extremely remote.

"I'm coming a shade late, so hold the mob off until I get there," he had just said to Ida, and eighteen-year-old Ida, with cheeks rapidly turning very pink, shot a rather resentful look from her pleasant brown eyes.

"Hold off the mob," she scorned. "You know perfectly well that there won't be any mob, and I wouldn't have come to this old dance only your mother—Cousin Nellie—wrote and begged me to. Said you'd want to take me. Not that I care one teeny bit about going with you. Only you know well enough that I don't know any of the boys at the club, and with all those girls—so smart and snappy—and everything, why I'd like to know how you can expect I'd have a good time, unless holding up one of the walls, and keeping down a chair is having a good time!"

"Oh, I say," said Ned, coming over to Ida and trying to take her warm little hands in his. "I didn't know mother said I'd take you. I never thought about you when I told Alice Clay I'd take her. Say, that's a shame. Maybe I could take you both—"

"I hate that Alice Clay," announced Ida. "She's snippy and she wears freak clothes and her language is terrible. I heard her saying 'hon' to a man she'd just been introduced to. Imagine taking two girls at once! I'll go myself and I won't know anyone and no one will notice me, and I'll have a miserable time. Men don't know how it is. If they don't dance people think it is because they don't want to, if girls don't dance—every one knows it's 'cause they haven't been asked. I'm not popular—and there's no use pretending I am—"

"I don't call not having a lot of dance partners not being popular," Ned tried to console. "Anyway, lots of girls that aren't as pretty as you have mobs of partners. A girl needs some sort of identification mark—something to make the men notice her. They ask for dances out of curiosity."

That afternoon Ida excused herself to her hostess and fairly sneaked away on a bus to the nearest shopping center. She carried home with her several parcels a few minutes before the dinner hour and asked permission of her hostess to eat in her day clothes—and dress for the dance later. So it really did take Ned's breath away for a brief second or so when he saw Ida at the dance, arriving a shade late himself with the "smart and snippy" Alice Clay. The fact was that he only caught glimpses of Ida. The group of young men about her made anything else impossible. There was Ida—her hair parted and brushed straight back on one side where an enormous loop earring dangled almost to her shoulder—and on the other side drawn well down over her ear. Then there was a monstrous spreading Spanish comb thrust rakishly in her hair at that side. Ned might also have noticed that there was a small black court-plaster crescent on one side of her face and that her little black satin slippers had bright red heels.

When Ned made his way to Ida she told him with a laugh that she hadn't been able to keep away the mob. "I'm sorry," she said. "But you'd asked for only one dance, so I knew it couldn't make much difference."

"I'm going to go home with Alice," Ned managed to tell Ida toward the close of the dance. "But I want to have a word or two with you when I get home. I'll expect to find you waiting when I come in."

So when Ned reached his house he found Ida who had only just been brought home by one of her many devoted admirers. "See here, Ida," said Ned, not daring now to touch her, "you ruined the evening for me. You had not right to treat me that way, when you were a guest at my mother's house. And those cads that you had hanging around you! There were two or three of them I wanted to shoot. You know you're—you're beautiful, Ida," and Ned almost stammered with embarrassment. A pause and then he added, "Excuse me, dear, but I've been almost mad with jealousy this evening—but you don't understand."

Ida smiled to herself. "I was only taking your advice," said Ida as she laid two small hands on Ned's arms. "I'm sorry if I made you unhappy—but I didn't think you cared."

LOVE-BIRDS FORGOTTEN BY U. S. GOVERNMENT

The United States government seems to have forgotten the two young love-birds that had been in the Eddy county jail for twenty-three days Monday.

They are all ready to be taken back to East Texas, or somewhere, to be tried for violation of the Mann act, but as the days pass by there is no sign of anybody to escort them, or to otherwise convict them or set them free. They have not varied in their story that they were duly and legally married at Clovis before they were picked up here, and if that is true, the only criminality depends upon whether such union does or does not wipe out the alleged violation of the Mann act before they were married.

Sheriff McDonald and his deputies can do nothing for the pair, one way or the other, and have no disposition to. It is a federal matter, purely.

Incidentally if the love-birds clear themselves, who is going to be liable for possibly illegal detention, false arrest and all that sort of thing?

The love-birds are being treated kindly by the jail force, and are taking their detention with real philosophy, altho confinement is getting a bit wearisome. Current-Argus.

NEW MEXICO GETS $235,227 IN ROYALTIES

Royalties received from oil lands by New Mexico for the first six months of this year totaled $235,227.98. The oil royalties go into a permanent fund to support various New Mexico eleemosynary institutions and the public school fund.

THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN

COTTON AGREE TO BE CUT DRASTICALLY IF ALL LAWS ENFORCED

Cotton acreage in the southern states will be at least 8,000,000 acres less next year than this year, provided other states adopt the one-third law, it is estimated by Carl H. Robinson, senior statistician with the department of agriculture for the state of Texas.

Figures tabulated by Robinson are based on a cotton acreage of one-third of the cultivated land in all of the southern states. This would allow an increase of 1,868,000 acres in Oklahoma and of 290,000 acres in Tennessee as neither state had one-third of its cultivated land in cotton this year.

In case these two states have no more land in cotton this year than last, the reduction in acreage will be in the neighborhood of 10,000,000 acres.

On the basis of a one-third acreage in cotton for the whole south, there will be 33,000,000 acres in cotton if the average per acre production is reached.

CATTLEMEN PROTEST FREIGHT HIKE

The executive board of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' association in meeting at Clayton went on record against any increase in freight rates of railroads, it was reported.

Railroads have proposed 15 per cent increase in freight rates and the cattlemen are fighting the increase as it applies to cattle shipments. The board telegraphed Charles Blaine, traffic counsel for the American National Livestock association, asking him to fight the increase. He wired the board he had been allowed an hour in which to argue the side of the cattlemen before the interstate commerce commission.

The board, adopted a resolution endorsing action of the Cattle Sanitary board in requiring inspection of horse hides. Numerous thefts of horses of late for sale of hides prompted the action, it was said.

