Iraq claims oil harbor captured

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq announced today its forces had captured an important oil harbor and seized Tehran's railroad, cutting off the port and another major city in southern Iran.

The claimed capture of Khorramshahr, on the northern edge of the Persian Gulf, would be the biggest victory scored by Iraq. Iraq said it had captured 115 square miles of Iranian border territory in four days of fighting.

Iraq claimed it had pushed back Iraqi forces in one area and reported for the first time the capture of a border post inside Iraq.

Iranian jets made their deepest penetration yet into Iraq, bombing a gas refinery at Ayn Zala, 280 miles northwest of Baghdad and 400 miles from the nearest Iranian air base, the Iraqis reported.

In Beirut, Iraqi Defense Minister Adnan Khairallah listed the goals of his country as: Redefinition of parts of the Arab-Iraq border; protection of the Arabic-speaking minority in southern Iran, and the return to Arab sovereignty of the islands of Abu Mousa and the Greater and Lesser Tunbs. The islands were seized by Iraq in 1971.

In Rome, the Iraqi ambassador to Italy said Baghdad will accept no mediation to end the war unless Iraq agrees to return to Iraq territories that it claims.

At U.S. government urging, 53 American civilians — 46 businessmen and their families and seven dependents of members of the U.S. Embassy staff — left Baghdad by bus for Amman, Jordan, a trip that normally takes 15-18 hours. U.S. diplomats were not being advised to leave Iraq for the time being.

A chartered plane arrived in Amsterdam, Netherlands, with other American evacuees from Iraq. They included 241 employees of a New Jersey construction company and their families.

Foreign diplomats said they were making plans to evacuate European, Japanese, Korean and Filipino civilians working in Iraq.

Military communiques issued here and in Tehran indicated ground and air activity had not let up. Both Iraq and Iran have halted shipments of oil, not a major worry to the world for the present, but the war threatens to halt shipments from other oil-producing countries in the Persian Gulf.

But oil tankers were reported moving normally today through the Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's outlet to the sea and the world's main oil artery. Saudi Arabia and other Gulf countries have put their armed forces on alert as a self-defense precaution, highly placed sources reported.

Baghdad Radio said Iraqi troops punched 12 miles into Khuzestan Province and captured the oil harbor at Khorramshahr and outflanked Iranian troops at Abadan, killing 50 soldiers. It said Iraqi troops seized the railway that connects the two cities with Tehran, the Iranian capital 340 miles to the northeast.

Baghdad Radio said the railroad seizure cut the two cities off from reinforcements promised by the Iranian government.

Iraq said its troops took Mehram Wednesday after completing the capture of the major Iranian border town of Qasr-e-Shirin, 350 miles southwest of Tehran, taking 351 prisoners and pursuing fleeing Iranian soldiers to Sar-e-Pol-Zahab, about 20 miles inside the border.

Iran conceded its troops retreated in the Mehram area and said the Iraqis also seized nearby Salehabad. An Iranian communique said fighting was continuing in the Qasr-e-Shirin area and claimed the invading Iraqi forces had been forced to retreat.

The Iranian news agency Pars quoted a communique saying Iranian forces had captured the Iraqi border post of Chalameh. Pars did not specify the location of this post and Chalameh does not appear on major maps. This is the first position inside Iraq that Iran has claimed to overrun since the war erupted.

Question marks remain

Queries about Titan unanswered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has several questions about last week's Titan II missile explosion in Arkansas, but Air Force Secretary Hans Mark left many unanswered in his testimony before a House committee.

Mark, summoned before a hastily called session of the House Armed Services Committee, was asked:

—Why wasn't there enough water to flood the silo when fuel fumes began escaping from the rocket?

—Why was there no safety net in the silo to catch objects such as the wrench socket that was dropped? The tool punctured the missile's skin, allowing the fuel fumes to escape and ultimately leading to the explosion.

—Why did the Martin Marietta Co., which built the missile, advise the Strategic Air Command to overrule the on-site team, which wanted to vent the fumes into the atmosphere in an attempt to halt the danger of explosion?

Mark had no answers for those questions Wednesday. Nor would he, the Air Force secretary said, until the service finishes its investigation of the explosion near Damascus, Ark., which killed one man and injured 21 others. The nuclear warhead was apparently blown off the missile but was recovered undamaged.

He said he hoped to have some of the answers within a month.

But he said the Titan is still vital to America's defense, despite the questions and fears about the safety of the nuclear missile.

Mark insisted the aging Titan II "is required in our strategic force. It accounts for about one-third of the destructive power of our land-based missile force. There is no near-term replacement."

He said the Titans are needed more now than when they were first deployed in 1963 because "the strategic balance (with the Soviet Union) is not nearly as much in our favor as it was then."

There are 84 Titan II sites in Arizona, Kansas and Arkansas, and each missile can carry a nuclear bomb about 1,000 times as powerful as the bomb that destroyed Hiroshima, Japan.

The Titan was designed primarily as a threat to Soviet cities. Recently, the United States has developed the more accurate Minuteman missile, designed to knock out the enemy's nuclear defenses.

Adhering to policy, Mark refused to say publicly whether the Titan's warhead was in danger of detonating or leaking radiation. He said he would discuss the nuclear device only in private with members of Congress.

Mark disclosed that SAC, on the advice of the Martin Marietta Co., overruled the Air Force safety team at the site, which recommended letting the fumes from the silo escape into the air.

"I'm not sure what the on-site team recommended was possible," he said. The toxic levels of the fumes may have been too great to let them get close enough to vent the gas, he said. He said the fuel can safely enter the atmosphere without igniting.

Mark said the Air Force followed advice from Martin Marietta, even though no one from the firm was at the site. "For reasons I don't understand now," Mark said, the company urged the Air Force to "do nothing." He said the company official apparently hoped the situation would stabilize.

His explanation left some members of the committee dissatisfied. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., said she found Mark's explanation "mystifying" and questioned whether he was hiding a threat to the warhead device that might have been posed by venting the fuel fumes.

Mark was unable to say why there wasn't enough water to flood the silo and dissolve the volatile fumes. "If you could fill up the entire silo, you could prevent it (the explosion) from happening," he said.

The accident was caused by a dropped wrench socket that fell 70 feet into the silo and ruptured the rocket's one-eighth-inch thick fuel tank wall. Escaping fumes eventually filled the silo and the explosion occurred more than eight hours after the tank ruptured.

Mark said the water supply at the Titan site was adequate to handle small fuel leaks. In deciding how big a water supply to keep on hand, he said, the Air Force and the contractor may have reasoned that chances for a large-scale leak were slim.

Rep. Don Bailey, D-Pa., said "it offends my common sense that you can't foresee" the possibility of a major fuel leak and have enough water on hand to flood the entire silo.

Mark was also unable to say why there was no safety net in the silo to catch an object such as a wrench socket before it crashed into the Titan fuel tank.

Actors' strike may be settled

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Negotiators today reached a tentative agreement ending a two-month strike by 67,000 television and film actors that has delayed the start of the fall TV season.

But even if the pact is ratified by the membership of the unions who walked off the job July 21, it will be weeks before new television shows are on the air, industry sources said.

The tentative agreement on a three-year contract came early this morning after a bargaining session of nearly 19 hours, according to Kim Fellner, a spokeswoman for the Screen Actors Guild.

"At 5 a.m. (PDT) a tentative agreement was reached between the actors and the producers and that followed a final 18½-hour bargaining session," said Phil Myers, a spokesman for the producers.

Myers said the boards of the American Federation of Television Radio Artists and Screen Actors Guild will meet starting this weekend to approve it.

"After that," he said, "there will be a ratification process by both of those groups. And each board will decide when the actors can go back to work pending ratification. So in terms of when the producers go back into production, we would have to wait and see what their decision is."

However, Ms. Fellner said the unions could send the actors back to work pending ratification.

"It'll take two-and-a-half or three weeks for the whole (ratification) process," she said, since the actors would vote on the pact by mail.

The contract includes a 15 percent increase in minimum salaries for the first 18 months, and 15 percent for the second 18 months, for a compounded increase of 32.25 percent over the life of the contract, Myers said. Actors currently earn a minimum of $235 a day or $785 a week.

Fellner said the tentative agreement also included increased pension and welfare benefits, a strong non-discrimination program, improved working conditions for minors and an overhaul of working schedules.

Another key area in the settlement involved what actors are paid for prime-time television reruns. Myers said the agreement included wage increases for such shows ranging from 14 to 37.5 percent over the contract for hour-long programs.

The unions' directors in Los Angeles were expected to meet Saturday afternoon here to discuss the proposal, while their boards in New York were scheduled to meet Monday in New York, said AFTRA spokesman Dick Moore.

Negotiations had progressed more rapidly since actors and producers agreed a week ago on a complex formula that would give actors a share of the lucrative home video market. That issue had been a major stumbling block in negotiations.

Work would resume almost immediately after the strike on new prime-time series for the ABC, CBS and NBC television networks.

34 tax auditors to attend the Permian Basin Oil Show

ODESSA (AP) — State Comptroller Bob Bullock will send 34 of his tax auditors to the Permian Basin Oil Show next month to familiarize the agents with the petroleum industry that they audit.

But Tony Proffitt, Bullock's media liaison, says the trip could do the comptroller more harm than good because once the auditors in the oil and gas division become qualified, they leave for higher paying jobs inside the industry.

The tax auditors are also known as "Bullock's Raiders" for their sudden, unannounced visits to businesses to see that they are paying all their state taxes.

However, Proffitt assured newsmen that no raid was planned.

Most of those going to Odessa are "good, young" accountants, Proffitt said, who don't know much about the oil industry and "his trip primarily is to acquaint them with the industry they audit."

Ledford Kelly, director of field operations for Bullock's Austin office, said it was only a "field trip" designed to familiarize the agents with equipment used in the petroleum industry.

State Rep. Jay Gibson of Odessa said he thought the auditors would be watching out-of-state exhibitors who might make a sell and not pay the sales tax. That could amount to $50,000 on a $1 million oil drilling rig, he pointed out.

Jay Alvey, executive director of the oil show for the past 20 years, said he did not recall any occasion when tax auditors were there in such force.

"If they have been here, we haven't known about it. I think that all companies exhibiting at Odessa are aware of all tax laws and try to abide by them and don't have anything to hide from Bullock," Alvey said.

Iran-Iraq war-at-a-glance

By The Associated Press

Here is an at-a-glance look at today's developments in the war between Iran and Iraq:

Land advances

Iraq said it had captured 115 square miles of Iranian border territory. Iraq said it had pushed back invading forces in one area and had captured a border post inside Iraq.

Air attacks

Iranian jets made their deepest penetration into Iraq of the four-day war, bombing a gas refinery 280 miles northeast of Baghdad. Iranian jets also attacked Iraqi oil installations near Baghdad and to the north. The Iraqis said they struck back by heavily damaging six airports and military installations inside Iran. They also said three planes were lost during the raids. The Iraqi communique said 18 Iranian planes were downed, bringing the total of downed Iranian planes in four days of fighting to 139 — almost a third of Iran's air force.

Objectives

Iraqi Defense Minister Adnan Khairallah, speaking in Beirut, said his country's goals were: redefinition of parts of the Iran-Iraq border; protection of the Arabic-speaking minority in southern Iran; and the return to Arab sovereignty of the islands of Abu Mousa and the Greater and Lesser Tunbs, seized by Iran in 1971.

Americans

At the urging of the U.S. government, 53 American civilians, including seven dependents of U.S. diplomats, left Baghdad by bus for Amman, Jordan. The diplomats themselves remained for the time being.

Casualties

Iraq said 34 Iraqis were killed and 134 wounded in Ahwaz and in the oil-refinery town of Abadan, but it said the Abadan toll did not include casualties among personnel of the National Iranian Oil Co. It also said there were "many" civilian casualties at Qasr-e-Shirin and Mehram.

Oil

Iranian and Iraqi exports through the Persian Gulf were cut off, but the flow from Saudi Arabia and other gulf states continued. The intelligence department of Lloyd's of London said tanker traffic was moving normally through the Strait of Hormuz, the world's main oil artery. The fighting has driven up gasoline and heating oil prices on the spot oil markets, but traders said current supplies are large enough so that consumers should not have to pay more unless the fighting spreads. The U.S. imports no oil from Iran and very little from Iraq.

Diplomatic

Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie scheduled a meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and said he would urge Gromyko to back the United Nations' call for a cease-fire and to take "whatever actions may seem appropriate to the situation."

Chamber group proposes clean-up campaign here

A clean-up campaign involving all Midlanders is in the works, Bill Collins told the Midland Chamber of Commerce at its regular monthly meeting on Wednesday.

The goal is "to make Midland more beautiful," Collins told the board of directors. The plan calls for involving school, business, industry, civic and service clubs and as many residents as possible. The city sanitation department will be cooperating in the effort and is dividing the city into districts.

Collins said the committee he chairs is studying a beautification program under way in Longview in hopes of adapting it to Midland.

Chamber President Ray Moudy said all governmental bodies in Midland had agreed to underwrite the $50,000 for the Urban Land Institute study that will be done here in November.

He also remarked that a study is under way on the possibility of moving Midland Air Park and John Grimland is heading that chamber committee. He added that the question might be included in the ULI's study.

"It's a very controversial matter," Moudy said of the Air Park study. "A lot of people in Midland feel there's a small group trying to profit out of it (moving Air Park), but I don't believe that's the case."

He reminded the board that the City Council two years ago expressed a desire to keep Air Park in its present location for the next 20 years.

Jack Hauke said a membership telethon will be held Oct. 23 and 24 and he hopes to get about 150 new members. Several telephones will be installed in the chamber conference room and volunteers will work about an hour each in calling a list of prospects.

Grant Billingsley reported on the first application to the Midland Industrial Finance Corporation by Compressor Systems Inc. to expand its operations. These industrial revenue bonds should help Midland expand its industrial base, Billingsley said.

Louis Hochman reported the conventions committee will be bringing in several representatives from various associations Oct. 4 and 5 in trying to attract more conventions to the Tall City.

County commissioner Durward Wright said the county housing finance group is waiting on action by Congress on a rider to a bill concerning the revenue bond program for home mortgages.

The local program still is planned to begin Oct. 9 at Chaparral Center. He added that $25 million in the revenue bonds has been committed, and the remaining $14.6 is awaiting Congress' action before a seller will be found.

He also reminded the board that Oct. 4 is the last day to register to vote in the Nov. 4 general election.

Seven hurt in gasohol explosion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A drum containing a mixture of alcohol and gasoline flashed into flames during a gasohol demonstration and shot up like a rocket, spraying a crowd of spectators with burning liquid, officials say.

Seven people were hospitalized and admitted to Riverside Hospital were in fair condition. They included Elmo Sergeant Jr., 41, of Ramsey, Ill., who was conducting the demonstration.

"We were about 200 feet away," said Len Brown of Mansfield, one of the exhibitors at the annual Farm Science Review near Don Scott Field, owned by Ohio State University. "The only thing we heard was a loud woosh and that's when a barrel shot up into the air."

The five others who were injured and admitted to Riverside Hospital were in fair condition. They included Elmo Sergeant Jr., 41, of Ramsey, Ill., who was conducting the demonstration.

"They looked bad," Brown said of the injured, who were packed in ice and wrapped in burn sheets designed to keep the burns clean.

Mike McCall of Tri Star Corp., a Vandalia, Ill., company that owns the stills, said he talked to Sergeant before he was transported to the hospital.

According to Sergeant, someone from the crowd took the hose out of a tank of denatured alcohol, filled an ashtray with the liquid and ignited it to show how it burned.

The unidentified man then placed the ashtray on top of the drum.

"Enough of the fumes from the ashtray ignited the 30-gallon barrel and basically what we had was a rocket," said McCall.

An investigation was being conducted by OSU public safety officials and the state fire marshal's office.

A sudden shower can cast a pall over anyone's picnic, as was the case Wednesday for 11-year-old Holly Herd, above, who braved the rain to hear the Midland-Odessa Symphony's delightful Pops in the Plaza noon concert. Despite the brief shower, the orchestra, conducted by Thomas Hohnstadt, left, entertained a large crowd of downtown office workers and school children.

Oil routes must stay open: Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is stopping short of threatening military action to keep Persian Gulf oil flowing to the West as Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie and America's allies search for a way to make sure the Iran-Iraq war doesn't close key shipping lanes.

After a White House meeting with Muskie and other top advisers Wednesday, Carter said freedom to navigate in the Persian Gulf is vital to the world's oil supplies.

While Wednesday's cutoff of oil shipments from Iran and Iraq alone should have no serious effect on supplies and prices, the president said: "A total suspension of oil exports from the other nations who ship through the Persian Gulf region would create a serious threat to the world's oil supplies and consequently a threat to the economic health of all nations."

"It is imperative that there be no infringement of that freedom of passage of ships and from the Persian Gulf region," he added.

The key waterway — and the focal point of consultations with the allies — is the Strait of Hormuz, a narrow channel at the entrance to the gulf. If it were blocked, two-thirds of the Western world's imported oil could be cut off.

Carter was not specific about how the strait might be kept open, and Muskie said the immediate effort is to promote a ceasefire through the United Nations.

In his State of the Union address last January, Carter said the United States was prepared to use military force if necessary to protect Persian Gulf supply routes from any outside assault.

But there has been no indication that the president is prepared to carry out that threat in the current crisis.

An administration official, who asked not to be identified, refused to comment on the possibility that the United States would join or assist some international naval force that could be sent to the region to guarantee the safety of the world's tankers.

Without mentioning such a plan specifically, Muskie said: "What one tries to do is stay on top of the situation as it actually unfolds and undertake to do the contingency planning, not in public, but within the circle of your administration as to how you would meet contingencies if they develop."

Carter, meanwhile, stressed that the United States is strictly neutral in the Iran-Iraq conflict and, in what one administration official said could be interpreted as a warning to the Soviet Union, added: "There should be absolutely no intervention by any other nation in this conflict."

Muskie said he would urge Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at a meeting today to recommend that the Kremlin use its influence to support a U.N. Security Council appeal for a ceasefire.

The Soviets and Iraq are linked by a treaty of friendship and cooperation, signed in 1972, and Iraq has obtained nearly all its arms from Moscow since then. But relations between the two have been strained nevertheless, and an Iraqi delegation reportedly was turned down in a new arms request Monday night in Moscow.

Carter said that no matter what happens on the battlefield, the United States continues to hold the Iranian government responsible for the safety of the 52 American hostages now in their 327th day of captivity in Iran.

The president avoided a direct answer when asked if the administration would consider swapping spare parts for Iran's American-made weapons in return for release of the hostages.

"We're consulting through other means with Iran as we have been for many months about a safe release of the hostages," Carter said. "But that particular point would perhaps be better for me not to single out among the others."

State Department spokesman Jack Cannon also said the United States has sent a private message to Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr giving explicit assurances that the United States is not involved in the conflict.

Muskie seeks Soviet cooperation to end fighting between Iraq-Iran

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie sought the Soviet Union's cooperation today in U.N. efforts to end the fighting between Iran and Iraq.

Muskie scheduled a three-hour meeting with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko at which they were also to make final arrangements for negotiations to arrange a mutual cut-back of Soviet and American nuclear missiles in Europe.

Muskie told reporters he would urge Gromyko to rally behind the United Nations, its call for a cease-fire "and whatever actions may seem appropriate to the situation."

The Soviets and their ally East Germany delayed for five hours Tuesday night the approval of a U.N. Security Council statement calling on Iran and Iraq to halt their war. They finally agreed to the statement, but British sources said there appeared to be a marked Soviet reluctance to engage the United Nations in the conflict, at least at this stage.

Muskie said he thought the Soviet resistance to the Security Council statement was overstated.

"They did raise questions, but there was not the kind of obstructionism apparently discerned in some quarters," he said.

State Department spokesman John H. Trotter told reporters he thinks the Soviets "support a quick end to the fighting."

"I can't speak to their motives, but this is what we've seen," he said.

Gromyko delivered a fierce attack on American arms policies in a speech Tuesday to the U.N. General Assembly. He said the United States was in the grip of a "militaristic frenzy" that was marked by "tensions and hysteria." But a high-ranking Soviet diplomat told a reporter Gromyko had not intended to signal any change in his government's desire to begin negotiations with the United States on medium-range missiles.

Those talks are expected to open in mid-October. They will center on the SS-20 missiles the Soviets have targeted on Western Europe and the American Pershing and cruise missiles to be deployed in Britain, West Germany and Italy beginning in 1983.

Gromyko in his speech accused the Carter administration of not responding to Soviet proposals to negotiate over the missiles.

Struggling city couples facing banished dreams

Struggling Midland couples who are harboring dreams of owning their own homes by next year via a low-interest, Midland County-administered program may be looking toward indefinite rent payments and banished dreams.

The financing of single-family housing for low- and moderate-income families was to be via a $40-million mortgage revenue bond program handled by the newly-formed Midland County Housing Financing Corp. But the availability of funds from bonds is hinging on a budget-bill rider which would deny a loophole — a tax-exempt status — for the "rich" buyers of the bonds.

The rider, authored by U.S. Congressman Al Ullman of Oregon, was approved in a House vote on the budget bill but now is before the Senate, which likely will not consider the deficit-laden budget bill until after the Nov. 4 general election.

If the rider remains, the bond program for Midland County effectively would be buried, said Harry Clark, president of the Midland County Housing Finance Corp. But there is an off-chance that Ullman, the chairman of the House's Ways and Means Committee and who is running for re-election on a balance-the-budget campaign, may consent to get the rider removed if he can get concessions in other areas, including taxes on petroleum.

The tax-exempt status on the "so-called mortgage revenue bonds" is intended for financially struggling couples, according to an aide to Texas Sen. John Tower.

Ullman, the aide said, is attempting to balance the budget, which now has a $75-billion deficit.

The delay may put the program on a new timetable, Clark said, if the measure is approved prior to the end of the year. After that, no allowances are made for a mortgage revenue program for housing.

