Carl Johnson, Roswell garage man, testified at the hearing that Tidwell was between him and Orndorff and said that two shots were fired in the vicinity where Tidwell stood. He also said Tidwell told him that a man had been killed.
R. B. Gains, also of Roswell, said he heard two shots back of where he was hunting and that when the second shot he heard someone scream. He said he came back to where the scream came from and found Orndorff dead.
Tidwell was represented by Judge G. L. Reese of Roswell. Reese moved that District Atorney J. Benson Newell showed neither carelessness nor negligence on the part of the defendant in shooting without seeing the deer's horns.
The defense offered no testimony.

WATTS COMPOSITION ORDER IS ACCEPTED

Federal Judge Colin Neblett sitting at Santa Fe Tuesday afternoon accepted the offer of composition of Emerson Watts, former state treasurer and vice-president of the bankrupt Watts-Harrison brokerage firm of Roswell, according to word received from Roswell.
The action means virtually complete settlement of the tangled affairs of the company, which have been pending since the early part of last summer, Paul G. Schultz said. Under Judge Neblett's decision all of the assets of the company will be returned to Watts for payment according to his own proposal.
This agreement calls for an immediate payment of 50 per cent to cash creditors and delivery of 50 per cent of the stock to its holders. Another 25 per cent will be paid in 90 days and the final 25 per cent in six months, the latter contingent upon collection of outstanding accounts.
The offer of composition was filed with James M. H. Callen of Roswell, referee in bankruptcy for the United States district court, October 16. The original proposition was made September 29 at the first meeting of creditors, when Watts outlined his plan for a settlement of 100 cents on every dollar for cash due, and delivery of all securities due that have been pledged for loans or to protect margins.

LOCALS ARE ELIMINATED FOR EAST SIDE HONORS UNLESS CLOVIS BEATS THE RAMS IN THANKSGIVING GRID CLASH.

The Artesia Bulldogs, supported by nearly two hundred rooters were not quite equal to the task of halting the rambling Rams of Portales yesterday in their second straight bid for the east side championship. The final score being 8-0 in favor of the heavier and more experienced Portales eleven.
The Artesia boys fought hard from the opening whistle to the final shot, but were unable to stem the tide of defeat. The officials seemed to think they were trying to hit too hard and dealt out penalty after penalty to the Bulldogs for everything from being off side to general principles.
The first quarter was scoreless, altho Portales had the ball within one foot of the goal line at the whistle. On the first play of the second quarter, Portales fumbled and Artesia recovered behind their own goal line. It was a safety and gave the Rams two points instead of a possible touchdown. Portales counted the only touchdown of the game a few moments later, aided by a couple of "breaks." The first came when a punt took a bad bounce off Ransbarger's finger tips and was recovered by a Portales man on Artesia's thirty yard line. On the next play an incomplected Portales pass was allowed when the would-be receiver claimed interference. With the ball about fifteen yards out the Artesia boys drew one of their many five yard penalties for off sides and with ten yards to go a Portales pass netted the Rams the necessary distance. The kick for extra point was wide and the score was 8-0 in favor of Portales. Artesia came back strong on the next kickoff and rushed the ball down the field on a series of good plays, only to have a long pass intercepted and to draw a fifteen yard penalty at the same time. The half ended soon afterwards.
The Bulldogs made another threat in the third quarter. They returned the ball to Portales territory and were finally forced to punt. After an exchange of punts the Artesia boys made another bid only to have a pass intercepted when they were in scoring distance.
Portales looked strong at the close of the game and had the ball on Artesia's ten yard line when the game ended.
Artesia may get back in the running for east side football honors, if Clovis defeats Portales in the annual Thanksgiving clash between the two teams, which football experts declare is probable. Portales' defeat by Clovis would develop a three-cornered race.

The Community Chest says that it will still maintain its wood-pile clinic during the cold months.

The man who whispers down a well about the goods he has to sell, will never live to make the dollars, like the man who climbs a tree and hollers.—Tucumcari News.

Confidence week like Carlsbad observed last week may be all right, but there is nothing like displaying a little more confidence 365 days in the year at the present time rather than confining your optimism to one week. There are too darn many kinds of weeks to observe, so many in fact that we can't keep up with them.

WHY WORRY?

Here's a little squib that has been going the rounds, author unknown, it was clipped from "Side Lights on the News" by Will Robinson.

