Residents shout curses at officials proposing to release radioactivity

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Hundreds of area residents, angered and frightened at a proposal to release radioactive gases from the Three Mile Island nuclear plant, screamed curses at federal officials who came to tell them any exposure would be minuscule.

"We hate your guts!" one woman shouted. "You're an animal!" another woman screamed at a biologist.

"Take the message home to Washington: There shall be no peace in Middletown," Steve Reed, a state legislator and Dauphin County commissioner, told officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

The NRC called the meeting Wednesday to explain a staff recommendation that some krypton gas be released into the atmosphere so cleanup operations can proceed at the plant, site of the worst accident in commercial nuclear history. Final action on the recommendation could come early next month.

Five hundred persons jammed the fire hall for the meeting, which NRC site operations chief John Collins said was by far the most hostile he had seen since the March 28 accident.

"I'm five months pregnant ... I resent having a handful of people making a decision that is going to affect thousands," Michelle Lewert told the officials.

"We will never forget or forgive what you have put us through ... You are no more worthy than a hunk of cow manure."

Meanwhile, in Harrisburg, a consultant hired by the state Public Utility Commission said the damaged reactor at the plant would cost $1 billion to clean up — if it is not beyond repair. Dr. Robert Parente said he doubted the plant would reopen because of protests and stress on area residents.

The plant's owner, General Public Utilities, expects to spend $400 million repair the crippled reactor. GPU officials told the PUC there was no technical reason why repairs could not be completed and that the undamaged reactor should be returned to service.

The NRC staff has recommended that 57,000 curies of krypton be vented from the plant's reactor containment building. Krypton cannot readily be filtered from air, and the NRC says alternatives to venting would take two years or more to put into operation.

In addition, seals and equipment in the building need to be serviced and officials want to avoid any failure. But workers can't go in for long periods as long as the gas is present.

Collins said the maximum dose from the venting would be a fifth of one millirem while a chest X-ray involves about 35 millirems. NRC radiation biologist Reginald Gotchy said about 10 million curies of similar gases escaped during last year's crisis.

Those arguments did not influence the crowd, who chanted: "Keep your krypton, keep your krypton."

After the meeting ended, a reporter asked the normally unflappable Collins if he was all right.

"No," he replied, and then slowly looked away. "Do the people here think we're inhuman? I really want to help these people," Collins said.

A gas project 25 miles northeast of Mentone in Loving County Wednesday burns out of control for the sixth day. The project, Getty Oil Co. No. 1-12-26 Brunson, a scheduled 22,500-foot project, blew out and caught fire Friday morning when drilling had reached 16,528 feet. The Sharp Drilling Co. rig on the hole was totally destroyed. No one was injured. Boots & Coots, Inc., is on location making preparations to snuff out the blaze.

Strike settlement snagged

DENVER (AP) — As efforts to settle a 10-week nationwide strike by oil refinery workers bogged down, the union president accused the oil companies of "trying to chisel" the 55,000 strikers and said the strike could continue indefinitely.

The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union announced a tentative agreement Monday with Gulf Oil Corp. and Cities Service Oil Co., saying the two-year contract was expected to set a pattern for the rest of the industry to follow.

By Wednesday night, OCAW had received offers from 18 other oil companies, but none of the dozen offers that had been given initial study by union officials was deemed acceptable.

OCAW president Robert Goss said the recent offers failed to correspond to Gulf's expected "pattern" contract, and called that situation "a major complication."

The package offered by Gulf included a 52-cent per hour wage boost in addition to a 5 percent increase negotiated earlier, retroactive to Jan. 8, along with a 10.5 percent increase in 1981. Oil workers currently average $9.55 per hour. In addition, Gulf offered to pay a larger share of workers' medical insurance, to start a dental plan, and to give long-term workers more vacation time.

OCAW contracts are negotiated by individual locals but must be approved by the union's National Oil Bargaining Policy Committee before being sent back to the locals for ratification.

The traditional pattern in union contract negotiations — and the pattern seen in the current series of talks — has been for a large company to settle with the OCAW and for the rest of the industry to follow.

"Gulf apparently was spokesman for the industry and had been acting in concert with the rest of the industry in making offers to the union," union spokesman Jerry Archuleta said. "The implication was that Gulf would set a pattern."

Earlier Wednesday, Goss told a reporter "the problem is that the oil companies, as usual, are trying to chisel the union." Asked how long the strike might continue, Goss replied, "Indefinitely."

Archuleta said the additional offers were made by Texaco, Mobil, Atlantic Richfield, Phillips, Amoco, British Petroleum, Shell, Exxon, Union, Conoco, Ashland, Sun, Standard of Ohio, Jefferson Chemical, Rock Island Refining, Champlin, Energy Cooperative, and Amdel.

New signals indicate indefinite hostage crisis

By The Associated Press

Signals coming from Iran indicate the American hostages may be held indefinitely, the U.S. government said today. Meanwhile, Iranians celebrated the new year with fiery incantations, lucky goldfish and strolling minstrels after 61 prisoners were freed under an amnesty by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The new year holiday, called Now Ruz, closed government offices for the next week and took public attention away from the slow counting of votes in the parliamentary election last week and the 50 hostages, who began their 138th day in captivity in the U.S. Embassy today.

"The signals which are now coming out of Iran suggest that the detention of the hostages may continue indefinitely," State Department legal adviser Roberts B. Owen told the World Court in the Hague, Netherlands.

