The answers to everyday insurance problems*

By Don Jensen

QUESTION: Is it true that a ten-int can sometimes be held liable for fire damage to an apartment house where he lives? ANSWER: That sometimes hap-pens if the fire is due to a tenant's negligence. Fire Legal Liability insurance protects against this hazard and it can be added to Com-prehensive Personal Liability in prehensive Personal Liability in-surance. It will not cover, of course, if the tenant assumes liability for fire damage in a lease.

Those Pressure Groups

THERE APPEARS to be a growing tendency in the state legislature against all pressure groups - those well and highly organized organizations with the "heat" to be applied to get what they want from governing bodies.

We are pleased to learn there is a determined effort on the part of some members of the legislature to resist these pressure groups when they are seeking selfish legislation to benefit only their members and themselves.

The success of these efforts to resist some of the pressure will depend on how many members of the legislature recognize these pressure groups and their efforts to "stampede" the legislators into passing the laws they want passed.

The legislature is in session to do those things that bring the greatest good to the greatest number. They are there to do those things that will help the state and not just to serve the favored few

But when organizations and groups who feel they have large memberships and they can use this as a threat to fight the election of certain members of the legislature if they do not do their bidding-then it is time for their efforts to be resisted.

We appreciate fully, of course, there are times and may be for the good of the majority of the people. But we also know there are times when they are only seeking to serve themseives and not the majority of the citizens and taxpayers of our state.

We are firmly convinced if we were a legislator we would resent any efforts to demand that we oppose such a measure Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves During the time of the miracle far from strong. It purports to set or favor another piece of legislation. We likewise wouldn't appreciate having the "pressure" applied to try and force us to do the bidding of this group, organization, or movement.

THE SOLDIER from Cheyenne and the saloon-girl from Laramie make an exciting romantic combination in the persons of John Payne and Mari Blanchard, who are costarred with Dan Duryea in Universal - Internatioinal's Technicolor adventure "Rails Into Laramie."

S. V. P

Wayne Starring In Ocotillo's Weekend Feature

From a beginning as a romantic singer in movie musicals, actor John Payne has moved along the line of rugged action roles to the character of Jeff Harder in Universal International's Technicolor production of "Rails Into Laramie. The film, scheduled Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the Ocotillo theater, co-stars Mari Blanchard and Dan Duryea. Rugged indeed is the part of the Union soldier sent to Laramie as a special marshal to clean up the railroad construction town. During this assignment he participates in seven blistering brawls, slugs six opponents into submission and, balancing the tides of battle, gets kayoed twice, himself. A total of nineteen days were devoted to filming fight sequences in the picture, making this the most virile screen characterization in Payne's fifty film assignments. Though Payne's physique was never an important factor during his rise to stardom, he stands 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 195 pounds, and keeps in perfect condition, mainly through long ocean swims. His chest, expanded, reaches a prodigious 52 inches, tapering down to a small 31-inch waistline. Powerfully muscled, Payne once earned his living as a professional wrestler. The popular star secured a release from his studio contract in 1946 to strike out on his own in an effort to get rid of "pretty
