Carter in New York

He hopes to woo Kennedy wing

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter arrived in triumph today to claim renomination, and immediately set about to woo the Kennedy wing of the Democratic party whose reticence about his candidacy clouds his efforts to win re-election.

To cheers of "Four More Years" and strains of "Happy Days are Here Again," Carter told supporters that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Tuesday night convention speech was "one of the greatest I ever heard," and expressed confidence that the party would emerge united to "whip the Republicans" in November.

Carter came from Washington on the day after the convention adopted a platform bearing Kennedy's stamp. His principle political mission was to coax a strong endorsement from Kennedy in an attempt to convert the senator's supporters, many of whom were threatening to sit out the campaign or even bolt to the independent candidacy of John Anderson.

Carter aides hoped to arrange a meeting between the president and Kennedy, but Carter said he didn't know yet if or when that might occur.

"I spoke to him last night and congratulated him on a wonderful speech," the president said of Kennedy, who dropped out of the race Monday night after

'Disgruntled' stay away from hearing

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

No "disgruntled" taxpayers showed up Tuesday to voice any contention with the Midland County commissioners who held a public hearing on the county's proposed 1981 tax rate.

Only one from the public — Dr. Norman Gould, an optometrist — made an appearance. He was not discontent — just curious about the drift of county taxes.

County Judge Bill Ahders, scanning the commissioners' courtroom for an audience, focused on Robert Rendall, assistant county attorney, who was seated in the courtroom as legal counsel to the commissioners and to the judge.

"Are you a disgruntled taxpayer?" Ahders asked Rendall, who shook his head "no" in quiet amusement.

Essentially, there was virtually nothing — and no one — to protest. The commissioners have agreed to set the tax rate at last year's rate: 95 cents per $100 valuation on 32 percent of fair market values.

Property valuations and assessments will remain the same as last year's. Exceptions to that will be property improvements, new businesses and residences and mineral values, which have doubled in value. However, the commissioners cut mineral valuations by 20 percent.

"We haven't changed our valuations, right, Frances?" Ahders asked of Frances Shuffield, chief deputy in the county's tax assessor-collector's office.

"Right," she responded. After next year, "all percentage assessments will be done away with," noted Commissioner Durward Wright, and, by state law, assessments will be based on 100 percent of fair market values.

However, Wright noted that when that occurs, the tax rate will drop accordingly — from 95 cents per $100 valuation to, say, 18 or 20 cents.

Total county taxes will remain about the same. "But there will be no change in the money paid," the commissioner speculated.

"That's what I wanted to know," said Dr. Gould.

The judge and commissioners seemed fairly pleased with the county's holding down taxes for 1981. But the court noted that city and school taxes are rising at inflationary rates. City taxes are going up by 15 percent; school taxes are increasing by 18 percent. However, fair market values have increased markedly.

Public hearing on the city tax rate was to be at 5 p.m. today in City Hall. The school's hearing is set for 5:15 p.m. Aug. 19 in the school's Administration Building.

"You want to go to the school and city (tax hearings)," suggested the judge.

"I probably will," said the optometrist.

"I'm thinking about it myself," said Ahders.

The judge, Commissioners Durward Wright, Charlie Welch, Jack Leonard and Win Brown waited for about 30 minutes for more of "the public" to show for the first of two hearings. None, except for Dr. Gould, did.

"Let me tell you, doctor," said Welch, "we appreciate your coming."

"It would be a complete bust (otherwise)," Gould replied.

The judge, the commissioners, Dr. Gould, Rendall, County Clerk Roselle Cherry, Auditor Johnnie Thompson and Ms. Shuffield got up to leave.

They, possibly excluding the doctor, will return at 1:30 p.m. Aug. 25 to look over the county's proposed $6.68 million budget for 1981, to hear out any disgruntled taxpayers and to set the 1981 tax rate.

"Taxes are too low," Commissioners Welch said in jest, "and I oppose any tax increase."

losing the crucial rules vote on an "open convention."

Kennedy has caused the Carter forces a little trouble here following the "open convention" fight. The senator's speech on the platform prompted the convention to adopt his positions and repudiate Carter's on the economy, the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion.

Asked about Kennedy's support Tuesday night as he returned to the White House from five days at the presidential retreat at Camp David, Md., Carter replied: "That's a decision for him to make."

And does he need that support, he was asked. "I can win much better with him," Carter replied. "It would certainly be beneficial for me to have his full support during the campaign."

There were some signs, however, that not all Kennedy's supporters would go along with a Kennedy endorsement. Kennedy's deputy campaign director, former Wisconsin Gov. Pat Lucey, resigned as-a delegate and said he would consider supporting independent candidate John Anderson. A machinists union official said some members who are delegates would walk out during Carter's acceptance speech to protest the president's economic policies.

As for Kennedy, in an impassioned speech that electrified the convention's Tuesday session, he called for a party victory in the fall but offered no direct endorsement of Carter.

After that speech, the convention was momentarily his. But it was a shallow victory for the Massachusetts senator, his presidential bid rejected and his major platform plank spurned by Carter.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Carter would formally notify the convention today that he cannot accept a plank calling for a $12 billion federal program to create 800,000 jobs. That plank was the one on which Kennedy chose to focus his fight "to renew the commitment of the Democratic Party to economic justice."

Asked why Carter was unwilling to accept the plank, White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "I can't imagine Senator Kennedy would expect the president overnight to change the position which he has held throughout this long campaign. I would think the senator and the American people would think less of the president if he changes his policy ... just to obtain some political advantage."

Under party rules, Carter must notify the convention of his disagreement with any platform plank within one hour of final approval of the document.

"Obviously, we have felt since the very beginning that a program such as the $12 billion federal jobs program is not the best way to go about aiding the recovery of the economy," Powell said. "We share the goals, but we disagree with the means and we'll make that clear."

Powell said that while Carter continues his strong support for the ERA, he opposes the platform plank calling on the party to withhold campaign funds and technical assistance from any candidate who opposes the amendment.

The convention also called for continued federal funding for abortions, a position Powell said Carter has opposed throughout his public life.

Among the remaining controversial planks to be taken up when the delegates returned to Madison Square Garden at noon EDT were those dealing with solar energy and the MX missile.

The solar energy plank calls for a commitment "to a federal program for solar or other renewable sources that exceed the federal commitment to synthetic fuels."

The minority plank on the MX flatly opposes deployment of the missile system favored by Carter.

Powell conceded that Carter faced a tough fight on the MX, but he added that "the president's position ... is clear and not alterable."

NOW wants text picture to show girl rowing too

AUSTIN (AP) — The picture in the first grade reading textbook seemed harmless enough. A boy and girl in a rowboat, with the boy rowing and the girl doing nothing in particular.

However, the Texas branch of the National Organization for Women found it objectionable.

"Give the girl an oar," NOW said in testimony presented to the State Textbook Committee on Tuesday.

NOW witnesses took up most of Tuesday's session. They complained many books being considered include bad stereotypes of females as timid girls and robot-like mothers.

"Students accept the concept that women are 'supposed' to be the caretakers of society and consequently suited for service jobs which are low-paid and permit little advancement," said a NOW statement.

Twiss Butler of Nassau Bay presented the complaints against several reading books from Laidlaw publishers. NOW objected to books from many publishers.

Hobert.

"Yes," laughed Williams, "and there will be some flying out in north Midland now."

Williams, who owns the Gulf Building, flies the Texas A&M University flag on his downtown building.

One part of the proposal bothered Councilman Carroll Thomas and that was the light industrial area that would be a buffer zone between Air Park and the offices. Williams said he was suggesting it as an area for restaurants or health clubs.

But Thomas pointed out it could be utilized for oil field supplies which would detract from the development.

Williams countered that "if I have to resort to a pipe yard, I've lost a lot of money. It's a major loss to me if anything second class goes in. Our intent is to be a first class development and we're not rushing into it."

The council changed the light industrial area to Planned District before approving the development and zone changes.

Also approved was a small office development just west of Williams' tract. This project by Bill Hickey is also east of office buildings being built by the I.D.P. Corp. These zone changes should mean that the open fields on the north side of Wadley Street will be converted in the next few years to a solid line of offices and

Kennedy's mind 'not made up' yet

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, the vanquished challenger whose oratory electrified the Democratic National Convention, has not decided whether to join President Carter on the podium in a closing show of unity Thursday night, a spokesman said today.

"He just hasn't made up his mind," said the spokesman, who asked not to be identified by name.

The spokesman said Carter called Kennedy on the telephone late Tuesday and complimented him on his speech. The two men did not arrange to meet, the aide said. "If the president wants a meeting with the senator he knows how to call," the aide said.

Kennedy scheduled few public appearances during the day, arranging to take his wife Joan to lunch, before she leaves for the family home on Cape Cod, and to play tennis during the afternoon.

The spokesman said Kennedy planned to meet in his hotel suite with several friends and to talk by telephone with some supporters.

Kennedy spent the morning reading the newspapers, which carried long stories about his convention appearance. He also watched Carter's arrival in New York on television, the spokesman said.

Kennedy returned to the Waldorf-Astoria late Tuesday after publicly congratulating Carter and predicting the party will reunite and "march toward a Democratic victory in 1980."

He ignored reporters' questions about whether he will formally endorse the president or join him at the podium before the close of the convention Thursday night.

After the speech, which touched off a 40-minute demonstration of cheering and poster-waving, Kennedy strategists struck a deal that resulted in the senator's victory on several key economic planks in the party platform.

Asked if the convention remarks were meant to signal an endorsement of Carter, several top Kennedy aides said they would prefer to let the senator's words speak for themselves.

Midland grand jury hears from county commissioner

A Midland County Commissioner appeared before the Midland County Grand Jury about noon today.

For the past few weeks the grand jury has been investigating charges of alleged gambling involving a high county official. The commissioner appeared before the grand jury at 11:30 a.m.

About an hour earlier television anchorman Gary Hopper of KOSA-TV, channel 7, was subpoenaed and was in the grand jury room for about 50 minutes. In recent telecasts Hopper had reported that undisclosed sources had said the grand jury was investigating a county commissioner.

On Aug. 1 Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith, who also appeared before the grand jury today, said the sheriff's department and Department of Public Safety were in a joint investigation with the grand jury. "I can't acknowledge or deny that we are engaged in a gambling investigation."

Referring to the speculation that a witness may have talked about the investigation outside the grand jury, Smith had said it was "flat illegal."

Retail, office development planned

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

A major office and retail development sprawling over 100 acres at the northwest corner of the intersection at Big Spring and Wadley streets was approved Tuesday by Midland City Council. The action completes the concept of making the north side of Wadley between Big Spring and A Street into offices and retail.

Clajon Production Corp. requested the zone changes necessary for the project. One section will be O-2, an office district to allow for a six story office building in the center of the complex. O-1 will allow for additional offices up to two stories in height around the central building. One area will be designated for retail while another area near Air Park will be Planned District to serve as a buffer zone between the offices and airport.

Martin Allday, attorney for Clayton Williams who purchased the tract of land and is developing it, explained that the oilman based in the Gulf Building downtown had run out of room.

The attorney assured the council the area would not become "another big shopping center" but a "quality office park."

In presenting his side, Williams said the office park would "be a solid addition to Midland" and would include a lot of landscaping.

"Will the A&M flag stay on the Gulf Building?" asked Councilman Doris

Big day here for Texas delegates

By SOLL SUSSMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas delegates to the Democratic National Convention nominate their presidential candidate today, following a massive outpouring of support for Sen. Edward Kennedy's unsuccessful bid to unseat President Carter.

"I'm feeling pretty good," Kennedy delegate Steve Thomas of Austin said Tuesday midway through a placard-waving, chanting demonstration for the senator. "Of course I wish we'd won, but..."

The prolonged demonstration, the convention's first, came after Kennedy put in an appearance to outline the policies of his failed run for the White House.

Carter forces in the Texas delegation praised his speech and said its tone and a compromise on platform issues may have set the stage for party re-unification.

"It sure helped," former Texas Attorney General John Hill said. He has called for party unity if there is to be any possibility of defeating Republican candidate Ronald Reagan.

"I thought it (Kennedy's speech) was the best delineation of the differences between two parties I've ever heard in my life," land commissioner Bob Armstrong said.

Billie Carr of Houston, a Kennedy delegate who spoke earlier of the disappointment and bitterness the senator's supporters felt after losing the "open convention" battle Monday, said she was satisfied by the compromise platform.

"I think this is definitely Kennedy's night. They (Carter supporters) can't top this on Thursday night," she said. "I feel better."

The vote to include a jobs program in the platform, which Kennedy supporters had called a must issue, passed the Texas delegation by 20 votes.

More than two-thirds of the Texas delegation are Carter supporters, who in most cases stood by cheerfully through the demonstration or waved their own placards.

"I'm surviving it," Lon Darley of Denton said. "Actually, I'm enjoying it."

All Kennedy delegates were by no means certain to return to Texas and work strongly for the Carter-Mondale ticket.

"I'm working for Texas Democrats," Patricia Baker of Dallas said during the demonstration, declining to endorse Carter's nomination which is slated to become official today.

Rep. Mickey Leland of Houston, a Carter delegate, said flatly that he was not sure if the evening's events would heal the divisions in the party.

In the heat of the moment, even some Kennedy delegates who had complained of heavy-handed tactics by the Carter campaign leadership were willing to look ahead to unity.

"I've heard nothing but good comments about the conduct of the Carter delegates," Louise Caddell of San Antonio said. "We're very pleased; there's no other word for it."

Bob Bechtel, Carter's Texas campaign manager, overheard her in the aisle as she made her comment and chipped in, "And I've heard nothing but good comments about the conduct of the Kennedy delegates."

Kennedy delegates had started the day by considering how strongly to support the Carter-Mondale ticket this fall, saying the outcome probably would hinge on the platform fight.

"There's a lot of disappointment and bitterness," Ms. Carr said.

She also suggested that Texas Democratic officials supporting Carter, including most of the top officeholders in the state, might well distance themselves from the presidential campaign.

"We'll see how many of them sit on the platform with him (Carter) when he comes to Texas," Ms. Carr said.

State Rep. Paul Moreno of El Paso headed for home after Kennedy lost the opening rules fight and withdrew his name from nomination.

Democrats building platform of clearly liberal party planks

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Friedan at a nightclub. Betty Friedan at a restaurant. Betty Friedan at a brunch in a Fifth Avenue apartment. The feminist author is everywhere — and she's just one example.

Maybe New York is really a small town, or maybe the Democratic Party is actually a small political party, but at any of the parties born of the Democratic National Convention the same faces shine, night after night.

At United Farm Workers fund-raisers, at feminist galas, at parties in honor of the state delegations, at discotheques thrown open to the delegates, the same people turn up.

There's former beauty queen and sportscaster Phyllis George Brown. There's Rep. Morris Udall. There's the toothsome Bobby Kennedy Jr. There's Joan Mondale.

And, always, there's Betty Friedan.

Of course, they don't all attend all the parties. Consider Bobby Kennedy Jr., for instance — just a part of his busy schedule.

He presided over a bash at Xenon, the discotheque, thrown by the "Kennedy Kids" for any delegate willing to pay $12.

Kennedy was the single "celebrity" who turned up at a fund-raiser Tuesday evening for the United Farm Workers. He came as a stand-in for his uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

The senator, he told about 300 people nosing on catered tostados, was polishing the speech he would deliver shortly to the convention.

Betty Friedan attended neither function. Ms. Friedan's Democratic social schedule has, however, been a head-spinner.

She attended a brunch honoring the Alaska delegation because, she explained, Alaskans she met on a lecture tour to the northernmost state voted her an honorary Alaska delegate.

As a feminist, she attended a National Women's Political Caucus bash at the Copacabana nightclub.

A third presidential rejection could come over an MX missile plank scheduled for debate today as the delegates complete work on the platform. The plank opposes deploying the missile system, a position directly conflicting with Carter's stance.

On Tuesday, the delegates adopted much of

Same faces, different places as Democrat parties continue

NEW YORK (AP) — Kennedy's economic program following a frenzied 39-minute floor demonstration for Kennedy, who came to the convention with an appeal to provide jobs for the out-of-work.

That would create 800,000 jobs, the delegates adopted Kennedy-endorsed commitments not to fight inflation with high interest rates and unemployment and not to advocate any government action leading to a significant rise in unemployment.

Besides the $12 billion anti-recession program

From Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's job-creating economic policies to strong stands supporting abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment, the Democrats' platform contrasts startlingly to the tax-cutting, anti-abortion, ERA-absent doctrine crafted by the GOP in Detroit last month.

The still unfinished platform that emerged Tuesday night contains planks not only unacceptable to Republican Reagan but to Democrat Carter as well.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Carter would reject the $12 billion jobs program pushed successfully by Kennedy's forces. The president also was described as disagreeing with a plank guaranteeing federally financed abortions for poor women.

Ford found negligent in drunk drivers death

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ford Motor Co. was negligent in the death of a man who was drunk when his car crashed at 105 mph, a federal appeals court has ruled.

Improper tires caused the accident and the No. 2 automaker was at fault for not warning the driver about their limitations, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeal said Monday.

Shelby Leleux died and a passenger was seriously hurt when his 1976 Mercury Cougar crashed near Kaplan, La., on June 6, 1976.

The 5th Circuit upheld a lower court decision by U.S. District Judge Eugene Davis who had awarded $36,000 to the dead man's mother and $36,000 to the injured passenger.

The appeal court said Leleux's car was equipped with a 460-cubic-inch, 425-horsepower engine and clearly was designed to be capable of speeds over 100 mph. But the car was equipped with Goodyear tires designed to be safe only at speeds less than 85 mph, the court said.

Ford was negligent in not warning Leleux of the tires' limitations, the 5th Circuit ruled.

Evidence presented at the trial showed the left rear tire of the car had come apart when Leleux and a friend were driving to a dance in Kaplan.

Ford argued that the men had been drinking for more than eight hours and should have known that driving at 100 mph was dangerous.

But the 5th Circuit rejected that argument, saying Leleux had no way of knowing that the tires were safe only up to 85 mph.

The engine Ford had equipped the car with "provided it a capability of speeds over 100 mph, and the car's allure, no doubt exploited in its marketing, lay in no small measure in this power and potential speed," the court said.

"It was not simply foreseeable, but was to be readily expected that the Cougar would on occasion be driven in excess of the 85 mph proven maximum safe operating speed of its Goodyear tires," the court found.

Goodyear was not at fault, the 5th Circuit said, because its tires would be safe if used on vehicles that would not be driven faster than 85 mph.

Hunt brothers had five percent of Bache stock

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Hunt, the Texas billionaire brothers who owned thousands of ounces of silver when the market collapsed last spring, also owned more than 5 percent of Bache Group common stock in January, but did not report that to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Federal law requires holders of that much stock in a company to report within 10 days, but the ownership was not made known formally until Monday when Nelson Bunker Hunt filed documents with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

E. Barret Prettyman Jr., an attorney for Nelson Bunker Hunt, said the filing was made now for reasons of "excess caution." He said it legally is not necessary because the brothers used separate funds to buy Bache stock for their joint account.

The SEC has been investigating the Hunts' link with Bache, which lent the brothers millions of dollars on margin for silver speculation. When silver prices collapsed in March, Bache scrambled to evade enormous losses and the SEC temporarily halted trading in Bache stock.

SEC spokesmen declined comment Tuesday on Nelson Hunt's filing.

In the filing, Hunt said he and William, through two joint accounts, held more than 5 percent of Bache Group common stock as of Jan. 26.

Cabinet, aides back Carter

By MAUREEN SANTINI

NEW YORK (AP) — In his first 24 hours at the Democratic National Convention, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland gave reporters 31 interviews and addressed five state delegations plus one rural caucus.

The cost to the taxpayer: zero. And Bergland is not alone among Jimmy Carter's Cabinet secretaries and top aides in using his own money and his vacation time to campaign for the boss.

This gives a boost to Carter's candidacy by a group of well-known Democrats, all of whom stand to lose their jobs if the boss is not re-elected.

Almost all of the Cabinet members and the president's senior staff, criticized by many reporters over the last three years for not returning telephone calls, are finding the time to talk — and talk and talk.

"A hardship? Listen, for some of us it's mother's milk," said presidential assistant Anne Wexler, sitting with her aching feet propped up on a chair. "We love it."

Picture the scene: a large ballroom at the Sheraton Centre hotel, the presidential headquarters. At any given moment, three, four, five or more top Carter aides are chatting with reporters at small tables sprinkled across the room. When that is, the aides aren't meeting with delegates.

The luminaries? Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of Health and Human Services; Charles Schulz, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors; Treasury Secretary G. William Miller; Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus; Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick; James McIntyre Jr., director of the Office of Management and Budget; Labor Secretary Ray Marshall; and more.

In an adjacent room, long work tables are manned by another group of unpaid volunteers — middle- and low-level Carter staff members working from dawn to dusk printing schedules, arranging interviews with reporters and doing whatever they else can.

Women caucus, lobby, reach unified stance on ERA, abortion

By JOAN J. CIRILLO

NEW YORK (AP) — The women caucused day and night, lobbied and polled delegations and, in the end, put aside their differences. The result: a tougher Democratic Party stance on the Equal Rights Amendment, abortion and reproductive rights.

