1621 --- THANKSGIVING --- 1933

BY BRUCE CATTON

THEY went to church, that day, in Plymouth town, To thank God for His goodness. For they had Known hunger, pain and want, gone thinly clad Through iron winter, thrown the gauntlet down To death himself, and let him take his toll, And now they had won through. . . . And so they prayed Their word of thanks, and stood up unafraid And faced the future with undaunted soul.

TODAY we too look back upon a road Blood-stained and dark, haunted by panic fears; And we, too, thank our God, because He showed, Beyond the gloom and dusk of barren years, Beyond the memories of pain and sorrow —The dawning of a glorious tomorrow!

OIL OUTLOOK BETTER

In fixing a new daily production allowable for Texas oil fields, the Texas Railroad Commission Tuesday raised the allotment to the west central Texas field by 1,500 barrels, a concession to the improved market conditions in this area. The federal oil adjustment program appears to be having the desired effect in this district. During the past few weeks, since proration has become a reality under the federal system of allocating the national demand between the oil producing states and enforcing its allocations by refusing to permit oil produced in violation of state orders to enter interstate commerce, producers in this area have come to enjoy a definite demand for their oils. There are few, if any, accessible wells without connections, and the purchasing companies are refusing no connections which can be reasonably made. Production is well up to the figure fixed for it, those conversant with the conditions say. Oil in the district, under the present price schedules, is bringing an average of better than one dollar per barrel, and the production sold is releasing more than $25,000 daily to the producers who are now receiving their first real money from their properties in many months. The return is not comparable with the flush period that preceded the depression, but it is certainly encouraging in comparison with the state of conditions existing prior to the recovery program.

The situation is healthy from the standpoint that for the first time the oil man with production to dispose of has some assurance of what is coming next. His lot, prior to the present adjustment measures, was one of continual and anxious uncertainty. Price fluctuations and alternate depressions and buoyancies contributed to a state of mind that prompted many to simply close in their properties and await a problematical stabilization. With oil at ten cents one day and fifty the next there was no saying what should be done next. The underlying cause of the upper disorder was the flood of illegal oils that escaped state detection because the state held no supervision over interstate trafficking. With the federal government stepping in as an ally of the state authorities in this matter the recourse of the oil bootlegger to interstate anonymity has been removed and he must come out into the open and conduct himself in share with the rest of the industry.

The effect upon the west central Texas district is the same as the healthy tone that seems to be spreading throughout the whole structure of the oil industry, a condition for which we have good reason to be thankful today. While it will not encourage extensive development, it will provide a profitable disposition for the oil already in production and by doing so release to thousands of oil operators, royalty owners, land owners, etc., sufficient revenue to improve the color of the economic picture.

The fact that the federal administration is said to be abandoning its price-fixing plans, is another happy indication. In the minds of many, effective regulation of oil production and marketing would or would not improve market conditions, regardless of fiat prices. That contention seems to be proving itself in the experience of the administration with the current program. Given assurance through firm control, that the proration measures are effective, the price structure should respond to the healthier demand conditions. Although the price today is short of the ideal, it has achieved an apparent soundness quite in contrast to the conditions that prevailed a few months ago. That is something to be thankful for.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Thanksgiving Day!
When I take stock of the situation in which I find myself on November 29, 1933, I wonder what I have to be thankful for. With a small penny in one pocket, and gas to buy a I see a football game 30 miles away Thursday afternoon. I am confronted with the usual financial perplexity. There is the alternative that I quit my job and go off without a care to the lazy hay. But, meantime will roll around in a few hours and hunger knows no moratorium. One can no more appease an appetite of wishing, it than one can make fiat money sound.
I wonder how many of us, gifted with the supernatural power to remake his or her state of being upon this planet, would choose the forms and habits they now have? It isn't reasonable to ask whether or not they would choose a better material condition, assuming that they would.
Should I reconstruct myself to weigh nearer the Apolline ideal than the present meager 130 with which I encumber the limbo. Should I choose to be a singer, a writer, a politician, or just a happy fat boy in lieu of this humble scribbler who for the past 10 years has been hopelessly trying to write something worth reading?
The discussion is entirely academic, for the very obvious reason that no such choice will be offered any of us; but it is interesting to try to discover just how thankful we are.
I wonder, for instance, would Mayor Berry choose to remain as smooth as a billiard ball on top? Would K. H. Pittard re-read his vicious habit of nearly killing insurance prospects to frighten them into buying policies? Would Andy Anderson retain that cherubic front? Would Dr. Hubert Seale re-sume his practice of making a golf engagement for four and filling it at six?

Would W. J. Leach attempt horseplay riding? Would Carl Lowery continue in bachelorhood? Would W. J. Curly Armstrong disagree with everybody but himself?
Would E. S. James choose the same girlish figure? Would George Boyd and Doc Cabaness choose each other? Would Henry Drumwright move to Breckenridge?
On all these questions your guess is as good as mine for the fact that neither you nor the party concerned knows what he would do.
But, fortunately for the kitchen sink and the garden hoe, we cannot choose but take the clay that is given us. Granted a choice between the commoner and the king, the commoner would wear the ermine. We can, however, go wonders with the clay, to keep everlastingly at the process of molding it into something respectable and serviceable.
We ought to be thankful, then, for the good of this old world, that we don't have the choice of our birth and lot. If we had nothing to do, there would be no use in being.
The child with a lollipop or a bean shooter is pre-eminently happy, because his wants are surfeited. His life is a romance of ignorance. Ours is miserable because we want too much, and in learning discover that the friend who boasted the soul of a Jonathan sheltered the gimlet-eyed treachery of a Judas. We get around from contemplating his laz majesty to suspicion that what hard and selfish, and that the things we used to like are tasteless. We are inclined to agree with Pope that "Man's inhumanity to man" is civilization's greatest crime and mourn that departed age of innocence in which life seemed a full and wonderful a thing in its unfolding.

THANKSGIVING TIME

Uncle Sam Playing Santa Claus to Cotton Farmers

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD
Thanksgiving is here and the Christmas holiday season is on the way. Uncle Sam is distributing his favors to approximately 600,000 producers of cotton. Indeed immediate distribution of $48,000,000 constituting a 4-cent-a-pound advance to producers who are to receive option on 2,400,000 bales of government-held cotton has been ordered by Oscar Johnson, director of finance for the federal farm administration.