"No one in this courtroom has any way of knowing whether the Ayatollah Khomeini will continue to hold the hostages in captivity for a month or for a year or for a decade," he declared.

Owen said that U.S. hopes for release of the hostages were shattered early this month when the U.N. investigating commission left Iran without seeing the captives. He called the World Court the most promising hope for the ultimate release of the hostages and called for an urgent final judgment on the U.S. case against Iran.

Owen told the court on Wednesday the hostages were held under "harsh and inhumane conditions" and were "confined like common criminals."

No one can realize the 'American dream,' says oil executive

AUSTIN (AP) — As long as government, industry, labor and the media oppose each other, no one can realize the "American dream," says an oil and gas executive.

Chairman Theodore Burtis of Sun Co., Inc., said he was "convinced that the time is right for all of us to put America first and private interests second."

However, Burtis said, "We will not cooperate with any process whose objective is to destroy us."

Burtis and two dozen other executives spoke at the Texas Railroad

"Inside this hotel are executives of multi-national firms who have come to Texas today to cry on the shoulders of the only watchdogs in the country who are faithful to them." — Jim Hightower, railroad commission candidate

Commission's annual "state of the industry" meeting. Jim Hightower, who is running against commissioner James Nugent, described the session as an "exclusive club meeting of the national energy establishment."

"Inside this hotel are executives of multi-national firms who have come to Texas today to cry on the shoulders of the only watchdogs in the country who are faithful to them," said Hightower.

"When they finish bleeding us down to the last penny, perhaps the commissioners will use that last penny to cover one eye of the senior citizens for their final rite," said Conrad Fath, one of several persons who appeared with Hightower at a news conference.

Vice President Collin Lee of Conoco, Inc., said gasoline demand is expected to drop by 6.9 million barrels a day this year because of higher prices, and he added:

"We do not foresee supply shortages curbing consumption in 1980 as they did during the spring of 1979 unless we have a major disruption in world crude oil supplies."

Jack Herring, senior vice president of Marathon Oil Co., said higher oil prices should enable operators to halt the slide in domestic crude production in 1980. He and others predicted crude oil imports would drop.

Executive Vice President Robert Weeks of Mobil Oil Corp. said Americans "were lucky" last year in avoiding a severe energy shortage.

"We were spared the social and economic hardships of a shortage that could have shut down factories, eliminated jobs and left homes without adequate heat. That kind of shortage was a real possibility and still is," said Weeks.

John Morley, senior vice president of Exxon Co., U.S.A., said by the late 1980s synthetic fuels "may begin serving as a bridge, buying time by helping offset the oil and gas decline" while industry attempts to switch to such energy sources as solar and nuclear fusion.

"The resources needed to support a synthetic fuels industry are abundant," Morley said. "U.S. oil shale and coal are capable of providing energy equivalent to almost a trillion barrels of oil. That's enough to supply the current U.S. oil demand of about 18 million barrels per day for the next 150 years."

The commission set the statewide oil allowable at 100 percent for April. As usual, production in the East Texas Field was restricted to 86 percent to avoid possible waste.

Wind erosion worse this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Damage to land because of wind is exceeding the relatively low rate of erosion last year in the Great Plains, according to the latest survey by the Agriculture Department.

About 3.1 million acres of land have been damaged in parts of the 10-state region so far this season, compared to fewer than 1.2 million in the same period of a year ago, the department's Soil Conservation Service said Wednesday.

More than half of the damaged acreage was reported in two states, South Dakota and Texas.

According to the experts, land is considered damaged by wind "if enough soil has been removed or deposited on it to subject the land to further erosion hazard, or to impair its productive capacity."

The agency conducts regular surveys of the region during seven months when wind erosion is most severe. That season runs from Nov. 1 through the following May 31.

Figures released Wednesday were for damage through February, the first four months of the 1979-80 season.

Over the entire seven months of last season, about 2.9 million acres of land in the 10-state region were damaged by wind, one of the mildest seasons for wind erosion in some time. In 1976-77, for example, wind damaged nearly 8 million acres.

In the mid-1950s, when there was prolonged drought in the Great Plains, wind damage was even more severe, with the damage ranging up to 15.8 million acres in 1954-55.

Norman A. Berg, administrator of the Soil Conservation Service, said last year's reduced summer and fall precipitation and the absence of adequate snowcover this winter were major factors in this season's increased wind erosion.

Damage in the first four months of this season, compared to the acreage damaged in the same period of 1978-79, included:

Northern Great Plains — Montana, 406,125 acres and 210,730 a year earlier; Nebraska, 34,135 and 15,467; North Dakota, 277,750 and 70,960; South Dakota, 620,948 and 102,078; and Wyoming, 13,830 and 21,500.

Southern Great Plains — Colorado, 10,185 and 19,670; Kansas, 442,140 and 31,328; New Mexico, 148,900 and 145,800; Oklahoma, 180,450 and 32,825; and Texas, 989,247 and 520,491.

Adams defends unmarked cars

DPS head says goal is saving lives

Receiving heavy criticism was the use of unmarked cars at night, and the penalty for drivers afraid to stop for those unmarked vehicles while on lonely stretches of highway.

"He (Hobby) did come out with a comment of disapproval," Adams said before his luncheon speech. "But Lt. Gov. Hobby has been very supportive of traffic safety in the state, and I think his disagreement over this technique is not indicative of a lack of support of general traffic safety."