More rain in forecast

Midlanders should plan on keeping their seldom-used umbrellas at the ready for awhile, according to the weatherman.

Cloudy skies that have brought the Tall City an official 4.62 inches of rain so far this month — more, according to unofficial sources inside the city — may bring more rain to the city through Friday.

The forecast, issued this morning by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, is calling for considerable cloudiness through Friday with a chance of showers and a few thunderstorms. The weatherman says a 50 percent probability of rainfall exists tonight and a 30 percent chance will exist on Friday. A 30 percent probability existed today.

Midland woman attacked in bedroom

Burglaries and thefts kept police busy Wednesday and this morning. At 4:40 a.m. today, officers were called to the 2800 block of Roosevelt Avenue to a burglary. Police are investigating the incident as a burglary with intent to rape. The woman told officers she was asleep in her bedroom when she was awakened by the burglar, who began hitting her in the face with his fists.

She said she was able to pull away from the man and run out the front door. The woman ran across the street to another residence, where she called police.

The woman was taken to Midland Memorial Hospital emergency room where she was treated and released.

From tennis shoe prints found at the house, police surprised the man escaped through the back door and ran west from the residence. Sometime between 7:30 and 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jaffe Alford told police, someone stole $285 in cash from an apartment at 503 W. Estes Ave., No. 6. The money was stolen from his bedroom dresser.

Police are also investigating the reported theft of $120 from a motel room at 1007 S. Midkiff Road. Christopher Davies of Dallas told officers the money had been in a sleeping bag on the floor. It was stolen, he said, between 1:35 and 2:30 p.m. Wednesday, while he was out of the room.

Grace Lovett Marshall received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident Wednesday afternoon in the 300 block of South Bentwood. Vehicles driven by James Raymond Potter, Route 3, and Ms. Marshall collided about 2 p.m.

Ms. Marshall was not treated at Midland Memorial emergency room.

Midland firefighters were awakened early this morning by a reported fire at the Vaughn Building in downtown Midland. The report came in at 1:29 a.m. On their arrival, however, the firemen discovered the smoke was actually steam escaping from a vent at the top of the building.

Ambulance runs made up the majority of other calls with two people being transported by CFD ambulance since 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Tremors rumbling in volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — After more than a month of slumber, Mount St. Helens is again shivering in the grip of light tremors, but scientists say they don't expect the volcano to erupt anytime soon.

The tremors, which signal the underground movement of molten rock, were noted Wednesday as earth around the crater continued to expand, widening cracks radiating from the volcano's gaping mouth.

The tremors began at 12:31 a.m. PDT Wednesday and lasted for about a half-hour, said officials at the University of Washington geophysics center in Seattle. At 2:10 p.m. and 3:14 p.m. new series of tremors began, each lasting 20 to 30 minutes.

A.B. Adams of the geophysics center said the tremors red less than one millimeter on seismographs, an arbitrary means of charting intensity of the low-level seismic activity. During a volcanic eruption, the measurement would be about 40 millimeters, Adams said.

"It's very small activity, but it's more than we had two days ago," he said.

last activity, was not considered imminent, said the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Joyce Routson of the Federal Emergency Management Agency said the tremors were not strong enough to trigger evacuation of the restricted zone around the southwest — ashington volcano. However, an advisory was issued to workers in the area Wednesday afternoon.

Adams said an eruption warning would not be issued unless the tremors started registering 5 millimeters or more.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Geological Survey reported a slight widening of the cracks from the inner floor of volcano's crater. "They're just millimeters wider," said Ms. Routson. "We feel the cracks simply are occurring because of the outward movement (of the crater rim)."

Earth around the crater rim has been expanding by about a half-inch a day for several weeks.

Ms. Routson said geologists from the USGS were conducting extensive tests on the volcano.

"We don't have any data on the consequences of this outward movement," Ms. Routson said.

Former Demo urges blacks here to vote for Reagan

A Democrat four years ago who campaigned for Jimmy Carter, Roscoe Scott said he realized his folly and jumped the fence to the Republican Party. Now, Scott is traveling the state, urging blacks to get involved in the political process by supporting Republicans at the local level.

Scott, of Fort Worth, came to Midland Wednesday and held a news conference in Johnson's Restaurant, 101 N. Lee St. Attending were Bob Monaghan, regional coordinator for the Reagan-Bush campaign; Alexandra Morris, candidate for county commissioner; Jay "Timber" Floyd, candidate for district judge; Dallas Smith, seeking re-election as sheriff; Bill Shaner, county GOP chairman; and Barbara Culver, district judge.

A firm believer that "you have to work for what you want," Scott said he organized Texas blacks for Carter in 1976. After the election, he said "I realized blacks weren't going to get the opportunities I thought they were."

Politics was described by Scott as a force that affects where people live, where they work, job opportunities and where their children go to school.

"As blacks, if we are going to become a part of the system, we have to look how it's done," he said, relating an instance in Fort Worth of obtaining funding for a project.

In telling how the blacks could learn the political system, Scott rambled from one experience to another for more than an hour.

"Let's stop being bridesmaids," he said of the blacks and Republican Party. "Let's plan to win."

Looking back on his time spent in the Democratic Party, he said "I'm living proof you can't make it anywhere in the Democratic Party."

He advised blacks to get out in the neighborhood, talk to the people that have the most power, get the young people involved and vote for people on the ground level that can help the blacks the most.

"It's a game plan for the benefit of the black community," Scott added.

In response to questions, Scott admitted he didn't agree entirely with all of Reagan's platforms and would prefer if Reagan spoke to more black groups during his campaign.

Reagan blames Carter for war

He hints we would like option of using military

By the Associated Press

At first, Ronald Reagan wanted to confer with his advisers before commenting on the fighting between Iran and Iraq. Later, he agreed Jimmy Carter had no choice but to keep America neutral. And before the day was out, he said the president was "largely to blame."

Without putting it directly, the Republican nominee strongly implied on Wednesday that he would prefer at least the option of using military force in the crisis. But a weakened defense, he charged, has tied the administration's hands.

Not surprisingly, the administration vehemently disagreed with Reagan's ever-sharper imputation of U.S. culpability in the crisis. "It's easy to hector about that problem," declared Vice President Walter F. Mondale in Rhode Island. He challenged Reagan, instead, to come up with a solution.

"I won't call him a war monger," said Mondale, in a taunting reference to the dominant campaign rhetoric of recent days. "I want the American people to draw whatever conclusions they will."

Reagan, campaigning in Texas and Colorado, initially begged off questions about the Mideast. He had refused intelligence briefings from the administration, and said he needed to consult his own advisers.

Hours later, he complained that the president "probably is doing all that can be done now because of our own defense posture."

"He has allowed the defensive capability of the United States to become so weakened that it's like when he said that we would use force with regard to the Persian Gulf and two weeks later had to admit we don't have the force," Reagan said.

Asked specifically if he would use force if that were possible, Reagan replied "I don't know that anyone could say that. I'm not asking to send force to anyplace unless it is absolutely necessary."

But Reagan, later in the day, took his complaint one step further when he declared outside a clothing plant in El Paso that "What is happening in Iraq and Iran is the consequence of policies this administration has followed during the last 3 1/2 years — a vacillating foreign policy and a weakened defense capability are largely to blame."

"The situation is both serious and unfortunate, not only because the American hostages are endangered but also because it could spread into a generalized war and because it threatens the world's oil supplies."

Reagan denied playing politics with the issue. "It is up to President Carter now to decide what role the United States must play," he said.

However, the former California governor said the president should have said long ago, when America's hostages were seized in Tehran, that "no nation could continue to have friendly relations with Iran and have friendly relations with the United States."

Such a policy seemingly could have jeopardized U.S. relations with such major allies as Great Britain, Japan, France and others which have sustained ties with Iran. Japan has relied to a degree on Iranian oil, though Iran's exports have tailed off markedly and are now thought to go principally to Eastern Europe.

Reagan asserted also that the current fighting could not have happened "if our government had hot helped in the fall of the shah. And there is no excuse for our helping to pull the rug out from under that government," he said.

President Carter essentially stayed out of the political exchanges over the crisis on Wednesday. But, unlike Reagan, he sought to assure the nation that world oil supplies should not be seriously affected by the Iran-Iraq fighting, so long as the Persian Gulf remains open to shipping.

The president said the United States is consulting with other nations on to ensure that the strategic Strait of Hormuz is not closed.

Reagan-Bush headquarters here boasts of 700 volunteers

Midland's headquarters for the Reagan-Bush presidential campaign reported it has more than 700 volunteers that will donate more than 6,000 hours telephoning voters before the Nov. 4 general election.

Jess Ann Thomason, phone center chairman, reported this makes the Midland office the number one phone center in the state.

The center also has started the voter identification process, and is also the first in the state to do so.

Marilyn Hanson, Karon Brown, Eleanor Morse, Dean Henderson, Jesse Gilmour, Camille Lefeste, Barbara Magruder and Ludie McSpadden.

GOP officers located in the Reagan-Bush headquarters at 700 Andrews Highway are Bob Monaghan, Region V chairman; Tom Kerwin, Region V field representative; Jess Ann Thomason, phone center chairman; Eleanor Morse, recruiting chairman; Lori Jons, Region V headquarters coordinator; and David Godfrey, Midland County campaign chairman.

Small businesses indicate economy is leveling off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's small businesses historically measure economic downturns and recoveries more quickly than large companies or government economists.

If so, the economy may be leveling off, steering an unsteady course between recession and economic growth. That is the conclusion of the latest monthly survey by the National Small Business Association.

The group's "Business Outlook Index" surveys small business responses to 12 economic indicators.

Fifty-seven percent surveyed expect interest rates to rise, compared to 31 percent last month; 44 percent expect reduced earnings after taxes, as opposed to 36 percent the previous month.

Moreover, 36 percent surveyed expect a reduction in orders, 10 percentage points more than last month.

Despite this, 54 percent of the small business men questioned say that October looks brighter than they had predicted a year ago, when concern about a recession was building.

The views of these businessmen jibe with those of a growing number of economic analysts.

Courtenay Slater, the Commerce Department's chief economist, has said economic signals, particularly a pickup in retail sales and housing starts, indicate the recession ended in August.

However, she added that the recovery will be long and slow.

Some private economists have predicted a quick end to the recession, but few have tried to pin it down as Ms. Slater did. They also agree that the recovery will be sluggish — particularly with interest rates on the rise again and inflation sure to remain high.

Retail sales have risen for three successive months; housing starts are up for the same period, and the unemployment rate fell in August from 7.8 percent to 7.6 percent.

Dodging the budget

As the members of Congress approach this year's "lame duck" session, it's pretty obvious that the nation's budgetary process, too, will be endangered this time around.
The name of the game is politics and for those interested in responsible government at an affordable price, the game is just no fun.
Members of Congress are delaying a vote on the 1981 fiscal year budget until after they return from the November elections. What that break will do, in effect, is to allow incumbent candidates an "out" with their constituents. They won't have to face the embarrassment of meeting voters after voting for a budget deficit again.
All that high and mighty talk of President Carter and the others who spoke proudly of a balanced federal budget by 1981 has simply disappeared. Instead what we have is a swollen deficit that may range as high as $30 billion, according to some estimates.
Delaying the vote on the budget until after the elections may play to the advantage of some congressmen, but the fact of the matter is its poor management and bad representation. By the time Congress gets around to considering the 1981 budget, the fiscal year will be more than a month old.

Leading experts on the congressional budgetary process also say postponing the issue will undermine the budget process because the representatives need to be on hand to debate the priorities for the country's spending.
We do not need to delay the debate of social programs versus military spending. Some hard, fast decisions need to be made shortly. We must set our priorities and get to work on the business at hand.
Dodging the issue won't work. The problem will still be there when the senators and representatives get back from their recess. They should face up to the fact that they have not done the job which they were elected to do, as a body.
The proposed "lame duck" session scheduled to begin after Nov. 4 should be a matter of shame for any member of Congress who professes to have the real interests of the American people and his constituents in mind.
How can the American people really take the need to restrengthen the nation's economy seriously when their elected representatives offer to sell them down the river in the interest of politics?

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Sept. 25, the 269th day of 1980. There are 97 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history:
On Sept. 25, 1789, the first American Congress adopted 12 amendments to the Constitution, 10 of which became the Bill of Rights.
On this date:
In 1513, the Spanish explorer Balboa crossed the Isthmus of Panama and discovered the Pacific Ocean.
In 1775, American Revolutionary War hero Ethan Allen was captured by the British and Indians as he led an attack on Montreal.
In 1974, it was disclosed that former President Richard Nixon had developed a potentially dangerous blood clot.
In 1978, an airliner and a private plane collided in mid-air over San Diego, killing 150 people.
Five years ago, President Gerald Ford and congressional leaders agreed to extend oil price controls through the middle of November.
Last year, Israel turned over 2,600 square miles of Sinai wilderness to Egypt as part of the peace treaty signed by the two nations.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Chileans voted with their hearts, not their heads in plebiscite

SANTIAGO, Chile — "If I used my head, rather than my heart, I would have voted 'no' on the constitution," the young Chilean industrialist said.
"The low import taxes 'the Chicago boys' have introduced have flooded my market with lower-priced goods from abroad, and the competition is difficult."
"But I voted 'si.'"
Why was that? Most well-educated persons, in Chile and elsewhere, are assumed to have logical reasons for the ballot they cast.
"Oh, but I did have. Three. My wife, my 8-year-old son and my 4-year-old son."
"I voted for them, rather than for my bank account," the industrialist explained.
Anxiety for law and order, confidence in the Chilean armed forces, distrust of the leadership of the Christian Democrat Party, fear of the Communists and other Marxists who, even before the Sept. 11 plebiscite, were talking of armed violence to oust the government of Gen. August Pinochet, all those factors played a part in the outcome of the voting.
The result was that, less than 12 hours after the polls closed, the government was able to announce that 67.06 percent of the 6,268,652 Chileans who went to the polls had cast their ballots in favor of the proposed constitution. 30.17 percent voted "no," and 2.77 percent of the ballots were declared null.
In Chile, no one seriously questioned the government's victory. Days before the vote, Christian Democrats and Marxists here in Santiago were predicting that the government would get "about" 60 percent of the votes. Their predictions were quite close. In the Santiago metropolitan region, the yes votes amounted to 61.85 percent.

That does not mean that the opposition was satisfied. Quite the contrary. Christian Democrats, who were the largest political party before the parties were declared in "recess" seven years ago, seize on every opportunity to try to convince those of us foreign correspondents who were invited here to observe the plebiscite that it was not an accurate reflection of Chilean public opinion.
They go a bit too far, though. For example, from abroad come reports that the military government stuffed the ballot boxes, but here in Chile it is the other way around. One prominent Christian Democrat told me that a friend of his "voted five times." The newspapers reported that a former Christian Democrat congressman was jailed for having voted twice. Actually, he turned himself in to authorities and announced his achievement in an effort to prove that the precautions the government had

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Funding cutback threatens watchdog agency

WASHINGTON — Whistleblowers — those dedicated government employees who risk their careers to report incompetence or misconduct in their agencies — are being stripped of protection by Jimmy Carter, the man who promised to defend them. The Office of Special Counsel, which was set up to be the whistleblowers' shield against reprisal, is being quietly strangled in its crib.
Two years ago, as part of Carter's civil service reform program, Congress created the Office of Special Counsel as an independent body with extraordinary powers. It was authorized not only to protect employees who exposed waste and mismanagement, but to investigate and punish crooked bureaucrats on its own.
The mini-agency pursued its mandate vigorously — perhaps too vigorously. In July, for example, it turned up damning evidence that high officials of the Small Business Administration were illegally transferring employees deemed to be "politically unresponsive." Acting Special Counsel Mary Eastwood wrote to SBA chief Vernon Weaver asking him to take disciplinary action against his deputy, Paul D. Sullivan, for his role in the illegalities.
Earlier, the special counsel's office, to the intense annoyance of Attorney General Griffin Bell, filed charges against his protegee, Ron Angel, chief federal marshal in Atlanta. He was accused of railroading four deputies who had tried to expose corruption in the marshals' service.
The office also launched corruption probes aimed at high officials in the Veterans Administration, the Air Force, the Justice Department and the Mine Safety and Health Administration.
Apparently the young watchdog was chewing on the wrong ankles. Although administration officials deny their purpose was to kill the special counsel's office, their actions had that effect.

Under a budget cut proposed by the president two months ago, the special counsel's already meager funding was slashed by $1 million. With this clear signal from the White House, Congress cut another $1 million, leaving the office broke.
The staff was reduced by 60 percent, leaving only 37 attorneys and investigators still on the payroll. Some survivors told my associate Indy Badwar they have to scrounge and beg in other agencies for such basic supplies as Scotch tape and writing paper.
All the investigations have been halted. All the branch offices have been shut down. The special counsel needs $135,000 to continue investigations already started, but the president has refused to make money available.
"The amount we need just to keep going," said one staffer, "is less than the $150,000 the administration spent on redesigning the seal for the Department of Transportation."
GUN LOBBY MISFIRES: Extremists have taken control of the National Rifle Association, and as a result the powerful gun lobby has become a loose cannon that is frightening some

ART BUCHWALD Camp David compound could hold pesky relatives

WASHINGTON — "Why," a Republican friend admonished me the other day, "don't people take the Billy Carter affair as seriously as they did Watergate?"
It was a fair question and I had to give it some thought.
Then it occurred to me that the reason people can't get as upset about Billy Carter as they did about Watergate is that most of us seem to have a Billy Carter in our family. He could be a brother or a brother-in-law, a cousin, or even an uncle who has lost his moral compass.
We empathize with President Carter because we know in our hearts there is nothing we can do about the Billy Carter in our family except keep a stiff upper lip and say we love him, which of course is a lie that we hope God will forgive us for.
When you become president of the United States, having a Billy Carter in the family can become downright dangerous. You have to keep an eye on him all the time, and you can get all messed up with the FBI, the CIA and your own National Security Advisor just trying to keep him from doing something stupid that would embarrass the White House.
There has to be a better solution for handling a black sheep in the family when you take over the highest office in the land.
There are too many sharks out there waiting to pounce on someone in the First Family who could be used to cash in on the White House Connection.
One solution would be to make better use of Camp David. What the government could do is build a special compound at Camp David where the relatives of the president of the United States could take up residence for four years. The compound would be very pleasant, with cottages, a mess hall, tennis court and a bowling alley.

It would be surrounded by a 10-foot-high electric wire fence with watchtowers at all four corners manned by armed marines.
The relatives would be given complete run of the compound, but they wouldn't be allowed to leave the premises while the president was in office. They would be permitted two telephone calls a week, provided they weren't made to a foreign embassy or an oil company.
They could have visitors on Sunday, but they would have to be screened by the justice department to make sure they weren't related to Robert Vesco.
So they won't get bored and go on hunger strikes, there would be vocational guidance instructors available to teach them a trade for use when they are released. As an added inducement, a literary agent in residence would arrange book deals for them with publishers so they could make some extra money, which they could spend in the commissary.
Some people say it is unfair to put the relatives of the president of the United States under house arrest while he is in office. But the alternatives are much worse. You can't allow the Billy Carters of this world to walk around scot-free, with everyone dangling half a million dollar loans in front of them, without endangering the security of the country.
It isn't as if they would have to remain in Camp David forever. They could all be released as soon as the president pays his debt to society.

Mideast students fined $200

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Assistant County Attorney Jeff Blackwelder didn't want a "pound of flesh" from 12 Middle Eastern demonstrators — one day each in jail would have suited him.

But the Iranians and Palestinians avoided jail Wednesday as County Court-at-Law Judge Jon Wisser fined them $200 apiece for disrupting a University of Texas speech by a former spokesman for the late Shah of Iran.

Although Wisser also sentenced the nine Iranians and three Palestinians to jail, none will have to serve time because the judge credited them for time already spent after their arrests in January.

Blackwelder had recommended that the defendants spend one additional day in jail without paying a fine. He had said in closing arguments earlier this month he was "not looking for a pound of flesh."

Defense attorney Bill Allison said he would appeal.

Wisser asked Blackwelder why he had not recommended a fine, and Blackwelder replied:

"Given the nature of the crime and the fact that so many have already spent time in jail, we felt the assessment of a fine was really not justified. One day in jail would be sufficient."

Allison said most of the defendants already had spent "nine very difficult days" in jail.

Blackwelder said he asked for jail sentences because the time the demonstrators had spent in jail was of their "own volition." He said they could have been released on bond within hours.

"They made a decision to stay in jail, I think, to make a political statement," Blackwelder said.

Wisser sentenced the 10 male defendants to eight days in jail and the two female defendants to four days.

Wisser convicted the demonstrators Sept. 4 of disrupting a Jan. 31 speech by Fereydoon Hoveyda, former United Nations ambassador from Iran. Four Iranian defendants were acquitted.

Prosecutors said the defendants booted, heckled and chanted "Death to the shah" in shouting down Hoveyda.

