war shapes up now in the way persons react here in Artesia. There's none of the thunder bolt excitement of Dec. 7, 1941. No rush to recruiting stations; No startling announcements over the radio.

As yet there is no sign that rationing is contemplated. There are rumors here that consumers, taking a leaf out of their lesson of World War are demanding tires in a rapidly increased temp.

Business goes on though pretty much the same. You see no long lines of draftees as yet but here and there you find cases of young men called back to the armed services.

One of these was a young Navy veteran, a gunner's mate, who had served seven years He had been out of the service only a short time, had a good job, and was all set to settle down in civilian life. Comes a card-and he's off to the Navy

A letter received in Artesia from Houston tells of a flurry of buying in that Texas metro polis with tires and automo biles as the main objective.

There's no fanfare about it and no "official" declaration of war but thousands of miles from Artesia American men are dying today so "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness' may continue in Artesia.

WHAT Is a BLUE CROSS Community Enrollment and WHY Are We Having One Here in Eddy County Now?

OIL FIELD PITS - RESERVOIRS

We imagine people asked the same questions about Red Cross and Community Fund drives in their early days. And they are good questions.

In the case of a Blue Cross Community Enrollment, it is a community-wide campaign conducted to enroll more members in the only hospital care plan that is approved and sponsored by the hospitals themselves, and its national organization, the American Hospital Association.

The purpose of this Eddy County campaign is to make it possible for more and more people to enroll in nay not need, SELL thru the Ad-Blue Cross, and be assured of having their Health Futures provided for through membership in the nonprofit New Mexico Blue Cross Plan . . . Reduce Overhead

THERE HAS BEEN and we presume there will continue to be some clamoring to increase the unemployment compensation checks. The funds for these are provided by the employer-not the employe.

This is that percentage that is taken on the payroll every quarter and mailed into the state. It is probably the greatest abused program in he nation today and is growing worse instead of better.

And the President wants to increase these payments—that means encouraging those who want to get on the receiving end of unemployment compensation checks instead of working.

But we believe that the average employer is more concerned in seeing the money now being paid in go a little further rather than increasing this fund. He also feels that the regulations and restrictions should be clamed down to halt those who want to take a vacation at the expense of their former employer.

Case after case can be cited where this has happened in the state. Only recently a case of where an individual who was operating a bar in Juarez, Mexico, was drawing unemployment compensation in New

Another case was reported where an employe lost a relatitve. She wanted to take two weeks off from her job. She had not been fired, had not quit and her job was being held for her but she collected unemployment compensation until she returned to the job.

Such practices are going to have to stop. And those administering the program are going to have to stop them.

This will provide more money for worthy causes. But several thousands of dollars can be saved each year by reducing the overstaffed offices in the state now administering this program. We know one office in the state that has 11 employes. Three can handle the work. About every other week one or more of these are sent off with the taxpayers paying the expenses for the employe to get more training.

Let's cut down the overhead; reduce the cost of administering this program; halt the abuse of the program; and we can pay those actually needing and deserving unemployment compensation without increasing the payments now being made in by the employers in this state and over the nation .- O.E.P.

No Executive Sessions

EOR A GOOD MANY YEARS it has been a common practice for Christian Science Monitor. governing bodies of the various branches of government of the state, county, and city to go into executive ses to bar the public from their meetings.

It has been taken for granted that this was legal and that it could he done.

We know of a number of instances in the state where both city councils or commissions, as well as school boards, went into these executive sessions and the public was barred.

Attorney General Joe L. Martinez has now ruled that it is illegal to hold executive sessions on the part of city councils. He has issued an opinion in which he states that city councils must hold their sessions gpen so the public can attend and he has ruled that minutes of these meetings must be kept.

It seems that the city council over at Portales had voted to hold executive sessions. A little friction has developed over there, so it was just decided that although the mayor and members of the council were conducting the business of the public, yet the public had no business attending these meetings.

We feel sure that the members of the council now they have been advised they can not legally hold "star chamber" sessions or bar the public, the practice will be discontinued.

We also expect that any of the other city councils or city commissions over the state which have had a habit of holding executive sessions will follow the ruling of the attorney general and discontinue

In other words it means the citizens, voters and taxpayers can now attend these sessions and know that right in the middle of things that the council cannot go into an executive session and prevent the public of knowing how they vote and what decision they reach.

And although the attorney general did not rule on the question of whether school boards and county commissioners can hold executive sessions, it certainly appears to us that the same ruling would apply. After all these bodies are transacting public business and there is no reason why it shouldn't be transacted in public. O.E.P.

On the contrary, there were many big bargains to be found there.