Customer: "Are you sure this suit will not shrink if it gets wet?"
Goldstein: "Mine friend, every fire company in the city has squirted water on dot suit."

Adopted by All Members of the Artesia Retail Merchants Association

The members of the Artesia Retail Merchants Association, in cooperation with the Artesia Credit Bureau, have pledged themselves to the following standardized policies:

TERMS: Unless arrangements are made at the time or in advance of a credit purchase, specifying definitely the manner of liquidation, the account is authorized as a regular monthly account only, payable the first of the month following date of purchase and comes past due following the tenth of the month. Each merchant pledges himself to report each unsatisfactory delinquent account to the Artesia Credit Bureau and simultaneously discontinue credit.

OPENING OF ACCOUNTS: Credit shall be granted to any applicant only after a clearance has been received from the Artesia Credit Bureau. The merchant shall supply the Bureau with sufficient information on each applicant to expedite the receipt of a clearance.

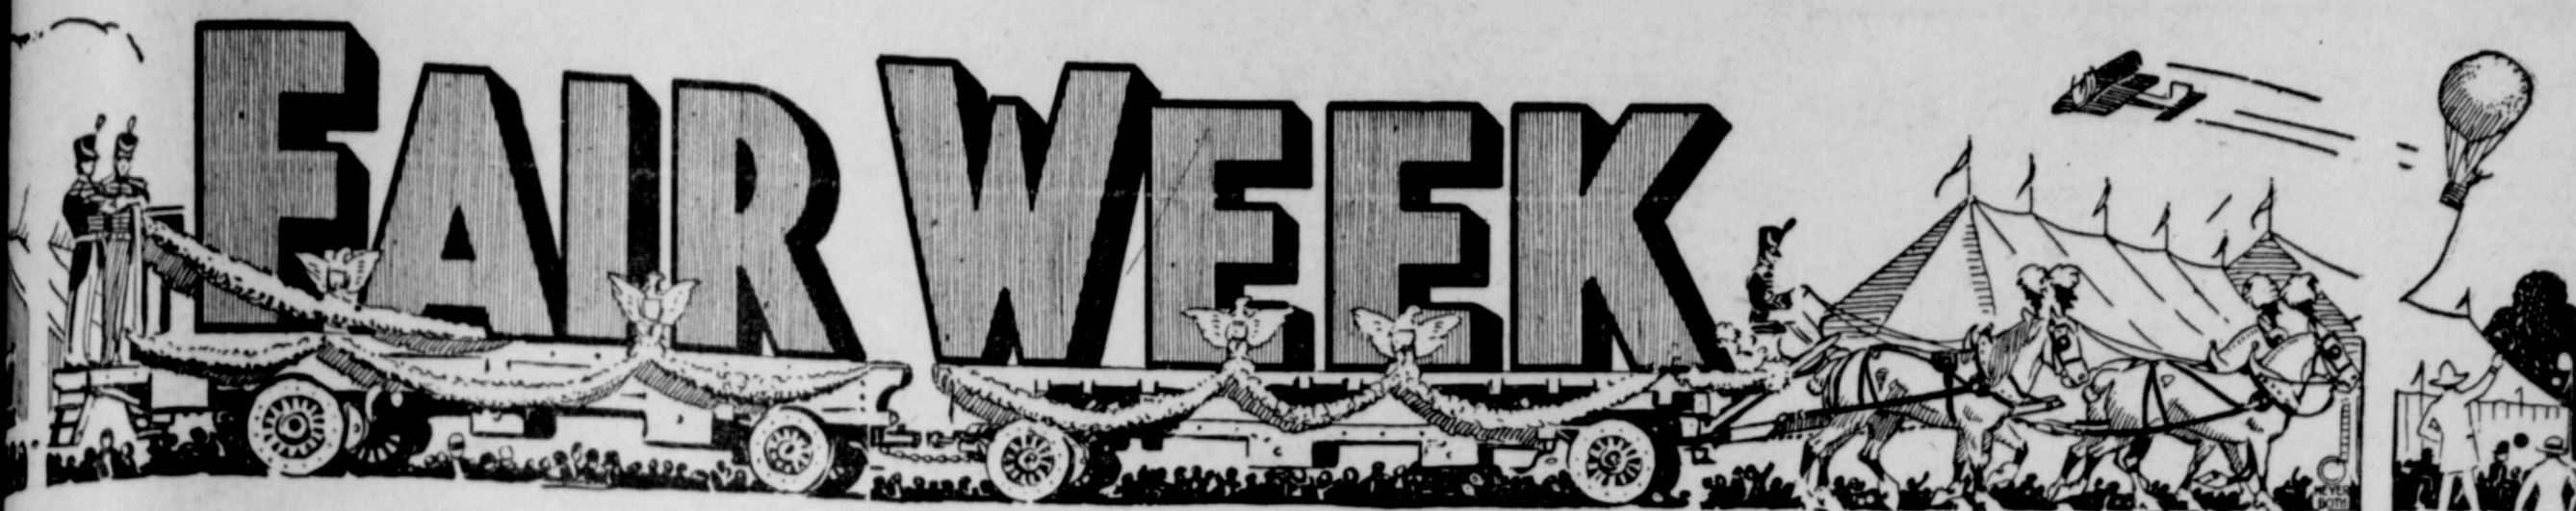

TRANSFERS: Each merchant pledges himself not to open an account for any applicant who is delinquent with a competitor. The applicant has either paid his account with the merchant he is quitting or has made definite arrangements with said merchant to liquidation of his balance, which arrangement must be satisfactory with the merchant he is quitting before the merchant whom he is applying shall grant him credit.

EXCEPTIONS: The only exceptions to this rule shall be in cases where the nature of a debtor's business is such that he receives money on a monthly basis and placing him on a monthly basis would be impractical or impossible at this time. It is understood that it shall be the merchant's privilege to continue to do business with the debtor on a monthly basis until the debtor receives his next income, at which time he will be put on a monthly basis and shall be sold on a monthly basis thereafter.