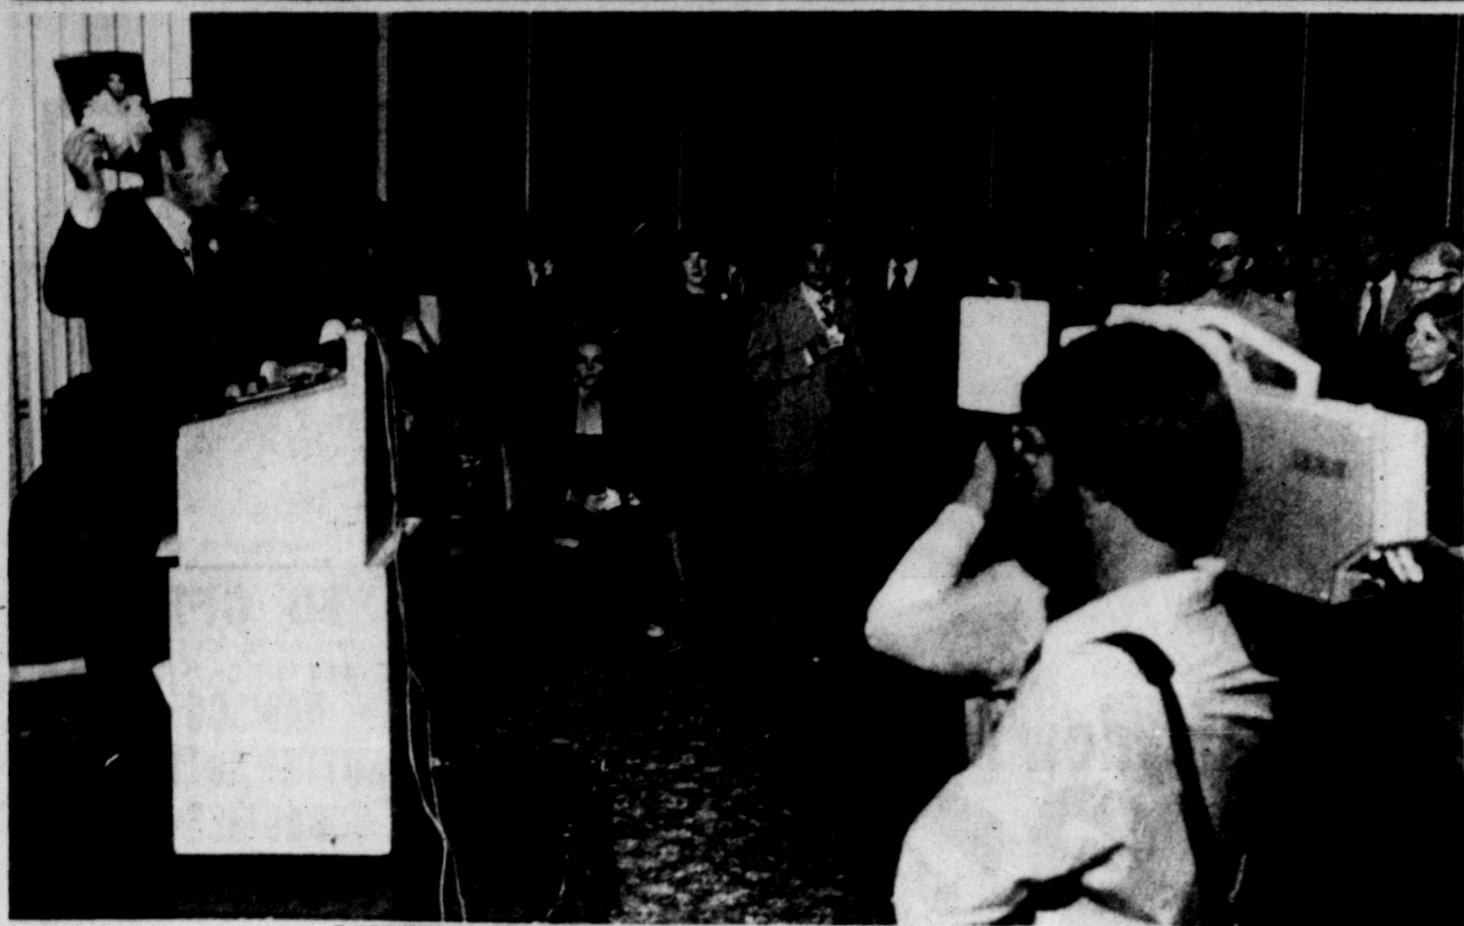

The maximum penalty for the offense is six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Allison said paupers' oaths had been filed for seven of the defendants.

Sakowitz coming to Midland

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

Sakowitz Inc., a high-fashion specialty store, will be the fourth anchor store at Midland Park Mall.

Announcement of plans for the store's construction was made Wednesday in conjunction with grand opening events of the mall.

Other anchor stores already open are Sears and Dillard's. J.C. Penney is to begin construction soon.

Robert T. Sakowitz of Houston, president and chief executive officer of Sakowitz, said in Midland that construction of the 35,000 square foot store should begin in spring of 1981. It is scheduled to open in the fall of 1982.

"In concert with our ongoing program of expansion into areas with basic primary industry, the Midland-Odessa area certainly could not be overlooked," said Robert Sakowitz, who was also representing Bernard Sakowitz, chairman of the board.

"ALTHOUGH SMALL but rapidly growing in numbers of people, the power of the community in natural resource orientation is unquestioned and tertiary industry bank deposits are more than sufficient evidence of its importance in financial services and distribution industries," he continued. "As we follow the tree line for residential growth in Houston, we follow the energy industries in our growth pattern for stability of future business."

"We know that the Permian Basin area supplies 22 percent of America's total oil and gas usage and recognize the economic impact on the community. The Midland-Odessa area is obviously a place where the Sakowitz form of service and product knowledge fits and where it will be appreciated," said Sakowitz.

Interior structural design of the store will utilize angular and curving walls, a unique system of varying ceiling heights and floor levels, a marble sunken center well with clerestoried skylight, which all blend and are designed to resemble a vertical diamond. The effect of the diamond, explained Sakowitz, tends to create space and openness in the center accessories and home furnishings areas, while diminishing to the perimeters to create intimacy and personalized shopping experiences with apparel.

ALL FIXTURES, wall coverings and floor coverings will be custom made to Sakowitz specifications. Counter fixtures will be made of early American Appalachian white oak and glass, and others are angular plexiglass and chrome. Floor coverings will be in earth tone gradations with the textural "all surfaces in lacquer. Suede and natural hemp will create a complementary effect to the spatial experience.

"We've studied the lifestyle of the Permian Basin area resident and we feel our new store will fulfill many of their desires and several of their needs," said Sakowitz. He added that the Midland Park Mall store represents what he called "a unique marketing concept of creating a completely edited jewel of a store offering carefully selected fashion from all over the world for a specific demographic area."

Architects for Sakowitz at the mall are Hellmuth, Obata and Kassabaum Inc.

Sakowitz said that they are also planning and have allocated sufficient structure and parking for future expansion to a two-story, 70,000 square foot store.

TO SIMPLIFY shopping, each member of the Sakowitz staff will be trained to cater to an individual client regardless of store department areas. "We call this approach 'one to one' service, and it's already been proven successful in the Sakowitz II at Champions and NASA stores in Houston," Sakowitz explained. "It also facilitates total wardrobe planning, a growing trend in sophisticated fashion shopping throughout America."

The store represents a floor plan that has been designed utilizing the Sakowitz I.D.A. concept of merchandising—innovational, directional and acceptational. "Innovational" areas of merchandise and fashion are located in the center core of the store, "directional" areas fan out from the center, and "acceptational" areas form the perimeter. While there is a definite partition of merchandise areas, there are no floor-to-ceiling walls to create a finite separation.

"We are enthusiastic about our new home in the Midland Park Mall and we look forward to being of service to our new neighbors who believe in the Sakowitz concept of specialized merchandising and service in an elegant but intimate surrounding," he continued.

SAKOWITZ INC. is a 78-year-old privately owned and family operated fashion specialty store with headquarters in Houston. Since 1902, the company has expanded to several stores in the Houston area, and in Amarillo, Dallas, and Scottsdale, Ariz.

Several more stores are also under construction in Dallas and one in Tulsa, Okla.

The Sakowitz catalogs are received in all 50 states and many foreign countries, and also constitute a "separate store" facility.

Iraq will recognize government-in-exile

PARIS (AP) — Shahpour Bakhtiar, Iran's last prime minister before the Khomeini regime took power, has not formed a government-in-exile and has no immediate plans to do so in light of the Iran-Iraq border war, a spokeswoman for Bakhtiar said today.

An American newspaper, the Atlanta Constitution, today reported that Iranian exiles bent on overthrowing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini expect Iraq to recognize Bakhtiar as leader of a provisional Iranian government.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified Iranian opposition sources in the West, said the coalition of exiles would be led by Bakhtiar and Gen. Gholam Oveissi, with Ayatollah Khomeini, an Iranian living in Iraq, serving as leader of the clergy.

But Bakhtiar's secretary said today that the report was not true. She added that Bakhtiar is in Paris, not Baghdad.

Other Iranian sources close to Bakhtiar acknowledge that both he and Oveissi have close relations with Iraq and said it would not be surprising that if such a government-in-exile ever formed Iraq would recognize it.

"But somebody first must form this government," the source, who declined to be identified, said. "I know that Bakhtiar has not produced any government-in-exile."

In its report, the Constitution said prominent Iranian anti-Khomeini ayatollahs in both battling countries intend to denounce Khomeini as a false holy man and call on the Shiite Islamic people of Iran to renounce their allegiance to him.

Iraq has permitted both Bakhtiar and Oveissi to broadcast daily messages from radio transmitters located in Baghdad, Iraq's capital, the newspaper said.

Iraqi officials in Washington declined comment on the report.

Since last spring, Iraqis have assisted Kurdish tribesmen who have been fighting, with the blessings of Bakhtiar and Oveissi, against Iranian forces, the newspaper said.

Other Iranian sources said thousands of Iranian officers and men who have fled persecution from Khomeini's frequent military purges are gathering throughout the West to invade Iran under the direction of Oveissi and other exiled Iranian generals, the Constitution said.

Capital of Iran calm

TOKYO (AP) — Residents of the Iranian capital are calm, despite an air raid against the Tehran airport by Iraqi warplanes early this week and nightly blackouts, a resident of the city said today.

"Life is quite normal in Tehran, nothing special is going on," said the resident, who was telephoned by The Associated Press from Tokyo. He added that the Iranian army had been mobilized and "they are asking for volunteers."

He said there have been no further attacks since Monday's air raid against the military section of Tehran's Mehrabad international airport.

"There was not much damage. They just destroyed three fighters and a transport plane," said the resident, who asked not to be named. He said three people died.

He reported that "tens of thousands of people" marched through the streets of the capital the day after the attack in a demonstration against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

"The mood of the people is calm, but they are very angry at Iraq. More demonstrations are planned during Friday prayers at Tehran University," he said. The campus was the site of massive anti-American demonstrations late last year.

The resident said Iranian newspapers and radio broadcasts carried reports of fighting along the border between the oil-producing nations, "including the siege of Abadan and Khorramshahr," adjacent cities in Iran's Khuzestan province. He expressed confidence that the two cities would not fall to Iraqi forces.

The resident reported no fresh news on the condition of the 52 American hostages spending their 327th day of captivity in Iran today. The Iranian Parliament, or Majlis, has postponed debate on the hostages' fate "until further notice."

American evacuees in Amsterdam

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The first American evacuees from the Iraqi war zone arrived in Western Europe early today on a chartered flight that brought 241 employees of a New Jersey construction company and members of their families.

Most of the evacuees were Americans, Britons and Canadians. They fled to Kuwait in a bus convoy of about 1,000 persons from Basra, the big Iraqi port 35 miles from the Persian Gulf, after several Iranian planes bombed and strafed a $1.1-billion petrochemical plant that the Lummus Construction Co. of Bloomfield, N.J., was building there.

A Lummus spokesman said two more plane-loads of evacuees would be coming to Amsterdam. The company said it employed about 2,000 persons in Iraq, including about 300 Americans.

The company's headquarters in New Jersey said 10 of its employees — three Americans, four Britons, two West Germans and an Indian — were missing since the attack Tuesday morning. It said the missing Americans were Harvey W. Johnson of Dickinson, Texas; Sidney Grant of Tucson, Ariz., and Luke Cline of Johnson City, Tenn.

Most of the first arrivals refused to talk to reporters. Three men were taken from the plane in wheelchairs with what appeared to be minor leg injuries. Several women wept.

One of the evacuees, personnel administrator James Tilburg of Shreveport, La., said two Iranian planes attacked the housing and administration areas about 6:15 a.m., dropping about eight bombs. But he said none of the bombs hit the petrochemical plant itself, which was nearly completed.

Tilburg, who said he did two combat tours in Southeast Asia, indicated the raiders aimed for the housing blocks rather than the plant. But he said most of the employees had gone to work at 6 a.m., 15 minutes before the attack.

Tilburg's wife, Carolyn, who has lived at the complex for three years, said she was making tea when the bombing started. She said the families at the plant had become increasingly worried in recent days because of low-flying planes and the sound of gunfire in the distance.

"Most of us got away safely," said Jack M.

Edwards, 61, an air-conditioning engineer from White, Ga., "but I saw two British employees from Lloyd's of London being blown to pieces by a bomb while I was having breakfast only 100 yards away."

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Why can't you settle it yourselves?

HOW is it that when you have something against another Christian, you "go to law" and ask a heathen court to decide the matter instead of taking it to other Christians to decide which of you is right?

Don't you know that some day we Christians are going to judge and govern the world? So why can't you decide even these little things among yourselves?

Don't you realize that we Christians will judge and reward the very angels in heaven? So you should be able to decide your problems down here on earth easily enough.

Why then go to outside judges who are not even Christians?

I am trying to make you ashamed. Isn't there anyone in all the church who is wise enough to decide these arguments?

But, instead, one Christian sues another and accuses his Christian brother in front of unbelievers.

To have such lawsuits at all is a real defeat for you as Christians. Why not just accept mistreatment and leave it at that? It would be far more honoring to the Lord to let yourselves be cheated.

But, instead, you yourselves are the ones who do wrong, cheating others, even your own brothers.

Don't you know that those doing such things have no share in the kingdom of God? Don't fool yourselves. Those who live immoral lives, who are idol worshippers, adulterers or homosexuals—will have no share in His kingdom. Neither will thieves or greedy people, drunkards, slanderers, or robbers.

There was a time when some of you were just like that but now your sins are washed away, and you are set apart for God, and He has accepted you because of what the Lord Jesus Christ and the Spirit of our God have done for you.

Processors soon to use tenderizers in red meats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat processors will shortly be allowed to begin using tenderizers in all red meat and mature poultry.

Currently, tenderizers are only allowed in beef, but starting Oct. 6 the Agriculture Department rule will expand to include other red meats, such as pork and lamb, as well as mature poultry.

However, if tenderizers are used on meat, this must be indicated on the label right next to the name of the product.

Allowed tenderizers are enzymes, and if any substance other than water is used in making the enzyme solution, that must also be noted on the label, explained Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

The rule would allow processors to use the enzymes papain, bromelin, ficin, aspergillus oryzae and the aspergillus flavus oryzae, which Ms. Foreman said are generally recognized as safe for human use by the Food and Drug Administration.

The labels would have to include the name of the enzyme used for tenderizing, such as "tenderized with papain."

Butchers defy veal ban

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Italian butchers sold veal Wednesday in defiance of a court order banning the meat because it contains estrogens hazardous to public health.

The nationwide ban issued Tuesday ordered all fresh and frozen veal seized and prohibited its sale or use in baby food.

"We just read the story in the newspapers, we did not get any official word," a Milan butcher said. "Customers are asking for veal and I am selling it."

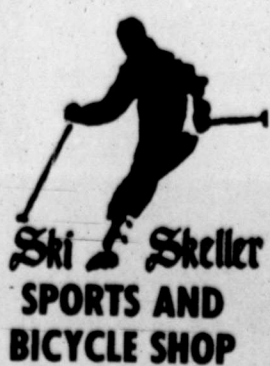

The ban also applies to imported veal. Italy has the largest per capita consumption of veal in Europe, consuming 212,000 metric tons annually, according to government statistics.

Sheriff returns clothing to troublesome prisoners

EDGARD, La. (AP) — A sheriff who took the clothes of about a dozen prisoners and put them on a diet of bread and water following a jailhouse revolt, said Wednesday the jail is back to normal.

Lloyd Johnson ordered the discipline for 11 of the 36 prisoners in the jail on Sept. 12 who went on rampage setting fires. He took their prison uniforms and removed mattresses from their cells. Prisoners also complained that they were denied soap and toilet paper.

"What do you do with somebody you already have in jail," Johnson said Tuesday when asked about his methods of discipline. "We're not talking about someone in here for running a stop sign."

Johnson met with attorneys for some of the prisoners on Monday and informed them that the inmates' privileges would be returned one by one if they continued to behave themselves.

He said they could have visitors again by Sunday if all goes well.

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney John Volz in New Orleans said his office was not getting involved in the matter.

"It would not appear that the sheriff's conduct would amount to a violation of federal criminal law or deprivation of civil rights," Volz said.

Johnson said the jail disturbance began when prisoners complained about the food and threw their plates on the floor.

"We asked them to clean it up," Johnson said. "You can imagine what they told the warden."

Later, prisoners began setting fire to mattresses, he said, and some inmates took off their prison uniforms and set fire to them also.

They even set fire to the toilet paper in their cells, the sheriff said.

While being disciplined, the prisoners were given one hot meal every three days, Johnson said. He said they have since been put back on a regular schedule of three hot meals a day.

"Society wants prisoners to be treated like humans, and I'm the first one to agree with them," he said. "Nobody should be treated to what I've read about, seen in the movies, where they went in the back and beat prisoners."

"We don't beat prisoners here." Johnson also said he has received phone calls from around the country since his disciplinary measures made the national news.

"All complimentary," he said. "They liked what I did."

Fred Simon, left, developer of Midland Park Mall; Terry Eoff, Miss Texas; and Robert T. Sakowitz, president and chief executive of Sakowitz, pose for their picture at a reception for the grand opening festivities of the mall. The mall's "Extravagranda" began with the lavish Wednesday night reception and will continue through tonight with many special activities and celebrities scheduled to appear. (Staff Photo)

Mall begins 'Extravagranda'

The grand opening "Extravagranda" at Midland Park Mall should provide Midlanders and Permian Basin residents with an interesting evening of entertainment.

Today marked the official grand opening of the 750,000 square foot retail store facility at 4511 N. Midkiff Road. National and local celebrities are on hand to help celebrate and add to the festive atmosphere.

Midland Mayor G. Thane Akins has proclaimed the opening as "The Great West Texas Balloon Race" day. At 6 p.m., 15 hot air balloons will take to the West Texas skies in a hound and hare race to benefit the local and national Cerebral Palsy organizations.

Corporate sponsors have donated $1,000 for each balloon participating. About 75 percent of the funds will go to the local Cerebral Palsy organization with the balance allocated to the national organization.

The race will take place in a field across from the mall. Some local and national celebrities will be flying in several of the balloons.

Inside the mall, nostalgic buffs can wander through some television history with the arrival of the masked man, the original Lone Ranger, Clayton Moore.

A "Save the Mask" rally is slated to begin at 6:30 p.m. in the mall's center court. Moore will be appealing to Midlanders to help him regain the legendary black mask which he made famous.

For more than 30 years, Moore has portrayed the famous Western law enforcer along with the faithful Indian friend, Tonto, as portrayed by Jay Silverheels.

Earlier this year, Silverheels died at the age of 67.

Last September, a California court stripped Moore of his right to wear the mask. The Wrather Corporation, which owns the rights of the Lone Ranger character, plans to make a new Lone Ranger movie.

However, they said Moore was too old to play the part and are replacing him with a younger version.

Following Moore's rally, Midlanders and celebrities will try to outwit the glib tongue of Lou Goldstein in "Simon Says," the children's game made famous in ABC television's "Battle of the Network Stars."

The intricate game of following directions is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the mall's center court area.

Goldstein is universally recognized as the master of the game. "Simon Says" gave him national recognition in other television shows like the "Mike Douglas Show" and "Kids Are People, Too."

Another domino creation will bite the dust at 8 p.m. as the domino wizard, Bob Specia, sets up 8,000 to 10,000 dominoes and knocks them down. The new art form is expected to take place near the Sears center courtyard.

Specia is one of the very few people in the world who makes his living as a professional domino toppler. This craft has earned him recognition through television shows like "To Tell the Truth," "Mike Douglas Show," "Today," the "Tonight Show" and David Frost's "Guinness Book of World Records."

His work started out as a hobby while in high school. He made the Guinness Book of World Records by toppling 5,555 dominoes in September, 1974.

His largest topple was 100,000 dominoes in 1978 at New York's Manhattan Center to benefit the National Hemophilia Foundation. This feat took him nine days and 32 minutes to set up.

Injections may be alternative to face-lifts

The face-lift, the medical approach used to give a woman, and sometimes a man, a beautiful, young-looking skin, may be replaced to some extent in the next five years by injection of collagen in a procedure that will do the job better.

This is the forecast, according to an article in the September issue of Harper's Bazaar, of Dr. Norman Orentreich, clinical associate professor of dermatology at the New York University School of Medicine, director of the Orentreich Medical Group, and a man whose name usually crops up when the "beautiful people" talk about dermatologists.

"They're now trying to make injectable forms of collagen, a product that is accepted by the skin, that's non-allergenic, long-lasting and easy to use," Orentreich is quoted as saying. He is among the researchers.

The American Heritage Dictionary defines collagen as the "fibrous albuminoid constituent of bone, cartilage and connective tissue."

"If we can produce it," says Orentreich, "it would mean getting the end product directly into the skin rather than using silicone to stimulate collagen production. Injectable collagen (which would be used for deep scars and wrinkling as silicone is used now) would work faster than silicone."

"All a face-lift does is to excise some skin and stretch the remaining skin so that the face looks more taut. Face-lifts don't do anything to restore the skin's elasticity. Now they're trying to find ways to strengthen elastic-like fibres or get them to regenerate so your face 'fits' as it did when you were younger."

Other than use of silicone, the dermatologist reports, the "three Rs" of cosmetic surgery are used now — redraping, resurfacing and replacing the skin.

Why, Harper's Bazaar asked him, did the average patient seek cosmetic procedures. Sometimes for economic reasons, to be longer able to compete in the job market, Dr. Orentreich said. Sometimes for social reasons. "But the majority because they want to feel better about themselves. People want to look well, they want to put their best face forward."

What's new on the market? THE PRODUCT — A cyanoacrylate adhesive with a clog-resistant applicator.

