Saudi Arabia to hold off raising price

By The Associated Press

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, said today it will hold off temporarily on any price increases, but American consumers already are paying more for fuel and they may face gasoline rationing and service-station closings in the future.

As the White House prepared to send a standby energy plan to Congress, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger told the nation's governors that rationing would be used only as a last resort. He said the loss of oil from Iran is not reason enough for rationing, but added that other mandatory, energy-saving measures could be imposed if the Iranian cutoff continues for a year or longer.

The new head of the National Iranian Oil Co. said today the country hoped to resume exports next week selling to the highest bidder.

He said the country hopes to get $18 to $20 a barrel — compared to the current base price of $13.35 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries of which Iran is a member.

That base price — which is subject to some adjustment depending on the quality of the oil and other conditions — had been scheduled to increase 3.9 percent on April 1 as part of an overall 1979 price boost of 14.5 percent planned by OPEC.

Several exporting countries, however, taking advantage of the cutoff in supplies from Iran, have raised their prices before the deadline and boosted them above planned levels. Kuwait, for example, announced a 9 percent hike on Monday.

Saudi Arabia, breaking with the others, said it plans no general price increase before April 1. The country previously raised prices on some of its crude oil, saying it was producing extra to help make up for the loss from Iran and maintaining that the extra should be paid for at the April 1 price level.

Iran said that when it resumes exports, it will sell to anyone — including the United States which had been importing 900,000 barrels a day from that country. If the United States decides to buy from Iran at the same level as before the revolution and if Iran gets the $20 a barrel it wants, it would cost $18 million a day or almost $6 million more daily than it used to.

In Washington, meanwhile, the White House prepared to send Congress a plan for standby measures that could be put into effect in the event of an energy emergency.

Schlesinger promised, "We will not come to rationing because of what is a relative shortfall in supply." But he predicted possible gasoline shortages this summer and said restrictions on service station openings could result. Even if the White House plan is approved, none of the standby measures would be put into effect until the president declared an energy emergency and, even then, either house of Congress could block implementation of the program.

Iran to sell oil to highest bidder

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran will sell its first exported oil in months next week on the spot market to the highest bidder and hopes to get $18 to $20 a barrel, the nation's new oil chief said today.

Hassan Nazih, the new director of the National Iranian Oil Co., told a news conference in Ahwaz that sales will resume next week and "we may be able to sell the oil at $18 to $20 a barrel."

This would $4.65 to $6.65 more than the current base price of $13.35 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. But five of the 12 other members of OPEC have already jumped prices because of the worldwide demand due to the suspension of Iranian exports, and more are expected to do so. "At this moment, there are several foreign tankers in Iranian waters ready to take on oil," said Nazih. "These are expected to dock within a few days."

Nazih said the national oil firm's agreement with a European-American oil consortium is under review, and "we will not be willing any longer to deal with the consortium under the past conditions. We will not give any discounts."

But he said the revolutionary government is prepared to renegotiate the agreement with the consortium if certain conditions were met. Among these is the assurance that Iranian oil will not be resold to Israel or South Africa.

Commissioners clash on ordinance proposal

By LINDA HILL, Staff Writer

Midland County commissioners Win Brown and Charlie Welch locked horns at Monday's Commissioners Court meeting over whether limited ordinance powers mean more government.

Brown had sought commissioner endorsement of a bill before the Legislature to give counties power to make ordinances on such things as building codes and public nuisances, on a local option basis.

"I'd be all for voting to get rid of a little government, but I don't believe I want to add any," said Democrat Welch.

Brown, a Republican, contended giving the power to county government would "get it out of Austin," and bring control to the local level.

When County Judge Bill Ahders indicated support for the measure, Welch quoted him as expressing opposition during the election campaign to ordinance-making powers for counties.

"I am against ordinance-making powers. It (the bill) is restrictive. The people are still going to decide (by voting whether to give the court the authority)," the Republican county judge responded.

Commissioner Durward Wright, a Democrat, said he didn't know whether he was for or against having the power, but favored letting the people of the county decide.

At one point, an exasperated Brown said to Welch, "Charlie, read the thing!"

"Read the first paragraph," Welch replied. "You don't have to read it all."

Ahders stepped in and suggested that County Attorney Leslie Acker study the bill and recommend action to the commissioners at their next meeting. Brown agreed and withdrew his motion.

The dispute provided the most vigorous discussion of the meeting, in which action on four other items was deferred until the next meeting.

Jewel Smith, chief sanitarian of the City-County Health Department, and Assistant County Attorney Dan New-some had been scheduled to present a proposal to give county law enforcement officials the authority to seize animals suspected of having rabies or which have bitten people.

Newsome, however, announced that the issue was more complex than he had anticipated and that the proposal will not be ready until next meeting.

Action was deferred, also, on a solution to the crowding problems of the county law library.

Library facilities have been a sore spot for attorneys in and out of the courthouse since the space designed for the facility was taken over for a new district court.

The library now is located in the basement in a room which is too small for all the volumes and which is locked except during regular business hours. Some of the books are in the district attorney's office.

Among suggestions put forth were converting the current grand jury room and adjoining reception area into library space, boxing or moving seldom-used volumes and purchasing an additional set of the most com-

Old hotel may become parking lot

BY GUY SULLIVAN, Staff Writer

ODESSA — The old Griffin Hotel may be a rooming house of the past, but it's definitely not a flophouse, says the management.

It's a relatively cheap place to stay, caters largely to transients, is drifting into a state of disrepair, affords clean rooms and sheets and it soon may be replaced by a parking lot.

The two-story stucco structure has been home to numerous oil field workers and drifters who have spent time in this oil town and then moved on. The inside of the hotel is no less plain than the outside.

The rooms are small and the niceties of life are few.

HOWEVER, TO THE estimated 18 men who now live in this downtown building, the Griffin Hotel is home. But the hotel site may become a city parking lot if community development plans take shape as planned, according to civic officials.

At which time, the oil field workers and those who go down to the Texas Employment Commission to do day's work for cash wages will have to seek housing elsewhere.

"It's mostly transients who who live here," said Roy Klootwyk, manager of the hotel.

LEONARD ELLERMAN, 39, an oil well servicing company employee, sat at the foot of the stairs inside the hotel. He was staring across the street, toward the Ector County Courthouse.

"I've lived here since March 1966," he said Monday. "I pay $21 per week rent. A man could work anywhere if he wants to."

He said he does not know where he will live if the hotel becomes a parking lot.

Klootwyk said he's flexible about where home is.

"I've been here off and on since 1974. My home is where I hang my hat, and I ain't got no home."

Confronted with the prospect that by May 30 the Griffin Hotel may become a city parking lot, he said, "Well, whatever they want to do is fine with me. You know, this building is old. It's got about 20 rooms. It's always been a place men like us can come to."

"I'LL TELL YOU WHAT," he said after a pause. "If walls could talk, these walls could tell some kind of stories."

Those stories would involve fights, threats and various other escapades, he said.

"I've been threatened three or four times," said Klootwyk.

The building is leased to Katie Gaither of Odessa.

"There's just a bunch of rough-necks who stay there," said Klootwyk. "You can imagine why they called Rev. Virgil Gaither the 'fighting minister,'" he said of Mrs. Gaither's husband.

WHEN TOLD THE hotel may become a parking lot, Mrs. Gaither replied, "My Lord, I wouldn't know where they're (tenants) going to go or what they're going to do. You just live one day at a time."

Klootwyk described the hotel as a "firetrap."

"It's just old. If they tear the place down, I'll either go back to Nevada or move into another hotel," he said. "I wouldn't be surprised if many of these men were running or hiding from somebody. You know, we all are."

Jack Dillard, director of housing and community development for Odessa, said plans for phasing out the Griffin are moving ahead.

"There is a sum of money — $255,000 — set aside to do some land acquisition and redevelopment downtown," he said.

THE CITY SET aside $225,000, and the New Town Committee is expected to come up with another $30,000 to do the work, Dillard explained.

"The priority of the New Town Committee is to provide some parking spaces downtown with some greenery," he said. "Both the northeast and northwest corner of Fourth Street and Grant Avenue are included in this program."

Dillard said the city must have taken "significant steps" in following through the redevelopment plan by May 30, the end of the year for federal community development funding.

Rick Miller, manager of the Odessa Chamber of Commerce, said the redevelopment aim is to provide added parking spaces.

"We're going to provide parking for downtown areas so that people who shop downtown or who use facilities such as the courthouse can have a place to park."

ROY ELSNER, OWNER of the Griffin Hotel, indicated he was amicable to the plans.

"What's good for Odessa is good for me. If the city needs the property, I'll sell it to them."

He said the hotel has been "reasonably priced for men who work. They come and go. They have clean beds. It's not a flophouse."

However, he acknowledged he has stopped repairs of such aspects as electrical wiring work "since we found out the city is interested in buying it."

When asked where the men who live in the Griffin Hotel will go, he said, "There are the Branton, Powell and Central hotels. These are small residential hotels for men. They are inexpensive. Most of the men who work and live in such places are itinerant who work one place and then move on."

PAT GOODEN, CHAIRMAN of the New Town Committee, which was appointed by the Odessa City Council, said, "The goal is long-term parking. Right now there is a shortage of downtown parking space."

He said the first priority of the community development program is to alleviate the parking situation. The second priority, he said, is to take some vacant buildings and clear them away to make room for more parking spaces.

"We're trying to do the most efficient thing for downtown Odessa," he said.

Asked where the men of the Griffin Hotel will live should the hotel be razed for parking, Gooden said, "I'm sure those guys have other places to live."

But where those other places are, "that I wouldn't know," said Gooden.

Vietnam says it held off Chinese armor attacks

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam claimed its troops were holding fast on the northwest corridor to Hanoi and inflicted heavy casualties on the invaders at the other end of the frontier. Radio Hanoi said the Vietnamese withstood a Chinese armored and infantry attack from three directions Monday in the Cam Duong area, on the Red River south of the provincial capital of Lao Cai and about 150 miles northwest of Hanoi. The broadcast said the Vietnamese counter-attacked and killed 1,400 Chinese around Cam Duong, but that fighting continued in the area. Cam Duong and Lao Cai, reported captured by the Chinese last week, are in the Red River Valley, the strategic water, rail and highway corridor leading to Hanoi. In coastal Quang Ninh province at the other end of the 450-mile-long border, Vietnamese forces intercepted and killed a large number of Chinese troops over the weekend west of Mong Cai village and near the Bac Luan bridge, the broadcast said. No figures were given, but Hanoi has claimed its troops have killed more than 16,000 Chinese since Peking invaded Feb. 17. Intelligence sources consider the kill count inflated. China has not given casualty figures. But in one of its few reports on the war the official Hsinhua news agency said today that a Chinese unit was cited for "meritorious service, second class for the timely completion of a pontoon bridge across the Binh Giang River under heavy enemy fire" Feb. 20 near the county seat of Phuc Hoa, in Cao Bang province about 110 miles northeast of Hanoi. Hsinhua also said the first thing its troops do when entering evacuated Vietnamese villages is sweep streets, clean houses and feed livestock. The report, carried Monday by the Hong Kong Communist newspaper Wen Wei Po, seemed aimed at countering Vietnamese charges of Chinese atrocities in the invasion. An intelligence source in Bangkok said the Chinese moved one division Monday into Quang Ninh province east of Lang Son, the Vietnamese border city that has guarded the invasion routes from China for centuries, and that the Vietnamese reinforced their border command with two battalions in the Lang Son area. Bangkok analysts believe the Chinese may already have begun a major push around Lang Son, 80 miles north of Hanoi. But the Chinese have been quoted as saying they have no intention of trying to seize the Vietnamese capital. China invaded with the declared aim of punishing Vietnam for border provocations. But analysts believe the Chinese also wanted to draw Vietnamese troops away from Cambodia where they have been battling guerrillas loyal to the ousted pro-Peking regime of Pol Pot since Hanoi invaded Dec. 25. China's senior vice premier, Teng Hsiao-ping, said in an interview Monday he "wholeheartedly welcomed" a draft resolution reportedly being readied for the U.N. Security Council today calling for a withdrawal of Chinese troops from Vietnam and of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia, Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Peking.

Israel rejects invitation to attend summit talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli Cabinet today rejected an American invitation for Prime Minister Menachem Begin to attend a Camp David summit meeting without President Anwar Sadat of Egypt. Begin said last week's Camp David talks produced no progress and accused the Egyptians of hardening their position. The Israeli decision indicated serious problems for the American effort to mediate a Mideast peace between Israel and Egypt. "The Cabinet decided that the prime minister is not in a position to accept the proposed meeting with Prime Minister (Mustafa) Khalil," Begin said after the Cabinet meeting. The vote against Begin going was 14-2. Begin said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan had reported to the Cabinet on President Carter's proposal that Begin and Khalil meet at Camp David with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. Dayan had returned from five days of talks at Camp David with Khalil. "It is now evident to the Cabinet that in those talks no progress was made toward an Israeli-Egyptian agreement," Begin said. "On the contrary, a more extreme position was presented by the Egyptian delegation." In Washington, a U.S. official who asked not to be identified said, "We're waiting to hear the reason or explanation before making a public comment."

represent Egypt since both he and Begin are prime ministers. White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters in Washington that Khalil "has been given, and has had, the full authority to negotiate and conclude a peace treaty." The State Department denied an Egyptian report that Khalil and Dayan had agreed on treaty provisions covering the chief issue blocking a peace agreement: future arrangements for the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. "The report of agreement was published in the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram which said its information came from Khalil during a stop in London en route from Washington to Cairo. "No agreement has been reached," a State Department spokesman said. "We have been in touch with Dr. Khalil in London, who has denied saying any such thing." Al Ahram also reported that Khalil submitted a memorandum to Dayan and Vance requesting the adoption of five "urgent steps concerning Jewish settlements, public freedom, measures undertaken by the Israeli occupation authority and the necessity of reducing Israeli military forces in the cities of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip."

Department were seen as part of the administration's concern about stability in the area following the upheaval in Iran. Meanwhile, the New York Times reported in today's editions that the United States was recently turned down by Saudi Arabia in a bid to set up an American military presence in the Persian Gulf. "We talked to the Saudis about a number of ideas, including the establishment of a base in the area, but they quickly turned us down," an unidentified defense aide told the newspaper. A State Department spokeswoman had no comment on the report. The Times also said other moderate Arab countries were somewhat hesitant of entering into new forms of military cooperation with the United States. Egyptian and Saudi leaders, however, were said to be interested in getting additional U.S. arms.

Police close KKK exhibit

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Klansmen and four men in Nazi uniforms shouting "white power, white power" confronted an opposing crowd yelling "Ku Klux Klan — scum of the land," forcing police to close an exhibit of Klan paraphernalia at the public library. More than 20 police officers moved into the tiny auditorium of the Forsyth County Public Library when the heated shouting match erupted 45 minutes after the one-day exhibit opened Monday night. At least five people were escorted from the auditorium by officers. Police said two people were charged with disorderly conduct. There were contradicting reports on whether blows were exchanged in the packed auditorium, but officers were jostled in the shoving between opposing groups. Nearly 200 people, about evenly divided between black and white, had crowded into the windowless hall to look at the display of Klan robes, publications and other items. The crowd was quiet until a white man who identified himself to a reporter as David Burt of the National United Workers Organization shouted: "What we ought to do is rip this stuff off the wall. The Ku Klux Klan is a damned trick to set black against white." More yelling erupted and the four men in Nazi uniforms appeared and began shouting "white power." One of the men in a Nazi uniform, who would not give his name, said he and his friends were members of "the regional unit of the National Socialist White People's Party based in Arlington (Va.)." The shouting and shoving continued as the opposing factions were herded out of the library, but officers separated both sides and the crowd quickly dispersed. "Our purpose was to shut it down," said Burt, when asked if he intentionally tried to start a confrontation. "We didn't feel like they (klansmen) had any right to put out that poison." Burt described his organization as "a militant organization of workers" based in Chicago. He said about eight members of the group were at the exhibit. "I'm astonished, that's all I can say," said library director William Roberts III, who had approved the exhibit. Library board members criticized his decision, but Roberts said the exhibit was a matter of free speech and that any community group would have access to the library. Library board members toured the exhibit, organized by the local chapter of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, before it opened. They ordered removal of a pamphlet containing a speech by Louisiana Klan leader David Duke that read in part: "Fifty of our great countries are again under the heel of the Negro and the state of North Carolina is in his clutches." Vernon Logan, a Klan member who organized the exhibit, said the display was designed to show white history and culture and to counteract the image of a violent Klan. "This is not as bad as it ought to be," local NAACP president Patrick Hairston said before the shouting erupted. "They ought to show all the horrors, have some corpses in here with ropes around their necks." Hairston and several other members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had picketed the library during the day to protest the exhibit.