Mrs. Martha Harris was the honoree at a delightful pre-nuptial party given by Mrs. Frank Linell and Mrs. Will Linell at the home of the former last Thursday afternoon. The affair was a surprise to the honor guest, who got her first inkling of the nature of the party when she observed the names Harris-Jesse, in large lettering on the edge of the mantel with a midget bride and groom and attendants on the mantel above. Two interesting games carried out the bridal motif. In the first the guests made lists of everything that a bride should have in her hope chest, the inevitable rolling pin being among the items. In the second the ladies described their own wedding dresses. The bride-to-be was showered with many beautiful gifts and a delicious dessert course was served. Mrs. Alta Linell assisting in serving. GET-TOGETHER MEETING

The new conference year at the Methodist church had an auspicious beginning with a very enjoyable social meeting at the church last Friday evening, quite a number of friends from other churches being present to join in extending welcome to their returned pastor, Rev. Harold Scoggins. The ceremonies began with a bountiful covered dish supper. A short but excellent program, with visiting, completed the evening. Mrs. C. R. Blocker was in charge of the program and introduced J. E. Robertson, chairman of the Board of Stewards, who extended a welcome to the pastor from the board and membership; George Frisch, superintendent of the Sunday school, did the honors for his organization. Rev. Scoggins responded giving the reasons why he wished to return to Artesia for the fourth year, one of them being that it is one of the best towns he ever preached in. At the close of his response he rendered a vocal solo, Mrs. Scoggins accompanying. Other musical numbers were violin solos by Miss Mary Ann Miller and Miss Doris Deter, Miss Elizabeth Gage accompanying the first and Mrs. E. L. Harp acting as accompanist, for the second. The program began and closed with congregational singing.

The music was furnished by Harp's orchestra, Miss Doris Deter, who gave a violin number and Rev. and Mrs. Erwin Benson, who sang a duet. Readings were given by three children, D. C. Stuart, Mina Dew and Junior Richards. The physical education girls of the Junior high contributed to the interest of the occasion by giving a number of yells of the W. C. T. U.

The little guests were Patty Jean and Elsie Aliff Runyan, Bettyanne Lanning, Shirley Watson, Katherine and Mollie Marie Sinclair, Christine Anderson, Dorothy Linell, Meredith Martin, Charline and Rosemary Martin, Janice Mann and Hattie Ruth Cole.

FACULTY PICNIC

The faculty of the Artesia schools had a picnic Tuesday night in the Marable grove south of town on the Penasco. The affair was really a steak fry and while the commissary department cooked the steak in Dutch ovens over the camp fire some of the party sat around the fire and visited and the more energetic played games. The open air picnic was a treat to all. The crowd included Supt. and Mrs. Kerr, and daughter, Marjorie, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. J. Clark Bruce and baby, Betty, Mr. and Mrs. James Allen, the Misses Ruth Morgan, Edna Drury, Myrtle Burrows, Katherine Peterson, LaVon Brown, Latham, Linna McCaw, Anna Mae James, Alice Boyer, Lucile Rowley, Merrill Bradley, Lucille Morris, Nina Couch, Beulah Strang, Elsie Palmateer, Mary Woods and sister, Minnie, Jean McDonald, Kathleen Newman, Marian Guin and sister, and Mrs. Leone French, Laura Howard, Nelle Hamann, Mrs. Willis Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Grover Kinder. The music on the violin, guitar, clarinet, mandolin, etc., was furnished by the Misses Thelma and Hannah Belle McCaw, and Jack and Edward McCaw. The fall picnic in the open is one of the most delightful social events of the lodge year and is looked forward to by the membership and their families.

HARRIS-JESSE

A wedding of much interest to Artesians is that of Mrs. Martha Harris and Mr. Joe Jesse, which took place in Roswell last Friday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse went to Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Taos on a honeymoon trip and are expected back the last of the week. They will be at home in the groom's residence on Washington avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse are highly esteemed by the people of Artesia among whom they have made their home for many years and begin their married life with the best wishes of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

BEGIN TO PLAN FOR HALLOWEEN PARTIES

The coming of the first frosts, the sharp tang in the air, the warm days and cool nights, the harvesting of crops and the sight of big, yellow pumpkins in the fields all serve to remind us that October days are here and Halloween with its spooks, cats and witches, will soon roll around. Now is the time to begin plans for that Halloween party and Miss Veda Strong of the New Mexico Agricultural College offers the following suggestions.

Autumn leaves, decorative grasses, jack-o-lanterns made from pumpkins, and sunflowers can be used for decorating the rooms. With a generous sprinkling of cats, witches, etc., cut from black paper. Clever invitations may be made by using squares of orange colored paper, folding the corners to the center of the sheet, with tiny black cats or witches for stickers.

For table decorations, a jack-o-lantern may be used as a centerpiece, with yellow ribbons strung to each place. Fortunes may be concealed in the pumpkin, a ring for those to be married soon, an ear of corn or a paper stuffed purse to indicate wealth, a door key to indicate a fine house, a trunk tag for travel, a toy automobile for a new car, etc.

For place cards, a pumpkin man, with tiny pumpkin seals pasted together for the head, larger seals for the body, and wire for the arms and legs with tiny seals for the hands and feet, would be both novel and appropriate.

Fortune telling, ghost stories, games, etc., are always a source of entertainment at Halloween frolics.

In planning the menu, orange shells made to simulate jack-o-lanterns by having eyes, nose and mouth cut from black paper and nasted on, may be used for holding salad; cookies may be cut in shapes of witches, bats, or cats.

TWO NATIONS OFF GOLD STANDARD

LONDON—Norway and Sweden were off the gold standard Monday, apparently as a precautionary step, and the Danish cabinet called a special session of the Folkething (congress) for Tuesday to consider whether Denmark, too, should suspend the gold standard.

A suspension bill, which also would reduce the metallic coverage from 50 per cent to 33 per cent was expected to be introduced.