Manufacturer's claim — That the applicator simplifies the use of this type of fast-setting, clear, strong adhesive ... that only a single drop is required to hold 5,000 pounds ... that it resists water, extreme temperatures and most chemicals ... that it is recommended for use on a variety of non-porous materials such as glass, steel, aluminum, most plastics, rubber and ceramics ... that there is none of the uncontrolled application and mess sometimes associated with this type of adhesive.

THE PRODUCT — An exterior finish designed for use over weathered aluminum or steel siding.

Manufacturer's claim — That this refinishing material is a latex coating formulated to resemble the sheen, surface and performance characteristics of original baked-on enamels ... that the new film minimizes accumulation of dirt, resists peeling, blistering and mildewing ... and that colors are fade-resistant after a 30-minute drying period.

THE PRODUCT — A sealing system for doors.

Manufacturer's claim — That this do-it-yourself kit includes weatherseals for the perimeter of the jamb, a door sweep which mounts on the door bottom and a pair of corner seals for the bottom corners of the frame where the other seals join ... that the seals are invisible when the door is closed ... and that they won't shrink, crack, rot, corrode, fade or develop mildew.

Save on home repairs

The cost of home repairs, like everything else these days, is rising steadily. The intelligent consumer, therefore, relies heavily on preventative measures in all areas of home maintenance. And that includes the oft-overlooked septic tank. Just a few effortless precautions can save you costly service fees, and even higher costs for serious breakdowns.

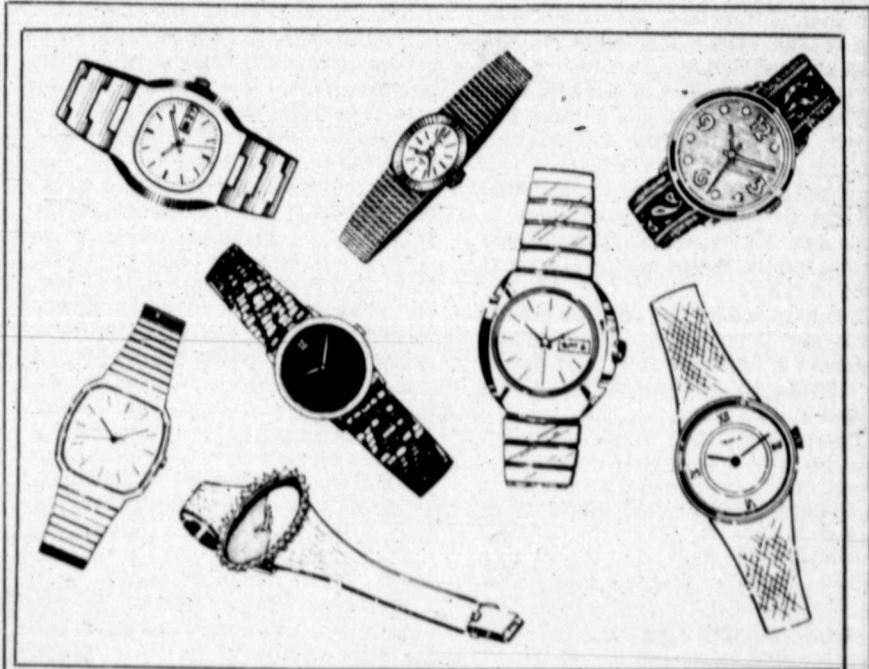

Too keep your septic tank in top condition this winter:

- Never flush anything that is difficult to break down, such as disposable diapers, facial tissues, cigarette butts, coffee grounds, plastic, or cat litter into the septic system.

- Never pour harsh chemicals, such as lye-based products and drain cleaners, into the system. They can destroy bacteria necessary for the breakdown of solid wastes.

- Avoid overworking the system by using too much water. Overuse can cause sewage to be released from the tank before it has been sufficiently digested.

- Pour 1 cup baking soda down your drain or toilet every week. Baking soda, the easy, inexpensive way to prevent septic tank problems, creates a favorable pH environment for better sewage digestion. Just 1 cup of baking soda in an average tank (300-750 gal.) helps prevent odors, corrosion, clogging and backing up. (Larger tanks require more baking soda.) Be sure to add the baking soda every week; as water and sewage are introduced into the tank, an equal amount of liquid leaves the tank for the drainage field, which means the amount of baking soda in the tank is reduced as well.

Make a toilet brush headrest

DEAR HELOISE: Toilet bowl brushes don't seem to last very long. Stop and think — do you swish the brush around in the toilet bowl, shake it out, and store it?

the house for a little plastic bucket or container. Make sure the old brush head is clean, then put it in the bottom of the container to rest the new brush on. It will help to keep it new longer. — H.A.H.

Positively true! You're a real smartie to have thought of saving the old brush to prop the new one on. Sure is going to stretch those brush-buying dollars. Thanks! — Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE: Our 4-year-old grandson was busily helping his father rake leaves. A gust of wind scattered those he had worked so hard to gather into a pile.

Without a word to anyone, he looked skyward and said: "Now, did you HAVE to do that?" — Mrs. J.C.F.

Don't we all know just how your little one felt! Thanks for giving us a chuckle and making our day a little brighter. — Hugs, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE: To make quicker, but still very good pastry tarts, buy a can of the flaky-type biscuits — the kind that is in layers.

Pull the layers apart to the desired thickness, roll them on a floured board into thin circles, then place each circle around the bottom of muffin tin cups (on the outside, not on the INSIDE of the tins).

Bake in a moderately hot oven until done, then fill with your favorite recipe for tart fillings.

A dieter's dream

By ERMA BOMBECK

I saw an ad for a new diet the other day that will never get off the ground. It's called "STARVE."

The woman pictured with the article looked terrible. Her face was drawn, her eyes looked tortured, her bust sagged, and her neck looked like a candidate for chicken stock.

The diet promised you nothing but work, sacrifice, and a 15-pound weight reduction in a YEAR if you changed your eating habits. No pills. No hot-air jumpsuits. No staples in your ear. No hypnosis. Just sensible eating habits. Who wants to hear that kind of talk?

I want to believe the ads that tell me I can lose 12 pounds as I sleep just by wearing a "strangle suit" and awake to slimmer thighs, smooth hips and a caved-in waistline.

I want to try the "magic formula" that up until now only famous Hollywood and TV stars could afford but is now available to me in a plain wrapper.

I want to believe that I can lose three pounds a week lounging in a chair eating french fries, thanks to a weight reduction light bulb that also makes me tan.

I am hypnotized by the words, "MELT AWAY INCHES," "THE MORE YOU EAT THE MORE YOU LOSE" and "LOSE UP TO SIX POUNDS BEFORE WE CASH YOUR

Dieters are like that. They cannot handle the truth. They live on promises and fantasies and actually believe that in days they'll be walking around the house wearing five-inch heels with a bathing suit and have hair halfway down their backs just by putting a checkmark next to a little box that says, "Yes! I want to free myself from fat bondage forever!"

If you've ever wondered who reads those full-page testimonials with the before-and-after pictures and a headline that reads, "I WAS TOO FAT TO LOVE..." I do.

Somehow, no matter how disgusted I am with myself, I am never as bad as Tanya who wore coveralls at her wedding and surprised her husband one weekend by losing 325 pounds.

Last week, I saw a provocative ad in which a man built like Arnold Schwarzenegger was crashing through the surf carrying a nymph in a bikini who weighed about 36 pounds. (I've roasted larger chickens than that.) The headline challenged, "When was the last time your husband carried you anywhere?"

As I wrote out a check my husband said, "Surely you're not going to fall for that picture of the girl in the surf?"

"I can't lose," I said. "If I'm not completely satisfied in 30 days, I can return an unused husband and get a new one."

Professor breaks myths about spiders

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — There's no reason to be afraid of spiders, according to professor Lenny Vincent, who shows off preserved specimens that have bitten the dust but little else.

Vincent, who conducts courses on spiders at the University of California, says spiders are hardly the ferocious creatures they have been made out to be. Living proof, he says, is Rosebud, a huge, hairy tarantula with a leg span of 6 inches who often views the world from her perch on his shoulder.

Tarantula bites have little effect on people, he says. Of the supposed deadliness of the black widow, he says, "more people die of bee stings." Vincent, 32, says that in the nine years he's worked with spiders, not one has ever taken even a nibble. He doubts that many spiders could even break a person's skin.

Vincent says another myth is that the female spider eats her mate. "That's the exception," says Vincent. "In most cases the male leaves."

DEAR ABBY Bipartisan marriage may lead to split ticket

BY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a registered Republican desiring marriage to a Democrat who is every as loyal to his political party as I am to mine. We love each other and we music, religion and any other things in common, but I wonder if marriage between us will ever work out. I have seen many studies conducted that might give me an idea of what my chances are? If anyone knows, you do, Abby.—GRATEFUL O.P.

DEAR GRATEFUL: I know of no studies concerning mixed marriages between elephants and donkeys, but personally know of very few successful unions between these diversely different political animals. Should you elect to team up with a donkey, I suggest you keep your trunk packed.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago I took an inexpensive pin from a blouse in a department store. I didn't pay for it. I was even brash enough to wear it for years!

Even though I "got away with it," in the long run I was the loser because it has been on my conscience ever since. The regrets years later are not worth a moment of possession, and that single act could have led to taking bigger things.

Enclosed is a $10 bill. Please donate it to your favorite charity, Abby. It cannot repay for what I have done, but please tell your young readers that stealing anything—regardless of how cheap it is—leaves its mark on a person, even if she is never caught.—NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: I appreciate your desire to clear your conscience and give others the benefit of your experience, but sending me a $10 bill for my favorite charity is not appropriate restitution for the stolen article. Had you told me the name and location of the store, I would have sent the money to them. Perhaps it's not too late.

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter you received from the dad whose 15-year-old son hid racy girlie magazines in his room, I decided to share the way I handled the same problem with our three teen-age sons.

When I find a magazine of that type in their room, I remove it and in its place I leave a 3x5 index card with a Bible verse covering that very subject. I've never had a complaint from any of them, as they know from the verses that they are to "abstain from fleshly lusts."

Two or three cards per boy usually get the message across.—MOM IN PUYALLUP, WASH.

Now is the time to get a dental checkup

Many of us are winding down summertime activities and getting ready for the stepped-up pace of fall. It's also a good time to make those extra leisure moments really count. Something you can do to really help yourself is make a date for a checkup at the dentist.

If your dentist is like most modern dentists today, he will not only examine your teeth and gums carefully but will also give you constructive advice and instruction in how to care for them. "It's what we do day after day that determines largely the state of our dental health," says Dr. Howard Marshall, a New York periodontist and author of the new book "How to Save Your Teeth — The Preventive Approach."

"Many of the conditions that occur as a result of harmful plaque, a colorless layer of bacteria that can damage and destroy teeth and bone support, are preventable — using our present knowledge about saving teeth. If spotted early enough, most conditions that cause problems can be arrested or reversed before they do permanent damage."

We've come a long way in the last 10 years in understanding the techniques of how to save teeth through preventive methods. Applying these techniques, children can grow up today having minimal cavities — and people in their twenties and onwards can live their lives without loss of teeth.

Prevention starts with regular dental care and brushing with a fluoride dentifrice. To be effective, however, a total oral hygiene program calls for flossing to remove decaying food and bacterial plaque between the teeth and just under the gumline. Only dental floss can slide easily in tight areas to remove trapped plaque and food particles that you can't even feel. And, there is an added satisfaction to flossing; it gives the cleanest, freshest mouth you ever experienced.

Your dentist can explain the importance of flossing to avoid plaque buildup which can cause gum disease. The majority of adults have it. One of the interesting facts about gum disease is that it's often painless. But don't let that fool you. The signs to watch for are gums that are swollen, receding, sometimes bleed when brushing — or slightly loose teeth.

Very often it takes only a daily regimen of good brushing and flossing to eliminate gum problems. To floss, wrap about 18 inches of floss around your middle fingers. Using thumb and index fingers, guide the floss gently between the teeth.

THE BUTCHER

Mechanical meat tenderizers worth their cost

By MERLE ELLIS

Some method of making tough meat tender has been the quest of butchers and cooks alike since man first began to eat meat. My grandmother, I can remember, used to pound a steak with the side of a plate to accomplish that end. Every meat market where I have ever cut-up has had a "cube steak machine" — though it still may take a bit more chewing. Now there is a new machine — a mechanical blade tenderizer — appearing in more and more markets, and it works amazingly well. Mechanical blade tenderization is the perforation of muscle and its connective tissue by a series of sharp, slender blades. Boneless or bone-in cuts are placed on a conveyor and passed one or more times through the machine resulting in approximately 37 punctures per square inch. Research indicates that blade tenderization improves tenderness from 10 to 40 percent depending upon the muscle, the amount of connective tissue, the initial tenderness of the cut and the number of passes through the machine. Mechanical blade tenderization has a number of advantages over Grandma's plate and the "cube steak machine." For one, it works. I'm not sure the side of the plate ever really did: You can't tell by looking at the meat that it has been tenderized. You can't tell by tasting it either, because there is no change in flavor or juiciness with mechanically tenderized meat. All you can tell is that the meat is more tender. Cuts normally used for braising (cooking by moist heat) can be cooked by dry heat (roasted, broiled, pan fried.) In one test conducted on mechanical tenderization techniques by Texas A&M, good grade beef tenderloins were compared for tenderness with the same grade "eye-of-round" muscles. After two passes through the tenderizer, the eye-of-round steaks were equal in tenderness to the non-tenderized tenderloins. Cooking time also is affected by mechanical tenderizing. Both steaks and roasts cook faster than non-tenderized cuts. Industry data indicates a 20 to 30 percent reduction in cooking time, apparently because of the increased heat transfer due to the perforations. That means a potential energy saving with blade tenderized meats. Mechanical blade tenderizers have been used for the better part of a decade by packers and wholesalers who sell steaks to the Hotel and Restaurant Industry (HRI). Nothing is more important to a restaurant than consistent tenderness in the steaks they serve. As consumers, usually we will not complain if we get a tough piece of meat on occasion from our butcher, but when we pay the price for a steak in a restaurant, it had better be tender or we are apt never to return. Mechanical tenderizing provides insurance against that. Retail markets have been investing in mechanical tenderizers recently, and it's a sizable investment — $800 to $16,000 per machine. When a market spends that much money for a piece of equipment, you can be sure there is more than only customer satisfaction involved. There is a profit motive as well. Because of the tenderizing process, many of the less tender cuts of the chuck and round that normally are sold as roasts can be sold at a premium — as steaks. Other cuts that normally are too tough for anything but ground beef can be upgraded to roasts. Even lesser grades of beef, "USDA Good" or "Standard" can be utilized in place of "Prime" and "Choice" with consistent customer satisfaction. With all of those advantages, you very likely will be seeing more and more markets investing in mechanical blade tenderizers. You might even like to have one in your kitchen. Don't laugh, you can! Jaccard Corporation of Buffalo, N. Y., has come out with a mini tendering machine that works (on the same principle) every bit as well and costs a whole lot less — under $30 when I bought mine a month or so ago. It was first brought to my attention in a letter from a reader who raved about how much it had saved him on his meat bill: "...the machine will pay for itself in three or four months." I sent for one and was very agreeably surprised when it arrived. It is not just another kitchen gadget, it is a precision machine of quality manufacture. There are 48 blades set in three parallel rows of 16. The blades are thin and narrow and, like those of its commercial counterpart, penetrate the steak without pounding and with very modest pressure.

Simply place the meat to be tenderized on a wooden cutting board.

Restaurateur does not agree with town diet

By BILL CRIDER Associated Press Writer

NATCHITOCHES, La. (AP) — One cannot be too rich or too thin, the saying goes — but portly restaurateur James Lasyone doesn't like thin and never will.

He gazes with polite bafflement upon the occasional diet-conscious tourist who sits down in Lasyone's Meat Pie Restaurant to munch water-cress and lettuce leaves.

To Lasyone, a strict diet goes contrary to human nature. So he was not among those who felt that a state-supported diet experiment in this city of 16,000 would reduce business. Louisiana put up $40,000 to back a program based on the Pritikin diet, which is fat-free, salt-free, sugar-free, not much meat, lots of vegetables and grains.

FOOD LIKE THAT might make everybody healthier, though there is argument on that point. But there is no doubt that if such a diet ever really caught on it would turn the food industry inside out.

"I knew it wouldn't do well here," Lasyone said. "There are three things people are always going to do — drive their cars, watch TV, eat the food they like." Lasyone prospers by concentrating on the food they like.

He has to laugh when he remembers that everybody told him, 14 years ago, it would be a big mistake to quit work as a butcher and open a shop downtown to sell his subtly spiced meat pies — a kind of fritter stuffed with beef and pork.

"I said, 'Well, I am going to try it,' and I have been real successful." Today Lasyone's, a full grown restaurant instead of a meat pie shop, ranks as one of the city's chief tourist attractions.

THAT book groups for scenic trips in chartered buses include a stop at Lasyone's on the itinerary whenever a bus comes this way.

"One bus from New York was loaded with people from Spain and only one person on the bus could speak English," he said. "They had a heck of a time when some of them wandered off and got lost."

A magazine once contrasted Lasyone's plain but busy place with another restaurant to speculate on how he could thrive in a town off the beaten track, with little or no advertising, while the other one had to struggle.

Actually, Lasyone has not lacked for advertising — of the kind you can't buy.

It began with a magazine writer who stopped off for lunch eight years ago and wound up doing an article on the discovery of a jewel of a restaurant.

SINCE THEN LASYONE'S has shown up in other magazines, in newspapers, on network television.

A lot of mail comes in but Lasyone won't handle correspondence. "I only went to the sixth grade in school," he said. "My English is real bad and I can't type, so my wife handles all that."

Success has not changed his work habits. He puts on a white apron, sweats in the kitchen over hot stoves that redden his cheeks, and personally mixes the ingredients for his special meat pies. He keeps the recipe a secret.

He likes the work, the smell of a good kitchen, the food. Lasyone said he came from a big family and sometimes didn't have enough to eat.

"I vowed I would always have enough food," he said. "If I died tomorrow, I would know that I'd had enough to eat."

Liquid protein diet causes potentially fatal arrhythmias

BOSTON (AP) — The liquid protein diet, a weight-loss fad popular three years ago, causes potentially fatal irregular heartbeats and should be avoided, a study says.

The study, conducted at the University of Rochester Medical School, monitored six people as they ate nothing but commercially prepared liquid protein for 40 days. Three of the six experienced irregular heartbeats while dieting.

How to remove furniture spots

By ANDY LANG AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I bought an old coffee table at an antique shop. The finish was in very bad condition, so I removed it with a varnish remover. Most of it came out all right, but in a few places the old stain did not come out. It appears to be a kind of reddish color. I sanded those areas, but it didn't seem to help. Is there any way to remove the spots?

A. — The stain seems to have penetrated too deeply to be removed by ordinary means. You will have to bleach the wood. Use a commercial wood bleach, the type sold in hardware stores, lumber yards and home centers or almost any place that sells paints and varnishes. The directions must be followed very carefully, especially those that relate to how the wood must be cleaned after the bleach has been used.

"A liquid protein diet is frequently associated with potentially life-threatening arrhythmias," or irregular heartbeats, even though the problem does not show up on ordinary electrocardiograms, the researchers wrote.

Their study, published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, concluded, "We recommend that the use of liquid protein diets should be terminated pending further investigation of the causes and of prevention of the cardiac toxicity."

The liquid protein diet became popular in 1977 after publication of the book, "The Last Chance Diet." That year, the Center for Disease Control found that 98,000 American women took liquid protein for at least a month.

The Food and Drug Administration says the diet may have been a factor in 60 deaths. It faded in popularity after the agency issued a warning about possible hazards.

Dallas schools pay big legal fees

DALLAS (AP) — Legal fees for the Dallas Independent School District amounted to almost $800,000 during the past 12 months, district records reveal.

Internal investigations into improper business practices and a lengthy legal fight concerning admission of illegal aliens boosted the school system's attorney bill to $796,112 during its fiscal year 1979-1980, which ended Aug. 31.

The report to school board trustees said the fees were $262,000 more than was paid in the previous fiscal year for legal expenses.

Tips on using wood as a primary heating fuel

Wood is enjoying a resurgence in American homes as the search for alternative energy sources increases with every price hike for oil, natural gas and electricity.

In the mid-1800s, wood accounted for 90 percent of all fuel consumed in the United States. But by 1970 — before the Arab oil embargo — the figure was a scant 1.5 percent. Even in New England, only 1 percent of the houses were heated primarily with wood.

Today, about one of every five New England homeowners uses wood as his primary heating fuel. One out of two uses wood as an auxiliary heating fuel. Cool winter nights are a common occurrence even in the far southern and western sections of the country and residents there are finding that it is cheaper to burn wood for a couple hours than to turn on a conventional heating system or use electric space heaters. There is also an appreciation for the aesthetic and romantic values of wood fire's warming glow.

Unlike fossil fuels, wood is a renewable resource. Burning wood generates fewer irritating pollutants than most fuels, and its ash is useful as a garden fertilizer.

Before you burn wood, you should know these ten basic tips, taken from "Energy-Saving Projects for the Home," published this fall by Ortho Books:

1. Unless your physical stamina is high, and you know what you're doing, leave woodcutting to the more experienced person. In spite of the rustic, Paul Bunyon-like image that the initial thought of woodcutting evokes, it is not a light task. Prevent accidents by learning about proper techniques and the right tools. Safer yet, purchase the wood you need from a reputable supplier. Saving energy should not be any harder than it is already.

2. Buy wood early — from six months to a year before you plan to use it — so that it may dry, or "season." Dry wood lights faster and stays lit more easily than wet wood. Generally, dry wood is cleaner and easier to handle, and it produces less creosote — the thick, brownish paste that builds up inside your chimney stack. Splitting logs hastens drying.