There are only two reasons for worry: Either you are successful or you are not successful. If you are successful there is nothing to worry about: if you are not successful, there are only two things to worry about: Your health is either good, or you are sick. If your health is good, there is nothing to worry about; if you are sick, there are only two things to worry about. You are either going to get well, or you are going to die; if you are going to get well, there is nothing to worry about; if you are going to die, there are only two things to worry about. You are either going to heaven. If you are going to heaven there is nothing to worry about; if you are going to the other place, you'll be so damn busy shaking hands with old friends, you won't have time to worry, so WHY WORRY?

GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS

One of the inevitable results of hard times is renewed demands for further extension of the activities of the federal government. Unemployment insurance, government subsidy of this business or government ownership of that, gigantic "relief" bond issues—hardly a day passes without a new, suggested panacea.

The federal government might do more to bring back prosperity, so far as that is within the power of any one nation, by restricting its activities.

There is only one cure for unemployment—industrial development that will put men to work. There is only one cure for depression—a new influx of active capital into business.

High taxes and governmental interference are a barrier in the way of both these cures. No individual would, for example, build a new home if he believed it would soon be taxed beyond his ability to pay. And no group of investors would build a new factory if there was danger of taxation growing so great as to make profits impossible.

Government should do everything it can to encourage industry, investments, employment. But it certainly should go slow in spending hundreds of millions of dollars of the taxpayers' money for transient and dubious "relief" schemes.

NEED OF LEADERSHIP

Dr. Henry G. Bennett, president of Oklahoma A. & M. College, gave the average citizen something to think about when he delivered an address before the Amarillo Rotary club recently on the subject of "World Depression a Challenge to International Leadership."

Dr. Bennett, who toured western Europe a few weeks ago, says: "The common man everywhere is dissatisfied. You cannot mortgage his future, you cannot leave him to walk the streets in hunger, you cannot place upon him the misery of a broken family or of crying children in an age that has been democratizing educational opportunity, in a world that has just fought a war to make itself safe for democracy. Let the cynics sneer at that phrase, but I insist the common man has caught a glimpse of a social life that he will not willingly relinquish."

The present depression is different from any we have had and more grave. It is deep-rooted in economic, political and social causes that trace, many of them, decades back.

The great war is the immediate cause of the depression. The war consumed wealth in all forms—capital which had been accumulating for more than 200 years and which cannot be replaced. That money is gone. We have heard much about reparations and war debts. I understand that every cent which Germany has paid upon reparations has been in effect money borrowed chiefly from this country, so that she not only owes the original bill but accumulated interest as well. The United States has in effect loaned all that it has been repaid.

I do not believe that any of the governments concerned intend to pay war debts or reparations. I do not believe that they could pay them if they intend to do so.

But this is not all. The great war has left in its wake international hatreds, restlessness and anxiety which express themselves in multiplied armaments. Every nation not restricted under the Versailles treaty has a larger standing army than ever before. We have heard much about naval holidays, but nothing about military holidays.

The great war bankrupted the nations, resulted in increased military armaments, created in the peace treaty politically and economically unsound states, and established tariff walls which prevent the restoration of the flow of goods which was destroyed by the war.

I have recently talked with common men in many countries. They look to Russia with vague hope and wonder, where once they looked to the United States. It may be that Russian leadership will eventually terminate in the collapse of their experiment, if the world waits long enough. Do not forget that this world has already waited for this promised debacle more than 14 years, which is a long time in a man's life.

If western civilization and the principles upon which it is based are worth preserving, there must be a new leadership among the nations which can and will dispel international fears and inspire hope, which shall be, as every great leader has been, spokesman for the inarticulate masses of mankind."

Salad Made Out of Whole Cloth

By JANE OSBORN

HENRY THATCHER felt a sort of thrill of satisfaction the first time the newcomer, Martha Ives, was seated beside him at the boarding house. It wasn't a case of love at first sight, but Harry did feel a kind of yearning to tell the rest of the boarding house crowd that here was a girl he really admired.

The remarks exchanged between Martha and Henry were fragmentary. He told her with some apologies that he had a hardware store. He tried to find out what she did, but she just said she "worked in an office." Then one of the boarders let it drop that this Martha worked as an editor of the Home Helper—most popular woman's magazine among the feminine contingency of the boarding house. But Martha would not discuss her editorial work.