U.S. may beef up military in Middle East countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is discussing the possibility of upgrading its military presence in the Middle East with friendly countries in that area, the State Department says. However, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said Monday such an expansion would not include the stationing of troops or the establishment of military bases in the Mideast. Carter declined to name the countries the United States has been consulting with. But he suggested that Defense Secretary Harold R. Brown visited some of them on his recent Mideast visit. Brown stopped in Israel, Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Egypt. While refusing to say what form an enhanced military presence might take, Carter left open as possibilities an expanded naval force in the Persian Gulf area and stepped up joint military exercises involving the United States and local armed forces. "The latest comments by the State

Department were seen as part of the administration's concern about stability in the area following the upheaval in Iran. Meanwhile, the New York Times reported in today's editions that the United States was recently turned down by Saudi Arabia in a bid to set up an American military presence in the Persian Gulf. ## Sister free after arrest

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — President Carter's sister, Gloria Spann, is free on personal recognizance bond after being charged with illegal harmonica playing. "Obviously I have less talent than I thought," Mrs. Spann said Monday night. She, her husband, Walter, and two other persons were arrested Saturday night at the McWaffle restaurant, said Americus police. "I am charged with: 'Defendant was playing a harmonica. When asked to stop playing music refused to do so and kept on playing,'" Mrs. Spann said in a telephone interview from her Plains, Ga., home.

Sugar prices may be hiked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is considering new increases in sugar prices even though government actions have already forced up consumer sugar prices by almost 10 percent in the last year. The House Agriculture Committee arranged to hear testimony today and Wednesday from members of Congress, industry executives and consumer groups on legislation to increase prices to U.S. cane and sugar-beet growers and processors. Administration officials will present their proposal Thursday. Many of the nation's 14,000 growers and processors say that without some relief they will be forced out of business because they can't make ends meet. Under one proposal already introduced, farmers' guaranteed prices would be raised enough to increase the retail price of a 5-pound bag of sugar by more than a penny this year and almost a nickel in early 1980. Growers also would get a federal subsidy, which probably would not be passed on, of up to three-tenths of a cent per pound.

A sensible proposal

The manner in which the federal government disperses the job of managing those natural resources held in public trust has defied organizational logic for as long as anyone can remember.

Administrative responsibility for water resources, for instance, is split among the Army Corps of Engineers, the Agriculture Department's Soil Conservation Service, and the Department of Interior's Bureau of Land Reclamation.

The oceans and the atmosphere are the joint responsibility of the Departments of Commerce and Interior.

The Departments of Agriculture and Interior share responsibility for the administration of public lands.

Yes, it's a crazy-quilt pattern which hampers efforts by Congress and the White House to formulate consistent resource-management policy.

It follows, then, that the Carter administration's tentative decision to reorganize these functions under a single agency makes sense.

The new agency would be known as the Department of Natural Resources and it would replace the existing Department of the Interior.

Such a firm proposal undoubtedly would bring on considerable controversy within the bureaucracy.

It should be recognized also that it would perpetuate the Interior Department's in-house policy squabbles between the developers and conservationists. But it is likely that these disputes best could be resolved in accordance with a balanced resource-management policy administered by one cabinet-level agency.

The White House Office of Management and Budget and the president's reorganization task force recommended this new structure following an extensive, year-long study.

It remains now for President Carter himself and the Congress to draw the appropriate conclusions from the staff work at hand.

It will be interesting to observe developments in this particular regard. Such changes don't come easy in big government, regardless of how practical or how badly needed.

'I WANT TO WARN YOU RUSSIANS...'

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Embassy warned of armed attack

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Less than a year ago, the American Embassy in Afghanistan received an explicit warning from a terrorist group that there would be an "armed attack ... on American citizens in Kabul."

In the confused political situation at the time the credentials of the particular terrorist group were not immediately apparent. But the self-styled "Peoples Sacrifice Guerrillas" were clearly a murderous, pro-Mao, pro-Palestinian splinter group.

At any rate, the warning was taken seriously by the State Department's regional security office in the Afghan capital, and a stringent list of security precautions was issued to all embassy and related personnel in Kabul. Many of the suggested security measures involved the use of automobiles by Americans in Kabul's streets.

Apparently, as the months went by, both the spirit and the letter of the precautions came to be ignored. Ambassador Adolph "Spike" Dubs was in an unescorted car with a chauffeur, but no bodyguards, when he was kidnapped off a Kabul street on Feb. 14 by armed terrorists. He died a few hours later when Afghan security forces stormed the downtown hotel room where Dubs' captors had holed up.

It is not clear yet whether Dubs' kidnappers had any connection with the Peoples Sacrifice Guerrillas. But it is a fact that the warning letter received last March was alarming enough to cause the Afghans to station armed guards near American offices and residences.

And the letter, the contents of which we have obtained from confidential sources, was high on the agenda of a closed, top-level meeting of American civilian and military security people in neighboring Iran.

The terrorists' message read in part:

"The Organization of the Peoples Sacrifice Guerrillas, by supporting the Palestinian movement ... delivers this ultimatum to the authorities of America in Kabul: WARNING:

"Pursuant to the multisided combat by the Peoples Sacrifice Guerrillas through the world for the purpose of backing up the PLO movement, all agents of the Organization unanimously regard the military assistance of America to Israel for merciless murdering of the Palestinians as an entirely inhuman policy ..."

The letter goes on to say that Israel's ability to follow a policy of "eradication" of the Palestinians is "the result of all the military assistance of America."

By way of "condemning this dirty policy of America," the terrorists made this explicit threat: "Warning to the authorities of America in Kabul: effective Hamal 10, 1357, corresponding to March 30, 1978, the U.S. information center in Kabul should be closed down as a sign of friendship to the Organization of the Peoples Sacrifice Guerrillas. Otherwise the armed attack of the members of the Organization ... shall begin as of this date on the American citizens in Kabul. THIS IS OUR ULTIMATUM."

An Afghanistan-based American source told our associate Les Whitten the embassy moved quickly to alert Americans in Kabul to the danger. A

HEMISPHERE REPORT: The U.S. stands to lose in troubled Nicaragua

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

No matter which side wins in Nicaragua, the United States stands to lose.

If the fragmented, Marxist-led opposition triumphs, it will be able to brag that it beat the tyrant that the United States supported, Gen. Anastasio Somoza Debayle.

If Somoza manages to retain power, he will be in a position to boast that he survived despite the worst the Carter administration could do him, short of military intervention.

Paradoxically, neither would be stretching the truth. For the United States long backed the Somoza family. In the 1930s, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt is said to have said that "Somoza is an SOB — but he is our SOB."

The president was referring to the father of the current president of Nicaragua. The elder Somoza was assassinated in 1956 and succeeded by his son, Luis. After Luis died, two other men, both considered Somoza puppets, held the office, until the current Somoza was elected in 1967.

Figuratively speaking, at least, FDR was right. And the United States has given Nicaragua a certain amount of support, often grudgingly, but support nevertheless, over the years, in return for favors that Nicaragua has done the United States.

Of course, if he survives, Tachito Somoza will be able to point out that barefaced U.S. efforts to force him to resign, to leave the country, taking his family with him, and to put the government in the hands of a caretaker, antedate Washington's similar campaign against the shah of Iran.

Somoza, though, resisted the U.S. pressures presumably for the same reasons, now so obvious, that the shah should have objected.

Really, Somoza has no choice, if one is to believe what his harshest critics say, that the Somoza family owns part, at least, of everything profitable in Nicaragua. If Somoza's opponents are telling the truth, the dictator's wealth and future are invested in his Central American homeland.

But whatever may have been Somoza's reasons for braving Washington's wrath, what has happened to the shah and Iran in recent months and weeks suggests how shortsighted is the strategic thinking of the current U.S. government.

Of course, the Carter administration has been able to shift the blame for the tragic events in Iran to alleged intelligence failures.

But Nicaragua is not Iran. No one has to rely on the Central Intelligence Agency to determine the thinking of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, the Marxist organization that heads most of the violent opposition to Somoza. Sandinista leaders broadcast their views frequently over the Cuban Communist propaganda station, Radio Havana. And they have started publishing a monthly magazine, Gaceta Sandinista, which reportedly can be obtained in Panama and the Dominican Republic, at least.

The Sandinistas make no secret of the fact that they are Marxist in ideology and that, while their immediate goals are elimination of Somoza, "Somozism," and the National Guard, which is Nicaragua's combination army and police force, they hope to impose Soviet- or Cuban-style socialism on the country.

In an interview with "Commander Modesto," whose real name was given as Henry Ruiz, Gaceta Sandinista made it clear that while "the local bourgeoisie is playing a positive role in the confrontation with Somoza ... (it) is in a way unaware of the revolutionary creature it is creating."

That suggests that the Sandinistas may be thinking of a post-revolutionary purge along the lines of that which Fidel Castro carried out in Cuba once he gained power.

Months ago, Tomas Borge, one of the founders of the Sandinista movement, declared in an interview with the Cuban Communist news agency, Prensa Latina, that a Sandinista triumph in Nicaragua would have revolutionary repercussions throughout Central America.

That is why credence is given reports that the other military-dominated governments of Central America are seriously considering coordination of their anti-subversive campaigns.

Mark Russell says

Sunday, Feb. 18, 1979 — a day that will live in infamy. Americans, sleeping in on a Sunday morning, awoke to the warlike headlines and began asking each other — "Vietnam? Where's that?"

Are you getting the picture? Mr. Teng has driven his army into Vietnam and of course wants our help. And we thought he loved us for ourselves.

All that warmth, all that hand-shaking while he was here — and all the time he only wanted our military support. Love is cruel.

Vietnam II is sure to snap us out of our soft-underbelly, passive, sob-sister, pusillanous, pussyfooting, weak-kneed lethargy. And President Carter, growing in the office, will certainly be more resolute in his indecision.

It's time for America to take charge again. Time to be once again the world's policeman. Instead of what we've been — the world's meter maid.

Volunteer military

The all-volunteer military is in the public eye more so than usual these days, due to troubled, warlike conditions existing in various parts of the world.

And the Pentagon's failure to meet recruiting quotas for all four military services during the fourth quarter last year is a further disturbing factor.

Until now, substantial increases in both enlistment bonuses and recruiting advertising have enabled the services to keep their noses above water, but just barely.

Even so, their supposedly encouraging statistics are misleading. Wash-out rates for first term enlistees range up to 40 percent. And some special-skill categories, such as that for physicians, are chronically unfilled. Moreover, reserve and national guard units are badly under-strength.

The figures for active duty recruits enlisted during the last three months of 1978 disclose shortfalls ranging from five percent for the Air Force to 15 percent for the Navy.

Granted, the inability to meet quotas for a single quarter hardly is definitive proof that the all-volunteer policy has failed. But considered together with the chronic deficiencies already documented and directly attributable to the reliance on voluntary enlistments, this latest recruiting deficit is indeed worrisome. Should it continue for any length of time, the readiness and combat capability of essential units could be seriously affected.

The time to conduct a comprehensive congressional review of the all-volunteer military is before, not after, present deficiencies have crippled this nation's armed forces. The time for such a study very definitely has arrived.

INSIDE REPORT:

Friction deepens between Brzezinski and Shulman

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Deepening friction between Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, and Marshall Shulman, the State Department's Soviet expert, is shrouding policy toward communist Russia in contradictions that deeply trouble major American allies.

"It's making my skin crawl," one administration policymaker told us in describing what he called the Brzezinski-Shulman "hatred." Hatred is surely too strong a word. Nevertheless, the two former intellectual adversaries from Columbia University have been on a descending curve of policy conflict and personal relations ever since Carter entered the White House.

The result has been Carter's dizzying on-again, off-again wavering toward Moscow: hard-line, soft-line, no-line.

Brzezinski, with total access to the Oval Office, pushes his hard line demanding that the Soviet Union be held to account for its worldwide offensive.

Shulman, 11 years Brzezinski's senior, at 62 is the oldest aide brought to Washington by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. He refuses to react to Soviet depredations in Asia, Africa and the Far East, advising Vance that SALT II and bilateral U.S.-Soviet relations are all that matter.

A strong president with convictions of his own about handling the Soviets could quickly resolve the conflict and force feuding ministers to comply or quit. Carter's inability to do that has astonished foreign leaders from Western Europe, Japan, communist China and elsewhere.

Evans

"Where should I go to find out what America's policy is?" a major European foreign policy leader, here on a recent fact-finding mission, privately asked a State Department official. The reply was totally unsatisfactory.

But the U.S. humiliation in Iran, plus undisguised ridicule of America's inability to protect its embassies or its ambassadors, could change Carter. He could be forced over to the Brzezinski way, at the expense of the Shulman way.

Political developments on Capitol Hill are also relentlessly pushing Carter. Republican leaders, appalled at U.S. reverses, are opening a major campaign to compel Carter to explain his policy toward the Soviets. The more he and his top aides explain, the more public the Brzezinski-Shulman split must become. In the current political mood, Brzezinski's relatively hard line would win hands down in Congress.

Carter will find it difficult to continue not to choose between the two conflicting methods of treating a Soviet Union that is clearly on the offensive. The alternative is further decline in U.S. standing abroad.

As Vance's top adviser on dealing with the Russians, Shulman succeeded many illustrious diplomats, including Averell Harriman, Llewellyn Thompson and Charles (Chip) Bohlen. Each was a veteran of personal confrontations with the Kremlin's leadership. In contrast, Shulman never had held a top policy job; his experience with the Soviet leadership was on an academic level.

Brzezinski and Shulman, as contradictory in temperament as in attitudes toward Moscow, had a long history of disputation over the U.S. and Russia that friends of both insist was conducted with professional courtesy at Columbia and, before that, at Harvard. Shulman was the expert on internal Soviet affairs; Brzezinski the expert on the Soviet world role, its regional political goals and the postwar expansion of its military capabilities.

Once arrived here, however, Brzezinski had the far more prestigious position. But his access to the president did not give him a decisive edge over Shulman in the power struggle.

On the contrary, Shulman often has prevailed, thanks to Vance's unflinching support and Carter's unwillingness to overrule his secretary of state.

A case in point, which we mentioned recently, was Shulman's veto of a stiff U.S. rebuke to Moscow for inflammatory anti-American Soviet broadcasts into Iran during the revolution. The Iran "working group," composed of mid-level diplomats, unanimously recommended the rebuke; Vance upheld Shulman's decision not to affront the Kremlin.

Stark new evidence of America's decline and the fears it has unleashed among U.S. allies would seem to require a Brzezinski-Shulman showdown. Without it, Carter cannot begin to persuade his allies that he really knows how he wants to deal with Moscow.

memo of March 27, 1978 listed specific precautions, including the avoidance of back streets, not traveling alone or in a set pattern, escorting children to school, and keeping a sharp eye out for suspicious cars or other surveillance.

But when March 30 passed and no attacks materialized, the Afghan security guards were withdrawn and the Americans began to relax their security measures. This situation continued even after a shaky, leftwing junta with little popular support seized power with the backing of the Soviet Union and its military "advisers."

A State Department spokesman professed ignorance of the terrorists' threat of last March. Publicly, the U.S. government has been claiming it had no reason to consider Kabul a post of maximum danger.

Footnote: In marked contrast to the Americans' casual attitude, the Soviets clearly have little faith in the efficiency or dependability of their Afghan puppets. Soviet officials never venture onto the streets of Kabul without armed security escorts.

WATCH ON WASTE: In its search for lighting fixtures that will conserve electricity, the Department of Energy has been groping around in the dark and burning up taxpayers' money in the process.