3. Remember that wood is measured by the "cord." A standard cord is eight feet long, four feet high and four feet wide. Most wood used in residential fireplaces is sold by the "short cord" or "face cord," which has the same length and height as a standard cord, but is only one log's length deep.

A short cord of dry, dense hardwood weighs approximately one ton. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, a short cord provides as much heat as a half ton of coal, 75 to 90 gallons of No. 2 fuel oil, or 12,000 cubic feet of natural gas. It's no small wonder that energy-conscious Americans are rediscovering wood.

4. Buy softwoods — such as pine, spruce, and fir — if you want a quick warming fire, or a brief fire that will burn out before you go to bed. Because they are resinous, softwoods are easy to ignite. They burn rapidly with a hot flame, and therefore need more attention and frequent feeding.

5. Buy hardwoods — such as ash, beech, birch, maple and oak — for longer lasting fires. Because the wood fiber is more dense, hardwoods burn slowly and with a short flame. Once ablaze, hardwoods radiate a steady glow that will last an evening. Start a fire with softwoods, then add the harder wood.

6. Buy wood from fruit and nut trees to add a pleasant aroma to your fire. The wood from apple, cherry, beech, hickory and pecan trees are the most popular. These woods are more expensive than the other woods, and should be used only to supplement, not replace, your basic supply of softwood and hardwood.

7. Remember when you order the logs in the hot summer or balmy fall, that you will very much regret stacking them in a far corner of your yard when blistery cold winter sets in. Try stacking them near the outside door closest to the fireplace.

8. But keep the wood away from the sides of the house to prevent any insects in the wood from finding a ready refuge. If possible, stack wood on a slight mound, as the earth tends to stay drier than flat ground.

9. Stack wood in a chimney formation to promote drying. Place two logs side by side on the ground, less than one log's length apart. Place another two on top, but at right angles to the first two. Continue to build the stack in this manner.

10. Make your fireplace energy efficient. Ninety percent of the heat generated by a fire in a conventional house goes up the chimney in what is called "stack loss." Also, as your fire burns, enormous amounts of cold, outside air may be sucked into your house through leaks in windows, walls, and other cracks and crevices. This is called the "chimney effect" of a fire, and in a poorly weatherized house it can severely offset the heat generated by the fire.

Ortho's "Energy-Saving Projects for the Home," which will be available throughout the country this October, suggests several ways you can make your fireplace more fuel efficient.

One, install a damper to minimize heat loss up a chimney when no fire is burning.

Two, install heat resistant glass doors in front of the hearth to block the chimney effect. They will help save fuel dollars and add to a home's overall comfort level.

Three, use a heat exchanger, either ready-made or homemade. A fireplace heat exchanger basically is a grate made of several lengths of one inch pipe curved like the letter "C".

When a fire blazes in the center of the heat exchanger, cold air from the room is drawn into the open ends of the pipes at the bottom. It is heated by the fire, and then blown out the top ends of the pipes, back into the room.

Burning wood in the family fireplace can be cost effective and an enjoyable way to warm your house, or it can be of no value at all, and frustrating as well. Follow these tips and you will be well on your way to making the most of wood as an alternative fuel source for heating your home this winter.

Questions and answers about Social Security benefits

Copley News Service

Q. I'm confused about one of your items which spoke about divorced wife's benefits. Are you talking about alimony or is there another benefit for divorced wives?

A. I was married for 27 years prior to our divorce. — D.A.P.

A. Social Security benefits are payable to a divorced spouse at age 62 (for a wife or husband) or at age 60 (for a widow or widower) if they had been married for at least 10 years prior to the divorce and if they are unmarried when they apply for benefits.

Q. If a person is receiving Social Security Disability Benefits and SSI payments, and they are admitted for care in a qualified nursing care home, will the SSI payments terminate?

A. Also, the Social Security check goes directly to the nursing home and the person is given $25 per month for necessities by the home from the Social Security check. Is this correct procedure? — F.R.H.

A. The SSI payment would terminate if the person becomes a patient in a public or private medical treatment facility and receives substantial support from Medicaid.

If there were no Social Security or other benefits payable, the SSI amount would be reduced to $25 for a person in similar circumstances. The $25 per month which the patient receives for incidental expenses seems to be a fairly standard figure.

Questions on Social Security may be sent to Copley news Service in care of this newspaper. This column is based on information provided by the Social Security Office in San Diego, Calif.

Mayo Clinic expert says he doesn't know if using tampons is dangerous

By The Associate Press

Dr. Kenneth Noller is a consultant in obstetrics and gynecology at the Mayo Clinic, but even an expert like Noller can't answer the question troubling many women today: Is it dangerous to use tampons?

"I tell patients I don't know yet," said Noller. "It's hard to know what to counsel."

Dr. Walter Schleich of the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta has no definite answer, either. The CDC isn't advocating that women give up tampons, he said. But at the same time, it may be safer to use fewer tampons and use them less frequently, the center suggests.

The confusion stems from a rare, but sometimes fatal disease called toxic shock syndrome. The CDC has received reports of 299 cases of toxic shock this year. And 25 deaths due to toxic shock have been reported, all of them women, since 1975.

CHARACTERIZED BY HIGH fever, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and a rash, the illness usually strikes women, particularly those under 30, and has been linked by the CDC with the use of tampons during the menstrual period. About 50 million women use tampons.

The latest apparent victim was a 16-year-old St. Louis girl, Robin Spooner, who died Tuesday. The infection "erupted through her system like a bomb," said her father, Robert Spooner.

The Food and Drug Administration, which is investigating the problem, on Wednesday urged women to stop using Rely tampons — the brand most closely linked to toxic shock. The FDA upgraded its earlier advisory against using Rely to a warning after results from a second study showing a much closer correlation between the disease and use of Rely brand than other tampons.

Procter & Gamble, which makes Rely, withdrew the product from stores on Monday after reports that more toxic shock victims used Rely than any other brand.

Miss Spooner had used Rely, her family said.

ONE DAY AFTER Rely was pulled off the market, three women who say they became ill from using that brand filed suits against Procter & Gamble. One is a class action filed by two women in San Francisco and seeks all the money Procter & Gamble has made from Rely. The other, filed in Tucson, Ariz., seeks $2.5 million in damages.

The FDA asked manufacturers to report by today on whether they have made any changes in their manufacturing processes that might be tied to toxic shock syndrome.

The risk of getting the disease is small — three in 100,000 women of menstruating age are affected annually. By contrast, more than 50 out of every 100,000 people get lung cancer every year.

While all the experts say a lot more study is needed, there are things women can do to avoid the disease, they say.

The CDC says that until the potential risks of Rely are more fully understood, women should use other brands. The FDA says women "may want to consider not using tampons or not using them continuously during their menstrual periods."

LYNN SCHIFF, the medical and nursing services coordinator for Planned Parenthood in New York City, advises women to use tampons only during the day and when they are away from home. At night and at home, she suggests, women should use sanitary napkins or minipads. The syndrome generally occurs during or just after the menstrual period. It apparently is caused by the staphylococcus aureus bacteria.

While there appears to be a pattern, some data defy explanation. For example: 5 percent of the reported cases of toxic shock syndrome have occurred in men. Some cases have been diagnosed in women who don't menstruate. And although tampons have been on the market since the 1930s, the disease wasn't recognized until the '70s.

There are several possible explanations — a new strain of bacteria and new materials in tampons — but no definite answers.

An absorbent compound used in Rely may be one reason that its users seem more susceptible to toxic shock.

AND CHANGES in the production of tampons may be a factor in the illness, said Dr. Jeffrey Davis, the state epidemiologist in the Wisconsin Division of Health. "Now they are mostly cotton-synthetic blends or all synthetic. Maybe some people can't tolerate those materials in place for 24 hours a day over a period of several days to a week."

Young women are more likely to use newer brands of tampons — like Rely, first introduced in 1974 and available nationwide early this year — and that may explain why the disease is more likely to strike women under 30, the CDC's Schleich said.

"This particular strain (of bacteria) may be relatively new," he added.

Dr. Joan Chesney, a physician at the University of Wisconsin said tampons are "probably at most a co-factor. There probably is a new or slightly altered form of staphylococcus and something about menses that allows the bacteria to be more virulent."

Staphylococcus aureus can live in the vaginal cavity and produce a toxin that may enter the bloodstream. But it also can cause skin and wound infections: a cut on the finger that becomes infected with the bacteria might lead to toxic shock. That would account for the occurrence of the disease in men and non-menstruating women.

In the FDA's second study, by the Utah state health department, researchers evaluated data on 24 toxic shock cases and 59 similar women in a control group. They found that 62 percent of the toxic shock cases used Rely compared with 24 percent of the controls. Among the other cases, 21 percent used Tampax brand, 8 percent used Playtex, 8 percent Kotex and none used o.b. Among the controls, 31 percent used Tampax, 29 percent used Kotex, 12 percent used Playtex and 5 percent used o.b.

The figures may not total 100 percent because women in the studies may have used more than one type of product during their periods.

The original study, conducted by the CDC, reviewed 50 toxic shock cases and 125 controls. It found 72 percent of the cases used Rely, 26 percent used Playtex, 10 percent used Tampax, 4 percent used Kotex, 4 percent used o.b. and none used Pursettes. Among the controls, 31 percent used Rely, 27 percent used Playtex, 19 percent used Tampax, 13 percent used Kotex, 10 percent used o.b. and none used Pursettes.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE Carter advancement has best-laid plans foiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — Part of a White House advancement job is to give the fast-traveling president a local item or two he can insert in his speech to make it appear he's familiar with the area he's visiting and aware of his listeners' concerns.

But last week in Houston, President Carter — never known for his fascination with spectator sports — mistook a "b" for a "t" and spoiled the best-laid plans of a vigilant staff.

"I would like you to know that I'm aware of some of your pressing local problems," Carter told a $2,500-a-plate fund-raising luncheon. "As soon as they get their timing down with Statler and his receivers, they'll be winning games every week and put Houston back in the top where you belong. The Oilers are a great team, Houston is a great city, and I'm grateful to all of you."

Members of the audience stared blankly at the president, no sign of recognition on their faces. All except one advance man, who cringed.

Carter was referring to the pro football Oilers' new quarterback, Ken Stabler, who had problems during Houston's opening game loss against Pittsburgh with his receivers dropping passes.

As if that weren't bad enough, one of those in the well-heeled audience was Joe Sambito, a relief pitcher for the Houston Astros baseball team, which is leading the National League West division.

"I can't believe he talked about the Oilers and didn't say anything about us," Sambito said afterward. The major league baseball player said he is a former Democrat now registered as an independent who was invited to see the president as a guest of two sports agents.

When he reached his home state of Georgia later in that campaign trip, Carter didn't need any help from his advance staff.

Before attending the dedication of the new Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport terminal, the president was given a tour of the facility's subways, moving sidewalks and other modern "people movers" designed to speed passengers to their flights.

"When I was running for governor and later serving as governor, when I was running for president, I promised myself that one of the first things I would help with was the improvement of the Atlanta airport," Carter told airport officials and employees at the dedication ceremony. "I don't know if you'll know where I learned how to jog."

"It was in the old airport," the modern air terminal, however, hasn't exactly made airport jogging obsolete. As Carter walked briskly from the ceremony to board Air Force One and become the first passenger to use the ultra-modern terminal, the White House staff and press corps traveling with him had to grab their bags and run several hundred yards to the chartered jet accompanying the president.

Chicago to hold own Grand Prix

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Jane Byrne, who recently returned from a European tour intent on giving this city more of an international flavor, has announced plans to set up a Chicago Grand Prix that will send race cars roaring around downtown streets.

The festival, to be held over the July 4 weekend at a cost of $2.5 million, will "showcase our city to the world," Mrs. Byrne said at a Tuesday news conference.

"Automobile racing is a true international sport and the impact of our motorsports weekend will focus worldwide attention on Chicago," she said.

The festival will include two sanctioned 50-lap races and a total purse of $500,000 for the winners. The races will be run around a 2.7-mile, 11-turn course centered on Grant Park, which abuts Lake Michigan on one side and fashionable downtown Michigan Avenue on the other.

Event spokesman Gary Cushman said the name "Chicago Grand Prix" was something of a misnomer because Formula I racing cars, which compete in the real Grand Prix tour, would not be involved. Can-Am-style and Indianapolis-style racers will be used instead.

Spokesmen for the event said part of the expense will be to resurface streets so the delicate racing machines won't be beaten to pieces. They also said the city stands to earn "several hundred thousand dollars."

Mrs. Byrne said she would be satisfied if the event broke even, and added that the city's economy would get a boost from the thousands of fans who would use hotels and restaurants.

Arnold Morton, chairman of the race organizing committee, said the group had contacted the necessary organizations "and the Chicago Grand Prix is on both the Can-Am and Indianapolis car racing schedules for 1981."

Panel will study new conferences

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — A national commission to study and recommend changes in the format of presidential news conferences will hold its first meeting Oct. 4 at the University of Virginia.

Former Virginia Gov. Linwood Holton and Ray Scherer, vice president of the RCA Corp. and former NBC White House correspondent, announced formation of the commission on Tuesday. They will serve as co-chairmen.

Holton criticized what he called "the circus-like atmosphere" of the news conferences in recent years.

"Neither the president nor the press and certainly not the American people, are served by the present system. And to continue it will only cause a further erosion of public confidence in the presidency, media and government," Holton said.

The commission's objective is to present the candidate elected president in November with a series of proposals for changes in the news conferences.

Other members of the commission are Douglas Cater, former special assistant to President Lyndon B. Johnson and now president of the Observer International; Julius Duschka, director of the Washington Journalism Center; Robert Pierpont, president of the White House Correspondents Association; James Rowe, former member of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's White House staff and now a Washington attorney; Carroll Kilpatrick, White House correspondent during administrations from Roosevelt to Richard Nixon; and Felicia Warburg Rogan, a Charlottesville civic leader.

Eton gets first woman teacher

ETON, England (AP) — Eton College, one of Britain's most exclusive private schools and a bastion of manly virtue, has chosen a French import to be the first woman teacher in its 540-year history.

School governors Tuesday took the wraps off Mademoiselle Elaine Vogel, a 27-year-old blonde Parisian who started giving French classes this term.

The arrival of a foreign belle at the school 20 miles west of London may have crusty old alumni huffing at the sight of skirts on the quadrangle and wondering about what's happening to the old school tie.

But the boys of Eton were quite happy to parlay.

"She's absolutely super," gushed one 16-year-old as the pert Frenchwoman turned on the Gallic charm for the 1,200 boys at the college founded by King Henry VI in 1440.

"I think French will be a popular class this term," another student said.

Mademoiselle Vogel, wearing a black skirted suit, white blouse and neck ribbon — the closest she could get to the Eton uniform of black striped tailcoat, white shirt and and bow-tie — Tuesday rehearsed judging the school's "Twit of the Year" contest, centerpiece of its annual fund-raising fair for charity.

Senate approves sale of nuclear uranium to India

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says the sale of 38 tons of reactor-grade uranium to India, which won Senate approval by a two-vote margin, will be the last unless India agrees to new nuclear safeguards.

The Carter administration welcomed Wednesday's hard-fought 48-46 victory and said the vote will strengthen its hand in trying to convince India to accept international non-proliferation safeguards.

The Senate's vote, a foreign policy victory for President Carter, came despite a warning from Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, that India is "the world's worst nuclear violator."

The White House hailed the "bipartisan" vote. Indeed, both parties were sharply divided on the issue. Twenty-four Democrats and 22 Republicans voted to block the sale; 31 Democrats and 17 Republicans voted to allow it.

The House voted its disapproval of the plan, 298-98, last week, but rejection by both houses was needed to halt the sale.

Administration lobbying was heavy in the hours before the Senate vote, with Carter calling several senators from Air Force One Tuesday night and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie making an unprecedented appearance before a group of Republicans.

And White House lobbyists were said to have reached some senators by telephone even as the vote progressed.

Leading Carter's forces in the intense, two-day floor debate, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, told his colleagues:

"These will be the last shipments we can make under the laws of the country and India is thus put on notice" that it must either agree to tighter controls or find another source of uranium, Church said.

The White House, in its arguments for the sale, had offered the same assurance that no further sales would be made unless India agreed to widened inspections.

Damaged warhead probably will be dismantled

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A shroud of secrecy continues to surround the status of a nuclear warhead damaged in an Arkansas explosion and brought to Texas, but officials insist the weapon is no longer dangerous.

E. C. Hardin, acting director of public affairs for the Department of Energy in Albuquerque, N.M., said the warhead was designed at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory and that its engineering was done by Sandia Laboratories — both in New Mexico.

"We had three people from Los Alamos and two from Sandia that went down to Damascus (Ark.)," Hardin said Wednesday. "They did everything needing to be done to make sure there was no danger."

He estimated it would be three or four weeks before personnel from the two labs arrive to work on the warhead stored at an assembly plant near this Panhandle city. The Pantex plant is the nation's only assembly and disassem-bly plant for nuclear weapons.

The warhead is believed to be in the nine-megaton range, which would make it one of the largest in the country's nuclear arsenal.

The bomb was thrown from a Titan II intercontinental ballistic missile when an underground silo exploded in Damascus, Ark., last week.

The warhead was flown here from Little Rock by a special Air Force jet transport Tuesday and trucked under heavy security to the Pantex plant about five miles outside of Amarillo.

Government officials would not say Wednesday what happens next to a damaged nuclear warhead.

Although Department of Energy officials, who oversee the plant, won't release information, normal procedure would be to disassemble the warhead, one source said.

The usable components — which could include radioactive plutonium, gold, silver and platinum — would be recycled and shipped to other plants which make parts for nuclear weapons.

Unsalvageable or radioactive parts would be buried in a Pantex dump along with other weapons waste, the source said.

Kultura keeps flame burning

MAISONS LAFFITE, France (AP) — Every month, Poles living abroad and thousands of others interested in Polish thought and letters leaf through an austere, academic-looking publication called Kultura.

Even members of the Communist Party Central Committee in Warsaw read the trim little magazine. But they can't buy it at the corner newsstand because it's considered subversive, so the government has a standing order for several dozen copies at a large French distribution house in Paris.

About 1,000 copies of the Polish-language journal published in this Paris suburb make it into Poland each month, passing from hand to hand around the country, claims editor and publisher Jerzy Giedroyc, 73, who founded Kultura with some friends in 1947 in Rome.

The magazine features articles on politics and sociology as well as fiction, poetry and literary criticism and is high on the list of things police searching homes of Polish dissidents like to carry off, according to a member of the Workers' Committee for Self-Defense in Warsaw.

Bookstores in Poland are full of attractive books and magazines — all published through government printing concerns that don't offer much outlet for critical or avant-garde writing.

There is also a flourishing underground press that turns out mimeographed political tracts as well as fiction and poetry. But Kultura remains the forum through which dissident and "unacceptable" works in Polish are published.

Giedroyc said in a recent interview he receives about 50 book-length manuscripts in Polish each year from Poland and around the world, "most of them awful."

"Poles are real scribblers, and they love to write poetry, most of it patriotic and very bad," he said. "But many of the memoirs we receive are quite fascinating."

Emigre journals are not uncommon, particularly in Paris, a traditional haven for political dissidents. But the 33-year-old publication is unusual in that it is neither oriented toward the restoration of a former regime nor does it seek to introduce readers to the culture of their country of exile.

According to U.S. sociologist Paul Wheeler, it seeks to affect or alter the existing culture of Poland — from within and without.

Said Giedroyc: "We have now built up a team of contributors around the world, both Poles in exile and people inside the country. We like to think that we offer a forum for the free expression of ideas and literature in Polish — sort of keeping the flame burning."

Giedroyc and his friends were in Italy with the Free Polish Forces in World War II, and at the war's end, found they were without a country to which they wanted to return.

"So we moved to Paris and founded our publishing house (l'Institut Litteraire) and started printing books and a historical quarterly as well," said Zofia Hertz, who together with her late husband, Zygmunt and Giedroyc and several other Polish exiles, formed Kultura's inner circle.

The magazine, with a monthly press run of 7,000 copies at a single-issue price of $4.50, and the publishing company are a communal enterprise run out of a pleasant, brick house surrounded by well-tended rose gardens.

October's issue came off the presses in mid-September — "too late for the big events," Giedroyc said. But he added that next month's Kultura will be devoted almost entirely to the strikes and actions leading up to the formation of independent trade unions and the fall of Edward Gierek's government.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON FDA nod comes slowly for drugs

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can understand why the Food and Drug Administration must be careful about approving new drugs for general use. Buy why do their procedures have to take so long? It seems to me a lot of people are being denied drugs that might really help them. — Bonnie.

Dear Bonnie: As is true in many areas of medical practice, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) must balance the possible benefits to be derived from quick approval of a new drug against the risk that such approval might be premature. In this respect the public should bear in mind that it was the cautious approach of the FDA that prevented the use of thalidomide in the United States.

However, at least one agency, the General Accounting Office (GAO), has expressed dissatisfaction with the delay in the FDA's procedures for approving new drugs. According to a GAO report, "the approval process delays the availability of the therapeutic benefits a drug may provide to the public."

The report notes that of 14 new drugs approved by the FDA during a period of about two and a half years, 13 were already in use in other countries. Norway, Canada and Switzerland require only about half the time needed by the United States to approve a drug, while England averages about one-fifth the time. As a result, some drugs are available years earlier in these other countries.

The GAO also noted that industry must share some of the blame for the delay in drug approval since companies occasionally submit incomplete new drug applications or fail to correct deficiencies as rapidly as they might.

One GAO recommendation was that the FDA accept foreign clinical data that demonstrate drug safety and effectiveness. Although this practice is permitted under present law, the FDA refuses to accept such information as part of a new drug application. While a change in policy to avoid duplicating research efforts already completed by others could save both time and money, the FDA maintains that its present system for the approval of new drugs is needed to insure that the product is indeed both safe and effective.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The teen-aged child of a friend of mine is a deaf-mute who has learned to speak; however, while her parents understand what she says, most other people have difficulty in doing so. I was wondering if you could explain why her speech is so unintelligible. — Gil.