The political savvy and unified stance of women delegates to the Democratic National Convention left them smiling and their opponents impressed by the inroads women have made in the political process.

Their leaders, who had predicted this would be "an historic convention" for women, say the sparks have just begun to fly.

"What this proves is that if 50 percent of the delegates are women, when they are organized, they can make a difference," said former Rep. Bella Abzug of New York.

Ms. Abzug said the women triumphed in their areas of special interest "because we pressed very hard, we were 50 percent and we did not let divisive men divide women."

The former congresswoman orchestrated floor-lobbying efforts and participated in negotiations among some of the most powerful women in the Democratic party, including Sarah Weddington, President Carter's adviser on women's issues; New York City Council President Carol Bellamy; New York Reps. Shirley Chisholm and Elizabeth Holtzman; author Gloria Steinem; and Iris Mitgang, chairman of the National Women's Political Caucus.

Those efforts culminated Tuesday in passage by voice vote of a rule withholding funds and technical assistance to Democratic candidates who do not support the ERA.

The women's hard work also helped bring about a 2,005.2 to 956.3 vote on a "reproductive rights" plank, which opposes government interference in reproductive choices and supports federal aid for abortions sought by the poor.

The Coalition for Women's Rights, an ad hoc committee of women delegates supporting Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy, pushed for the planks as a test of the party's commitment to women's rights.

The planks — neither of which had been supported by Kennedy or Carter, according to the coalition — went beyond the party's traditional support for ERA and abortion.

Ms. Weddington predicted that the president would not embrace the reproductive rights plank, a move Ms. Chisholm and others said would cost him women's votes. Earlier in the campaign, Carter lost the endorsement of the National Organization for Women; organization officials said they believed he had failed to work hard enough for the ERA amendment.

Some delegations from states that have not ratified the ERA said withholding funds from candidates would hurt efforts to win ratification of the amendment by 38 states by the June 1982 deadline. At least three more states must approve ratification.

Govs. Jim Hunt of North Carolina and George Busbee of Georgia, who opposed that plank, said their states would defy the non-binding national platform and give candidates money regardless of their stance on the ERA.

But state Sen. Dawn Clark of Illinois, who opposes the funds plank despite her pro-ERA position, said the votes showed one thing clearly: "There's no question that we (women) are here to stay in the front ranks of the Democratic Party."

Temperatures climb; Chance for rain only 20 percent

Midlanders may be enjoying the rain and cooler weather Hurricane Allen has brought to West Texas, but happiness is short-lived.

There is still a 20 percent chance of more rain today, tonight and Thursday, but the temperatures have begun to climb a bit.

Tuesday's high of 83 should be outdone today with a high in the upper 90s. High Thursday will be in the lower 90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The record high for Tuesday was 107 degrees in 1936 — a long way from 83 degrees. The record low for the date, 61 degrees set in 1931, was somewhat closer to this morning's low of 69 degrees.

Winds today and Thursday will be south-southeasterly, 10-15 mph. Winds will decrease tonight to 5-10 mph.

The slight chance of showers and thunderstorms will be coupled with warmer afternoons today and Thursday. The afternoons will almost certainly be partly cloudy, though.

Silver dollars, bank stolen

About $100 in silver dollars, a silver certificate and a piggy bank were reported as stolen Tuesday from a house at 201 S. Camp St.

Stan Mayfield told officers he left at 7 a.m. and when he returned at 8:30 p.m. someone had broken into the house and gone through some file drawers and jewelry boxes.

Entry was gained by kicking the front door open.

Two accidents Tuesday resulted in injuries to those involved.

Paul Allen Bright was southbound in the 2900 block of Aurora Lane about 8:44 p.m. when his motorcycle struck a parked car. Bright was injured and taken to Midland Memorial Hospital where he was treated and released.

A Midland man was admitted to Midland Memorial following a two-vehicle collision at 3:30 p.m. at Calhoun Street and New York Avenue.

According to reports, Cecil A. Guthrie was westbound on New York, entering an uncontrolled intersection. Edna Small Clark of 709 Calhoun was southbound on Calhoun entering the same intersection. The two vehicles collided in the intersection.

Guthrie was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room and later admitted.

The Midland Fire Department had a relatively quiet day, covering one grass fire, a transfer and two medical ambulance calls.

The grass fire occurred at 4:43 p.m. at Nobles Avenue and Edwards Street.

Three people were transported by CFD ambulance.

Building of hangars considered

By LANA CUNNINGHAM, Staff Writer

More than 50 private planes have nowhere to go to bed down at night and Midland City Council is considering financing the building of hangars to give these forlorn flying critters a place to hang their wings.

The council on Tuesday during a regular session in City Hall Council Chambers heard proposals from fixed-base operators for T-hangars, T-ports and other facilities at Midland Air Park and Midland Regional Air Terminal to meet the demand for hangar space in Midland.

Total cost of the facilities would be about $2 million and the city would have to sell that amount in revenue bonds. Assistant City Manager Fred Poe said the city's finance counsel advised him the city would have no problem financially in proceeding with the sale.

Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, estimated there are more than 350 private planes at the two airports. Air Park is serving as a reliever airport with the smaller planes based at that facility while the larger planes, including jets, use the Regional Airport.

All hangar space at both airports is leased and about 68 names are on waiting lists for a hangar space, the council was told.

Mayor G. Thane Akins remarked that planes can suffer a lot of damage by being out in the open, causing insurance rates to be higher for Midland plane owners. If the council proceeds with the hangar plans, it would provide space for about 75 planes.

In other action, the council purchased 22.88 acres of land, known as the Windecker Property, at Midland Air Terminal from Abbott Building Co. Total purchase price is $1.7 million. The city is paying $125,000 down and approved selling $1,225,000 in Certificates of Obligation for paying the remaining cost.

The city accepted a proposal from Texas Electric Service Co. for providing power to four new wells at Paul Davis Well Field and a pump station allow city residents to participate in the Midland County Housing Finance Corp.'s home mortgage bond program, but it hedged on giving residents in the 3200 block of Camarie Avenue permission to have a block party Sept. 6.

City Attorney Joe Nuessle said the residents would have to pay for using city blockades on the street, probably should hire off-duty policemen and advised them to get liability insurance.

"It's a shame to kill a neighborhood get-together," remarked Councilman Steve Davidson after hearing the list of requirements.

"Who would think of all these things," replied the city attorney, "except us."

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The takeover of a west side high school entered its fifth day today after demonstrators and school officials failed to agree on terms for a meeting. But two community leaders were hopeful that the stalemate would be broken soon.

Air Florida jet hijacked to Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — An Air Florida jet carrying 74 people was hijacked to Cuba today, the second Air Florida plane in four days hijacked while on the short hop between Key West and Miami.

"This isn't our week," said Air Florida spokeswoman Robin Cohn.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Jack Barker in Atlanta said Flight 707, diverted 10 minutes after its 10:30 a.m. takeoff from Key West, landed safely in Havana at 11:15 a.m. All 68 passengers and six crew members were reported to be safe.

There was no immediate word on when the plane would be returned.

Barker said the hijacker or hijackers apparently threatened to blow up the Boeing 737 jet with a can or bottle of gasoline. There was no immediate word on whether Cuban authorities had taken anyone into custody.

On Sunday, a Spanish-speaking man hijacked a Miami-Key West flight to Havana after threatening to detonate what turned out to be a box containing a bar of soap.

A flight controller at the Key West tower said the plane had taken off on the scheduled 25-minute hop to Miami when the pilot radioed to the U.S. Naval base at nearby Boca Chica to report the plane had been ordered to Cuba.

Air Florida, the only commercial airline currently serving the Key West-Miami route, usually has three or four flights a day between the South Florida cities.

FBI agents and the U.S. State Department say they have not been able to obtain any information out of Cuba on the most recent hijackers, and are unsure whether Cuban authorities still prosecute hijackers.

Improved U.S.-Cuban cooperation and tightened airport security put a stop to a wave of hijackings to Cuba that had totaled 87 during 1961-73. But there have been seven successful hijackings in a new wave that began with the hijacking of a Delta jetliner on June 12, 1979.

The latest hijackers, in most cases, have claimed to have weapons that turned out to be fakes.

18-year-old oil field hand files negligence suit in mishap

Billy Lynn Shepherd, an 18-year-old oil field hand who was severely burned in an explosion at a wellhead 18 miles southeast of Midland on July 17, 1979, has filed a $2 million lawsuit, which alleges negligence, against Mobil Producing and Texas & New Mexico Inc.

Shepherd was burned at Mobil's Louise Shackelford Well No. 31, as a workover rig was being placed in position over the wellhead and as the well was being de-pressurized. The flammable gas...exploded violently and without warning" and injured Shepherd and two other hands, William McGuffin, 57, and Jerry Baugh, 38, both of Midland. McGuffin and Baugh were less seriously injured.

After the mishap, Shepherd, formerly of Midland and now of Winkler County, was initially treated at Midland Memorial Hospital and subsequently transferred to San Antonio's Brooke Army Medical Center, where he was treated for the burns for weeks.

Shepherd maintains that the burns rendered him "totally unable to do usual and customary tasks of a working man" and that he has no skill or education which would prepare him for "any other type of gainful employment."

The petition, filed in 238th State District Court in Midland County, claims that Shepherd lingered for weeks in Brooke's Burn Unit and that he, suffered "serious burns and ke-loids over a large portion of his body and has large masses of scar tissue" on his arms, elbows, head, face, back shoulder and lower legs. The petition also alleges that Shepherd has lost his ability to sweat, cannot tolerate sunshine for extended periods, cannot straighten his arms and requires additional plastic surgery.

Shepherd is seeking $1 million in actual damages and $1 million for medical and other expenses.

Shepherd's father, Billy Mac Shepherd, was drill-site operator at the time of the incident but was not injured.

Shepherd and the crew were working for L&L Well Service of Midland at time of the mishap.

Midland airline boardings set new monthly record

While airlines across the nation are experiencing problems in attracting passengers, those based at Midland Regional Airport apparently are having no difficulties.

Boardings at the airport set a new monthly record in July with 44,886 passengers, according to Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation for the city.

This is almost 2,000 above the figure a year ago when 42,946 people loaded onto planes in Midland. And it is about 800 above the previous record of 44,078 set in August 1979.

Banks noted that if the trend continues, boardings for August should set another record.

A public hearing on a zone change request by K&C Industrial was postponed until 1:45 p.m. Sept. 9 to give the firm time to revise its plans. Currently, the plans call for an 18-story condominium apartment complex to be located one mile north of FM 868 and just north of the Saddle Club North development.

Barry Beck with K&C Industrial explained the height may have to be lowered to meet regulations of the Federal Aviation Administration.

Stamps for apes plan dies

MIAMI (AP) — The Zoological Society of Florida has given up on collecting Green Stamps to buy gorillas. Their two-year campaign yielded only enough stamps for about half an ape.

The private society says it has collected 10 million S&H Green Stamps since kicking off the campaign in October 1978, when it decided to try for three lowland gorillas for the new Dade County zoo. At the time, the society said it would need 45 million stamps.

Converted to cash, the collected stamps are worth $20,990.45, enough to buy little more than half a gorilla at today's market price of three for $110,000, said society president Richard Mahmarian. That's $30,000 more than the price quoted two years ago.

Mahmarian said most of the stamps were collected during the early days of the campaign when enthusiasm for gorillas ran high. Hundreds of thousands of Green Stamps flowed in from all over the country.

Locally, stamps were collected in wishing wells set up in supermarkets. The zoological society enlisted hundreds of Girl Scouts to count and paste the donated stamps into books.

But the gorilla gimmick wore out fast, Mahmarian said.

"Once the initial enthusiasm was over, the stamps came in in gradually diminishing amounts," he said. "We feel the campaign has run its gamut and it's time to try something else."

The stamp collection will end Friday, he said.

The society is sticking with its dream of gorillas, however. But now it hopes to raise the balance of the money through a joint promotion with one of Dade County's private corporations.

Mahmarian said the society is talking with two companies about sponsoring the idea.

"I'm not at liberty to say who we're talking with," he said. "But I'm confident we'll have an announcement within the next few weeks."

There's plenty of time to raise the money, according to Metrozoo spokesman Rick Hensler. The new zoo's gorilla quarters aren't scheduled for completion until next summer.

First state

MH survey scheduled

The first statewide survey of mental health and mental retardation services in Texas is being mailed to the Permian Basin during this week. Nearly 400 citizens in Midland, Ector and surrounding counties will be involved in the survey. By the end of the summer, survey questionnaires will have been mailed to approximately 7,000 individuals throughout Texas.

The survey of this region is part of a "grassroots approach" to the study of mental health and mental retardation services in the state, according to Citizens for Human Development spokespersons who are directing the study.

Area survey results will be made available to the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency which encompasses 17 counties in this health planning area. Study findings also will be presented to the State Mental Health Authority in Austin for integration into the State Mental Health Plan.

Results of the statewide study will also be given to members of the Texas Legislature for members' review.

Citizens for Human Development is working with volunteers and providers of human services to improve mental health and mental retardation services throughout Texas. The organization emerged from the first Robert L. Sutherland Seminar on Mental Health which was sponsored by the Hogg Foundation for Mental Health in 1978.

Heat relief coming

During the past, legislators from the Northeast and Midwest have succeeded in getting the bulk of funds earmarked for the Low Income Energy Assistance Act diverted to their regions. They've claimed that the severe winters experienced in their areas require that elderly and underprivileged persons be given special consideration of assistance. And they've poo-pooed arguments by Sunbelt legislators that extreme heat can pose as much a danger to people as can extreme cold. Unfortunately, the Sunbelt states usually have come out on the short end of the stick in the past in regard to energy assistance. Thanks to Texas' own Sen. Lloyd Bentsen that isn't the case any more, at least not this year. Sadly, it took a sweltering heat wave and a large death count to change some minds in Washington. When the killer heat wave brought day-after-day of 100-plus temperatures to Texas and other Southwestern and Midwestern states this summer, many of the poor, the elderly and the ill were helpless — or felt helpless — to do anything to protect themselves. Many of them perished because they couldn't afford to own or to operate a fan or air-conditioner. Still others succumbed to the heat because they apparently had a fan or cooling unit, but were afraid to turn it on for fear of running up an electricity bill they couldn't afford to pay. Because of the approval of Bentsen's bill last week by both houses of Congress, maybe the death toll will end now. President Carter has signed the bill into law. Under the senator's bill some $21 million in unspent energy assistance funds will be diverted from the various Northern states to the Southwest. The effect of the new law will be to allow the Community Services Administration to re-direct the money to states with severe heat problems. "We're not talking about a program to purchase air-conditioners, any more than the current energy assistance act makes furnaces available in the Northeast or Midwest. We're talking about help with the higher cost of cooling for those unable to pay their utility bills," Sen. Bentsen said. Air-conditioning and cooling is not a luxury in Southwestern states any more than heating is a luxury in Northern states in the winter. It is a life-sustaining necessity. Maybe Sen. Bentsen's bill will be the first step toward breaking the stranglehold the Northern legislators have held on energy assistance for the poor and elderly.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Aug. 13, the 226th day of 1980. There are 140 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history:
On Aug. 13, 1521, the Spanish conqueror Hernando Cortez captured Mexico City from the Aztecs.
On this date:
In 1848, the American flag was raised in Los Angeles.
In 1937, the Japanese attacked China's biggest city, Shanghai.
In 1961, East Germany sealed off the border between East and West Berlin to halt the flight of refugees from East Germany.
In 1965, 2,000 heavily-armed National Guardsmen moved to quell black rioting in the ghettos of Los Angeles.
Ten years ago, consumer advocate Ralph Nader won nearly $500,000 in an out-of-court settlement with General Motors. Nader had charged the automaker with invading his privacy by investigating his personal activities.
Last year, the federal government levied an unprecedented civil complaint when it charged the City of Philadelphia and its top officials with condoning widespread police brutality and harassment.

Today's birthday: Cuba's premier, Fidel Castro, is 34.

Re-reformed candidate selection process needs changes

NEW YORK CITY — The Democrats, anxious and confused, are going off in all directions at once. This is a first-class rumpus because the majority party panics at the thought of losing the White House and much of the Congress to Reagan and the surging Republicans. It pains me to hear shrieks for an "open convention," a fraud of the first order, and other such crybaby stuff. By Democratic rules and federal regulations, Carter deserves the nomination because he is champion of the 1980 primaries, fair and square. Those shouting for the nine-inning game to go 12 innings, for the four-quarter contest to go overtime, for the 15-round title fight to go 20, are self-seekers who figure Carter is a goner and Democrats will sink with him. The truth is that once nominated, Carter has a 50-50 chance of beating Reagan — better odds than Harry S. Truman contended with when he upset Thomas E. Dewey. I can't figure out Sen. Kennedy, who won't be nominated or elected. He seems to have gone berserk, and is leaving himself no door of dignity from which to exit. Still, the tumult here demonstrates that the candidate selection process must be changed. The obsession with New Hampshire, the mad criss-crossing of the Republic in expensive jets by flustered aspirants, the tyranny of new political king-makers (media, consultants, schedulers) — spell failure of the present system. "Hell, Nick," the late Hubert H. Humphrey once told me, "nowadays, under reform, you've got to have a certified public accountant on one arm, and a travel agent on the other." The most popular proposal for change is to establish five regional primaries on successive first Tuesdays. This system would ostensibly cut down the flurry and bring focus on the issues. Some want to go further, and hold one national primary, a "sudden death" in politics. I think this brainstorm is simplistic and dangerous. It would greatly advantage well-funded, telegenic media "stars," to be huckstered on one BIG DAY like so much toothpaste. Another idea is to make all primaries simple "beauty contests," with no delegates selected. Thus, in subsequent state conventions, party people would know who voters liked and choose a presidential candidate accordingly. By scoring well in West Virginia and Wisconsin in 1960, John F. Kennedy convinced party regulars everywhere that a Catholic could win in heavily Protestant states, and thus

Civiletti turns eyes from the White House

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti had a chance to snare White House intimates in a bribery plot much like the ABSCAM caper, but he was far more enthusiastic about investigating congressmen than he was about investigating Carter cronies. The Justice Department had a team of undercover agents and raiders, equipped with all the spy paraphernalia of ABSCAM, working on the Libyan investigation. They accumulated stacks of investigative reports and dozens of tapes containing hours of incriminating conversations. Heard on the tapes are: such worthies as rogue financier Robert Vesco and Libya's United Nations Ambassador Mansur Rashid Kikka. They were secretly recorded as they engaged in conspiratorial discussions with middlemen about multimillion-dollar payoffs for members of President Carter's inner circle, including Billy Carter, Hamilton Jordan and Democratic Party Chairman John White. The secret tapes and documents indicate that Vesco played a backstage role in the acquisition by Charter Oil Company, Jacksonville, Fla., of the profitable Carey Oil refinery in Nassau. This is portrayed in the documents as a complex financial deal, involving special crude oil arrangements with Libya. The documents also implicate Vesco in an oil deal, strikingly similar to the one that Billy Carter has now admitted signing with Charter Oil. The promised commissions would have been worth millions to Billy. These deals depended on the willingness of Libya to ship extra oil to Charter Oil, at the behest of Vesco and his fellow conspirators. But first the Libyans demanded evidence that the conspirators could pull strings in the White House as they had boasted. At this crucial point, White agreed to meet with Ambassador Kikka — a rendezvous that was secretly filmed by the FBI. Billy Carter also arranged for Libya's top diplomat in Washington, Ali Houderi, to visit the president. Not long afterward, the same Houderi delivered the first check to Billy of a promised $500,000. The president and his men claim they were ignorant of any backdoor dealings and innocent of any wrongdoing. The voices on the tapes, confiding otherwise, belong largely to shady operators whose credibility can be challenged. So Justice Department officials wanted their undercover team, with cameras and tapes, to focus on the White House. Here was Civiletti's opportunity to do unto the White House as he had done unto Congress. In fact, the chief of his criminal division, Philip Heymann, had assured congressmen that President Carter himself would have received the same treatment if he had stepped in front of the FBI's hidden cameras. "I would have swallowed twice," Heymann said, "but I wouldn't have stepped back." As it actually happened, both Civi-

Who says Jimmy Carter can't handle his brother?

NEW YORK CITY — The man whose shadow hangs over the Democratic Convention is not here. Billy Carter decided not to attend, which has made Carter managers ecstatic. How was he persuaded not to come? Here is the inside story. President Carter was asked by his campaign people to keep Billy from coming to New York. It was the toughest assignment Mr. Carter had been given in his four years of being president. He knew if he asked Billy not to do something Billy would do it just to spite him. The president prayed and prayed for a solution and then suddenly it came. He called Billy in Plains, Ga., and said, "Billy, I have a favor to ask of you." Billy said, "Drop dead." "I mean it, Billy. I've never asked you for anything, but I need you. I would like you to come to Madison Square Garden the week of August 11th and nominate me for president of the United States." "You have to be kidding. Why would I want to do that?" "Because," Mr. Carter said, "you're my brother." Billy said, "I ain't nominating you for dogcatcher. Being your brother has got me in all the trouble I'm in right now. Why didn't you stay in submarines where you belong?" "Billy boy, don't get testy. Didn't I show you the nice cables about you from Libya?" "Yeh, and you also threw me to the wolves at the Justice Department."