Otherwise the principal financial developments in Europe were further increases in bank rates. The Irish bank discount rate went up from 5 1/2 per cent to 6 1/2 per cent and that of the Bank of the Netherlands was raised from 2 per cent to 3 per cent. Ireland, because its currency is tied up with that of England, already was off the gold standard. The Bank of the Netherlands has announced that Holland does not intend to suspend the gold standard, since stability of the guilder is assured.

Temporary suspension of the gold standard in the two Scandinavian countries was in line with Great Britain's similar action a week ago, their finances having a close connection with those of Britain.

How Joan Was Won Over

By JANNIS PARKER

JOAN felt hungry, poor and lonely as she rang the dentist's bell. Every word of last night's argument with Jim kept pounding through her brain. The door was opened noiselessly by an immaculate, white-clad nurse. Although luxurious, the waiting room was like all waiting rooms, cold, formal, stifled.

She went to the dressing room. The mirror threw back a small oval face framed in a cap of blonde curls that clung to the forehead and grew longer at the nape of her neck.

As she picked among the magazines on a table, wondering why dentists' offices only boast the sort no one is interested in, the door-bell rang again. Joan didn't look up as the nurse ushered in a young man, just kept turning the pages slowly, but somehow she couldn't get interested in the pictured pygmy tribe before her. She looked up listlessly, and then her eyes widened.

"Hello, Joan." He was drawing pigskin gloves from tanned hands. "Didn't know you came to Doctor Simpson. Funny, eh?"

Joan, with a little vindictive toss of her head, hurriedly turned the magazine pages. "I forgot we weren't talking."

"Oh, but we were! You said 'Jim' and I said, 'Joan' and then I remarked it was odd we both had the same dentist."

She looked skeptical. "Young lady, I'm not here because I followed you, but because I have a most annoying cavity." He thrust the tip of his tongue into what was apparently the cavity, to prove his words.

"It really doesn't matter." She took a sudden interest in the pygmies.

"Oh, yes, it does! Not to you, perhaps. But after all, it's my cavity."

Joan noncommittally crossed her knees. Her hand encountered a darn in her stocking. She hastily recrossed them.

"Too late," he said. "I saw it. He looked lovingly at her. "Joan, dear, why don't you chuck all this independent stuff and let me take care of you?"

"Let's not go over it all again. Jim. When your mother insisted that every girl you meet is dying to marry you—"

"Why, Joan," he interrupted, "that's only her mother love."

"Well, all womanfolk craving to marry you was enough for me."

"And too much for me. Look here, I love you and you love me—"

"I do not! I did but I don't!" "Then you never did!"

"Why, I most certainly did! I ought to know!"

"You're just what is known as a fickle, I guess."

"Fickle!"

"Then you must still love me." Joan stopped short; flushed a deep red. "Well, not enough to go through life having your mother tell me I married into royalty."

"You take mother too seriously and you don't take me seriously enough. I'm her son, and I know she's funny that way."

"You certainly are her son and you're funny lots of ways."

His hands clenched. "Yes, I am! If you think that just because I have plenty of money and lots of silly girls mother refers to would like to marry it, and that just to show her you aren't interested in either me or my money that you insist on paying for your own dinner—" he paused for breath.

Joan's lovely golden head was thrown back and she was laughing at his torrent of words. Then she remembered and quickly put on a long, straight face.

"Look here, are you marrying my mother or me?"

"That's just what I've wondered these many times."

"Well, you're marrying me! To day! As soon as I have this cavity filled!"

"And what about my appointment? I suppose my teeth don't matter!"

He made an expressive gesture. "Your teeth. They're like pearls. Just made to nibble the meals I provide. Joan, I'm famished, aren't you?"

Joan bridled. "I'll never eat another meal with you as long as I live. Not after what you said the other night."

"What did I say?"

"Never mind. You said that the way we fought now, that when we were married we'd probably wipe each other out."

"You must be in love to get mad at things like that."

"Mad? I simply realized you were right. We do fight most of the time. No, Jim, we'd be miserable."

"I'd rather be miserable with you than happy with anyone else. Please have lunch with me today."

"No!"

"Well, well, well!" The doctor burst through the French doors. "It isn't often one has as patients the children of one's best friends." He searched their faces and, although when he next spoke his voice was sober, his eyes twinkled. "I'm famished. But I can't stand eating alone. Joan, this is Captain Bennett, the dyer. Captain, Miss Mark. Come along you two."

He hurried them out of the office murmuring, "I hope it's safe to introduce patients."

MAY RESTORE FISHING IN PECOS RIVER

The State Game and Fish Commission have been requested to restore fishing in the Pecos river.

The request was presented at a meeting of the Eddy County Game Protective Association in Carlsbad Friday evening with a meeting of the officials of the State Game and Fish Commission.

According to a report from the Carlsbad session it is practically certain that the commission will reconstruct the regulations to allow fishing on the river from Lake Avalon to the Texas line, every month of the year except April and May, the major spawning period of bass.

This will necessitate a reconstruction of the present code, which will be completed by October 15th.

COMPARATIVE VALUE OF COTTONSEED AND THE MEAL ARE GIVEN

There has been so much discussion of the comparative values of cottonseed and cottonseed meal, that County Agent, W. A. Wunsch, has been making an exhaustive study of the subject and has announced the following findings:

"One ton of cottonseed contains 915 pounds of meal, 579 pounds of hulls, 299 pounds of oil, 69 pounds of waste dirt, etc."

"Cottonseed contains 19 per cent fat and 20 per cent crude protein."

"Cottonseed contains a poison known as gossypol. This poison is somewhat destroyed by heating, thus there is less danger of poisoning from meal than from seed. The oil in the seed causes unduly laxative effect. Burns at the Texas station found that when 8 pounds of seed were fed to cattle the animals scoured badly and gains dropped off. When the meal was substituted for the seed the animals recovered and larger gains were made."

"Moore at the Mississippi station found that 100 pounds of cottonseed when fed to cows."