Herman Brown is a native Texan. He is a contractor. He keeps his eye on the financial gun. His figures tell him that more than $100,000,000 will be poured into Texas by the New Deal administration before the coming of March 4, 1934. This is counting the $20,000,000 fund matched for the relief of the idle or the hungry or the shelterless. Many million dollars were advanced for highway building, many million dollars already paid into the pockets of farmers who plowed their cotton; huge sums advanced for public works projects; and a large outlay for civilian camps of all kinds, concentration camps and the like. It is well to keep the record straight—for the edification and education of the yowlers as well as the optimists.

FINANCIAL EXPERT SPRAGUE AS A LITERARY FELLER

Well, the New Deal administration has not abandoned its gold buying program. Secy. Morgenthau as the head of the treasury is supporting the bond market. Funds turned over to the treasury for investment "were described as going towards the purchase of government bonds."

Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, at one time fiscal adviser to the Bank of England and later special financial adviser to the New Deal administration, remains in the picture. He is going to be kept busy during the winter months syndicating his written protests to the policy of the Roosevelt move. Indeed, he has planned to remain in Washington during the winter.

Conrad Henry T. Rainey of Illinois is speaker of the house. He is a farmer, a lawyer and a statesman. Speaking of the departure of the good Dr. Sprague the speaker said that Sprague "evidently was going to make more money by syndicating his articles than he received from the government." Well, a financial expert must live. He must wear clothes, he must have a sheltering place, he must buy food, he must put a dollar aside for the proverbial rainy day. All experts as well as non-experts do their level best to keep out of the breadline. Why not? Business is business. In addition to all this the opponents, above the surface and beneath the surface, of the gold policy of the administration have the honest-to-God money to push their cause along. They are fighting for what they call "self-preservation."

being catholic. I don't give a cuss, I am.
Most of us think of November as some dreary stretch between summer and winter, enlivened only by the cherry fires of Thanksgiving. Positive of that, we go between the house and the garage without once looking around. But some of these November mornings are awesome with a living beauty.
The east is bloody streaks; the sky between is full of a rustling wind that brushes the dry silver of the needgrass and the splochy olive green of rag-weed. Far to the west it is a stormy blue and between, are hung veils of mother-of-pearl clouds, carded and combed into curious shapes by some slow current that hasn't reached the slaty stratum still higher up. A few moments and the edge of every shining cloud is dipped in living gold.

All at once in the midst of this religious contemplation of a morning majesty, you get a grass burr in your sock, and are sharply recalled to the fact that it isn't the thing you're standing on that makes you happy, but the thing you hope to have. So, I am thankful this morning to be able to wish for a lot of things that I shall probably never get, and would be dissatisfied with if I had.

DESDEMONA

One of the largest crowds that had gathered at our high school in a long time, assembled there Thursday night to enjoy a program presented by the Parent-Teachers Association of which Mrs. Mattie Henry is president. Honor guests for whom seats were reserved were Supt. M. L. Cobb and members of the board of trustees. During the time the crowd was gathering, delightful music was rendered by the Anderson orchestra. They also furnished music for a tap dance by Elmer Woodard who is quite talented in dancing. The opening number on the program was the singing of America by the audience and was followed by scripture reading and prayer by Rev. Z. L. Howell.

Next was a song "Here's to Our Friends" sung by Mmes. Ralph Ludwick and Ed Hanson with Mrs. Aaron Henslee accompanist. Miss Joene Arnold then read Longfellow's "Psalm of Life." W. E. Barron then played a violin solo with Miss Edra Parks at the piano. D. E. Hoover, principal of the grammar school, made a very practical talk on "Living Together With the Family." Little Misses Ruth and Elene Harless then sang a Harvest Time song and the next number was a piano solo by Miss Edra Parks. Mrs. C. W. Matty was next on program and gave a humorous reading describing an invitable patient in a hospital.

Field, Hughes, Nettie Daniels, Nillon Hanson and Glenn Sparkman then sang a quartet with Mrs. Aaron Henslee at the piano. Piano solo by Frances Arnold was followed by a reading by Madeline Robert. Miss Ruth Crenshaw in cowboy costume sang "The Last Round-up." Piano solo by Miss Nell Robert was followed by a song by the 6th grade with Miss Dorra Bell in the service. A very interesting one act play was presented by pupils from the 6th, 7th and 8th grades. Two numbers not on the printed program were readings by little Cleve Jean Bratton and a talk by W. E. Barron who spoke for the board of trustees of which he is a member. Rev. Howell dismissed the audience with prayer. This splendid program was given without any admission fees or collection being taken and was appreciated by all.

J. E. Heeter left Tuesday for Coahoma where he is drilling an oil well for Mr. Clay of the Clay Lumber company. Mr. Heeter had been here since Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Howell and three little daughters of Klilgrove arrived Sunday and will remain until Friday visiting her mother, Mrs. J. E. Derrick, here and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Howell at DeLeon.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Davis and daughter, Mrs. Aaron Henslee drove to Eastland on business Tuesday of last week.

Forrest Road of Fort Worth was here on Tuesday of last week selling pianos for Brooks-Mays and company.

As a tribute of appreciation of Rev. Z. L. Howell who has just been re-appointed to serve the Methodist church here a large crowd of members and friends of the church gathered Sunday morning to hear his first sermon of this conference year. Those who attended carried well filled baskets and a most tempting and abundant dinner was served on tables arranged outside of the church.

In the afternoon all went into the church and enjoyed a song service led by Mr. Trimble of Carbon who is a popular song leader. Another feature of the afternoon service was a talk on "The Ideal Layman" by B. E. McGlamery of Eastland. The audience appreciated very much the assistance of Mr. Trimble and McGlamery in the service. Not only did the friends want to express appreciation of Rev. Howell but also of his wife and children who are all faithful church workers.

Desdemona football team won another victory Friday afternoon when they defeated Alameda Coach Weldon Rushing and the boys in the team have worked hard in order to win from our nearby towns. Nearly all opposing teams being a good deal heavier than the De-demonia boys.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ballard and little daughter, Tootsie, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jackson Saturday. The many friends of Mrs.

Ballard who lived here several years will be glad to know that she is entirely recovered from what she thought to be an incurable illness. She recently returned to her home at Brownwood after a few weeks' stay in Little Rock Ark., at the research hospital.

Mrs. J. E. Heeter accompanied her mother, Mrs. S. E. Snodgrass, Mrs. J. W. Griffin and Mrs. G. Tidwell drove down to Brownwood Wednesday and spent the day there, Roy Bullington of Coahoma, California who was visiting relatives at Brownwood and his family, Mrs. Bullington and family, attended the funeral of Mrs. E. E. Boshears, great aunt of Mrs. E. E. Snodgrass.