But the fascination of pawing through dozens of items, most of which are worthless to the individual, is boundless. And it is surprising the things one discovers he cannot get along without when he finds them marked at half price, when he had not previously thought of buy-

Perhaps we are all collectors at heart. Or we may be like the little boy, whose pockets bulge with dozens of worthless items, all of them dear to him.

We have found it almost impossible not at least to peek in at the fire sale every time we pass by, and that is dozens of times a day. And we find many others in the same fix. It is that urge to buy bargains on which good merchandisers capitalize. They offer the bargains, and they advertise them. And then they sell like hot cakes-or like fire-sale bargains. Other merchants can take a lesson from the fire sale. We do not mean they need have a fire and then a sale—Heaven forbid. But man's insatiable hunger for bargains pays off, if they are only offeerd, especially by the dozens, so he can paw through them. - A.L.B.

WANNA BUY A TOWN?

$4.50

A storekeeper in New Mexico is offering a town for sale. It includes a hotel, theater building, and several store buildings. It is the town of Mogollon, once a thriving mining community of 3000 inhabitants, but now down to a population of five.

A few weeks ago it was reported that Burl Ives, popular and prosperous ballad singer, was looking for a town to buy. Whether he would be interested in Mogollon may be doubted. In any event, he attached to his offer a condition that the town he purchased must be willing to have its name changed to Ives-

There is also a syndicate with headquarters in Moscow which has shown great interest in international real estate lately. Any town that wants to put itself on the auction block might find a ready taker. The sellers should be warned, however, that payment probably would be made in rubles, possibly in bullets, and that not only the name but the character of the community would be changed completely .-

LEGALIED GAMBLING? WHY SURE

An article in Tuesday's New Mexican told of ize gambling in those counties which vote for it.

Gambling in the open counties, advocates of the scheme hasten to explain, would of course be taxed and regulated

Some large families were passed up. These large families lived in large houses that you'd think not even a 7-cents-a-head census taker could overlook. But they did.

The story came to me from Will Yolen, a good press agent with the press agent's occupational disease, trying to fill inside straights.
Will and I and Ted Mack, the maestro of the Original Amateur Hour of radio and television, were sitting around with a couple of other thugs in a coffee shop after I had made a brief but sensa tional appearance as a shill on the radio show (You are the original inal amateur, somebody told me bitterly) and Will rememb the time that Walter O'Keefe brought his father down to New York for the first time. This story is highly authentic. Will used to live with Walter, before the O'Keefe went to California six or eight years ago to settle down. They got into a taxi on 42nd street and when they settled back, she put this long face on and said 'Now, father, don't forget-the boys are doing fine, but they've got a lot of expenses. You know, they've got a position to maintain and it takes a lot of money to do it. 'They pay writers and Walter has this press agent that costs a lot of money and the rent on that East Side apartment is tremendous. What I am trying to tell you, father, is that they have to take on a little work-a little sideline, as it were-to keep their

Because there at the corner, pushing their little white cart along and dragging brooms, were Walter and Jack-dressed to the teeth in Department of Sanitation uniforms. They made the most professional street cleaners you ever saw, and all in all, it is probably the best piece of acting that Walter did in a long and honorable career. You should have seen them wield those brooms.

"THEY FINALLY LOOKED UP from their manicuring of Madison Avenue, and their faces lighted up. 'Hey, pop!' Walter yelled happily, and then he and Jack walked over to the cab and pulled open the door and shook hands with the old man. 'The old man still was too speechless to say anything, but the

Learn to Swim--- 5

1. It is a good idea to learn to swim on your back. This is restful because of the position. Submerge to the chin, and gently push off in a glide. The chin should be tucked into the neck as you glide. 2. The next step is simple. Push off, glide and then start a gentle up and down thrash of the legs. If you learn to thrash backward with the top of the foot you have the beginning of the kick used in the back crawl.

4. Finally put the leg thrash and the finning action of the arms together and you will be swim-ming comfortably, if slowly, on your back. Since your face is constantly above the surface, Syou can breathe in and out naturally.

Learn to Swim--- 5

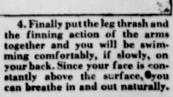

1. It is a good idea to learn to swim on your back. This is rest-ful because of the position. Submerge to the chin, and gently push off in a glide. The chin should be tucked into the neck as you glide. 2. The next step is simple. Push off, glide and then start a gentle up and down thrash of the legs. If you learn to thrash back-ward with the top of the foot you used in the back crawl.

Swimming on the Back

3. Then practice the armstroke in a back-float position. Just draw the hands a little way up along the sides toward the head, turn them outward to a 45° angle, then vigorously push the palms toward the feet, and repeat.