"Stanley at the Arizona station found that it required 170 pounds of cottonseed to equal 100 pounds of 35 per cent cottonseed meal."

"Burns at the Texas station found that meal at $26.00 per ton produced cheaper gains than cottonseed at $12.00 per ton. He also found that when seed was fed with kaffir grain it took 205 pounds of cottonseed to equal 100 pounds of meal. The cattle fed the meal scoured while the ones getting the meal did not."

"Lantow at the New Mexico station found that one pound of 43 per cent meal was equal to 2 pounds of cottonseed. He also found that in feeding lambs straight cottonseed very little gains were made."

NUMBER FEDERAL OIL PERMITS EXTENDED

Permits for prospecting for oil and gas on government land are now being extended, according to information given out here, this being a reversal of the former stand maintained by the department of interior for several months.

The new ruling says in part: "We recommend that permits be extended on condition that no drilling be done on permit areas within one year, unless sooner authorized or required by the secretary of interior, conditioned on drilling all necessary offset wells, or payment of compensatory royalty, either or both to be determined by the supervisor of oil and gas operations."

"The department invites submission of an application for approval of operating, drilling or development contracts, or for approval of co-operative or unit plan of development or operation under section 27 of the act of March 4, 1931 and governing regulations."

It was learned here that holders of federal oil permits had been granted extensions, in most cases ranging up to two years with drilling permits to be started by next August in some instances.

Some Interesting Thoughts On Advertising

Were presented by William Allen White, famous newspaper editor, in an address to a convention of Kansas newspaper publishers.

"When manufacturers began to advertise automobiles," said Mr. White, "the modern social revolution began. The advertising columns planted a divine discontent with the horse and buggy, and we began reaching out after the better things of life."

"It doesn't make any difference what men say about 80 per cent of the wealth being in the hands of 10 per cent of the people. That is bookkeeping. The fact is that we have distributed everything that is made among the people of this continent, and our ways of life have been changed in the distribution. We think differently. We are different."

"A whole class has come up that once was the under-privileged and now is the militant middle class, and all because they've read, not the news, but the advertising. And every night father and mother and the children read the advertising, and some way, God knows how, under normal conditions they get the advertised articles. I don't know how the revolution has occurred or how we have saved money, yet we have; we have put more money in the bank than any people ever saved before at any other time in history, and all because of advertising. It has been a great thing."

"Twenty years ago I was interested in the Rooseveltian theory that if you gave men a better environment they would be better men. And we tried to make government an agency of human welfare. That was a keynote. It was the Roosevelt theory after Bryan, and the Wilson theory after Roosevelt, that government should be an agency of human welfare, and that there should be a legal enactment to make some sort of an adjustment. Well, we don't do that any more. We are distributing things thru commerce, thru industry and thru advertising much better than we could ever have done thru using government as an agency of human welfare. That has been the great economic revolution."

"We now all live about alike. In my office there is no very great difference. We all wear the same kind of clothes, eat the same kind of breakfast food and live in about the same kind of houses. But, when I was a boy, the boss in Eldorado used to have a fringe-topped surrey, and I used to walk and watch him ride, and there was a vast gap between me and the boss. But all that is changed now. Every man connected with my newspaper has an automobile—most of them better ones than I have. We have distributed these good things among all our people, and we have distributed them thru advertising."—Farm Implement News.

HUNTERS URGED TO SPORT TOGS OF BRIGHT HUE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—With hunting seasons over the country already opening or fast approaching, game officials are issuing the warning that to-day hunters are often in as great danger as the game they hunt. Last season several states reported a record toll of deaths and injuries among hunters due to an increasing number of amateurs in the sporting ranks and the sometimes crowded condition of huntable areas, especially on holidays, according to a bulletin of the American Game Association.

Commissioner John H. Ross of the Missouri Game and Fish Department has pointed out that of the 40 persons fatally injured while hunting last season, 30 were killed by their own or others' firearms—four by their own carelessness in crawling thru fences. Hunters are being advised to handle their guns with great care, to hold their fire until they are positive they see what they think they see, to steer clear of the amateurish trick of shooting at moving brush, to be careful of forest fire and to dress distinctively in hunting togs of bright color, preferably red or white, to save themselves from being mistaken for a deer, a turkey or even a cottontail.

Last year several hunters died of fright, starvation and exposure after being lost. Game officials quoting experts in woods lore, advise that the first and most important thing for a person to remember when he believes himself lost is to stop where he is, compose himself, and calmly try to orient himself and then find his way out. Where the points of the compass are unknown, it is always safe to locate a stream and follow it down, as any moving water will finally lead to human habitation.

If not confident of his ability to find his way out he should build a fire and arrange himself as comfortably as possible, discharge his gun at intervals, and wait for friends to come to his rescue.

Growers Can Reduce Loss of Potatoes Care in Regulating Temperature Is Important.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)—W.S.U. Service.

Wastes and losses of potatoes in storage can be prevented in great part if growers and dealers adopt the storage methods which the United States Department of Agriculture recommends. These include careful regulation of the temperature of the storage room, controlled ventilation, and exclusion of light. Dr. William Stuart, potato specialist of the bureau of plant industry, has just revised Farmers' Bulletin 847-F to include information developed since the bulletin was first issued in 1917.

The all-year demand for potatoes has always necessitated storage of considerable quantities of the crop, and many growers and dealers have believed that considerable waste in storage was inevitable. Scientific investigation has demonstrated that much of the loss is preventable. Storage under favorable conditions offers several advantages; it assures a more uniform market supply, preserves table quality, and protects the vitality of seed.

Dr. Stuart emphasizes the value of changing the temperature to suit the storage stages of the potato. "If newly harvested potatoes," he says, "especially those somewhat immature, are subjected to a temperature of about 60 degrees for the first ten days of the storage period in a relatively high humidity, the injured tissues will quickly heal over." After the brief period of storage at 60 degrees, the temperature should be reduced to about 40 degrees, maintained there for two or three months, and then held at about 38 degrees.