Art Buchwald

Thanks to you I may be pumping gas at Allenwood." "I didn't tell you to get mixed up with the Libyans. I warned you that you could get in a peck of trouble if you started messing in international affairs. You're a country boy, Billy, and once you start messing with those city slickers in Tripoli, they're going to take you for everything you've got." "That's easy for you to say. You're president of the United States. You don't have to worry about making a living. Mom was always nicer to you than she was to me. She encouraged you to be president, but she never said I could be president. It was always Jimmy this and Jimmy that. The only thing she said I was any good for was becoming a registered foreign agent." "Let's not go all over that again. You're going to be in New York. Would it hurt any if you got up on Wednesday night and just said, 'I wish to nominate my brother Jimmy Carter for the highest office in the land?'" "Is that what you really want, Jimmy?" "Yes, Billy, I do." "Then I ain't even coming to New York for the convention. I'll just sit down here in Plains and see you sweat." "You wouldn't do that." "Just see if I wouldn't. If you think I'm coming to the convention you can kiss my bottom." The president hung up the phone and Ham Jordan came into the Oval Office. Ham said, "Did it work?" The president smiled. "Like a dream. He won't be within a thousand miles of New York." "Good work, sir. This will put to rest once and for all the lie that the president can't handle his brother."

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Have the headlines driven you to the Yellow Pages seeking a discount shrink? Perk up, my friend. The actors' strike in Hollywood may delay the opening of the fall TV season. What better indication that America can get moving again, than the sight of wealthy celebrities threatening to close down "Laverne and Shirley"? Just the chance that "Three's Company" and all of its sister shows might be scuttled by the strike offers a kind of hope for us all which no political platform can insure. So, let's support the actors' strike. By support, I mean hoping it continues. Stand up and be counted by announcing that you not only hate to see your face in your shining dishes but that you also find it rather disturbing that Robert Young can be so cheerful on decaffeinated coffee.

Man gets life in murder trial

Keith Wright, 19, who was indicted for capital murder in connection with the September 1979 bludgeoning death of bar employee Leona White, 48, was sentenced to life in prison upon pleading guilty to murder today in 142nd District Court.

The charge was reduced from capital murder to murder in a plea bargaining agreement between District Attorney Vern Martin and defense attorneys Tryon Lewis and Edward Garza.

"There are two punishments (for capital murder): life or death," Lewis said after the sentencing by Judge Perry D. Pickett.

Martin said that Wright "had no prior record of any kind." However, the district attorney said the life sentence meted to Wright "was not severe for this case."

The minimum length a person can serve on a life sentence is about 20 years.

Wright has been held in Midland County Jail in lieu of posting a $50,000 bond since he was charged with the capital murder of Ms. White last September. He was indicted on Oct. 3, 1979.

Wright was charged with killing Ms. White by hitting her on the head with a 24-inch pipe and dragging her body to a patch of weeds between Price's Bar where she worked and the railroad tracks. He allegedly took the money bag that Ms. White had from the bar.

Oil field theft ring may be broken by two arrests

LOVINGTON, N.M. — The arrest of two men Tuesday by Lea County Sheriff's deputies may have broken a ring involved in stealing oil field equipment.

The two have been arrested here and charged with receiving stolen property in connection with the recovery of $50,000 to $100,000 in stolen oil field equipment.

The arrests were made after an extensive undercover investigation by Lea County Sheriff's deputies.

A spokesman for the Sheriff's Department today said the investigation began "a couple of months ago," after a tip from an informant. From there, the information was developed and officers went undercover in an effort to buy the stolen merchandise.

So far, deputies have identified the items as being stolen from four rigs. The rigs are located between Hobbs and Lovington, N.M., near Maljamar and Loco Hills. They are owned by Permian Well Service, E&H Well Service and Expert Well Service, all of Hobbs, N.M., and Mack Chase Inc., of Artesia, N.M.

The recovered merchandise, the majority of which was identified by brands on the equipment, included tubing tongs, tubing elevators and rod elevators.

The spokesman for the Sheriff's Department said all of the equipment recovered had not been identified and some could possibly belong to companies other than the four already identified.

Mother charged in daughter's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 33-year-old woman walked onto a freeway overpass with her two daughters and threw her 2-year-old to her death in rush-hour traffic, then muttered, "I'm a no-good mother," witnesses and police said.

Her 8-year-old daughter walked off the bridge, sobbing, "Oh, my baby, my baby sister," a witness said.

Police arrested and booked Virginia Relanzia for investigation of murder. She was being held without bail at the Sybil Brand Institute, the women's jail.

William Harms, a security guard at the nearby federal courthouse, was among those who saw the incident Tuesday.

"I saw her cross the street...and go onto the overpass. The next thing I knew she had the 2-year-old up over her head and she threw her onto the freeway," he said.

Another witness said the mother seated the baby on the overpass railing, then pushed her over the edge.

The toddler, Valinda Douglas, was struck on the freeway below by a semi-trailer truck and at least one other vehicle. Her body was dragged 15 to 20 feet after being struck.

The semi-trailer truck that struck her did not stop after the incident, police said. "I don't think the driver even knew it," said Detective Dan Andrews. The body was in such bad condition that the exact cause of death may never be determined, he added.

The woman was despondent over marital problems, Andrews said, and after the baby's death told a bystander, "I just threw my baby."

"She's articulate. She seems fairly logical," said Andrews of the Child Protection Section's Juvenile Division. But he added the woman "could give no logical reason for doing it."

Harms said he thought the woman "was ready to throw the 8-year-old," Marie Windgate, whom he heard sobbing, "Oh, my baby, my baby sister."

The woman was muttering, "I'm a no-good mother. I'm no good to either of you," Harms said.

Andrews said Ms. Relanzia is married to Nathan Douglas, who was at home when police called and was "in a state of shock." Ms. Relanzia has "several other children but they all live with relatives," Andrews said.

After the baby's plunge, the woman walked off the bridge, with her other daughter in tow, onto adjacent Aliso Street, where Harm and another federal courthouse security guard, Gustavo Rivera, detained her until police arrived. She gave up without a struggle, Andrews said.

The 8-year-old was taken into protective custody and would be turned over to foster care authorities, Andrews said.

Webster says inflation cause of unemployment

Libertarian Party Congressional candidate J.D. Webster of Midland in a press release issued this week attacked inflation as a major cause of unemployment in this country.

"Inflation makes business planning impossible," he said. "For a businessman to be able to create more jobs, he must be able to predict costs and foresee profits, but inflation distorts the economic picture and results in bad investment decisions."

Webster is seeking the 19th District congressional seat currently held by Democrat Kent Hance of Lubbock. Hance is running for re-election to a second term.

In the release, Webster said that inflation "causes workers to be laid off or business expansions to be placed on the back burner. This strikes hardest at the young and minorities who are usually the last hired and the first let go."

He noted that inflation is caused by deficit spending and is a creation of the president and Congress.

"When our current representative, Kent Hance, votes to increase the federal debt ceiling, he is creating inflation," Webster charged.

"He has done this twice in the 18 months he has been in office, and as a direct result, inflation skyrocketed from 9.7 percent to 16.2 percent,"

Webster added.

He also claimed that inflationary monetary policies create the cruel "boom and bust" business cycle.

"True prosperity is impossible without a stable, non-inflationary monetary policy," he noted.

"I am calling for an end to federal deficit spending, a large across-the-board tax cut and a corresponding budget slash."

Sadat's envoy in Bucharest to discuss stalled talks

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — A personal envoy of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat arrived in Bucharest on a five-day official visit to discuss the stalled Palestinian autonomy talks amid reports that Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu is launching a new Mideast peace attempt.

Butros Ghali, Egyptian minister of state for foreign affairs, flew in from Cairo Tuesday night carrying a verbal message to Ceausescu from Sadat — who along with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin credits the Romanian with helping to set up Sadat's historic 1977 trip to Jerusalem.

Discussions of mutual interest that require diplomatic coordination."

Ceausescu has been a frequent go-between in Middle Eastern diplomatic moves. According to Western diplomats here, he often provides a valuable channel for a discreet exchange of sensitive messages between Mideast leaders.

Ghali said he was invited to Bucharest by his Romanian counterpart, Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei, lending support to reports that Ceausescu was pushing a "new initiative" for Mideast peace.

An Israeli newspaper reported that the 62-year-old Romanian leader, who has withdrawn support for the U.S.-sponsored Camp David accords, might be seeking to arrange a summit meeting in Bucharest between Sadat and Begin as a means of overcoming difficulties in ongoing negotiations.

But reports circulated here that Ceausescu was planning a conference that would include representatives of Jordan, Syria, the Palestine Liberation Organization and the Soviet Union as well as the United States. The two superpowers were co-sponsors of the now-defunct Geneva Conference on the Middle East.

Ghali's visit to Romania ends Sunday — the day that Ceausescu begins a three-day visit to Amman for talks with Jordan's King Hussein. The Romanians recently hosted PLO leader Yasser Arafat and last weekend, met with a visiting delegation of PLO officials.

Hussein, along with the PLO and Syria, favors a Geneva-type conference and refuses to join the U.S.-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli peace process on grounds it would not lead to an independent state for the 1.2 million Palestinians living on the West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip. The lands were seized by Israel in the 1967 Mideast war.

Romania is the only Soviet bloc country which did not break diplomatic relations with Israel after the war and it has maintained close ties with the Jewish state while continuing to support the PLO.

Romania "has long been able to serve as a bridge among nations with highly divergent views and interests and among leaders who would find it difficult under some circumstances to negotiate directly with each other," President Carter said during Ceausescu's state visit to Washington in 1978.

Begin visited Romania in 1977 and Sadat made the latest of several visits in 1978. Jordan's Hussein traveled here early this year, and Syrian President Hafez Assad, in 1977.

Much vitamin C lost in cooking

Dear Dr. Solomon: Does it make any difference whether vitamin C is obtained from cooked or fresh foods? — Mrs. C.L.

Dear Mrs. C.L.: Since a large proportion of the vitamin C contained in food is destroyed by cooking or exposure to air, it is preferable to use fresh or frozen foods. These include citrus fruits and vegetables such as cabbage, tomatoes, peppers and potatoes.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I understand that it is important to include foods that contain fiber in the diet. Why is fiber important, and which foods supply it? — Mrs. S.C.

Dear Mrs. S.C.: Fiber helps prevent chronic constipation and an intestinal disorder called diverticulosis. It has also been suggested that low-fiber diets increase the possibility of cancer of the colon, but this has not been established.

To assure a supply of fiber in your diet, be sure to include whole-grain breads and cereals, and fruits and vegetables.

If you would like to know more about what foods can help relieve constipation, you can find it in my new book, Dr. Solomon's High Health Diet and Exercise Plan published by Putnam and Sons.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can you give me some idea of the caloric content of various kinds of fish? I am particularly interested in low-calorie fish that I can include in a diet that will help me lose a few pounds, and in high-calorie fish that I should avoid. — Lena.

Dear Lena: Low-calorie fish include cod, flounder, haddock, sole and hake; a 100-gram serving (from three to four ounces) provides from 70 to 80 calories. At the other end of the scale, Chinook salmon contains from 220 to 230 calories for the same size portion.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Although I am not on a sugar-free diet, I do try to avoid it where possible. In this way I feel free to indulge when I go to a party or at similar occasions. However, the labels on food products are not always clear. How can I tell which packaged foods contain sugar if it is not specifically listed? — Ann.

Dear Ann: As you indicate, many foods contain sugar even though the labels do not specifically identify it as such. For example, you should be aware that fruits packed in syrup have a high sugar content. Other words often seen on labels that can alert you to the presence of sugar include dextrose, fructose, glucose, lactose, maltose and sucrose.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My mother and grandmother both had diabetes in their later years. In view of this, would you recommend that I go on a sugar-free diet? — Mrs. V.B.

Dear Mrs. V.B.: While restricting the intake of sugar is sound advice for everyone — since it contains only empty calories — an excess amount in the diet does not seem to lead to diabetes. The most common type of adult-onset diabetes occurs in obese individuals. While cutting down on the consumption of sugar might help them lose weight, it is the loss of weight rather than the slimming of the sugar that is important.

The major hazard to health posed by consuming too much sugar is tooth decay.

Muskie said gunning for Brzezinski

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

NEW YORK — Democratic politicians close to Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie have spread the word in this convention city that he is so furious over not being fully briefed about war-making plans that he talks about demanding that President Carter fire his national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski.

"Muskie is thinking of going to the president on a 'him or me' basis," one well-informed Democrat told us, "but nobody thinks he really will go that far. He's just blowing off steam." In fact, Brzezinski is more secure in his national security job today than any time during this administration.

Nevertheless, some political strategists in the upper levels of the Carter campaign see more good than harm resulting if Muskie's famed temper resulted in the sacking of Brzezinski. As director of the National Security Council staff, Brzezinski has infuriated liberals by being excessively hawkish while displeasing conservatives by not being hawkish enough.

The dispute seems unrelated to the abortive draft campaign for Muskie. But it does show that Carter did not solve his administration's tangled problems in making national security policy when Cyrus Vance quit as secretary of state and was replaced by Muskie, a 22-year veteran of the Senate.

Complicating the intrigue in the administration's upper reaches is the fact that Brzezinski, according to associates, has had no hard words with Muskie over this or any other issue. As of this writing, Brzezinski had received no complaint from the secretary of state.

The first serious policy dispute in-tween the NSC staff and the Defense Department, with no direct State Department involvement.

At the White House, high officials said privately that Muskie was understood to have been extremely put out at Secretary of Defense Harold Brown. But these officials said they were totally unaware of any Muskie fury directed at Brzezinski. Brown briefed Muskie on the new directive in the White House situation room on the morning of Aug. 5. Muskie asked for a copy of the documents to review and study.

The new targeting strategy has been bitterly fought by Tony Lake, head of policy planning at the State Department, and David Aaron, Brzezinski's deputy at NSC. It also has been attacked by some of Vice President Walter F. Mondale's closest political associates, who would be delighted if the president were to dump Brzezinski.

Major airlines announce price cuts

DALLAS (AP) — American Airlines, hoping to encourage more travel during the week and at night, is offering new discounts on tickets purchased at least two weeks in advance. American Airlines officials said the carrier hopes to increase its business during traditionally sluggish nights by offering the discounts, which vary from 35 to 55 percent. Another airline, Braniff Airways, said it will be making similar savings available beginning Sept. 1. Texas International, which expanded its discount rates in June, said it will announce further changes in its fare schedules next week.

South African rioting leaves three dead

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Heavily armed police clamped tight controls over a black squatters' camp today after a series of mob attacks that claimed three lives in two days, including that of a black truck driver who was decapitated by rioters, authorities said. Police said the unidentified black man was dragged from his truck Tuesday and decapitated by rioters at the Crossroads Camp, home to more than 20,000 blacks. There was no indication of a motive for that attack. Two white men died of injuries suffered when their cars were firebombed in violence linked to a bus boycott organized to protest increased bus fares. The violence erupted Monday when police pulled several blacks from an unlicensed taxi, spurring angry mob reprisals against passing vehicles. The so-called "pirate" taxis have been transporting workers taking part in the two-month-old bus boycott.

Ralph Nader debuts his own TV consumer talk program

WASHINGTON (AP) — It doesn't begin with someone announcing, "Heere's Ralph!" There are only a few light moments. And it's unlikely to attract a mass audience. But consumer activist Ralph Nader, who vaulted to prominence by writing a book entitled "Unsafe at Any Speed," now has his own television show.

recall of millions of Radial 500 tires. The long-time consumer activist was clearly a hit with his special audience of high school debaters from across the country and Showtime officials also seemed pleased with the taping. The network said a second edition of Nader's program will be taped for showing in September, however, before Showtime decides whether to continue the monthly series.

Nader taped the first pilot for his new consumer TV program at Georgetown University Tuesday, explaining to his audience he thinks television can help "provide information to help mobilize people."

Nader's new program was made possible by Showtime, a pay movie network that wants to offer a "public affairs forum" to its roughly 1 million cable TV subscribers across the country.

Entitled "Ralph Nader: For the People," the program will make its debut on Aug. 17.

Nader's show began with a series of so-called Public Alerts, including a suggestion that viewers might want to write their congressmen about a pending bill to limit the campaign contributions of political action committees.

He then noted Congress was also trying to address the issue of how to clean up chemical waste dumps, and threw in a plug for voter registration.

That was followed by a special field report — in the style of "60 Minutes" — on alleged hazardous pesticide spraying in the Maine forests; interviews with top corporate and government officials, and then questions from his audience.

If there was an overriding theme to his first show, however, it was Nader's continuing interest in the automobile industry.

His featured interview guest for the 90-minute program was John J. Nevin, the new president of the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., who agreed his most important job would be to restore consumer confidence in the company following the Jewelry designer Faith Porter used Austrian lead crystal in her $1,400 butterfly headpiece. Women become stars

By PADDY CALISTRO
The Los Angeles Times

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Cartier, Tiffany, Bulgari, Van Cleef, Appels. All are men who made names for themselves in the jewelry business. Repeat: men. Earlier this month Paloma Picasso signed a five-year contract to do collections in her name for New York's Tiffany and Co., joining Elsa Peretti and Angela Cummings as the country's big signatures in jewelry design. All women.

In the last few years women designers have become stars in the world of glistering rocks and glittering metals, historically a man's world that has downplayed designers altogether.

In Los Angeles, a small but prolific group of women is taking this sparkling liberation one step farther. Ines Valdani, Faith Porter and Pepi Kelman each have their names on both their designs and the companies producing them.

For Valdani, whose high-security Ines salon is tucked away in an office building in Beverly Hills, important jewels are the way of the future.

Until recently, Americans have equated high price with gaudy design, says the Italian-born woman whose geometric designs are clean and uncomplicated. "People are putting money into the stone now — not into flashy design. When you highlight an important stone, the less clutter the better."

Valdani says the news right now is in colored stones, especially sapphires. "They come in every color from purple to pink to orange," she explains. "Women have only been familiar with the blue sapphire — now there's a whole new world open to them." Typical of her uncluttered approach to stone is her rainbow bracelet, a slim strip of side-by-side baguettes each a different color sapphire.

Pepi Kelman's Pepi boutique, is small by fine-jewelry salon standards, but in its showcases sit two DeBeer's Diamonds Today award-winning designs. One is a pave diamond and gold money clip, the other a gold record and diamond-studded musical notes all swinging on a gold-ened lariat. Whimsy at its best, but pricey whimsy. The lariat is $1,950.

In her newest designs, Kelman emphasizes pearls. "Pearls have become more important as the price of gold has gone up," the designer says, showing a single strand of pearls garnished with a geometric pendant set with precious and semiprecious stones. Unlike Kelman and Valdani, Faith doesn't work in precious stones. Nor does she opt for gold or pearls. She calls her designs art pieces and her medium is Austrian crystal.

When Sally Kellerman dressed for the Academy Awards, she wore Porter's three-dimensional butterfly pendant. "That crystal butterfly evolved into the butterfly mask," explains Porter, referring to the lead crystal headpiece pictured here. "Now that the price of stones has gone up so much, people can't afford to pay for design, too," says the artist who began her career as a ceramicist. "So they make a choice. They pay for a piece of wearable art that makes a statement about their taste, or they pay for a stone that makes a statement about their money."

DEAR ABBY

Snoring tape erases nightly static

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after I married Mark I discovered that he snored. When I told him he snored, he denied it. Abby, his snoring sounded like a chicken bone in a garbage disposal!

Finally, I decided I had had enough of his denials, so two weeks ago I bought a tape recorder and learned how to use it. One night after Mark fell asleep, I held the microphone under his nose and got about 10 minutes of snoring. Then I reversed the tape, turned up the volume and nearly blasted him out of bed. (Thank heavens he didn't hit me.)

Only after I threatened him with a nightly re-run did he agree to see an ear, nose and throat specialist for an examination. The doctor discovered several polyps (small growths) in Mark's nose, which he said could be the cause of his snoring. The polyps were removed in a simple surgical procedure, and now my darling snores no more! Pass this on. — PEACE AT LAST

DEAR PEACE: Not all snoring is due to growths in the nose, but it's well worth a trip to a doctor to find out.

Now a word in praise of the tape recorder: If we could hear ourselves as others hear us, many of the world's ills could be cured. So, if you're living with a whiny child, a screaming (or nagging) mate, or someone who says, "Ya know" a lot, get it on tape! It will be worth its weight in gold, and we all know how much gold is worth these days!

DEAR ABBY: I am 62 and in good health, but my 58-year-old sister keeps admiring certain things in my home, saying, "Will you please leave this to me when you die?" What should I say? — RUTHIE

DEAR RUTHIE: Tell her you will consider it—if she doesn't die first.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for a year to a man I'll call Nick. It's my first marriage and his second. Nick has two children, 12 and 8. He's 36 and I'm 30. I think I should mention that I had nothing to do with Nick's divorce.

My problem: Nick's mother, she is still very close to his first wife, which I do not resent, but she has never accepted me and refuses to give me a chance. She has never been verbally rude to me. She just ignores me.

