Connally bails out after weekend loss

By The Associated Press

Fourteen months, $10 million and one delegate after entering the Republican presidential derby, John Connally is out of the race.

He quit Sunday, a day after losing badly to Ronald Reagan in South Carolina, and two days before primaries in Georgia, Alabama and Florida — all states where Reagan is heavily favored.

Connally called Reagan "still the champion."

With Connally out, former President Gerald Ford is sure to feel new and heavy pressure to challenge Reagan, whom Ford considers too conservative to win the White House. Ford has said there is a 50-50 chance he will step in to try to deny Reagan the nomination.

But Connally, who entered as Reagan's major conservative challenger, in effect disagreed. Connally said he thinks Reagan could wrest the presidency from Jimmy Carter, who is seeking a second term, because, "Carter's popularity is a fantasy."

As for the three states with Republican primaries Tuesday, Reagan seems clearly the front-runner.

Former U.N. Ambassador George Bush, who finished a distant third in South Carolina behind Reagan and Connally, has hardly campaigned in Georgia and has had an Alabama organization only since Thanksgiving. In Florida, a poll published Sunday by the Miami Herald gave Reagan the lead.

Reagan, campaigning today in Florida, said he did not think Connally's departure would affect his own campaign. Connally's backers would probably split among the remaining contenders, Reagan said, adding, "There aren't too many directions for them to go any more."

Meanwhile, an ABC News-Lou Harris poll taken last week and released Sunday said Ford would defeat Carter if the election were held today and that the former president may be a slight favorite over Reagan among Republicans and independent voters for the GOP nomination.

The poll gave Ford a 54-44 percent margin over Carter, with the other 2 percent not sure. But Carter would defeat Reagan by a 58-40 margin, the same poll showed. Two percent were not sure.

Among Republicans and independents only, Ford was favored by 33 percent and Reagan by 27 percent for the GOP nomination. The ABC-Harris polls generally have error margins of about 6 percentage points either way, and thus Ford and Reagan may have split the vote, with Ford perhaps slightly ahead.

Bush, heading for last-minute campaigning in Alabama, said he may get some votes Tuesday that would otherwise have gone to Connally.

Even if he loses in the three primaries Tuesday and in the Illinois primary next week, Bush said, he will stay in the race through the party's national convention in July.

Bush has said he is the most viable

Republican alternative to Reagan and on Sunday, addressing himself to the prospect of a Ford candidacy, he said he's convinced "the American people are not interested in any rerun of the 1976 election."

Of Connally, Bush said he felt sympathy for the man whose 30 percent of the South Carolina doubled his own 15 percent. Reagan, however, dwarfed both with 54 percent, enough to capture all of the state's 25 convention delegates.

Connally, at his Houston news conference, noted that he had finished "not a very close second," and said he would do some things differently, if he had it to do over again, but added "I don't know if it would make any difference."

He had stayed out of the New England primaries to concentrate on South Carolina. But toward the end, the former Texas governor, who had rejected federal matching funds in favor of private support, was in financial trouble. And despite an earlier effort in Iowa and the all-out South Carolina push, Connally had won only one delegate, 67-year-old Ada Mills of Clarksville, Ark.

Connally, with his wife at his side, told an audience of reporters and several hundred supporters that he was "disturbed that somehow we have failed to bring into focus the issues that will affect this nation in the future." He entered the race Jan. 24, 1979.

from the campaign for the Republican presidential nomination. The action followed a poor showing in the South Carolina primary. (AP Laserphoto)

Texas GOP leaders compare Reagan, Bush

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Republican leaders disagreed on whether George Bush or Ronald Reagan would benefit most from John Connally's withdrawal from the Republican presidential race.

Predictably, the state campaign chairmen for Reagan and Bush forecast Connally's supporters would turn to their own camps.

But state Republican Chairman Chester Upham said it was "too early to tell" which candidate would be the chief beneficiary of the Connally withdrawal.

Upham, of Mineral Wells, was here for a meeting of the state Republican's executive committee, which will decide today such matters as straw polls on issues to be conducted as part of the primary.

Ernest Angelo, Reagan's state chairman and a Republican national committeeman, said Connally and Reagan attracted the same kind of voters.