"I REALIZE IT is a sensitive technique. But I consider it within my authority as director of the DPS to use

"We will not be using unmarked cars at night," Col. James Adams, Texas Department of Public Safety director, told participants from 26 counties during a traffic safety seminar Wednesday at Midland College.

The use of unmarked cars to stop the "professional" speeder — one who uses radar detectors, CB radios and even police scanners to avoid detection — has come under fire from various parties, including Lt. Gov. William Hobby.

"I consider that the goal of saving lives and gasoline are realistic and attainable."

Adams defended his policy by saying that, although black and white units serve as some deterrent, there is only one patrol unit for every 120 miles of highway to be covered.

"That's not saturation point. It's just ridiculous," Adams told his listeners. "It's token coverage."

He also added that black-and-whites would be used to make the majority of the arrests. Most of the time, unmarked vehicles would be used only to detect the speeder.

"However, I have authorized all of our regions to utilize unmarked vehicles to make the stop where we have a flagrant violation pattern — particularly heavy trucks."

"Is it a sneaky technique? We do not consider it sneaky as the violator has a posted sign saying 55 mph."

"And there are those who are concerned that it might encourage people to impersonate an officer and perpetrate some criminal actions, such as

A 36-year-old Midland man was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital this morning for observation after being involved in a car-train collision. Anastasio Rodriguez, 36, of 1120 E. Hamby Ave. was listed in stable condition with multiple contusions and abrasions, a hospital spokesman said.

Trucks. "We believe we are getting results. Even in West Texas, we are seeing a major trucking company posting notices that if you exceed the speed limit you will be dismissed," Adams said, adding that a major bottling company company has posted the same notice.

ADAMS ALSO updated his audience on drug trafficking in Texas. "I have no choice in selecting this as a No. 1 priority," he said. "Although more drugs are now coming in from Iran, Adams said there were still 75,000 heroin addicts in Texas and still a 'great deal of heroin coming into Texas."

"The DPS budget is $95 million a year. That is what we are up against," Adams pointed out. "When we seize a ship or plane, it has two of everything. If something breaks down, they don't want to have to get it repaired. And there's some of the equipment over which we just drool. "LSD is coming back, and we're seeing the growth of methamphetamine labs."

Eagle's Nest observatory serious business for hobby

Cop, wife held for burglaries

VERNON, Texas (AP) — Authorities here said they recovered about $20,000 in merchandise and have arrested a city patrolman and his wife in connection with a string of burglaries. Wilbarger County Sheriff Clinton Russell said John Troy Doughten, 26, was arrested at the Vernon police station Wednesday and his wife, Helen Edna Doughten, was arrested at their home a short time later.

Foreign models told to leave by Italians

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The Milan police called in about 40 foreign fashion models, asked them some questions and told them to leave Italy "as soon as possible." Then the beautiful outlaws went back to the runway to finish selling Italian fashions. The police hauled in the beauties from the United States, Ethiopia, the Cape Verde Islands and Japan on Wednesday because an association of Italian models complained that their foreign competitors didn't have the required work permits.

Volunteer service making comeback

WASHINGTON (AP) — The armed services appear to be making a comeback from their worst recruiting year since the draft ended in 1973. A new Pentagon summary shows the services signed up 150,500 men and women in the first five months of this fiscal year, or 99 percent of the goal for the period. This amounts to about 33,000 more volunteers than in the corresponding time span a year ago.

Eastern Airlines solves mystery of 'red sweat'

MIAMI (AP) — Eastern Airlines says its "red sweat" mystery has been solved — and it was no sweat at all. The puzzling specks that had some flight attendants worried they were sweating blood were flakes of red ink from life preservers. The case was cracked after an intense airborne detective operation in which Eastern doctors, company supervisors and government experts rode jets up and down the Atlantic Coast to see what was wrong.

The fire in a pulling unit was brought under control within an hour.

Baby kidnapped from hospital

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A woman who walked into a University of Tennessee hospital room offering to change a 4-day-old girl's diaper has disappeared with the infant, officials say. The mother was nursing her first-born child at about 1:30 p.m. Wednesday when a woman walked in, started a conversation, offered to change the baby's wet diaper and disappeared with her, said hospital spokesman Frank Limpus.

Eastern Airlines solves mystery of 'red sweat'

The mystery was solved last week when Eastern supervisors watched attendants demonstrate the yellow rubber life preservers carried on some flights. Stenciled on the jackets in bright red letters were the words: "Demo Only." As attendants put the jackets on and removed them, tiny red flakes fell onto their skin, said Edwina Gilbert, Eastern vice president for in-flight services. She tried it herself and caught a mild case of red sweat: a bright crimson flake just below one eye.

Kidney transplant mortality rate decreasing rapidly, experts say

I would appreciate any information you could give me on the Taxpayer Education program.

About the middle of January, 1980, the enclosed article was published in the newspapers in Midland and Odessa. An application for attendance was with the article, with a Midland Post Office number. I sent a check to the box number, but did not receive any tickets nor any information about the program. Nor did I read anything else about it in the papers.

My check was deposited in The First National Bank of Midland (see enclosure). There was no signature on the check, but was marked for deposit only.

I would like very much any information you could send me concerning this organization. I am wondering if it was just another racket that also took other people's money.

Thanking you in advance, I am Mrs. C. H. Brewster, Odessa.

ANSWER: Answer Line checked with a Midland accounting firm and had the luck to contact one of the instructors for the course. She asked for your name and address in Odessa, and said she would be in touch with you.