Dear Gil: First let me comment on your use of the term "deaf-mute." Deaf persons are not mute; they have normal vocal organs. I suggest discarding the use of the expression "deaf-mute" and "deaf and dumb."

As a result of special instruction, some deaf children learn to make speech sounds. The speech is not really understood by the general public because deaf people cannot imitate what they cannot hear — the sound of human speech.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Bell to dedicate new switch system

Midland's second Electronic Switching System, placed in operation this year, will be formally dedicated Saturday at Southwestern Bell's Open House, 305 Midland Drive.

The first ESS equipment was installed several years ago in the 68 exchange.

The Chamber of Commerce will perform the ribbon cutting ceremony at 10 a.m., and company employees will provide tours of the new equipment until 4 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

"This is a family affair," said Katy Trospen, Southwestern Bell's Service Community Action Team chairman. "Visitors will enjoy free hot dogs, soda, give-aways and door prizes, plus balloons for the kids. And they will have a chance to tour our central office. Everything will be set up in the parking lot area next to the building."

The new equipment will process calls much faster than the old electro-mechanical models. Plus, the new ESS will allow for growth.

In addition, customers in the 69 exchange may now obtain Custom Calling features such as Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Three-Way Calling and Speed Calling.

The machine will handle up to 26,000 calls an hour with a capacity of 120,000. It will serve 15,340 local lines and more than 29,330 telephones. Included are 34 PBXs.

The office has a capacity to serve 24,000 lines. The cutover from mechanical to electronic switching represents a $4.3 million equipment investment, $425,000 for facilities and $525,000 for the building — a total of $5,250,000.

Static 'building up' in electronics industry

The modern world and its increasingly complex electronic gadgetry — computers, video display terminals, medical monitoring devices — is becoming more and more vulnerable to a series of "glitches" and "gremlins," some of which can have disastrous effects.

"This is becoming a serious problem for the future," said Owen J. McAteer, an expert on the "physics of failure" for the Westinghouse Electric Corp. in Baltimore, Md.

One of the chief culprits could be plain, old electrostatic discharge — the same process that causes a spark when you shuffle along a rug and then touch someone or something else.

McAteer said such a "zap" can carry up to 4,000 volts and would cause failure in almost any piece of modern electronic gear.

In fact, a shock that size isn't needed to foul up much of the sophisticated gear that is becoming an integral part of modern life.

"As the parts (of electronic devices) get smaller and smaller, they are getting more and more sensitive to static electricity," he said.

The touch of a worker's hand on a circuit board is often enough to destroy its ability to function.

McAteer said the biggest problem now is to make the electronics industry aware that the problem exists. It's a kind of hidden problem, he said, because there's very little that can be seen physically.

Bit by bit, an electrical charge can build up in certain, mostly non-conducting, materials. If such materials are then brought into close proximity with other susceptible materials, electric discharge can take place. Even a tiny discharge can ruin a sophisticated piece of electronic gear.

While such a small event can cause a computer or video display tube to malfunction, electrostatic discharge can have dire consequences, McAteer said.

There have been suggestions that such a discharge may have caused the explosion that claimed the lives of three Apollo astronauts in 1967.

It's also possible that such sparks might be responsible for explosions in grain elevators, McAteer said.

And some people are even looking into the idea that electrostatic discharge might be the cause of recent malfunctions in the North American Air Defense Command system, which is highly dependent on electronic and computer systems.

Lamesa hosts 2-4A toughie

The area football schedule is a little on the light side Friday night as all District 5-A teams are idle along with area teams of Rankin, Greenwood and Crane.

But there are three games that should provide enough interest for anyone who has to see some high school action this week.

Andrews travels to Lamesa in a key District 2-AAAA contest while Stanton hosts rival Reagan County and McCamey takes on AA power Seagraves in a couple of highly rated non-conference outings.

Andrews and Lamesa have been playing each other for several years, but this is the first time the two teams have met in a district matchup. And it is an important outing for both teams since foot stand at 1-0 in loop play.

Andrews, 3-0 on the year and ranked seventh in the state, is highly favored over the Golden Tornadoes, but Lamesa has shown a stingy defense this season and a pass happy quarterback in Sam Hansard. Hansard threw a 53-yard TD bomb to Robert Gomez last week against Fort Stockton in a 14-2 victory.

Andrews is off a 28-14 win over San Angelo Lake View, and the Mustangs have more scoring power than a digital computer. Quarterback Keith Brooks and tailback Van Peary are as good a tandem as there is in the area, and they guided the Mustangs' 18-14 upset over 5-5A Midland High a couple of weeks back. But they also have Marty Keese, who rushed for 123 yards last week against Lake View.

Lamesa, however, has given up only 15 points in three games and this could prove to be a rugged test for the multi-talented Mustangs.

Reagan County, who couldn't get on the scoreboard last week in a 20-0 loss to Class A Iraan, will have its hands full Friday when they travel to meet Stanton's stingy Buffaloes.

The Owls will have to find a way to score, and probably often, against the Buffs, who last week limited AAA Crane to a minus 13 yards total offense. Stanton also scored 24 points, but it was the defense that did the work. Defensive end Jim Smith tackled two runners in the end zone for safeties last week. Stanton is 3-0 on the year while Reagan County is 1-2.

The Seagraves-McCamey clash will be a replay of last year's bi-district encounter between the two teams, and if things go as projected, the two teams could meet again in the playoffs this year.

Seagraves is 3-0 and leads all teams in the area in scoring with 140 points in their first three outings. No other team has even scored 100 points at this point in the season. Seagraves is fresh off a 55-6 win over Friona.

McCamey, on the other hand, not only faces the task of meeting one of the area's top teams, but they also must forget about a tough 17-13 loss to Rankin last week in a battle for the Upton County championship.

Lee volleyballers host Steers; Bulldogs travel

Midland Lee and Midland High return to volleyball action tonight when the Rebels host Big Spring, the District 5-5A pacesetter, while Midland is on the road to face San Angelo's Bobcats.

The Rebels are out of the first half race after three straight losses, but Coach Linda Weikel feels her young sophomore-oriented team showed signs of jelling in Tuesday's loss to Abilene Cooper and she regards the match with the Steers as an important step in the team's development as Lee points for the second half.

Midland High, meanwhile, will be battling to remain in the thick of the first half race. Both the Bulldogs and Bobcats take 2-1 records into tonight's game and the winner will remain in the thick of the contention. Coach Linda Jolly's spikers defeated Abilene Tuesday and this will be their second straight on the road.

District 5-5A standings: Big Spring 3-0; Midland 2-1; Abilene Cooper 2-1; San Angelo 2-1; Odessa 2-1; Odessa Permian 1-2; Midland Lee 0-3; Abilene 0-3.

Astros share 1st after loss

By TOM SALADINO

ATLANTA (AP) — It's not the pressure of a tight pennant race, just the sight of the Houston Astros fits, says catcher Alan Ashby whose two-run homer was not enough to overcome Atlanta in a 4-2 loss Wednesday night.

"We lost. We lost a big ball game but I don't think it's the pressure, we just got beat," said Ashby, who cracked three hits, including his third home run of the season to gain a fourth-inning tie at 2-2.

Pinch hitter Biff Pocoroba, however, drilled a two-out, two-run sixth-inning double off loser Joaquin Andujar, 3-7, and reliever Rick Camp came on for a club record 74th appearance. Camp recorded his 20th save with 12-3 innings of hitless ball to protect the victory for Doyle Alexander, 14-9.

The loss cost the Astros as Los Angeles beat San Francisco 5-4 in 12 innings to move into a tie for the National League West lead.

"It has been tough on us here, we just haven't played well in this ball park," said Ashby after the Astros dropped their sixth game in eight decisions in Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"The Braves hit us well and seem to do everything well against us," he said. "I still feel we are the best team in the West and will win the division but, frankly, the Braves have been as tough on us as anybody."

The Braves have been tough on everyone during the last seven weeks, owning the best record in baseball during that span with a 32-14 mark. They are still mathematically in the pennant race, seven games behind Houston and Los Angeles with 10 games remaining.

Houston Manager Bill Virdon, however, wasn't unduly concerned with the loss.

"It's always better to win but I can't be concerned. The Braves always give us trouble here. They play well at home. They've been getting solid pitching and Camp has been doing the job," he said.

Camp came on in relief of Alexander, who had scattered only six hits, with one out in the eighth after a leadoff single by Jose Cruz, and promptly got Cesar Cedeno to bounce into a double play. Camp blanked the Astros in the ninth.

"Camp's sinker was awesome. The bottom was falling out," said Manager Bobby Cox of his reliever who lowered his earned run average to 1.92 and has allowed only three earned runs in his last 40-3 innings.

The Braves took a 2-0 lead early when Dale Murphy and Bob Horner cracked solo home runs. Murphy hit his 31st of the season in the second inning and Horner belted No. 35 in the third.

"It helped getting out to that 2-0 lead," said Cox. "The Astros are tough, they can run and don't strike out so the lead kept them from doing some things they like to do."

The Braves also went over the million mark in attendance as a crowd of 24,897 pushed the season total to 1,014,421, the first time Atlanta has reached that mark since 1971. It also marked the first time ever that all 12 National League clubs were over the million mark in one season.

All NL clubs pass million in attendance

ATLANTA (AP) — All 12 member clubs of the National League have surpassed the 1-million mark in home attendance, with the resurgent Atlanta Braves becoming the final team to do so on Wednesday night.

The Braves, who now have drawn 1,014,421, went over the million mark when 24,897 fans paid their way into Atlanta Stadium to watch them defeat the Houston Astros 4-2.

It was the first time the Braves have surpassed the million mark since 1971.

Who will 1980 Cinderella be?

No one ever accused the Houston Oilers of being America's team, but with the arrival of Earl Campbell, the long suffering franchise won the sentiments of the nation's masses, much in the way of the 1940 Dodgers, the 1959 Go Go White Sox and, well, the 1980 Astros.

There was something about the 90-pound weaking getting up and kicking sand in the bully's face. That was Houston the last couple of years and, believe it or not, that was the Pittsburgh Steelers 10 years ago, before they got carried away with success.

The point is that every season has its Cinderella team...the year when Baylor wins the SWC title, Stanford wins the Pac-10 or somebody besides Alabama wins the SEC. Of course, there are also fantasies that reach beyond the realm of reason such as Kansas State rising up to dominate the Big Eight, Washington State winning the Pac-10, Vanderbilt victorious in the SEC or Northwestern winning half its games.

THIS YEAR the jury is still sequestered on the NFL candidate, but there are three rags-to-riches sagas in the making, although it may be a while before it is determined which catches the public's fancy.

San Francisco, Buffalo and Detroit, longtime doormats all, are 3-0 and, at the moment, "the Lions seems" the most likely choice to repeat the Oilers' story.

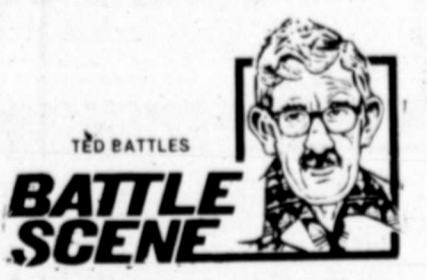

The Lions even have a Billy Sims, who like Campbell, is a Heisman Trophy winner, a Texan, and the Messiah who is turning the franchise around. Still, a month ago the former University of Oklahoma All-America wasn't the stuff of which athletic heroes in the town they once called the Motor City are made.

In a city where welfare lines had replaced assembly lines, this kid fresh out of college was holding out for more money and he hadn't even proven himself.

THEY signed him, finally, with the help of the Denver mint, but the skepticism, despite the press clippings, grew.

A month ago, they were talking about the money he was getting. Now they just talk about the yards he gains.

Although the season is young, Sims seems all the Lions had hoped for. He could become the second 1,000 yard rusher in Detroit history. The other, coincidentally enough, was Steve Owen, also a Heisman winner and former Sooner, who did it back in 1971.

The Lions suspected Sims could run, but he's also helping make Gary Danielson one of the better young quarterbacks in the NFC with his ability to turn a short pass into a long gain.

The way Sims ran the football in high school, they never threw to him. It was almost as bad at OU, where he was a receiver just twice. In nine years of football before this season, he had just two passes thrown to him.

So Sims and Detroit warned the rest of the NFC early by upsetting Super Bowl finalists Los Angeles in the season's opener, perhaps written off by some as a sneak punch. But since then, the Sims-Danielson tandem has led the Lions to victories over Green Bay and St. Louis. And the way the schedule is set up, Detroit may not get another test until, until, well, Nov. 2 when they play San Francisco.

Oilers give Hollywood chance, warning

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers have given Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson a chance to prove himself, but his new teammates say the controversial linebacker must abandon his sideline antics and play football.

"If he'll keep his mouth shut and play football, then he's got a lot to offer. I'll be the first to welcome him if he plays with his body and not his mouth," said tight end Mike Barber.

"But as soon as he causes any problems, I'll be the first to jump in his face. The one thing we don't need are any quote-unquote Hollywoods on our team," Barber said.

Henderson, 27, signed a contract with the National Football League team Wednesday, reportedly for less than the $125,000 annual salary plus incentive stipulated in his contract with the San Francisco 49ers.

Henderson, dubbed "Holiday" Henderson and "Hospital" Henderson by the California media, was waived last week by the 49ers after club officials said he had missed 25 practices and failed to learn the system as they thought he should have.

The 49ers acquired the outspoken six-year NFL veteran from the Dallas Cowboys, who took him off their roster last season for being a disruptive factor.

Henderson became a free agent Monday and said he wanted to play for the Oilers.

Coach Bum Phillips agreed to sign Henderson after offensive guard Conway Hayman was placed on injured reserve. Hayman, a eight-year veteran, suffered a ruptured disc in his back and will be sidelined as least four weeks, said a team spokesman.

"He didn't try to put any square pegs in round holes. He said he has had a lot of ball players come through that have reformed and he would give a player a chance as long as he could produce," Henderson said.

Like Barber, other teammates said they would accept Henderson but not his flamboyant reputation.

"He's got a reputation for being a finesse player, but in this league (the AFC Central) you have to take it to them. You have to be a hitter and you can't be a hitter with your mouth," linebacker Art Stringer said.

Ag says pills prescribed

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — One of three Texas A&M football players kicked off the squad because drugs were found in his room says the pills were prescribed by the team physician for a minor heart disturbance he experienced during the summer.

"They took the wrong action against me. They can tell the pills had the doctor's name on it," said sophomore defensive back Darrell Adams.

Adams, junior linebacker Cal Peveito and senior defensive back Elroy Steen, a defensive captain, were booted from the team by head Coach Tom Wilson for "disciplinary violations."

Peveito and Adams claimed in today's editions of the Beaumont Enterprise and the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the suspensions were "a bum rap" and that the three players were being made the scapegoats for Texas A&M's poor start this season.

After beating Mississippi 23-20, the Aggies dropped successive 42-0 and 25-9 decisions to Georgia and Penn State.

Adams told the Star-Telegram the rooms of five players, including the three who were suspended, were searched Tuesday after a team meeting Monday night in which Wilson warned that drug use "would not be tolerated."

In the meeting, Adams said, Wilson told the team he was aware that certain players were using drugs and would be caught soon.

Adams said Peveito told him a dorm manager had found a single "black molly," a potent amphetamine, in Peveito's room.

"Cal said he was going to use it going home next weekend because he had a four-hour drive to make," Adams said.

Dr. H. Dwayne Lagan, Texas A&M's team physician, confirmed to the Star-Telegram that he had prescribed heart medicine and nerve pills for Adams during the summer.

Lagan told the newspaper he is certain neither drug was harmful or illegal.

He assured he had never and would never prescribe any amphetamines, such as the black molly reportedly found in Peveito's room.

Dr. Lagan said Adams had experienced "heart palpitations" earlier this summer.

Adams apparently is also accused of possessing some marijuana "roach clips."

"What they called roach clips were just some things I got out of workshop class. I'm an industrial education major," he said.

Adams claims he has never smoked marijuana.

Rice not alone in misery

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice Coach Ray Alborn says the Owls may occupy the Southwest Conference cellar but other league teams apparently are plagued by similar problems.

Rice, 0-2, is at the bottom of the jumbled conference standings, sharing the cellar with Texas Christian and defending SWC champion Houston.

"We haven't played a Southwest Conference game yet, but it's apparent there are problems in the league. It's a worse mess than we thought it would be," Alborn said.

But Alborn says he hopes the Owls will put their game together Saturday when they host Southeast Conference power Louisiana State, 2-1.

The Tigers, under rookie head coach Jerry Stovall, were shut out 16-0 against Florida State, but re-planned to beat Kansas State 21-0 and Colorado 23-20 on a last-ditch field goal.

Rice hasn't beat LSU since 1966, but Alborn says he's optimistic about the Owls' chances.

Backup quarterback Robert Hoffman should put some new teeth in the Owls' veer offense and allow starter Randy Hertel to recover from a sprained ankle, the coach says.

But he concedes, "We need to bolster our pass defense."

Tulane's Green Wave trampled Rice 34-15 last week, scoring all five touchdowns on passing routes. And six of seven touchdowns scored this

He blames the misfires on "a very poor throw and failure to execute."

As for the team's running game, Alborn says it's as good as he's ever seen. Hoffman, Frank Wilson and Calvin Fance have piled up 257 rushing yards, and the offensive line averages 7 yards per snap on its off-tackle plays.

Husker drubbing lingers

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — There are a number of things Penn State football fans would like to forget about last season. For Nittany Lion tailback Curt Warner, however, there is one thing he can't help remembering.

"I think about it every day," Warner said of the 42-17 shelling Penn State suffered at the hands of Nebraska.

"Just the humiliation and the frustration after the game, fans were coming up saying we can't play that kind of football. We weren't good enough. Those kinds of things," Warner said.

Third-ranked Nebraska invades State College against the 11th-ranked Nittany Lions before a national television audience and an expected record sellout crowd of 85,000.

Yankee Clipper recalls his bid for .400 in 1939

AP Special Correspondent

George Brett's quest to become the first major league baseball player in 39 years to bat .400 strikes a familiar chord in the memory of Joe DiMaggio, the fabled Yankee Clipper.

He underwent a similar experience but one with a discordant note. "The year was 1939. We had the pennant practically clinched — 12 or 12½ games ahead — and only a couple or three weeks to play," the great centerfielder of the New York Yankees recalled when the matter was brought to his attention.

"I remember I was batting more than .400 — around .412, I think. Then I got this terrible allergy in my left eye — my batting eye — and I could hardly see out of it. "But you know how it was in those days. Joe McCarthy (Yankee manager) didn't believe in cheese champions. So he made me play every day. Nobody would dare ask to sit out a game. So I went into a terrible slump.

"I'm not sure about the details exactly. Don't write it until you check. Be sure and look it up." We did. Joe was pretty close to being right on all counts.

ON SEPT. 9, records show, DiMaggio was batting .409. The Yankees were so far ahead of the second place Boston Red Sox — 16 games on Sept. 12 — you couldn't recognize them without a telescope.

His left eye half closed and in severe pain, DiMaggio dutifully took his turns at bat, went 0 for 11 at one stage and saw his average plummet to the .380s.

Brett, the siege gun of the Kansas City Royals, boosted his average over .400 earlier this month, creating the exciting possibility that baseball may have the first hitter to reach that plateau since Ted Williams of the Red Sox in 1941. But Brett suffered an injury to his right hand and his average fell to .396.

Brett was promptly taken out of the lineup until the ailment could heal. DiMaggio experienced no such sympathetic treatment.

"I loved Joe McCarthy dearly," the Clipper said in reviewing the episode during a visit to New York over the weekend. "He had to know the agony I was going through. I will never understand why he didn't give me a couple of days off.

"But he didn't. It was the rule of the day. You played with anything short of a broken leg. I took a shot of novocaine before every game. I was in terrible pain. I couldn't even see the ball but I kept going."

Baseball history reveals that DiMaggio ended his hitless streak on Sept. 14 at Yankee Stadium, getting a single off Cleveland's Bob Feller, his longtime adversary, in the fourth inning and going two for four.

A CORRESPONDENT at the time wrote that DiMaggio got so excited over his slump-ending hit that he almost went to sleep at first base, barely escaping a pickoff.

"Humor of the day," commented the quiet, austere Yankee super star with an appreciative laugh.

DiMaggio finished the season at .381 and was the individual star of the four-game sweep of the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series, batting .438 with three homers and six runs batted in.

He had a career average of .325 and hit 361 home runs. He was three times Most Valuable Player of the American League and in 1941 set a record of hitting in 56 straight games, an achievement most observers feel will never be duplicated.

Cancer sidelines Suns' Forrest

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Bayard Forrest knew he might be sidelined from the Phoenix Suns because of a back injury, but he never planned on cancer.

Sunday, Forrest — a 6-10 center who played for the Suns during the 1978-79 season and was on the injured reserve list last season — underwent surgery for a malignant tumor in his thyroid.

A tumor on the left side of the thyroid was discovered when Forrest underwent the National Basketball Association team's annual physical Sept. 7. He flunked the physical because of the back injury he suffered during last year's training. Doctors decided the tumor had to be removed. A laboratory test after the surgery revealed cancer. A pathologist then told Forrest that he had to have more surgery. The entire gland was infected with malignant cells.

"I was kind of shocked at first," said Forrest from his hospital bed. "I mean, cancer. Just the word is kind of terrifying."

"Especially when you're just 26-years-old. Nobody ever thinks about getting cancer at that age. There's such a stigma attached to the word. Most people think it means death."

Doctors have told him there is very little chance the cancer will spread. "I guess I'm fortunate," said Forrest, a former star at Grand Canyon College. "The doctors told me not to worry. They reassured me and my wife. They told me the kind of cancer I had only affects the thyroid. I guess if you have to have cancer, this was the best kind to have."