When Nick brought me to her home and told her we planned to marry, she glared at me, then turned to Nick and said, "I thought you said you'd never get married again!" (No congratulations, best wishes or anything else.)

I may be picky, but one thing upsets me terribly. She used to have pictures of her children and grandchildren displayed on the piano in her living room. Among them was a large wedding picture of Nick and his first wife. Recently she rearranged her living room and moved all the pictures into her bedroom—leaving the one of Nick and his "ex" on the piano. Now every time I go there I have to sit and look at the picture the entire time, which makes me very uncomfortable.

Please don't suggest that I give her a picture of Nick and me. I did, but she never put it out. What should I do? — No. 2

DEAR NO. 2: You may be "No. 2" with Nick's mother, but as long as you're No. 1 with Nick, don't let it get you down.

Since Nick's mother ignores you when you visit her, keep your visits to a minimum. And when you do, nothing says you have to look at that picture. Ignore it. Or better yet, take a magazine along and bury your nose (and your hostilities) in it!

(To those who have ordered Abby's new teen booklet, please be patient. The demand again has been overwhelming.)

Planned Parenthood to host fund raiser

Permian Basin Planned Parenthood will host a Fund Raising Campaign Kick-off breakfast at 7:30 a.m. Friday at its Midland Clinic, 307 E. Texas, with the public invited.

Friday marks the beginning of Planned Parenthood's 1981 fund raising drive, which is the first major fund raising effort for this agency, due to recent federal and state financial cutbacks. The drive will end with the organization's annual meeting and banquet Oct. 16. At this time, the results of the campaign will be given. Sarah Weddington, assistant to President Jimmy Carter, will be at the banquet.

Because of the government financial cutbacks, the agency is trying to raise $95,000 1981 in order to continue providing health care services to local residents.

Services provided by the agency include physical examination, birth control education and provision, cancer screening, pregnancy testing, venereal disease screening, counseling on all areas of family planning and educational materials and programs. Women also receive information on nutrition, dental care and referrals to other service agencies in the local areas. The examinations are done by local doctors and nurse practitioners.

Besides Midland and Odessa, Planned Parenthood also has clinics in Andrews, Big Spring, Fort Stockton, McCamey, Monahans, Pecos, Seminole and Wink. A clinic will open in Lamesa in September.

Midland residents serving on the board of directors are Ruth Bell, Patsy Berry, Betty Byerley, Bob Dutton, Walter Hall, Marylyn Leonard, John Long, Jane Ramsoure, Wanda Sewell, Margaret Wade and Charlotte Williamson.

Fashion show to be presented

Dillard's is joining hands with Seventeen Magazine to stage a musical back-to-school "Prep Rally" for high school and college bound students.

The show, a gala preview of junior and young men's fashions for fall, will be presented at 2 p.m. Saturday at Midland Park Mall. Kim Freeman of Dillard's will be commentator.

Dillard's Teen Board will be featured in the production, modeling many of the new preppie, classic looks for fall as shown in the August issue of Seventeen. They'll be joined by guys to present the complete fashion picture for the new school year.

The show is loaded with school spirit, and cheerleaders will set the pace for each scene, leading to an exciting climax when all board members are introduced in their official uniform.

Loaded with school spirit are the classics, given new updated looks with unusual colors, textures and innovative put-togethers.

have to rip out all of the stitching since the elastic and waistband were stitched together at the same time. Once you have done this, the rest is easy.

Remove the old elastic, measure your waist and cut a piece of new, non-roll elastic about two inches smaller than this measurement.

Stitch the ends together, slip the elastic under the waistband and stitch along the edge of the band (do not stitch through the elastic).

When finished, tack the elastic down in about four places (seam lines are a good place to do this) to prevent its rolling, and your slacks are good as new. — Heloise ties of trail mix, dried fruits or a carton of yogurt.

But should you fail, even sandwiches can take on a little variety.

Nowhere is it written that a sandwich has to be cut into two neat rectangles.

Try a diagonal cut instead — or even four dainty triangles.

Or be even more daring — don't use bread at all. There is a variety of rolls and muffins available in the baked goods section of your market.

To get you started, here are some super sandwich ideas and recipes that'll liven up the traditional brown bag.

SAVORY LUNCH BOX SANDWICH

1/2 lb. ham or salami, cut in small chunks
1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing

Then there is always commercial or homemade beef jerky, varie-

2 tbsps. sweet pickle relish
1 tsp. prepared mustard

grated peel and juice of 1/2 fresh lemon

In electric blender or food processor, blend ham until finely chopped. In bowl, combine ham, cheese, mayonnaise, relish, mustard, lemon peel and juice. Mix well.

Spread bread with mixture and top with lettuce and second slice of bread.

Makes four sandwiches.

CHOPPED EGG CARTWHEEL SANDWICH

3 tbsps. mayonnaise or salad dressing
1 tsp. chopped ripe or green olives or sweet or dill pickle grated peel of 1/2 orange generous dash salt

3 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
1 orange, peeled, cut in cartwheels lettuce or alfalfa sprouts

In bowl, combine mayonnaise, olives, orange peel and salt, stir in eggs. Spread bread with egg mixture. Top with orange cartwheel slices, lettuce and another slice bread.

CORNED BEEF PLUS SANDWICH
3 tbsps. mayonnaise or salad dressing
grated peel of 1 orange
2 tbsps. fresh squeezed orange juice
2 tbsps. sweet pickle relish generous dash pepper
1 can (7 ozs.) corned beef, shredded
3 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
In bowl, combine mayonnaise, orange peel and juice, pickle relish and pepper. Blend in corned beef and eggs. Makes six sandwiches.

ORANGE CREAM CHEESE SANDWICH

1 pkg. (8 ozs.) cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup raisins

1/4 cup chopped nuts
grated peel of 1/4 fresh orange

1 orange peeled, cut in bite-size pieces, drained

In bowl, combine cream cheese, raisins, nuts and orange peel. Add orange pieces, blending lightly. Spread bread with cream cheese mixture and top with bread.

Children learn responsibility with animals

By DENISE FOWLER
Copley News Service

There was once a time when the only way a pet could enter a classroom was in a student's coat pocket or under his cap.

When finally discovered, animal and owner would probably have been scolded and sent home.

After all, teachers said, school was no place for an animal. And so, all pets were banned from the school yard.

Now, however, teachers and education specialists are discovering the value of animals — officially permitted and often welcomed into the classroom.

Live pets are being integrated into classroom situations, serving as visual aids and lessons in sociability. Caring for animals teaches children to treat others — humans or animals — with respect, patience and understanding. They also help teachers approach difficult lessons about coping with life's problems.

"One morning my class came to school to learn their pet hamster had died," recalls Becky Hokken, a Manhattan kindergarten teacher. "They all felt very unhappy, but I took the opportunity to initiate a discussion on life and death. Then, we conducted a burial and ceremony for the animal in Central Park."

Beverly Brown, a New York public schoolteacher, says she noticed an improvement in her pupils' mathematics skills after she replaced counting cards with live gerbils. And, several youngsters from her class said their creative writing was inspired by the tranquility of their classroom's tropical fish tank.

Other schoolteachers are supplementing classroom lectures with field trips and guest speakers from the pet industry as well as national and local humane societies. The Pet Food Institute, for example, has information available for in-class use through its "Sharing Sam" program. The American Humane Society has an education department filled with materials and lesson plans to help educators and civic groups teach responsible pet care.

A pet care skit has been developed by New York's Bide-A-Wee Home Association in conjunction with the Affiliated Dog Training Center.

The skit, known as "The Louise and Frankie Show," consists of a person in a dog costume, Frankie, and his owner, Louise, who demonstrates the right and wrong way to care for a pet. The comical manner in which the subject is approached elicits an overwhelming response from the schoolchildren.

"Louise and Frankie" has been so successful because the skit format

Recognizing the potential of animals as teaching aids, the Pet Information Bureau has published a free manual showing elementary schoolteachers the benefits of classroom pets.

"Professor Pet" includes lesson plans, instructions on how to establish and maintain an in-class pet station and lists of additional resources available. With the aid of this manual, teachers are finding ways to use animals to teach subjects ranging from social behavior to the traditional reading, writing and arithmetic.

High protein foods are nutritious, filling and affordable

Copley News Service

When the party plan calls for heartier fare than simply dips, chips and crudites, but you still want to be out with the guests instead of trapped at the stove, consider some of the following ideas.

They're made with fish and chicken — high-protein foods that are nutritious and filling but still affordable.

They take only a little last-minute attention, some don't require any, and can be set out on the buffet when the party begins.

Electric hot trays can be used to keep appetizers such as the Indonesian Chicken Tidbits piping hot. Electric crockery cookers can keep saucier dips bubbly.

Other courses, such as quiche, are fine at cool room temperature, so can stay out on a buffet table for some time.

To keep things looking pretty, arrange several trays of appetizers on ovenproof trays well before the guests arrive. Cover them with foil or plastic wrap and refrigerate if necessary. Then reheating is easy, right on the serving tray.

The salmon pate is an affordable party spread, cool and pretty with a garnish of carefully cut vegetables. Use leaves from leeks for flower stems, carrots and radishes for flowers, bits of herbs and olives for other garnish ideas.

Serve the pate with slices of cucumber as well as crackers, so guests can choose a less caloric but still crisp server for the creamy spread.

The pate can be made a day ahead of serving. Unmold and garnish it on serving day and keep it chilled, covered, until ready to serve.

The crabmeat appetizer stretches a can of crabmeat (or flaked, fresh crab) in a creamy dip with a touch of horseradish.

And the chicken tidbits, with a peanut butter sauce, are a simply delicious combination, although you wouldn't think so from the ingredients — peanut butter, honey, mayonnaise and curry powder.

Bake the chicken ahead of time, then refrigerate it until serving time. Reheat the chicken in the sauce, covered, then arrange the chicken on skewers on a warming tray.

SALMON PATE
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
Three-fourths cup cold water

1 cup salad dressing (mayonnaise type)
1 can (15.5 ounces) red salmon, drained and flaked
One-half cup finely chopped celery
One-fourth cup finely chopped green pepper
1 teaspoon finely chopped onion
One-half cup heavy cream, whipped

In a small saucepan combine the gelatin and cold water, stirring until the gelatin is soft. Stir the mixture over low heat until the gelatin dissolves. Gradually add the cooled gelatin mixture to the salad dressing, blending it well.

Chill the mixture until it is partially set, then stir in the salmon, celery, green pepper and onion. Taste the mixture for seasoning, correcting it if necessary with salt and cayenne pepper.

Fold in the whipped cream and pour the mixture in two lightly oiled 6-by-3.5-inch loaf pans, or a 1-quart mold.

Chill the pate until it is firm, then unmold and garnish it as desired.

CRABMEAT APPETIZER

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1 1/2 cups (7.5 ounces) crabmeat, drained and flaked
2 tbsps. finely chopped onion
2 tbsps. milk
1/2 tsp. creamstyle horseradish
1/4 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
1/2 cup sliced, toasted almonds

Combine the cream cheese, crab, onion, milk, horseradish and seasonings, blending them well. Spoon the mixture into an ovenproof serving dish, sprinkle the top with the nuts and bake it 15 minutes at 375 degrees.

Serve as a dip or spread for crackers, chips and raw vegetables.

Note: A 6.5-ounce can of minced clams, drained, may be substituted for the crabmeat.

In that case, omit the almonds and sprinkle the appetizer instead with dill weed.

INDONESIAN CHICKEN TIDBITS

1/2 cup creamy peanut butter
2 tbsps. honey
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 tsp. curry powder
1/2 cup milk
3 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned and cut into 1 1/2-inch cubes
Salt to taste

Combine the peanut butter and honey. Add the mayonnaise and

Spending time with the children

By ERMA BOMBECK

"We should spend more time with the children," I told my husband the other day. "In a few years they'll be gone and we'll rattle around in this empty house wishing we had taken the time to sit down and find out how they felt about things... their hopes... their ambitions... what are you smiling about?"

"I'm still back at the part on rattling around in the house. Do you know I shaved the other morning without steam on the mirror and nearly scared myself to death?"

"Children need the companionship of an adult," I continued. "That very special relationship in the formative years where you listen to one another, advise, assess, mold values, exchange ideas and points of view. We don't even know how they feel about life."

"Get on with it. What are you suggesting?"

"You should take your son fishing and I'll have the weekend here alone with our daughter. That way it's a one-on-one situation where we really get into the meaningful stuff."

Last week, as I watched father and son load up all the gear into the four-wheel drive, a lump came into my throat. When they left the driveway, I called to my daughter.

"Whatya want? I'm on the phone."

She was on the phone for more than five hours.

As she was showering, I fell to my knees and yelled under the door, "Do you want to talk about anything?"

"Yes," she yelled back. "Do you have a clean pair of pantyhose?"

Later, as she tore out the front door, I tugged at her sleeve and asked, "You wanta tell me how you feel about life?"

"I'm for it," she said simply, pecking me on the cheek.

The next morning, she slept until noon and at lunch she wore a pair of headphones and a blank expression to the table. I was relieved when my husband and son pulled into the driveway. "How did you make out?" I asked.

He smiled triumphantly. "If I do say so myself, it was one of my better performances. I talked about values in this life and how sometimes it was hard not to become tainted by what is going on in the world around us, but we are a family and if we stick together, there isn't anything we can't do. I talked about aims and goals in life and how you had to be patient and sometimes compromise and you know

Keep summer's good looks

Copley News Service

Don't leave summer's good looks behind when you trade your leisurely vacation days for a fast-paced school schedule. An organized, tip-toe beauty routine can help you keep your summer look throughout the year.

You've been eating light this summer and your figure shows it. So keep a good shape going with a sensible school-day diet. Wake up a few minutes early and take time for a filling, nutritious breakfast. It keeps you from stuffing later in the day.

Choose soups and salads and bypass desserts when you go through the cafeteria line at lunch. And make snacking off-limits — especially when watching television or studying. Both can distract you from how much you're eating. If you get a serious snacking attack, try fresh fruits and vegetables.

Summer is everyone's exercise season — and there's really no reason to give up firm muscles in the fall. Take the time to bicycle, run the track or go roller skating.

Remember that you need stretches to keep muscles well-toned. Yoga and calisthenics can do the job.

Those hectic back-to-school days are prime time for breakouts, so take extra precautions with your skin. Noxzema Antiseptic Skin Cleanser deep-cleans oily, acne-prone skin. It is especially handy any time during the day that skin needs freshening up — during lunch hour, after gym class or after school.

A golden tan may have been all you needed in the summer, but you'll want to face up to fall with new makeup colors. Did you love the bright and sunny look your face had in the summer? Bring it back with a warm bronze blush. If your skin tends to be oily, be sure to choose a foundation, blush and powder formulated to provide oil control and stop greasy shine.

Now is the time to nail down pretty hands, especially if your nails are ragged from a summer of swimming, sports or just plain neglect. File nails into a rounded-square shape for maximum strength. Use a conditioner to soothe and pamper both nails and often-neglected cuticles. Do wear polish — but opt for a lighter shade if nails aren't at their best. A clear nail strengthener applied as a base and top coat will give polish more staying power.

Those summer nights up late with the midnight movie didn't count when you could sleep in the next morning. Now you've got to get to sleep early if you want to wake up refreshed and ready to go.

...all the brilliant things a kid will remember his father saying for the rest of his life."

"What did he say?" I asked excitedly.

"Nothing. He slept all the way up and back."

NCE says jobs are and will be available for future teachers

By SAM LAWTON
Copley News Service

Jobs are — and will be — available for future teachers who start preparing for their careers early.

That's the forecast from experts at National College of Education, the country's oldest private college devoted to teacher education. Last year, 96 percent of National College students seeking education jobs found them.

"The market is ample and growing for teachers who are ready, willing and able to take advantage of it," said Placement Director Robert Hartman. "We could easily place twice as many superior teachers as we have available."

Schools have the greatest need for special education, math, science and language arts teachers, he added. Sun-belt states also have more openings than they can fill, he said.

Demand for preschool, kindergarten and elementary schoolteachers will rise sharply in the 1980s, a New York Times report, "Careers in the '80s," verified recently.

The Oct. 14, 1979, article cited U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics figures predicting that demand for preschool and kindergarten teachers will increase by 25 percent by the mid-1980s, while demand for elementary school teachers will increase by nearly 10 percent.

Moreover, a U.S. News and World

Report article published last fall predicted the '80s would bring a teacher shortage by 1985.

How can aspiring young teachers put themselves in the best position to take advantage of this shortage? Here are some suggestions.

Talk with school superintendents or principals about what skills they look for in hiring teachers. Talk with classroom teachers about skills they feel are important.

Ask each college's admissions counselor about specific aspects of the teacher training program. Does the school offer extensive practical experience with children? Does the school provide close interaction between experienced teachers and prospective teachers?

Be sure the college you select provides a solid foundation in the liberal arts. Children ask all sorts of questions, and a teacher needs basic knowledge in many subjects.

Select a program that integrates practical classroom experience and academic studies.

Be sure students are closely supervised by seasoned professional teachers. They serve as excellent models. A good relationship with several professionals will also strengthen any job recommendations you'll need.

Choose a school with a strong student teaching program.

Women's changing role course topic

The changing role of women in today's society will be explored in a new special topics psychology course being offered at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin this fall.

Registration is slated 9 a.m.-noon and 2-7 p.m. Sept. 2-3 in the UTPB student lounge.

Dr. Donna Thompson, psychology lecturer, said the course, The Psychology of Women, will cover some of the critical issues of the time.

"The major responsibilities of women today, as in the past, are as wife, homemaker, mother and worker," she said. "What is the psychological impact of changes or conflicts in these responsibilities?"

"Some issues to be dealt with include mothering versus day care alternatives, jobs available to women in the labor force, the impact of divorce and possible implications of the Equal Rights Amendment. Available research will be discussed with an attempt to present and evaluate all perspectives," she said.

The Psychology of Women, Psych

489-01, will meet 8:30-9:45 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday. It is one of three new psychology courses to be offered during the fall. Other new topics include Human Sexuality, and Psychology and the Law.

Enrollment at the upper-level university is open to students who have completed 60 credit hours of coursework at any accredited community college, senior college or university.

Safety level same in air

MONTREAL (AP) — The U.N.'s International Civil Aviation Organization has released preliminary information on fatal aircraft accidents on scheduled airlines in 1979.

According to the statistics, there were 31 fatal aircraft accidents in 1979 involving 871 passenger fatalities. The corresponding figures for 1978 were 25 fatal accidents and 755 passenger fatalities.

The U.N. agency points out that the level of safety, in view of increasing traffic in scheduled passenger services in 1979, kept close to the level of 1978 although the number of accidents and fatalities increased last year.

San Salvadorians tired of violence

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — "There was a dead body lying by the side of the road this morning with his thumbs tied together behind his back," said the businessman, a pained look on his face. "The violence here is throwing me off... It's just getting too much for me."

Violence has become the national illness of this tiny, beautiful Central American nation as leftist guerrillas battle for control — the ripples from the Sandinista victory in nearby Nicaragua last year.

Leftists say armed struggle is the only way to topple what they call "a genocidal regime." The government, which tried to rely on reforms to win support, is now permitting ultra-right military men to crush the leftists in an extensive anti-guerrilla campaign. Right-wing death squads appear to operate with impunity and are often linked directly with the military.

Leftist violence surged here and in Guatemala after the Marxist-led Sandinista guerrillas ousted the right-wing government of President Anastasio Somoza in Nicaragua in July, 1979. They now are overseeing Nicaragua's postwar recovery.

Most Salvadorans are fed up with the political violence that has claimed more than 5,000 dead this year, according to the Documents Office at the Jesuit-run University of Central America. About 20 percent of the total is attributed to leftist guerrillas and the rest to the military and the death squads.

"You have to choose one side or the other so at least you only have one enemy," said one worker.

"The violence is the government's enemy within that may destroy it," said one U.S. career diplomat. "The left's viciousness may have already done it in."

The government is a five-man junta of three civilians and two army colonels backed by a combined security force and army of 15,000 men. The junta took power in January after the collapse of a previous junta that had ruled since the overthrow Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero last Oct. 15.

The coup was engineered by young army officers who thought the leftist threat could be stopped by an agrarian reform program and intense government efforts to lower the 70 percent illiteracy rate, 40 percent unemployment and raise the $4 daily minimum wage. But right-wing military men re-established control of the government in early May after the left stepped up violence despite the start of the reforms.

The leftists are avowed Marxists who have joined forces in the Revolutionary Coordinator of the Masses, an umbrella organization for the unions, students, professionals and peasants. Its membership is estimated at 100,000 persons. Three guerrilla groups recently formed the United Revolutionary Command to coordinate the actions of their 3,000 to 4,000 troops.

Adrian Recinos, the country's most powerful leftist union leader, claims half of the 4.8 million persons in this Massachusetts-sized nation support the left. But another leftist said, "We don't need the support of all the people. First we'll win the war, then the people."

Most observers believe the left's adoption of violent tactics has lost it support among the people. "The left used to be seen as a broad front complaining about social and economic injustices to a do-nothing government... but its choice of a terrorist war has just turned people off," said one Salvadoran.

