Iranian officials threaten allies' oil supplies

By The Associated Press

Iranian officials today threatened to bar oil exports "forever" to countries that join the U.S. sanctions against Iran and urged the second expulsion this year of American reporters in Tehran. Unofficial reports listed as many as 21 killed in a fourth day of violence on campuses in Iran.

The oil threat came as America's European allies were reported to have decided on strong diplomatic and economic measures against Iran in an effort to support U.S. efforts to gain release of the American hostages in Tehran. Sources at the meeting of Common Market foreign ministers in Luxembourg said there had been no agreement on a timetable for implementing the measures. One proposal before the ministers called for a ban on imports of Iranian oil.

Iran's official Pars news agency quoted Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar as saying that if "certain countries joined in the U.S. economic sanctions, Iran would not sell them oil. They would be blacklisted forever and would never get Iran's oil."

Iran would produce less oil "to the benefit of future generations," Moinfar was quoted as saying.

According to Pars, Moinfar said

Iranian foreign currency reserves had climbed from $10 billion to $15 billion in the last year so there was 'no need to export oil.'

Meanwhile, Iran's foreign press chief, Abolghassem Sadegh, accused U.S. news organizations of distorting the news and said he will recommend the government expel American re-porters. He suggested that one U.S. news agency remain to "provide the direct link with the United States." Iran last expelled all U.S. reporters on Jan. 18, but most were allowed to return about six weeks later.

Sources in Europe said the allies' boycott may be announced today at the end of a two-day meeting of the Common Market ministers in Luxembourg. They said in addition to the oil ban, the allies would agree to an arms embargo and reductions in their dip-lomatic staffs in Tehran and Iran's diplomatic staffs in Europe.

A total trade embargo and break in diplomatic relations would follow on May 15 if the Iranian government did not take steps to free the 53 Americans held captive in the Iranian capital since Nov. 4, the sources said.

"These things are the least we can do for a friend in need," a British official said. "America is our ally and we want to help. This is something that has to be done even if it doesn't Similar action was expected from Japan, whose foreign minister, Saburo Okita, was on the sidelines in Luxembourg and told reporters: "Our policy is very close to the EEC (European Economic Community) and it's very important to maintain solidarity with the U.S.' With the world oil market glutted by over-production of about a . illion. barrels a day and oil the Iranian revolutionary regime's only source of income, an embargo by its major customers should be devastating for Europe currently imports about 650,000 barrels of Iranian oil daily; President Carter banned imports of about a million barrels daily by the United States on Nov. 21, and Japanese imports of about 530,000 barrels daily were suspended Monday because the Japanese refused to meet Iran's demand for an increase of $2.50 raising the price to $35 per barrel.

The United States is expected to help the Japanese and Europeans make up any shortages caused by the boycott. But U.S. officials say the industrialized world has 500 million barrels of oil stockpiled, equivalent to 18 months of Iranian exports.

Schools closed in fear of fumes from chemical fire

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) - A plume of black smoke from a fire in a condemned chemical warehouse wafted 15 miles across heavily populated urban areas today, and officials closed schools and urged children and old people to stay indoors.

Five firefighters were injured in the fire which burned throughout the night at the Chemical Control Corp. warehouse where 35,000 barrels of toxic and explosive chemicals were stored. It was brought under control this morning.

While schools were closed in Elizabeth City and neighboring Staten Island, N.Y., officials said there was no indication the smoke from the fire was toxic.

New York Mayor Edward Koch, who arrived at the scene about dawn, likened the precautions to "a smog alert in California." "We're going to take some precauionary procedures, not to frighten people because they shouldn't be frightened," Koch said. The cloud of smoke stretched 15 miles south of Elizabeth just after dawn, authorities said. State Police Superintendent Clinton Pagano said he believed one of the firefighters was critically injured, but details were sketchy.

Flames from the fire which broke out Monday night leaped 200 to 300 feet in the air through the night, illuminating the dark cloud. Repeated explosions hurtled barrels of chemicals hundreds of feet high.

The warehouse on the Elizabeth waterfront was closed by New Jersey officials last year after at least 35,000 barrels of deadly, unmarked chemicals were found piled outside the building in punctured, leaking drums. The chemicals included nitric acid, picric acid and nitroglycerine. Hundreds of rescue workers, firefighters, environmental technicians and local officials were at the scene today, many wearing white jumpsuits for protection and using breathing apparatus.