Married—At Dallas, Nov. 18, Miss Faye Cramer to Carroll Stover. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride with Mrs. Sherrod Stover, brother of groom officiating. The happy couple will make their home at Coahoma where the groom is an employee of the Humble Co. Mr. Stover is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stover and has spent a good part of time here the past few years. He has many friends with him and bride great happiness.

Mrs. I. N. Williams was here Monday afternoon to the meeting of the Methodist Missionary society and several other friends. Members of the society had decided to spend the afternoon working on a quilt for Rebecca Sparks in a quilt for home for working girls at Coahoma. The blocks for the quilt of Dutch Plate pattern were given Mrs. Mollie O'Rear and had been based on the squares by Mrs. McGowan and Miss O'Rear so guests did the finishing work on them. At the close of the afternoon Mrs. Williams served a delicious pumpkin pie with whipped cream and coffee to Mmes. C. E. Brown, R. D. Hendrickson, W. R. McGowan, Gene Ashley, R. K. Gorton, W. Barron, W. C. Bedford, S. E. Sprague, Ralph Ludwick, D. E. Hoover, C. M. Bratton, John Mendell, Mattie Henry, Charles Lee and Mollie O'Rear.

The UNKNOWN BLOND

By Laura L. Brookman

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Who killed TRACY KING, orchestra leader found dead in his apartment?
DAVID BANISTER, a former newspaper reporter, undertakes to find out.
Police are searching for an "unknown blond" who visited King shortly before his death. Banister has seen this girl, but she has disappeared since.
HERMAN BROWN, who wrote King a threatening letter, is in jail. He declares his innocence and bans his former publisher, who accuses Banister of the murder.
The reporter tells CAPTAIN McNEAL of the detective bureau about a woman who is King's only friend. McNeal decides to investigate.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XVIII

He turned to withdraw. His words unfinished, but McNeal stopped him.

"Just a minute!" he called. "You're Miss Hollister's brother, aren't you? I want to see you."

"The man looked back doubtfully." "Me?" he asked. "You want to see me?"

"There's no reason to talk to you," McNeal said. "I'll ask you questions, if you don't mind. I came here to see your brother as well as you."

"Excuse me, Miss Hollister," McNeal interrupted. "I'll ask you questions, if you don't mind. I came here to see your brother as well as you."

McNeal looked nettled. He was accustomed to doing the questioning himself. "We came," he said crisply, "to find out what you can tell us about Tracy King, the young man who was murdered upstairs."

"Oh!" The line of Miss Hollister's lips became straighter than ever. There was a pause—a moment oddly tense—and then she went on. "I can tell you," she said. "That Tracy King was an evil man. He indulged in strong drink. He was sinful and dissipated. At night when decent folks were asleep in their beds he engaged in carryings-on I'd be ashamed to mention. His moral character—"

"Just a minute," McNeal interrupted. "How are you so sure of all this?"

"Miss Hollister eyed him disdainfully. "My brother and I have lived in this hotel since the building was opened," she said. "We're respectable, law-abiding folks. The manager of the building can tell you we aren't complainers either, since that good-for-nothing Tracy King moved into the apartment above this place has been bedlam!" she repeated emphatically. "Not a minute's sleep at night. Horn-toting and radios and jazz dancing at all hours! Wild parties. I guess I know! I've got ears, haven't I? I've got eyes. Ask me how I know a thing like that!"

"FROM the infection of her voice it seemed that Captain McNeal should have willed instantly. But Captain McNeal did not will.

"So his parties disturbed you, did they?" he said evenly. "Did you ever speak to him about it?"

"The pale eyes flashed. "I certainly did," Miss Hollister said. "For a night or two it was quiet. Then—the same thing over again! What did Tracy King care how decent, respectable folks lost their sleep? He was an evil man, I tell you. It's the devil's work he was doing and the devil who came for him—"

There was a slight noise behind them and Banister turned. The door into the next room had opened and a man stood on the threshold. He was under average height—a little man with thinning gray hair and mild eyes behind spectacles. He wore a dark woolen house jacket. For an instant he stood there, eyeing the group in some perplexity.

Before the new-comer could speak, Melvina had seen him. She turned sharply. "Matthew," she said. "You keep out of this!"

"Oh!" said the little man. "I didn't know—I was just waiting." He turned to withdraw. His words unfinished, but McNeal stopped him.

"There's no reason to talk to you," McNeal said. "I'll ask you questions, if you don't mind. I came here to see your brother as well as you."
"Excuse me, Miss Hollister," McNeal interrupted. "I'll ask you questions, if you don't mind. I came here to see your brother as well as you."
McNeal looked nettled. He was accustomed to doing the questioning himself. "We came," he said crisply, "to find out what you can tell us about Tracy King, the young man who was murdered upstairs."
"Oh!" The line of Miss Hollister's lips became straighter than ever. There was a pause—a moment oddly tense—and then she went on. "I can tell you," she said. "That Tracy King was an evil man. He indulged in strong drink. He was sinful and dissipated. At night when decent folks were asleep in their beds he engaged in carryings-on I'd be ashamed to mention. His moral character—"
"Just a minute," McNeal interrupted. "How are you so sure of all this?"
"Miss Hollister eyed him disdainfully. "My brother and I have lived in this hotel since the building was opened," she said. "We're respectable, law-abiding folks. The manager of the building can tell you we aren't complainers either, since that good-for-nothing Tracy King moved into the apartment above this place has been bedlam!" she repeated emphatically. "Not a minute's sleep at night. Horn-toting and radios and jazz dancing at all hours! Wild parties. I guess I know! I've got ears, haven't I? I've got eyes. Ask me how I know a thing like that!"
"FROM the infection of her voice it seemed that Captain McNeal should have willed instantly. But Captain McNeal did not will.
"So his parties disturbed you, did they?" he said evenly. "Did you ever speak to him about it?"
"The pale eyes flashed. "I certainly did," Miss Hollister said. "For a night or two it was quiet. Then—the same thing over again! What did Tracy King care how decent, respectable folks lost their sleep? He was an evil man, I tell you. It's the devil's work he was doing and the devil who came for him—"
There was a slight noise behind them and Banister turned. The door into the next room had opened and a man stood on the threshold. He was under average height—a little man with thinning gray hair and mild eyes behind spectacles. He wore a dark woolen house jacket. For an instant he stood there, eyeing the group in some perplexity.
Before the new-comer could speak, Melvina had seen him. She turned sharply. "Matthew," she said. "You keep out of this!"
"Oh!" said the little man. "I didn't know—I was just waiting." He turned to withdraw. His words unfinished, but McNeal stopped him.

THANKSGIVING

Shall We Pass It Up This Year?

