TO MOVE "DOWN UNDER"

Amos Persons

Southern Union Gas Company, whose Home Office is Dallas, is proceeding with plans announced earlier this year to participate with a group of companies in constructing a 280-mile natural gas pipeline in Australia and has named Amos Persons of Farmington to head its operations there.

Persons, who has been Southern Union's transmission manager in Farmington, New Mexico, will be general manager of the Company's Australian operations. Also scheduled to go "down under" is Rudy Motto, who has been named general superintendent. Motto has been named general superintendent of the Farmington area.

Persons is scheduled to leave for Australia in September and Motto will depart shortly after the first of the year. The Persons family will live in Brisbane, capital of the state of Queensland, and the Mottos will reside in the city of Roma, located in a gas-producing region some 300 miles west of Brisbane.

When completed, the pipeline that will be built by Southern Union and others will deliver natural gas from producing wells near Roma to the Brisbane area. Also due to receive natural gas service will be a $50 million fertilizer plant scheduled to be built in a new industrial section of Brisbane.

Persons has been with Southern Union since 1950 when he was employed in Durango. He transferred to Farmington that same year and later served in various capacities for the Company in Gallup and Santa Fe before moving back to Farmington in 1957 as district superintendent. In 1960 he was named transmission manager at Farmington.

Now in his second term as a director of the San Juan Country Club, Persons also has served on the Credit Advisory Committee of the San Juan Hospital.

Persons and his wife, Wreathel, have two married daughters and a son, Andy, who attends Eastern New Mexico University at Portales.

A bill to allow teachers to deduct costs of educational expenses was introduced by Congressman Bob Price last week.

Price joined other Republicans in co-sponsoring the measure which, he said, was needed because of constantly rising costs and would be an incentive for a teacher to further his or her education and in turn, upgrade our educational system.

Price said adjustments made by the Internal Revenue Service are not enough and that presently, education expenses must be itemized with other deductions and, together, exceeded the amount of standard deduction.

"Also," Price added, "present regulations do not include expenses for education which will qualify a teacher for a new trade, position, business or specialty."

"This may restrict a teacher from furthering his qualifications which might lead to administrative positions and there are other restrictions which should be removed," Price said.

Deductible expenses in the Price bill would also include basic traveling expenses.

Notice!

It has been brought to our attention several times in the past that the condition of the City Dump Ground is not good.

We have been real fortunate to have a good place to dispose of our refuse; sometimes, however, we take these things for granted and often abuse them.

We have found in the past few weeks that someone has been putting dead animals, and the waste from butchering, etc., at the dump ground. This is not permitted for several, but mainly from the health standpoint. Dead animals should be disposed of by those who pick them up for rendering purposes or by burning. Please, do not take them to the dump ground. Please do not dump paper, or paper boxes, or any other material that will blow into the pastures surrounding the dump ground. All trash should be dumped into the canyon, not just on the edge.

Please help us carry out these regulations, in order that we can keep our dump ground as clean and orderly as possible.

Cookware For Camping

One of the great things about camping is the way outdoor appetites seem to make everything taste better. Campsite cooking doesn't have to be elaborate to make every dish on the menu disappear into second and third helpings.

Since you have to carry your whole kitchen with you, you'll have to give careful attention to selecting your cookware for camping. It should be easy to transport, easy to clean and have good heat conductivity to make the most of the cooking heat available from camp stoves or fires.

Non-stick coated aluminum utensils—a couple of saucepans and at least one skillet—are perfect for outdoor cooking. It's strong yet light in weight, and the non-stick finish comes clean without scrubbing or using lots of precious water. Because aluminum has the highest heat conductivity of any metal commonly used for cookware, any aluminum utensil will take the heat from a small alcohol or butane stove and spread it evenly and rapidly, giving you better cooking with less fuel.

Several cookware manufacturers market special sets of aluminum camping cookware, designed to nest into a compact carrying case. When selecting your portable kitchen inventory, don't forget that most indispensable item, the coffee-pot.

Home-Grown Dipper

Just as in the early days of this country, Richard uses a dipper gourd to take a drink from an outdoor faucet. He grew the gourd and carved the dipper after harvesting and drying.

The first thing that Richard put next to his suitcase to take along with him to camp was his gourd dipper. Why? For one reason, because he grew it from a seed, carved it himself and is proud of it. For another, it is so light in weight that he can carry it on hikes and drink from any well or faucet.