"The left is not saying one thing now the people want to hear," says junta member Jose Napoleon Duarte, a Christian Democrat. "The government is doing what the people have wanted for 50 years."

Chief handles town drinkers

HUNTINGTON, VA — Police Chief Otis Adkins believes that one way to rid downtown Huntington of vagrants and winos is to lead them to the waterfront. And Adkins thinks he's found a way to make them drink there. During a city council meeting Monday night, Adkins suggested that wine bottles be buried along the banks of the Ohio River as an enticement to the bums who have been loitering around downtown. Merchants have been complaining, and Adkins says that because the city does not have a law against loitering, he can't arrest the vagrants. Another solution, Adkins suggested, would be to give the trouble-makers one-way tickets to Florida. The council is to study the problem further.

Less aliens to enroll

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Independent School District's estimate of the number of illegal alien children expected to register for classes in August has dropped from several thousand to several hundred.

The 5,000 children officials originally said would descend on the school system if allowed to attend are "not going to be overnight," said Robby Collins, a DISD administrator. "That is an estimate of what we thought would happen over 12 months."

Collins said he expects early alien enrollment in the DISD to be around 200 — the same number of pupils that attended a school for illegal aliens sponsored by a coalition of community groups last year.

Once classes get rolling on Aug. 25, Collins said he expects the number will begin to increase, as aliens living here will send for their children and word will spread to Mexico that alien children can legally get a free education in Texas.

Dallas' school district was one of 17 Texas school districts sued in 1978 and 1979 because of discriminatory admission policies toward alien children.

The district hired a statistician during the court battle to research Immigration and Naturalization Service records on deportation and project the number of children DISD could expect to enroll.

"He predicted 5,000 within 12 months," Collins said.

School trustee Robert Medrano, the only Mexican-American on the school board, said he estimated 15,000 to 18,000 alien children would enroll if the district's regulations were voided by the federal court.

Attorneys for the illegal aliens contended only 600 to 800 would enroll in the district.

Rio Grande residents brace for flooding in Allen's wake

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — Residents along the Rio Grande today braced for flooding as the tatters of Hurricane Allen dumped rain on the region and threatened to send the border river out of its banks.

The National Weather Service warned that heavy runoff from weekend rains had filled the Rio Concho River, headed toward a confluence with the Rio Grande, which could reach flood stage early today.

"We haven't evacuated anyone yet," Joe Chavez of the Presidio County sheriff's office said early today. "But we will when we have to."

In Port Au Prince, Haiti, where unconfirmed reports say the death toll from Allen's rampage through the Caribbean could surpass 200, American officials said the Haitian government had asked for help.

Elias Tamari of the U.S. Agency for International Development, said said the Haitians asked for food, supplies, building materials, blankets, clothing and other staples for an estimated 835,000 people who suffered some damage from the killer storm.

But the request contained no estimate of casualties, Tamari said, and did not detail how many of the 835,000 suffered serious loss.

Foreign Minister Georges Salomon said Tuesday Haitian survey teams had been finding more bodies including 12 he saw on the Ile a Vache off Haiti's southwest tip. Tibor Nagy, a U.S. Embassy official coordinating U.S. disaster relief in Haiti, said reports up to now indicate "more than 100 bodies in all. It's possible that new data puts it at more than 200."

Allen careened through the Caribbean with winds up to 185 miles per hour, and forecasters called it the hurricane of the century. But as it idled off the Texas coast Saturday night, it lost power and came aground in an unpopulated area, then weakening and turning northward into Mexico.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements wrapped up a two-day tour of the flood-stricken areas along the Gulf of Mexico and expanded his disaster declaration to nine coastal counties.

The declarations for Brooks, Hidalgo, Aransas, Nueces, Jim Wells, Kleberg, San Patricio, Cameron and Wilbrey Counties makes residents there eligible for three-percent loans to rebuild or repair homes and businesses.

At the southern tip of Texas, several streets in downtown Edinburg still were flooded this morning, sheriff's deputies reported.

"Many, many areas in the residential section still have four feet of water in the homes," Mayor Ronald Cash said Tuesday.

Willacy County Judge Bill Rapp visited Port Mansfield, a popular fishing resort about 40 miles north of Brownsville on Tuesday. The small community was one of the hardest hit areas along the coast.

"It's horrible," Rapp said. "It makes you sick. Some people just completely lost their homes."

He said 50 structures, homes and mobile trailers were washed away and another 214 houses, trailers and apartments suffered major damage in the storm surge.

Elderly residents of a Brownsville public housing project complained they were abused by 75 people who claimed to be refugees from Matamoros, Mexico, just across the border.

"They descended upon us, and being younger and stronger, they took over," said Fred Woolsey, a 58-year-old paraplegic confined to a wheelchair at the Villa del Sol, a 14-story tower near the Rio Grande.

He said residents were moved from their apartments to the ground floor, where no food was available. Residents were not able to return to their apartments for food after the power blackout shut down elevators, he said.

"You just don't go walk away and leave 180 people who are mostly 70 or older in a doggone position where they have to take care of themselves," he said.

Irma Solitaire, acting director of the Brownsville Housing Authority, said she began an investigation of the complaints on Tuesday.

Residents cite abuse by aliens

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Some residents of a public housing project for the elderly complained Tuesday they were abandoned and abused by 75 refugees fleeing Matamoros, Mexico, during Hurricane Allen.

"It's amazing we haven't got any dead people here," said Fred Woolsey, a 58-year-old paraplegic confined to a wheelchair.

"You just don't go walk away and leave 180 people who are mostly 70 or older in a doggone position where they have to take care of themselves," he said.

Woolsey said 240 people live in the Villa del Sol, a 14-story apartment tower near the Rio Grande.

About 180 residents stayed in the building for the storm, but were told to come to the first floor in case the hurricane's anticipated winds of 180 mph blew out glass in the apartments.

From Saturday afternoon until Sunday evening, the residents had nothing to eat but a small serving of canned peaches they found in the main kitchen, Woolsey said.

"We had water and food up in our apartments, but then the power gave out and the elevators wouldn't work. And these people, most of them are feeble and can't walk up that high to get anything," he said.

Irma Solitaire, the acting director of the Brownsville Housing Authority, learned of the problem Tuesday and began an investigation, she said. She said she had told maintenance workers to lock the building and not let anyone in.

But Woolsey said about 75 people identifying themselves as coming from Mexico came in the unlocked building.

"They descended upon us, and being younger and stronger they took over," he said. The intruders pushed the residents off their cots and comfortable chairs, he added.

"I watched my 91-year-old mother sit in a straight-back plastic chair for 36 hours," he said.

The building lacked electricity and water during the height of the storm; consequently, toilets would not flush, Woolsey added.

"You didn't need a flashlight to find the toilets, you could smell them," he said.

Another resident, John Buck, said he was circulating a petition to inform

Gov. Bill Clements of the situation in the hope it will not happen again.

Buck blamed the Brownsville police and fire departments for not responding to calls for help.

Heat wave causes at least one death

By The Associated Press

Hurricane Allen brought a temporary break in the heat wave in parts of Texas, but other parts of the South continue to bake and one new death from the blistering temperatures has been reported.

In Berryville, Ark., two major employers, Tyson Foods and Kraft Foods, are cutting back operations in an effort to conserve water.

Tyson employees will work three days a week instead of five. Kraft, which had been operating seven days a week, is cutting back to five days a week.

Children will attend classes for one-half day instead of a full day when school opens next week. Sandwiches, instead of full meals, will be served for lunch. Officials hope that will help cut the use of water.

At a special Berryville City Council meeting Monday, officials decided to deepen a reservoir to allow more water to flow into the city's supply tanks. If the efforts are successful, officials believe the water supply can be brought back to normal for three to four weeks.

"It'll cost us plenty, boys, to do this work, but it'll cost us plenty if we don't," said Mayor W.L. Chaffin.

The cause of the problem is two-fold — searing heat and a lack of rainfall. The statewide high on Tuesday was 104 in Fort Smith.

There also have been water-shortage problems in Oklahoma. It was 104 in Tulsa on Tuesday.

Jonesboro, Ark., is 15 inches below its normal annual rainfall total. Little Rock and Fort Smith also are down as much as 10 inches of rain.

For the first time in almost a month, Arkansas has recorded a heat-related death, bringing the unofficial state total to 102.

Jefferson County Coroner Havis Hester said Monday that Robert Huttig, 52, of Swan Lake died of heatstroke.

The nation's heat wave has claimed at least 1,251 lives in 24 states since June 22, according to an unofficial count by The Associated Press.

Parts of South sweltering in resumed high temperatures

By The Associated Press

Parts of the South continued to bake under sweltering temperatures despite a temporary break in the heat wave in Texas because of Hurricane Allen.

In Berryville, Ark., beset by heat and lack of rain, two major employers are cutting back operations in an effort to conserve water. And children will attend classes for a half-day only when schools open next week.

Rain and thunderstorms extended over the upper Mississippi Valley and eastern portions of the upper Plains. Thunderstorms dropped hail on eastern South Dakota and were scattered along the Atlantic Coast from Florida into New Jersey.

Showers were scattered over the northern Rockies and western Arizona.

More thundershowers were expected over much of the eastern two-thirds of the nation, with scattered storms over the Rockies into the southern Plateau.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 50 degrees in Houghton Lake, Mich., to 94 degrees in Phoenix, Ariz.

Here are some early morning temperatures and conditions around the nation: Eastern U.S.: Atlanta

American League goes to the Birds

By The Associated Press

Some were winners and some were losers, but everything came up Birds in the American League Tuesday night.

Mark "The Bird" Fidrych made his first flight on a major league mound in 1980 Tuesday night, trying to come back for the fourth time since he captured the hearts of baseball in 1976 with his zany antics and pinpoint control that helped him to a 19-9 record.

Fidrych pleased Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson by displaying a lively fast ball that has been missing since arm miseries began to threaten his career four years ago. And his control was classic Bird — 120 pitches, 80 strikes.

In fact the only thing that spoiled the evening for the roaring crowd of 48,361 Bird-watchers at Tiger Stadium was that Fidrych lost the game, 5-4 to the Boston Red Sox.

Meanwhile, Doug Bird was a winning bird with five innings of scoreless relief that carried the New York Yankees into the bottom of the 10th, when Ruppert Jones followed an intentional walk to Willie Randolph with a grand slam homer for an 8-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

That gave the Yankees a 3½-game lead in the American League East over a whole team of birds, the Baltimore Orioles, who also had an intentional walk strategem fail in a 4-3 loss to the Kansas City Royals.

"First of all, he's as good a competitor as I've ever sat on the bench with," said Anderson. "A lot of guys have the talent to pitch in the major leagues but they turn into babies when things get tough."

Anderson raised some eyebrows last spring when he made it clear that Fidrych could never make the Tigers on the basis of his popularity and fan appeal. The Bird himself said it was "a shock" that he was recalled from Evansville because he was told he would spend all of 1980 in the minors.

Royals 4, Orioles 3

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver had reliever Tim Stoddard walk .390 hitter George Brett intentionally with third base open in the ninth inning, setting up a bases-loaded walk to Amos Otis that gave Kansas City its victory in the bottom of the ninth inning.

"I didn't want him to beat us with a base hit," said Weaver of Brett, who singled, tripled and drove in a run earlier to run his consecutive game hitting streak to 25. "You can only get beat by one run, so why let George swing the bat?"

"All we needed was a single and I'm a good singles hitter," Brett said. "I'm flattered, I guess."

Yankees 8, White Sox 4

Randolph was walked with one out and runners at first and third before reliever Ed Farmer grooved a do-or-die 3-2 pi for at Jones bombed into the right field seats for a grand slam.

The White Sox trailed 3-1 after four innings but came back against starter Luis Tiant before Bird relieved to blank them the last five innings.

Blue Jays 3-5, Brewers 1-4

A two-run single in the eighth inning by Lloyd Moseby won the first game and a two-run triple by Ernie Whitt in the ninth won the second for Toronto over Milwaukee.

Despite the sweep by the Blue Jays, who had lost seven of their previous eight starts, they still suffered a setback as outfielder Barry Bonnell sustained a broken cheekbone when he was hit by a pitch from Larry Sorensen. The errant pitch loaded the bases for Moseby, who delivered the tie-breaking single and made a winner of Jim Clancy, 11-8, who pitched a six-hitter.

Indians 2, Rangers 1

Rick Waits pitched a six-hitter for 82.3 innings and got last-out relief help from Victor Cruz, who saved Cleveland's victory over Texas by getting Richie Zisk to pop up for the final out with the tying run on second.

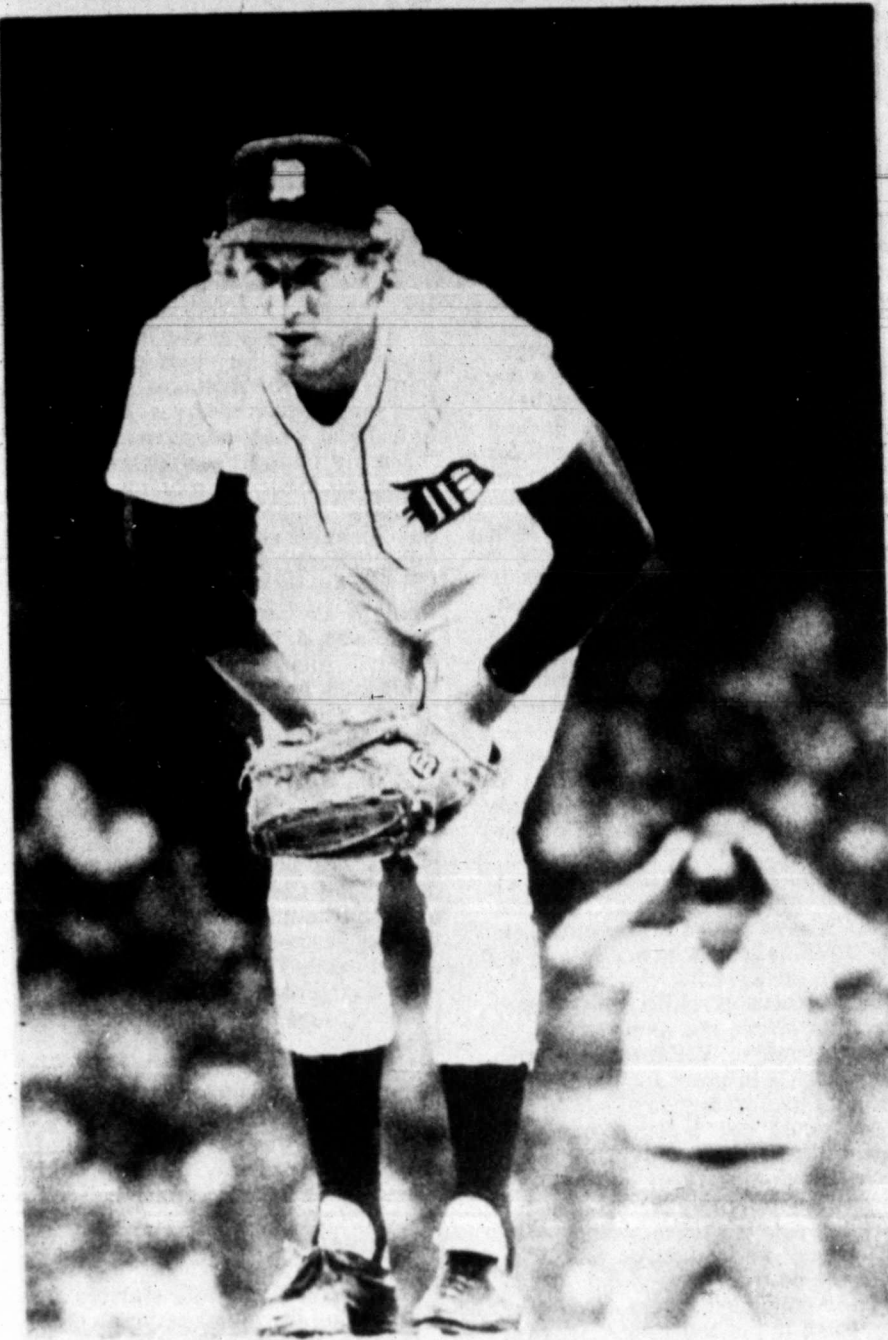

Toby Harrah knocked in the only Cleveland runs off Ferguson Jenkins, 10-10, with a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

Twins 3, A's 2

Glenn Adams hit a solo homer in the bottom of the ninth that was just fair and barely over the fence but it was enough to give Minnesota a victory over Oakland. His third homer of the year made a winner of reliever Doug Corbett, 8-3, who got the last two outs in the last of the ninth.

Angels 9, Mariners 6

Rod Carew sparked a three-run seventh-inning with a run-scoring double and California went on to beat Seattle. Bert Campaneris had a three-run homer for the Angels and Tom Paciorek and Jim Anderson homered for Seattle.

Mark "The Bird" Fidrych concentrates as he prepares to make his first pitch for the Detroit Tigers against Boston Tuesday night. Mark lost, 5-4, but the Tigers were pleased with his performance. (AP Laserphoto)

Wreckaford, Hall tear up raceways

By The Associated Press

The early days in auto racing were not happy ones for Johnny Rutherford.

Oh, there were the chills and spills of screeching tires and the thud when smacking into walls of almost every description.

Rutherford, who came to Indy car racing in 1962 as a raw 24-year-old, quickly gained the nickname "Johnny Wreckaford."

And, in sports, it's hard to shake an early image, especially when you're not winning.

DURING HIS first 11 years on the championship car circuit, the ruggedly handsome youngster managed one victory and a multitude of broken bones, scars and worries.

He did win the U.S. Auto Club sprint car division in 1965. But the sprint cars and midgets always have been considered poor cousins to champ cars.

Those divisions were just the places where you payed your dues. And Rutherford did that.

He drove and drove and went nowhere. He was just another of the legion of young drivers who daily intone the prayerful words: "I could do it if I could just get good equipment under me."

Then came 1973. A pivotal year. Two champ car victories, a pair of second-place finishes, third-place in the national standings and his first $100,000 earnings year.

Nothing has been the same for the smiling Texan since that golden year.

Rutherford won the first of his three Indy 500s in 1974 and has not finished lower than fourth in the national championship race since. Twice, he won four races in a single season. Long gone are the "Wreckaford" days. But the ultimate goal, a national championship, still has escaped him.

But it is now well within his reach. Rutherford won his fifth race of 1980 last Sunday, easily taking the Tony Bettenhausen 200. In eight champ car events this season, Rutherford's worst finish has been fourth.

And that came in a race where the gear box in his intimidating Jim Hall-prepared Chaparral broke in the early going.

When Al Unser decided of his own volition to leave the Midland-based Chaparral racing team at the end of last season, Hall got on the telephone and summoned Rutherford.

THE MARRIAGE between Rutherford and Hall, a fellow Texan, former driving star and a great automotive innovator, appears to be one made in heaven.

"We have great communication," Rutherford says. "Jim just seems to anticipate problems, and the crew has done a great job of making the car dependable."

The "Yellow Submarine," as the sleek, low-slung car has become known, is the only one on the circuit to have completed every lap of every race this season.

Rutherford did kiss a wall during practice at Pocono, forcing him to step into his backup car for that 500-mile race. But he still managed a second-place finish.

"There are still four races to go, though, and I'm not going to get too comfortable," Rutherford said. "I got comfortable in 1976 after winning Indy and Gordy (Gordon Johncock) came back and beat me by 20 points. "But this could be my year."

Reds 3, Padres 2

Ron Oester hit a three-run seventh-inning homer and fellow rookie Joe Price hurled a three-hitter for his first complete game in the majors. Loser Randy Jones had the Reds shut out until two out in the seventh when Johnny Bench drew Jones' only walk. Dave Concepcion singled and Oester followed with his second major league homer.

"It was very relaxing to spend time with my family," said Price, who grew up in the San Diego suburb of Lakeside. "I needed 50 tickets tonight. I had a lot of friends and relatives here."

Phillies 8-5, Cubs 5-2

Bob Boone's eighth-inning homer snapped a 2-2 tie and led the Phillies to victory in the regularly scheduled game as Steve Carlton, 18-6, scattered eight hits. In the completion of Monday's game, which was tied 5-5 after 10 innings when darkness intervened, Bake McBride singled home the go-ahead run in the top of the 15th and Mike Schmidt added a two-run triple as Philadelphia snapped a 10-game losing streak on the road. Schmidt drove in two runs in the regular game with his 29th homer and a single.

Braves 7, Dodgers 6

Pinch hitter Jeff Burroughs slugged a game-winning three-run homer with one out in the top of the ninth off Rick Sutcliffe following a walk to Biff Pocaroba and Brian Asselstine's single. Burroughs' blast was the third home run of the game for the Braves. Dale Murphy hit his 19th with the bases empty in the second inning and Bob Horner slammed his 23rd, a three-run shot in the third. The Dodgers had taken a 6-4 lead with four unearned runs in the seventh.

"Your legs are like jello, it's a tough job pinch hitting," said Burroughs. "You don't get the feel of the game sitting on the bench, so you just go up there and hack at it. I was just hoping to get a swing with the bat."