After investing $750,000 in a project designed to find a substitute for the common incandescent lightbulb, the DOE let the contract expire last September without ever having developed a marketable product.

Now the department has awarded another contract — $150,000 this time — to develop a fluorescent replacement for the incandescent bulb. Fluorescent fixtures use half the amount of electricity that incandescent ones do.

But the problem with fluorescent bulbs, the DOE explained to our reporter Jill Hendrickson, is that they are top-heavy, cannot be dimmed and don't fit all household fixtures. A new more sophisticated generation of fluorescent bulbs was to be developed.

Fine and dandy. What the government's supposed energy experts didn't know, however, was that more sophisticated fluorescent bulbs already were being sold nationwide.

Had they done a little scouting around, the DOE bureaucrats could have discovered a company called Killerwatt, which supplies such fluorescent bulbs to chain stores across the country.

Sweepstakes: 'A matter of luck'

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Open the mailbox and pull out a dream: An income for life...No purchase necessary...You may be a winner already....

Sweepstakes offer the prospect of instant wealth — and the opportunity to buy something, usually at a reduced price. Their number is growing and this is the time of the year when you can expect to get at least one of the tantalizing packages.

"They always come after Christmas," said Noble Jones, head of the Cleveland office of the Federal Trade Commission.

Down in the fine print, you'll probably discover that your chance of winning the big prize is only one in a million or more. You have nothing to lose — except the price of a stamp — but it is really worth the effort to send the card back?

State official criticizes CETA

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Omar Harvey said today the federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act manpower program in Texas "is not clean and nobody here would tell you it is clean."

Harvey, director of the Texas Department of Community Affairs, which makes CETA grants and monitors them, was interviewed after presenting his budget request to a House subcommittee.

Standing by was Hadi Mahrous, head of the department's fiscal division.

Harvey said he was centralizing audit functions and intended to have auditors "take a good hard look at those 1,200 contractors we've got out there," including about 200 with CETA grants.

"We are going to start with programs that don't have good priorities. After getting the financial thing in tow, we are going to go out and see if we are getting any program. We are going to see if we are getting dollars received in the grassroots where they are intended to be received," Harvey said.

Bomb squad officer injured as priest's package explodes

MILWAUKEE (AP) — An explosive device, mailed in a book to a Roman Catholic priest who edits a Croatian-language publication, injured a member of a police bomb squad when it exploded outside a parochial school.

Detective George Timm, 49, who was bending over the bomb Monday after the school's 156 students were held to safety, lost part of a finger and received cuts that required several hours of surgery.

The Rev. Timothy Majic said he had never been threatened before, but that the bomb could have been the work of Yugoslavian Communists.

The incident "couldn't happen in Yugoslavia because they open all the mail," he said wryly.

Timm was listed in satisfactory condition in a local hospital. Two other bomb squad members nearby escaped injury. Police said property damage was negligible.

Maybe. "It's just a matter of luck," said Betty Glass, director of sweepstakes for Reader's Digest. "The odds are probably no worse than in the state lotteries," said Jones.

A sweepstakes is a game of chance in connection with the sale of a commodity. There is no skill involved. You do not have to buy the product being offered; if a purchase is required, the sweepstakes becomes a lottery and a separate set of laws applies.

There are no figures available on the number of sweepstakes conducted throughout the country because they fall under state rather than federal law. In New York State, the number of sweepstakes registered with the secretary of state went from 136 in 1973 to 382 last year, an increase of almost 200 percent. And industry spokesmen say that the state figures reflect the national trend.

Jones said the relaxation of anti-gambling laws in some areas has helped boost interest in sweepstakes. So has a change in morality. "There's acceptance from a societal point of view," he said.

The games run by supermarkets and gas stations differ slightly from the sweepstakes offers you get in the mail, Jones said. Those games are designed to get you into the store rather than promote a product. They continue over a period of time, during which you collect numbers, symbols or letters.

With a sweepstakes, you simply mail your entry and wait to see if you've won. In many cases, winning numbers are pre-selected with the aid of a computer; in other instances, winners are picked in a random drawing after all the entries are in.

The odds against winning the big prize are huge. You have only one chance in 17½ million of getting the $116,000 grand prize in the current Reader's Digest sweepstakes, for example. The odds of winning the minimum $5 prize from Reader's Digest are one in 450.

There is a similar spread in odds in state-run lotteries. A $1 ticket in the New York State Lottery's "slot machine" instant game, for example, gives you one chance in 504,000 to win the top prize — $10,000 plus the potential for more money. You have a one in four chance, however, of winning the minimum — another $1 ticket.

Mrs. Glass said that the Digest has awarded over 944,000 prizes worth more than $14.5 million since 1962. Statistically, she said, there have been enough prizes for one in every 82 households in the country to have won something.

Steven Stark, vice president of Publishers Clearing House, a major sweepstakes operator, said the "overwhelming majority" of entrants do not make a purchase. "The majority of major winners have not been purchasers," he added.

What if the person who has the winning number doesn't mail it in? Sweepstakes operators are required to place all non-winning entries in a pool; winners of leftover prizes are drawn from the pool.

If most entrants don't buy, why do companies bother — especially with the rising cost of postage? The answer — and the reason that sweepstakes are most popular with magazines — lies in advertising. Stark said that the rates for advertising, on which the magazines make their money, depend on paid circulation. Giving out free samples would confuse paid circulation figures so that method of promotion is out.

"Sweepstakes are a promotion device which works and is acceptable," said Stark.

Sweepstakes operators will not disclose how much they spend, how many entries they receive or how much new business they get. "That's classified," said Mrs. Glass.

Magazines are not the only ones who use sweepstakes, of course. The Police Athletic League in New York City, for example, is running a sweepstakes. "It's a change of pace way of conducting a solicitation," said Nev Gehman, PAL's director of development.

Laws regulating sweepstakes vary widely from state to state. New York has one of the toughest and, since most major sweepstakes operators want to include the New York market in their mailings, they follow the state rules. Among the requirements: registration of all sweepstakes with prizes totaling over $5,000; posting of a bond equal to the amount of the prizes, and filing of a list of winners after the promotion ends.

The FTC handles sweepstakes complaints in connection with its role as a monitor of deceptive advertising. A 1970 commission complaint, for example, led Reader's Digest to agree to some changes in the way it conducted sweepstakes.

South Yemen claims control of three border communities

ADEN, South Yemen (AP) — The Marxist government of South Yemen claimed capture of the three North Yemeni towns on their border and expressed willingness to accept Arab mediation in the five-day-old border war with its pro-Western neighbor.

The government of Democratic Yemen reiterates its readiness to respond to any call by any sisterly Arab state, addressed to both parties, or by the Arab League, for an ending of the state of war," the Foreign Ministry said.

The rival Yemeni states accused each other of starting the latest in the 10-year-old string of border wars. North Yemen asked for an urgent meeting of the 22-member Arab League, and reports from Cairo said the League would send an investigating committee to the border area in the southwest corner of the Arabian Peninsula.

South Yemen officials said fighting continued following the capture of Harib, 100 miles south-east of the North Yemeni capital, San'a. South Yemen claimed earlier that its forces captured the two other towns just inside the North Yemeni border, Qatabah, about 50 miles north of the South Yemeni capital, Aden, and El Beida, about 60 miles east of Qatabah.

Both North and South Yemen dispatched envoys to various Arab capitals to plead their cause.

The official Iraqi news agency said envoys from Presidents Hafez Assad of Syria and Ahmed Hassan Al Bakr of Iraq would fly to Aden and San'a on Wednesday to try to end the fighting.

The two Yemenis consider themselves one nation split by the British colonial occupation of South Yemen. But attempts to unite since South Yemen became independent in 1967 have been blocked by the irreconcilable differences between the Marxist South and the still semi-feudal, conservative North.

The incident "couldn't happen in Yugoslavia because they open all the mail," he said wryly.

Timm was listed in satisfactory condition in a local hospital. Two other bomb squad members nearby escaped injury. Police said property damage was negligible.

Investigators said the bomb was mailed to Majic in a hollowed-out book. They said the device's detonator exploded, but not other explosive matter believed to have been in the package.

Majic, 64, pastor of Sacred Heart Church since 1967, is a member of the Croatian National Congress. He said his parish is about 60 percent Croatian-American.

The mailing, he said, may have been linked to his work as editor of The Morning Star, a newspaper published in Chicago and which sympathizes with Croatian wishes for independence from Yugoslavia.

...Belly dancing is an excellent way to exercise and enjoy yourself at the same time.

According to Laura Klauss, Mid-Eastern dance instructor at the Central and Alamo YMCAs, during her first year of lessons, she lost three inches in her waist. She had taken quite a bit of Yoga and wanted to get into an exercise program that wasn't exceptionally strenuous, so she decided to try belly dancing.

After her first class and seeing her teacher, Betty Sterzing, dance, Laura decided it was for her. "Betty's great dancing ability and the mystical flowing movements made me determined to stick with it until I learned the basics."

This was in 1973, and six years later, Laura is offering classes at the Y's.

"People in the United States have a great misconception of what belly dancing is. It is not burlesque or something you can learn in five easy lessons. It is an art form, like ballet, but any woman without previous dance experience can learn the movements and dance steps. You can probably learn the basics in four months, but then it takes months to perfect them, become graceful and put your dance together.

"Belly dancing is a wonderfully creative exercise form that improves coordination, posture, balance and makes you feel attractive and feminine. It will also give you a more positive attitude about yourself," said Laura.

Laura has attending workshops throughout Texas and New Mexico with famous professional dancers from New York to California. She has taken workshops from two of the most famous "male" belly dancers in the U.S. and says they usually have a female partner, and their movements resemble flamenco dancing. "There is nothing feminine about male dancers; their dance is a folk, ethnic form of dance and is exciting and very masculine."

But the main reason for taking belly dancing, said Laura, is that the man in your life will love you for it.

For more information on belly dance classes, contact Anna Garcia at the Central YMCA at 800 N. Big Spring St. or call 682-2551.

Windpipe operation set for choking baby

TORONTO (AP) — Doctors at the Hospital for Sick Children are operating today on 7-month-old Herbert Quinones Jr. of New York City to correct a windpipe defect causing choking spells that threaten his life.

The baby's parents brought him to Toronto Saturday for the operation to relieve pressure on his windpipe, a surgical technique perfected by Dr. Robert Filler, chief of surgery at the children's hospital.

Herbie's father, 21-year-old Herbert Quinones, told a news conference his son was a premature baby who had his first attack at home one day after his mother had fed him and put him to bed.

"It's scary to see him turn blue like that ... she had to resuscitate him," he said. "I can't take it. When I see him having an attack I have to leave the room, but my wife is stronger than me."

Herbie has already had one major operation at a Brooklyn hospital, to close a gap in his gullet to give a clear passage from his mouth to his stomach.

People of Toronto have contributed more than $10,000 to pay for the care of the baby and for his parents' stay in Toronto. Hospital charges of $475 a day will reach nearly $10,000 if the baby is kept there for three weeks as expected.

Dr. Filler, who is not charging for the operation, says he has performed it on six other babies and all but one have done well. A graduate of Harvard Medical School, he came to the Toronto hospital from the Boston Children's Hospital a year ago.

DEAR ABBY
She read lots in bed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a married man, 24, with questions in mind about my bride of less than six months. We married after a whirlwind courtship of 10 weeks. Our courtship included some heavy romantic sessions, but we never actually went all the way because Marie (not her real name) insisted that she was saving herself for her wedding night.

Marie claims that I am her first lover, but since our marriage her actions have led me to believe otherwise. I have had only three other women in my life, but my bride has taught me more about lovemaking than I dreamed existed! It just doesn't seem possible that she had no previous experience.

I'm not complaining, but it is hard for me to believe that I am her first. I don't want to insult her, but I would like to know the truth. How do I find out? L. IN DENTON, TEXAS.

DEAR L.: Enjoy your good fortune and quit wondering. Maybe Marie has just done a lot of reading. In bed.

DEAR ABBY: About young girls who ask for brassieres when they have nothing (or very little) to put in them: Years ago when I visited my daughter at summer camp, she asked me to please send her some brassieres. I told her she really didn't need any.

Then she told me that some of the boys looked through the armholes of the girls' sleeveless summer dresses. I told her the brassieres would be in the mail the next day. And they were!

About two years later my gardener, who had two motherless daughters, told me that his eldest (9) asked him for a brassiere and he laughed at her. I told him my daughter's story. Then he understood — MRS. D. IN LYNBROOK, N.Y.

Leasing good alternative to buying

COLLEGE STATION—Leasing may offer an economical and practical alternative to buying, says Nancy Granovsky, family resource management specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

However, consumers need to carefully compare the costs of buying with cash, buying on credit, and leasing, she recommends.

The Consumer Leasing Act requires leasing companies to tell the consumer the facts about the cost and terms of their contract before the consumer agrees to the lease.

Whenever a consumer rents a car, furniture, appliance or any other personal property for more than four months, and it is for personal, family or household use, the consumer should get a written statement of the cost and terms of the leasing.

Use these questions to compare the costs of leasing personal property:

1) How much is any advance payment, such as a security deposit?

2) How much are the regular payments? How many regular payments are there, and when are they due? What is the total amount of those payments?
3) What are the costs for any license, registration, taxes, and/or other fees such as maintenance?

4) What kind of insurance is required?
5) What are the terms of the warranty?
6) Who is responsible for maintaining and servicing the property? What standards for reasonable wear and tear have the leasing company set?

7) What is the penalty for default or late payment?
8) How may the lease be cancelled? Are there any charges for cancelling the lease?
9) Is the option to buy available? If so, when and at what price?

Workshop planned for parents of special education children

With parents in mind, a free workshop designed and sponsored by the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens will be presented Saturday in the Tall City at Trinity Presbyterian Church.

The workshop is for parents whose child is in special education, regardless whether the child is mentally retarded, according to Paul E. Sueltenfuss, executive director of MARC.

The critical points to be covered concerning the handicapped child's education include what does the law guarantee, how education goals are planned, what to do if you (the parents) disagree with the school and who to turn to for answers.

Session I will be held beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday with a sign-in coffee. This portion of the workshop is designed for parents whose child attends junior high through high school.

Session II will begin at 1:15 p.m. Saturday and is for parents of children in Early Childhood, elementary schools and the Cerebral Palsy Center.

Workshop presenters will be Sueltenfuss; Janet Kirkpatrick, a member of the MARC Educational Committee and the parent of a child in special education; Hu Schmidt, special education coordinator for the Midland Independent School District, and Kenneth Meiser of El Paso, president of the El Paso Association for Retarded Citizens and also a parent of a child in special education.

According to the Equal Education for All Handicapped Children Act

(P.L. 94-142), "...the purpose of this act is to assure that all handicapped children have available to them a free appropriate public education which emphasizes special education and related services designed to meet their unique need, to assure that the rights of the handicapped children and their parents or guardians are protected, to assist states and localities to provide for the education of all handicapped children and to assess and assure the effectiveness of efforts."

Woodcock's appointment confirmed

Leonard Woodcock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leonard Woodcock has survived Senate opposition to President Carter's China policies and will be installed soon as U.S. ambassador to Peking.

The Senate voted 82-9 Monday to confirm Woodcock as the first U.S. ambassador to the mainland since Chiang Kai-Shek fled with his armies to Taiwan and organized a government there in 1949.

Despite the vote, there is still significant congressional opposition to Carter's China policies and further moves are expected in both the House and Senate to guarantee Taiwan's security.

A Taiwan security bill approved by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was scheduled for Senate debate next Monday.

A similar measure was expected to clear the House Foreign Affairs Committee today.

At issue is whether the United States should pledge a specific military response if China threatens Taiwan either militarily or economically.

Meanwhile, State Department officials said Monday night it was not clear whether Woodcock would fly to Peking in time for ceremonies Thursday marking formal opening of the U.S. embassy there.

If not, the United States will be represented by Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal, who is already in China.

Woodcock, former president of the United Auto Workers union, has headed the U.S. liaison office in Peking for two years.

He was in Detroit at the time of the vote and was to make a quick trip to Washington for a swearing in before flying to Peking sometime over the next several days.

All nine votes against Woodcock's nomination were cast by Republicans, including moderate Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland.

