EDUCATION WEEK.

Today begins a week set apart for an emphasis upon education. Special weeks are common. Proclamations or national or local recognition of some movement, institution, cause or objective are the usual methods of attracting public attention to the objective by parenthetically setting the program out in the run of the calendar. The present instance is national in scope. It is known as American Education Week and during that time schools, educational associations, speakers, editors and public officials will be called upon to call attention to the program and its purposes in the hope of renewing public interest and devotion to what is undoubtedly the foremost bulwark of strong democracy.

An ignorant people are always an ill-governed people. The irony of that situation is that ignorant people are ill-governed not because they do not wish to be better governed but because they choose to be ill-governed. Their choice is dictated by their understanding, which at fault, accepts what is specious. The illumination of knowledge, breaking through clouds of suspicion, superstition and the darkness of a self-imposed bigotry, is the only solution to improper government with its concomitant conditions of improper living conditions, improper social conditions, etc.

All honor then to the teacher, who, broad of mind and sturdy in faith and heart, is ever at work building out of new and plastic ages the material for a greater, wiser, happier, and stronger future. Character, not the dollar, is the great unit of American citizenship. By it all things are measured, even the value of the dollar of which we hear so much nowadays. He who builds character well out of the unspoiled boys and girls who enter our school rooms, builds a great country.

It is right and fitting that we should pause for a week to lay emphasis upon this. It is our origin. Most of what this country is today is a reflection of what the little red school house, sung so often, was a generation ago. What we shall be tomorrow is what the modern, steam-heated and well equipped school room of today proves to be. Not the equipment, of course, but that which is served by the equipment.

Here is a fitting place to append this "Tribute to My Teacher," by J. W. Crabtree, secretary of the National Education association:

There will be no moratorium on education. A moratorium on education means a moratorium on civilization. This is one of the reasons why teachers will continue the schools however bad the situation.

In the crisis of the seventies, I was amazed, as a boy, at the sacrifices made by the pioneer teacher of that day. Since then I have observed that whether in time of famine or in time of plenty, the teacher has lived not for self, but for the children and the community. I have noticed that the selfish man or woman seldom remains long in the profession.

When the terrible days of the World war came upon us, who led in food conservation? Who led in the sale of liberty bonds? Who led in collecting food, clothing, and funds for the Red Cross? Who kept the schools going, whether funds were available or not? And what of the teachers of today? They are serving in a worse crisis than ever before. Their responsibility is greater. Environment is more destructive in its effect on children. The teacher-load is almost doubled. In spite of all this the teacher is again leading in welfare activities. There may be a delay in pay a month or six months but the work of the school goes on.

Who is it that removes gloom from the lives of children that comes from homes filled with sorrow and suffering because of the depression? Who is it that inspires children with courage and ambition? Who teaches them to look forward to better days? Who is it that is saving civilization in these dark hours?

All honor, therefore, to the teacher of 1933. Your services will be appreciated and rewarded in due time as I believe by a grateful people. Your courage and your activities and devotion stand out as the safeguard of our democracy and as the hope of the nation.

DR. COX ON COTTON AND ITS FUTURE.

Dr. A. B. Cox, director of the University of Texas bureau of business research, a glutton for figures as well as fact, has let it be known that the indicated supply of cotton in the United States Oct. 1 was 18,560,000 bales, compared with 19,071,000 bales last year. He hazards the prediction that the calculated index price of cotton this year should be 37 points over last year or 10.46 cents. Furthermore, world production outside of the United States this year shows an increase in every country and total probable yield of about 12,990,000 bales. Prospective world production therefore is 24,885,000. Carryover of all cotton Aug. 1 was 16,247,000 bales, "making a supply for the year 41,132,000 bales, a record supply for any one season." There are many experts or economists who insist that under-consumption is the cause of the woes of the grower, while on the other side there is a small army of experts, real or fancied, who are ready to make affidavit that over-production is the cause of all the ills of the cotton world.

AND "TAXES MUST BE REDUCED."

"The more taxes go up," remarked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, "The more those who still have means to serve can do a voluntary effort the better it will be." Those who have must foot the tax bills. Charity not only begins at home, according to the modernist, but it begins at the office of the tax collector where the cash must be paid on the barrel head or a tax suit rolls in.

Collective Bargaining Real Bone of Nerve

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Expert David Lawrence tells it to the readers he serves that "what President seeks is a managed currency which is first of all a true reflection of domestic prices and, secondly, a foreign exchange quotation for the dollar that removes speculators from the scene." America can control the world gold price and force the British pound to a different level and even the frame from its mooring... when this has been achieved, the real point at issue will be whether American commodity prices have been materially improved... those that are international like wheat and cotton will go up as does gold, other products will depend in the future, as in the past, on the demand for them.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Nov. 6.—One of the oddities of Texas law is that normally a divorce contest cannot be taken beyond a court of civil appeals, but that if a property settlement is involved even of $1 worth of property, then the case is subject to review of supreme court, and a divorce decree may then be sustained or declared void.

