A. B. TARWATER FOR REPRESENTATIVE

When first elected to the Legislaire, I was pledged to sponsor and ork for the passage of provisions in ne gasoline tax law to take the tax off of gasoline used in farm machinary. After a hard fight this was done and since it became a part of the law repeated efforts have been made to abolish the refund provision, but I ave always led a successful fight to tain the refund in the gasoline tax w. Since it was put in the gasoline x law it has saved the farmers of mas about $10,000,000 in taxes.

I have taken an active part in all fields of proposed legislation, espec-ally on tax measures and have servd on the Revenue and Taxation comnittee throughout my legislative ork. In the 43rd Legislature I was airman of the House committee on aservation and Reclamation and if ny state legislation is necessary to et complete benefits from the new Federal Farm Act, such legislation will be controlled by this committee. Experience and training as a legisr can only be obtained by service ke advantage of the training it has nade possible for me o have and conmy service in the Legislature. y record in past Legislatures should a fair test of what may be expectas to my course if re-elected and is record is open to all who wish to and keep open wide the be held in the Bane Building. or of opportunity for all. I am for ficient government as economically it is possible to have it.

The people adopted the old age asitting this mandate of the people insistance can and should be raised mediately.

I am a Hale county farmer and ply appreciate the honor paid me the past by the citizens of the tht counties in this district and if ain chosen to represent this district pledge my constant and continuous idy of public questions and all posed legislation so that I may st the vote of the nearly 80,000 peoin this district on the side of tht and fair dealing for all.

FARM SALES UP SAYS BANK REPORT

Return to normal purchasing of farm lands is shown by a study of applications received by the Federal Land Bank of Houston in the past five months, according to word re ceived from the bank by J. E. Nearly three million dollars, or about twenty percent of the Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner loans applied for in that period have been for the purchase of farms. For some months past, Land Bank Commissioner as well as Federal Land Bank loans have been available Prior to the broadening of their scope, Land Bank Commissioner loans could be made only to refinance existing indebtedness.

From October 1, 1935 through February 29, 1936, 4,160 new and reinstated applications were received by the Federal Land Bank of Houston, for amounts totaling $15,023,950. Federal Land Bank loans now are available through N.F.L.A.'s, said Mr. Daniel, at the lowest interest rates in history and may be made for the following purposes: (a) To purchase land for agricultural uses; (b) to buy equipment, fertilizers, and livestock necessary for the proper and reasonable operation of the mortgaged farm (c) to provide buildings and for the improvement of farm land: (d) to liquidate indebtedness of the owner of the mortgaged land incurred for agricultural purposes or incurred prior to January 1, 1933; and (e) to provide the owner of the mortgaged land with funds for general agricultural uses. Loans to farmers may be made by the Land Bank Commissioner for the same purposes as Land Bank loans. However, the purposes for Commissioner loans are broader than for Land Bank loans in that Commissioner loans may be made to refinance any indebtedness of the farmer without regard to its purpose or the time nd in these times of uncertainty and it was made. M. R. Bentley from College Station Shows Briscoe County Farmers How to Save a Hillside

Monday, March 9th, at "Tubby" Hamiltons' farm near Quitaque, the farmers from Briscoe County gathered to see some terracing done according to Hoyle (Bentley).

"Tubbys" field is one of the most rregular and difficult fields in Briscoe County and would compare favorably-so far as difficulty goes, with any farm in Texas. Curious eyes from interested farmers watched Mr. Bentley as he took sights and readings trying to "figure out" how, why and where to begin laying off the lines. Bentley's quick actions and rapid calculations soon proved to the satisfaction of all concerned that the County Agent hadn't made a mistake in securing the services of Mr. Bentley for this field. COMMISSIONERS APPRECIATED

On Monday a number of Silverton women together with those from otber communities called on the Commissioners holding court in the County Judge's office. Mrs. John Jago. chairman of the Quitaque Home Demonstration Club, came with a large delegation of ladies from "down the Cap". There was no mistaking the wish of the visitors; it was a concentrated desire for an expert Home Demonstrator as soon as the county finances would permit.

Everyone appreciates the attitude of the Commissioners who have proven themselves to be careful guard-Mr. and Mrs. Kirk have operated lans of the county's taxes. The ladies would not have them otherwise, and are glad to find them conservative in expenditures. But we also appreciate their courteous consideration of the women's requests. We are hoping they will be able to work out a way for the small amount required to have the services of a County Home agent. Every housewife feels that her husband and children are as worthy of good homes and good food and the right clothes as are the families of her neighbors who gloat of the latest ideas and methods that they have learned from their Home Demonstrators. There are ready markets for their rugs, quilts and canned goods and other work of their hands, when done according to specifications, that would help bring in a fe wextra dollars. Their boys and girls receive credits for work done under direction of the county Home agents in 4-45 Clubs that count as if the work had been in a high school Home Economics class.

And just as the Briscoe County women want the best for their families, so the commissioners seem to want the women to have the best instruction and knowledge for making their work easier, more enjoyable and right. Sach knows that no county he

Lesson for March 15 JESUS TEACHES HIS DISCIPLES TO PRAY

LESSON TEXT—Luke 11;1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us.—
I John 5:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When We Pray.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Teach Us to Pray.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—What Jesus Says About Prayer.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC-Why Should We Pray?

Prayer is a matter which ought to be of great concern to every believer, for, "The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in truth. He will fulfill the desire of them that fear him; he also will hear their cry, and will save them" (Ps. 145:18, 19). There was something about the praying of Jesus that so impressed the disciples that they requested him to teach them to pray (Luke 11:1). May everyone of us enroll at once in the school of prayer with Christ as our Teacher. In response to the disciples' request. Jesus set forth the following principles of prayer.