"But at first, I didn't know what to think. Naturally, I thought about the worst. And I worried about my family. But I'm religious. I have a lot of faith in God. I'm ready to go when He wants me."

Forrest said he is anxious to get out of the hospital. He said was lonely for his wife, Peg, and his two children, Adam and Stephanie. He was homesick for his eight acres of ranch land near Durango, Colo. And he was worried about his string of losses.

"I think I'll start selling real estate in southern Colorado," Forrest said. "That's where my home is now."

KENNY REDIN'S Fin & Feather

The striped bass may not be the easiest fish to catch, but its size and fighting ability make it one of the most exciting. And with a new official record, Lake Powell is the latest western stripper fishery in the spotlight.

The 17 1/2 pounder landed Aug. 20 by Gus Hanaoka, Torrance, Calif., represents the top weight average of the survivors of the first plant in 1974, according to Wayne Gustavson.

Starts Sunday

Chuck Davis Outdoors will join Kenny Redin's Fin & Feather Sunday as an added outdoor feature that will appear Thursdays and Sundays in the R-T.

A total of 815,000 fingerlings have been planted in Powell. This summer biologists found proof of natural spawning.

STRIPERS grow fast: These were planted in '74 weighed about 1/25 of an ounce each. They feed voraciously, mostly on shad introduced in 1969. It takes a fair amount of skill and patience to catch stripers when trolling. A graph is useful when jigging. The only time catching stripers is easy is when a school has rushed shad to the surface. Then almost anything but a safety pin works.

Gustavson says there are no hard rules about Powell stripers location and fishing methods, but some generalizations can be made:

July through October—Stripers surface feed during this period, trolling at 20-60 feet is most successful. Schools move from the Rincon area to as far south as Wahweap Lodge in August.

November through February—A period of relative dormancy in the lower half of Powell, when jigging is most effective. A graph recorder can play an important role in locating schools of deepwater stripers. If located, any chrome or white slash type bait will work while jigged off the bottom.

March through June—Stripers spawn into the headquarters of the San Juan River a Colorado above Hite Marina. Whether they spawn in the Escalante River is not yet known. Trolling is most effective.

ANOTHER general rule when trolling is to leave sufficient line to take a lure deep and to remove it from the general boat noise, which stripers shun.

Gustavson says there is no reason why Powell stripers will not grow as large as they have in sister Colorado River lakes—Havasu, where the record is 59 pounds, and Mead, where stripers planted in 1969 have reached a rod-reel record of 47 pounds.

Anglers who visit Powell are excited about the stripers but some tend to forget that Powell also offers some of the finest large mouth bass, crappie and walleye fishing in the West.

From now until November is considered prime fishing time on huge Powell. The weather is generally pleasant this time of year, the scenery out of this world and the desert high-country offers nothing more majestic than its huge canyon walls, gneiss clear waters and fabulous sportfishing.

Lower Lake Powell is reached through Wahweap Lodge and Marina near Page, Ariz. Bullfrog and Hall's Crossings marinas serve mid-lake areas in Utah and Hite Marina allows access to upper Powell. All have a fleet of rental fishing and houseboats operated year round.

UF Gator fans still waiting to be dazzled

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Derald Williams, the University of Florida tailback who was a high school All-America, hasn't dazzled Gator fans just yet, but the talented runner says he still might turn a few heads in the near future.

Williams has gained just 13 yards on five carries for the 2-0 Gators, and with two other tailbacks sharing assignments, Williams is hardly the sole ball carrier. "I'm anxious to run the ball but with our new offense it's just as important for me to help by blocking and running pass routes," Williams said. "We have a lot of motion and we have three different tailbacks, Johnell Brown, Doug Kellom and myself, so it's natural that I won't be taking as many handoffs.

"It's obvious we're going to have a lot of options from our offense depending on what the opposing defense does," he said. "There are things we add and things we take away. Every week we're going to have a surprise, and one of these days the surprise might be me."

Coach Charley Pell said the team puts winning ahead of personal achievements, anyway.

"I know folks from Jacksonville want to know why Derald isn't gaining a thousand yards a game, just like folks from Gainesville want to know why Johnell Brown isn't doing the same thing," Pell said. "But I guarantee you each one of our tailbacks puts team success ahead of personal achievement."

Williams, a 5-11, 212-pound sophomore, was sought by teams around the country as a high school senior.

R-T FORECAST

Ponies, Buffs, picked in Area

West Texas high school football is getting tougher to pick than the pros. Thankfully, they don't confuse the issue by giving points to underdogs. After last week's 9-6 debacle, only little favos are appreciated.

This week's a comparatively light schedule and the R-T Prep Prognosticator welcomes the respite. Perhaps it will afford an opportunity to improve on the overall 34-16 record.

District 5-5A is completely idle while Greenwood, Crane and Rankin also enjoy rests, but the action is just warming up in 2-4A form took a beating last week.

Before the season, it may have been that Andrews looked forward to its Lamesa date as a breather after successive jousts with Midland and Lake View. The Tors, however, now 2-1, didn't look like much of a breather in a 14-2 win over Fort Stockton last week. Still, the Mustangs are the favorite to win it all... Andrews 21, Lamesa 7.

In other 2-4A tilts, Winless Snyder, smacked 18-7 by Sweetwater last week, will remain winless since the Tigers don't play and 3-0 Pecos should experience only token resistance from Fort Stockton, say about 14-0.

A district champion last year, Lake View is 1-2, but should begin turning things around against Sweetwater, 12-7. Ector had a week off, but even the home field advantage can't help the Eagles against Monahans as the Lobos win 10-7.

Coahoma, measured by Stanton and Tphoka on successive weekends, doesn't figure to sly on the same field with Sonora as the Lions roar, 26-0. Seminole, still looking for someone it can beat, won't find them this week... pick Kermit 21-12. Denver City will lose its fourth straight to Post, 17-10.

McCombs really from a 17-13 loss to Rankin in no shape to be taking on one of the state's better A teams, Seagraves 28-14.

Stanton could run into trouble if it is looking ahead to next week's district opener against Seagraves, but the Buffs should prevail over Reagan County, 20-7.

Injured MHS Frosh griddler leaves hospital

Midland Freshman School's Cary Wallace, who was recently injured in a ninth grade football game in Odessa, has been released from St. Joseph's Hospital and has returned home.

Wallace, who played both quarterback and safety for the Midland Purple, will still be out of school for another six weeks. Wallace suffered a broken neck and a crushed sixth vertebrae, but no surgery was required. His neck has been termed stable and he is feeling no numbness. He has been told, however, not to play football again.

Wallace, who was also named the outstanding basketball player at San Jacinto last year, may be able to play basketball in the future if the neck heals properly.

Several professional athletes sent the Midland freshman cards and was visited by others while in Houston, including Kenny Stabler of the Houston Oilers.

Cary is the son of Dennis and Peggy Wallace, 810 Sinclair St.

Traveling Bill costs taxpayers, figures show

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans paid more than $14,000 for substitute governors when Gov. Bill Clements was out of the state for 75 days during the past fiscal year.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby drew $11,150 in state pay for 57 days when he filled in for Clements, and Republican Sen. Bill Braecklein of Dallas, assistant presiding officer in the Senate, got $3,521 for 18 days as governor when both Clements and Hobby were out of Texas.

The figures were released Wednesday by State Comptroller Bob Bullock, who is viewed as a possible opponent to Clements for governor in 1982.

Bullock, in releasing his report, branded Clements "a phantom" for the governor's 2½ months out of the state during the year.

The pay for fill-in governors is figured at just over $195 per day. Clements, who gets $71,400 a year, is not docked pay when he is out of Texas, according to Bob Owens in the Comptroller's Office.

Braecklein and Hobby draw governor's pay instead of their legislative salaries — about $20 a day — for serving as the top state executive.

Bullock's attack on Clements was sparked by the governor's refusal to participate in a debate on the presidential race. Clements is chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign in Texas.

"He pops up here and he pops up there — Colorado, Virginia and Russia — and frankly he may not have been around Texas long enough in the last year to know what's going on," Bullock said in a release.

"The only other reason that I can think of for the debate refusal is the governor is too tired from all his out-of-state travels."

Clements was on the road in Texas Wednesday, campaigning with Reagan.

Jon Ford, Clements' press secretary, defended the governor's road record. Ford said the trips to Colorado were for governors' meetings, a session of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission and a brief vacation.

The trips to Clements' Virginia home — now being rented to Ronald Reagan — coincided with trips to Washington on state business, Ford said.

The Russia trip was a 3-week visit last September as the head of a Texas agricultural mission.

Bullock said Clements' trips surpassed those of his predecessor — Dolph Briscoe, "frankly called the absentee governor."

The comptroller said his records show Briscoe was never out of the state for more than 51 days in any year.

The appropriations bill allots $10,000 a year for the governor to use to cover the salary of his temporary replacement.

Owens said anything over $10,000 must be transferred from other funds in the governor's control.

Texas Democrats to meet in Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Democratic leaders take time out from presidential politics Friday and Saturday to set up party power lines for the expected hot 1982 governor's race.

A meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee this afternoon began the series of sessions that end Saturday with the second State Democratic Convention.

The selection of a new state Democratic chairman to succeed Billy Goldberg, wealthy Houston businessman, heads the agenda, followed by election of a state vice chairman and the 64 members of the committee that will govern the party the next two years.

Unhappy Mexican-American Democrats, who say they are the party's largest minority, may force the party to provide for two vice chairmen in order to give the blacks and browns a top official each. A black, Deralyn Davis of Fort Worth, now holds the vice chairmanship and is seeking re-election.

After all the infighting, backers of President Jimmy Carter are hopeful the convention will end Saturday night in a big campaign rally for the Carter-Mondale ticket.

The main contestants for the state chairmanship are Rep. Luther Jones, D-El Paso, and Sherman attorney Bob Slagle. Both have been campaigning for the powerful part-time job for almost a year.

It is no secret that Jones is backed by former Attorney General John Hill, who is expected for run for governor again in 1982, and Slagle by National Democratic Chairman John White, also considered a likely prospect for the 1982 governor's race.

Slagle also is backed by the Texas AFL-CIO and some black organizations. Jones claims support of Comptroller Bob Bullock and some Latin-American organizations.

Also in the contest is Travis County Commissioner David Samuelson, backed by the Mod-Con Caucus, a moderate-conservative group, and the American Agriculture Movement. Rep. Paul Moreano, D-El Paso, said he is in the race just to "spoil" Jones' efforts.

"The war is with the Republicans, but the first battle will take place on the 27th when, by our choice for party chair, we decide whether it will be 'business as usual' for the next two years and beyond," Jones said in a letter to the 3,900 delegates.

Teller foils robbery try

RICHARDSON (AP) — The "Jogging Bandit," or a reasonable facsimile, was talked out of robbing the Plano Savings & Loan by a teller Tuesday, police said.

The man, wearing a hooded gray sweatshirt that is the trademark of the bandit, entered the savings and loan, flashed a gun and asked for money, said officer Kathy Laws.

But teller Nonie Gates, 53, refused and the would-be robber ran away.

"She replied that she didn't want to get hurt, but she didn't want the police to hurt him either," the officer said. "I guess she talked him out of it."

The teller's description of the man closely resembles the description of the "Jogging Bandit," suspected in at least eight Dallas-area savings and loan robberies. But police said there were enough differences in descriptions to lead them to suspect an imposter is at work, Officer Laws said.

Horse club slates event

The Tall City Youth Horse Club will hold an open Playday at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Midland County 4-H Club Arena behind the county's Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

"All horse riders are invited to compete," said Glenda Howard, club booster.

Ribbons will be awarded to first-place winner and the five runners-up in each age group in the boys' and girls' competition, she said.

Entries will be taken just prior to the opening event.

Youth sentenced in parents' death

ANGLETON, Texas (AP) — An Alvin teen-ager who pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter has been sentenced to 20 years in prison in the shooting deaths of his adoptive parents.

Brazoria County Prosecutor Robert Rice said Wednesday he agreed to drop murder charges against Thomas Joel Baize in exchange for the guilty plea to the lesser charge.

The agreement was reached after defense attorneys questioned the legality of the youth's arrest and an alleged oral confession.

Baize, 17, was accused of shooting his adopted father Ronald E. Baize, 37, and mother, Wanda Baize, 33, and setting their bodies on fire. He was certified to stand trial as an adult.

State District Judge Harold Thomas sentenced Baize on Tuesday to 20 years at the Texas Department of Corrections.

"The state offered the deal and we thought it was a good offer," said Sam Bass of Freeport, Baize's court-appointed lawyer.

Investigators said Baize told them he used his father's .44-magnum revolver to kill the couple on Jan. 12 because they would not give him any money.

Brazoria County Sheriff's Sgt. Matt Wingo said the boy told him he had shot each three times with the weapon while they lounged in the living room of their mobile home.

Baize, who was adopted by the couple when he was a year old, also said he then took his parents' car and drove to a friend's house, Wingo said.

The youth decided to return the following day "to see if his parents were still there," poured kerosene on their bodies and set them afire, Wingo said.

Baize told officials at the Gulf Coast Trade School juvenile center, where he had been sent a year ago, that "he planned to rape his mother, kill Mom and Dad, burn the house and take their car. He said he didn't care if he got the death penalty for what he did," Wingo said.

West Texas town has too much rain

ROSCOE (AP) — If this small West Texas town gets any more rain, it might have to shut down.

B.P. Cain, mayor of Roscoe, said the town's entire water supply may have to be turned off because of damage done to the sewage system.

If that happens, Chief of Police Jim Blackley said, schools would be closed.

Roscoe's 1,400 citizens have been without a sewage system for almost two weeks and are sharing 33 portable toilets.

The town has been flooded with about 13 inches of rain in the last two weeks, and Cain said Wednesday that forecasters have warned that even more showers are on the way.

"We're under an alert right now for additional rain. It could be a very, very serious situation because our sewer is located in middle of the flooding," he said. "Just a little more water would perhaps break dikes on the sewer farm. There would be no way we could repair it for several months."

Efforts to pump the excess water off the backed-up sewage system are about as effective "as putting a straw in the Pacific Ocean," Cain said.

Health officials are taking samples of the drinking water daily, he said, and chlorinating it to guard against pollution.

A pipeline eight inches in circumference and two miles long is being used in an attempt to drain the 588 million gallons of water flooding the sewer system, Cain said.

Four pumps are being used to move the water, which averages about three feet deep, he said.

"Our calculations figure that with 2,500 gallons a minute being drained, it will take approximately 67 days to empty the lake," he said. "We have to pay for the gasoline to run the pumps and those engines burn about 500 gallons a day at $1.09 a gallon. The community is picking up the expenses and we can't keep doing it that way."

Boy finds nuclear device

HOUSTON (AP) — Eleven-year-old Jose Castillo said fear made him lead authorities to a nuclear moisture density meter missing from a south east Houston park.

The meter was being used to test soil moisture levels at Settagast Park when it was reported missing Tuesday. Authorities said a park employee left the meter containing radioactive Cesium 137 and Americium 241 unattended for about 10 minutes.

By 8 a.m. Wednesday, Coastal Testing Laboratory asked local authorities for help, saying that if someone opened the box they would suffer radiation burns, according to Tom Rainwater, a laboratory manager.

Company officials went to nearby Rusk Elementary school to ask students if they had seen the meter, Rainwater said.

"I raised up my hand. They took me to my house and I showed it to them. They said it was OK. The box was fine," said Castillo, a fourth-grader.

Rainwater said the case was unopened and there were no radiation leaks.

Suspect returned to Texas

DALLAS (AP) — After a two-week manhunt in two states, the man charged with kidnapping a 7-year-old boy and raping a Dallas nurse has been transferred from an Arkansas jail to a lockup in Dallas.

David Lee Summerville's bond was set at $100,000, police said.

Summerville, who was arrested in Little Rock, Ark., was returned to Dallas Wednesday to face charges in connection with the Sept. 5 abduction of Matthew Mueller.

Little Rock police, acting on information provided by an informant seeking a $5,000 reward, arrested Summerville on Tuesday.

County being audited

GRAHAM (AP) — An investigator from the Texas Attorney General's office said Wednesday an audit of the Young County judge's office and the county attorney's office was being performed satisfactorily.

L. Darnell Wilson, an investigative accountant with the attorney general's office, was sent to Young County at the request of county officials who wanted an investigation into alleged discrepancies in the collection of fines by the two county offices.

The investigation began by local officials several weeks ago after money was found in files and various locations in the offices. Officials also revealed that some persons who were listed as not having paid fines had receipts showing that the fines had been paid.

Economy measured by traffic at city dump

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) — The language of economics may seem like gobbledygook to many Americans, but the director of the Washington County landfills thinks more economists could talk trash.

In Washington, D.C., experts measure the economy with the consumer price index and other indicators. Landfills director Guy Keadle believes you can get a good handle on the state of the economy, at least in Washington County, by gauging the traffic at the local dump.

"When business is good, traffic is great and when business isn't too good, traffic is down," Keadle says.

During tough times, less trash is dumped by businessmen and homeowners because folks aren't buying as much, and thus have less to dispose of, Keadle says.

"People get conscious of what to do with their money, and I can't blame them," he says.

Right now, he says, the dump is in a slump.

Motorist's luck takes foul turn

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — James Manning's luck took a foul turn when he met up with some ducks and soggy weather.

Manning encountered a flock of ducks on the road Monday as he drove near Madison's Vilas Park zoo, police said. He swerved and his car's brakes, drenched by a puddle, failed.

Moments later, the compact car landed in the Vilas Park lagoon.

Manning escaped unhurt and watched from shore as his car drifted out about 40 feet and bubbled 15 feet to the bottom, said police.

There was one bright spot. The car's battery did not duck out when the vehicle was ducked under.

The windshield wipers were still whirring when the car was towed from the lagoon.

Everyone calls him 'The Premium Voice'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They call him "The Premium Voice," one of the highest paid, most in-demand voiceover artists in the business. When Casey Kasem talks to you, it's like a message from home. He makes you believe.

Kasem's voice is everywhere. His syndicated "American Top 40" is the most successful series in radio history, and he's the sole voice of NBC-TV's on-air promotion, as well as the mouthpiece for a plethora of heavy-weight national advertisers.

Now "The Voice" has gone video with a new weekly TV show patterned after his radio program, called "America's Top Ten." And early indications suggest the nationally syndicated show is heading for the same kind of popularity enjoyed by "American 40."

The ubiquitous Kasem has one of those warm, personable voices that makes you feel he is speaking directly to you even though you know he is being heard by thousands of others at the same time. Better yet, he has a friendly face to match.

"American Top 40," a weekly three-hour countdown of the nation's top hit songs, recently celebrated its 10th anniversary, an enviable record for longevity in the radio syndication business.

It is heard in 510 radio markets nationally, with an additional 390 Armed Forces outlets. Just recently, Radio Free Europe acquired "American Top 40" for its network.

"I think the success of the show has to do with credibility," Kasem said. "We're committed to being as truthful as we can in all aspects. We've never used or exploited anyone. And I think we spend as much time as possible in making what we say as poetic as possible."

"Also, I think if you're positive you tend to send out positive airwaves and the listener picks up on that. That's what I've always tried to do."

Kasem made his first big splash in Los Angeles as a disc jockey for radio station KLRA in the early '60s, during the heyday of AM Top 40 radio.

Beside the commercials and music shows, Kasem's ventures have included some 2,000 cartoon shows over the years — from "Scooby Doo" and "Superfriends" to "Battle of the Planets."

It all adds up to a nice, lucrative life. Yet these days, Kasem is most interested in discussing his new "America's Top 10."

Inspired by his radio series, the syndicated show uses Billboard magazine's weekly record charts to count down the leading pop, country and rhythm and blues songs with guest stars, interviews, and a Casey Kasem trademark — the story behind the various songs and artists he spotlights.

"I'd like to think of the show as information with hit records," he said. "We're showcasing talent, and like the radio show, we're hoping to give as many good reasons as we can to play a pop, country or soul tune. Obviously, we're hoping for the same long run as 'American Top 40.'"

Already, "America's Top 10" is seen in 91 markets across the country and has just been renewed for a second 26-week cycle of shows.

"I always knew there'd be a television show," Kasem said. "I just wasn't sure how to mount it. I think what you're seeing now is a more relaxed, informal show than the one we started with — a variety show, really."

Chuck Barris begins new TV show

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chuck Barris, father of "The Gong Show" and "The $1.98 Beauty Contest," will begin a talent show next fall with a top prize of $1 million cash.

Barris said he would be the host of the new variety contest series, "The Million-Dollar Talent Show," which will be syndicated to stations for one hour a week beginning in fall 1981.

Barris, noted for his casual attire and sometimes caustic remarks on "The Gong Show," said, "I'll have a tuxedo, combed hair and black tie — and a warm, friendly and ingratiating manner."

Budd Granoff, executive vice president of Chuck Barris Productions, said the new show was inspired in a way by "The Gong Show," where amateurs show acts that are sometimes smooth and often outrageous.

"We saw so much exceptional talent during our auditions for the 'Gong Show' that we couldn't put on," Granoff said. "They'd come around, but 'The Gong Show' was the wrong place for them."

Barris said Tuesday the competitors for the new show would be drawn both from amateur and professional ranks and that each weekly winner would receive a prize of $10,000. At the end of 25 weeks, a panel of celebrity judges would select an overall winner for a prize of $1 million in cash.

He said he realized that variety shows have not done well in recent years.

"I feel if we do this in the old style of Ed Sullivan, let them perform without a lot of hullabaloo or window dressing, we will succeed," said Barris. "There's also the competition aspect. People will be rooting for a particular act."

Six months ago, Barris suspended production on all his programs and said he was temporarily withdrawing from the business because of the low return paid for syndicated shows, short term contracts and poor time slots. He said he would stay out until the market for syndicated shows improved.

Barris said the pilot program for "The Million-Dollar Talent Show" would be taped Nov. 19 at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas.