"There's no question in my mind that he (Reagan) will (benefit)," said Angelo, of Midland. "The appeal of Reagan is to much the same sort of people as those attracted by Gov. Connally."

"There's another Texan in the race and the people in Texas will be interested in the candidacy of George Bush," said Hall DeMoss of Houston, Bush's state chairman.

DeMoss also said he hoped Bush would spend more time campaigning in Texas now that Connally had bowed out of the race. Angelo said Reagan would spend five to seven days in Texas before the May 5 primary, but said he doubted the former California governor would increase his campaign time here.

Connally, a former Democrat and Texas governor announced Sunday he was pulling out of the presidential race after a particularly poor showing in the South Carolina primary. Connally finished a distant second behind Reagan.

Liberal and moderate Democrats had hoped the Connally candidacy would drain off enough conservative Democrats the Democratic nominations in many legislative races toward more liberal and moderate candidates.

Upham said he expected many of those voters whom he typified as independents now would go back to the Democratic primary, "but some will stay."

He said he didn't expect anything like a majority of Connally supporters to go back to the Democratic primary.

Upham also said he expects Connally's withdrawal to reduce the voter turnout in the party primary by about 100,000 voters.

"I was anticipating one million people. Let me guess 900,000 now," said Upham.

Khomeini sets questioning limits

By The Associated Press

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said today the U.N. commission on question U.S. Embassy hostages involved in alleged crimes against Iran, but the panel can not see all the captives unless it issues its report in Tehran, the state radio said. "We shall fight against the U.S. government to the end of our life," Khomeini said.

His statement appeared to repudiate a decision by the governing Revolutionary Council, President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh that the militants holding the approximately 50 hostages for 128 days allow the panel to meet all the hostages or hand them over to government custody.

However, Ghotbzadeh denied it was a setback and said the council had decided not to seek custody of the hostages for the time being.

"Most of my colleagues on the Revolutionary Council do not think that it is appropriate for the government to take over the hostages. Personally, I wouldn't mind," Ghotbzadeh said in an interview broadcast on the ABC-TV program, "Good Morning America."

"Nevertheless, this was the decision of the council, not to take them back," Ghotbzadeh said.

Bani-Sadr criticized the militants of creating a "whirlwind" and diverting national attention from other problems.

In an article in the daily newspaper Islamic Revolution, Bani-Sadr wrote that the militants were working "to harm the image of the revolution both inside and outside the country and to cast doubts" on the nation.

Khomeini's statement also ordered the embassy militants "to deliver copies of all documents concerning the U.S. intervention and the traitor shah" to the U.N. commission. The statement was issued after 10 members of the council met with him in hopes of resolving the deadlock with the militants.

"The panel can meet with those hostages involved in the case of the United States and the shah for questioning," Iran's 79-year-old revolutionary leader said. A Tehran Radio version of Khomeini's statement, monitored in Kuwait, authorized the commission to question "those hostages whose names appear in the said documents...."

"If the panel issues its report on the crimes of the deposed shah and interventions of the invading U.S. in Tehran it will be allowed to see all the hostages."

Khomeini concluded by saying, "I reaffirm my support for the Revolutionary Council and the honorable president of the republic and ask all the nation to help support them."

Ghotbzadeh said he hoped the U.N. panel would stay in Tehran for two or three more days to meet with several of the hostages, as Khomeini outlined, then issue a "declaration, not a report" of its findings so it could then meet with the rest of the captives. Asked when the hostages might be freed, he reiterated, "This is a decision of the Parliament," which is not expected to discuss the issue until May.

Ghotbzadeh also suggested the hostages weren't in good condition since the militants had not invited any member of the Revolutionary Council to visit them. He said if the militants wanted to prove the captives were healthy, they should permit the U.N.

investigating commission to see them.

The U.N. commission arrived in Tehran Feb. 23 to investigate the revolutionary regime's charges of mass murder and plunder against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and to try to ease the crisis between the United States and Iran over the hostages.

The Carter administration hoped the commission's visit would result in the speedy release of the Americans. But after the panel got there, Khomeini said the hostages' fate would be

47 Iranian students claim their arrests 'retaliatory'

MONROE, La. (AP) — Forty-seven jailed Iranians, on the fourth day of a hunger strike, claim they were arrested in retaliation for the seizure of the 50 Americans held hostage in Iran, and will not cooperate at their arraignment today, their lawyer says.