Henry felt a deep desire to read anything that Martha might have written or even anything that Martha might have edited; so since Martha would not discuss her work he read every word of the magazine that nearly put him to sleep as he sat in his room before retiring.

One day at dinner Henry was wishing that he was a girl sort of man who could chatter idly with a girl until somehow he had brought up the question of the new plays, and had asked her to go to see a show with him—or else that Martha was a little more talkative. He had eaten his tablespoonful or so of lukewarm soup, had managed to eat the corned beef, cabbage and mashed turnips, and was now wondering whether there would be lemon meringue pie or Brown Betty.

Idly he pushed a few durable looking pieces of lettuce, two thin slices of anemic tomato and a dab of very stiff, very pale mayonnaise. "Oh, you ought to eat your salad," reproved Martha. "I noticed that you have pushed it back before and I intend to scold you. You won't have enough vitamins unless you eat something fresh and green."

Henry's heart missed a beat or two. To think that this wonderful girl actually noticed what he ate or didn't eat—to think that she was interested. So they fell to talking of salad. Henry said he liked a good salad, all made with nice, crisp, curly lettuce leaves, with a well-mixed french dressing, but that he could get along without this boarding house mixture.

After dinner when Martha and Henry had gone to their respective rooms they both thought about salad. Weeks sped on and the acquaintance ripened, very, very slowly. Henry Thatcher ate his lettuce, devoutly, no matter how tough and green the leaves were that fell to his lot. Meantime they sat side by side, and each wished that the other was a little more responsive.

Then on opening a new issue of the Home Helper, Henry Thatcher turned to a full page devoted to the merits of salads. He thought he detected some suggestion of Martha's personality in the wording of it. There was a discussion of various sorts of salads, and finally an offer of a hundred-dollar prize for an original salad that in the estimation of the editors was the best submitted. A month later when the contest closed Henry Thatcher was much surprised to have Martha Ives rap at his door and ask to talk with him privately in one of the parlors below stairs.

She told him of their salad contest. "We had a clerk open mail from all contestants and copy the recipes without letting us editors see the name or address of the person. We didn't want to be prejudiced in any way. After long deliberation we decided on your salad! After we had narrowed down to twenty-five we had them all made and tasted them, and your salad was chosen by unanimous vote—before we even knew that a man had originated it. The mixture of grapefruit and pickled beets—and that delicious dressing—was wonderful. How did you ever think of it?"

Henry Thatcher looked fussed looked at the ceiling and then looked at Martha. "Well, I just made it up out of whole cloth," he said. "I'd no idea what it would taste like. I just read a recipe book and found out what sort of things had been used together before and made up something a bit different. It might have tasted like the dickens."

"But it didn't," said Martha. "And the hundred-dollar prize is coming to you. You'll get it in the morning mail."

"If I had my way," he said, "that hundred dollars would go with a few hundred besides to buy an engagement ring for the girl I am intending to marry."

"Why—how—how interesting," said Martha, trying not to look annoyed, but not succeeding. "I am sure she is a charming young lady."

"You bet she's charming," said Henry. "But I'm not engaged. I haven't had the nerve to propose. You see, the girl I want to marry sits next to me at my boarding house."

"Not Miss Pi-notice," gasped Martha. Miss Prentice was seventy.

"I mean the young lady that sits on the other side—Martha Ives. I mean you."

Just what Martha said and what Henry said next they both soon forgot, but by the time they had gone out to a restaurant for dinner that night plans were made for a wedding in the spring.

Reasons Why YOU SHOULD SELL OR EXCHANGE YOUR COTTON SEED AND BUY COTTONSEED MEAL AND HULLS

The yield of cottonseed meal per ton of seed crushed in the United States for the season 1930-31, was 917.4 pounds. On this basis, 4,360 pounds of cottonseed were required to produce one ton of cottonseed meal. In other words, nearly 2 1/5 tons of cottonseed are required to get one ton of cottonseed meal manufactured.

In addition to requiring twice the amount of seed to furnish the meal, the oil in the seed will cause cattle to scour, if sufficient seed is fed to furnish the needed bulk as well as the feed requirements of the animals.