Farmers' Bulletin 847-F, "Potato Storage and Storage Houses," gives details of ventilation, temperature regulation, light exclusion, and other factors desirable in potato storage, and gives practical suggestions for construction of storage houses. It may be obtained free by applying to the office of information, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Important Advantages of Well Planned Garden

The farm garden can be made to produce more than $300 worth of vegetables each season, according to specialists in vegetable gardening of the Ohio State university. The farm garden produces vegetables for immediate consumption and also for storage and for canning. One of the most important advantages of such a garden, however, is the fact that it will yield vegetables for immediate use, at the time they are at their best.

Planning the garden is a most important phase of its management. One-fifth of an acre, properly planned and managed, will supply the needs of the average farm family. It is suggested that the garden be arranged in straight rows running north and south and far enough apart to permit use of a horse-drawn cultivator. Each plant in a north and south row receives the maximum of sunlight.

The rows should be arranged in the order of the dates of their planting so that on the maturing of an early season crop it may be replaced with another crop, and the entire garden kept in production throughout the season.

Many Gardeners Give Up Cauliflower Raising

Many gardeners have given up raising cauliflower in the home garden because they find that the cauliflower in the market has so much clearer and better complexion than those they raise at home. This need not be so with a little care. To bleach the head and keep them that delightful creamy white that makes this vegetable so tempting in appearance, it is necessary to start as soon as the head begins to take definite form to protect it from the sun. This was done by tying the outside leaves loosely together at their tips and watching the growth of the plant to see that the developing head is kept shaded.

My Experiences in the World War

BY GENERAL JOHN J. PERSHING

CHAPTER LXVIII
As the conference between Marshal Foch and the German delegates proceeded, and in anticipation of advice regarding the armistice, telephonic lines were kept constantly open between my headquarters and those of the First and Second armies.

When word came to me at 6 a. m., November 11, that hostilities would cease at 11 a. m., directions to that effect were sent to our armies immediately. Our troops had been advancing rapidly during the preceding two days, and although every effort was made to reach them promptly a few could not be overtaken before the prescribed hour.

A brief account of the conference with the German delegates was given to me a few days later by General Weygand. He said the Germans came across the line by automobile the afternoon of November 7 and boarded a special railway coach sent by the French to meet them. During the night this car and the marshals were placed side by side in the forest between Compiègne and Soissons. The emissaries were ushered into the marshal's presence, and after producing their credentials were asked the object of their visit. They replied that they had come to discuss the terms of an armistice. The marshal then made it clear that he himself was not requesting an armistice and did not care to have one.

When asked if they wished an armistice they replied that they did. The marshal said that if that was the case, here were the terms, a copy of which he handed them. The severity of the demands seemed to surprise them and they appeared very much depressed. They had no power to sign an armistice, he said, without the consent of the chancellor, and after some little discussion they started an officer to the German capital with the terms.

They did not seem to object to turning over 5,000 cannon, but deplored the condition which required them to surrender 30,000 machine guns. They finally succeeded in having this reduced to 25,000 machine guns on the ground that they might have some left for riot duty. In speaking of the danger of riots, the delegates were asked why they did not send some of their reserve divisions to maintain order in the interior.

Their reply was that they had no divisions in reserve, as every division that they had was actually in line. Then they complained about the short time allowed for evacuation, stating that the German army was in no condition to move, either forward or backward. During November 9 and 10, while waiting for instructions from their government, the delegates talked very freely with Weygand about conditions in Germany, and spoke particularly of the lack of food and the fear that there would be famine in places because of the bad transportation service.

A wireless message from the German government authorizing the delegates to sign the armistice was received about 11 p. m., November 10. It took until 3 a. m. the 11th to decode the message, complete the discussion and draw up the terms in the rough.

To stop bloodshed the last page of the conditions was written first, and this was signed a few minutes after 5 a. m. on the 11th. Word was then sent out to troops that hostilities would cease at 11 a. m.

Between September 26 and November 11, twenty-two American and six French divisions, with an approximate fighting strength of 500,000 men, on a front extending from southeast of Verdun to the Argonne forest, had engaged and decisively beaten forty-three different German divisions, with an estimated fighting strength of 470,000. Of the twenty-two American divisions, four had at different times during this period been in action on fronts other than our own.

The enemy suffered an estimated loss of over 100,000 casualties in this battle, and our First Army lost about 117,000. The total strength of the First Army, including 135,000 French troops, reached 1,631,000 men. It captured 26,000 prisoners, 874 cannon, 3,000 machine guns and large quantities of material.

The transportation and supply of divisions to and from our front during this battle was a gigantic task. There were 26 American and seven French divisions, besides hundreds of thousands of corps and army troops, moved in and out of the American zone. A total of 173,000 men were evacuated to the rear and more than 100,000 replacements were received.

It need hardly be restated that our entry into the war gave the allies the preponderance of force vitally necessary to outweigh the tremendous increase in the strength of the Germans on the western front, due to the collapse of Russia and the consequent release of German divisions employed against her. From the military point of view we began to aid the allies early in 1918, when our divisions, with insufficient training to take active part in battle, were sent to the inactive front to relieve French divisions, that they might be used in the fighting line.

The assistance we gave the allies in combat began in May, with the successful attack of one of our divisions at Cantigny. This was followed early in June by the entrance into battle of the two divisions that stopped the German advance on Paris, near Chateau-Thierry, and by three others that were put in the offensive line.

In July two American divisions, with one Moroccan division, formed the spearhead of the counter-attack against the Chateau-Thierry salient, in which nine of our divisions participated. There was a total of approximately 300,000 American troops engaged in this Second Battle of the Marne, which involved very severe fighting, and was not completed until the Germans were driven beyond the Vesle in August.

In the middle of September an army of 550,000 Americans reduced the St. Mihiel salient. The latter part of September our great battle of the Meuse-Argonne was begun, lasting through 47 days of intense fighting and ending brilliantly for our First and Second armies, November 11, after more than 1,200,000 American soldiers had participated.