SINCE the days of the Pilgrim Fathers, Thanksgiving has been an occasion of gratitude and joy. The day was set apart for pause and reflection — to celebrate a plentiful harvest — to enjoy the feeling of security, peace and contentment that are the honest rewards of an able and industrious people.

kept resolutely on a fighting course through the worst of this period. Now that we are nearing the end our hopes are rising, our energies are redoubled, our faith in ourselves, our railroad and the Southwest is more firmly entrenched than ever.

territory, full of natural resources and peopled with a race in whom the determination to succeed is but a reflection of the traditional hardiness of the pioneers who settled the Great Southwest.

But What of Thanksgiving, 1933? So many of the desirable things—the blessings that we took for granted as justly ours — seem to have vanished from our midst. Crops still thrive in our land, but are saleable only at prices still too low.

Not a complaint do we utter, not a mutter of discontent, not a plea for sympathy. To the contrary, we are full of gratitude that we have come so far along the road—that we have succeeded in our zeal to preserve our identity as a pure Southwestern institution—that we have made such a truly wonderful record, in the midst of a period that has been a trial by fire.

Greatest of all, the people of the Southwest are with the Katy—they recognize what its pioneering has meant in opening and developing the territory and what its service to the community has since been. So long as the Katy can count on the support of such a people, the discouragements and disappointments we have recently shared together will soon be forgotten in the greater Southwestern prosperity that is certain to come.

"People of the Southwest—let us all celebrate Thanksgiving as of old. Let us forget the past, except the lessons it has taught, and set our eyes resolutely on the future." M. H. CAHILL

Small wonder, then, that Thanksgiving, 1933, can become so easily a bitter mockery — any of us can make it so by brooding over our disappointments of the past four trying years, and contemplating a future which still appears to be uncertain. Take our railroad for example—

Thanksgiving now has for us a deeper significance than ever. For events of recent years have proven to us again that a good offense is often the best defense—that people still recognize and will loyally patronize an institution that is conscientiously run in their service and best interests — that one of the best ways in the world to get business is first to deserve it by courageously providing superior facilities and service, not fearing the immediate cost of doing so.

People of the Southwest—let us all celebrate Thanksgiving as of old. Let us forget the past, except the lessons it has taught, and set our eyes resolutely on the future.

Having reestablished these principles in the very teeth of depression, we look upon Thanksgiving as a day of thanksgiving, for we have much to be thankful for.

A Great Railroad Gives Thanks — We have a great railroad that has been maintained at the highest peak of efficient service of any time in its proud history. We serve a great and rich ter-

GIFT TO C. H. S.
 What would C. H. S. go without Mrs. Irby? She would miss us when we leave; she gives us a word of encouragement when we are down, and now she is beating Old Santa at his own game! Those lovely blue curtains that she used in the program last Thursday night are to stay! No longer do we have to look at that awful interior that has been used and misused since 1924, nor do we have to gaze at that bare brick wall! Everyone should be so happy to have that soft blue background that no caution as to how to take care of it should be necessary.

From the depths of our hearts,
 Dear Santa Claus, Thank you!

RANGER PROTEST FAILED
 Ranger, a few days ago, declared Horace Hill ineligible and forfeited all the games in which he played. Later they retracted their forfeit to Cisco on the grounds that Cisco had the evidence on Hill before the Ranger. Cisco game, but at a meeting Tuesday night the district committee, declared that the Ranger school did not have any grounds upon which to retract the forfeit to Cisco. Now we have the same chance at the district championship we had after the first forfeit by Ranger.

The Loboes are going to Abilene Thursday for their annual grid battle with the Eagles. If the Loboes win Thursday, Abilene will come to Cisco to play off the tie probably on the following Saturday.

It is up to the student body to concentrate all of their time and energy to "Picking the Eagles."

LEAVE US
 Louise and Jack Stephenson withdrew from Cisco high school last week to enroll in San Angelo high school. It was with real regret we said goodbye to Louise and Jack, but we wish for them much happiness and many new friends in their new home—and don't forget—there's always a welcome when you come back to see us!

POPULARITY CONTEST RESULTS

Tipton Page, with Bayard McMahon just one vote behind, was voted the most handsome boy in C. H. S. in the contest sponsored by the "Howl" last week. The student body evidently had quite a problem to settle for there were twenty two other names submitted in the race for most handsome boy!

Forbes Lee Wallace was chosen as most popular by a big majority. However fifteen other names appeared in ballots.

As most talented Bobby Kilpatrick scored highest, with just seven others entered in competition. Judson Russell and Cecil Hudson were tied in the race for best groomed boy until the last ballot counted gave first honors to Judson. Judging from the ballot box there are 13 other well-groomed boys in our midst.

Of the fifteen names submitted for cleverest boy J. H. Latson's received most votes.

C. H. S. boasts 18 gentlemen! Yes, sir, but of the lot Roy Mead scores high point man in gentlemanly qualities with Ralph Nance as second choice.

The race for honors for the girls is to held next week and the "Howl" urges every member of the student body to put his vote in the box in the library.

MISS DANIEL TAKES CLASSES IN ENGLISH AND PUBLIC SPEAKING TO LIBRARY

That her pupils in Junior English and Public Speaking may have a better knowledge of the reference books in the library and some understanding of their use, Miss Daniel has been bringing to the library these two classes at their recitation periods, for almost two weeks.

CALENDAR

Tuesday—November 21: Club meeting.
 Wednesday—November 22: Another program given by volunteers.

Thursday—November 23: Play chapel sponsored by the pep squad. The students certainly enjoyed it.

Friday—November 24: That "good old fighting spirit" is coming back to us again after an absence of two weeks. The whole student body and faculty is getting ready for the "big game" next Thursday.

Monday—November 26: We had a nice chapel program. There were three musical numbers and then a pep rally.

These courses in library instruction began with a lecture by the librarian, Mrs. Irby, after which she pointed out the most important reference books and their places on the shelves.

Miss Daniel, then, gave each one a problem to work out. After this was finished, she assigned subjects for bibliographies to each pupil with instructions to get every bit of material in the library on his subject.

Things began to hum. Eyes and minds were opened to many heretofore undiscovered values hidden in those books. Book that had been just books to them became rich mines of information. Some distinctions too, were registered in their minds concerning the various classes of books.

After each of these bibliographies has been checked by both Miss Daniel and Mrs. Irby, all of them will be filled for term these references, etc. A good work has been started, a work of untold value and possibility. Every child in high school should be given instruction in library usage commensurate with his age and power to comprehend.