No room is left at top in NL races

By The Associated Press

The National League is having a grand-old time playing "Can You Top This?"

No sooner had the Montreal Expos climbed into a tie with the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates in the East Division Tuesday night, then the West finished the day with three teams just one-half game apart.

Montreal regained a share of the lead by blanking the St. Louis Cardinals 4-0 with the help of a triple play while the Pirates had their eight-game winning streak ended by the New York Mets 3-1.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Dodgers suffered a stunning 7-6 loss to the Atlanta Braves and saw their lead in the West remain at one-half game over the Houston Astros, 2-0 losers to the San Francisco Giants. The Cincinnati Reds edged the San Diego Padres 3-2 and trail the Dodgers by one-half game and Houston by one percentage point.

Ellis Valentine singled and Gary Carter doubled him home in the fourth inning as the Expos defeated the Cardinals behind the four-hit pitching of Fred Norman, Elias Sosa and Woodie Fryman. Norman, making only his first start, allowed all four hits in six innings-plus.

"I've had better stuff," said Norman. "I was fortunate. They hit the ball hard, but they hit it at somebody."

One of the Cardinals' hardest shots wound up as a triple play. Keith Hernandez and Ted Simmons singled in the bottom of the fourth but third baseman Larry Parrish snared George Hendrick's smash at his shoepots and threw to second baseman Rodney Scott to nail Hernandez. Scott then relayed to first baseman Warren Cromartie before Simmons could get back.

Hernandez was hit by a pitch and Simmons singled to start the seventh, chasing Norman. This time, Sosa got Hendrick on a pop-foul and Fryman retired pinch hitter Keith Smith and Mike Ramsey. Montreal added three runs in the ninth, two on a double by Parrish.

Mets 3, Pirates 1

Ray Burris blanked Pittsburgh for eight innings and Alex Trevino broke up a pitching duel with a two-run single off Rick Rhoden in the seventh. Lee Mazzilli and Claudell Washington opened the Mets' seventh with singles followed by a Steve Henderson sacrifice. Joel Youngblood was walked intentionally to load the bases but Trevino spoiled the strategy with a single.

The Mets added a run in the ninth on Henderson's inside-the-park homer. Burris, who was on the disabled list for a month with a broken thumb, lost his shutout when Mike Easler led off the bottom of the ninth with a home run.

"I still have a little pain when I grab something or apply pressure on the tip of the thumb," said Burris. "But it's good enough for me to throw. I'm not disappointed at all about losing the complete game. If I only go five innings and we win the ballgame, I did my job."

Traditionalists dislike DH rule

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Understand first of all that you are dealing with a traditionalist, a man who believes that baseball is supposed to be played on grass, not some man-made rug, by nine guys who carry around gloves in their equipment bags as well as bats.

So from the start, you know that baseball gimmicky like artificial surfaces and designated hitters will not receive a warm welcome from the keeper of this corner.

When Abner Doubleday, Alexander Cartwright and Casey Stengel invented baseball, they designed it as leisurely recreation for a hot summer's afternoon with no great concern about producing enough runs to compete with the scoring pyrotechnics of football and basketball. If a game ended 2-1, well, then that was the score. There were enough wrinkles — strategy moves, close calls and the like — in every game to satisfy most true fans. You didn't need the artificial excitement of 10 runs a game to make baseball interesting.

And if it rained and the field turned muddy, well then you had a rainout and came back the next day to play again. There were no vacuum cleaners roaring through the outfield, sweeping up the water, creating five-hour rain delays like the one in Philadelphia a couple of months ago. Zambonis were for hockey rinks, not baseball outfields.

You know all that has changed. The American League has had a designated hitter for the pitcher ever since 1973. There are more magic carpets around National League infields than you'll find in the Arabian Nights. Call it better baseball through chemistry.

Now the National League, that bastion of baseball conservatism, is being asked to add the designated hitter to its games. The St. Louis Cardinals are spearheading a drive to introduce the 10th man to NL lineups and the subject was on the agenda of today's league meeting in Dearborn, Mich.

A simple majority of seven of the 12 teams would be sufficient to take the bat out of the hands of pitchers and add an extra hitter to NL lineups. The last time the subject was discussed in 1976, NL teams rejected the idea 9-3.

Besides St. Louis, four NL teams — Atlanta, San Diego, Philadelphia and the New York Mets — like the DH idea. Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Chicago are solidly opposed. The issue seems to sit in the hands of the undecided — Los Angeles, Houston, San Francisco and Montreal. Two of those four must join the pro-DH group, unless one of the teams opposed to the rule suddenly switches.

John Claiborne, the bright, young executive vice president of the Cardinals, heads the pro-DH forces. He believes the rule belongs in the NL now.

"The key is that it generates more offense and the fans are more offensive-minded," Claiborne says. "That, and the fact that we have two different sets of rules right now, are the reasons why I think the National League should adopt the DH."

Don't argue with Claiborne on the basis of numbers. "I don't care what the statistics say, although I'm sure they support me," he said. "Obviously, when you replace the pitcher with another hitter, you're going to score more runs."

Runs. The bottom line. Is that all there is to this game though? What about strategies? What about deciding whether to lift a light-hitting pitcher for a pinch hitter in a tight game and praying your bullpen does the job? What about the intentional walk to get the pitcher up to the plate?

"I know what you're saying and I plead nolo contendere on losing strategy with the DH rule," Claiborne said. "It's there and I accept it. That's the price you have to pay to get more offense into the game. I think we should pay it."

Claiborne is right about the rules. It is absolutely mindless to have the two leagues playing separate varieties of the same game and having the World Series alternate from year-to-year on use of the DH.

So, at absolutely no charge to the people who run the game, we offer this solution. Instead of two sets of rules, let's have one set. Nine players. The pitcher swings his bat, just like everybody else. And if you've got some green billiard table rug covering your infield, tear it up and put some grass in. That's the way this game is supposed to be played.

Bradshaw tries to block divorce

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw says in legal papers filed here that his wife, Jo Jo Starbuck, can't divorce him in Pennsylvania because she doesn't live in the state.

Stewart Barmen, an attorney representing the National Football League player, said Tuesday preliminary objections filed on Bradshaw's behalf ask the Allegheny County courts to dismiss his wife's divorce petition for technical reasons.

Starbuck, a professional ice skater who uses her maiden name, filed for divorce last week, claiming the four-year marriage was "irretrievably broken." She is seeking a division of property, alimony, lawyers' fees and a continuation of insurance policies.

Starbuck listed as her home address a Pittsburgh apartment Bradshaw occupies. But Bradshaw said his wife has not lived in the state continuously for the last six months, a filing requirement in Pennsylvania. He did not say where she lives.

The quarterback said he is a "bona fide" resident of Louisiana and most of the couple's marital property is there. Bradshaw owns a 480-acre horse and cattle ranch near his native Shreveport.

Bradshaw's petition said he travels to Pittsburgh for the purpose of transacting occasional business matters and participating in athletic events." He said a divorce proceeding here would be inconvenient for all parties.

Bradshaw, 31, and Starbuck, 29, a two-time Olympic skater and Ice Capades star, had a whirlwind courtship and were married in June 1976. It was the second marriage for Bradshaw, who was divorced in 1974 from former Miss Teen-Age America Melissa Babish.

Aggies hope to get job done in SWC

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Cynics had a pretty good idea which direction the Texas A&M football program was headed in 1979 after crucial back-to-back losses to Texas Tech and Houston.

But the Aggies had a better idea. "I don't think any of our coaching staff or players were ready to jump off the ship or question anything about the direction of our program," Coach Tom Wilson said.

"It was just a matter of getting the job done. We stayed at it and got the job done."

The Aggies won four of their last five games, including a satisfying 13-7 victory over Texas in the season finale. The rally salvaged a 6-5 winning season and gave Wilson hope that his offensive changes will reap benefits in 1980.

"I look back on last year with pride that we lost some close games early that were disappointing to us, but we never quit improving," Wilson said. "At the first of the year, we were a very average team and at the end we were approaching a very good team."

Many teams would have folded under the pressure, but the Aggies didn't, Wilson said.

"Hopefully, we've corrected some of those early season mistakes and can start from there. We have a real good feeling right now."

Whether that good feeling continues into the fall will depend heavily on senior quarterback Mike Mosley, poised for what Wilson expects to be his greatest season.

"He's played well in the past 2½ years, but last spring he made great strides in developing the passing game and in his ability to handle the offense," Wilson said.

Mosley may have still been suffering the effects of shifting from a wishbone offense to the I-formation and split backfield.

"He's been under a little test in that he's been a wishbone quarterback all his life," Wilson said. "All of a sudden, we changed and he was doing some things he didn't have a feel for."

The Aggies also will be looking to tailback Johnny Hector to help fill the void left by Curtis Dickey, a world class sprinter and first-round draft pick of the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League.

"He is everything we thought he was," Wilson said of Hector. "He's got the quickest feet I've ever seen and he has tremendous balance and acceleration. We just feel like in time he'll be an outstanding tailback."

The Aggies return eight starters on defense and four on offense for the 1980 campaign.

Other leading offensive returnees include flanker David Scott and full-back David Hill.

"He's a fine player," Wilson said of Scott. "He's very fluid, a little like Lawrence Williams at Texas Tech a few years ago. We expect a lot from him."

It will be Hill's assignment to make sure the Aggies' inside running game is effective.

"The thing that makes the I formation go is an inside running attack," Wilson said. "One of our problems last year was we had a great outside game with Mosley and Dickey but no great inside attack."

The Aggie defense was third in the SWC behind Texas and Houston in total defense and defense against the rush.

A&M's linebacking corps returns intact with Mike Little, Doug Carr and Cal Peveo. Free safety Elroy Steen and defensive tackle Arlis James also will provide solidarity.

The revamped offensive line will include David Bandy at center, Flint Risien and returning starter Bryan Dausin at guards, starter Zach Guthrie and Tim Ward at tackles. Mike Whitwell is the split end and Larry Edmundson, a junior college transfer, is projected as the starting tight end.

Nicklaus better than Ben Hogan?

(c) 1980, Los Angeles Times
 "When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child; but when I became a man, I put away childish things." — 1 Corinthians 13:11

There are some things I put away reluctantly. Belief in Santa Claus was one of them, the invincibility of the United States of America, the righteousness of Frank Merriwell, and John Wayne, the inviolability of the White House, the belief that Notre Dame had the best football team in the land.

But I have never interred a legend with greater sadness than I do today. I feel exactly as I did when I found out the Easter Bunny was just another grown-up lie.

Repeat after me because I'm going to have to force my lips to say this and I'm going to say it only once — Jack Nicklaus is the greatest golfer of all the ages of all that sport. Jack Nicklaus, not Ben Hogan.

There, I've said it. I'm going to hate myself in the morning, but, as Paul said to the Corinthians, you sometimes have to put aside the face of your childhood.

I always thought Ben Hogan was the greatest striker of the golfball I had ever seen. He was the most determined man I had ever seen on a golf course or in any other sport. He played with the cold-eyed fury of a man getting even for some terrible slight. He was Geronimo avenging a massacre, Quantrill raiding border towns.

I thought Nicklaus was superbly gifted. Where he hit the ball, the holes were 70 to 90 yards shorter than they were for everyone else. Who couldn't win if he was, in effect, teeing it up 90 yards in advance of everyone else? There were flaws in his game, but it didn't matter. He was like a fighter with a big punch. Who cared if he couldn't box?

I never saw Hogan hit a lucky shot. If his ball was headed out of bounds, it went out of bounds. It didn't hit a fence and come back in. I never remembered Hogan holing a long putt. I never remember him having a long putt.

Nicklaus always seemed to me as if he had arrived at the course riding on a tank. He just smashed over it like smashing chicken coops in the Low Countries. I saw him win the Masters when he was only 23 years old, and in 1965 I saw him grind that course to bits with a game of 64 and a total of 271. "He plays a game with which the rest of us are unfamiliar," Bobby Jones observed. Exactly, I thought. It's like being 7 feet tall in high school basketball.

I began to feel uneasy in 1967 when Jack won the Open and I called him up the next day. I suggested he had done so by smashing the par-5s at Baltusrol. "No," Jack told me. "I win my tournaments on the par-3s. Look it up." I did, and he was right.

But myths die hard. Ben Hogan had his greatest year when he was 40 years old. Wait till Jack Nicklaus is 40 years old, I told myself. He'll probably be three years' retired by then. Wait till his drives get shorter and the shoulders won't turn as far in the backswing.

Well, Jack Nicklaus has been 40 for some time now. And the other day, I watched with awe as he won his 19th major tournament, his 86th overall. This is a man who has been second 45 times in his career and in the top five in one out of every three tournaments he plays.

So, then, this is the golfer for the ages. No doubt about it any more. Jack Nicklaus does not hit the ball out as far as 60 percent of the kids on the tour today. He cannot afford long putts any more than Hogan could. He has to engineer his way around the golf course as Hogan did, i.e., put the ball in a place where it will make the next shot easier, the mark of a great champion.

Watching him work the golf course Sunday was like watching Dempsey work his man on the ropes, Koufax blowing the ball by a Triple-A hitter, Jerry West hitting a jumper, Shoemaker settling down a Derby winner.

They say a pitcher never becomes great till he loses his fastball. And a golfer never becomes great till he can't hit the ball over trouble any more, he has to go around it, or even through it.

Still, it's tough to take your icons down. I still think Babe Ruth was the greatest ballplayer I ever saw, Elgin Baylor, the greatest basketball player and Joe Louis, the greatest fighter. I never thought I'd live to even think it, but Ben Hogan has lost his halo. I always thought if I had to have one guy to hit a golf shot for me for all the marbles, it would be Ben Hogan. But now, if the stakes were high, and the bets doubled, and the future on the line, I'd hand the club to Jack Nicklaus. I'd have to say to Ben, "Sorry, Ben, you're away." It's your honors, Jack.

Randy Hughes to play exhibition against Rams

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Free safety Randy Hughes took part in the Dallas Cowboys' practice Tuesday afternoon and said his injured shoulder gave him no problems.

"It feels fine. The soreness is about out of it now," Hughes said after the Cowboys' two-hour workout. He is expected to play in Dallas' pre-season game Saturday night against Los Angeles at Anaheim Stadium.

Hughes dislocated his right shoulder last Dec. 8 at Philadelphia, then reinjured the same shoulder two weeks ago in a scrimmage. After a week of recuperation, Hughes was back in action Tuesday with a shoulder harness.

"I have it strapped down as tight as you can get it, but I can still raise my arm just as high as the other one, so it won't restrict my ability to make interceptions," Hughes said.

"And I'm not worried about hitting and tackling with it. But I know if I get hit just right it will go out again."

Consideration was given to operating on the shoulder last month, but Hughes decided to try to play this season with the shoulder harness. He played in the Cowboys' Dec. 30 playoff loss to the Rams last year wearing a harness.

Hughes said he had trouble raising his arm in that game not because of the harness but because of the soreness.

"This time the dislocation was not so bad, and my range of motion is much better," he said.

Oilers, Brazil tell different tales

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler linebacker Robert Brazile says he's going back to training camp after a week-long workout with a renegotiated contract and more money in his pocket.

The Oilers say they only advanced Brazile part of his $90,000 salary for the 1980 season. Jerry Argovitz, Brazile's agent, doesn't care what it's called.

"The Oilers can call it whatever they want to, maybe they just don't know how to add," Argovitz said. "They didn't give Robert what he deserves but we did come out with more money."

Oiler executive vice president Ladd Herzog announced earlier that the Oilers had reached a policy of not renegotiating any contracts. Brazile, Herzog said, was offered an advance on his 1980 salary of $90,000.

Brazile, who has three years remaining on his current contract, walked out of training camp last week, claiming the Oilers had failed to act on a verbal agreement. Brazile said Monday he would return Tuesday with the team to its training camp at San Angelo.

Argovitz also said he wanted it clear that Brazile did not leave camp because of the Oilers' failure to renegotiate his contract.

"He left because Bud Adams didn't keep his word," Argovitz said. "After we talked in San Angelo, we shook hands and he said 'trust me.' We know better now. In God we trust, but we don't trust Bud."

Sims' loss just hairline fracture for OU

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — The offensive juggernaut that is the Oklahoma wishbone was much the story of college football during the 1970s.

Going into the first season of the new decade, Oklahoma will miss premier running back Billy Sims.

But the Sooners are so deep and talented that Sims' loss is not expected to cause more than a hairline fracture in a wishbone attack that led the nation in scoring and rushing in the '70s.

During the past 10 years, including seven under Coach Barry Switzer, the Sooners won two national championships, seven Big Eight Conference titles and posted a 102-13-3 record — tops in the nation.

Oklahoma finished 10-1 in 1979 and was ranked third in the final Associated Press college football poll.

Defense had a lot to do with the Sooners' past success, and inexperience at linebacker and in the secondary, plus a strong non-conference schedule, is causing Switzer some worry.

Back to the offense, for a moment, there are simply no question marks — other than who will wind up carrying the ball the most times — something Sims took care of the past two years.

"I think we will have a much more diversified attack," says Galen Hall, offensive coordinator who welcomes back nine starters.

J.C. Watts, a good passer, is back at quarterback, and he has some veteran receivers in Steve Rhodes and Bobby Grayson.

Hall says the Sooners may have to throw a lot more this year, but he says that almost every year, although Watts' 785-yard passing total in 1979 was the most by an Oklahoma quarterback since 1973.

Running will continue to be the name of the game at Norman.

Senior David Overstreet is Sims' heir apparent. Overstreet, 5-foot-11, 190 pounds, is a quality runner who concentrated on blocking the past two years for Sims, the 1978 Heisman Trophy winner.

As usual, the Sooners are loaded with runners, including sophomore Stanley Wilson, who rushed for 391 yards as a freshman starter. Weldon Ledbetter and Royce Coleman are two other talented fullbacks. Sophomore Chet Winters will play at the other halfback opposite Overstreet.

Watts, outstanding performer in the Sooners Orange Bowl victory over Florida State, probably will be backed up by sophomore Rod Pegues and Houston transfer Darrell Shepard. Last year's backup, Kelly Phelps, is expected to be redshirted.

The Sooner coaches say the real strength of the offense is a veteran line which features tackle Louis Oubre, 6-4 and 262 pounds, and tight end Forrest Valora, 6-0, 230. Other returning starters are tackle Ed Culver and guards Terry Crouch and Don Key.

The interior line also is expected to be the strong point of the defense. Keith Gary, Big Eight defensive newcomer of the year in 1979, returns to one tackle post and Richard Turner to the other. Scott Dawson is a quality backup. Johnny Lewis and John Blake are capable nose guards.

The Sooners have a lot of inexperience in the secondary, at end and at linebacker, where All-American George Cumbly starred the past three years.

In fact, no starters return at end or linebacker. Jay Jimerson is the only returning starter in the secondary, but secondary coach Bobby Procter at least has some proven talent to rely on.

Oklahoma doesn't appear to have any pushovers this year on its non-conference schedule, which always features a grudge match with powerful Texas of the Southwestern Conference.

Bennett surveys wide receivers

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Falcon Coach Leeman Bennett will have plenty of opportunity to look at his rookie and free agent wide receivers during Friday night's preseason game with the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Three of his regulars are hurting and won't play.

Backup Alfred Jackson, who caught only 11 passes last season, will start at split end and free agent Bryan Sweeney, who returned to practice two days ago after missing a week with a hamstring pull, will start at flanker.

Split end Alfred Jenkins and flanker Wallace Francis, the club's most valuable player last year, both have sprained ankles.

The other backup receiver, Billy Ryckman, is recovering from a knee injury.

That leaves rookies Mike Smith, Reggie Smith and Randy Butler to back up the starters.

Francis, who caught 74 passes last year, said he was extremely disappointed about missing the game.

"You don't want to miss any national TV game," Francis said. "That's where you get our rep, from playing against the big boys. Plus, we won't be on national TV again all year."

Tight end Junior Miller of Midland also might be hurting a bit at game time. He bruised his right shoulder against Seattle, aggravated it Tuesday and was held out of the afternoon practice because of a neck sprain. Backup free safety Ray Easterling also has a neck sprain.

Jackson, who caught 26 passes in 1978, his rookie year, said he was glad to get the playing time.

"I'm playing behind Wallace Francis and Alfred Jenkins — and I think Wallace Francis had a good year," he said, "but I think I have just as much ability as anyone."

"I don't look at myself as a second-team player," he said. "I'm not looking at the guys ahead of me. If I say to myself, 'I know Alfred Jenkins and Wallace Francis are ahead of me, and all I'm going to work for is for second,' then I'm not saying what's best for myself. I'll have to accept whatever role they have for me, but I don't like to be considered No. 2."

For Sweeney, who was cut by the Detroit Lions late in camp last season, it's another chance.

"I look at it as them telling me I was doing a pretty good job before I got hurt," said Sweeney. "It's a chance for me to prove myself."

Bennett said most of his starters will play about a half against the Steelers.

Francis said he was not going to lend Sweeney his flak jacket to use against the Steelers during his half of play.

Jury sees videotape of NBA punch

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — A federal court jury on Tuesday was shown a videotape of a National Basketball Association game during which Chicago Bulls player Rick Rhodes was knocked down with a punch.