Texas several years ago got away from a curriculum of good, retained barbaric elements. It was that when a prisoner was paroled into the custody of someone. Nominal wages often would be prescribed in the parole, but the return of such a convicted person depended on merely the request of the individual to whom he had been released, so that the prisoner actually had no voice in the matter. It was a harsh form of indenture, easily capable of being made a slave proposition.

Now a prisoner is paroled on his own responsibility, subject to being returned for violation of the conditions, or if he gets into further trouble. At one time industries were able to secure the parol of large numbers of prisoners at normal pay. It was a distinct improvement when the old system was abandoned, less than 20 years ago.

The Texas house committee investigating job-selling has found that as it goes, each day's testimony calls for the summon of other witnesses, and leads into various odds and ends of ramifications. Its task could easily become a non-stop one.

and that without any very glaring developments, or any particularly new matter, this, not as a comment on investigation or testimony here, but merely a development of the fact that always there are volunteer witnesses, and witnesses who consider important, and the like.

The relief commission is authorized for the fact that any Texas school that was eligible last August for relief operation is still eligible, and will be considered. Plans are under way for the operation of schools, which would be put in operation as otherwise. These will be conducted by teachers otherwise unemployed.

The eligible schools are those which had certified to the state department of education last August 20 that they would be without funds to operate during all or a major portion of the current term. A statement that so far no schools have been opened or operated under this relief plan is correct, but that does not bar the prospect that a goodly number will be put in operation as a relief matter before the school year is over.

Plans are well under way to invoke this phase of relief administration. Federal and state authorities simply found it necessary to fix an antecedent date to determine eligibility, to prevent many school districts from throwing up their hands and saying "here we are."

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN, Nov. 6.—Issues for summer's political campaign are taking shape.

Anti-liberals are planning a fight to regain the ground authorized by the legislature. The list of potential candidates includes: Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson; Lieut. Gov. Edgar E. Witt; Attorney General James V. Alford; State Senator Charles Small, Amarillo; Wright C. Morrow, Houston; Tom P. Hume, Wichita Falls; Speaker Coke Stevenson, Junction; Chairman James Wood of the state highway commission, Timpson; C. C. McDonald, Wichita Falls.

Sharp lines will be drawn if Governor Ferguson and Alford are horns in the campaign. The governor has announced a policy of limit in following the NRA program. Her husband announced Alford's support oil suits as running counter to court with NRA and has appealed. Wood ruled that NRA automation ended them. It will be no surprise here should Alford's

Forgotten Sweetheart

By MARY RAYMOND
BEGIN HERE TODAY
JOAN WARING, pretty Memphis girl, and BOB WESTON, son of a New York millionaire, meet in Memphis and fall in love.

Bob Weston had often tested the conventional powers of Captain Eric, eager for his stories of the old boss haulers and tackle men, of windless days at sea when sailing vessels were bound in lethargy under the tropic suns, and of fierce combats with waves mountain high, testing the stuff of which the gallant barks were made.

But tonight Bob was not in a mood for stories. He seemed content to lie relaxed in his chair, puffing on his pipe. "Funny what a lot of trouble one little rib has caused the men folk," Captain Eric said suddenly, and saw Bob jump.

When the young man made no reply the captain said gruffly, "When will you be bringing that other girl on the 'Windward' for a honeymoon trip?" Bob asked, "The one who put the trouble in your eye, son," said the older man quietly.

"Captain Eric, you're a darned good seaman but you have too much imagination," Bob told him. "That's my girl downstairs—the pretty red-head."

FROM the moment the "Windward" had elbowed for a place in picturesque Havana harbor and found it, every minute had been crowded with gaiety. Sight-seeing and dancing and dining there was Moore castle first. Then a drive along the famous Malecon and the laurel-shaded Prado, a trip through old Havana lying against the harbor with its narrow streets and flat-topped houses.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE AMERICA'S GREATEST STUNT GIRL

Steady Smokers turn to Camels. LISTEN TO MARY WIGGINS, greatest of all girl stunt performers. She says: "I have to be sure my nerves are healthy to do my stunts, changing from a speeding auto to a plane, the high dive from fire into fire, wing walking while up in a plane, and the high-altitude parachute jump. As to smoking, I've found that Camels don't interfere with healthy nerves. I've tried all the brands. Camels are milder and better in flavor. They do not give me edgy nerves even when I am smoking a lot."