Both Miss Watson and Miss Chambliss are planning to bring their classes soon. It is a requirement now that the library shall be a workshop, a laboratory, a lyceum for the mind, as well as a playground.

CHAPTER XVIII OF THIS STORY WILL BE FOUND ON PAGE TWO

The UNKNOWN BLOND

By Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Who killed TRACY KING, orchestra leader found dead in his apartment?
 DAVID BANISTER, author, former newspaper reporter, undertakes to find out.
 Police are searching for an "unknown blond" who visited King shortly before his death. Banister has seen the girl, but who has she disappeared?
 HERMAN SULLIVAN, who wrote King a threatening letter, is in jail. He accuses his former friend, AL LINDSEY, friend of King's, says the orchestra leader has been having trouble with JOE PARLOTT, his former vaudeville partner, and accuses Parrott of the murder. Parrott's wife MELVINA HOLLISTER, middle-aged spinster, had a violent quarrel with King after his death. Her husband had a violent quarrel with King after his death.
 CAPTAIN MENZIE of the detective bureau says he has interviewed Hollister and her brother, MATTHEW. When he leaves he declares, "These eyes will bear watching."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX
 THE stream of yellow sunshine fell directly upon David Banister's face. It wavered gently, as the curtains at the open window blew inward, then settled across the ridge of Banister's nose.
 The sleeping man wrinkled his face into a grimace. The sunshine persisted. Banister emitted a sound between a grunt and a whimper, turned on his side. For a moment he lay peacefully, but the movement had aroused him. His eyes opened—two narrow slits—and he frowned at the light. Then the eyes opened wider. Banister looked about him bewildered.
 He was not, as he had been dreaming, in a subterranean cavern, Adele Allen was not beside him, wearing a green costume, brandishing a revolver and threatening to shoot him if he did not help her escape from the giant canary bird pursuing her. The rest of the horrid vision faded and Banister was tremendously relieved. He was not a murderer or accused of murder. Melvina Hollister was not there, nor a jaunty vaudeville singer who said his name was Galsey.
 Banister sat up with a start. The thought of Galsey brought the events of the preceding day before him clearly. No wonder he had dreamed of murder and murderers! In his imaginings the figure of Galsey, the Post reporter, had merged into that of Tracy King, the orchestra leader. But it was King who had been murdered. Banister remembered that. He remembered the brownish stain on the carpet of the hotel bedroom. He remembered, too, that he had promised Jim Paxton to work on the murder story for the Post.
 Banister pulled his wrist watch toward him and saw that it was nearly 8:30. A fine hour to be waking! Galsey had been on the job for at least half an hour. Probably longer. Yes, a fine hour it was to be getting up and a fine lot of help he, David Banister, was to get. He stood up, realizing that he was tired. Too much running around yesterday. He wasn't used to it. The whole idea was a pack of nonsense—
 But by the time he had finished his shower, David Banister's spirits were rising. He could hardly wait to rise the morning newspaper to find out if any new developments in the murder had been reported. Newspaper trailing reassociated itself and he was eager to know if the morning paper, the opposition, had scored a beat of any sort.
 He came downstairs whistling, crossed the dining room and appeared in the kitchen doorway. "Morning, Aunt Kate!"

 HIS aunt looked up, then went on removing golden brown slices of French toast from a smoking skillet. "Morning," she said crisply. "Go on into the dining room. David, breakfast'll be on the table in a second."
 Banister located the newspaper on the living room table and opened out the pages. There was plenty about the King murder, but there was nothing that Banister did not know. It gave him a feeling of relief. He was glad to know nothing important had happened while he was asleep. Headlines told of the search for "another suspect" whose name was not given. Druggan's story was credited to a "close friend of the dead man," also anonymous. Apparently no one on the rival newspaper had heard of Matthew and Melvina Hollister's connection with the case. At least it was not mentioned.
 There was nothing new in the columns about the murder but still Banister read them eagerly. Half way through the story of the new suspect, he was interrupted.
 "It was his aunt calling and Aunt Kate would brook no delay at meal time."
 "Coming!" Banister answered. An instant later he appeared in the dining room, the newspaper in his hand.
 The odor of fried ham and coffee and the French toast won him from his preoccupation, however. "Aunt Kate," he began, "there's not another cook like you in the whole country!"
 She stopped him with a glance. "Never mind the fatery," she said. "Maybe you've something to say, David Banister, about what you were doing all day yesterday. Lighting out after breakfast and not showing up again until midnight! I thought it was rest you came to Tremont for!"
 While she had been talking she was pouring the coffee. Now she handed him a cup.
 BANNISTER grinned. He didn't mind being addressed as though he were a 14-year-old. It was like old times. "Important business," he told her. "I've got a job."
 "A what?"
 "I've got a job. A respectable one. Newspaper reporter. I'm working on 'The Post.'"
 Kate Hewlett waited. "Well?" she asked when he did not continue.
 "That's all there is to it. Jim Paxton offered me a job on The Post and I took it. I'm working on this murder case."
 The elevation of Mrs. Hewlett's eyebrows was expressive. "So that's it," she said. "You couldn't keep out of it! Something nice and graceful and—and criminal happens, like a murder, and you couldn't keep out of it. I don't approve of this, David. I don't approve of it at all!"
 But she didn't mean that. There was no disapproval in her voice and none in her eager eyes as she asked a moment later, "David—who do they think did it?"
 "Oh, I don't know. It's hard to say now."
 Mrs. Hewlett frowned. "I don't mean this man they've got locked in jail," she persisted, "or the other one they're looking for." (Banister noted she had missed none of the details of the newspaper account.)