Instead of holding just a little water like a folding drinking cup, it holds a lot and allows him a long, cool drink. Then he can pour cool water over his hands and refresh himself. If necessary, he can also use the dipper as a small wash basin.

The gourd from which Richard's dipper is made is one of many he grew from a packet of seeds of mixed gourds. Richard says that gourd seeds need to be planted in a sunny place where soil is good and vines will have support to climb. He grew his gourds next to the fence. He watered the plants when the weather was dry and fertilized them once a month. After the first frost he cut the big gourds with 2 inches of stem left on each. Then he hung them by tying a piece of string to each stem and the stems to a piece of clothes line strung across the attic.

Since cutting into gourds before they are thoroughly dry is easier, Richard carved his while still slightly soft to touch. He scraped the seeds from inside the gourd, sanded the inner walls smooth, scrubbed the insides, and drilled a hole through the neck so he could hang his dipper. How would you like to grow a dipper like his?

MAKE PLANS NOW FOR FERTILIZING WHEAT

The time is once again approaching to consider plans for fertilizing wheat to be planted this fall.

Since most soils vary in their ability to supply plant nutrients, the most logical starting point for determining fertilizer needs is the soil test.

By sampling early, the report will be received in time for making the final decision as to what kind and how much fertilizer to apply.

Nitrogen is the fertilizer element likely to be in shortest supply. Organic matter as measured by soil tests is one of the guides for determining how much nitrogen will be needed. However, such factors as the amount and stage of decomposition of previous crop residue, physical condition of the soil, ability to irrigate adequately and intended grazing practices will all influence the nitrogen need of the crop.

Data at the South Plains Research and Extension Center clearly indicates that where wheat is grown for grain only, the time of nitrogen application is of little importance. However, when wheat is to be grazed, physical condition of the soil, ability to irrigate adequately and intended grazing practices will all influence the nitrogen need of the crop.

Insufficient phosphorus can also limit production. Profitable response has long been evident on many of the sandy and mixed land soils. Yield increases have also been noted on Pullman soils shown to be deficient by soil testing.

Since phosphorus does not move appreciably with soil moisture, it must be placed in the soil where it will be within reach of the permanent roots. Therefore, preplant application is recommended. Wheat plants utilize much of the phosphorus when they are young.

All wheat growers are urged to send in soil samples as soon as possible. Complete information on sample collection and mailing is available at the county agent's office.

Briscoe County cattle producers, due to the current grazing conditions, are advised to check the diets of livestock on pasture to make sure they are getting a sufficient supply of minerals.

Minerals are not "cure-alls" but are essentials along with proteins, carbohydrates, fats and vitamins for good animal nutrition.

Cattle in Texas under normal grazing conditions require sodium, calcium, phosphorus, chlorine and additional trace minerals. Trace minerals are supplied in adequate amounts from natural forage and water.

Sodium and chloride are obtained from ordinary salt. Cattle should have free access to salt, preferably granular, at all times.

Calcium and phosphorus are obtained in natural conditions from green grazing foliage. However, such forages are often deficient and must be supplemented.

Phosphorus is usually more deficient than calcium in most regions in Texas, and results in loss of appetite and weight, decline in milk production, poor calf crop and failure to breed. Prolonged phosphorus deficiency causes cows to become lame and stiff in the joints.

Should this condition occur, you may add phosphorus directly to the drinking water.

NEWS from the High Plains Research Foundation

An exhibit, showing the results of fertilizer application compared to non-fertilized plants of the same crop will be a new feature in the Field Day program at the High Plains Research Foundation Thursday afternoon, September 14. The effect of the use of herbicides and insecticides will also be shown.

This new feature will be presented by the committee on fertilizer, herbicides and insecticides, headed by Ralph Wheeler, Chairman. The exhibit will be located in the head house of the Jim Hill Greenhouse which is attached to the Southwest corner of the Killgore Building. Fertilizer research on various varieties of soybeans can be seen in the greenhouse adjacent to the exhibit. Member of the committee will be hosts to the Field Day visitors during the entire afternoon at the exhibit.

This committee is recommending six additional fertilizer and two more herbicide research projects for 1968. Their proposals will be studied at the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Trustees on the morning of September 14.

For the fourth year an exhibit of cotton varieties, cotton products and gin equipment will be included in the Field Day exhibits. This exhibit has been popular on previous Field Days. The twenty-saw laboratory gin building will be the site of the cotton exhibit.