I. The Right Relationship of the One Praying (v. 2).

1. Filial-"Father." The suppliant in prayer must be a child of God. God's gifts and blessings are for his children. This relationship can only be entered into through regeneration. Not all men have a right to say, "Our Father," when addressing God. Only those who are children of God by faith in Jesus Christ can so address him.

2. Fraternal-"Our Father." God has many children. His children are bound up together in nature and interests. Even in our secret prayer we should address him as "Our Father," which is a recognition of the interest of others alongside of ours.

II. The Right Attitude in Prayer

1. Reverent adoration-"Hallowed be thy name." As children we have certain rights and privileges, yet holy reverence becomes us.

2. Loyalty-"Thy kingdom come." When praying to God we should come with a spirit of loyalty which cries out, "Thy kingdom come." We should not only receive him as the Lord of our lives, but should loyally labor with him in inducing others to submit to him.

3. Submission-"Thy will be done." We should have no will of our own regarding the rule of God. We should let him direct us in all things.

III. The Right Spirit in Prayer (vv. 3-8).

1. Dependent faith-"Give us this day our daily bread" (v. 3). We should realize that not only bread, but life itself is ours to enjoy because of him and he is able to do for us "exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or

2. Penitence and love-"Forgive us our debts" (v. 4). We should come to him realizing that we have sinned, and cry out to him for forgiveness. Our heart should be so filled with love for others that we will forgive those who sin against us, as God has so willingly forgiven us.

3. Holiness and caution-"Lead us not into temptation" (v. 4). Because we are God's children, and realizing the depravity of our natures and the consequent tendency to practice that which displeases him, we should shrink from that which, if indulged in, would dishonor him, and earnestly cry unto him to lead us not into the place where we would likely fall.

4. Intercessory (vv. 5, 6). The man who asked for bread did not ask for himself, but for a friend. Prayer which pleases God is unselfish in its requests.

5. Perseverance (vv. 7, 8). Though the friend refused at first and offered excuses, because the one making the request would not take "No" for an answer, he arose from his bed and gave him as many as he needed. Prayer pleases God and gets results. IV. Encouragement to Pray (vv.

1. God's promise (vv. 9, 10). True prayer cannot fail of an answer, because God definitely promises that, "Every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened."

2. Example of an earthly father (vv. 11-13). No father will give a stone to his son who asked for bread, nor a serpent instead of a fish, nor a scorpion instead of an egg. God is infinitely more willing to answer the prayers of his children than earthly parents are to give good gifts to their children.

V. The True Goal of All Prayer (v. 13).

God's best gift is himself in the person of his Holy Spirit. All those who practice the principles which Jesus taught in this model prayer shall experience the blessing of the Holy Spirit.

"She Had a Hunch"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter.

One thing I is One thing I do know is that there is certainly no earthly reason why a hunch should be an indication of future events, but I'll be doggoned if they don't do that very thing right along.

Historians tell us that Napoleon worked on hunches. If he had a hunch that things weren't going just right before a battle he would retreat and attack another day, and every schoolboy knows with what uncanny success. He was superstitious, too, which is unusual in a man so intelligent, but it worked out all right for him. Here's an example:

Once, at the height of his power, a big celebration was being given in the emperor's honor. A special wooden pavilion had been built in the palace gardens to hold the big crowd. Nap started with a group of retainers to walk over to the gaily decorated hall where the guests were already awaiting his grand entry. The emperor was in a jovial mood and he hurried along with swift, firm steps. Suddenly he stopped and a worried frown came over the imperial forehead.

The procession halted with him to a man. They looked to see what had caused the great conqueror's anxiety and then smiled as they saw a tiny black cat pass directly in front of him.

Emperor Orders Return to Palace.

But Napoleon didn't smile. He snapped out an order and turning right about face retraced his steps to the palace.

"We shall start all over again," the emperor said, and the rest obeyed the man who held the world in the palm of his hand. Some of the courtiers sneered secretly behind his back. Others smiled broadly at the Man of Destiny, influenced by a black cat crossing his path! All said that the delay would hurt his well-timed dramatic entrance. Napoleon said nothing.

As the return trip brought the procession to the spot where the cat had passed some twenty minutes before, the courtiers were still smiling-behind the emperor's back-at this strange whim. But their smiles, before they had gone many steps, changed suddenly to gasps of horror.

Crowded Hall Turned Into Shambles.

The brightly lighted pavilion blew up before their very eyes! A terrific explosion shattered the night and turned the crowded hall into a shambles! Wounded and blinded unfortunates, screaming with pain fought their way to the gardens, leaving hundreds of dead behind them!

Napoleon soon had the story. A bomb-timed for his entrancehad exploded directly beneath the throne! Ten minutes earlier and the bomb would have found its mark.

A cat-or was it a hunch-had changed the history of the world. All that, boys and girls, brings us to Mrs. Jack Cantwell of Brooklyn, N. Y. Mrs. Cant well had a hunch and like Napoleon she played it to win,

Tries to Deliver "Surprise Gift."

In May of 1919, Mrs. Cantwell says, she and her husband moved into her sister's home at 154 East Sixty-sixth street, to take care of the house while her sister was on a trip to Europe. Her sister had many articles of value in her home that she didn't wish to leave unguarded.

One evening the doorbell rang and Mrs. Cantwell went to the door to be greeted by a delivery man. A truck stood in front of the house and the man announced that they had a piano to deliver. He explained that the piano was a surprise gift for her sister.

Well, that sounded reasonable, but Mrs. Cantwell had a hunch. She refused to accept the piano. The man insisted that it be delivered, saying there was no mistake and it had been paid for. He had the right name and address and it wasn't fair, he said, to cause the workmen to make a return trip. The piano, in a big wooden crate covered with burlap, stood on the sidewalk ready to be moved in.