Recently my parents passed away, and, in the possessions, I found a book of addresses

The book belonged to my mother, who lived in Wisconsin until 1932, and was related to the Dickson and Edgar families.

The address I have is Mrs. Anna Currie, 918 S. Main St., Midland, Texas.

I would like to correspond with this lady or one of her family since I'm sure they are our relatives, and my letter came back from there.

Thank you for your consideration. — Mrs. Dick Marquette, Marysville, Calif.

ANSWER: There is no reference to Mrs. Anna Currie in the Midland telephone directory.

We also checked with some of the Curries listed in the directory and were told they had no information on a Mrs. Anna Currie.

I am in a wheelchair. Can I go on a vacation? Are motels and restaurants made so that I can maneuver my wheelchair into their facilities? — Mrs. S.T.

ANSWER: Many are. ACCENT Special Publications has two books available on the subject — "Travel Ability" and "The Wheelchair Traveler." Write to ACCENT Special Publications, Box 700, Bloomington, Ill., 61701.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has been receiving dialysis for kidney failure for more than a year; now, his doctor has suggested that he think about a transplant. In view of the danger inherent in any surgical procedure, it seems to me he would be taking an unnecessary risk. What would you recommend in this case? — Mr. V.H.

Dear Mr. H.: I assume you reflect some of your father's anxieties about the recommendations for a transplant, and I suggest he discuss them fully and frankly with his doctor. A patient in your father's position should be aware of the advantages and disadvantages of both continued dialysis and transplant surgery.

Although a transplant operation obviously is not without risk, mortality rates from this kind of surgery have fallen in recent years. Dr. Nicholas L. Finey, associate professor of surgery at Harvard University and head of the transplant unit at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in Boston, says that mortality rates there decreased after one year from 15 percent in 1974 to two percent for patients receiving living grafts in 1975 and to five percent for those receiving cadaver grafts, in 1975 as well. In the nation as a whole, the rate is still about 15 percent.

This hospital's increased success in kidney transplantation may be a factor in prompting doctors to recommend the procedure for patients who previously would not have been considered for the operation.

The patients include the obese, the individuals with pulmonary problems and the diabetics.

Many kidney specialists believe that continued improvement in transplant procedures actually will make dialysis obsolete by the end of the century. In this area, the main obstacle still to be overcome is the tendency of the body to reject tissue that is foreign to it. Such tolerance has been achieved in experiments with animals but is not yet a reality for humans.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I gave up cigarette smoking years ago when the surgeon-general warned of the risk of cancer; at that time, I began smoking a pipe. Now, a buddy of mine tells me that pipe smoking can cause lip cancer. I feel almost as if I've gone from the frying pan into the fire. If what my friend says is true, is there any sense in switching from cigarettes to a pipe? — Nicholas.

If you are concerned about lip cancer and really want to do something about it, give up your pipe the same way you gave up cigarettes.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I seem to be asking if which of two poisons is less harmful. The prudent person would make sure to avoid both.

Both pipe smoking and moderate to heavy cigarette smoking have been linked to lip cancer. It is the most common malignant tumor in the oral cavity, with an incidence of 1.8 cases per 100,000 people in the United States.

Dear Nicholas: There is, of course, another alternative — stop smoking altogether. What you Beeson Carroll (center) stars as W.D. Hall, the town grocer, and Brian Godfrey Wilson (left) and Michael J. Fox play his sons, in a poignant dramatic series set in the rural south of the 1930's, "Palmerstown, U.S.A.," premiering with a special two-hour episode, Thursday, March 20, on CBS.

Conceived and created by Alex Haley ("Roots") and Norman Lear (of "All In The Family" fame), the series is about two 9-year-old boys, one black, the other white, who are best friends, until one day they begin to be affected by the racial tension experienced in the south. Six Cubans seek Venezuelan asylum CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Six Cubans in a hijacked truck sped through police gunfire and smashed into the Venezuelan Embassy compound in Havana to seek political asylum, the Venezuelan Foreign Ministry reported Wednesday.

This brought to 15 the number of Cubans inside the embassy seeking asylum in Venezuela. Thus far the Cuban government has refused them safe conduct out of the country.

The ministry report about Tuesday's incident said the six commandeered a heavy, steel-reinforced electric utility truck.

"There were rounds of machine-gun bullets fired by Cuban police when the vehicle was en route to the embassy," it said. The gunfire stopped after the truck burst into the embassy yard and a Venezuelan diplomat shouted to police to hold their fire, the communique said. It said there were no injuries.

The would-be refugees were not identified.

Nine other Cubans gained entry to the Venezuelan mission several months ago and are still there despite lengthy negotiations between the two governments to resolve their cases.

In January, both the Cuban ambassador to Caracas and the Venezuelan ambassador to Havana were recalled by their governments for consultation. The Cuban envoy has remained in Havana.

The Foreign Ministry report said the Venezuelan government "ratifies once again its solid and unbending position in defense of the right of asylum."

Illinois Attorney General William J. Scott and his wife, Ellen, exit the Federal Building in Chicago Wednesday. Scott was convicted of income tax fraud by a federal jury that deliberated 46 1/2 hours after a 10-week trial. (AP Laserphoto)

Illinois attorney general convicted of tax fraud

CHICAGO (AP) — Four-term Attorney General William J. Scott, an environmental crusader and one of the biggest vote-getters in Illinois, was convicted of income tax fraud by a jury that deliberated more than 46 hours to reach a verdict.