Mathias was among the leaders of a brief Republican protest to the administration's plans to go ahead with normalized relations with China in the midst of Peking's invasion of Vietnam.

"We should tell the Chinese they cannot make war and expect the new relationship (with the United States) to prosper," Mathias said on the Senate floor.

Another Senate opponent of the president, Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said, "To send an ambassador to Peking now seems the height of folly."

At one point, 29 of the 41 Republicans in the Senate voted for a motion to prevent consideration of Woodcock's nomination.

But not a single Democrat supported that effort and, after three hours of débate, opponents were unable to gather enough strength to turn the Woodcock nomination into a vehicle for raising the Taiwan security issue. Those who voted against Woodcock's confirmation said they were opposed to the president's policies, not Woodcock's qualifications to hold the post. A tougher fight on the China issue was predicted when the Taiwan bill reaches the floor.

You might recognize the face and the costume — but not associate them. Texas Senator John Tower dressed as Superman for a Dallas party. The event, sponsored by local businesses for area media representatives, was centered on a comic-strip character theme. Also present were other Texas politicians. (AP Laserphoto)

Residents making headway against effects of snow, rain

By The Associated Press

Streams and rivers in the rain-soaked Northeast are receding today, and Midwesterners are starting to make headway in efforts to dig out from under up to 2 feet of snow.

However, waters continued to rise along the Ohio River and some of its tributaries, posing threats of flooding to residents of low-lying areas. Oil City, Pa. was still flooded because of an ice jam where Oil Creek joins the Allegheny River.

The death toll from this week's snowstorm and flooding in the Midwest and the East climbed to at least nine Monday with three more fatalities. A Missouri man died while walking through snow; a Pennsylvania man was killed in a snow-related traffic accident; and the body of a Cincinnati man was found in a submerged car near the Ohio River.

In scattered areas of Pennsylvania, where families had been evacuated Monday, streams and creeks that overflowed their banks began receding Monday night, the National Weather Service reported.

The problem in southwestern Pennsylvania was snow. Half a foot fell Monday, slowing up a group of 14 Boy Scouts hiking through a mountainous area near Johnstown. They were rescued Monday night by volunteers using four-wheel drive vehicles and snowmobiles.

The Potomac River and other streams in the Washington area spilled over their banks Monday but were expected to begin receding today, the weather service said.

About 360 residents from an apartment complex in Laurel, Md., were evacuated Monday because of flooding but were permitted to return to their apartments later in the day.

In southern Illinois, where up to 2 feet of snow fell Sunday, stranding about 3,000 travelers, authorities hoped to reopen Interstate 57 today.

The snowstorm also struck hard in southeast Missouri, where about 210 residents of Circle City were evacuated Monday after a levee holding back waters of the swollen Castor River broke.

Captain responsible for collision, board says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal safety board says the captain of the Coast Guard cutter Cuyahoga was responsible for a Chesapeake Bay collision that killed 11 of the 29 men aboard his ship.

Board members said the captain, Chief Warrant Officer Donald K. Robinson, was "confused" and displayed "a total lack of perception" in the minutes before the Cuyahoga collided with the Argentine coal freighter Santa Cruz II last Oct. 20.

The 125-foot Cuyahoga was on a training cruise, on a clear night, when it suddenly turned left into the path of the 521-foot freighter and was run down. The cutter sank quickly. The larger ship was damaged only slightly.

The National Transportation Safety Board Monday listed three probable causes:

—The sudden left turn ordered by Robinson, "contrary to the rules of the nautical road," as the two vessels approached head-to-head. Had the turn not been executed, the board said the two ships would have passed at a distance of 600 yards.

—The failure of the cutter's captain "to determine the relative motion, course, speed or closest point of approach of the Santa Cruz II." Investigators said that from the time the two ships established radar contact 20 minutes before the crash, Robinson thought the freighter was a small fishing vessel moving in the same general direction as the Cuyahoga, and that the cutter was overtaking it.

—Failure of the cutter to initiate bridge-to-bridge communications by radiotelephone to exchange navigational information.

Robinson, stationed at Yorktown, Va., was not available for comment on the board report. The Coast Guard said it would have no comment because it is conducting its own separate investigation.

The accident occurred about 2½ minutes after the Cuyahoga made the sudden left turn, but the board said that was enough time for the cutter to have avoided the collision if it had heeded a single horn blast from the freighter. The signal indicated the Santa Cruz was maintaining its course and speed.

When the Cuyahoga did not respond to two such signals, the board said the freighter sounded a danger signal, alerting both ships to take what action they could to prevent a crash. The Santa Cruz II slowed its speed, and the cutter reversed its engines, stopping in front of the freighter.

The board said Robinson may not have been properly trained because he "misinterpreted the rules and signals and failed to evaluate the situation properly."

Board member Francis McAdams said, "The commanding officer of the Cuyahoga was in a great state of confusion for some time before the collision and he did nothing right to obviate this confusion."

The board also was critical of Coast Guard training procedures aboard the cutter, which was conducting an officer candidate course. It said Robinson may have been more involved in the training exercise than in navigation, partly because the ship was understaffed.

The board noted the lookout on the Cuyahoga was inexperienced and was standing his first watch after only his second day at sea. It said he did not know the meaning of the running lights on the Santa Cruz II, and that if he had and had accurately reported them, the collision might have been avoided.

Investigators said they were unable to question Robinson at length during hearings because he exercised his constitutional right not to testify at length.

As a result of its investigation, the safety board made several recommendations to the Coast Guard. Among them are the stationing sufficient experienced personnel and instructors aboard training vessels and a requirement that trainees not stand critical watches.

The deposed depot: Towns in West Texas discovering varied uses

McCAMEY — Like the old gray mare, the railroad ain't what it used to be.

Depots, especially in smaller towns and cities where ironhorse rarely stop anymore, are becoming extinct.

Radio is replacing the telegraph key. Passengers are taking to the air. And the highways are taking on more and more freight. So, too, are the rails.

The old Pecos Depot on the Texas & Pacific (now, Missouri Pacific) Railway line at Pecos was hauled to Odessa. Now, instead of waiting for the train to arrive, customers wait for their drinks. The "Pecos Depot" is a the donation, which the chamber had requested.

"We're real excited over that deal," she said. "We didn't want McCamey's (depot) to end up in Cucamonga." So, it's staying home.

Roylene Chandler smiles even though the old Santa Fe Railway depot at McCamey is going away. Actually, the abandoned depot will be moved from alongside the tracks to adjoin the Mendoza Trail Museum elsewhere in McCamey. Ms. Chandler is secretary-manager of the McCamey Chamber of Commerce, which was given the building and dock by the railway. The chamber will pay for the moving and cleanup. (Staff Photo) tavern attached to a restaurant, The Barn Door.

The abandoned depot at Stanton, also "passingly" served by the T&P (er, MoPac) was moved from the tracks and is being converted into offices for the Martin County Chamber of Commerce.

The old depot at Cooper, on the Southern Pacific line, is a museum. And the old Santa Fe Railway Co. depot at McCamey will be moved from its 52-year anchored site to Santa Fe Park. It'll be attached to the Mendoza Trail Museum by a breezeway. A depot it no longer will be; it'll be a museum.

The old oblong, sheet-rock sided building with the wooden shingles was given to the McCamey Chamber of Commerce by Santa Fe merely for the taking — literally.

"We felt just real lucky, real fortunate," said Roylene Chandler, secretary-manager of the chamber.

The chamber asked for it and got it.

It may not be the only problem, but one provision of the free-will gift is moving the depot and cleaning up and leveling the old site by March 15. And for that, the chamber needs $2,000 to hire a mover. Relief. Most of that has been raised.

Earlier this year, K.C. May, Plains (Amarillo) Division superintendent of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Co., notified Ms. Chandler of McCamey's Walter Campbell is on the prowl for a mover who'll relocate the old depot before the March 15 deadline. If not, Santa Fe — for the moving — again will give it away.

It's a matter of come and go, it seems.

In 1927, the depot was hauled by flatcar to McCamey and settled on piles. Back then, it was a two-story edifice serving a boom town that got its upstart in 1925, when wildcatter George B. McCamey brought in a discovery oil well in southwest Upton County and about three miles northwest of where the Orient (now, Santa Fe) line passes through what is now McCamey.

Thus, a townsite called McCamey came into being. A nearby town established earlier and named Crossett (after Minnie Crossett) flourished for awhile but was killed off by the bigger McCamey.

Due to the influx of oilfield workers, merchants, suppliers, drummers and hawkers, McCamey grew to a come-and-go population of 10,000. Since then, the town's population has dropped to a fourth of that.

And whoever back then, when the coming of the railroad often meant the survival of a town, would think that depots would be a thing of the past?

Once, they were right up there with the home, church and school in community importance.

Three cities to visit polls today

By The Associated Press

Chicago officials fear violence at the polls in a mayoral primary. Clevelanders vote on a plan for the city's financial recovery and the mayor of Kansas City tries for an unprecedented third term in elections today.

Democrats choose between incumbent Michael Bilandic and challenger Jane Byrne in Chicago where threats of violence marred the final days of the campaign.

"The heated campaigns and closeness of this mayoral primary may even spark some violence," said State's Attorney Bernard Carey. "A lot of precinct captains will panic because their (city patronage) jobs are threatened if they don't get out the vote."

Carey said Monday three Democratic precinct captains were arrested last week for threatening to break the legs of two women campaigning on behalf of an independent candidate for the city council. The three were released on $3,000 pending a hearing next month.

With polls showing the mayoral race a tossup, Mrs. Byrne, a commissioner under the late Mayor Richard Daley, said Monday Bilandic's supporters were "bullying" voters and threatening "political reprisals."

Bilandic was not immediately available for comment. Bilandic canceled last-minute campaigning to attend the funeral of his mother, 83-year-old Minnie Bilandic, who died Saturday.

Bilandic, 56, a lawyer, businessman and alderman, was appointed by the city council as acting mayor after Daley's death Dec. 20, 1977. He easily won a June 1978 special election to fill the remainder of Daley's sixth four-year term.

Mrs. Byrne, 43, was a Daley disciple, serving as his commissioner of consumer sales and co-chairman of the Cook County Democratic Central Committee.

She remained in her city post after Daley's death until Bilandic fired her after she publicly charged that he helped facilitate taxicab fare increases in violation of city laws. Investigations were conducted, but no charges have been brought.

On April 3, the winner of the Bilandic-Byrne race will face the winner of today's Republican primary between Wallace Johnson and Raymond Wardingley.

In Cleveland voters decide whether to raise payroll taxes and sell the municipal electric utility in an effort to pay the beleaguered city's debts.

The city, which defaulted on $14 million in notes held by six local banks in December, is struggling to maintain vital police, fire and sanitation services and to avert bankruptcy.

The Muni Light issue, however, has been the focus of the campaign.

In Kansas City, Mayor Charles Wheeler, trying for his third four-year term, faces his strongest challenge from three city councilmen.

Joel Pelofsky, Richard Berkley and Bruce Watkins claim to have the necessary experience and the innovative ideas to be choice replacements for Wheeler. Two other minor candidates are also in the race.

States may take reigns in water project plans

HOUSTON (AP)—The executive director of the Texas Water Resources Department believes cumbersome federal regulations will force states to take over the planning and construction of major water projects.

Charles E. Nemir, speaking Monday to a conference of the American Society of Civil Engineers, said two large Texas projects are now being delayed by federal regulations. They are Choke Canyon reservoir, west of Corpus Christi, and Palmetto Bend reservoir near Edna.

The Palmetto Bend project, he said, is now 90 percent complete and is being held up by a dispute between the Bureau of Reclamation and the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

Selling his prize-winning Red Angus steer to The Alamo National Bank of San Antonio at the 30th Annual Stock show held recently in San Antonio is John Jones, right, of Midland. Representing the bank in the purchase is Bill Perron, vice president of the bank's correspondent banking department.

Ex-employee now with PUC testifies in face of protests

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A former Texas Electric Service Co. engineer now employed at the Public Utility Commission testified about the company Monday over objections from a consumer group.

Robert T. Sweatman, commission engineering director, participated in the commission's six-month investigation of TESCO and its sister companies. He worked for the Fort Worth-based utility 10 years before joining the commission three years ago.

"His testimony is biased and prejudiced to the public interest," argued Geoffrey Gay, attorney for the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN).

John Bell, commission general counsel, defended Sweatman's ability to investigate and testify about questionable energy transactions by his former employer.

"We will fully admit that Mr. Sweatman used to work for TESCO," Bell said. "But I used to work for the city of Grand Prairie. I think it's completely irrelevant. We need to look to the merits of the testimony."

Commission chairman George Cowden dismissed Gay's objections.

The exchange began the second week of a hearing into energy-related transactions among companies in the Texas Utilities network.

TESCO, Dallas Power & Light and Texas Power & Light are the operating companies in the system, which also has independent fuel, generating, service and research affiliates.

Deals involving uranium, lignite and lignite power plants among the companies have been

Durable goods orders may indicate new trend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses ordered more steel, cars, ships and machinery last month, according to new government figures that are often viewed as an early sign of economic trends.

The Commerce Department said Monday that orders for durable goods or heavy-duty products climbed 4.1 percent, the largest increase since October. It was the second month in a row that the orders went up.

The two-month increase conflicted with other signs of slower economic growth, such as a drop in housing starts and sluggish figures on retail sales and personal income.

The durable goods figures reflect businesses' decisions about whether to stock up on products or start cutting back.

The administration wants the economy to grow more slowly in its fight against inflation but hopes to avoid a recession.

In other economic news Monday, Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller said the board's ability to use monetary policy to reduce inflation was being hurt because of a decline in the number of banks belonging to the Federal Reserve System.

Miller told the Senate Banking Committee that less than 72 percent of total deposits in commercial banks are held by reserve members.

He blamed the decline on the cost of belonging to the system and proposed having the federal government pay interest on banks' required reserves.

That solution brought a sharp reaction from Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., committee chairman, who said such a payment would be "the ripoff of the year."

"Talk about economic justice, talk about targeting scarce federal funds to those who really need it," Proxmire said.

Idaho Legislature attempts to block passage of measure

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The Idaho Legislature has rejected a proposed amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would give the District of Columbia voting representation in Congress.

And opponents of the district representation measure hope that the action they took Monday will block future consideration of the proposal.

Instead of voting on approval of the amendment itself, the Legislature passed a resolution telling Congress that Idaho rejected the proposed amendment.

Tom Stivers, R-Twin Falls, and Sen. Dane Watkins, R-Idaho Falls, argued that this should prevent the issue from coming up again. They based this on a controversy surrounding the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

Four of the 35 states that have approved ERA have tried to rescind their approval, but whether they can do that is still an unanswered question. The Constitution does not take such a move into account and the Justice Department says Congress will have to decide the question.

Idaho ratified ERA, but later rescinded its action.

"If Idaho can't rescind the ERA ratification, then I can't see how we can unreject this amendment," Stivers said.

Stivers and Watkins said the District of Columbia rejection should be considered in the same manner as the ERA ratification.

"We felt if we did this now we wouldn't be tied up for the next seven years with lobbyists trooping in every year trying to make us change our minds," Stivers said.

"That's what ERA supporters have done in Florida and Illinois. Every year they take it up again and again and it's the same old thing over and over."

The House rejected the D.C. amendment, 54-16, Monday. The Senate had approved the proposal earlier, 21-14.

Play penned by the Pope goes on Italian radio

ROME (AP) — "Nothing takes up more space on the surface of life than love, and nothing is more unknown and mysterious."

It is Adam speaking, a character in "The Jeweler's Shop," Pope John Paul II's 80-minute play about love, marriage, pain and hope. Published 19 years ago in a Polish magazine under the pseudonym Andrzej Jawien when the pope was 39 and a bishop, it will be given its first performance Thursday on Italy's state radio by a cast of leading Italian actors.

It is the first play by a pope since Enea Silvio Piccolomini, who became Pius II, wrote "History of Two Lovers" in 1464.

"The Jeweler's Shop," or "La Bottega dell' Orefice," has become a best-seller since the Vatican publishing house brought out an Italian translation. The Italian press calls it "the pope's love story."

Each of the three acts tells of a different couple and their love story:

—Teresa and Andrew, who experienced happiness until he is killed in the war.