In addition to the lint ordinarily left on the cottonseed hulls (which is desirable), the 4,360 pounds of seed contain 275 to 310 pounds excess lint that is just plain crude fiber and of no more feed value than the 200 to 225 pounds of trash and dirt that are ordinarily found in 4,360 pounds of seed.

The cottonseed meal is free of dirt, trash, lint, excess oil and moisture and is a concentrated feed highly digestible. On the other hand cottonseed contains so much that is not desirable from the feeder's standpoint. Why feed the seed when the meal and hulls—the only desirable part of the seed for feeding purposes—can be had in just the right proportions that you desire to feed to any class of livestock? In some cases, the meal and hull mixture is all that is needed. In order cases, it is best to mix the meal and hulls with your own farm-grown grains.

Cottonseed hulls make an excellent roughage to mix with grain feeds, even if you have plenty of hay or fodder. If you are short on hay or fodder, certainly you should use some cottonseed hulls as roughage. Feeding trials have shown 100 pounds of cottonseed hulls equal to 99 pounds of Johnson grass hay, 207 pounds of corn silage, or 251 pounds of sorghum silage.

Cottonseed meal is the most valuable single feed available to southern farmers. There are three main food elements needed for livestock—proteins, carbohydrates, and fats. Fats are required in very small amounts. The chief demand is for proteins and carbohydrates. Farm grains and hays are the cheapest source of carbohydrates; cottonseed meal is the cheapest source of protein. The cottonseed meal contains, also, carbohydrates and fats; but the protein is the most valuable element in the meal and is greatly needed by livestock.

Cottonseed contains all of the three elements—fats, carbohydrates and proteins—but these elements in the seed are not in a form that is readily digestible; nor are they in the right proportion to meet the needs of livestock. Cottonseed is a different kind of feed from cottonseed meal. It contains a higher percentage of oil and a lower percentage of protein. The excess oil impairs the appetite and upsets the digestive system.

As a source of protein, cotton seed is a costly substitute for cottonseed meal, because three pounds of seed are required to furnish as much digestible protein as is furnished by one pound of cottonseed meal. While 2 1/5 tons of cotton seed will make one ton of cottonseed meal, the protein in the seed is not as easily digested as it is in the meal, and, therefore, one pound of the meal will furnish as much digestible protein as three pounds of the cotton seed.

As a source of carbohydrates, cotton seed is a costly substitute for farm grains, because it takes more than two pounds of cotton seed to furnish as much carbohydrates as one pound of corn or grain sorghum.

As a source of fats, cotton seed is undesirable because the excessive amount of oil purges the livestock. A man would dislike to have to drink a pint of oil with each meal, given if cotton or lint were taken along to absorb the oil. The excessive amount of oil would upset the digestive system and prevent the proper utilization of the food. Yet, that is just what we do when we force livestock to eat cotton seed. It is true that some feeders get along by feeding cotton seed, but they cannot make the profit that can be made by combining the cottonseed meal and grain with hulls and other roughage.

Livestock feeding today demands the production of meat, milk and work at the lowest cost; and our southern farmers will get the most from their efforts by selling or exchanging their cotton seed and feeding the cottonseed meal and hulls with their own farm grains and hays.

Another thing to consider is the quality of butter. The quality of butter is better when meal and hulls are fed instead of cotton seed. The excess oil contained in the seed produces a butter that is hard and tallowy in texture. This brittle, tallowy texture is objected to by the housewife and, consequently, the butter trade will give less for butter produced from cows that are fed cotton seed. To produce a butter of good quality and smooth, firm texture, use meal and hulls along with your own grains and hays.

Remember, the farmer of the south today, is entering into a new period. Cotton, cotton seed, wheat, corn, oats—in fact all farm commodities—are selling at new low levels. As a consequence, the south will plant less cotton and more feed. In order to get the most from our feed, we must sell the feed in the form of meat and milk, cream or butter. Feeding properly is more important, therefore, than ever before. The selling of quality products is also necessary. If you sell lambs, calves, steers or hogs, they must be finished properly and at weights that will bring the most on the market. If you sell milk, cream or butter, you must use the feeds that will give you, not only the most in quantity at the lowest cost, but the quality of product that will sell at the highest price on the market. Increase your farm income by lowering the cost of production and by selling quality products.

Equal Parts Of Cottonseed Meal and Hulls Better Than Cotton Seed As Fertilizer.