Rhodes, who contends Kansas City Kings player Lucius Allen broke his jaw and ended his professional career, has filed a $1.25 million suit against Allen and the Kings.

"He hit me on the right side of the jaw, the left side of the jaw, and the rib area," Rhodes said Monday during opening testimony.

Rhodes had been in the exhibition game about 10 seconds before the incident, for which Allen was ejected.

Rhodes also told the jury that he never was told to play tough against

Garveys seek to stop story

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Newsweek, Inc., the publisher of "Inside Sports" magazine, issued a statement Tuesday supporting the Los Angeles Herald Examiner in the newspaper's quest to reprint an article from the magazine about Los Angeles Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey and his wife, Cyndy.

Pac-10 shouldn't panic yet

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Although five football teams in the Pac-10 Conference have been booted out of the 1981 Rose Bowl race - and more penalties against schools and athletes involved are possible - it's no time for the conference to make a Rose Bowl concession speech.

A LOOK at the conference standings in 1979 shows that most of the penalized teams were second-division clubs last year. Washington finished second at 6-1 after losing to Southern Cal 24-17.

Washington, Washington State, Stanford, California and Arizona have been left to contend for the Pac-10 crown and the Jan. 1 assignment at Pasadena against the Big Ten representative. If the recent past is any indication, the West Coast does not have anybody other than Southern Cal or UCLA plays at a Rose Bowl game.

STANFORD WON consecutive Rose Bowls from Ohio State and Michigan in 1971-72. Washington beat Michigan in 1978. Southern Cal won six Rose Bowls games 1970-80, but the Trojans also had the only Pac-10 defeat of the 70s when Ohio State beat them in 1974.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue viewed the penalties as harsh, but necessary. "It won't hurt the Pac-10's prestige," Donahue said. "It will enhance the conference's honor. We were punished so severely to show the rest of the nation that this conference means business."

Donahue said he didn't know the identities of two 1977 Bruin players whose ineligibility affects the 7-1 record of that team. "It's still unbelievable to me that fake transcripts could be put in for the two (UCLA) kids," said recently retired UCLA athletic director J.D. Morgan.

Washington, 10-2 last season, has a strong returning nucleus including the offensive stars of its 14-7 Sun Bowl victory over Texas. Also capable of strong seasons in 1980 are offensive powers Stanford and California. Stanford's high-point was a 21-21 tie with Pac-10 and Rose Bowl champ Southern Cal last fall.

academic department interests into the academic processes of the respective universities," according to the panel's report.

Washington State University's Dr. Glenn Terrell, chairman of the presidents and chancellors group, said it was felt "these actions were necessary to preserve the academic integrity of the conference, our institutions and our athletic programs."

Oregon Athletic Director John Caine noted the penalties, although hard-hitting, last for just one year. "The conference has acted thoroughly and promptly," Caine said. "Obviously the penalties are hard to accept because they mean that we will not be able to participate in a bowl game this season. However, we are pleased that there is only a one-year penalty involved."

NON OTHER conference action against any of the five schools is contemplated, said Pac-10 spokesman Jim Muldoon. But penalties for non-academic violations could be imposed in the future by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The conference assistant executive director, Mike Slive, said sanctions against between one dozen and two dozen student athletes also had been levied by the conference council of faculty representatives and athletic directors.

Slive noted he schools have an opportunity to respond to any of the penalties against individuals - so appeals are possible.

Those actions were not made public, spokesmen for the conference and schools said, because such reports would violate laws protecting the privacy of individuals.

'Giant' glamour gone; Ranch little changed

MARFA, Texas (AP) — The fancy "ranch-house" where Rock Hudson and Elizabeth Taylor pretended to live and love for movie fans a generation ago has been torn down. The lumber was used to build new barns and pens on the vast ranch of real-life cattleman Worth Evans. What's left of the old house — actually it was only a facade — has been taken over by jackrabbits and snakes. It's been 25 years since the motion picture "Giant" was made on Evans' sprawling ranch, and about the only thing that has not changed in that quarter-century is the arid rangeland itself. It's still hot and dry, and cattle still graze among the yuccas and scrub brush. EVANS, 76, who played a cowhand in the 1955 epic, has sold his ranch to one of his two sons and moved into town. Ironically, he lives in a former motion picture theater — the "Texas" — which he bought six years ago and converted into a residence for himself and his wife, Catherine. She has a respiratory ailment and has spent most of the past year in a hospital in nearby Alpine. Out at the Evans ranch, 14 miles from town, the Evans' elder son, Clay, who was a teen-ager during the filming of the movie, is 44 years old. He runs the ranch now, and has boys of his own, ages 20 and 18, who are both rodeo riders. He also has a 15-year-old daughter who plays tennis. Clay's kid brother, Bub, is also a rancher in this West Texas cattle country. Clay and Bub donned long dresses and substituted for actress Mercedes McCambridge during the scene in which she supposedly was bucked off a horse and fatally injured in the classic based on Edna Ferber's novel. "My boys rode, I guess, 25 bucking horses to get that scene," the elder Evans recalls. They finally used Bub in the movie, but Clay was at a disadvantage — he had a broken foot. LIKE ITS SET, the movie also has suffered the ravages of time. "I've seen it several times, but they've cut it way down. It was a three-hour show to start with," said Evans, a tall, hard-driving cattleman who worked his land from the saddle of a horse and was definitely not a "gentleman rancher." "But I thought it turned out pretty good. I didn't like the book. As a matter of fact, if I'd have read that damn book before I signed the contract, I don't think I would have signed," Evans said. The contract allowing Warner Brothers, Inc., to film the movie on his land stipulated that Evans could have "all improvements." That included about $5,000 worth of shrubs of all kinds, trees and hedges — rarities in these parts. But the magnificent "home," the centerpiece of the set built on Evans' land, has been stripped to its skeleton. Only the 60-foot-tall frame remains, towering over a heap of weathered, grey boards. "There's some lumber left, but we used most of it on the ranch," Evans said. "We'd send the boys out there to get lumber whenever we needed it for barns or pens or fences, what have you." THE EVANS ranch spanned 55 sections — 35,200 acres — at the time "Giant" was filmed. Today it covers 64,000 acres. "You'd be surprised at how many people still go out there to look" at what's left of the set, Evans said. He chuckles when he recalls tricks the "Giant" crew used to create images. "Ben Avant — he's dead now — had a little place down the road with a rattletrap of a windmill, and that's where they 'struck oil.' They used molasses mixed with water, and when they made it squirt up, James Dean went up there and got it all over him." Evans said his co-workers were paid $15 each for playing themselves as "extras" in the movie. "And that was a hell of a price in those days," Evans said. "Rock Hudson was sure a nice old boy. James Dean was a peculiar kind of a boy, but he was all right. Elizabeth Taylor was awful proud of herself. "It took two days to get her off the train" that skirts the northern edge of Evans' ranch. He said she stayed on the train night and day, resting while the crew prepared the scene of her arrival. "They hauled up a truckload of tumbleweeds on one side and a truckload of dirt on the other side and used a motor with a propeller to make a big wind. It was kind of unpleasant with that dirt and tumbleweeds blowing all over them," Evans said.

HE SAID Miss McCambridge "was the most popular girl on the location." And actor Alexander Scourby, who played the ranch boss "was a real nice old fellow, but I don't think he ever saw a horse before," Evans said. About the only thing Warner Brothers left behind that Evans couldn't find a use for were six fake oil derricks. "They're out there on the ranch now, lying on their sides," Evans said. He once allowed an oil company to put a real well on his land some years after the movie crew left. "They drilled 12,000 feet down and got a little showing, but nothing else," he said. As for the fake derricks, Clay Evans tried to use one to mount his television antenna on, "but it fell down," he said. "They're just not good for much of anything."

Soviets camps stress civil defense

MOSCOW (AP) — Gas masks, respirators, chemical warfare decontaminating kits, nerve gas antidotes, nuclear fallout shelters: all these things at a Soviet summer camp for youths are not mock-ups or toys, but the real thing. The gear is authentic because for thousands of youngsters at state-run "Young Pioneer" camps, summer vacation doesn't just mean sports, hiking and campfires — but also learning the realities of civil defense. A just-published handbook presents a detailed picture of the Soviet civil defense program, designed for children of ages 7 to 15 attending the country's 53,000 Pioneer camps. It aims to supplement classroom instruction at school with practical training in civil defense skills such as proper use of gas masks, laying out trench-type shelters, quick response to attack warnings and removing chemical or radioactive contamination. A SPOKESWOMAN for the central Pioneer organization, Valentina I. Yermilova, said that 13 million Soviet youngsters attend Pioneer camps each summer. However, no specific information is available on the number of Pioneers who take part in the civil defense program. The Pioneer training is part of the Soviet Union's overall civil defense effort, which according to Western estimates now involves more than 100,000 full-time personnel at all levels of the Soviet government and economic structure. A report issued by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency in mid-1978 said the Soviets have built more than 15,000 blast-resistant shelters and by 1985 should be able to shield 15 percent to 30 percent of the nation's urban population — with the rest to be evacuated to rural areas in case of war. The Soviet program has been costing the equivalent of roughly $2 billion a year, the CIA claimed. BY CONTRAST, U.S. civil defense currently involves an annual budget of about $100 million and no construction of shelters for the general population. According to officials in Washington, the U.S. program has 550 full-time personnel at the federal level and 3,600 at the state and local levels, plus 2,200 part-time or volunteer workers. There are currently no civil defense instructional programs for American youngsters 16 or under, the U.S. officials said. The 78-page Soviet handbook, entitled "Measures for Civil Defense in Pioneer Camps," was published by the All-Union Voluntary Organization for Assistance to the Army, Air Force and Navy. The organization supervises a broad program of paramilitary training for millions of school pupils across the Soviet Union and assists in the operation of the universal male draft. "Strengthening knowledge about civil defense which Pioneers receive in school, and grafting onto it practical skills in defense from weapons of mass destruction, is one of the most important tasks of Pioneer camps," the handbook states. It notes that "in each Pioneer camp there should be a room or corner for civil defense. It is also recommended to have a defense structure (shelter against radioactivity)... "In larger Pioneer camps, special instructional areas for civil defense and obstacle courses can be built," says the booklet, published in a printing of 75,000 copies. THE HEAVILY illustrated handbook stipulates time and skill norms for various civil defense tasks which Pioneers should learn to perform quickly, including: —Making and putting on a rudimentary cotton-and-gauze face mask: 2 1/2 minutes. —Properly taking out of its carrying case and donning a gas mask: 11 seconds. —Orderly heading to a shelter and filing inside by a group of 25 to 30 Pioneers carrying gas masks and other gear: 1 minute. —Partial decontamination of clothing after exposure to radioactive material: 7 minutes. —With use of an "Individual Antichemical Packet," decontaminating clothing and skin areas exposed to chemical warfare agents: 6 minutes. The handbook includes a section with model questions and answers for quizzes to test Pioneers on their civil defense knowledge. Here is a brief sampling: Q. What kinds of destructive factors of a nuclear explosion do you know? —A. The shock wave, visible radiation, penetrating radiation and radioactive contamination of the surrounding area. Q. Is it possible to protect yourself from the shock wave if you have seen the flash at a significant distance? —A. Yes. The bright flash is visible over a considerable distance, and the light spreads instantly. The shock wave travels the first kilometer

(0.6 mile) in two seconds, but after that its speed decreases. This means that for several seconds after the flash it is possible to take shelter. The handbook suggests that the Pioneer team finishing first in such a contest be rewarded with "cake, pie or an excursion." Help asked for lakes OTTAWA (AP) — The government will launch an advertising campaign this week urging that U.S. tourists demand an end to coal pollution environmental officials say is indirectly killing Canadian lakes. The campaign, which will be unveiled Thursday by the Environment Department at the Central Canada Exhibition in Ottawa, asks tourists visiting national parks to write their elected officials about acid rain.

'The Gangster Chronicles' in production for NBC

By TOM JORY
NEW YORK (AP) — "The Godfather" movies... provided an intriguing look inside organized crime, "and the stories were well done — though they would be just two pieces in our puzzle," says Richard Alan Simmons, producer of "The Gangster Chronicles" for NBC.

"The Godfather" was one man's family," says Simmons, "and we have a much broader field — the entire history and sociology of organized crime — and we will be trying to deal with it with as much illumination as possible."

Production began not long ago on the series, which eventually could encompass 100 hours of air time over five years — maybe more. Simmons, who spent a decade researching the subject, has an order from NBC for 13 programs, "and if all goes well," he says, "we could conceivably continue the project for several years."

Simmons describes "The Gangster Chronicles" as a study of organized crime in the United States "from the inside looking out, rather than from the outside looking in — the way it has always been done before."

The series will focus, at least at the start, on the events and relationships that shaped the lives of three men who would run organized crime — Charles "Lucky" Luciano, "Bugsy" Siegel and Michael Lasker.

Simmons' plan is to begin "The Gangster Chronicles" in 1907, with the three primary characters still young, and develop their lives over seven hours' programming in 1931, and a meeting in Chicago during which, the producer says, "crime was organized."

"Through the lives of these people," he says, "we'll see why it happened and how it happened."

Ralph Salerno, a retired New York City policeman, is a technical advisor on the project.

"We've tried to get it right," Simmons says, "not from the point of view of the police, but from the standpoint of the history and economy and sociology of the time. "We'll be dealing with things never seen before regarding the lives of the people behind organized crime," Simmons says, "the joys and tragedies or marriage and birth, the detailed drama of their personal lives."

Simmons, who wrote the "The Gangster Chronicles," says the original plan was to film on location in New York, Los Angeles, and Atlantic City, N.J. For various reasons, at least the first seven hours now will be produced in Hollywood.

The first program probably will be broadcast sometime in October.

"The Gangster Chronicles" already has stirred something of a controversy. A Surrogate Court judge in Morristown, N.J., reading of NBC's plans for the series, wrote Brandon Tartikoff, the president of NBC Entertainment: "I hope your television series... will include the nationalities of all the political grafters throughout the United States who are silent partners or beneficiaries of the Mafia. The Mafia is not made up of Italians or Jewish people only."

Tartikoff says the series "will not be a glorifi-cation of crime. It will make it clear that crime does not pay, but at the same time it will show the human side of these men."

Says Simmons: "The whole panoply of this phenomenon is there — Murder, Inc., Vito Genovese and so on. We're trying to present the whole thing as it happened, from the inside, and not judgmentally."

The producer says one important image to be created is that of the founders of organized crime as businessmen. "Their whole effort to organize was, in a way, to control violence," he says.

Debut of 'Black Rose' unveils familiar face

PHILADELPHIA — The group is called Black Rose. There has been no hoopla concerning its birth. And, in fact, Black Rose has been labeled something of a top-secret project.

Strategy mapped out for the public unveiling of Black Rose was filled with the brand of dramatic potential that one would expect in a Hollywood film. The audience would arrive for next Saturday night's concert by Hall & Oates at the Mann Music Center here, settle back to view this opening act called Black Rose with the usual indifference reserved for unknown opening acts and then suddenly snap to attention when a familiar face (not to mention figure) is spotted as Black Rose strolls on stage.

Can that really be Cher?, they will collectively gasp. The Cher of Bono-Allman fame?

It can indeed because Cher has entered a new phase of her career, fronting a rock 'n' roll band. And the idea of Cher — who recently headlined an engagement at Resorts International in Atlantic City — opening anonymously for Hall & Oates promised an abundance of dramatic impact. It was undoubtedly looked on as a cute maneuver, too.

Electric Factory Concerts, which is promoting the Mann show, had strict orders concerning the billing. It had to be Black Rose in the small type under Hall & Oates. There could be no mention of Cher in any advertising or promotion.

"The point is," noted a publicist for Cher, "is that this is not Cher. Black Rose is just a band — a rock 'n' roll band."

But then the publicist also suggested that the unveiling was being handled cautiously because "there are probably a lot of people who don't consider Cher a rock 'n' roll singer, and they might have trouble accepting her as such."

The Black Rose project has actually been in the works for some time, and a Black Rose album for Casablanca Records has already been recorded and is set for release following the group's brief tour.

Black Rose will make its debut in Maryland a night prior to the Philadelphia concert. A total of six concerts have been scheduled, concluding with an appearance at Central Park in New York on Aug. 23.

At that time, according to the publicist, a decision will be made concerning subsequent dates by Black Rose.

Another mystery act, of sorts, has been scheduled for the Philadelphia area this week. Nina Hagen will be making her American debut when she performs at Emerald City in Cherry Hill, N. J., Thursday night through Wednesday night.

To date, Miss Hagen is known in this country only through import records, but she has caused more than a little hysteria in Europe. She has been called an "epileptic Edith Piaf," a "cross between Johnny Rotten, Maria Callas and Bette Midler" and a "hard-boiled nightingale."

She was reportedly expelled from her native East Germany because of her involvement in rock music. In West Germany, Miss Hagen's two albums have been banned "eternally" from many stations because of lyrics that have been considered pornographic.

But then this isn't too bad because one has to comprehend the lyrics between the vast array of gurgles, screams and groans that are vital ingredients of the Nina Hagen repertoire.

Sporting a mop-top pink and purple hair style, black tights and a stage style that can be conservatively called flamboyant, Nina Hagen is hardly just another pretty face.

Author opens door to secret life with his autobiography

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 1939, Christopher Isherwood, a bright light on England's literary horizon, stunned his peers by immigrating to Hollywood and becoming the disciple of a Hindu swami.

In subsequent years, while his premiere work, "Berlin Stories," was twice adapted into successful plays and movies, "I Am A Camera" and "Cabaret," Isherwood remained an enigma to the literary establishment.

The writer who had once collaborated with W.H. Auden seemed to have dedicated the bulk of his life to meditating in a hilltop temple with his guru, Swami Prabhavananda. There were whispers that he had become a monk. There were rumors he had stopped writing.

Now, more than 40 years later, Isherwood has opened the door on his once secret spiritual life in a volume of his autobiography titled, "My Guru and His Disciple."

It reveals that not only did he never stop writing but he never became a monk. And there are other surprises. The book is hardly a religious tract, and Isherwood concedes it may shock some readers. For Isherwood, while dedicated to his Hindu swami, was also an active homosexual.

"Swami was far too broadminded to see any difference between homosexual or heterosexual relationships," Isherwood recalled during a recent interview. "As long as the relationship worked, that was all that mattered."

"We were all welcome, and if there were two it was better than one. He was very free from any kind of prejudice, although he was obviously terribly heterosexual himself."

Isherwood, a youthful 75, still lives in Santa Monica with Don Bachardy, the artist who became his companion 27 years ago. His book is dedicated to Bachardy, who also became a disciple of the swami.

"Religious people are not nearly so shockable as ordinary people," Isherwood says with a laugh. "Everybody knew about me and, in due course, about Don ... there was no nonsense about it. We might just as well have been married."

What was more difficult was to discuss with outsiders his newfound devotion to the swami and his Vedanta Society. There were a few, such as writers Gerald Heard and Aldous Huxley, who visited the temple and understood. Others did not.

He met the swami soon after his arrival in the United States, an event he now sees as pre-ordained.

"I was really on the lookout for a teacher, one who wouldn't be Ten-Commandments-oriented," he recalls. "... If it wasn't in California, it would have been somewhere else. The man might have been an analyst, a Catholic priest or God knows what."

The teacher turned out to be Prabhavananda, a short, balding, chain-smoking Hindu monk from India whose very ordinariness combined with a spiritual "Presence" impressed Isherwood.

For a time, Isherwood lived with the swami in a communal house near the Vedanta Society temple in the Hollywood hills. Eventually, he chose not to become a monk, and he moved out.

He wrote screenplays for Hollywood studios, mingled with stars and wrote more novels. At one time, he and Huxley experimented with LSD in controlled situations.

But always Isherwood returned for visits with the swami. By then, he says, he had accepted the swami's Hindu precepts as his own. He had also written translations of several Hindu religious books.

"The Hindu hypothesis is simply there is something other than ourselves in ourselves which is eternal, and it can be contacted through meditation," Isherwood explains.

"It's really that simple. The rest is all just religious talk." In his book, he shies away from grand claims about the swami's possible divinity or the truth of his preachings.

"It certainly changed my entire life and all of that," says Isherwood. "But one mustn't get carried away."

There were those who believed Christopher Isherwood threw away his literary future when he joined the swami. He disagrees.

"I wrote more than half of my books after that period," he says. "And the last four people who wrote books about my work tend to prefer the later work."

But none of the eight later novels has had the wide acclaim of "Berlin Stories" and the play adaptation by John Van Druten. Although Isherwood sold the rights to the book outright in the 1950s, he says happily "some money did slip through" from the theatrical and film productions.

He disliked "Cabaret," both on stage and in movies. "The whole smell of Berlin is missing," he says. "And I think one lost the character of the girl ... This play is about people who were not successful."

The girl is an inferior, untalented actress who can't sing ... The moment the girl can perform as well as Liza Minnelli can perform, it was another play. The authority of Minnelli and the brilliance of the cabaret falsified it all."

'Champagne Music' king still not ready to retire at age 77

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Lawrence Welk considers himself fortunate in having a family as large as he does. His "children" aren't really his, but after spending up to 30 years with some of them, they might as well be.