—Anna and Stefan, whose marriage has gone on the rock.

—Christopher and Monica, children of the two couples, who marry but face an uncertain future because their parents' experiences weigh on them.

Another character is the jeweler, or goldsmith, a symbolic

Anna tells her husband's friend Adam: "I was fragile but full of passion. Isn't love perhaps a fact of the senses and of a certain atmosphere?"

"These elements come together and make two beings vibrate in a circle of sentiments — here is the simple truth."

"Not all," Adam replies. "Love is the synthesis of two existences that converge to a single point and become one."

The play is subtitled "Meditations on the Sacrament of Marriage that from Time to Time are Turned into Drama," and in this vein Adam tells Anna:

"Just this forces me to reflect on human love. Nothing takes up more space on the surface of life than love, and nothing is more unknown and mysterious. The difference between what is found on the surface, and that which is the mystery — that is the source of the drama. This is one of the great dramas of human existence."

A drama of unrequited love and betrayal unfolds in the second act, as Anna laments:

"Stefan apparently carried on in the same way, but not knowing how to heal the wound that was in my soul.

"He left me with the hidden wound, thinking perhaps: it will go away. "I fought for the love of Stefan, ready at any moment to withdraw if he didn't understand the sense of the struggle.

"But will I be able at the end to pardon him?"

"How tiring is this division between selfishness and unselfishness."

Here the pope weaves in the symbolism of the wedding ring. Anna goes to the jeweler to sell her ring because she feels her marriage is finished. He tells her the ring weighs nothing because her husband is still alive. There is no weight without the two rings together.

"It is a drama on the day-to-day lives of human beings," said one of the translators, Jerzy Pomianowski. "The author didn't select saints or historical figures as protagonists, but people of today.

"In this play dedicated to the sacrament of marriage, one is not speaking of sanctions imposed from outside, of the church as an institution. The only judge is man with his conscience."

The broadcast will be repeated on Sunday, and there is talk of giving it an Italian television production. There are also reports that a church group will stage it in Poland.

Strangest Mardi Gras ever goes on today

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — There'll be a street party in the French Quarter and a mock funeral in front of St. Louis Cathedral, but all the Mardi Gras parades are out in the suburbs.

Because of a police strike, today is the strangest Mardi Gras in 261 years of New Orleans history.

Also scheduled today was a resumption of talks between the city and the Teamsters-affiliated Police Association of Louisiana, which represents the 1,100 officers who have been on strike since Feb. 16.

Some of the bitterness engendered by the strike appeared Monday in a full-page newspaper advertisement in which all seven members of the City Council urged the union to hold a secret ballot to determine whether police want to continue their strike.

The ad referred to "Detroit Teamster tactics." City officials have repeatedly referred to Teamsters negotiator Joe Valenti of Detroit as an outside agitator. Valenti and other union officials could not be reached for comment, but picketers debunked the ad.

"What do we need a secret ballot for?" said a 3rd District officer, who asked not to be named. "The last time we took a voice vote, it was unanimous."

Several strikers ridiculed the idea that any officer might have felt intimidated into siding with the majority on the voice vote.

Regardless of the outcome of the negotiations and even though the street party was expected to attract thousands of carousers, some felt it was too late to salvage the heart of the boisterous Mardi Gras revelry.

"Everything is comparatively subdued," complained Larry Rich of Van Wert, Ohio, who has brought his clown suit and bulbous nose to Mardi Gras for each of the past five years.

"The freeloaders are here," he said. "The middle class who had vacations all set up and couldn't cancel out, they're here. But the well-heeled who usually come — I haven't seen them."

Hotels and restaurants haven't seen a lot of them, either.

The hotel-motel association said business was off over 25 percent on a day when rooms are normally impossible to find.

Bill would allow inmates to receive conjugal visits

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas prison inmates — married ones at least — could receive conjugal visits under a bill approved Monday night by the House Committee on Security and Sanctions.

Sheriff Raymond Frank of Austin said he allows prisoners in his jail to have such visits before they are transferred to the Texas Department of Corrections (TDC) in Huntsville.

Frank said the program has worked and predicted conjugal visits would improve the behavior and morale of prison inmates and reduce homosexual contacts.

A 6-2 vote sent the bill (HB388) by Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, to the House floor for debate.

While the prison system did not present testimony against the bill, committee Chairman Jimmie Edwards, D-Conroe, voted against it. Huntsville is in Edwards' district, and he often defends TDC policies and actions.

Hudson's bill would allow only married prisoners to receive conjugal visits, and the TDC could require proof of marriage.

The bill directs the department to adopt eligibility rules for conjugal visits and allows it to say where, when and under what circumstances a visit can take place.

Frank said about 30 prisoners in his jail have had conjugal visits with their wives before they were transferred to state prison.

"I would be for conjugal visits in the state penitentiary system. ... It keeps the family together. It boosts morale. Those guys in TDC work and they work damned hard. If they could get a conjugal visit every six months it would be beneficial for morale and for the TDC," Frank said.

He said his prisoners have pre-transfer conjugal visits either at the jail or in a motel or at their homes. Two guards go along, Frank said.

"We don't stand outside the bedroom door listening to what is going on. We stay outside the house and make sure he doesn't escape," Frank said.

In prison and in jail, Frank said, "anal and oral sodomy are rampant."

Conjugal visits "would cut down on that. I know it would," he testified.

Driver arrested

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Wisconsin man en route from El Paso, Texas, to Chicago with more than a dozen Mexicans has been charged with transporting illegal aliens across the border, authorities said.

Manuel Lopez, 24, of Milwaukee, was arrested Monday morning after his pickup truck was involved in an accident. Authorities said Lopez was carrying about 17 aliens. A woman in the group sustained minor injuries when the pickup overturned, police said.

A spokesman for the Shelby County Sheriff's department said 13 of the aliens were arrested and were held in the Shelby County jail. Officials with the U.S. Department of Immigration and Naturalization said four of the aliens fled after the accident.

Lopez appeared late Monday afternoon before U.S. Magistrate Aaron Brown Jr., who set a secured bond of $1,000. Lopez was still being held in the Shelby County jail late last night.

Despite charges, group gets its gambling license

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The New Jersey Casino Control Commission, rejecting charges that Resorts International Inc. has ties to organized crime, has given the company a permanent license for its Boardwalk casino.

"I have found no facts which suggest to me that this applicant is not qualified for licensure," Chairman Joseph Lordi said Monday shortly before the commission voted unanimously to grant the first permanent casino license on the East Coast.

"It would look like we're in business," said Resorts President I.G. "Jack" Davis Jr., whose Atlantic City casino, operating under a temporary license since opening last May, has become the most profitable in the world. "I think the commission has made a very fine ruling and it bodes very well for the industry."

"Casino gambling, and the myriad of business enterprises which arise from it, can now be developed in Atlantic City with full confidence in its future," said Resorts Chairman James Crosby.

The license allows Resorts to operate up to three casino hotels here. It must be renewed annually by the five-member commission, considered a formality, and can be revoked at any time with cause.

The vote came after seven weeks of hearings into charges by the Division of Gaming Enforcement of the state attorney general's office that Resorts officials had ties to organized crime, had associated with businessmen of questionable integrity and had mismanaged its casinos here and in the Bahamas.

The commission rejected several conditions to the license proposed by Commissioner Albert Merck, who said he was voting to grant the license.

Government in book business

By MIKE FEINSLBER

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one exactly planned it — and the Founding Fathers might have recoiled from the idea — but in a substantial way the government has become a patron of the loneliest art, the process of writing a book.

Ever more frequently books are being issued with an author's acknowledgement along these lines: "This book was made possible through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities" or "My thanks to the National Endowment for the Arts."

Just published is "Gritty Cities," a handsome book of photographs of the old industrial cities of the Northeast.

Also recently out is a $200, four-volume, 1,900-page, "Encyclopedia of Bioethics," which probes ethical questions raised by life-science technology.

In each case, the government subsidized these enterprises. Without government support, they probably would not have been undertaken.

And government officials say they are sensitive to the fear that they might create a collection of books reflecting any sort of official government "line." They stress that government financing does not mean interference, control or censorship.

Each year the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts put millions of dollars into underwriting authors. The NEA also subsidizes small literary magazines and the small presses where authors often first break into print.

When the humanities endowment asked its librarian, Jeannette Coletti, to round up all the books which resulted from NEH grants, she managed to find 839 of them.

AND IN Charlottesville, Va., historian Dumas Malone has been plugging away since 1943 on a six-volume biography of Thomas Jefferson.

Gaddis wrote his prize-winning novel, "JR," on an NEA grant.

Many government-backed books are studies with limited audiences and no profit potential: "The Relevance of Natural Science to Theology" or "Vietnamese Folk Poetry" or "Mark Twain's Letters to His Publisher, 1867-1894."

Inside the paperback cover of "Fear of Flying" is this description: "Erica Jong's gloriously wicked, sexy novel about the way things ought to be for a woman."

A few pages later, in her acknowledgements, Ms. Jong writes: "And thanks to the National Endowment for the Arts for a grant which helped."

MS. JONG received $5,000 from the NEA to meet her living expenses while she wrote the novel.

When it appeared, eyebrows were raised in Congress but the fuss was surprisingly short-lived.

Livingston Biddle Jr., chairman of the arts endowment, smiles away criticism. He says Ms. Jong earned so much in royalties and paid so much in taxes, "that the taxpayer got his money back."

Leonard Randolph, who ran the endowment's literature program since 1970, is more defensive about underwriting "Fear of Flying."

"I will go to my grave saying it was a damn good book," he says. "If a man had written it, no one would have said a word about the language."

BIDDLE SAYS THE endowment is careful to recognize that there is a risk of creating a body of government-sponsored literature, with judges shying away from supporting authors who can be counted on to bite their patron's hand.

He cites precautions. The panels which recommend awards are composed of people from outside the government and the applicants are asked to submit examples of their past writings (to prove their talent) but are not even asked for an outline of what they intend to produce under government funding. Ms. Jong won her grant on the strength of her poetry.

know. Writers here and there are beginning to wonder if they have — perhaps subliminally — been influenced."

Surely when the First Amendment was drafted, instructing the government to keep hands off those who write, no one expected that those who write would be lining up for government money.

BUT AT THE arts endowment, Biddle — who returned from driving an ambulance in World War II to spend 16 years in an attic, writing novels — says, "In my time it was not too difficult, if you had some talent, to find a publisher. Publishers were willing to take a risk."

"Today," he says, "either the government will provide writers with the time to see if they can make a career of it or our writers will simply have to earn a living doing something other than writing."

Plants, pictures better tools

LONDON (AP) — Potted plants, pictures, kind words and projects do more to improve children's grades and behavior than severe discipline, smaller schools or segregating by ability, a recent survey shows.

Furthermore, schools with good organization and praise for success have better teaching results than those with just a lot of cash, according to the report.

Karen Kennerly, executive secretary of the writers' organization PEN, says, "I don't know of anyone who has put in for a grant for a dicey book and not gotten it for that reason."

A New York writer and editor, contending that after 10 years it might be well to review government-author relations, says, "We really don't

Good luck, brains great go-togethers

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD Although it's better to have good luck than brains, you need enough brains to make the most of your luck. If this is a bit confused, so is the hand that proves the point.

Bridge hand analysis. South dealer, North-South vulnerable. Hand: ♠ 6 4 3, ♥ 3, ♦ A K Q 7, ♣ Q 10 9 5 2. West: ♠ Q 10 9 7, ♥ J 10 9 8, ♦ J 6 5, ♣ K 3. East: ♠ None, ♥ K Q 4 2, ♦ 10 9 8 3 2, ♣ A 8 7 4. South: ♠ A K J 8 5 2, ♥ A 7 6 5, ♦ 4, ♣ J 6. Opening lead: ♠ J.

If West, playing for Iceland in the 1963 European Championships, had led a club, the defenders would have taken three or four tricks. But West, counting on two trump tricks, made his "safest" opening lead.

CROSSRUFF South, playing for Poland, took the ace of hearts, ruffed a heart in dummy, cashed three diamonds to discard the clubs and ruffed a club. He then ruffed another heart in dummy, another club in his hand and his last heart with dummy's last trump.

Declarer had thus taken the first nine tricks, and he and West now held four trumps each. Declarer led a club from dummy and ruffed with the eight of spades.

West could overuff but then had to lead from Q-10-7 of trumps to South's A-K-J, giving the Polish expert the last three tricks and his slam.

When good luck knocks, a clever man opens the door.

Department of Transportation urges drivers to join car-pools

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Double up America! That's the message the Department of Transportation is trying to get across in its campaign to persuade drivers to join car-pools.

Surveys by the Department of Transportation show that just under 73 million people went to work by vehicle — public and private — every day last year. Almost three-fourths of the commuters — 52.3 million people — drove to and from the job alone.

"If you assume the vehicles, on the average, are four-passenger, each has three empty seats," said Ed O'Hara, a department spokesman. "That's over 156 million empty seats. Realistically, you couldn't put people together in car-pools that would use up all the seats. But assume 50 percent of the seats could be filled with people living and working in the same area. That would be 78 million seats. We don't have 78 million people to put in those seats."

O'Hara conceded that carpooling can mean inconvenience. "Some people might have to walk several blocks," he said. O'Hara also conceded that filling even 50 percent of the empty seats is an unrealistic goal. Supporters of carpool programs say they think that in normal times — when there is no gasoline shortage — the number of people sharing rides could be boosted by only 5 percent.

What would happen if the times were not normal? No one knows for sure. But, notes O'Hara, "There's a tremendous capacity out there."

Individuals who are willing to put up with a little inconvenience can save hundreds of dollars a year by carpooling. The Federal Highway Administration calculated last year that the annual cost of commuting to work, alone, in a subcompact car with a daily round-trip of 20 miles was $500. And that doesn't count parking. If you team up with someone else, alternating the driving chores, you can cut your annual commuting cost to $276, a saving of almost 45 percent. Form a four-person carpool and you save nearly 70 percent. You also may qualify for a discount on your auto insurance if you join a carpool since you will be driving less. And you may get a break from traffic; some areas have set aside special highway lanes for use only by vehicles carrying more than one person.

Easter Seal bowling marathon scheduled

The Easter Seal "Help Strike Out Handicaps" bowling marathon will begin at midnight Saturday at Air Park Lanes.

The marathon to help the physically handicapped in Texas is open to bowlers of all ages. Participants in teams of five will recruit and collect pledges in advance. Sponsors pledge donations for each two-hour segment of the team bowls.

There is no registration fee for the event, but team members should bring their collected pledge money and sponsor forms to the event Saturday night, according to marathon organizer Randy Isenburg.

Prizes will be awarded for team efforts at the end of the event Sunday. The marathon is jointly sponsored by the Texas Easter Seal Society, Air Park Lanes and an area radio station. Since its beginning in 1929, the Texas Easter Seal Society has served the physically handicapped by furnishing equipment, therapy, evaluation and travel. Last year alone, the society spent $4.3 million helping 13,166 handicapped Texans. This year, the society will spend even more, and it is only through the continued support of the contributing public that the services can be provided, society spokesmen said. More information about the event may be obtained at Air Park Lanes.

High blood pressure is generally not a problem in itself, but it can lead to severe problems later. Over the years, untreated high blood pressure can cause your heart to enlarge. A greatly enlarged heart finds it harder to keep up with the body's demands on it. Also, the arterioles, in reaction to the increased pressure on them, are more likely to become hard and scarred.'. 'Dear Mr. S.: Part of the answer lies in the fact that these are karate "experts." Someone not trained in the art who attempted the same feat (no pun intended) could be injured severely.'. 'Dr. Michael D. Roback, a California orthopedic surgeon who has trained in karate, reports a remarkably small number of injuries among karate experts who have been practicing the art for 15 years or more. He notes, however, that his survey may be imprecise since an injury can only be recorded when the patient acknowledges it exists. And, Dr. Roback indicates, those engaging in karate can shrug off injuries that other athletes would consider rather formidable.'. 'Perhaps even more significant, however, are studies of various population groups which suggest a link between food and cancer. For example, people who normally have diets high in fat show much higher rates of breast cancer and cancer of the colon and pancreas. Some of these findings have been supported by laboratory studies of animals. Until more specific information becomes available, many experts are suggesting that the Prudent Diet recommended by the American Heart Assn. to reduce the risk of heart attack, might also be of value in helping prevent cancer. This is a diet lower in calories, fats, and cholesterol than the average diet in the United States, and includes plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. A varied diet with a plentiful supply of nutrients appears to be the best all around. If you would like to read more about this type'.