One ton of equal parts cottonseed meal and hulls contains as much nitrogen as 2600 to 2750 pounds of cotton seed, depending upon trash, dirt and moisture in the seed; the mixture of meal and hulls not only gives a great deal more nitrogen, but the use of the hulls with the meal retains the moisture and makes possible the liberation of the nitrogen from the meal more evenly than when the seed is used.

THE AVERAGE GUY WHICH IS WHICH?

The Road To Better Health SORE THROAT

By DR. WILLIAM J. SCHOLLES

"If it isn't better tomorrow we shall call the doctor." It would be much better to call him to-day—the first day of that sore throat.

From 12,000 to 15,000 people die annually in the United States from diphtheria. Statistics show that almost all of the cases which are treated with adequate amounts of antitoxin on the first day of the disease, recover.

Recognizing Diphtheria The sore throat of diphtheria may easily be confused with less serious sore throats. Diphtheria is recognized by the general symptoms, the formation of a false membrane in the throat, and the examination of throat cultures.

Children Greatest Sufferers It is among children that diphtheria takes a heavy toll. Between the ages of two and twelve is the period of greatest susceptibility.

The severity of the symptoms are not always in proportion to the seriousness of the disease. On the first day of the disease, diphtheria patients usually do not appear to be in any more danger than those who have tonsillitis.

Few of us know from experience what it's like to go over Niagara in a barrel, but those who have gone over a detour in a rumble seat have a rough idea.—Judge

The "Good" Old Days

Styles and fashions of Mother's younger days may be revived, but it is comforting to know that most of her drudgery, hardships and inconveniences are gone forever.

"The old oaken bucket," kerosene lamps and stove wood went out with the horse and buggy. Various processes that were slow and laborious have been relegated to the junk heap.

Yet antiquated methods and wasteful devices are common in many homes. Let your Electric Appliance Dealer tell you how economical it is to own a washing machine, a sewing machine, a vacuum cleaner, a refrigerator, and other useful electric appliances. He will show you how you may pay for these appliances with the money they save for you.

Banking Ballast

A ship must have so much ballast, whether or not it carries sufficient weight of pay-load, to keep an even keel, especially in rougher seas.

Banking must carry its load of ballast, too. Not all of deposits, of capital and surplus, can be used in loans. Some is ballast in safe reserve securities returning low interest but always marketable; some is secondary reserve quickly convertible; some is cash held for immediate needs.

As value of collateral goes down, loans must be reduced and reserves, deposits and cash increased. As deposits, reserves and surplus increase, more loans may be carried as profitable business.

A bank cannot increase at will its capital, surplus, deposits or reserves; loans are the adjustable portion of its business which it must balance to conditions, and this balancing makes safe banking.

MOTORISTS TO SAVE $500,000

Automobile license fees have been reduced approximately 33 per cent, saving $500,000 to motorists, Governor Arthur Seligman said in a talk before the 31 license distributors meeting in Santa Fe last week for instructions. This reduction means a decrease of $30,000 in the six per cent operating fund of the motor vehicle department necessitating drastic action if the department is kept running, the governor said.

MAY PETITION G. P. A. FOR LONGER SEASON

Hunters in the Sacramento region want a longer deer season, according to word from Alamo-gordo. Because of the early season this year, the hunters complained that much of the venison spoiled before they could return home with it. It has been suggested that a thirty day season would be better since fewer hunters would be in the field at one time.

Hints for the Household

FOR NOVEMBER

By Betty Webster

GENERAL HINTS

House Cleaning

House cleaning is not what it used to be. It is not a thing one has to run from or dread. With our new electrical improvements and the vogue of eliminating non-essentials, has come the period of almost constant cleanliness. Of course, to be really clean our homes must "have a bath," so to speak, at least once and sometimes twice a year. November is a good month for this and leaves one fresh to enjoy the holidays and the winter months. Some good rules to follow are:

1. Begin with closets and drawers. This includes pantries.
2. How to clean closets: (a) Hang heavy clothes and furs outdoors. (b) Send soiled clothes to the cleaners. (c) Give away to needy anything you will not be able to use and which will always be in the way. Better some good than no good. (d) Wash Woodwork, floors and drawers. (e) Paint woodwork, drawers and cracks in floors with turpentine. Use a regular paint brush for this. This leaves a closet absolutely clean and free from any insects.
3. Clean rooms, least used, first.

so that it will not be necessary to trail thru them with dirt from other rooms.

