How about it?

What has the lamp bulb you forgot to turn off when you came up out of the basement got to do with helping to win the war?

Obviously, not very much.

But multiply this lamp by the millions of other lamps which people forget to turn off in attics, in closets, in unoccupied rooms-every day-and you get some idea of the part the conservation of electricity can play in saving urgently needed fuel, manpower and transportation facilities.

Nobody expects you to sit around in the dark or overwork your eyes under insufficient light. You can have all the light you need-when you need itwhere you need it.

Won't you show your appreciation of this abundance of essential light, in the face of so many necessary wartime scarcities, by remembering not to waste it?

There were seventy-three persons who reported at the Red Cross surgical dressing rooms last week. The chairman reports 4,720 bandages folded in 239 hours, with credit going to Mrs. C. J. Dexter for the most hours spent there, which were nine and a half.

There are 17,500 of the present quota to be folded yet, said Mrs. Harold Crozier, chairman. These FRIDAY bandages are tedious to fold, but P. E. O., Mrs. Grady Booker, the women are doing a good job, hostess, 2:30 p. m. she said.

In addition to those who are MONDAY folding bandages, there are many women of this community who are Caskey, hostess, 7:30 p. m. knitting, said Mrs. Herbert Aid, and they too are doing a good job. This week there were three young men from the Roswell sen, hostess, 2:30 p. m. Prisoner of War Camp who folded bandages one evening. It was not as easy as they thought it was going to be, but they stayed with itiation, 7:30 p. m. it, the instructors said. There were also three women from Hope who Mrs. B. E. Kennedy, hostess, reported for service while here p. m. shopping. An invitation is issued THURSDAY (NEXT WEEK) to the women of that community to budget part of their time for Red Cross work when they come into the city. They will find instructors there to help them at all Mrs. Florence Hastings, hostess, worth while. times.

The quotas for Artesia are not getting the job done, and it would m. not be hard for anyone if another hundred women would budget board, Mrs. John Lanning, hostpart of their time for Red Cross ess, breakfast, 8:30 a. m. work.