As a matter of fact, that's one of the reasons the 77-year-old musician, the delight of millions of Americans, most of them in his age group, still tapes his weekly television show and makes extended road trips twice a year.

Welk refers to his group as "The Musical Family" and calls his performers "the kids." He said the concept has enabled him to hand over a lot of the control of his organization to his employees in recent years.

"I've been very fortunate because I've created a real good musical family," he said. "Being associated with those people, it is quite easy for me to keep this thing going, and I don't have to do to many things any more because one of my hobbies is the development of humanity."

That, he explained, means "helping people to grow." So retirement is not in the picture, Welk said in an interview, largely because that "would put 50 people out of work, and

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Concentrate on work. If your timing is right, you stand to make impressive career gains now. Ignore rumors and steer clear of those who like to gossip.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A very good period for those in artistic pursuits. People are more willing to take a chance on you now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The day has its ups and downs. Get priorities straight before moving forward. Visits to hospital patients will be rewarding. Romance becomes happier.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Domestic life has its ups and downs. Keep personal spending in check, setting a good example for family members. Push ahead with plans to improve finances and further career.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work as independently as possible and be prepared to mark time. Profits should be carefully conserved. Check any rental or lease agreements that have to be signed. Hidden clause could make you think twice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An active day for business or finances. Get an early start to beat out the competition and leave the afternoon free for concentrating on new projects. Enjoy a relaxing evening at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money matters merit careful attention. Do not allow your heart to rule your head. The advantages of a stay-at-home vacation deserve consideration. Consult family members before making final decision.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dress conservatively. Diplomacy could pour oil on troubled waters and others will follow your tactful example. Postpone making final decision regarding career or financial matter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get an early start today as there is much to be done if you want to stay ahead of the competition. Try to arrange some time alone with the one who means the most to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel should be avoided if at all possible. A productive day will result from your staying near home base. Loved ones are particularly sensitive now about the amount of time you spend working.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What happens today is very important as the prospects for the future will become evident. Mate, romantic partner will be congenial and loving.

Texas College gets new president

With BOB TIEUEL

Dr. Jimmy E. Clark, dean of student services of Highland Park Community College, Highland Park, Mich., has been named president of Texas College. He succeeds Dr. Allen C. Hancock, who was elected the eleventh president of the college in June 1967. The college was founded in 1894.

Clark is a 1954 graduate of Texas College. He received his B.D. degree from Southern Methodist University and his M.S. from the University of Illinois. He did additional study at Atlanta University and earned his Ph.D. from Wayne State University in Detroit.

Clark is an ordained minister of the Christian Episcopal Methodist Church and is listed in Outstanding Young Men in America and Who's Who Among Black Americans. He is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi social fraternity, NAACP and the Optimist Club.

BLACKS HAVE COME a long way in the last 200 years, but we still have a long way to go, said the Hon. Julian Bond, a Georgia state senator and a well known newspaper columnist, speaking to Texas College graduates, students and friends. Blacks have come from the back of the bus to the front of the employment line. In this age of scarcity, inflation and unemployment we are like a sinking ship without enough lifeboats. The aged and minorities are left out.

"We have come from the politics of protest to the politics of petition. Racial justice is a popular fad, if it were free. Change is never free. Four years ago we voted for a man who knew the words to our hymns, but he didn't know the numbers on our checks. Do not live by wishing and waiting, for we ought to live by work and through planning and organization," Bond concluded.

RECENT GREAT QUOTES: "Often our hope is deferred, but it is never denied. Don't go around hating. Color will not defer your hope. I've never been caught up with blackness. Colors are what we see with our eyes. Love is what we see with our hearts. History teaches us to love, live and hope." — Bishop James Cummings of the Ninth Episcopal District, C.M. Church.

BY A 6-3 VOTE, the U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled that Congress acted within its constitutional authority in 1977 when it set aside 10 percent of a $4 billion public works program for minority businesses. The decision, rejecting arguments that the law fostered impermissible "reverse discrimination" against whites, provided a resounding victory for the concept of affirmative action.

President Carter praised the ruling and said, "This administration will proceed vigorously with its set-aside program as well as other efforts to support minority business."

IN HOBBS, N.M., the Rev. Reginald Kellogg doesn't feel particularly unique even though he is one of only about 350 black priests in the United States. He feels the fact that his father was from Haiti and he grew up in a French Catholic section of Detroit, this doesn't make him special; it just increases his capacity to understand other cultures.

Before bringing his ministry to St. Helena's Catholic Church as an associate pastor nearly five years ago, Catholicism took Father Reginald to Italy, Paris and Africa, not to mention various churches and schools in the Middle West.

Father Reginald was first rejected as a priest in the 1950s as they were such a rarity but finally overcame that brief setback when he was readily accepted into the Franciscan order. His studies led him to France, where he traced the history of the French language into its present vernacular and stopped off long enough while in Rome to explore Vatican City.

Father Reginald speaks Spanish well also and because of his race, his French background and his travels across the globe, he has not encountered problems at St. Helena, where 80 percent of the congregation is Spanish.

BISHOP C.D. COLEMAN of the Eighth Episcopal District of the Christian Methodist Church has announced that young ministers entering the church would be asked to learn to speak Spanish, as this group will be the largest minority in Texas within a few years. "We want to be prepared," he said.

U.S. Rep. Harold Runnels of Lovington, N.M., who served well for five years, died recently of cancer. More later.

Melissa Lutke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee H. Lutke, was awarded a scholarship from the Texas Crime Prevention Association. Miss Lutke is attending Angelo State University where she is studying criminal justice. She is a 1979 Lee High School graduate.

Welder's torch blamed in blast

PENNSAUKEN, N.J. (AP) — A spark, possibly from a welder's torch, apparently set off an explosion and fire at an asphalt tank that injured four people, two of them seriously, officials said.

The Monday fire was confined to a 100,000-gallon tank owned by West Bank Oil Co. on Petty's Island in the Delaware River.

Government move threatens to end Lawton Easter event

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Christ of the Wichitas statue and other religious symbols in the Holy City of the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge must be removed, an internal government memorandum has concluded.

The memorandum, obtained by The Daily Oklahoman, adds the 20-year special government permit issued to the Easter Pageant Association must be canceled and the Lawton group must compete for use of the site.

The memorandum said the Holy City facilities' location on a federal wildlife refuge gives, "at a minimum, the perception of federal support and approval of a particular religion."

Because of the involvement of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service with the Holy City "lacks a secular effect," it violates constitutional tenets against establishment of religion, the memorandum said.

The legal document, written by Gary Widman, associate solicitor for the U.S. Interior Department's conservation and wildlife division, is dated June 27. But it has not been made public until now.

The threatened removal of the statue and other religious artifacts has prompted an emotional outburst. The wildlife refuge is the only national refuge that contains religious symbols.

Easter service group President Fred Larrance expressed surprise Monday at the contents of the memo. He said he didn't know what the association, which has sent out thousands of petitions to save the statue, will do now.

Nothing has come through officially from the Department of Wildlife. "We've been kept in the dark from the start," he said. Larrance also said he was not informed of a planned meeting with federal representatives.

U.S. Interior Department Secretary Cecil Andrus made reference to the planned meeting in a letter dated July 18. It was addressed to U.S. Rep. John F. Seiberling of Ohio.

Seiberling, chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs' public lands subcommittee, is the congressman to whom an Ohio college professor lodged a complaint against the statue in February.

Andrus' letter states that in general, plans will call for the removal of Christian symbols so that the area can be made equally available to all groups seeking to exercise First Amendment rights.

While the legal opinion did not call for razing the Holy City, which includes some 30 native stone buildings, it stated the association can no longer store its costumes and props at the site.

The department will allow the association to continue holding its Easter drama, which each year draws about 15,000 people, but it will have to compete on an equal basis with other potential users of the site.

The pageant association began its drama in Medicine Park in 1927. It moved the pageant to the wildlife refuge in 1935.

University of Akron professor Dr. Walter Sheppe, on viewing the statue last September, filed a complaint against it.

Nutritionist says some extra weight brings no heart threat

By ROBERT LOCKE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Being a bit fat does not make middle-age men more prone to heart disease and Americans are not becoming a nation of snacking junk-food addicts, two nutrition researchers say.

The two spoke Monday at the Western Hemisphere Nutrition Congress in Los Angeles, a conference being attended by about 1,000 nutritionists and physicians from the United States, Canada, Mexico and South America.

Ansel Keys, a retired physiology professor at the University of Minnesota who told the convention he is trying to correct popular misconceptions about fat, said the best way for men to avoid premature death is to be a bit overweight. He said the extra pounds did not increase the risk of heart disease.

Keys did not say how much extra weight a man could carry. However, other nutritionists have suggested that 10 to 20 excess pounds rarely presents a problem.

Keys, who studied information on men aged 40 to 60, said there are health risks for men who are either extremely thin or fat. And, he said, obese men with high blood pressure or diabetes should lose weight.

Keys said he had no data on how weight affects the health of young men or women.

Later in the day, researcher Betty B. Peterkin said the diet of the average American was surprisingly nutritious.

"We hear all the time that the diet of the American people is going to pot," said Mrs. Peterkin, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Consumer and Food Economics Institute in Hyattsville, Md. "But in my opinion, we have relatively good diets in our country," she said.

Mrs. Peterkin said a USDA study of the eating habits in some 20,400 U.S. households during 1977-78 says American diets "were as good or better than they were in 1965," when the last such survey was taken.

She said daily consumption of calories and fats was down in the latest survey, while the intake of vitamins and most minerals was up.

The biggest nutritional improvements were among families with incomes in the bottom 20 percent. "I think that's because we have been pumping quite a bit of money and effort into improving the diets of low-income people," she said.

"But," she added, "there are still some things wrong with our diet. Calcium, for instance, is down because people are not drinking the amount of milk they used to."

"Women and teen-age girls have diets that are least likely to meet the recommended requirements, especially for iron," Mrs. Peterkin said. "They eat less to keep their weight under control and they have much higher requirements for iron than men."

Mrs. Peterkin said the study also found that only 39 percent of Americans ate the standard three meals a day. While 8 percent had only one or two meals, 53 percent ate four times a day or more, with the extra meals qualifying as snacks.

But, she said, "The hypothesis that we are fast becoming a population of snackers was not borne out," since the percentage of snackers is down from the 64 percent recorded in 1965.

New whooper plan eyed

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — State biologists believe they have figured out a way to increase the nation's tiny population of whooping cranes by preventing them from embarking on dangerous annual migrations.

The biologists plan to obtain some whooping crane eggs and place them in the nests of the non-migratory Florida sandhill cranes. The hope is that the whoopers will adopt the habits of their foster parents and stay put year-round in a protected environment.

If the experiment succeeds, the whooping crane population, now 120, could double, officials hope.

Pe Pe, the male giant panda at the Chapultepec Zoo in Mexico City, paces the zoo's panda quarters Tuesday. His mate, Ying Ying, gave birth Tuesday to the first panda cub born naturally in captivity. Veterinarians watched the birth of the 3 1/2 ounce cub on closed-circuit television. Zoo officials said the baby is apparently healthy. (AP Laserphoto)

Newborn panda cub and mother are doing fine

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The first giant panda conceived naturally and born in captivity outside China was behaving like any spunky newborn today, zoo officials said.

"The baby is apparently healthy," said Director Gerardo Dominguez of Mexico City's Chapultepec Zoo. "I have seen it move, cry when it is hungry.

"The mother is taking good care of it. Fortunately Ying Ying has turned out to be a good mother ... and is very content."

Ying Ying and her mate, Pe-Pe put their endangered species one less away from extinction Sunday with the birth of a male cub.

He weighed 3 1/2 ounces, was four inches long and was delivered normally, said Dr. Juan Tellez Giron, the zoo's veterinary surgeon.

He said Ying Ying and her son were resting comfortably in their cage and they will remain isolated from the public for up to three months to keep Ying Ying from getting nervous and possibly harming the cub.

Pe-Pe nervously paced around his cage where he has been separated from his mate since Saturday, something he normally doesn't do. Reporters packed the compound taking pictures.

The Pandas were given to former Mexican President Luis Echeverria during a visit to China in 1975. Both Pe-Pe and Ying Ying are 5 years old, stand about five feet tall and weigh about 250 pounds.

The Panda is a nocturnal animal resembling a bear but is a member of the racoon family. They are native to the high mountain bamboo forests of central China.

Zoos in London, Washington and Tokyo have tried unsuccessfully to mate Pandas in captivity. There are about 30 Pandas in captivity and environmentalists fear their number has dropped to below 250 in the wild.

Dr. Tellez Giron said Pandas have trouble reproducing in captivity because of high-strung nervous systems that can affect hormone production.

He attributed the successful birth to diet and the fact Ying Ying and Pe-Pe live together year round, not just in mating season as in most other zoos.

The Pandas live in an enclosed air-conditioned building that has three pens measuring 18-by-24 feet and have a large outdoor play yard.

Their daily diet consists of 17 pounds of bamboo shoots, rice, milk, chicken, beef, apples, carrots, eggs, spinach, sugar, honey, salt, bone meal and vitamins.

Businesses refuse audits, city plans to triple taxes

DALLAS (AP) — More than 1,000 Dallas businessmen who refused to comply with a special audit of their inventories are being told the city plans to triple the assessments now on file.

The Dallas city council ordered an audit after indications that business personal property valuations were far below their true market value.

But after city tax assessors began an audit of 2,500 firms, they expressed surprise at the differences they found — some by millions of dollars.

Lawrence Watson, city tax department supervisor, said the city decided to triple the 1979 valuations to insure that the 1,125 businesses that refused to open their books to auditors "will get an increase in their taxes."

"We hope we'll have it high enough where they'll let us look at their books," Watson said.

The businesses will have 10 days to contest the tripled valuations, but Watson said some probably will stay quiet because the tripled assessment will "still be too low."

Many of the businesses increased their 1980 valuations as much as four or five times since 1979, but he said he feels tripling the figures for resisting firms is adequate.

Letters were sent Monday, informing the uncooperative businesses of the tax department's actions, Watson said.

Shocked that inventories on the 1980 city tax roll were so undervalued, Watson said he asked the Texas Legislature to give the countywide appraisal office power to regularly investigate firms.

Watson said the legislature needs to give the new countywide appraisal office power to conduct regular audits, instead of relying on the old "honor system" in which business owners have valued personal property in the past.

Security tight during strike in El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's civilian-military junta tightened security here and around the country to guard against possible violence during a 72-hour strike called today by leftists pledging to bring this embattled Central American nation to a standstill.

In the capital, armored personnel carriers equipped with .50-caliber machine guns rumbled through city streets. The junta urged Salvadorians to ignore the strike call and said it would provide protection for those who would go to work.

The Revolutionary Democratic Front, a broad-based leftist coalition, warned the army to stay clear of demonstrations.

"If the army appears on the streets, we will make use of our defense mechanisms," said a front spokesman issued Tuesday. It said the strike was called to prove the coalition had the backing of Salvador's 4.3 million population.

Last March, more than 40 people were killed during a two-day strike led by the front which shut down about 80 percent of El Salvador's economy.

In an apparent attempt to stifle plans for the work stoppage, junta member Ramon Avalos Navarrete and Defense Minister Col. Jose Guillermo Garcia appeared on nationwide television Monday to announce the government would hand power to anyone able to win an election freely and democratically. The men did not say when the proposed election would occur nor did they provide other details.

An estimated 5,000 people have died in fighting between rightist and leftist forces since the beginning of this year, according to a local human rights organization.

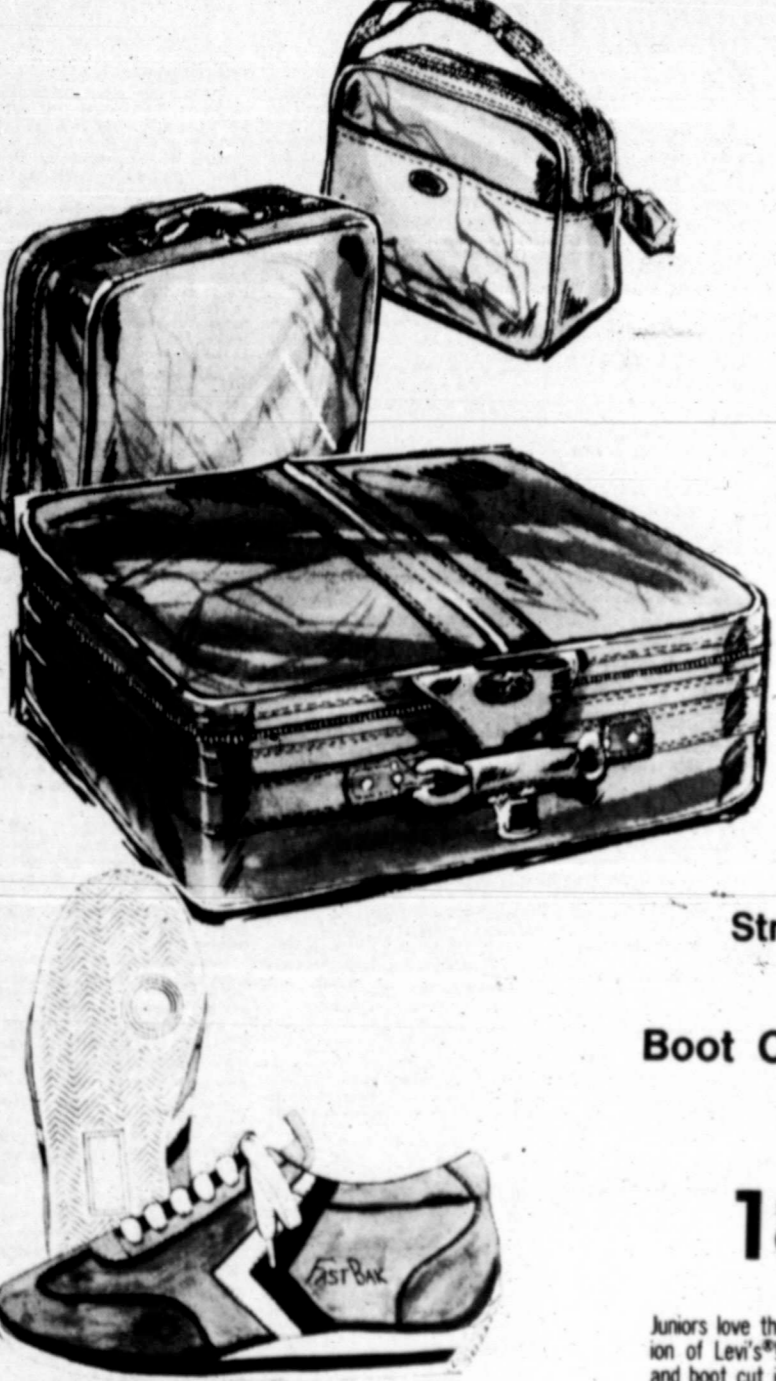

The junta — made up of two army colonels and three civilians who follow the Christian Democratic Party's centrist line — has tried to avoid full-scale civil war since succeeding the rightist regime of Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero. He was overthrown in a military coup last Oct. 15.

The leftists' front is led by a former junta member, Guillermo Manuel Ungo, a leading jurist of social-democrat views; and Enrique Alvarez Cordoba, a conservative-turned-leftist who served as agriculture minister from 1968 to 1979.

PRODUCTION SUPERVISORS
Announcing "start-up" opportunities at a major, new plastic molding facility
We're a new local packaging corporation now staffing a plant in the Big Spring area. These ground floor opportunities require professionals with strong hands-on skills--and the drive to start up a continuous operation with minimum delay. We'll provide fully commensurate salaries and outstanding benefits.
While we prefer a background in blow molded plastics, we will consider candidates with records of achievement in other industries. A degree is helpful, but not mandatory. Know-how and personal initiative are the key.
Ideal candidates will have supervisory experience in a manufacturing environment, and the special leadership qualities that characterize a top notch line supervisor. After initial equipment training conducted out of state, your responsibilities will include assisting in selection and instruction of plant personnel and equipment troubleshooting. Good mechanical aptitude would be a definite asset. Supervisors and crews will work 12 hours per day, 3 and 4 days per week.

GAS PLANT SUPERINTENDENT

Ground floor opportunity for take charge person at new recovery plant

Crystal Oil, a rapidly expanding independent involved in the exploration, production and processing of oil and gas products, is conducting an intensive search for a Gas Plant Superintendent for their deep earth recovery plant now under construction in Waveland, Mississippi.

Our tough, result-oriented philosophy has brought us considerable success and to join our production-oriented team you must have at least 5 years processing experience in a gas expansion plant and exposure to turbine operations, centrifugal pumps and on-line compact computer operations, would be extremely helpful.

The capacity of the plant will be 100 million cubic feet per day and the successful applicant's responsibilities will include supervising the operation of the plant; ensuring safe operation conditions, adequate maintenance of equipment through a preventive maintenance program and keeping in touch with producers and purchasers to insure an adequate supply of gas for processing.

We offer an excellent starting salary, comprehensive company-paid benefits including relocation assistance and exceptional career security. For prompt consideration please write or call.