Hunch Saves Family From Burglars.

Mr. Cantwell came to the door. He couldn't see why the plane shouldn't be moved in and said so. But Mrs. Cantwell was working on that hunch of hers and said she wouldn't allow it in the house without a written order from

That ended the whole thing so far as the Cantwells were concerned. Back they went to their waiting dinner, wondering if they hadn't made a mistake in refusing the piano. Mrs. Cantwell admits that she didn't have a leg to stand on when it came to explaining why she did not want the instrument in the house. She had no suspicions of the men and she had no dislike for piano music. All she had was a hunch but, as it turned out, that was plenty.

Nothing further happened that night to destroy the harmony of the Cantwells domiciled in sister's house. The couple slept the sleep of the just, but the next morning at breakfast the plano incident smacked them in the face again like a squirting grapefruit. The smack came out of this headline on the front page of their morning newspaper:

"BURGLARS ENTER HOUSE IN PIANO BOX!"

Clever Ruse Used by Thugs.

Mr. Cantwell read the article out loud. The thieves, the paper said, had gained entrance to a house by the ruse of delivering a plano. In the plano case was concealed one of their number. The box was left that evening at the home of the victims and the man had the entire night in which to rifle the place. Well, what have you got to say about hunches, now?

Sheep Importation of

1802 Nation's Largest

The largest importation of sheep and the one which had the most to do with the improvement of the flocks in this country, was the bringing in of 75 ewes and 21 ramps by Davis Humphrey of Connecticut in 1802, writes Carleton M. Allen in the Boston Tran-

After 1807 merino wool went upwards in price due to the fact that an act was passed, causing practically an embargo, and the seemingly hostile tactics of both England and France reduced the imports of woolens by at least one-half. By the time war was declared in 1812 the supply of foreign woolens was absolutely cut off. The effect upon the manufacture of woolens was immediate. Humphreys started a mill in 1806, using his own wool. Dupont, another original importer of merino sheep, opened a mill near Wilmington, Del., in 1812. One mill was erected in western Pennsylvania, manufacturing broadcloth from the clip of its own merino sheep. Another was started in Steubenville, Ohio.

were in existence in eastern United States. Fourteen of these mills manufactured annually 10,000 yards of cloth, selling at from $1 to $10 a yard.

In 1809 and 1810 the demand for pure-blooded merino sheep was so great that rams had risen in value to $1,000 to $1,500, and ewes were sold at $1,000. Pure merino wool rose from 75 cents a pound to $2. The common wool was quoted at 371/2 cents a pound.

In New England and the middle Atlantic states after 1840, the wool-growing industry, which had been mostly confined to this region, began to de-

Reducing and Nervousness

HE difficult part about reduc-I ing weight is the cutting down on the starch or sugar foods - sugar, bread, potatoes,

Everybody, whether thin or fat, needs these particular foods, as they are the "energy givers," and the body must have foods to supply this energy.

Meats, fruits, minerals, vitamins are all necessary to health and all give a certain amount of energy, but it is the starch, that is, really the sugar foods, that give energy in the amounts the

In the overweight individual, nature has been kind or generous, as it were, in that the sugar foods eaten not only supply the energy but a portion of them is stored away in the liver, muscles, and other tissues and can be used if the individual is unable to get a further supply at any

> The point here, and it is very plain, is that if the overweight will do without quite as much starch food. this sugar that is stored in the liver and other tissues can be used to supply energy. Less starch food being eaten will prevent any gain in weight, and after a time will bring bout a loss of the fat tissue (which will be used as fuel for the body's

Source of Nervousness.

Now when the overweight begins doing without his or her usual amount of starch or sugar foods, one of the first symptoms noticed is a weak or pervous feeling. This is because the amount of sugar in their blood or tissues is not as much as usual; it is the sugar that gives the energy-the feeling of strength. It is only natural then that they turn to starch or sugar foods again and many of them give up the whole idea of trying to reduce

However, the very fact that sugar is so helpful in overcoming this nervous or weak feeling, has been used by some physicians in reducing the weight in their patients.

Thus with the usual amount of food cut down by one-quarter to one-half, when the patient begins to feel nervous or weak, he is given some sugarcandy or in some other form-and this overcomes the weakness or nervousness until the regular meal time ar-

In the Medical Journal and Record. Drs. Y. Yoshida and I. J. Roberts record their method of reducing weight, which consists of cutting down the usual diet by about one half and giving dextrose (sugar) when there are symptoms of fatigue, hunger, nervousness or weakness the result of an insufficient amount of sugar in the blood.

Doctors' Daily Plan.

Their daily plan is as follows: The daily diet consists of clear soup, liberal helping of vegetables, two or three pieces of bread and butter, one average portion of meat, two glasses of milk and one orange.

In addition the patient takes about one ounce of dextrose daily in the form of pleasantly flavored lozengeseach lozenge containing about a half teaspoonful-one lozenge being dissolved in the mouth every half hour from 9:30 to 11 a. m., 2:30 to 5:30 p. m. Liquids must be cut down as much as possible and only five glasses -water, tea, coffee, soft or hard drinks or any other form of liquid-are to be taken daily. Absolutely no food should be taken between meals except the dextrose mentioned above. Moderate exercise in the form of walking is advised but no severe gymnastic exercises.

Thus while sugar is fattening and must be cut down in all reducing diets, yet using a piece of candy, a chocolate bar, or a banana (the meat of which is rapidly turned into sugar) when that hungry, nervous, weak feeling comes, not only overcomes this feeling, but is really a safeguard whilst reducing.

The use of an alkali-common baking soda is always at hand-prevents the acidosis which occurs during the reduction of weight; a level teaspoonful two or three times a day in a half glass of water is sufficient.