Mustangs want cage mania to spread

DALLAS (AP) — Russ Potts wants "Mustang Mania" to sweep the Southern Methodist basketball program next year before the National Basketball Association moves into the Dallas market.

Potts, the energetic athletic director whose promotions are fast becoming legend in the Southwest after his move from Maryland, says it is imperative for SMU to be competitive in the tough Southwest Conference before pro basketball arrives in the new Reunion Arena probably by 1981.

And Potts has put Coach Sonny Allen on notice that he wants SMU battling for the championship next year.

Potts said Monday he has given Allen, who has had three losing seasons in four years, more money to recruit, permission to hire another assistant coach, and a promise to remodel Allen's office.

In return, Potts wants an exciting team that brings the fans to the game like the football team did last fall.

"I said that I have been concerned about the SMU basketball situation," Potts said of a weekend meeting with Allen. "I do not envision SMU competing for sixth place in the Southwest Conference every year and I don't believe that this will be the case."

"He (Allen) has proven his ability by winning a national championship at Old Dominion," said Potts.

"Coach Allen has been given an expanded budget to accomplish" the goals of becoming competitive. His recruiting budget has been increased, he will be able to add another coach to his staff, and there will be a greater emphasis in basketball next year with an increase in advertising and promotion.

Asked his version of a "competitive" team, Potts said: "The kind of a situation I envision would be like the Texas Tech at Texas game a few weeks ago on television. I want us to still be in the race with a month to go next year."

Potts said SMU would like to play several games a year in the under construction Reunion Arena.

"I'd like to play Texas A&M in there and draw 15,000 or 16,000 people for a $150,000 payday," said Potts. "I believe in my heart we can do that."

SMU averaged 6,000 fans per game and Potts said it was "critical" that the basketball program make money.

A recent big recruiting splash in football has had the season ticket applications pouring into the SMU office. The Mustangs have received some 750 applications since last week.

"Our goal in football is about 10,000 season tickets," said Potts. "We had about 5,000 season ticket holders last year when we averaged 52,000 per game."

Potts said he didn't feel that the rumors Allen would be fired should hurt the Mustang basketball recruiting.

"Heck, somebody started the rumor that SMU was going to be put on football probation and look what (Coach) Ron Meyer did anyway," said Potts.

Fred Howard, Chicago White Sox rookie pitcher, found himself kicking in the outfield at Allyn Field in Sarasota, Fla., Monday in order to keep loose and warm as temperatures plummeted to the low 60s. That was the plight

Lee girls zero in on playoffs

By BOB DILLON
Sports Writer

ABILENE - Midland Lee's girls hope to clinch the Class AAAA bi-district basketball championship tonight at McMurry College when they take on the R.L. Turner Lions.

Lee takes 28-7 record into the game while Turner has a 24-7 reading on the year and the only common opponent has been Arlington High. Turner beat the Colts by one point and Lee beat them by 12.

Lee Coach Shirley Stephenson is highly optimistic about her team's chances tonight. "We played at Abilene Christian last year and tonight it will be at McMurry, the same site of the regional this weekend," said Stephenson. "I do know that Richland drew a first round bye, just like we did last year, and has already qualified for the tournament this year and has a good outfit. Amarillo High and El Paso Parkland most likely will be two of the others teams, but I'm not sure about the Fort Worth area team."

Starting for Lee tonight will be Deborah Kittle, a 5-foot-8 senior; Deborah Ledbetter, 5-8 senior; Dee Dee Poole, 5-6 senior; Leshia Watkins, 5-9 junior and Gale Wilson, a 5-9 sophomore. Wilson and Watkins were in the double figures last week when the Rebels beat Midland High, 47-32, for the District 5-4A championship.

Lee went to the regional finals at ACU last year and lost to Parkland in overtime and Stephenson feels like this time around, with the year of experience, that her girls have a good chance of going to Austin to the state tourney.

Other members of the team include Patty Adams, Gloria Bowers, Jan Carnes, Melissa Oestmann, Tanna

Parrish, Lynette Taylor and Judy Taylor.

Tip-off for tonight's game between the Rebels and Lions is 8 p.m. on the McMurry College campus with the winners returning here Friday and Saturday for the regional tourney.

Stephenson has done a great job for two seasons, getting her girls into the state playoffs the only two years that the Tall City team has been playing varsity basketball.

Lee won the second half of the District 5-4A race outright with a perfect 7-0 reading while Coach Jane Young's Midland High girls tied Abilene for the first half crown with a 6-1 record. Midland polished off Abilene in a playoff for the first half title and then Lee turned around and won at Midland College last Thursday to gain the playoffs for the second straight year. Lee also beat Midland, 43-23, in the second half of the race and lost to the Bulldogs, 43-40, in the first half so the Rebs are currently on an eight-game winning streak.

Stephenson is optimistic about next year's team, but right now, is zeroed in on winning tonight and working towards a trip to Austin.

Former Nuggets coach eyes Memphis State

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Larry Brown, former coach of the Denver Nuggets of the National Basketball Association, is the first candidate to be interviewed for the basketball coaching job at Memphis State University.

"I'm not looking at the job as a stepping stone," Brown, 38, said after he met with MSU officials Monday afternoon.

Sycamores regain top poll berth

NEW YORK (AP) — Indiana State, having completed its first undefeated regular season, regained the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press college basketball poll today, easily outdistancing runnerup Notre Dame.

The Sycamores, 26-0 and ranked second last week, collected 51 of 61 first-place ballots and 1,192 points in balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Indiana State, which beat Drake 76-68 last Tuesday night and crushed Wichita State 109-84 in its first appearance on national television Sunday, was named on all the ballots although the Sycamores were ranked as low as seventh by one voter.

The Irish, ranked third last week, received seven first-place votes and 1,150 points. UCLA, top-ranked last week but upset by Washington 69-68 Thursday night and extended to triple overtime in a 110-102 victory over Washington State Saturday, collected two first-place votes and 1,060 points while slipping to No. 3.

The remainder of last week's Top 10 engaged in a game of musical chairs.

Michigan State, No. 7 last week, jumped to No. 4 with the remaining first-place vote and 988 points. The Spartans posted victories over Big Ten Conference rivals Purdue and Illinois last week.

Preseason favorite Duke moved from No. 6 into the No. 5 position with 914 points following a 47-40 victory over North Carolina and a 70-49 loss to Clemson. Syracuse, eighth last week, jumped two notches to sixth with 897 points — 18 more than North Carolina, No. 4 last week.

Louisiana State, upset by Mississippi State last Saturday, dropped from No. 5 to No. 8 with 851 points, while Arkansas and Marquette swapped the final two positions in the Top 10. The Razorbacks moved from No. 10 to No. 9 with 712 points, while the Warriors, No. 9 last week, were 10th this week with 521 points.

Iowa headed the Second 10, followed by Temple, Louisville, Texas, DePaul, Georgetown, Ohio State, Detroit, Purdue and San Francisco.

San Francisco, making its second appearance in the Top 20 this season, was the only newcomer to the poll this week. The Dons replaced Vanderbilt, which was ranked 19th last week but dropped out after losing to Tennessee and Kentucky.

Syracuse survives double dose

By The Associated Press

Way back in December, the Syracuse Orangemen took their only lumps of the season — a double dose, in fact.

"They could have gotten down," said Coach Jim Boeheim. "They lost two games in a Christmas tournament. But they worked hard and improved with every game, and they've put together what I think is a tremendous streak."

Since the two losses in the Kentucky Invitational, the Orangemen have been unbeatable. And their winning streak reached 18 games Monday night with a 92-60 decision over Le-moynie College, a game that Boeheim considered an excellent good tuneup for post-season play.

"I was very happy with their play," said Boeheim. "In fact, it was a little too tough."

The nation's sixth-ranked team improved its record to 24-2, the winningest regular season in Syracuse history, going into Wednesday's ECAC playoff game against St. Bonaventure.

Second-ranked Notre Dame, just about certain to get an invitation to the NCAA playoffs next Sunday, also had a tuneup with an 89-72 romp over East Carolina.

Louis Orr scored 17 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to spearhead the Syracuse victory. Jene Gray of Le-moyne finished with a game-high 28 points.

Bill Laimbeer scored 17 points and grabbed 13 rebounds to pace Notre Dame over East Carolina. The Irish rolled to a big early lead and won handsily.

"A lot of our players played more than they usually do tonight," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps. "We want everybody to be in top shape for this weekend's games."

The Irish close out their regular season with games against DePaul and Michigan Friday and Sunday.

In other action, La Salle, Delaware, Drexel and West Chester won their first-round games as the East Coast Conference playoffs opened Monday night.

Ken Luck scored 27 points to lead Delaware past Rider 72-70. Drexel defeated American University 66-55 as Bob Stephens scored 16 points and grabbed 15 rebounds. Dave Jungers collected his 1,000th point in a 22-point night as West Chester defeated Le-high 68-65. Michael Brooks and Mo Connolly had 21, leading La Salle over Hofstra 84-77.

Elsewhere, Sammy Drummer's career-high 37 points led Georgia Tech over Campbell College 83-61. Lester Wright scored 21 points to pace Florida Southern over Rollins in the finals of the Sunshine State tourney.

Slippery Rock eyes crowd

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Imagine 100,000 spectators at a Slippery Rock-Shippensburg college football game.

Sound unbelievable? Maybe, but it could happen next season in Ann Arbor.

Don Canham, the University of Michigan's promotion-minded athletic director, has arranged for the two small Pennsylvania state college rivals to meet at the 101,701-seat Michigan Stadium on Sept. 29.

The Michigan Wolverines will be at California that day.

Canham set up the small college matchup as the feature of Band Day — which had become difficult to stage in recent years because the demand for season tickets forced the university to invite fewer and fewer bands.

Last year there was a Band Day when Michigan was on the road.

Canham said he expects a crowd of 60,000 for the Slippery Rock-Shippensburg Band Day game, but refuses to rule out 100,000.

"We drew 92,000 for a pro exhibition game and Michigan regularly averages over 104,000 people for each of its home games," Canham said. "So we can't sell this interesting attraction short."

Slippery Rock has been a favorite with Michigan fans for the last two decades ever since the public address announcer Steve Filipiak began announcing the school's football scores during Michigan games.

Shippensburg may feel more like the visitor to the stadium because of attachment to Slippery Rock at Michigan.

"I cannot imagine not having a tremendous reception for this game by fans in this area," Canham said. "College football, regardless of division, is a tremendous spectacle, and bringing two of the better known small college teams in the nation will provide an exposure that is not usually offered."

Canham worked out the arrangements with Robert Raymond and William Corman, the athletic directors of Slippery Rock and Shippensburg.

Expenses for both teams, including air travel and room and board in Ann Arbor, will be guaranteed by the Michigan athletic department, Canham said. In addition, Shippensburg will be reimbursed for the revenue it would have received had the game been played there as originally scheduled.

Lon Hinkle leads PGA money list

PONTE VERDE BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Lon Hinkle, who earned $27,000 for his second-place finish in the Los Angeles Open last weekend, took over the lead on the Professional Golfers Association Tour money list this season with $96,538, the PGA announced Monday.

Fuzzy Zoeller, who held the top spot last week, slipped to second with $92,545, while Lanny Wadkins, winner of the Los Angeles Open and a $45,000 playoff, jumped into third place with $61,677.

Andy Bean was fourth with $58,370 — $270 more than Mark Hayes.

Bruce Lietzke was sixth with $56,302 followed by Hubert Green with $54,887; John Mahaffey with $51,882; Lee Trevino with $45,964; and Tom Watson with $41,242.

Cold winds can't stop Jane Blalock

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Although it numbed her hands and chilled her bones, the cold, gusty wind that tormented other golfers couldn't stop Jane Blalock's hot shooting in the $75,000 LPGA Orange Blossom Classic.

Blalock shot a 70 in the tournament's final round Monday to finish with a tournament-record 205 that gave her a 6-stroke victory.

Blalock's 11-under-par total made her the second player to win the tournament two straight years in its 26-year history. Kathy Whitworth won the event in 1968, '69 and '70.

Blalock bested Amy Alcott's 9-under-par total in 1975 on the par-72, 6,109-yard Pasadena Golf Club course. Blalock picked up the first prize of $11,250.

The final round was postponed Sunday because of heavy rains and winds. The winds kicked up again soon after the start of play Monday. But Blalock, who began the day with a 3-stroke lead, added to that quickly with birdies on three of the first five holes.

"I really got out of the gate today. That helped a lot," Blalock said. "My hands started getting numb and cold. The wind was cold and damp."

But the wind's effects on her were negligible.

"I don't like to play in the wind, but I guess nobody does. I've learned to drill the ball low into the wind and I also tend to play more aggressively because I like the challenge," Blalock said.

"I've practiced a lot in the wind. What's important is that I don't fear it," she said.

Sandra Post shot a 70 Monday to finish second at 211, earning $7,500. JoAnne Carner shot a final-round 68 for 213 that tied her with Pat Bradley for third and the $5,400 third prize.

Post eagled the ninth hole, but Blalock said she didn't let thoughts of a Post challenge bother her.

"I looked at the board and told myself to just think of it as being me against the course," she said.

"Jane is a good wind player and has too much experience, so realistically I was playing for second place today," Post said.

"I was six behind going into today, and still six behind even after the eagle," she said. "Second place isn't too painful."

Silvia Bertolacci began the day in second place after a record-tying performance in the second round, but shot a 76 to finish tied for fifth at 214 with Laura Baugh, Judy Rankin and Alice Miller.

Rankin, a Midlander, earned $2,635 for her fifth place tie.

Bertolacci tied a Ladies Professional Golf Association record Saturday with a 29 on the front nine. On the 10th hole Monday, she tried to hit her second shot out of the edge of a water trap, couldn't, and had to take a drop. Her double bogey six dropped her out of a tie for second.

Blalock, who had a 2-stroke victory here last year with a 4-under score, said, "Every golf course has a personality, and I can relate to this golf course. It has a great variety of holes. I think I used every club in my bag during the tournament. We get along well," she said.

Jane Blalock is all smiles as she walks off the 18th green of the Pasadena Golf Club Monday a winner of the LPGA Orange Blossom Classic in St. Petersburg, Fla. She set a tournament record with a 205. (AP Laserphoto)

DeBartolo forgets offer for Oakland

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "In my opinion, there is no question that major league baseball would go — and go big — in the Superdome in New Orleans." But the team that might play there won't be the Oakland A's, says Vincent J. Bartimo.

Bartimo, a spokesman for shopping mall magnate Edward DeBartolo, said Monday that Charles O. Finley was unable to get his A's released from their lease in the Oakland Coliseum, so DeBartolo has withdrawn his $13 million offer for the team.

"I want to wish Mr. Finley and the Oakland Coliseum officials well, but in my opinion they are in a no-win situation," said Bartimo, who is DeBartolo's troubleshooter in professional sports holdings.

"In my opinion, the public isn't going to support a team that has told the world it doesn't want to play there," said Bartimo, who is also president and general manager of the Louisiana Downs race track and of the Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League.

He noted that only about 540,000 people had come to see the A's play last season.

Bartimo said the talks were extended to Feb. 21 at Finley's request, but virtually nothing has happened since.

"He asked us if we wouldn't change our mind and buy and stay in Oakland," Bartimo said. "I said we appreciate the sentiment, but we are looking for a franchise to move to New Orleans."

The team's lease with the Coliseum has nine years to go.

Bartimo said that although the Coliseum commitment was known when talks with Finley began, he and DeBartolo were led to believe that the team could get out.

"The only reason the DeBartolo Corp. went public with the $13 million figure was that when we entered into these negotiations ... we had been given assurance that the $13 million would buy the club and get it to New Orleans."

"Obviously, that team isn't worth $9 million — in my opinion," he said. "The rest of the money was for the Coliseum."