3. Plan ahead for cleaning and have plenty of rags, polishes and soaps on hand.

4. Do one or two rooms at a time where possible, to avoid overtiredness and making the whole family uncomfortable.

5. It is well to re-arrange some. Add a few of the latest touches either in drapes, furniture or bric-a-brac. Put away or give away useless things, so when thru the rooms will breathe of hominess, cleanliness and good looks.

6. Try and avoid a cluttered appearance. Too much bric-a-brac means endless dusting, and needless homely furniture detracts. Do not save to the point of having your things a burden to you.

RECIPES

Fried Rice

1 large cup boiled rice.
2 or 3 slices of bacon
1/2 onion
2 eggs.
Method: Dice bacon and fry—add onion and fry brown. Add rice—then push all to one side of pan. Beat eggs well and fry in same pan. Then scramble all the ingredients together. Add salt and a little pepper. Serve immediately.

Upside Down Cake

3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
Pinch of salt
1/2 cup cold water
1 cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 1/2 teaspoons of baking powder

Frosting:
1 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons melted butter
5 slices canned pineapple, cut in pieces.

Method: Beat the yolks of eggs add sugar, vanilla, salt and flour to which baking powder has been added.

Then: Put in an iron frying pan, the sugar, butter and pineapple, mix well.

Then: Pour sponge cake batter over sugar mixture and put in pan in moderate oven to bake. When done turn out on a pretty platter. Serve with whipped cream. It will be a delicious cake with a maple frosting already on it.

CHICKENS PAY

During seasons of low priced grain do not neglect the farm flock. House it well, keep the birds free from external and internal parasites, fed them well and they will return you a good profit for home grains.

Chickens are nothing in the world but egg making machines. They take raw materials, grains, oyster shell, egg mash and turn them into the finished product, eggs.

Grain is marketed thru hens in two ways. Where it is fed with a mash, and then where it is fed as the complete ration.

In feeding grain with mash a bird will consume about three pounds of mash and three pounds of grain per month. With a mash built to furnish egg making materials lacking in grains hens will average 15 eggs per bird per month throughout the year.

With the above information we can figure the selling price of 100 pounds of grain fed to the farm flock.

Selling price of 15 eggs at 20c per doz. -----250
Cost of 3 pounds of mash.075
Selling price of 3 lbs. Grain.178
Which is .059 per pound or $5.90 per cwt.

When grains are cheap there is a big tendency for the farmer to feed only grain to the farm flock. Under this system the birds will consume the same amount of feed per month, but egg production is lowered a great deal.

The Oklahoma experiment station ran a comparative test on grain and mash fed hens compared to birds fed on grain alone. The mash fed hens laid 3.18 times as many eggs during the period.

Eggs laid by mash fed hens weighted one ounce more per dozen.

Hatchability was 16% higher on mash fed hens.

A summary of all experimental work on straight grain feeding seems to prove that grain fed birds will average about 5 eggs per hen per month.

With this as a basis the selling price of home grown grain is as follows:

Selling price of 5 eggs at 20 cents per dozen $30.
This is the selling price of the grain consumed in a month by the bird, which will average 6 pounds per month.

Eight and three tenths cents for 6 pounds of grain figures at the rate of about $1.40 per cwt. for farm grain marketed this way.

This difference in the selling price of grain, $5.90 per cwt. compared with $1.04 per cwt. is hard to realize until we study the fundamentals of egg making. A careful study of the raw materials, and how the factory operates answers the question.

Scratch feed (grains) makes the yolks. There is a small supply of white and shell material in grain but not enough to assure big production. Mash fed makes the whites and shells. Grain alone gives meager egg production (few whites and shells) but stores plenty of fat on the hen. Actual feeding tests show that grain not only builds yolks but is stored as body fat (if there is surplus). We all know of the fat deposits on grain-fed hens. This reserve can be recalled if not enough scratch is fed. The white and shell making part of the ration (mash) cannot be stored. Thus a grain fed bird makes plenty of yolks and ever has a reserve carried as body fat, but there will be few eggs unless there is a sufficient and correct daily supply of white making material. On this fact hinges egg production.