Getting Out of Bed

THERE has been a feeling for some time in the minds of many surgeons that patients after severe illness should be sitting up and actually getting out on their feet for a few minutes daily, much sooner than is usually the case at present.

When the patient lies in bed too long the stomach doesn't seem to want food, the bowel doesn't become active, there is some danger of swelling of the legs, and of complications.

Thus in appendix cases, operations on the stomach and gall bladder, or repairing a hernia or rupture, Dr. A. Challer, Lyons, France, states that he gets his patients up between the third and fifth day-that is to say, as soon as the shock following operation has passed off. For the first few days of course, the patient only stays up 15 to 30 minutes. He claims by this means to shorten the convalescence (time taken to get well), hasten the bladder and bowel functions, and get the patient home in 10 to 14 days. C-WNU Service.

Difficult a Task as It Seems Like One Used for Cream-Puffs.

"Will you please at some conven- Fahrenheit). ient time, tell us would-be cooks something about souffles? Mine are either too dry or they fall." So writes a reader. Fortunately I can answer this question satisfactorily, says a well-known food expert.

Souffles used to puzzle me. I tried to duplicate that perfect scouffle to be found in an old French hotel in lower New York. I was never able to get one crusty on the outside and soft in the center, until I asked the chef to make one for me. Now a souffle is no problem. It can be made even for the quick meal, because you may use a hot oven.

The trick is to make a base like the one that is used for creampuffs. The base is the same for all with the exception that for cheese, meat or vegetable souffles you make it thinner. The flour and water are cooked together until thick. Then the egg yolks are beaten in one by one; the cheese, the chocolate, the finely chopped vegetable or other flavoring are added. Last of all the beaten egg-whites are folded in.

When I make a sweet souffle, fold half of the sugar into the eggwhites while the rest is stirred into the hot foundation. The baking dish which may be of silver, oven-proof glass or pottery, should be greased with soft, not melted butter. For sweet souffle, this should be sprin kled liberally with granulated sugar to make a "chemise" as the chef says. A 400-degree oven for twenty minutes is the proper temperature for a souffle.

NOT long ago I was like some friends I have...low in spirits... run-down...out of sorts...tired easily and looked terrible. I knew I had no serious organic trouble so I reasoned sensibly...as my experience has since proven...that work, worry, colds and whatnot had just worn me down.

The confidence mother has always had in S.S.S. Tonic...which is still her stand-by when she feels run-down...convinced me I ought to try this Treatment...I started a course. The color began to come back to my skin...I felt better...I did not tire easily and soon I felt that those red-blood-cells were back to so-called fighting strength...it is great to feel strong again and like my old self.

Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red Cellophane-wrapped package...the big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment...it's more economical, too.

The Christian Endeavor Society did not have their meeting Sunday as Mr. and Mrs. Wright were planning to attend the funeral of their aunt in Portales, New Mexico. They decided to wait until next Sunday, March 15, when they will have the outdoor sunset services if the weather is favorable. Every one is asked to contribute to the devotional part in prayer, Bible verse or short talk, and also to bring something for the picnic supper. They will meet at the Presbyterian church, at 5:45 Sunday evening, and go to the meeting place from here. There will be a few minutes for election of officers. Every one come. All boys and girls not in some other young peoples work on Sunday evening come join these young christians, either in the outdoor meeting or fireside vesper-service and supper at Mrs. Wright's if weather is bad.

Spiritual ignorance today is prevalent over this great country of ours because the word of God has been misrepresented, and misenterpreted by those who are supposed to be its friends. Intelligent people should not allow someone to place an interpreation upon the Bible and then accept that interpretation without examining the truth of God to see whether that is right.

So far as can be judged at this of the privy seal; Korekiyo Takahashi, the national welfare." They were: minister of finance, and Gen. Jotaco mier Okada escaped death, his brother-In-law being mistaken for him and slain. The mutineers, threatened by loyal troops and the fleet, obeyed an edict by Emperor Hirohito and surrendered. Of their 23 leaders, two committed suicide and the rest were put in prison to await probable trial by court One other important result is likely to follow the uprising, and that is the formation of a new government more national in character and including some able military men. That is what the army wants, not caring especially who is premier. Okada, after emerging from his place of hiding, offered his resignation, but the emperor commanded him to carry on for the present. It may be Japan will really be the gainer for the revolt, but it suffered one great loss in the death of Takahashi, who was a financial genius.

The whole affair emphasizes the fact that the Japanese do not look with disfavor on assassinations and suicides that are motivated by "patriotism."

Building Service Strike Cripples New York

MORE than 150,000 workers in 11,000 buildings in New York city were called out on strike by James J. Bambrick, president of the Building Service Employees' International union, and the sky-scrapers from the Battery to Washington Heights were badly erippied. Elevator men stopped their ears, fornace men banked their fires and scrubwomen threw down their mong, and all marched out of the buildings and formed picket lines. There was some scattered fighting between the pickets and men hastily tire police force of the city was mobilized in a hurry to preserve the peace For almost a month the union leaders and building operators had been trying in vain to reach an agreement that would avert the strike. Bambrick as he called the strike said the owners must now sign the union terms and that he would accept no calls for arbitration. Each building, he as-hired to take their places, but the enserted, must sign for itself. Since the strike affected not only office buildings but innumerable apartment buildings also, the occupants of the latter were deprived of heat and telephone connections, and in many cases sick persons were marooned without food supplies. Speaking of Gov. Landon