Scott was convicted in federal court Wednesday of underreporting his income for 1972. He was acquitted of charges of underreporting his income for 1973-1975.

The verdict came one day after Scott's upset defeat by Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal in the race for a Republican U.S. Senate nomination. The 53-year-old Scott told reporters he would appeal.

"I haven't broken any law, done anything wrong," he said. Gov. James R. Thompson issued a statement expressing his regret. "He was, and he is, my friend," Thompson said.

giant polluters, launching lawsuits against Milwaukee and U.S. Steel to clean up Lake Michigan.

He also coordinated a nationwide suit against General Motors when Chevrolet engines showed up in Oldsmobiles. The suit resulted in a $34 million settlement.

He was indicted on charges of filing false income tax returns for 1972 through 1975. The year 1972 was the only one for which the prosecution produced a witness who testified he had given Scott campaign money that never turned up in campaign accounts.

Edward J. Barrett, one of 149 witnesses, testified he and another lawyer gave Scott a total of $5,000 in cash in mid-1972.

Defense attorney Vincent Bugliosi, who gained fame in the prosecution of Charles Manson, decried the verdict.

"I would think they should come back guilty or not guilty on all counts," he said. "To reach a compromise verdict like this I don't think is compatible with the traditional notions of fairness and justice."

Prosecutors contended Scott understated his income on tax returns for the four years by at least $52,272. They said he hid nearly $49,000 in campaign contributions in safe deposit boxes, converted the money to personal use, then failed to report the money on his income tax returns.

Scott's former wife, Dorothy, found the cash in the boxes in 1967. During divorce proceedings in 1970, Scott said the cash was political money he could not use for personal expenditures.

Former mayor shot in own kitchen

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Former Mayor Russell G. Lloyd, in "poor but not hopeless" condition, today lay in a coma after being gunned down in his kitchen. Police filed a preliminary charge of attempted murder against a 35-year-old woman.

The prominent Evansville Republican, a 47-year-old attorney and father of six, was shot several times at close range about 7 a.m. Wednesday, minutes after he got out of bed and drank his morning coffee.

After a 2 1/2-hour operation to repair a major artery in Lloyd's neck that was severed by a bullet, Dr. Eugene Austin, chief of staff at St. Mary's Medical Center, said the prognosis was "poor but not hopeless."

Lloyd suffered at least four bullet wounds, and doctors were concerned about the possibility of brain and spinal cord damage, he said. About an hour after the shooting, police arrested a woman identified as Julie Van Orden and filed a preliminary charge of attempted murder against her in Vanderburgh County Misdemeanor Court. She told police she was a commercial artist, and police said she appeared not to know Lloyd was out of office.

She was ordered held without bond for seven days following a probable cause hearing Wednesday.

The only person to testify at the hearing, patrolman John Haller, said Lloyd's wife, Genna, was in bed when the shooting occurred.

He said she heard the doorbell ring and heard her husband ask, "What are you doing just barging into my house?"

Mrs. Lloyd heard a woman say, "You don't know the hell you've been putting me through. I want you to get this Joe Freeman off my back," Haller testified. Freeman is a city building inspector. After hearing shots, Mrs. Lloyd ran into the kitchen and found her husband lying in a pool of blood, Haller said.

The woman had fled, but police were able to trace her through a description of a blue pickup truck seen at the Lloyd home.

Police said a cement block had been thrown through Freeman's car window on Tuesday, and when they went to Mrs. Van Orden's home, she said she "should have killed Freeman instead of throwing a brickbat at him."

Haller said officers also quoted her as saying, "I should kill everybody in the Republican Party."

Lloyd stepped down in December after two four-year terms. His successor, Michael Vandever, is a Democrat.

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of three years in prison and a $5,000 fine. Under the state constitution, Scott must step down from office when judgment is entered. He could be reinstated if he wins on appeal.

Judgment usually is entered at the time of sentencing. U.S. District Judge John Powers Crowley set June 6 for either sentencing or a ruling on post-trial motions by the defense.

Scott sat with his arm around his wife as the verdict was read after six days of deliberation and a 10-week trial.

Ellen Scott burst into tears, then confronted prosecutor Thomas P. Sullivan. "I hope you are satisfied, you hypocrite," she told him before Scott pulled her away, saying, "Don't give him the satisfaction."

Scott had said in the past that his prosecution was politically motivated. "That is absolutely and utterly false," Sullivan insisted after the verdict.

Scott, who won re-election in 1978 by a margin of 940,000 votes, built a reputation as a crusader against

Candy Barr dances in Dallas again

DALLAS (AP) — Stripper Candy Barr was dancing at a Dallas club again this week. But it was a fully clothed waltz, not the knock-'em-out bump and grind that made her famous in the 1950s.

Once a $2,000-a-week Las Vegas stripper, Miss Barr now lives a quiet life on Lake Brownwood. And her past, especially her 15-year conviction for possessing a small amount of marijuana, is not a welcome conversation topic. "You're not going to bring up all that junk, are you?" she asked during her Dallas appearance as an awards presenter at Buddy Magazine's annual Texas Music Awards program.

The 5-foot-3 Miss Barr is still blonde, but a somewhat less explosive bombshell than in years past. Married unsuccessfully four times, she now has a grown daughter and reportedly at least one granddaughter.

But Candy Barr, whose real name is Juanita Dale Phillips, doesn't discuss that either. Nor does she talk about her age, reportedly in the vicinity of 45.