"Apparently the officers were trying to get the magic number of 50," lawyer Marion Overton White said Sunday.

"The arrest is political and racial. They were singled out as Iranians and arrested. Some of them were arrested off of the campus, others were arrested in the parking lot, others were arrested in their cars," he said.

The 47, and another Iranian who was released on $100 bond Saturday, were arrested after they broke up a speech by a former Iranian diplomat Thursday at Northeast Louisiana University. They were held on charges of trespassing and resisting police officers after they shouted down Perydoun Hoveyda, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations under the deposed shah.

White said they had broken no laws and had not heeded, but only asked questions the audience did not like. He said two Americans, an Italian and an Arab were arrested with the Iranians, but released without being charged when police learned their nationalities.

Police officers on duty Sunday night were unable to confirm or deny his claims. "I don't know. I wasn't there," said Sgt. Don McClanahan, the supervisor on duty.

The Iranians were scheduled for arraignment today, but White said they would not cooperate.

What's good for landlord may cost tenant

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a four-part series on landlord-tenant relations in Midland.

By KAY HORD-CRITES
Staff Writer

Midland is suffering severe growing pains in the area of rental property, perhaps a boon to the landlord but misery for the tenant.

"It's a landlord's market right now," said Mike Williams with West Texas Legal Services, a non-profit organization to represent low-income people.

Ralph Noyes, also with West Texas Legal Services, said Midland isn't really exceptional, except for the housing shortage.

"There's a lot of dilapidated housing here that landlords have no incentive to fix because they know they can rent it to someone else if you move out."

TENANTS IN MIDLAND are living in houses with no heat in winter, no running water and collapsed ceilings, according to spokesmen with various agencies in Midland.

Unlike Dallas and Austin, Midland has no specific city code to work in conjunction with state legislation requiring minimum standards for rental property.

According to Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr., the suggestion has never come before the City Council.

City Attorney Joe Nuessle said the city does have a minimum housing standards ordinance. However, he added, he has not researched the subject enough to determine if this ordinance could be applied to require repairs by landlords or if the city could adopt a law specifically relating to rental property.

"The only real solution is the construction of low-income housing," Williams said.

"It's a bad problem," Betty Sheeler with the Midland Housing Association said of the rental situation.

"It seems to me that one of the things that leads to this varied problem with landlords wanting to get rid of tenants not paying rent is the lack of low-cost rental property in Midland."

"PEOPLE NEED A place to live," she continued. "They're out on the streets for all practical purposes and their income is $100 to $200 per week. They move into a unit where rent is $250 to $300 a month and there's no way it's possible.

"They're in the unit and they get behind on their rent. Then come the doctor's bills or the kids need something for school and at the end of the month, it's the rent money that's gone."

The landlord can't be blamed for wanting his rent, Mrs. Sheeler said.

But on the other hand, "There's a large number of Midlanders that for one reason or another are never going to be able to own homes. Those people ought to be able to find in Midland some low-cost rental housing. It could be provided by industry or through some cooperation between the city government or some sort of subsidy," she suggested.

Mrs. Sheeler, who operates the county Section 8 rental assistance program funded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, recalled a couple with two or three children who came into her office.

"THEY HAD JUST moved here from north Texas. He was making $700 to $750 a month and they moved into a place for $325 a month. But with gas expenses they were soon behind in their rent. They came in to see if we could help.

"It turned out they were three months behind. The landlord tried to find the family and discovered they left the dogs in all day and they only came home late at night. The property was being ruined. So you see both sides of the story there," she added.

"It's amazing that two-thirds of these people are working. They're not on welfare; they're employed to the limit of their employability," she

Tito's condition stable

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The condition of Yugoslavia's gravely ill President Josip Broz Tito apparently stabilized today after taking a turn for the worse on Sunday.

"During the past day there have been no signs of deterioration of the general state of health of President Tito," his doctors said in an advisory reported by Belgrade press officials.

"Indispensable measures of intensive treatment are being continued," the statement added.