A Time to Forget Hardships.
It was a time to forget the hardships and difficulties, except to record them with the glorious history of our achievements. In praise and thanks for the decisive victories of our armies and in guidance for the future, the following order was issued:

"G. H. Q.
"American Expeditionary Forces.

"General Orders No. 203.
"France, Nov. 12, 1918.

"The enemy has capitulated. It is fitting that I address myself in thanks directly to the officers and soldiers of the American expeditionary forces who by their heroic efforts have made possible this glorious result. Our armies, hurriedly raised and hastily trained, met a veteran enemy, and by courage, discipline and skill always defeated him. Without complaint you have endured incessant toil, privation and danger. You have seen many of your comrades make the supreme sacrifice that freedom may live. I thank you for the patience and courage with which you have endured. I congratulate you upon the splendid fruits of victory which your heroism and the blood of our gallant dead are now presenting to our nation. Your deeds will live forever on the most glorious pages of America's history.

"These things you have done. There remains now a harder task which will test your soldierly qualities to the utmost. Succeed in this and little note will be taken and few praises will be sung; fail, and the light of your glorious achievements of the past will sadly be dimmed.

"But you will not fail. Every natural tendency may urge toward relaxation in discipline, in conduct, in appearance, in everything that marks the soldier. Yet you will remember that each officer and each soldier is the representative in Europe of his people, and that his brilliant deeds of yesterday permit no action of today to pass unnoticed by friend or foe.

"You will meet this test as gallantly as you have met the tests of the battlefield. Sustained by your high ideals and inspired by the heroic part you have played, you will carry back to our people the proud consciousness of a new Americanism born of sacrifice.

"Whether you stand on hostile territory or on the friendly soil of France, you will so bear yourself in discipline, appearance and respect for all civil rights that you will confirm for all time the pride and love which every American feels for your uniform and for you, "JOHN J. PERSHING, "General, Commander in Chief. "Official: "ROBERT C. DAVIS, "Adjutant General."

The experience of the World war only confirmed the lessons of the past. The divisions with little training, while aggressive and courageous, were lacking in the ready skill of habit. They were capable of powerful blows, but their blows were apt to be awkward—teamwork was often not well understood. Flexible and resourceful divisions cannot be created by a few maneuvers or by a few months' association of their elements. On the other hand, without the keen intelligence, the endurance, the willingness, and the enthusiasm displayed in the training areas and on the battlefields, the decisive results obtained would have been impossible.

Praise for Young Commanders.
Upon the young commanders of platoons, companies and battalions fell the heaviest burden. They not only suffered all the dangers and rigors of battle but carried the responsibility of caring for and directing their men, often newly arrived and with but little training. Where these leaders lacked practical knowledge of tactics they supplied the deficiency by fearless onslaughts against the enemy's line. Yet, quick to learn, they soon developed on the field into skilled leaders who inspired their men with increasing confidence.

Deeds of daring were legion. It is not intended to discriminate between those whose heroic services have been recognized and the thousands of others who bore themselves with equal gallantry but whose deeds are known only by the victorious results. As typifying the spirit of the rank and file of our great army of valorous men, I would mention Lieut. Samuel Woodfall, Fifth division, who

ORDINANCE NO. 8
AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING A SCHOOL ZONE INCLUDING BLOCK THIRTY-SEVEN OF THE ARTESIA IMPROVEMENT COMPANY'S ADDITION TO THE CITY OF ARTESIA, NEW MEXICO, AND ALL STREETS IMMEDIATELY JOINING SAID BLOCK; REQUIRING ALL PERSONS OPERATING AN AUTOMOBILE OR MOTOR VEHICLE OF ANY DESCRIPTION TO DRIVE SLOW AND AT A SPEED NOT TO EXCEED FIFTEEN MILES PER HOUR WHILE TRAVELING IN SAID SCHOOL ZONE DURING SCHOOL RECESS OR WHILE CHILDREN ARE

attacked single-handed a series of German machine-gun nests near Cunel and dispatched the crews of each in turn until reduced to the necessity of assaulting the last detachment with a pick; Sergt. Alvin C. York, Eighty-second division, who stood off and captured 132 Germans after his patrol was literally surrounded and outnumbered ten to one, and Maj. Charles S. Whittlesey and his men of the Seventy-seventh division, who, when their battalion was cut off in the Argonne, refused to surrender and held out until finally relieved.

There is little to add in praise of the spirit of determination that stimulated each individual soldier to overcome the hardships and difficulties that fell to his lot. With fortitude and perseverance he gave his every energy to the accomplishment of his task, whether it required him to charge the enemy's guns or play the less conspicuous role of forwarding supplies. In their devotion, their valor and the loyal fulfillment of their obligations, the officers and men of the American expeditionary forces have left a heritage of which those who follow after may ever be proud.

While we extol the virtues of the men who had the privilege of serving America in the ranks of her armies, it must be remembered that they received their inspiration of loyalty and of devotion to the country's cause from those at home. They were but the chosen representatives of the American people whose resolute spirit they transformed into victory on the field of honor.

My diary records: "Paris, Tuesday, November 12, 1918. Arrived in Paris this morning. Colonel Mott was here with instructions from Marshal Foch about following up the Germans. Held brief conference on subject with McAndrew and Harbord, and left immediately with Boyd and Quekemeyer for Marshal Foch's headquarters at Senlis.

"Met Marshal Foch for the first time since victory, and meeting was one to be remembered. By direction of the President, bestowed on him the Distinguished Service medal. We returned to Paris the afternoon to find pandemonium."

Foch and Pershing Overcome.
When I saw Marshal Foch he was in high spirits and said a great many complimentary things about the splendid work of the American army, my cordial co-operation, and how he appreciated my straightforward methods. He said he had always known my attitude on every question because I stated it frankly and clearly and then lived up to it. I was equally enthusiastic in praise of his leadership.