She did offer one brief comment about the judges and prosecutors responsible for a 15-year prison sentence she received in 1959 for possession of marijuana. "Let them live with their consciences. My conscience is clear," she said.

She won her freedom after serving three years and four months of the sentence.

She had another run-in with the law in 1970 over marijuana, but the charges were later dropped. Since then, neighbors say, she has led a quiet life and kept to herself.

"I sowed my wild oats in my time," she said in a 1970 interview. "There's nothing I haven't done."

Tuesday night, all she wanted to talk about was music. "Listen to that bass drive," she said, swaying in a modest beige dress to the music of a band.

Her part in Tuesday night's program took less than three minutes. Afterward she accepted some invitations to dance — not like the old days, but on the dance floor, along with other couples.

"I was raised on the waltz, the two-step, the polka, all of them," she said. "There's nothing I haven't done."

Fire kills captain in New Jersey

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — Nearly 100 firefighters were called out in this New Jersey city early today to battle a fire that engulfed an office and spread to several businesses and apartments. Officials said a 29-year veteran of the fire department was killed.

Fire Chief William Neafsey said the fire apparently began in an office above the United Counties Trust Co. and spread to "about four attached buildings."

He said he did not know how many persons had been living in the small apartments in the buildings that adjoined the three-story brick structure housing the bank.

Capt. Kenneth Feeney, 59, a captain for 16 years, was pronounced dead at a hospital in this city of 106,000, according to Neafsey. The cause of his death was not immediately known.

Officials said three other firefighters were hospitalized, but the extent of their injuries could not be determined immediately.

Neafsey said he did not know the cause of the fire.

Firefighters from neighboring communities were called in to staff the city's fire stations as Elizabeth firefighters battled the blaze.

Slight improvement in Tito's health; Physicians report outlook still grave

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Doctors treating Josip Broz Tito said today they had controlled the internal bleeding troubling the 87-year-old Yugoslav president and were making progress in treating the pneumonia he has been battling since last month. "Nevertheless," the doctor's said in the daily bulletin, Tito's "overall health condition is still very grave." The eight-member medical team said intensive measures were being continued to keep him alive.

Slight improvement in Tito's health; Physicians report outlook still grave

"The bleeding in the stomach has almost completely stopped, (and) there are signs of calming down of the pneumonia," the bulletin said. The abdominal bleeding was described Tuesday as "voluminous." Tito has been battling pneumonia since at least Feb. 23. It is one of a string of ailments that have developed since surgeons amputated Tito's left leg on Jan. 20 because of a circulatory problem.

Two guerrillas die as troops raid camp

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government troops raided the headquarters of a leftist guerrilla group and fought a 20-minute gunbattle that left two terrorists dead, authorities said. The soldiers surrounded the San Salvador command post of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc on Wednesday and demanded those inside surrender. Witnesses said gunfire erupted, but it was not clear who fired the first shots. In the end, troops took the headquarters, capturing guns and propaganda leaflets and arresting 30 suspects, authorities said.

Czech police arrest dissident

LONDON (AP) — Dissident Czechoslovak philosopher Dr. Julius Tomin was "brutally arrested" by police who raided an apartment in Prague where he was attending an unauthorized philosophy lecture, his wife said in a telephone call to Britain. Dr. Kathleen Wilkes, a philosophy lecturer at Britain's Oxford University, said Zdena Tomin told her that Tomin was arrested Wednesday night with six other persons at the apartment. Mrs. Tomin said the other six were later released but Tomin was still being held.

Fire sweeps charity home, again

LONDON (AP) — For the third time in 36 hours, fire has swept a British charity home. Forty handicapped children were led to safety Wednesday night from the Braidwood Home in Lanarkshire, in central Scotland, authorities said. Two of the children were treated for smoke inhalation. Earlier Wednesday, eight men were rescued from a blaze at a hostel for homeless men in London's East End. Nine women died Tuesday in a fire that gutted a hostel for destitute women in north London.

U.S. pledges $1.8 million

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.S. government, one of eight accused by the U.N. General Assembly last year of "collusion ... with the racist regime in South Africa," has pledged $1.8 million to U.N. funds for humanitarian and educational aid for blacks in southern Africa. Pledges and contributions from 30 countries totaled nearly $7.7, up from almost $7.2 million last year. The United States was the largest contributor and Israel was the only one of the eight nations criticized in the assembly resolution last December that refused to make a contribution. The money will go to aid blacks in South Africa and the South African-run territory of Namibia. Contributions were made in connection with Friday's International Day for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination.

Egypt finishes Suez expansion

PORT SAID, Egypt (AP) — Egypt has completed work on part of a Suez Canal expansion program that will allow simultaneous two-way traffic along one-third of the 101-mile waterway. A giant dredger removed the last muddy barrier to the Mediterranean on Wednesday and traffic is expected to begin moving in the new channel, at the northern end of the canal, next week.

Gandhi orders return of abuse probe reports

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Indian government has ordered the nation's booksellers to return official reports of an inquiry commission which accused Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of official abuses during the 1975-77 state of emergency. The order was issued Wednesday to all bookshop owners and news agents in India stocking the report. They were told to immediately stop selling the three-volume report and return all copies to the Department of Publications in New Delhi. R. A. Gaur, deputy controller of state publications, said no instructions have been received on what to do with the returned copies, printed in 15 Indian languages by the government of former Prime Minister Morarji Desai. Mrs. Gandhi refused to cooperate with the inquiry, headed by retired Chief Justice J.C. Shah, alleging its probe was part of a political vendetta by Desai's government which succeeded hers after the 1977 general election. Desai was one of thousands of Gandhi critics jailed without trial during the 19-month emergency. Criminal cases based on the commission's report were launched against Mrs. Gandhi, her son Sanjay and aides and officials who served under her regime.