On Sunday, the doctors said the 87-year-old leader had slipped into "very grave condition," with a continued weakening of the heart and a growing problem of internal bleeding problem.

Medical sources, apprised of the official bulletins on Tito's health, speculated the bleeding problem could be related to anti-clotting medication used in connection with the artificial kidney machine. Tito has been kept alive by the kidney dialysis machine since at least Feb. 22, his doctors have said.

The president developed kidney and heart problems in early February while recovering from the Jan. 20 amputation of his left leg because of a circulatory problem. He has been in the Ljubljana clinical center in Slovenia since Jan. 12.

Soccer players now involved in scandals

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

ROME (AP) — A new wave of scandals has erupted in Italy, casting dark clouds over the ruling Christian Democratic party, the corner savings bank and even some of the country's adored soccer players.

"Povera Italia!" — "Poor Italy!" — said the banner headline in one newspaper.

In the past few weeks:

- Three construction tycoons fled the country in their private jet ahead of arrest warrants, allegedly leaving behind unpaid debts of 160 billion lire ($190 million). A Cabinet minister quit under fire after admitting he accepted campaign funds from the builders for the long-dominant Christian Democrat Party.
- Police roused 38 bank presidents and businessmen from their beds at dawn in nationwide arrests for allegedly lending money to friends or political allies without obtaining adequate guarantees.
- Italians are used to political scandals. President Giovanni Leone resigned in 1978 because of press allegations of tax evasion and other financial irregularities. A former defense minister went to jail in the Lockheed payoffs scandal. Last December, Saudi Arabia halted an oil deal after published reports that the Italian state energy group made a payoff of $115 million to secure the contract.
- Now the charges of corruption have moved out of the realm of politics and into the game of soccer, a source of pride and passion for Italians, from little boys waiting for their heroes outside of the dressing rooms to their fathers plunking down 350 lire (40 cents) each week in the hope of becoming rich in the state-run pools.
- The nation has been stunned by allegations that 27 stars, some of whom earn over $220,000 a year, accepted bribes to influence the outcome of games. Two front men for a syndicate of gamblers filed suit charging the players took the bribes but didn't throw their games.
- All the players have declared their innocence, although one admitted he accepted a check, explaining it was only to buy a gold watch. But angry and disillusioned fans have already turned on the former untouchables. At a weekday practice for Rome's Lazio team, several hundred shouted "thieves," "shame" and other insults at the players.
- Even "the Italy of the scandals, as it is known abroad," has never suffered scandals in such rapid-fire succession, said-Corriere Della Sera of Milan, the country's largest newspaper.
- The political-financial scandals are rooted in the patronage system, the abuses of which are apparently still unchecked despite a 1974 law providing public financing of political parties.
- The missing builders, the Sicilian-born Caltagirone brothers, were known to be close to the Christian Democrats and reportedly often gave lavish parties for leading politicians at their villas in Italy and on the French Riviera and at an apartment in New York. They built up a property empire, obtaining funds from the state central savings institute, Italcasse. Liquidation proceedings have now been started against 19 companies the brothers controlled and they have been charged with fraudulent bankruptcy.
- The former management of Italcasse had been convicted of using the bank's funds to make illegal contributions to political parties. These were known as "black funds" because the money involved was not recorded in the bank's books.
- As the Caltagirone controversy simmered, and newspapers asked if they were tipped that arrest warrants were about to be issued, Franco Evangelisti, the minister of merchant marine, was quoted as saying in an interview that he accepted campaign money from one of the brothers.
- After the Communist Party threatened to ask for a vote of confidence in Parliament, Evangelisti, a close associate of former Premier Giulio Andreotti, resigned.
- The bankers were picked up in a "white funds" scandal — that is, the controversial loans were fully accounted for. Among those arrested were the top executives or former officials of savings banks in Milan, Florence, Genoa, Bologna, Palermo and other cities, persons known in Italy as "citizens above any suspicion."
- "It's the end of an era," said author Luigi Barzini, who chronicled scandals of an earlier day in his best-seller "The Italians."
- Barzini explained: "Italy has gone through the so-called fat cow years in which everything was permitted to people who had sufficient political backing. Suddenly, this protection has vanished and...it's the hour of reckoning."