BEGIN HERE TODAY

always," Mrs. Hewlett said, "one special one the police know is guilty? Isn't there always one they don't tell anything about?"
 "Sometimes," Banister nodded. "But I don't think there is in this case. The whole thing's a muddle."
 "But who do you think did it?"
 He smiled. "Aunt Kate, I'm not smart enough to study a murder for five or six hours and then unerringly point out the guilty person. And"—he paused thoughtfully—"I don't think there's anyone else in Tremont who can do that either."
 Banister finished his breakfast briefly and took the car down town. It was 10 o'clock by the time he reached the city room of the Post. Paxton was not in sight. Austin, the assistant city editor, was busy at his desk and there was no one else about whom Banister knew. Without waiting, he went on to central headquarters.
 THE officer at the desk recognized him and Banister nodded. He went on into the corridor, almost bumping into Cunningham who came flying down the stairs.
 "Listen," Cunningham said tersely, "tell Galsey I'm going out with Murphy, will you? Some kind of a holdup out in the Heights. Tell him—"
 "Sure," said Banister, "but where'll I find him?"
 Cunningham motioned toward the stairs. "Up there," he said. "They're all up there. Did you know they've got the girl? Galsey's phoning the office now."
 He would have gone but Banister caught his arm. "What girl?" he demanded. "You mean—?"
 "That blond dame they were looking for. I've got to beat it now!"
 Cunningham was gone. In a dozen strides Banister made the top of the stairs. A man in a dark suit and a janitor were the only ones in sight.
 "I'm looking for Galsey of the Post," Banister said to the janitor. "Have you seen him?"
 The man motioned toward a half-opened door and Banister hurried toward it. He heard Galsey's voice before he saw him. Galsey and three others were in the room. One man was whittling a lead pencil and the others were talking over telephones. Galsey's voice was louder, more excited than the rest.
 Banister said to the man who was whittling, "I understand they've found the girl they were looking for."
 The stranger nodded. "Anyone talk to her?" Banister asked.
 "She won't talk."
 "Where is she?"
 The other motioned with his hand. A figure passed the door and Banister recognized it. "McNeal," he called, hurrying outside. "Oh, Captain McNeal!"
 There was considerable head-shaking but Banister finally had his way. Ten minutes later he passed through a barred door into a wide corridor. There was another barred door and then a woman in blue directed him toward a row of cells.
 The first cell was unoccupied. The woman in the second was fat. Her hair was brown and she was asleep. Banister walked slowly. He came to the third cell and the fourth and then he stopped. Gray eyes looked at him through the steel bars. "Oh!" the girl said. "You!"

Commercial arithmetic is so hard "figuratively speaking," says Rankin.

Hodges is quite proud of his big handsome self; he won a game of Tango at the Carnival Friday night. He won a box of ladies handkerchiefs, and he did so want one of those little toy horses.

—And just about that time the Senior boys decided to whip all the girls who wore boots and trousers to the winter-roast. Not only did they decide to do, but they immediately carried into action the foregoing decision. The girls took it—but they didn't like it. You can just bet they didn't.

Everyone is anxiously anticipating the big battle in Abilene on "Turkey Day." It won't be long now 'til those Eagles show the white feather. Win? Certainly we're going to win!

Those wishing to see some evidence of the fact that time does fly (even here at school) will please go to the Commercial Room. We have Marien Waters and Delmar Borman to thank for fixing the clock. Since they have removed some parts, it ticks right along.

"An Evening With Books," a charming pageant arranged and staged by Mrs. Irby, was presented at the high school auditorium, Thursday, November 23, 1933, at 7:45 o'clock.

The program was opened with several selections by Mr. Colium and the Martin Trio. In response to Mrs. Irby's request Mrs. H. V. House sang Mr. Colium's "Because I Love You, Dear."

While Mrs. James Moore read from "Hawatha" a pantomime was presented with Carl Siddall as Hawatha; Clark Webster, the Arrow-maker; Ruby Thompson, his wife; and Kathleen Wilson, the lovely Minnehaha.

Miss Madeline Ely, accompanied by Mrs. Allen Wood, sang two Indian selections.

As an introduction to the pageant of characters from "Books We Love, Noma King and Marie Qualls gave short readings on Books.

Characters from books known and loved by everyone stepped from the pages of a big book, the leaves turned by Delpha Mae Blair and Edna Cooles.

Robinson Crusoe (Hugh Chief Brown) with his gun and parrot led Longfellow's lovely Evangeline (Dixie Bells); Irving's Rip Van Winkle, the old sleepy head (Brooke Pearce); Alcott's "Old Fashioned Girl" (Maxine Burkett); Mark Twain's immortal boys, Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer (Bobby Anderson and Reuben Wendle); Kate Hill's "Crimson Roses" (Lene Poe-ster); Temple Bailey's "Gay Cockade" and Silver Slippers" (Forbes Lee Wallace and Larrairie Siddall); Tarkington's "Seventeen" (TeNella Nance); Duma's Three Musketeers (Judson Russell, Bayard McMahon and Billy Kilborn); Van Dyke's "Blue Flower" (Betty Elda Clark); Hemingway's "Farewell to Arms" (Martha Denerson and Louellyn Clark); When Knighthood was in Flower (Modern Version) with John St. John, a football hero and Virginia Lee Smith, the lovely lady who wore his colors.

After a reading, "Influence of Masterful Personalities in Books" by TeNella Nance, the pageant continued with boys and girls who became famous.

If you'll observe closely you will notice that at off moments, Dial and Bounds are given to puerile ways. Imagine, playing hopscotch of all childish games. Let us hope and pray that teaching school doesn't affect all persons in such a manner.

Miss Dial has issued Wendell a search warrant that he might search J. E.'s desk for missing bookkeeping supplies. J. E. you must refrain from such a serious misdemeanor. Yours is a very disreputable characteristic, my boy, Tut! Tut!

Always the Finest Tobaccos AND Only the Center Leaves

Not only from our own Southland—but from Turkey—from Greece—from all over the world—the very cream of tobacco crops is gathered for Lucky Strike. And only the center leaves are used—no stem—no stalk. Each Lucky Strike is fully packed—firmly rolled. Even the ends of the cigarettes are filled—brimful of choicest tobaccos. No loose ends—that's why Luckies draw easily and burn evenly.

Always the finest tobaccos

M. E. SOCIETY HAS RECEPTION.

Members of the Women's Missionary society of the First Methodist church were hostesses at a lovely affair on Tuesday afternoon, entertaining in the home of Mrs. S. H. Nance on West Seventh street. As guests entered, they were greeted by Mrs. Nance who in turn presented them to the honor guests, Rev. and Mrs. Frank L. Turner, Rev. and Mrs. C. Q. Smith, and Mrs. Neal Turner. The living room of the Nance home was beautifully decorated with large baskets of chrysanthemums, and sprigs of holly were used in an attractive way to decorate the mantelpiece. At intervals during the afternoon a program was presented, including vocal solos by Miss Marjorie Barker, Mrs. R. N. Cluck, and Miss Marion Jacobs, and musical selections by little Miss Betty Jean Turner.

An autumn theme was given emphasis in the dining room, where refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, tea cake, and candy were served. The dining table, laid with a beautiful lace cloth over green, was centered with a mound of fruit. Mrs. T. J. Dean and Mrs. N. W. Noell presided over the refreshment table, and were assisted by Mrs. O. S. Leveridge and Mrs. C. H. Parish. Guests who called during the afternoon included not only members of the Methodist church, but members of all other churches of the city.