Italian government falls

ROME, Italy (AP) — President Sandro Pertini starts interviewing Italian political leaders again today, looking for a Christian Democrat to form Italy's 39th postwar government.

Christian Democratic Premier Francesco Cossiga resigned Wednesday after seven months in office because the Socialists withdrew their support from his minority government. The Socialists demanded that the Communists, the second largest party, be admitted to the government, but the Christian Democrats refused.

Cossiga and his cabinet remain in office as a caretaker government while Pertini attempts to find a new premier.

Cossiga put together a coalition of Christian Democrats, the nation's largest party and the dominant force in every government since the war, and the small Liberal and Social Democratic parties. It did not have a majority in Parliament but was able to stay in office because the Socialists, the third largest party, gave it tacit support by abstaining on key votes. The government was scheduled to face a vote of confidence this week in the Chamber of Deputies, but Cossiga told the Cabinet it was clear from the parliamentary debate that he could no longer count on the Socialists. He resigned rather than be voted out of office. The Christian Democrats have repeatedly rejected demands that they admit Communists to the Cabinet, and this plus the refusal of the Socialists to join in a coalition have resulted in a series of minority governments that could stay in office only as long as one of the leftist parties let them.

The last government before Cossiga's fell in January 1979 when the Communists withdrew their tacit parliamentary support because Premier Giulio Andreotti refused to seat them in his Cabinet. The political crisis coincided with a new campaign by leftist terrorists against law enforcement officials.

Police kill two protesters

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two persons were killed and 27 wounded when police fired on onion farmers demonstrating for higher prices in the western Indian state of Maharashtra, Indian newspapers reported today. The farmers threw stones at police and dumped cartloads of onions Wednesday on a highway near Nasik, about 120 miles northwest of Bombay, blocking traffic, the reports said.

Police fired on the protesters after they had lobbed teargas shells and swung cane clubs in an unsuccessful attempt to disperse the farmers.

Onion prices in the area have crashed following a glut in production. The vegetable was selling for only three or four cents per kilogram, less than a fifth of earlier prices. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

'30s radio singing star dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Jessica Dragonette, one of radio's most popular singers during the 1930s, has died at New York Hospital.

Miss Dragonette, who died Tuesday, apparently suffered a heart attack while hospitalized for asthma. Because a fire destroyed her birth certificate in an orphanage where the soprano spent time as a child, her exact age was not known. Her age has been recorded as 65 but she was believed to be about 70.

Born in Calcutta, India, where her father worked as a construction engineer, she was later orphaned in Philadelphia. She lived and studied at the Georgian Court Convent and College in Lakewood, N.J.

In 1924 she won a job in the choir of a Broadway show called "The Miracle," staged by impresario Max Reinhardt who later gave her solo parts in "The Student Prince" and "The Grand St. Follies."

She auditioned and was hired by the NBC radio network only months after it was formed and went on to a radio career that spanned 22 years. Her career included regular appearances on "The Phitico Hour," "The Ford Summer Hour," and the "Cities Service Concert Hour," which had one of radio's largest audiences from 1930 to 1937.

During World War II she visited servicemen at hospitals and camps and sold war bonds.

'Mystery woman' meets with the Stayner family

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — Barbara Mathias was Steven Stayner's "mother" for two of the seven years the teen-ager lived with an alleged abductor. When she finally met Stayner's real parents, Mrs. Mathias assured them "he was a good boy."

"It's been hell for the last seven years," Kay Stayner told her visitor during a somber meeting in the otherwise cheerful meeting.

"I know," Mrs. Mathias said quietly. "That's why I wanted to come. I know how I would have felt if it had been my kid."

Mrs. Mathias, first known only as the "Barbara" neighbors recalled seeing at a trailer park with Steven, told The Associated Press on Wednesday she babysat for Stayner for two years.

For about nine months, she says, she lived with him and Kenneth Parnell, the man charged with the 1972 abduction of Stayner, now 14, and the Feb. 14 kidnapping of 5-year-old Timmy White.

Both cases ended March 1 in Ukiah when Stayner took White to police because he "didn't like what was happening."

Mrs. Mathias' 12-year-old son,

Lloyd, who played with Stayner during those years, tossed a basketball to the teen-ager as Mrs. Mathias and Kay and Delbert Stayner talked. Steven had greeted Mrs. Mathias, a dark-haired divorcee, with a broad grin as she entered the house.

"I thought that because I babysat for him you would want to know he was a good boy all that time," Mrs. Mathias said. "He was always a nice boy and he called me 'Mother' like my own kids did."

Mrs. Mathias recalled Steven had told her that his mother had died when he was an infant, prompting

Mrs. Stayner to stick her tongue out playfully at her son.

"We're just getting around to getting him used to being called 'Steve,'" Mrs. Stayner said. During seven years of drifting, young Stayner was called Dennis Parnell and was registered at several schools under that name.

"He said Parnell threatened to spank him if he told anyone that he was not Dennis," the elder Stayner said. "It's really remarkable how he remembers so much. For three or four years he did nothing but think about us."