DeBartolo had rejected offers to buy three other teams because they also could not be moved, Bartimo said. However, he said, DeBartolo still hopes to get a team in time for the 1980 season.

Bryant disciples control Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Charley Thornton, Bear Bryant's assistant athletic director at Alabama the past 15 years, feels confident the University of Miami athletic program he will head has a bright future with another Bryant disciple, Howard Schnellenberger, as head football coach.

Thornton, 43, said he had been mulling the job offer since he heard from U-M Vice President Dr. John L. Green in early January, but wasn't sure until he talked it over with Bryant.

"The key thing was when I went to talk to Coach Bryant when he was in the hospital with his broken ribs (suffered in a shower fall). I knew Howard from Alabama, but I wanted to know what Coach Bryant thought of it. I wanted to hear it from my man — Coach Bryant," Thornton said.

"He gave him just the highest compliments you can have," he said. "I believe in him, and he thinks Howard Schnellenberger is about as good a man as you can have as football coach."

Schnellenberger played for Bryant at the University of Kentucky and was Bryant's quarterback coach for five years beginning in 1961. Schnellenberger also was head coach of the Baltimore Colts for a little over a year.

Thornton comes from the nation's champion football team to a program that had its best record in four years with a 6-5 finish in 1978. While Alabama football tickets are a state treasure, the Hurricanes rarely can fill just half the Orange Bowl.

Thornton said he's well aware of the program's struggles, but said, "I don't know that I have at this time anything to say of consequence. I'd rather study the situation some more."

"I really don't have any problems. I look at it more as an opportunity than as a challenge. I think we've got a really good future, or I wouldn't have come here," Thornton said.

Thornton, part of an effort at Alabama that raised the previously ignored school basketball program to success, comes to a school that dropped basketball several years ago because of financial problems.

"My feelings are that in time certainly we have to reinstitute basketball here. We have to have a facility on campus before we can have a successful program."

"I'm looking forward to that day, but the bottom line is that the football team has to be successful and attract people," Thornton said.

Thornton, a graduate of Arkansas State, spent several years as Alabama's sports information director, worked one year as executive assistant to the director of the NCAA, and was assistant athletic director at Tulane.

College coaches yield illegal shopping stories

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Tom Osborne knows of a high school football star who was once offered $10,000 cash.

But Freddy Akers of Texas can top that one, and UCLA's Terry Donahue tells an illegal recruiting story that puts them all in the shade.

"The most exorbitant illegal offer I ever heard of was $10,000 cash," said Osborne of Nebraska. "The second best, or worst, was $5,000 cash. Neither of those kids ended up going to the schools that supposedly made the offers."

Osborne and several other top college football coaches were asked to list the most bizarre illegal recruiting inducements they ever heard about. The coaches, along with more than 50 sportswriters, were in Kansas City for an NCAA-sponsored college football seminar.

"I've heard of sums considerably more than $10,000," said Akers, whose home state of Texas is annually the battleground of some of the most epic recruiting wars in the nation.

"I've also heard of kids being offered cars and real estate deals," said Akers. "There are a lot of devious people out there. But I think some of those stories get greatly exaggerated, too."

Bo Rein's favorite illegal recruiting story supposedly took place in a motel room.

"A kid had signed a conference letter of intent," said the North Carolina State coach. "I heard a representative of another school in that same conference laid many ... and I mean MANY one-hundred dollar bills out on a bed and told the kid, 'We'll get you a lawyer to get you out of that conference letter of intent.' The kid finally went to neither of those schools."

Donahue admits he has trouble believing what he once heard.

"I've heard a story of a prospect who reputedly got a total package worth about $30,000," said the UCLA mentor. "That included land, farm equipment, tractors and livestock. I absolutely refuse to accept the truth of that, but I know an assistant coach who'll stand up on this table and swear that it happened."

Cars, money, real estate and livestock are not the only unethical means some coaches and alumni use to lure top prospects. Dirty tricks are not limited to politics.

When Akers was recruiting Donnie Little, an all-state quarterback, he learned that rival schools were telling the young man Texas secretly planned to switch him to defensive back.

"I finally went to Donnie and his parents and told them, 'Donnie is a quarterback and quarterback is where we will play him.'"

But a few days before the national signing date, Little's parents received a "very nice, well written letter," supposedly from a Texas alumnus.

"The letter said how proud he was that Donnie was going to Texas and it said all sorts of nice things about Donnie and about our university. It ended by saying, 'and Coach Akers tells me he thinks you're going to be one of the best defensive backs Texas ever had.'"

Lyle makes early debut in Texas Rangers' camp

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Reliever Sparky Lyle has made his earliest appearance at a spring training camp in 12 major league seasons.

The new Texas Ranger, obtained in an off-season trade with the world champion New York Yankees, said he heard at a writers' banquet that he was supposed to report in late February.

"Now, I hear I really wasn't due until March 1," said Lyle. "There's no doubt I prefer March 1, but I'm here so I'll just stay here."

Lyle, 34, immediately pitched a round of batting practice.

"Sparky came up and said he was going to have to hurt sooner or later, so he'd just go ahead and get his first batting practice over on the first day," said Rangers Manager Pat Corrales. "He went the normal 10 minutes, then came over and asked me if we had a place for him to throw up."

Lyle weighed a beefy 218 pounds.

"This is light for me," said Lyle.

"With the Yankees I was usually around 227-228. But I don't do a thing in the winter, not one thing. I'd never pick up a baseball so I gain weight."

Lyle added, "When I go to work down here I lose that weight pretty quickly because I tend to sweat a lot. I'm usually down to 205 by the time the season starts. Then I lose even more. Once, I went from 231 to 188."

He said he was a slow starter in the spring when it comes to retiring batters.

"I think I ought to explain to everybody my feelings on these spring games," said Lyle. "Once they start, you'll see me at my worst. You'll swear I'll never get another batter out. I figured it up once and my earned run average for spring training was over 12 points."

His lifetime ERA is 2.55.

Anderson in pinstripes is too good to pass up

Sparky Anderson in New York Yankees' pinstripes in 1980 — a marriage made in heaven, George's heaven? Count Billy Martin out as a returning prodigal son. Pillowy, pleasant Bob Lemon can't wait to get out of the dugout and those silly high socks and long pants. His tenure as interim manager of baseball's most successful and volatile franchise is finished after this season — win, lose or draw. He insists on it.

So what does that leave? A rich, talent-loaded baseball team without a skipper and a highly respected, winning field general without a rein. Put them together and — wham! — you've got powerful chemistry.

THIS MAGIC merger seems inevitable to anyone studying the shifting winds and the strange vagaries of the personalities involved.

When Anderson was unceremoniously fired by the Cincinnati Reds last November, despite a record of four National League titles and two world championships, owner George Steinbrenner of the Yankees called it "the biggest boo-boo of the year."

Anderson is Steinbrenner's kind of guy — dignified, inspirational, strictly Marine spit-and-polish with a fetish for short hair, shaven chins and intense team pride.

He doesn't stray too far from George's conception of America as "Kate Smith, apple pie and Yankee pinstripes," although Sparky may have to swallow hard to digest the last one.

While Sparky is fulfilling the final year of his Cincinnati contract with menial jobs, Steinbrenner and Martin are back in the pits again — exchanging barbs and innuendoes.

HOW CAN these two mavericks — each strong-willed and impetuous — ever find a common ground for a harmonious relationship?

They can't. It's obvious that Steinbrenner has girded himself with an escape hatch in promising to give Martin his job back "if he carries himself in a manner that dignifies the Yankees."

That's like telling a leopard to change his spots or like turning a bulldog into a purring pussy cat. Dignity is not Billy Martin's long suit — never was and never will be. Steinbrenner knew that when he hired the fiery firebrand as the Yankees' pilot in August 1975.

Billy the Kid's record, first as player, then as manager of Minnesota, Detroit and Texas, reads like a page from the Ring Record Book. He has spent his career feuding with players (often his own), bosses, the press and fans. He hasn't been reluctant to belt an antagonist when the situation warranted.

MARTIN'S LATEST escapade involved a barroom incident in Reno, Nev., last November when Billy, charging provocation, admitted that he slugged a newspaper reporter. The case is pending in court. The Yankees' brass contends there have been reports of other indiscretions.

Steinbrenner came close to firing Martin three times during the past two years. One of them occurred last July after one of Billy's frequent run-ins with Reggie Jackson. Beating the gun, Martin called a press conference and resigned — tearfully. The Yankees named Lemon as manager. There was an outcry of protest from the fans, who idolize Martin. Five days after Martin's resignation, Steinbrenner announced dramatically at the Yankees' Old Timers' game that Martin would return in 1980. At the time, there was no suggestion of conditional clauses.

SOME CRITICS said Steinbrenner's motives were mercenary, that he reacted to appease the fans and cool press criticism. Those who know George best vow it's not true — the Yankees' owner, an old softeater at heart, was moved by Billy's tears.

But compassion can run out. The Yankees' owner was visibly upset over Martin's appearance at training camp last week at which time he said he and agent Doug Newton were anxious to turn Steinbrenner's promises into firm commitments.

"Nobody's going to put pressure on anybody," Steinbrenner snapped. He said, in effect, that Billy must shape up or stay out. It's a rap the trigger-happy Martin can't beat.

Dallas greets Chrissie with rousing ovation

DALLAS (AP) — Chris Evert was overjoyed with her triumphant return to Dallas after a controversial departure following her 1974 victory in the Brinker Invitational championships.

Evert was given a rousing ovation upon her first appearance in a $200,000 women's tennis tournament Monday night in Moody Coliseum on the Southern Methodist University campus.

She methodically defeated 18-year-old Wendy Barlow of Brigham Young University and the Futures division, 6-2, 6-1.

"I really didn't know what to expect," the second-seeded star said. "I was crushed back then (when the fans booed her in a match with Australian Leslie Hunt). I had never had that done to me before."

Evert said she had not returned to Dallas since then because "Dallas came at a time when I wanted to rest. No other reason."

She denied carrying a grudge against the city. "I just wish that all could be wiped out," she added.

In mastering the young No. 2 Canadian player, who said "it was a wonderful experience," Evert admitted she experimented early in the match.

"Wendy is a good baseline player. I couldn't get any winners against her early," said Evert, who goes against veteran Rosie Casals in tonight's second round.

Evert's experimentation consisted of placements and a stronger service.

"I also was feeling out the court. You know, moving as we do, we play on a fast court one tournament, a slow one next. I'm just getting my feel."

She capitalized on her younger opponent's inexperience. Once in the first set, Barlow hoisted a return to the coliseum roof, and she double faulted to close out the match.

The tournament's top seed, Martina Navratilova, makes her first appearance tonight against Betsy Nagelsen.

First-round casualties Monday night included sixth-seeded Kerry Reid, who lost to Linda Siegel 6-2, 6-4; ninth-seeded Kathy Jordan, a 6-4, 7-5 loser to Lea Antonopolis, and 16th-seeded Marita Redondo, who fell to Kate Latham 6-2, 7-5.

Orioles obtain bidder

BALTIMORE (AP) — A Pennsylvania millionaire described as a "baseball nut" who has tried to buy baseball clubs all over the country reportedly has offered to put up half the $12 million asking price for the Baltimore Orioles.

Members of the local group of investors trying to buy the team told the Baltimore Sun that Ken Pollock, a millionaire who made his money in strip mining, would become one of the "four or five general partners" and would own about 30 percent of the team.

POLLOCK APPROACHED Orioles Board Chairman Jerold C. Hoffberger about buying the American League club last year, but the discussions ended in the preliminary stage.

Members of the local group said Pollock is committed to keeping the Orioles in Baltimore.

"It's got to be in Baltimore," said F. Barton Harvey, one of the local investors. "Pollock recognizes that. He is absolutely not interested in moving the Orioles out of Baltimore."

Pollock, a Wilkes-Barre, Pa., resident, was out of town Monday night and could not be reached for comment.

Harvey and W. Wallace Lanahan Jr., another investor, said Pollock's involvement came within the last two weeks. They said the group approached Pollock about joining in their bid to keep the Orioles here.

LANAHAN SAID that Pollock came here to discuss providing $2 million in working capital. But on Monday, he told the group he also wanted to provide a $4 million loan, Lanahan added.

"He came down here to talk about putting in $2 million to $2½ million, and he now wants to put in $6 million," Lanahan said.

Lanahan said the lawyers were working out the details of the sale, and that the legal papers were just about completed. He could not estimate, however, when the final sale would take place.

The Sun quoted one source as saying the final negotiations could take at least a month.

BEFORE ANY sale would be made, the owners of the other teams in the American League would have to approve the deal.

When told of the latest development, Lee MacPhail, AL president, said he knew the group had been talking to Pollock.

"I didn't know what the plan was ... I guess that's good if they can put something solid together that will fly."

Harvey said he welcomed Pollock's involvement, saying it added "another strong investor" and solved the problem of finding $2 million in operating capital.

The local group also revealed Monday two of the "five or six" investors who would be general partners and have primary responsibility for overseeing the team.

Besides Pollock, the partners would include Lanahan and James W. Rouse, the developer of Columbia, Md.

The names of the other general partners are to become public at the time of the sale, the group said.

Harvey added that the group still wants the city and the state governments to guarantee operating losses up to $500,000.

To appreciate baseball's health today, it is useful to look at the dramatically different game of just five years ago. What was baseball like before spring training of 1974?

In those days, few seriously thought that free agents might become a reality. The concept of total bargaining freedom was a chimerical labor bargaining tool — a beastly threat made idly and rebuffed easily for more than 60 years.

The idea of a Free Agents Sweepstakes in November — a month of public auction — was unthinkable. Even players said that baseball without a reserve clause would be chaos.

In those days, Aaron, holding all winter at No. 713, earned a kingly $200,000. The thought of a million-dollar annual salary was something for the 21st century.

The 40 years from Ruth to Aaron had raised top salaries threefold. The next five years would raise them fivefold.

Only five years ago baseball had never hired a black manager — let alone fired one — and the designated-hitter rule was only one year old.

THE SPEED boom, unleashed by Brock, was undreamed. That the Oakland A's could steal 341 bases would have sounded psychedelic. In a twinkling, the distance between bases, which had seemed so constant for so long, suddenly began to shrink.

The power explosion of '77, ignited by the new "Rawlings Rabbit" was an even more remote notion. Foster's 52 homers and Rice's 406 total bases would have seemed like a publicist's fantasy in '74 when the AL had no one with more than 32 homers or 287 bases.

No one suspected — and some still don't know — that by 1978, baseball would have its best balance of power, speed, scoring and pitching in history. A sort of statistical balance of power was reached between all the basic statistics of the game — an unprecedented situation.

Nonetheless, the most staggering and important difference between baseball then and now is the most obvious difference: free agency.

Throughout this century, it has been a baseball rule of thumb that star players, especially in their prime, are seldom traded, at least until they begin to age.

From 1954 to 1959, for instance, more than twice as many stars stayed with their teams as changed uniforms — based on our subjective picks of all-stars in both leagues.

FROM 1924 to 1929, much the same is the case, although the ratio is closer to 3 to 2 in favor of "stay" over "go."

In the last five years, that generations-old sense of stability and slow change in baseball was blasted to smithereens.

The 33 who switched sides since '74 are not fringe players in this 33-to-13

Baseball snickers at doomsayers

By THOMAS BOSWELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Those who fretted about baseball just a few years ago have a problem now on the eve of Spring training '79.

They can't find anything momentous to worry about. Seldom, if ever, has the state of baseball been strong.

The sport that prides itself on tradition and continuity, the game that Teddy Roosevelt, if he could return to earth tomorrow, would understand, may have been through the most dramatic revolution in its history over the last four to five years.

Not long ago, baseball folks thought they were about to be crushed under a free-agent free-for-all, massive labor problems and litigation, declining attendance and sagging TV ratings, a moribund American League and a game dominated by aging stars.

Now, for a number of reasons, baseball, with its soaring attendance (40,636,886 in 1978) and growing television ratings, can snicker at the doomsayers.

The labor-and-law nightmares turned into a bonanza of free-agent publicity and fan excitement, making an unprecedented number of teams interesting.