"Kid" Favorite Name For Boys of Ring

AUSTIN, Nov. 29.—"Kid" is the favorite nickname of the boys of the cauliflowerered ears and flattened noses. It leads all others in the number of ring names among the 450 fighters licensed by the state from Boxing Bear Jack Flynn.

"Babe" so popular in other sports appears seldom. One of the few is a "Babe Ruth" in private life the handsome of the ring is Glenn Warren Bath of Amarillo.

A flavor of the diamond also creeps into the ring name of Cipri, also Batista, of Beaumont. He registers as "Speedball Cite."

Managers are convinced that a hard name draws at the box office. Among the favorites are: "Battler," "Beachhouse," "Tuffy," "Scarface" and "Tiger." There is the "Fighting Demon," Hardie Lake of Godley, Texas, while Jester and Otis McWhorter of Panama and Dallas bill themselves as "Jet Granite" and "Kid Granite" indicating they are hard enough for all comers.

Burt E. Merritt of Waco, is introduced in the ring as "Scrap Iron."

"Tex" appears opposite the names of few of the registered boxers, despite the close association of the name with the ring through the late "Tex" Ricard and the fact that a large per cent of the licensed boxers live in Texas. An exception is "Texas Thompson" who is Isaiah Burr, Edinburg, Texas.

John Martinez of El Paso, worked

in a variation of the "Kid" and "Babe" theme. He goes as "Baby Dempsey." James Henderson of Galveston is "Gold Front." John and Frank Terrapin of Talleguah, Okla., fight as "Chief" and "Little Chief", respectively.

Though there is biblical authority for maintaining that David is a good fighting name, James David Murphy of Houston discards it in favor of "Jimmy" as his roped arena title.

A SPIRIT OF THANKSGIVING

- It is peculiarly fitting that our minds should turn to thoughts of Thanksgiving at this season of the year when harvests have been and are being garnered and the year drawing near a close.
- While being truly thankful to our Creator for life and its blessings, we also think of our friends who have been the means of many temporal blessings to us.
- And so while thankful to the Giver of all blessings, we want to pause a moment and drop a word of gratitude and appreciation to the business friends who have been loyal and true through the years, that they may know they are being remembered kindly at this time.

Sincerely,

Thanksgiving!

We, like the Pilgrim Fathers, are thankful for the blessings of life, health and happiness. In addition to our gratitude to God, the giver of all blessings, we wish to speak a word of good cheer and thanks to our friends and patrons with whom we have come in contact with in 1933 and in past years.

Please accept this as our wish for a truly happy Thanksgiving for each of you.

JANGLED NERVES THAT CONSTANT TICKING IS DRIVING ME CRAZY!

Jangled nerves can make an evening at home a nightmare

An evening at home ruined by jangled nerves!... Rustling of papers, ticking of clocks, and other little things that ordinarily don't matter, driving one crazy! To get full enjoyment out of living your nerves must be under perfect control.

Watch your nerves... Get your full amount of sleep every night. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation.

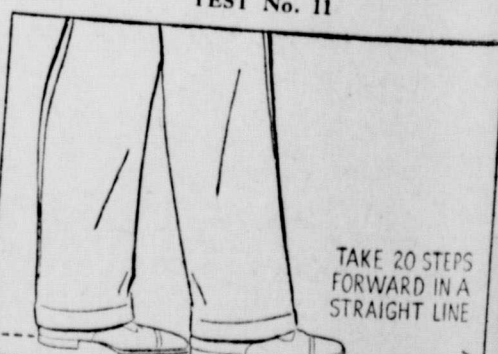

And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand of cigarettes!

How are YOUR nerves? TEST No. 11

Beginning with your left foot—place the heel of one foot in front of and against the toe of the other foot. Take twenty steps forward in a straight line. See how quickly you can complete this test. An average record is 12 seconds. Irving Jaffee (Camel smoker), famous Olympic skating champion, can take the 20 steps in 7 seconds.

LONG SHOW IN LOUISIANA NOW HAS TWO RINGS

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 29.—Louisiana's political sideshow boasted two rings today instead of one—the senate sub-committee inquiry into the P. Long's regime here and a spectacular revolt against him in the sixth congressional district at Baton Rouge.

More than two hours after the negro had been hanged, hundreds of citizens gathered about, shouting, laughing and jostling. Occasionally fresh fuel was added to the fire.

Physicians revived him after an hour of resuscitation efforts, but late in the day he was seized with convulsions and hemorrhages and succumbed at 4:30 Wednesday morning.

Active pall bearers for the funeral were Joe Britain, Arthur Johnson, Paul Hueston, Adrian Swindle, Arlen Agnew and Everett Clements.

THANKSGIVING

Shall We Pass It Up This Year?

SINCE the days of the Pilgrim Fathers, Thanksgiving has been an occasion of gratitude and joy. The day was set apart for pause and reflection—to celebrate a plentiful harvest—to enjoy the feeling of security, peace and contentment that are the honest rewards of an able and industrious people.

But What of Thanksgiving, 1933?

So many of the desirable things—the blessings that we took for granted as justly ours—seem to have vanished from our midst. Crops still thrive in our land, but are saleable only at prices still too low. Despite the sincerest efforts of the National Administration, thousands of self-respecting men, eager to support their families, have not yet found employment. Rare is the person into whose existence depression has not intruded its devitalizing influence.

Small wonder, then, that Thanksgiving, 1933, can become so easily a bitter mockery—any of us can make it so by brooding over our disappointments of the past four trying years, and contemplating a future which still appears to be uncertain. Take our railroad for example—

If we chose to make Thanksgiving this year an occasion for gloom, we could do so as easily as any individual. Even a brief review of the obstacles we have had to overcome could make us feel that the fruits of the supreme effort we have put forth are meager indeed.

Hopes are Rising—Faith is Strong

But we do not choose to see the dark side. We have kept resolutely on a fighting course through the worst of this period. Now that we are nearing the end our hopes are rising, our energies are redoubled, our faith in ourselves, our railroad and the Southwest is more firmly entrenched than ever.

Not a complaint do we utter, not a mutter of discontent, not a plea for sympathy. To the contrary, we are full of gratitude that we have come so far along the road—that we have succeeded in our zeal to preserve our identity as a pure Southwestern institution—that we have made such a truly wonderful record, in the midst of a period that has been a trial by fire.

*"People of the Southwest—let us all celebrate Thanksgiving as of old. Let us forget the past, except the lessons it has taught, and set our eyes resolutely on the future."
... M. H. CAHILL*

Thanksgiving now has for us a deeper significance than ever. For events of recent years have proven to us again that a good offense is often the best defense—that people still recognize and will loyally patronize an institution that is conscientiously run in their service and best interests—that one of the best ways in the world to get business is first to deserve it by courageously providing superior facilities and service, not fearing the immediate cost of doing so.