As the 20-minute meeting drew to a close, the women exchanged addresses.

"I don't care how late I get to sleep tonight, I'll be in heaven," Mrs. Mathias said before the 250-mile drive to her home north of Ukiah.

In the interview, Mrs. Mathias said Parnell treated Steven like a son, occasionally spanking him for misdeeds, and Stayner called him "Dad."

Mrs. Mathias, 44, also said Parnell had a birth certificate and other papers to show Stayner was his and that she didn't know Stayner was an abduction victim until she saw it on television.

"I couldn't believe it," she said. "I didn't think Dennis was kidnapped or anything."

Mrs. Mathias said she met Parnell and Stayner late in 1973, about nine months after he was abducted while walking home from school. At first, she said, Parnell paid her $60 a month to watch Stayner in the afternoon. Later, in 1975, she lived with Parnell and Stayner in a mobile home in Willits, about 30 miles north of Ukiah, and in a converted school bus in Fort Bragg, 35 miles northwest of Willits.

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

What do you mean, 'born again'?

AFTER dark one night a Jewish religious leader named Nicodemus, a member of the sect of the Pharisees, came for an interview with Jesus. "Sir," he said, "we all know that God has sent You to teach us. Your miracles are proof enough of this."

Jesus replied, "With all the earnestness I possess I tell you this: Unless you are born again, you can never get into the Kingdom of God."

"Born again?" exclaimed Nicodemus. "What do You mean? How can an old man go back into his mother's womb and be born again?"

Jesus replied, "What I am telling you so earnestly is this: Unless one is born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the Kingdom of God.

Men can only reproduce human life, but the Holy Spirit gives new life from heaven;

So don't be surprised at My statement that you must be born again!

Just as you can hear the wind but can't tell where it comes from or where it will go next, so it is with the Spirit. We do not know on whom He will next bestow this life from heaven."

"What do You mean?" Nicodemus asked.

Jesus replied, "You, a respected Jewish teacher, and yet you don't understand these things? I am telling you what I know and have seen—and yet you won't believe Me.

But if you don't even believe Me when I tell you about such things as these that happen here among men, how can you possibly believe if I tell you what is going on in heaven?"

For only I, the Man of Heaven, have come to earth and will return to heaven again.

And as Moses in the wilderness lifted up the bronze image of a serpent on a pole, even so I must be lifted up upon a pole.

So that anyone who believes in Me will have eternal life.

For God loved the world so much that He gave His only Son so that anyone who believes in Him shall not perish but have eternal life.

RINGING THE BELL West Texas minorities sadly short of political experience

With BOB TIEUCL

In Southern New Mexico and most of the Texas Plains, Chicanos, blacks and maverick whites from independently minded urban neighborhoods are still struggling to make themselves heard in areas so long ruled by conservative business establishments.

In Hobbs and Clovis, N.M., which have the largest black populations in the state, no black has ever been elected to a city or county office, with a notable exception at Hobbs, where a black has been elected to a school board position. A black was elected to a city council position in Carlsbad, N.M., some years ago. Every now and then a Chicano has been elected to the city council in Clovis and once in Hobbs, but each was defeated when he ran for re-election.

In Odessa, Texas, a black was elected in recent years to the city council by a combination of black and brown votes and since, the black has been elected by the same combination to a position on the county commission. In Midland, no black has ever been elected to serve on the city council, although a black has served on the Midland school board.

In Lubbock, Texas, which has one of the largest black populations on the Plains, no black has ever served on the city council. However, a black woman was elected to the school board in recent years but was not re-elected. When this correspondent asked why Lubbock had not given blacks representation on the city council, a prominent black woman replied, "Bob, it just seems to be that the rank and file of us are not ready for political responsibility. And too, we are suffering from a lack of black leadership in Lubbock."

In the meantime, Houston, Dallas and San Antonio may well turn out to be more cosmopolitan and politically competitive, more attuned to energy conservation, neighborhood and poverty issues than in the past. And as Neal Peirce, noted columnist, points out, "None of this means Texas will be transformed overnight into a night-tax, high-spending mirror of northern metropolises."

But the signs of change or a break-up of the monolithic rule of big business circles are particularly evident in the big cities, Peirce pointed out.

ONE OF THE greatest drawbacks against minority representation in many areas has been the at-large voting prevalent in Southern New Mexico and West Texas, one black leader pointed out. In 1975 the U.S. Department of Justice reviewed electoral districts and annexations with the goal of preventing discrimination against minorities.

Results were amazing. Houston's council, previously elected all at-large, suddenly has geographical districts for nine of its 14 seats and includes for the first time in history, three blacks, its first Mexican-American and first two women council persons.

San Antonio, which has also dropped its business-controlled at-large system in favor of districting, now has a council closely balanced between affluent conservatives and more liberal Chicanos and blacks. It is reported that there will be launched soon more efforts by black and brown leaders in such areas as Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, Amarillo, Hobbs, Clovis and Roswell to ask the U.S. Department of Justice to force division of cities into separate, rather than at-large, legislative districts, a parallel effort to city council districting.

A RISING TIDE of Texas Republicanism seems evident, as witness the 1978 election of the GOP's William Clements as governor, and black leaders are saying that Republicans have an opportunity to win thousands of black voters if they will lend their efforts to grant more blacks and brown representation in Texas, New Mexico and other Southwestern states by districting rather than the traditional at-large methods.