What was said and the realization that the victory was won and the war actually over affected us both deeply and for some moments we were speechless. Both of us were rather overcome by emotion as we embraced, and each gave the other the time-honored French "accolade."

We pulled ourselves together shortly, as one of the objects of my visit was to decorate Marshal Foch with the Distinguished Service medal, this being the first to be presented to any officer other than an American. He had directed a small guard of some fifteen or twenty territorial orderlies, under the command of a sergeant, to be formed in the yard in rear of his quarters, with two trumpeters to furnish the music.

Standing in front of this command and facing him, I made a short speech in French and pinned on his blouse the token of our country's esteem and appreciation of his distinguished services. My aide handed one of his aides a signed copy of what I said. The marshal spoke somewhat at length on how he valued the honor and how brilliantly the Americans had fought beside the allies, and he was so moved that he could hardly finish what he had to say. He shook hands with me very cordially and stood holding my hand with both of his as he ordered the flourish of trumpets to close the ceremony.

Medal for Joffre.
November 13 I went to the Ecole de Guerre, where Marshal Joffre had his quarters, and in a very simple ceremony that took place in his office I pinned our Distinguished Service medal on his breast. Only a few staff officers were present, among them the marshal's faithful chief of staff, Colonel Fabre, while the officers who accompanied me were Harbord, Boyd and Quekemeyer. The grand old French commander in chief was very proud of this recognition by our government, but expressed himself in few words. It gave me the greatest pleasure to make this presentation.

Marshal Haig Decorated.
At Cambrai, where I went the next day to decorate Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, a brigade of Highlanders, which included some of the most distinguished units of the British army, was assembled for the occasion. The ceremony was very impressive.

Here's the way a west Tennessee resident feels about the depression as gleaned from an exchange:

Hollow Rock Junction, Tenn. May 6, 1931.

"Dear Mr. Editor: There seems to be so much talk about our so-called republican prosperity, I believe it's my duty to write my views on the same and help to analyze the situation so far as possible, so's we can change our way of living and so forth."

"I have taken my own case, for instance. I see my mistakes and many others have acted likewise. I bought a car instead of a farm and it is worn out but the farm I figured on is still OK. I invested in a radio instead of a cow and the radio gives static instead of milk."

"I am feeding five nice hounds that answer to the names of Red, Wing, Slobber, Jake and Bay-rum, instead of five pigs. I had our piano tuned instead of the well cleaned out. I spent all my cash in 1928 and used my credit in 1929 and traded up my future wages on installments in 1930, so hard times caught me in bad shape last fall."

"If I had only spent my last $10 for flour and meat instead of gas and oil I would have been OK. I built a nice garage last year instead of covering by barn and loafed in the mountains two weeks instead of being in the pasture fixing the fence so's my cow wouldn't get out, but she is dry and mortgaged to boot for two blankets my wife bought from an agent instead of paying the preacher."

"I'm on a cash basis now, but I ain't got no cash. I am tied to the end of my rope and the man I am working for is busted on account of nobody wouldn't pay him and his cotton won't sell 'cause nobody won't buy cotton clothes. All the help wear slick silky stockings and silk under-wear right here in our cotton patches. I had $4.00 saved up for a rainy day, but it turned out dry and I spent it for two inner tubes. "I tried hard to make both ends meet with a turnip patch, but when I got turnips ready to sell everybody else was selling turnips for nothing and the market was slumped. I am worried plum to the bone and my wife's kinfolks are coming over next Tuesday to spend two weeks. "Write or phone if you hear of any relief from the government" coming down my way. I am willing to be either a democrat or a republican for a few weeks if that will help out any.

Yours truly in pain,
Mike Clark.

Prune Young Trees for More Profitable Yields

Although butchering young apple trees with the pruning shears is a poor practice, the training of permanent trees so they will develop into vigorous, strong trees capable of carrying their crops is an essential part of profitable orchard management, declares F. H. Beach, extension specialist in horticulture at Ohio State university.

While the unpruned young tree will grow more rapidly, have the greatest size for its age, and come into bearing earlier than heavily pruned trees, he says, it does not follow that training the trees with the help of the pruning shears should be overlooked. Light pruning that aids in developing the modified leader type of tree and that prevents splitting from weak crotches is highly desirable. The modified leader type of tree, Beach points out, is secured by allowing one central branch to continue through the lower part of the tree. Other branches from which the scaffold branches may be developed will grow from the central branches at different heights and positions.

It is best, he states, to allow the lowest limb to grow on the south-west side of the tree so as to prevent sun-scald injury. Relatively light pruning may also be given this side of the trees.

Unemployed Men Unemployed Money Cost Something to Keep!

Money or capital, and work or energy of men, are inseparable in the business world. Either without the other can do nothing. As men work, and as money works, profits accrue not only to the workman and his money, but to many others.

Idle dollars have no place in business. A business borrows money because it will earn more than its cost, otherwise it is not a desirable loan for any bank to make.

Banks are wholesalers of credit, at small profit margin; those who borrow it make a profit on its use, through increase of business facilities.

If banks merely keep money for depositors, they must cover the service with a charge which pays cost and a profit. Yet a substantial part of deposits must be kept to meet every depositor's need with liquid reserves.

Credit has become the most important factor in the business world; it represents money, which can only work through the brains and skill of men who make use of it.

Agricultural Hints

With the drought in mind provide a better watering system this year.

The celery cabbages are attractive salad vegetables. They can be grown at home.

Kale can be picked in the garden all winter. You might try a few plants another year.

Forest trees have just as many insect and fungus enemies as orchard trees and field plants.

Red raspberries are the hardiest of the brambles, blackberries being most susceptible to adverse climate.

Chickens are particularly susceptible to colds largely on account of the anatomy of the head.

Look over the garden tools and give them a coating of oil so they won't be dull and rusty when you want them.

To get better pollination in a single variety pear orchard, top-work some trees to Bosc, Kieffer, Anjou, or Clapp Favorite.

If you planned your garden last year, reverse it this year if it proved successful.

If you never had a compost heap, start one. You won't again be without one.