Having reestablished these principles in the very teeth of depression, we look upon Thanksgiving as a day of thanksgiving, for we have much to be thankful for.

A Great Railroad Gives Thanks—

We have a great railroad that has been maintained at the highest peak of efficient service of any time in its proud history. We serve a great and rich territory, full of natural resources and peopled with a race in whom the determination to succeed is but a reflection of the traditional hardiness of the pioneers who settled the Great Southwest.

Greatest of all, the people of the Southwest are with the Katy—they recognize what its pioneering has meant in opening and developing the territory and what its service to the community has since been. So long as the Katy can count on the support of such a people, the discouragements and disappointments we have recently shared together will soon be forgotten in the greater Southwestern prosperity that is certain to come.

People of the Southwest—let us all celebrate Thanksgiving as of old. Let us forget the past, except the lessons it has taught, and set our eyes resolutely on the future.

M. E. SOCIETY HAS RECEPTION.

Members of the Women's Missionary society of the First Methodist church were hostesses at a lovely affair on Tuesday afternoon, entertaining in the home of Mrs. S. H. Nance on West Seventh street. As guests entered, they were greeted by Mrs. Nance who in turn presented them to the honor guests, Rev. and Mrs. Frank L. Turner, Rev. and Mrs. C. Q. Smith, and Mrs. Neal Turner. The living room of the Nance home was beautifully decorated with large baskets of chrysanthemums, and sprigs of holly were used in an attractive way to decorate the mantelpiece. At intervals during the afternoon a program was presented, including vocal solos by Miss Marjorie Barker, Mrs. R. N. Clark, and Miss Marion Jacobs, and musical selections by little Miss Betty Jean Turner.

An autumn theme was given emphasis in the dining room, where refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, tea, cake, and candy were served. The dining table, laid with a beautiful lace cloth over green, was centered with a mound of fruit. Mrs. T. J. Dean and Mrs. N. W. Noell presided over the refreshment table, and were assisted by Mrs. O. S. Leveridge and Mrs. C. H. Parish. Guests who called during the afternoon included not only members of the Methodist church, but members of all other churches of the city.

MISS HICKS ENTERTAINS FOR S. S. CLASS.

Miss Lucille Hicks, teacher of the 8 year old boys class of the First Baptist Sunday school, entertained for class members with a party on Tuesday evening at her home. Various party games were played during the evening. The hostess served refreshments of hot chocolate and cookies. Favors were candy walking canes.

"Kid" Favorite Name For Boys of Ring

AUSTIN, Nov. 29.—"Kid" is the favorite nickname of the boys of the professional ring and flattened noses. It leads all others in the number of ring names among the 450 fighters licensed by the state from Boxing Czar Jack Flynn.

"Babe", so popular in other sports appears seldom. One of the few is a "Babe Ruth" in private life the bambino of the ring is Glenn Warren Ruth of Amarillo.

A flavor of the diamond also creeps into the ring name of Cipriano Bantista of Beaumont. He registers as "Speedball Cite."

Managers are convinced that a hard name draws at the box office. Among the favorites are: "Battler," "Roughhouse," "Tuffy," "Scarface," and "Tiger." There is the "Fighting Demon" Hardie Lake of Godley, Texas, while Jester and Otis McWhorter of Pampa and Dallas bill themselves as "Jet Granite" and "Kid Granite" indicating they are hard enough for all comers.

Bud E. Mevitt of Waco, is introduced in the ring as "Scrap Iron."

"Tex" appears opposite the names of few of the registered boxers, despite the close association of the name with the ring through the late "Tex" Ricard and the fact that a large per cent of the licensed boxers live in Texas. An exception is "Texas Thompson" who is Isalah Barr, Edinburgh, Texas.

John Martinez of El Paso, worked

in a variation of the "Kid" and "Babe" theme. He goes as "Baby Dempsey." James Henderson of Galveston is "Gold Front." John and Frank Terrapin of Tallequah, Okla., fight as "Chief" and "Little Chief", respectively.

Though there is biblical authority for maintaining that David is a good fighting name, James David Murphy of Houston discards it in favor of "Jimmy" as his roped arena title.

A SPIRIT OF THANKSGIVING

- It is peculiarly fitting that our minds should turn to thoughts of Thanksgiving at this season of the year when harvests have been and are being garnered and the year drawing near a close.
- While being truly thankful to our Creator for life and its blessings, we also think of our friends who have been the means of many temporal blessings to us.
- And so while thankful to the Giver of all blessings, we want to pause a moment and drop a word of gratitude and appreciation to the business friends who have been loyal and true through the years, that they may know they are being remembered kindly at this time.

Sincerely,

Smart buyers ARE PUTTING ON NEW GOODYEARS Now!

FIRST

for non-skid safety and protection against trouble on winter's slippery, darker, colder roads.

SECOND

for greater mileage. New rubber wears longer on cool roads. Goodyears put on now will still be almost new next spring.

THIRD

for low-cost economy. Most Goodyears today are still lower-priced than a year ago.

Good reasons, these, for buying now. Why not trade up your troubles before they happen?

Most sizes as low-priced as a year ago—yet you get a 20% thicker tread with Full Center Traction and greater mileage.

Thanks-giving!

We, like the Pilgrim Fathers, are thankful for the blessings of life, health and happiness. In addition to our gratitude to God, the giver of all blessings, we wish to speak a word of good cheer and thanks to our friends and patrons with whom we have come in contact with in 1933 and in past years.

Please accept this as our wish for a truly happy Thanksgiving for each of you.

Jangled nerves can make an evening at home a nightmare

THAT CONSTANT TICKING IS DRIVING ME CRAZY!

Jangled nerves... Rustling of papers, ticking of clocks, and other little things that ordinarily don't matter, driving one crazy! To get full enjoyment out of living your nerves must be under perfect control.

Watch your nerves... Get your full amount of sleep every night. Eat regularly and sensibly. Find time for recreation.

And smoke Camels—for Camel's costlier tobaccos never get on your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand of cigarettes!

CAMELS — THEY NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES

How are YOUR nerves? TEST No. 11

TAKE 20 STEPS FORWARD IN A STRAIGHT LINE

Beginning with your left foot—place the heel of one foot in front of and against the toe of the other foot. Take twenty steps forward in a straight line. See how quickly you can complete this test. An average record is 12 seconds.

Irving Jaffee (Camel smoker), famous Olympic skating champion, can take the 20 steps in 7 seconds.