True Facts About Kansas Situation; Make Hagood Case Political Issue

By EARL GOOWIN TASHINGTON.-The strongest Republican in the field today, according to polls which ataccording to polls which attract attention here, is Alfred Landon, governor of Kansas, Next in line is Senator Borah, and after that the field straggles out, with Teddy Rooseveit, the son of a former President, so far in the rear that one cannot see him even with a spy glass. This is no prediction that Landon will be nominated because the Republican party rarely nominates its strongest man. His position in the field is based upon the reputation he has been given for balancing the Kansas budget; and undoubtedly he will be put forward for several weeks to come as the man who will move the country from bankruptcy. His endorsers will point with pride to stalwart Kansas and its balanced accounts, no debts and what-nots. This plain, soft-spoken Kansan, who shrinks

from public speech, will pretty soon be riding on the sort of ballyboo which will make him a Napoleon of public finance, so we might as well learn now what the situation is in Landon is no slouch of a governor: but it is the state constitution which probibits Kansas from running into debt without specific public authority. Then, there is a state budget law which was no work of Mr. Landon's. but rather the work of his Democratic predecessor, Harry Woodring, now the assistant secretary of war in Washington. Then, there has been that thing which could well be paralleled in every other state-a general co-operative movement for economies on the part of local and state officials from mayors on to the governorship. This was not a political move-just a common sense idea on the part of Americans of both parties. In general, the facts are that Governor Landon has no copyright on Kansas economy. He did not do all these wonders by himself, but has been borne along on the general idea of "pay as you go," which is the character of the policy of the people of Kansas at this time. Of course, it must be remembered that Landon managed to pay the relief bills of Kansas by money he got from the federal government at Washington. This included many millions of dollars of federal money which paid for public works and fed many hungry Kansans without being a burden on the state. It is not difficult to be economical with other people's money.

FARLEY CONFIDENT

I do not know what readers of this column thought about my recent analysis of the political situation and conservative, and "Jim," as you know, will run the campaign for Rooseveit's re-election. Farley predicts that and scare that body to death. Roosevelt will have as great a victory as he did when first elected. He claims that Roosevelt will carry New York and Pennsylvania, basing his New York claim on the regularity of the Democratic machine, and basing his Pennsylvania claim on the strong pro-Roosevelt move among the coal miners and other union workers. He says: "Roosevelt will beat Landon in the state of Kansas" and seems to believe. as I do, that Landon is now the leading Republican candidate. Pennsylvania die hard Republicans in business, in the legislature and on the bench are doing everything possible to irritate the working classes; and there seems to be some justification for Farley's aspirations toward the old Republican Keystone state.

THE CASE OF HAGOOD

There is always an explosion when the army or navy cracks down on some talkative officer and tells him to let the President run the government. Now and then some brave officer goes before the public with a recommendation for the betterment of the service, and if he is in opposition to the policy of the general staff he is likely to be bauled over the coals, court-martialed, and sometimes taken off the job. Many times this seems like censorship, or gagging, or like some form of Fascism: yet this country sticks to the idea that the army and navy should stay out of politics and public affairs. Otherwise we might have a situation where the armed forces take too much interest in politics-as in Japan.

Now comes Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood, commanding an area in Texas, who went before the appropriations committee of the house of representatives, and delivered himself of several rather second-grade, smart-aleck remarks about the administration's relief policy. Result: The opposition press played them up, and in a few days Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the army, recalled General Hagood from Texas, relieved him of all duty, and sent him home to South Carolina (At $8,000 a year for doing nothing).

This sort of thing has happened previously, and always the opposition press seizes on the episode and magnifies it as a case of persecution of a brave and outspoken officer. The case of General Hagood is no exception, but from reading the public prints one would imagine that all previous mertyrusm and been authore. De confine army order removing Gener Hagood followed army regulation sciopted when William Howard Tab was secretary of war. It is now enhibited as a gag fashioned by this atministration, which is charged via pursuing "a reign of terror against all critics."

POLITICAL ISSUE

The Republican party intends b make a political issue out of this army order, which places a talkative aray officer in the corner, but Hagood by been talking out of turn for year according to General Craig. The R. publicans lead off with a bombase speech from the leader of their or gressional campaign committee, Ses ator Hastings of Delaware, a man of no great or special talent, but a Do pont product. If Hastings had god sense he never would have started the attack upon the administration of the Hagnord affair, because it was no other than Senator Hastings hims who was the chief persecutor of the late Gen. William Mitchell, the me driven out of the army under Repub-Hean anspices for criticizing th army's air policy. When Coolidge va-President, General Mitchell spoke og in public and was court-martialed & graded, and forced to resign his cor mission. He had done no more than to try to arouse public opinion behind a move to better the army's air forcesomething which is now being dote. He were more distinguished service medals than any other man in the army, and it is new agreed that be knew whereof he spoke.

At that time the Republicans house ed him out of office, while the Denocrats made him a martyr. When Democrats tried to bring up a bill h the senate to wipe out the heavy disgrace which had fallen upon General Mitcheil, it was this same Senater Hastings who blocked the move. AM how Senator Hastings was jilled about that matter in the senate, when he tried to paint Hagood as a much abused man.

. . . MAKE THEM PAY I told you about the "legalized steal"

by which several industries feathered their nests by grabbing the processing taxes restored by the courts, and thes not returning them to the public. Well, Roosevelt played a neat trick on those fellows when he suggested a heavy "windfall tax" to penalize industries which are making excess profits with this public money. The government budget would balance, (and did balance on January 6) had not congress enacted the "Pay-It-Now" bonus lav, and had not the Supreme court overturned AAA, restoring the processing taxes. Therefore, to balance the budget money must be raised by taxes to meet those circumstances; and it must be remembered that congress alone has the responsibility for the bonus.