We kill a hen and find she's laying. How do we know? The yolks are in the egg nest (ovary), as large as walnuts and smaller down to the size of a pea. Those

For a time his life was despaired of, but he is gradually recovering. Mrs. Moore of Lovington, a sister-in-law of Mrs. Paton, is staying with the Paton children here, while their parents are in Ft. Worth.

Yolks of varying sizes means that we have killed a laying hen. Developing yolks that's it. It takes 14 days to grow a yolk. That's half a month, plenty of time to build a yolk.

But where are the developing whites? Not there! The hen must build the white and shell daily. The food supply must be correct for her to do this, else there is no egg. She will not lay the yolk alone. Thus no white—no egg.

THE DEMOCRATS GAIN CONTROL OF HOUSE IN TUESDAY'S ELECTION

Decision of Michigan's eighth district to turn from long-firm republicanism has eased the democratic path toward domination in the house of representatives.

That shift provided the startling element in Tuesday's few election. The house standing now is 217 democrats, 215 republicans and one farmer laborite.

The expected happened in the four other congressional votes held. Republicans took the first Ohio district seat left vacant by the death of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, the second Pennsylvania, and democrats were victors in the twentieth Ohio and seventh New York.

With eyes ahead to '32 presidential rivalries the democratic leadership is jubilant not only over the prospects of capturing the house for the first time in 13 years but for having overthrown republican state control in New Jersey as well. The change there will raise the list of states governed by democrats to 26.

Aristocratic Cats
The chinchilla, angora and Persian all belong to the class of long haired cats. The chinchilla is a pale dull silver Persian with little markings or shading and usually with emerald-green eyes. The angora has a small head and rather large tufted ears; the long silky hair hangs in tufts or clusters, shortening toward end of tail. The Persian is longer, with coarser hair increasing toward end of tail. Both angora and Persian are of various colors.

Argentine Pampas
The pampas are the vast grassy plains in central Argentina. Their area is equal to the state of Texas. They are bound on the north by the forests of Gran Chaco and on the south by the steppes of Patagonia. During the rainy season, the pampas are covered with a luxuriant growth of grasses which provide pasturage for great numbers of cattle and sheep.

RED CROSS RELIEF IN 79 DISASTERS IN YEAR

Forest Fires, Plagues, Storms, Earthquakes, as Well as Drought, Call for Help.

The forest fires which have raged in Idaho and other western sections this year have presented a serious disaster—one of a number, in addition to the enormous drought relief problem, which have been met by the American Red Cross relief forces.

Suffering, faith and courage are contained in a story coming from the Priest River section in Idaho, told by a volunteer Red Cross worker as follows:

"Picture a happy little homestead near the banks of Priest river in northern Idaho. While father, with a little son tagging at his heels, is out tending crops and adding to the clearing, mother is at home making preparations for another arrival. Then comes the fire demon, sweeping all in its path. While father fights to protect his little home, the stork announces its arrival.

"Mother and baby are bundled in a quilt and loaded on a truck for the race through the flaming forest. Father drives the truck and the little boy sits at his mother's side, brushing away the sparks which fall like rain upon the improvised litter."

To the Red Cross worker, the mother expressed her anxiety to return to the hills to rehabilitate the little homestead. All they possessed was lost in the forest fires. The Red Cross aided all of the families and is working to help them rebuild their homes.

Altogether seventy-nine disasters called for Red Cross help and money during the year just closed. Aside from the drought, which required services of volunteer workers numbering more than 60,000, and a drought relief fund of more than $15,000,000, of which $5,000,000 came from the national Red Cross treasury, help was given in 22 fires, 13 tornadoes, eight storms and eight floods, six forest fires, four earthquakes and four mine explosions, three typhoons and three epidemics, two cloudbursts, and one each hurricane, mine cave-in and railroad accident.

Aside from a major catastrophe, such as the drought, when the whole public was asked to contribute funds for relief, Red Cross relief in these disasters was met from the organization's funds and from special local contributions. Part of each membership, subscribed to Red Cross Chapters at the roll call period from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving Day, goes toward this important work.