Another new Barris show, "Leave it to the Women," will have its pilot taped on Oct. 15, and Barris said he expected the issue-oriented talk show to go on the air daily on NBC Jan. 1.

Auditions for such acts as singers, dancers, instrumentalists, impressionists and comics will be held in Los Angeles and Las Vegas, said Barris.

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — G. Gordon Liddy earned cheers and applause at the close of a two-hour "dialogue" with 1,600 University of Massachusetts students.

Liddy, who spent five years in prison for masterminding the Watergate break-in, kicked off a 50-campus tour by lamenting the American tendency "to live a life of illusion."

At first punctuated by boos and hisses, Liddy alternately cajoled and charmed the students as he warned against criticism of a, praised the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, characterized Watergate as typical "political espionage," said war is "the nature of man," and lectured on the techniques of knife fighting.

Mandrell to tape TV variety series

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music entertainer Barbara Mandrell will move to Hollywood for three months to tape an NBC-TV variety series.

"At first I wasn't excited about the idea of a series, although I had wanted to do a special for a long time," Miss Mandrell said. "But after meeting and talking with Sid and Marty Kroft, my producers, and Saul Ison, who's head of variety programming at NBC, what came down was the series. I spent an awful lot of time thinking about it, and I think it was just meant to be."

family-type entertainment series will air on six consecutive Saturday evenings beginning Nov. 22.

Ginsberg is not missing famous beat of 1980s

DALLAS (AP) — Poet Allen Ginsberg is 55 now, but he's not missing a beat of the 1980s.

The onetime Beat Generation laureate, now listed in Who's Who in America, stopped at Richland College Tuesday to read poetry, expound on issues and pick up $1,500, plus expenses.

The students, most of them not even born until after the beat heyday had faded into the '60s, heard Ginsberg praise use of marijuana and LSD and discuss gay rights.

"I'd say half of them may think I'm some kind of friend of Bob Dylan, but I'm in most of the big anthologies, and classes are assigned to read my work there," he said.

Ginsberg now lectures, teaches at the Jack Kerouac School of Disembodied Poetics in Boulder, Colo., and writes and lives on a non-electric, 80-acre farm.

'Crime and Punishment' on PBS Sunday

NEW YORK (AP) — "Masterpiece Theater" begins its 10th season on Sunday with thanks due a single man responsible for four of the classics to be broadcast in the coming months.

"The fact that these programs are surfacing in America at the same time," says Jonathan Powell, one of Britain's foremost television producers, "is a kind of curious coincidence."

"They are the result of the last three years' work," he says, "and what you will be seeing, really, is a strand of programming coming out of what we call 'BBC-2 Classic Serial.'"

"Masterpiece Theater" opens its season on many Public Broadcasting Service stations at 9 p.m. EDT with the first chapter in a four-part adaptation of Dostoevsky's "Crime and Punishment," to be followed Oct. 26 by a five-part production of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice."

Both miniseries were produced by Powell, who also provided the British Broadcasting Corp. with two other dramatizations included in the upcoming "Masterpiece Theater" season — Vera Brittain's "Testament of Youth" and "Therese Raquin," by Emile Zola.

A fifth Powell production, "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy," based on John LeCarre's spy thriller, will be broadcast beginning Monday night at 8 EDT as part of PBS' "Great Performances" series. Yet another, a new production of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," is scheduled for January as part of public TV's "Mystery" program.

As with most public television presentations, air date and time for both "Masterpiece Theater" and "Great Performances" may vary.

BBC-2 is the non-commercial network's entertainment channel, and production for "Classic Serial" is among Powell's responsibilities.

"Over the years," says Powell, who is in his early 30s, "we've concentrated on the great classic novels of English literature, as well as other classics like 'Crime and Punishment.'"

"What we've been trying to do recently is retain this very valuable tradition for doing the classic novels, while attempting to bring into the strand different and rather offbeat literature, giving that the same care and production values as the others."

Powell says, for instance, that he considers "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy," which is not part of the "Masterpiece Theater" program, "a fairly substantial achievement in the modern novel."

"Possibly you could all it a classic thriller," he says, "and it was something I considered an accessible and good way of bringing the 'Classic Serial' strand up to date."

"We've also tried to use the stature of the series to support the more unusual," Powell says. "'Testament of Youth' is an extremely moving story of a girl growing up at home during World War I. It is in a way an indictment of war, and in that sense, it is a very contemporary story.

"The thinking behind all of this," the producer says, "is, let's keep this marvelous strand begun by the BBC, but let's not be hounded in our attention to the strictly classic literature." Novels like "Crime and Punishment" and "Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy" normally are not produced for television in this country, and Powell concedes that at least with those two, "one is dealing with fairly complex books."

"In 'Crime and Punishment,' the philosophy is complex, yet the story line has a very strong backbone. The complexity of the book, it was my hope, could be hinted at by having a very strong narrative.

"I think 'Tinker, Tailor' is an absolutely phenomenal book, considerably more than a spy book. What you have to have is an immediate hold on the audience, and in this case, it was the fact that this bumbling old spy has to find the Red in the organization.

"What we did was accent that aspect of the story at first, to sort of push the audience into the more complex environment, where gradations of morality become the important consideration."

Powell, meanwhile, is at work on at least two more productions that may find their way to American television in the near future, an adaptation of D.H. Lawrence's "Sons and Lovers," and another of LeCarre's novels, "Smiley's People."

Still in the planning stages, he says, are dramatizations of "The Woman in White," Wilkie Collins' mystery, and "The Bell," a contemporary novel by Iris Murdoch.

Canine home after opera opening

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Sandy, the scruffy mutt that plays in the musical "Annie," returned to his home state of Connecticut and greeted Gov. Ella Grasso with a furry paw and loud bark in her office Wednesday.

The canine star, adopted from the Connecticut Humane Society animal shelter in Newington in May 1976 when Annie was playing at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, appeared with the governor to promote the opening of the show in Hartford Wednesday night.

Sandy, the first canine star of the musical, was taking a one-night leave from the Broadway troupe to open the road show at the Bushnell Memorial Auditorium.

Meanwhile, Moose, the dog who usually performs in the touring company productions, got his big chance to fill in for Sandy for one night of the New York run.

Yuppies make politics pay off

WALTHAM, Mass. (AP) — The Yuppies of the 1960s are making their politics of the past pay off — doling out advice on the lecture circuit and accepting fees for their speeches.

Jerry Rubin, political activist of the late '60s, urged 600 Brandeis University students Tuesday night to make capitalism work for better social values. He also told them not to smoke too much marijuana.

Rubin then announced that fellow former Yippee Abbie Hoffman, who came in from the cold earlier this month after several years as a fugitive, will speak from the same stage next week.

Two die in Tokyo quake

TOKYO (AP) — A series of earthquakes jolted Tokyo and the surrounding area early today, killing two people, injuring at least 73 others and sending residents of the capital scurrying to stock up on survival gear and emergency supplies.

The first quake to hit the heavily-populated Tokyo-Yokohama region measured four on Japan's scale of seven, the central meteorological agency said. It was followed by at least four lesser tremors, the agency said.

Police said two persons died of shock during today's tremors, which focused in an area 29 miles east of Tokyo. They came less than 24 hours after another quake registering three on the scale of seven hit northeastern Japan, killing a 70-year-old woman and injuring five persons.

September is traditionally known as "earthquake month" in Japan, in part, because of the great Kanto earthquake that killed more than 100,000 on Sept. 1, 1923.

Department stores, cashing in on earthquake fears, started displaying quake survival kits in late August. Spokesmen for several major chains said sales jumped sharply after today's tremor, and many stores said they ran out before closing time.

Ikuko Tomita, a clerk in the Ginza district's Matsuzakaya Department Store, reported brisk sales in so-called "grab-and-dash kits," ranging from a backpack stuffed with canned food and mineral water for 13 meals, selling for about $46, to a deluxe five-person set complete with food, flashlight and radio that went for about $116.

Packets of dehydrated rice and cans of chicken stew also were selling well, the clerk said.

Japan does not use the Richter scale, the traditional measurement of ground motion as recorded by seismographs. The Japanese scale measures intensity. The great Kanto quake was a six on the Japanese scale and a 7.9 on the Richter scale. A reading of four on Japanese scale is powerful enough to shake houses.

Rose Kennedy undergoes surgery

BOSTON (AP) — Rose Kennedy, the 90-year-old matriarch of the Kennedy clan, was in stable condition early today recovering from surgery to remove "a kink" in her intestine. Her son, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, was reported en route to visit her.

It was the second operation in a year for Mrs. Kennedy, widow of an ambassador and the mother of two senators and a president. Last September, she underwent surgery for a hernia, and a small part of her small intestine was removed.

Priscilla Severance, a nursing supervisor at New England Baptist Hospital, said Mrs. Kennedy was sent from her Hyannis Port home on Cape Cod and admitted at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday on the advice of her personal physician, Dr. Robert Watt.

In an hour-long operation, Dr. Kenneth Warren, an intestinal specialist, removed "a kink" in her intestine. Mrs. Kennedy was taken to the recovery room at 12:40 a.m. today, said Ms. Severance.

Ms. Severance said Mrs. Kennedy was not accompanied by any family members when she was admitted. Sen. Kennedy reportedly was on his way to the hospital from Connecticut.

Mrs. Kennedy's late husband, Joseph P. Kennedy, was an ambassador to England. Her oldest son, Joseph P. Kennedy Jr., died in World War II. Two other sons, President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, were assassinated.

Mrs. Kennedy celebrated her 90th birthday in July, leading a march of grandparents in Hyannis on behalf of the Special Olympics, a series of games for mentally retarded children.

One of her four surviving daughters, Rosemary, was born retarded. Kathleen Kennedy died in a plane crash in 1948.

Carter gets support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has won a conditional endorsement for his re-election from the father of Polish strike leader Lech Walesa, even though the elder Walesa took part in Ronald Reagan's campaign kickoff.

The condition: that he can vote at all. Stanislaw Walesa, 64, told the president Wednesday he would vote for him if Carter would help him become a U.S. citizen, said Rep. Frank Guarini, D-N.J., who is Walesa's congressman and arranged the White House meeting.

Until he becomes an American citizen, Walesa is not eligible to vote.

Walesa — who three weeks ago shared a moment in the television network spotlight with Reagan — met with Carter for 10 minutes in the Oval Office to express thanks for recent U.S. financial aid to Poland.

ASPCA makes record haul

NEW YORK (AP) — In what the Health Department called "the largest haul on record," 107 dogs, two cats and one squirrel monkey were removed from a Staten Island home that had been the source of neighborhood complaints for months, officials said.

Eric Plasa, law enforcement director for the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said it took five vans eight hours to remove all the animals to the ASPCA's Brooklyn shelter.

The animals were seized Tuesday at the home of 70-year-old Mary Quinn of Todd Hill. Authorities said neighbors had complained about the noise and stench for months.

"They're taking away my dogs," the woman cried as an ASPCA team began to remove the dirty but apparently well-fed animals — most of them tan, apparently inbred mutts.

"We expected to find a large number of animals, but nothing like this," said a spokesman for the Health Department, which sent representatives to the scene.

"They kept hearing barking, and every door they opened they found 15 or 20 more," Plasa said of officers who entered the home with a search warrant.

Plasa said sanitary conditions in the house were "deplorable," with a "staggering roach population," but that Mrs. Quinn was allowed to remain with two of her older dogs — a poodle and a mutt.

He said the city Human Resources Administration sent a case worker to Mrs. Quinn on Wednesday to see if "the city can be of assistance to her."

"Unfortunately, this is not unique," he said. "We confront these situations continuously, where people with humane intentions allow a situation to get completely out of hand."

The agency appealed to the public to adopt the animals from its already overcrowded shelter, saying the pets needed "a lot of care and love."

Reza Pahlavi

Paul Michael Glaser

Son to assume shah's position

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) — PRINCE REZA PAHLAVI, 19, is preparing himself mentally and physically for the day when he expects to ascend Iran's Peacock Throne as shah, according to his former bodyguard.

Pahlavi, son of the late deposed shah, "firmly believes that he will be back in power some day," bodyguard David Balfour Jr. was quoted as saying in a copyright story in Wednesday's editions of the North Adams Transcript.

Pahlavi dropped out of Williams College here this semester to attend to family business in Cairo. His father died there earlier this year.

Balfour said family plans call for Pahlavi to resume his studies at Williams after he is installed as his father's successor next month in a ceremony in Cairo. He may be joined in Williamstown by other family members, Balfour told the newspaper.

Chris Godek, a family spokeswoman in New York, said she could not comment on the prince's plans for security reasons.

"I've seen him mature almost daily since January," Balfour said. "He is preparing, funneling all his energies, both mentally and physically, into leading his country."

"He is a regular guy, who never held his position above anyone. He tried to live as normal a life as he could here," Balfour said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor PAUL MICHAEL GLASER came down with stomach problems during a fishing trip at a remote Wyoming lake and had to be rescued by helicopter, according to his publicist.

Glaser, the 37-year-old former co-star of the ABC-TV series "Starsky and Hutch," was recuperating at a friend's ranch in Kelly, Wyo., publicist Ed Margulies said Wednesday.

Glaser and two friends stopped at Bridger Lake last Thursday after a 3½-day horseback ride, Margulies said. Glaser got severe stomach cramps the next day, he added.

On Monday, "he became so ill one of his friends jumped on a horse in desperation and rode to a ranger station," Margulies said. A ranger radioed for a helicopter, which took Glaser out the same day.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — FRED ASTAIRE is best known for singing and dancing to the songs of others, but now he has an award from a group of his peers in one of his lesser-known talents — songwriting.

At its annual membership meeting here Wednesday, The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers honored the 81-year-old entertainer with its highest honor, the Pied Piper Award.

Riot stage was set four years ago

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — The stage was set for February's bloody riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary when corrections officials four years ago began pitting inmate against inmate in an organized system of "snitching," a state report says.

Prisoners had long tolerated dismal conditions at the prison, including bad food and poor health care, according to the report issued today. But it was only when they were stripped of their self-esteem that trouble began brewing, it said.

The resentment burst into flames on Feb. 2-3 when inmates took 12 guards hostage. None of the guards was killed, but 33 inmates, many of them "snitches," died in rioting. Two of the inmates were mutilated; one had his head cut off after death.

Much of the prison, which had housed about 1,100 inmates, was left in ruins, forcing the state to lodge inmates in prisons in other states, where many of them remain.

The report, issued by the state attorney general's office, was the second of two studies on the rioting and presented theories on why the disturbance occurred. The first report, issued June 5, described the events before, during and after the outbreak.

Corrections Secretary Bill Giron said he would not comment until he had a chance to read the study.

The early 1970s were described by the report as a time of "minimal" violence at the prison.

"After 1975, however, inmates started going wild," reported one convict. "People were getting killed and stabbed. This place got worse than the streets," the report said.

The philosophy guiding the administration of the prison changed in 1975 when Warden Felix Rodriguez and Corrections Secretary Howard Leach were removed by then-Gov. Jerry Apodaca, the study said.

From 1975 to 1980, there were four wardens and four secretaries.

With the departure of Rodriguez and Leach and the arrival of a "new breed" of inmate — young, aggressive and violent — came a cutback on rehabilitation programs and curtailment of a system of providing inmates with rewards for good behavior, the report said.

"The result was a forced reliance on coercion as the primary method of inmate control," the report said.

"The primary factor leading to the February 1980 riot was the disruption of incentive controls over inmates," Attorney General Jeff Bingaman said.

"Human beings function better when they have some self-esteem and incentives in their lives," the investigators said.

The investigation found that the "snitch game" of coercing informants was begun at the prison at about the time of an inmate work strike in June 1976.

"The snitch game has been described by staff members and inmates as directly soliciting information through threats and promises," the report said. "Generally, inmates seeking protection had to inform before protection was given."

The report said that many inmates during Rodriguez' administration "volunteered information to the staff and warden with no prior agreement of special treatment, protection or reward."

The switch to the snitch method resulted in unreliable information for the administration and created "suspicion and antagonism among inmates," according to the report.

"Inmates and staff attributed some of the increase in violence during the late '70s to the motivation for revenge against snitches," the report said. "This vengeful violence reached its horrible climax in the 1980 riot," the study said.

The report said that security failures allowed rioters to seize full control of the prison within 22 minutes.

But, the report said, "these security failures do not explain why the riot occurred in the first place. The same opportunity to riot created by lax security existed in 1978, 1975 and 1970."

The report recommended two changes in the corrections system to prevent another riot.

The governor and the Legislature should set up an incentive-based corrections policy, the report said. The state should also hire stable, professional managers to implement the policy without political interference, the report said.

Darwin theory still controversial

Irving Stone

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Almost a century after his death, Charles Darwin can still arouse controversy, as author Irving Stone has discovered.

Stone was recently in San Diego as part of his national-wide tour to call attention to his latest biographical novel, "The Origin." On a radio talk show he engaged in a hot argument with religious fundamentalists who actively hate Darwin and his theory of evolution.

"There will always be a minority who take Genesis literally and believe that the world was created in six days and nights," Stone observed. "But how can they be sure, when there were no clocks and no calendars then? And what exactly was meant by 'day'?"

Charles Darwin is the latest of a series of monumental figures that Stone has brought to pulsing life by his combination of intense research and astute novelizing. For 45 years he has applied the treatment to Vincent Van Gogh, Jack London, Mary Todd Lincoln, Michaelangelo and Sigmund Freud.

It's a wonder he didn't get around to Darwin sooner.

"People have told me in comments and in fan mail that of all the figures I have dealt with, I am closest to Darwin both in background and nature," said Stone. "Certainly I felt close to Jack London, because I grew up in the Valley of the Moon where he lived. And Clarence Darrow was the idol of my college days."

"Darwin and I both use the academic approach to our work. Both of us have spent an intensive lifetime on research, he in a very profound respect, I in a mild way..."

"When I was working for my Ph.D. at Berkeley, I realized that the four men who changed the modern world were Albert Einstein, who introduced the space age; Karl Marx, who promulgated communism, which now rules Russia and China; Sigmund Freud, who discovered the unconscious; and Charles Darwin, who turned around the world's thinking about the origin of man."

"Not being scientific, I couldn't get into Einstein's mind. Marx was too opaque, an economic man. So I did Freud ("Passions of the Mind") and now, Darwin."

Along with his editor, fellow-researcher wife Jean, Stone devoted four years to "The Origin." They spent 2½ years in England, most of it at the Cambridge University Library where the Darwin papers are kept. They were accorded full cooperation by Darwin's descendants and stayed at his house in Kent.

"His great-grandson had me sit in Darwin's chair in the room where he worked," the author recalled. "He put in my lap the pine board on which Darwin wrote and placed in my hands the manuscript of 'Origin of the Species.' It was the most thrilling experience of my life."

Several of Stone's books have been made into films, the most successful being "Lust for Life." He would like to see "The Origin" filmed, but as a TV mini-series, not a movie.

"I think the longer form is better for books like mine," he observed. "That was proved with the movie of 'The Agony and the Ecstasy,' which treated only the painting of the Sistine Chapel. You can't cover the life of Michaelangelo in two hours."

Judge critical of jailing process

ATLANTA (AP) — While poor screening procedures have allowed some criminals to go free, many of the Cuban refugees confined in U.S. prisons are simply middle-class people who ran afoul of Cuba's government, an immigration judge says.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service Judge Theodore Jakaboski said Wednesday in an interview with the Atlanta Constitution that many refugees were found guilty of crimes in their communist-controlled homeland only because they were branded "social misfits" there. They don't deserve confinement in this country, Jakaboski said from El Paso, Texas.

Jakaboski was involved in hearings for Cubans at the U.S. penitentiary in Atlanta who are seeking asylum here.

He also criticized processing foul-ups and lack of follow-up by INS officials that affected decisions on which Cubans from the "freedom flotilla" should be jailed and which freed.

Three-member boards at refugee camps in Arkansas, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin often based their decisions on whom to send to prison on whether they believed refugees had been convicted of crimes in Cuba, Jakaboski said.

That determination often was based solely on the refugee's own statements, allowing some who lied convincingly to go free, the judge said. Translation problems also contributed to the jailing of some refugees without adequate reason, said Jakaboski.

In some cases, Cubans used the word "robo," which covers a wide range of petty crimes, to describe misdemeanor convictions. But INS officials used the strict English translation "robbery," a felony, he said.

Many jailed refugees are sons of former small landowners, middle-class businessmen and Cuban Army officers who served under the deposed President Fulgenio Batista, Jakaboski said. They had been branded "social misfits" by the Cuban government because of their family backgrounds, he said.

"One of the greatest problems is that the entire processing of the Cuban flotilla people failed to isolate certain of the Cubans who belonged to the petty bourgeoisie and failed to take into account that one common and well-expressed aim of the communist revolutionary people (is) to liquidate the remnants of the past, which in the Cuban case means the petty bourgeoisie," Jakaboski said.

COULD YOU USE $8100 TO FURTHER YOUR EDUCATION?
With tuition costs at colleges and vocational/technical schools at an all-time high, many high school graduates are finding themselves able to meet admission standards, but unable to afford the tuition.
The Navy wants all qualified candidates to achieve the goal of higher education. And we can help, through a dramatic new program called the Veterans Educational Assistance Plan.
Under this plan, Navy men and women can save from $50 to $75 each month, and their savings will be matched 2 for 1! If you save $2700 over a three year period, the Government will matc' this with $5400—for a combined saving of $8100!
Get all the facts. Just call your nearest Navy recruiter. He can tell you how to get ahead in the Navy. And how easy it is to save $8100.

When you buy a used car, what else do you get besides the car?

In a good restaurant, when you buy a dinner, you get more than just food. You get service, a pleasant atmosphere, and a feeling that the owners would like you to come back. It's the very same way that we like to sell used cars. Since our reputation is more "on the line" when we sell a used car, you can be sure we'll do everything we can to make our used car customer a satisfied customer.