Of the 50 all-stars in the spring of 1974, four have retired, 13 have remained with the same team and a staggering 33 have changed teams. Some of those 33 have played for as many as five teams in five years.

THE AMERICAN League, which now has more 90-win contenders in the East (four) than it once had in the whole league, is bristling with young stars. But then the National League is in the midst of a baby boom, too.

Ever since New Year's 1975 when Catfish Hunter became the first multimillion-dollar free agent, baseball has lived a charmed life. For four years, its run of luck has held.

From Hank Aaron's 715th homer to Lou Brock's 118th stolen base, from more AstroTurf fields to the new Rawlings ball, from Carlton Fisk's foul-pole home run in '75 to "Reggie-Reggie," everything baseball has touched has turned to gold.

Just when the old gal seemed to have lost her vitality, along came the greatest of Big Red Machines and George Steinbrenner's rudderless Ship of Fools to win back-to-back world titles each.

Baseball is once more stocked with high-profile stars and teams with clear identities.

IN THE fundamental categories, baseball again has stars who stand up superbly to a century of comparison.

Hustler: Pete Rose. Showman: Reggie Jackson. Pure Hitter: Rod Carew. Pitcher in Prime: Ron Guidry. Potential Unlimited: Jim Rice. 300-Win Pitchers: Jim Palmer and Tom Seaver, en route. Triple Crown Adversaries: George Foster and Dave Parker.

Teams like the Yanks, Red Sox, Dodgers, Phillies, Reds, and Royals bring lineups that are familiar top to bottom and reputations as psychologically engrossing as a Russian novel. In addition, never have so many teams considered themselves genuine contenders — 13 teams were at least 10 games over .500 in '78.

Tim Goski's time out call costs East Texas St. crown

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A player's time out call in a last-gasp try for victory in regulation cost his team in the championship game of the Lone Star Conference basketball tournament.

East Texas State already had its limit of five time outs when guard Tim Goski asked for another one, with East Texas State and Southwest Texas State tied 69-69 and the clock buzzer fixing to sound and send the game into overtime.

Referees called a technical foul, and tournament MVP James Patrick sank the free throw with no time left to give Southwest Texas a 70-69 triumph.

Patrick led the Bobcats with 24 points. East Texas State was led by the 30 points of 6-11 center Lee Johnson, who fouled out with 4:10 left and his team leading 65-63.

Both Southwest Texas and East Texas are now 23-6 for the year.

Others named to the all-tournament team were Granger, Johnson, guard Kelvin Branch of Southwest Texas, guard Randall Moore of Abilene Christian and guard Gary Hopkins of Howard Payne.

The victory gives Southwest Texas the homecourt advantage in the NIAA District IV playoff game Saturday against Texas Lutheran or Southwestern University.

East Texas will play at St. Mary's University Saturday.

EAST TEXAS (8) Simmons 0-0-0, Robertson 2-4-8, Tim Goski 2-0-1, Williams 2-1-5, Ratty 3-2-8, Granger 6-20-14, Johnson 13-4-30, Anderson 0-0-0, Scanlan 0-0-0. Totals 28-13-21.

Effects of Iranian crude cutoff escalates as supplies run short

By ROGER SMITH
The Los Angeles Times
 The effects of the Iranian oil cutoff escalated Monday as spot shortages, cramped heating oil supplies and prompted cancellation of some airline flights.

But the promise by the new Iranian government to step up oil exports should spare the United States major dislocations, a spokesman for the oil industry said.

Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute, said that even if the Iranian cutoff continues, "You should be able to get what you want, but it will be a little less convenient," and not as bad as the long service station lines during the Arab oil embargo.

Highly placed oil company source said Iran would likely resume oil exports next Sunday or Monday, and the oil would go to the highest bidder through direct sales by National Iranian Oil Co.

Iran had supplied about 10 percent of the world's oil before the shutdown, producing about 6 million barrels a day. The government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini says production will now be only about half that level in an attempt to conserve the nation's oil reserves.

Although Iran supplied only about 5 percent of the United States' oil, that loss has tightened supplies of several types of fuel.

DiBona said that one little-understood quirk of the Iranian problem is that the flow of Iranian oil reaching U.S. shores has not really slowed until now because shipments take months. Similarly, resumption of Iranian production will not show up for months after it happens, he said.

Trans World Airlines Monday canceled five eastbound flights from Kansas City and National Airlines suspended a New York to Amsterdam flight because of shortages of jet fuel.

TWA also canceled six flights on Sunday from Kansas City. The cancellations, the first for TWA since the Arab Oil embargo of 1973, resulted from fuel cutbacks by Texaco and Union Pacific's Champlin Petroleum Co. subsidiary, a TWA spokesman said. The flights represent only about 2 percent of the TWA's daily schedule.

National also blamed fuel cutbacks by Texaco for its flight cancellations. Other airlines also reported spot shortages, but said they had not had to cancel any flights so far.

Atlantic Richfield Co., Los Angeles, announced that it will allocate gasoline to its stations and customers on a basis of 95 percent of their entitlement, effective Thursday. Arco blamed the shortage of Iranian crude for the decision. At least four other major oil companies — Shell, Phillips, Texaco and Continental Oil — already have announced cutbacks.

The price of gasoline in California increased by 1 cent a gallon in February, the California State Automobile Association reported. All grades of gasoline are generally available, although an estimated 3 percent of the state's gasoline retailers are reducing operating hours, usually on Sunday, the association said.

Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King asked President Carter to declare an energy emergency in his state. Such a move would allow the burning of coal and other heavy polluting fuels to meet the shortage of low sulfur fuels caused by the Iranian cutback.

White House sending standby rationing plans

By CLIFF HAAS
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House prepared to send Congress standby plans for gasoline rationing today, but Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger assured the nation's governors that rationing would be used only as a last resort.

Schlesinger said rationing would not be used as a result of the loss of Iranian oil, but that other mandatory, energy-saving measures proposed by the administration might be imposed if the Iranian cutoff continues for a year or longer.

"We will not come to rationing because of what is a relative shortfall in supply" as a result of the Iranian shutdown, Schlesinger told the natural resources committee of the National Governors' Association.

Schlesinger spoke as the White House was about to send Congress its standby plan for rationing and other steps, including allocation of crude oil among refineries and possible restrictions on weekend retail sales of gasoline and diesel fuel.

Schlesinger predicted possible gasoline shortages this summer due to the Iranian shutdown, and said some mandatory steps contained in the administration's contingency plan might be triggered.

Asked about the plan for barring gasoline sales on weekends, he said that if this step is taken the administration might consider allowing states to pick a weekday if they preferred.

However, Schlesinger said he hoped such harsh steps would not be required at all.

He told the governors that gasoline prices probably will rise 10 cents a gallon because of the combined effect of Iran-caused shortages and recent price increases voted by oil-producing nations.

Asked about published reports the rationing plan would limit gasoline use to two gallons or less per day per registered vehicle, Schlesinger said that figure was an average based on "the typical car."

However, when pressed further on the matter, he said he did not recall what the actual rationing quantities would be and would have to check it further.

Earlier, Energy Department spokesman James Bishop said reports of the two-gallon limit were a "total fabrication" and that the standby rationing plan contained no specific gallon figures.

Any gasoline rationing plans probably will be based on the assignment of coupons to owners of registered vehicles, according to sources who asked for anonymity. The coupons could be freely bought and sold.

Schlesinger told the House Budget Committee last week that the loss of Iranian oil production during the political turmoil there could lead to mandatory steps to insure an adequate supply of heating oil next winter, causing a reduction in "gasoline availability."

"There will be a gasoline problem — in all likelihood — this summer," Schlesinger said.

Iran's revolutionary government has said it will resume oil exports soon, but it has not disclosed how much oil will be exported or to whom it will be sold.

Meanwhile, White House and Energy Department spokesmen have emphasized that no emergency is anticipated soon.

During congressional testimony earlier this month, David J. Bardin, head of the Energy Department's Economic Regulatory Administration, said mandatory fuel-saving may become necessary if voluntary conservation is not effective.

He outlined mandatory measures as possibly including federally imposed allocations of crude oil among refineries and allocations of gasoline, fuel oil and other refined products at the wholesale level.

Bardin said direct consumer rationing would be considered only as a last-ditch effort.

Energy officials have also said they may have to restrict weekend sales of gasoline and diesel fuel, even ordering Sunday closings.

In other congressional testimony this month, Schlesinger said, "I think the Sunday closing may be a necessary part of the kind of package we may have to put together."

Other measures under consideration include restrictions on heating or cooling of commercial and public buildings and restrictions on non-essential advertising lighting.

Bardin has said there also could be limits placed on the number of parking spaces made available by employers and by commercial facilities.

However, the standby measures would not be put into effect until the president declared an energy emergency. Even then, the plans could be blocked by either house of Congress.

Emergency funds pass

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Over six weeks after former Gov. Dolph Briscoe submitted it as an emergency, the Legislature has passed a $581,682 appropriation to the Texas Railroad Commission.

A 142-1 House vote Monday sent the compromise bill written by a joint conference committee to Gov. Bill Clements for signature into law. Senators approved it last week.

The commission said it needed the money to administer provisions of the federal Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 in Texas. Federal pricing decisions for each Texas gas well will be based on applications filed with and processed by the commission.

A House amendment had pared the appropriation to $245,509 but the conference committee restored the full amount but spelled out exactly how much the commission can spend for various items.

Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, said the three commissioners "fully justified the expenses contained" in the conference committee report.

Coleman had sponsored the original House amendment cutting the appropriation.

The House passed and sent to the Senate on Monday a bill extending the eligibility of cystic fibrosis victims for state services past the age of 20.

Under the Crippled Children's Act, the State Health Department helps cover the cost of a variety of services for victims of the disease, including hospital, doctor and physical therapy bills.

Rep. Chase Untermeyer, R-Houston, objected that the future cost of extending services into adulthood was unknown and could snowball if persons from other states came to Texas for help.

House members defeated, 46-94, a bill requiring politicians to obtain written permission before claiming a person's endorsement in a newspaper advertisement.

The House approved, 92-44, a resolution calling on Congress and President Carter to adopt all-out energy program — in which government officials would leave the pricing system alone.

Rep. Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge, said Gov. Bill Clements wanted to present the resolution during the current convention of the National Governors Association in Washington, D.C.

Employees back on job

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Union employees at Texaco's giant refinery were back at work today following brief picketing by out-of-state workers and a lockout by the company.

About 4,000 day workers at the plant refused to cross the picket line. The overnight shift, however, returned on the 10:30 p.m. shift Monday.

Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Local 8-638 from Westfield, N.J. set up pickets Monday morning trying to gain sympathy for their cause at Texaco's Eagle Point facility.

Southeast Texas OCAW members honored the pickets, which went down about 10:15 a.m.

But when they attempted to return to work, they found the gates locked. Texaco noted in a statement that Monday's action by the New Jersey local was the second this month and that it was not going to be subject to the picketing which they said "apparently comes and goes at the whim and caprice of the Eagle Point OCAW local."

Port Arthur OCAW officials met with company personnel Monday afternoon and Texaco agreed to allow workers back in.

Spokesman Larry Bingham said the company sought assurances that plant operations would not be subject to future interruptions by the New Jersey local.

Texaco's Port Arthur plant, with its terminal, is its largest facility.

The No. 1 June, the sixth well in the field, was completed for a 24-hour flowing potential of 62 barrels of 49-gravity oil and no water, through a 13/64-inch choke and perforations from 10,202 to 10,269 feet. The gas-oil ratio is 4,510-1.

The pay section was acidized with 5,000 gallons.

Wellsite is 1,980 feet from north and 990 feet from east lines of section 26, block Y, TCRR survey.

It is one location west and slightly south of other production.

Cox No. 1 Jax, one location east and slightly south of production, was completed for a 24-hour flowing potential of 81 barrels of 49-gravity oil, no water, through a 10/64-inch choke and perforations from 10,146 to 10,201 feet after 5,000 gallons of acid.

The gas-oil ratio is 3,875-1.

It is the field's seventh Bend producer.

White House hits brother Billy's talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says Billy Carter's recent comments about Jews "are not the sort of remarks the president would say were appropriate."

The White House response to the comments by the president's younger brother came at a news briefing Monday. Press secretary Jody Powell said, "It certainly should be clear that members of the president's family speak for themselves... and not for the president."

The controversy centered on Billy Carter's response when asked about Jewish criticism of his relationship with a visiting Libyan trade group. The younger Carter was quoted as saying, "They can kiss my ass, as far as I'm concerned."

Powell told reporters, "I can't imagine that anyone would come to the conclusion that a comment like that would be made on behalf of the president."

Carter team to appear before pollution panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's key economic and anti-inflation advisers are going before a Senate subcommittee to explain the administration's policy of reviewing environmental regulations from a dollars-and-cents point of view.

Two environmentalists charged in testimony before the panel Monday that the administration is using its anti-inflation struggle as an excuse to launch an all-out attack on the nation's drive to reduce pollution.

The environmental pollution subcommittee arranged to hear today from four top administration officials, including Charles Schultz, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, and Alfred Kahn, the president's No. 1 inflation fighter.

One of the environmentalists who criticized the administration Monday was Richard E. Ayres of the Natural Resources Defense Council. He said the past 12 months has seen "the development of a concerted anti-environmental campaign within the White House economic staff."

Ayres said top White House aides have intervened with various agencies setting standards for air quality, strip mining, toxic substances in water and Tennessee Valley Authority air pollution.

Ayres conceded that the fight against inflation should be a top priority. But he charged that it "has become a pretext for a different sort of campaign — a campaign to distort and nullify the structure of federal laws laboriously constructed to prevent and repair damage to public health and the natural environment."

A second environmentalist, Robert J. Rauch of the Environmental Defense Fund, said, "We are facing an unprecedented assault by senior White House officials on the efforts of EPA to carry out the nation's environmental protection statutes."

But a former top EPA official said Congress should take economics into account when it debates environmental legislation in the future.

John Quarles, now a lawyer working for corporate clients, said there is widespread public dissatisfaction "with the impacts of government regulatory programs."

In addition, he said, Congress needs to be careful not to impose impossible requirements on industries. "Many statutes have generated needless friction and controversy by failing to allow adequate time for phasing in new requirements," he said.

On a third point, Quarles said it appears the EPA has been given more responsibility than it can handle.

Army no longer certain U.S. still ahead of USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army research chiefs have dropped their confident claim that the new XM-1 tank, at $1.4 million each, will be the world's best.

"We no longer are on safe ground contending that our yet-to-be-deployed XM-1 will be vastly superior to future Soviet models in the mid-to-late 1980s," Assistant Army Secretary Percy Pierre and Lt. Gen. Donald R. Keith say in a new report.

The change comes less than a year after Pierre testified: "We believe the XM-1 will be the best tank in the world."

Pierre and Keith now say about the best they can state with certainty is that the XM-1 "will be competitive" with the new Soviet T-80 tank, which, they disclosed, is being developed at "an accelerated rate."

Furthermore, Pierre and Keith acknowledged for the first time that the new Soviet T-64 and T-72 tanks, already produced by the thousands, are "clearly superior" to even advanced models of the current U.S. M-60 tank.

In a 122-page report to Congress, the Army's civilian and uniformed research leaders concede that they and their predecessors were wrong in placing so much confidence in U.S. technology to keep American weapons ahead of the Russians in Equality, if not quantity.

"There are some weapons we feel will afford us a period of qualitative superiority despite Soviet level of effort," Pierre and Keith say.

"But, by and large, we have been shaken out of the smugness that our technological superiority once afforded us."

They say that as a result of what they describe as 15 years of qualitative erosion in ground force equipment and weaponry, "the U.S. Army is now inferior in virtually every major category of items with which wars can reasonably be expected to be won."

The Army is investing about $10.9 billion in plans to produce more than 7,000 XM-1 tanks, which are designed to be the main U.S. armor weapon, probably for the rest of the century.

A major feature of the XM-1 is a secret new British-developed armor which American tankers have claimed would be impervious to most Soviet anti-armor munitions expected in future years.

However, Pierre and Keith imply in the new report that the new Russian T-80, as well as the somewhat-less-advanced T-64 and T-72 tanks, will be more formidable than U.S. intelligence had anticipated.