As to who should pay the extra taxes, there is no doubt in President Roosevelt's mind. He thinks that the concerns which profited by this "legalized steal" which Roosevelt calls a windfall, should pay an extra tax He figures they should be charged about $150,000,000 all told-and this would be about one half the more of the $300,000,000 returned to them President Roosevelt's chances for re. It seems like retroactive, swift justice, election, but "Jim" Farley does not and we are wondering in Washington think so much of it. He says I am whether the administration can get away with it. The packers' and n lers' lobbies will swarm on congre politicians are already shaking with fright over the idea of raising taxes in a campaign year, and yet it was congress itself which ordered the bonts to be paid now. Roosevelt, you will remember vetoed the bonus because be knew there was no money to pay it. The packers' and millers' lobble will take advantage of this panicky feeling on the part of these congre sional politicians, and may cut down the tax bill to about one-balf the size

Before the issue of taxes is becloud ed with misstatements, it may be worth while to examine the one tax on which the higher income people are protest ing. This is called the "soak-the-rich"

Now the rich are not soaked very much in the new income tax law. For instance, there is no increase on any incomes under $50,000 a year. On net incomes of $60,000, the tax is only $00 more than last year-certainly not enough to cry over. On incomes of $80,000 there is an added tax of $77% and on an income of $100,000 a year. this year's tax will be $1,875 more than last year. The rate of taxation increases slightly and equably until the income of $5,000,000 a year is reached, and beyond that there is no further

The man who has to worry along on half a million dollars a year will pay about $40,000 more than he paid last year. The men with these tre mendous incomes of a million dollars a year or more will have to pay a little more than ever before; but there will still be left to them enough hundreds of thousands to keep the wolves from the door.

Now the real test of tax burden is found in the population figures. The people in the income classes I have outlined above divide up into about 36,000 families which had an aggregate income of ten billion dollars last year; which is exactly the same as the total income of eleven million other families in the United States with less than $1,500 a year. The New Desi will never be completely a New Desi until the American people establish a security program which will give a few more benefits to that huge class which now have so little money

"Job? What kind of job?" The old man eyed him in the darkness. "Coroner's clerk," he said in a whisper. "You kidding me?" "Not in the least. I'm . . . I'm more serious and in greater need than I've been since I can recollect." "Well, that's a new one on me!" He laughed, "Coroner's clerk! Why-"

"Let me explain this a little. I have to pop it right at you without any preliminaries because it's . . . it's an emergency, I guess. Nan didn't go into detail about the killing of her father. I want you to know that. You've got to know it. That is, if you're going to consider my proposal.

"You see, Downer was a queer old duffer. Salt of the earth, but queer; eccentric. It was one of his eccentricities that led to his murder. He never would deal with a man except for cash. Kept a bank account and all, but when he did business checks didn't go.

"He had this payment due to West last November. The fifteenth, it was. That was pay day at his mill, too, The day before he drove into town and drew the money from the bank, started home about dusk and was killed not three miles from here by a bullet in the brain. The money, in one of these tin boxes, was taken out of his car. It amounted to over twelve thousand dollars.

"You see, I'm coroner here. I started an investigation and the sheriff, he fussed some, but that's about the extent of his abilities: fussing.

"Two men, only, that we knew of, had the slightest motive. One was Jim Hinkle, whose money you got back for him tonight. He'd been working for Cash, had been fired the day before and fired with gusto, which was Downer's way. But he was playing cribbage with Tod West all that evening and stayed in West's house all night, his family being away. So, with West being what he's thought to be,"-drily-"Hinkle was counted out.

"West was quite active in this thing. He wanted his money and Nan, Downer's only heir, didn't have more to pay him. He dug up the information that Holt Stuart had had a run-in with Cash early in the week. Holt was working for Cash. Well, it seems that Holt's pretty well struck with Nan. He's a good boy, but Cash was a cantankerous old cuss and he rode the boy pretty hard because of where he'd let his interests stray. As a sort of punishment, he'd sent Holt out to a cabin on Townline Lake to do some mapping and made him stay there all

"The sheriff, after West got through with him, was convinced Holt was his man and started right in to work up a case against him. But I stopped that. A coroner, you know, 's got it all over a sheriff for authority. I drove out and found the boy with an ankle so badly sprained that he couldn't possibly've been out.

"Well, we impaneled a coroner's river." jury and I got the bullet out of Cash but we had so little to go on that the verdict had to be an open one. Then we started trying to trace the meney. It was mostly in new Federal Reserve notes and the bank had the serial num-We broadcast those and then called it a day. That's where it sits now."

"Downer's dead and the money's gone," said Kerry, "Lord, if Miss Downer could get hold of that stolen money it'd save her life, wouldn't it?" "It would" - again drily. "That's what I'm here for. To see if you'll help me locate it." "Locate it? What d'you mean?" "This!" The old man leaned forward and tapped Young's knee. "The money," he whispered, "is still in the country !"

"The devil!" "'S truth! In my pocket I have a twenty dollar bill that was part of it. It was paid me on account to-

"You got any idea where it came Ezra looked around and listened.

"Out of your poker game," he said grimly. After a moment Kerry gave a low whistle. "Say! That makes the situation look up, doesn't it?"

"That's why I came to you, a stran ger. I need help and need it right That money is cached somenow. where in the country. Whoever is hiding it, needs money badly. That's the first bill to be put into circulation out of the lot. . . . Young, will you take

he said: "I'll go you, doctor!" "Good! But we'll have to keep It

"It'll look like hell, for me to do that," Jim protested. "After what he thought he done for me. . . . How'll I go at it? Besides, he's nobody to fool with!"

"Never mind that. I'll take care of that," - nodding meaningful. "And about how it'll look: you mean because he made a play at getting your money back?"

"Well . . . You see . . ."
"Don't hedge! You can't pull wool over my eyes. Listen here, spite of all your talk in the store about not wantin' to take your money back, you still think he did you a favor, don't you? If you had the guts to say what you believe you'd say, after all, that you thought he was right, that I did deal crooked!"