Sam Tow Stuck by His Crowd

By CHARLES SLOAN REID

SAM TOW stood in the doorway of a small log cabin on the side of Stumphouse mountain. In the distance was a group of houses which constituted a small town. The distance was three miles. Sam was gazing upon the site in fond anticipation, for he expected to enter school there the next day. Tow was eighteen, a young giant in stature, being six feet high. He would have tipped the scale beam at one hundred and eighty pounds. Sam had never seen the inside of a school room. Not a Tow of his family for three generations had known a letter of the alphabet. What had inspired Sam with the idea of getting an education had been a mystery to his family. But Sam was determined. He was a trapper and had saved a little money from the sale of his pelts. He knew that trapping was good around the Stumphouse, and he "figured" he could build a cabin there, attend his traps, and go to school, making the three-mile trip to town and back each day on foot.

Sam stood and watched the distant town dissolve into the shadows of the evening, as the sun went down behind the ridge above his cabin. He wondered what it would be like, this thing of going to school. He had tried to picture some magical process through which he became possessed of book knowledge, but nothing definite resulted of his efforts.

"I reckon I'll know a thing or two about it, come tomorrow," he sighed, as he turned back into the cabin to prepare his frugal meal for the evening. He rolled some sweet potatoes in wet paper and buried them in the hot ashes from his small fire.

While the potatoes were roasting Sam sliced some bacon from a rasher he had hung to a joist overhead by a white oak thong. This he dropped into a small frying pan which he set upon some coals, squatting before the fire as he did so.

Tow had set his traps during the afternoon; the following morning, with a pine torch in his hands, he made the rounds before daylight, securing a mink and three muskrats. The pelts from these animals would bring about three dollars in the market.

"That ain't no bad beginnin'," said Sam to himself, as he stretched the last pelt on a hickory bow. "I reckon now, agin I git to town, hilt'll be school time."

Sam paused at the edge of the campus and gazed with wonder upon the large school building. Keeping well away from the groups of pupils he found his way to the superintendent's office.

"What can I do for you?" he was asked.

"I came down here to go to school," Sam declared.

The superintendent smiled. "What school have you attended?"

"Hain't never been to none," he admitted.

"Can you read or write?"

"No, hain't never had no books, nor nothin'."

grade, but he was determined to take a chance.

A few preliminaries were arranged, then the superintendent conducted the new pupil to the room of the first-grade teacher. Sam stood in the middle of the room and looked about him. Around him were half a dozen boys and girls six to seven years of age, who were gazing upon the young giant with curiosity and amusement. On a small rostrum sat the teacher, a tiny little woman whom Sam Tow might have carried at arm's length on the palm of his hand. Presently things began to happen, however, and Sam slid down into a seat in the back row. As lessons proceeded, light began to break upon his big, healthy brain, and he found himself interested and quite eager.

It was soon known throughout the school that a big mountaineer was among the first-grade pupils, and when the noon recess came, almost half a thousand pairs of eyes were waiting for a glimpse of the mountain boy.

As the little ones from the first grade department filed out upon the campus, Sam Tow brought up the rear. Outside they gathered about him, gazing into his face with evident admiration and proprietorship. A little distance away the football squad had lined up for practice. The leaders soon had their heads to other, and it was agreed to invite the young man to join them at once. Accordingly the captain of the team came forward, making his way with difficulty among the little ones who surrounded Sam, until he stood before the new pupil.

"Tow," began the captain, "we are glad to have you in the school; and I have come over to ask you to join the football squad."

Sam looked down upon his visitor a moment, then his gaze swept the group of little folks around him. Presently he spoke.

"I'm obliged to yuh, he drawled, "but I reckon I'll jes' stay w' mub crowd—I'm goin' to ride 'em all on mub back d'rec'ly."

Whereupon a rousing cheer went up from the throats of half a hundred first graders.

HEAVY CATTLE SHIPMENTS

ALBUQUERQUE—Walter Naylor, secretary of the State Cattle Sanitary Board believes cattle shipments from the state in October will show a marked increase over shipments made in September.

Many of the cattle, during October, he said, were sold to California buyers and some eventually entered coast markets. Ranges in the various parts of the state Naylor said, are in good condition and the outlook for the cattle business is bright.

The cattle board secretary and staff have been busy re-recording brands, and Mr. Naylor said yesterday that all cattlemen are supposed to have their brands in the office of the secretary by November 20 for re-recording.

Ten thousand brands have been entered in one set of books since the work of re-recording started. Mr. Naylor estimated that approximately 30,000 brands will be on record before the year is completed.