"Hell, no! I tell you, I only-" "Shut up!" West gestured savagely. Because a rat comes along and frames me so I'll look like a crook, you'll forget all I've done for you!" "Well,"-with a show of sullen deflance-"what if I do think it wasn't a frame-up against you? What then?'

West leaned forward, face darkening, mouth settling in a cruel line. "So that's it, eh? So that's how you feel! Well, when you've forgotten everything else about me, remember this: I lied for you once, didn't 1? I told 'em all I played cribbage with you the night Downer was killed, didn't 1? And nobody knows I found you couldn't tell where you'd been? And with a rifle, too? What, I ask you" - bending forward and rubbing his palms on his hips slowly-"what'd happen if I came clean with the sheriff and told him that, eh? If any man ever would be under suspicion of murder then, who'd it be?"

Hinkle raised an unsteady hand to his chin.

"You wouldn't do that, Tod?"

"Try me and see!" Their gazes locked and after a time Jim's fell. He drew a slow, faltering breath.

"All right," he said, "I'll get some of the boys. Tomorrow, we'll see what we can do about gettin' him down

CHAPTER VI

The sun had climbed from the bank of orange clouds which screened its rising; the mill whistle had blown summoning men to work and the saw had at last taken up its daily song. Kerry Young had been up before the break of day, built his fire, bathed in the stinging waters of the river and dressed leisurely. Then he set his shaving kit on a stump beside the stream and preceded to clean cheeks and chin of yesterday's beard stubble. Today he was going to present himself to Nan Downer and ask for work, a move which Ezra Adams had urged at length last night. It was while peering into the mirror as he began manipulating the razor that his eyes lost their glint of laughter and became most intent. Across the way spruces grew thick along the river bank, and as he turned his back to the stream, he caught in the mirror a reflection of branches being parted, of a face peering at him. He pretended to give this watcher no heed, but he took long at his shaving, and half a dozen times had a fair glimpse of the man's face. It was no one he had seen before. He was not at all surprised when Tip, recumbent beside the fire, raised his head sharply and gave a low growl. "Easy, chum!" Kerry muttered.

"Coming into the open, eh?" But it was nothing across stream which had attracted the dog; nor was the man approaching the one who had spied on him from the timber.

Jim Hinkle was coming along the trail which followed the bank above the flat, and walking intently, as one with a grim purpose. Kerry looked up and nodded. The other did not respond. "Well, Jim?" Young asked. Hinkle plunged at once into his errand. "I've come to tell you," he said, 'that this ain't a very healthy place for you to hang around!" 'So? Kind of you to take this trouble. Is this a . . . a friendly act or Hinkle, who was seated and whose If you was doin' me a favor. Instead, you put me in a hell of a hole. You, "And now it's up to you," West said nor nobody else, can make me think that Tod West would cheat at cards!"

A whiff of surprise escaped Kerry. "Well, I'll be damned!" he breathed. "You really aren't convinced?" The man made an impatient gesture and looked away.

"Yes. I don't know what your game was, but when a stranger in this country makes a play like that with a man like Tod-well, he don't get far." "Maybe. Not at first."

"Or anywhere along the line!" The man appeared to be making an effort to lash himself into a mood of truculence. "If you'd stuck around to hear what they said in the store last night, you'd find out how far you got. Tod insisted that they look the cards over, and do you think any one of us would? Not on your life! And he made me take my money back, too . . . said he wouldn't even take it if I'd owed it to him after havin' suspicion put on him.

"If you know what's good for you," in his manner, then, was a convincing quality not present before, "you'll haul out today!"

"And if I shouldn't . . . what then?" Hinkle shrugged. "Well, I'd figure I'd done all that anybody can do for you by comin' here." He advanced a few steps, his voice moderating. "I'm not handin' you anything, Young, I'm just doin' you a friendly act. This country thinks a lot of Tod, and there's men here that won't stand to see anything done against him."

"Yeah? West, and who else?" "Plenty!"

Young let his head drop backward and laughed.

So that was that! He had been spied upon since daybreak, had been warned to clear out by an emissary who did not say all that he thought and felt. Such items should be pondered over, but first he had other things to do. He and Ezra had decided that since he had an official if secret standing now, it would scarcely do for him to remain in the country with no better excuse than the proclaimed intention of defying Tod West. So Kerry decided to apply to Nan Downer for

Not long after Jim Hinkle's departure Kerry set out, Tip following at his heels.

Nan Downer looked up from her desk and listened to Kerry's brief speech explaining his presence.

"A job?" she asked, and surprise in ber face. It was not the surprise which made the deepest impression on Young. It was the quick coloring of her cheeks, the changing light in her eyes which indicated an interest in him over and above any amazement or regret or enthusiasm which his question might have provoked. "Yes, a job. You know how it is, I guess: I've sort of got to stick around a while; and when I'm in one place, I don't just hanker to loaf."

She traced a pencil-line on a pad before her, considering, "If you want to take a chance of defying Tod West, it is your affair, What sort of job are you after?"

Kerry grinned. "Maybe I'll have to ask what kind of jobs you've got on hand? I can do a lot of things in and around the woods, all the way from cruising, up through logging operations to mill-

'Are you a draftsman as well?" She turned to a series of large maps hanging from the wall, greens and reds and blues splashing the surfaces to indicate the various types of growth which cloaked the descriptions, with figures showing the size and densities of stands, with streams and lakes set down in detail. "You see," she explained, "these prospects of ours are the sort who will want to know, down to the last detail, what we're offering in exchange for their money. My father found that the easiest way to interest men of affairs was to have everything on paper where they could consider it intelligently and completely. Could you do just this sort of thing as well as these jobs have been done?" No fooling about this girl. Her question was blunt and brooked no etgsion or qualification in answer. Young stepped closer to the maps.

studying them a lengthy interval. "I can," he said finally.

Nan hesitated. "Of course, we can't pay you what you might get some other place. We're up against it, as you already know." She was obviously embarrassed, but Kerry said quickly: "Don't worry He looked at her, his about that." appreciation of the situation stirring a profound sympathy. Ghostly Dice Game Recalls How Cavalier Lost Estate.

IN OCTOBER, 1633, out of the Thames River, England, 128 people pining for religious liberty put to sea in two wooden ships -one of 450 tons and the other of 50 tons. At the Isle of Wight others joined the expedition, and on the date of November 22 the Ark and the Dove, receiving salutes as Old England went astern, shook out fresh white canvas, and with plunging prows headed for the New world.

Once outside the channel, at the mercy of the broad Atlantic, a hurricane divided the two ships. The Dove, racked in her timbers, put back to the Scilly Isles, to rejoin the Ark six weeks later at Barbados in the Antilles, touching at other islands on the way north, reaching Point Comfort, February, 1634, thence onward to St. Clements island in the Potomac the following month, there to establish St. Mary's City on the St. Mary's river, an arm of the Potomac. Here Leonard Calvert, heading the expedition, made treaties with Indians, encouraged religious liberty and succeeded in bringing about the dreams of his father, George Calvert, Lord Baltimore and projector of the Palatinate of Maryland. Once within its borders one feels the influence of invisible charm; the suggestion of a new and old world that united has created a third estate out of the past and the present. More keenly than any other section of Maryland, this subtle force is felt along the Patuxent river, lined with old manor houses that record two hundred years of the architecture, plantation and river life which had its roots among the Cavallers.

King Confiscated Land.

Of these estates, which number about 20 more or less and occupy both sides of the river, I have elected to write about Sotterley. Sotterley takes its name from an old country seat in Suffolk, England, dating back more than 900 years. In those days no one owned anything that the king really coveted. Very well; now comes Edward IV who ascended the throne in 1461. Right off the bat he confiscated the Sotterley estates at Suffolk and passed them over to a gentleman named Playter, who had wed a daughter of the House of Sotterley. The strain prospered, multiplied, and in 1685, 50 years after the arrival of the Ark and the Dove, Benedict, of the Sotterley branch, turned up in Connecticut, altering the spelling of his name to Satterlee, as it was pronounced. A few years after, George Playter, dropping the "y" from his cognomen, drifted in to the Patuxent river section. His son, George Second, married the Widow Bowles, and estate now known as "Sotterley" named after the old place in Suffolk. The stone flagging, bricks and hardware came from England. Six years, 1730-36, were consumed in the construction of the mansion. Drama of Human Folly.

The original residence, which the present owner, Herbert L. Satterlee, a descendant of the Benedict Satterlee who arrived in Connecticut 1630, has restored with fidelity, stands after 200 years a testimony to the genius of Plater as a home builder. It is not, however, of the architectural beauties or simplicities, though they be many, of which I would write, but of the human dramas of those who lived within its walls. Four generations of Platers walked through Sotterley, the second being the sixth governor of Maryland, who married Anne Rousby, famed as "The White Rose of Mary-Their son married a Cecilia Bond, through whose veins ran the royal blood of Gustavus Vasa, king of Sweden. The product of this union, George Plater, last of the Platers to occupy Sotterley, believing himself to be invincible with a dice box, celebrated his majority and the taking over of his estates by rolling the bones with Colonel Somervell, his relative by marriage. Lady Luck Rebels.

This game, which was played in the governor's room of the old mansion, began with small stakes, swelled to a few hundred pounds, thoroughbred horses and personal effects, progressing to acreage, houses, river frontage, etc., finally to slaves, and at last to the grand manor house with all its priceless contents. With the final throw George Plater, beggared by fate, deserted by Lady Luck, casting the dice box from him, repaired to his bedroom, signed over all that was his when the game opened and vanished forthwith from the haunts of his equals to become a wanderer and an outcast, finally to die from illness and exposure, according to tradition, while on his way back to the scene of his losing tilt with fortune. While more than a hundred years have elapsed since that ill-fated game of chance. there are people still living along the Patuxent river who will tell you that while visiting Sotterley they have heard in the stillness of the night the rattle of dice in the old governor's room where the game was staged and the footsteps of George Plater as-cending to his bedroom, there to sign away his all before wandering away to oblivion. -WNU Service.

WEEK MARCH 29 to APRIL 5

The State Department of Health will sponsor a Clean Up Week, March 29 to April 5 according to Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer. He urges that every citizens in the state cooperate in this campaign to improve the appearance of the property. and promote the general welfare of the citizens.

This is Centennial Year and thou sands of persons will visit Texas, and Texas will be on parade for the general approval of these visitors. If all property holders will repair and paint their buildings, and replace all weeds and rubbish with flowers and shrubs, a more favorable impression will be made on our visitees. Every effort should be made to have the best sanitation possible under local conditions

The Centennial visitors will be in all parts of the State. City officials can help in this sanitation program by having a pure milk and water supply and by applying all knows methods of preventing the spread of communicable diseases.

During this week special campaigns will be held to prevent fires, and to promote health among the Mexicans, and among the Negroes. All should join together and make Texas the healthiest and most beautiful and the cleanest State in the Union.

Irvin F. Allen and family returned last week from Mineral Wells where they had been to attend the funeral of I. G. Showers who is M-1. Allen's father, Mr. Showers was a riceeer of West Texas residing many years in Wilburger County and has lived on the Plains helping to organize and develop Armstrong County. He was buried in the cometery at Vernon.