Assemblyman Raymond Lesniak of Union, N.J., said, "There are 35,000 drums of God-knows-what in there." Scientists from the Enviornmental

Protection Agency tested the smoke from the fire today and said they found no evidence of toxic materials including cyanide, chlorine, chlorinated hydrogens, benzene and phos-

Rally, end of line: Pennsylvania vote important factor

By WALTER R. MEARS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Pennsylvanians chose their presidential candidates today in a primary election that could mark the beginning of rallies or the virtual end of the line for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Republican George Bush.

Both down, but both vowing they wouldn't get out, Kennedy and Bush campaigned into election eve in the battle to stall the leaders, President Carter and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Kennedy said he hoped to run strong, although "I think it's an uphill battle." White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the Pennsylvania primary was "pretty tight and Bush said he expected to win the Republican presidential preference vote. "Here I am fighting like hell to to something...and I think I can do it too," he said.

But Reagan said he was confident of capturing a majority of Pennsylvania's 83 delegate votes at the Republican National Convention. The delegates were chosen separately and were not bound by the popular vote.

The polls opened at 7 a.m. EST and closed at 8 p.m. Party officials forecast a big turnout, perhaps as high as 50 percent of the voters. There are more than 2.9 million registered Democrats, about Carter already has 947 of the 1,666 delegates it will take to win the Democratic nomination. Kennedy has 475.

While aides to the Massachusetts senator acknowledged that victory was a must to keep alive his mathematical chance of overtaking Carter, Kennedy himself said he would campaign on in any event.

He said he would "absolutely not" withdraw before the Democratic convention in New York chooses the party nominee in August.

Reagan said if he were in Bush's position, he'd have to consider withdrawing now. But the former U.N. ambassador said, "I'm going to fight right to the end...I'm just not going to

On the Republican ballot are Reagan, Bush, campaign dropouts John B. Connally and Howard H. Baker Jr., and three minor candidates.

Kennedy campaigned from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh on Monday, urging Democrats to "give Jimmy Carter a surprise on primary day.

He told a lunch-hour rally that filled a downtown Philadelphia intersection a Pennsylvania defeat would force campaign strategy and come "out of the Rose Garden.

Carter has said he won't take the road politically while the American hostages remain captive in Tehran. He said the outcome in Pennsylvania wouldn't change that.

"I say it's time to say to every citizen of Philadelphia, to every citizen of Pennsylvania - no more American hostages, no more high interest rates, no more high inflation, no more Jimmy Carter." Kennedy cried, in a voice hoarse after 13 days of Pennsylvania campaigning.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Carter's stand-in campaigner, said the administration has been trying to offer Iran "an honorable way out" of the hostage crisis but now is trying to get the allies to disrupt Iran's commerce "to really turn the screws in a Mondale said "the history of third parties in this country has been a 200-year history of failure." He acknowledged that an independent race by Anderson would hurt the Democratic ticket in the fall.

Reagan said the intensive Bush campaign is likely to take its toll on him. His Pennsylvania campaign cost about $150,000 and brought him to the state for four days. "I never expected an easy time, here," he said.

Cuban refugees moved to Costa Rican hotel

By GORDON D. MOTT

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) - The Costa Rican government has moved hundreds of Cuban refugees into a first-class hotel, giving them comforts they never had at home. 'We've never seen anything like this," a sunburned refugee said Monday at poolside of the Hotel Irazu. "In Cuba, a hotel like this was too expensive for us." Juan Jose Brave, 30, said the hotel was out of the reach of most of those on the communist-ruled island.

'There are only four hotels like this in Havana and all the technical experts from Russia, Bulgaria and the other Socialist countries stay there with a few tourists," he said.

"This is marvelous. They are treating us very well," said refugee Jose Colina as he basked in the noon sun. They are among the 282 exiles the government has already moved into the hotel, on the outskirts of San The refugees are living two or three to a room in 120 of the hotel's 250 rooms. They spend much of their time sitting around the lobby talking politics, smoking cigarettes, and lounging at the pool. A hotel source, who asked not to be identified, said they were jamming telephone lines with calls to relatives in the United States. The source said 600 collect calls were made to the United States on Sunday.

Manager Miguel Franco said his hotel is providing an "Americanstyle" breakfast and a full dinner plus room for about $5 per day per per-

The refugees are the vanguard of 10,739 Cubans who jammed the Peruvian Embassy in Havana April 4-6 in a bid to leave their homeland. They were among the first 700 persons flown to Costa Rica last week before Cuban President Fidel Castro halted the airlift on Friday.

Some of the refugees have already been flown to other countries. Last weekend, Costa Rica and the Intergovernmental Committee on European Migration decided to move the approximately 320 Cuban exiles still in Costa Rica out of make-shift refugee shelters and into the Irazu. While the move appeared primarily aimed at defusing Castro's criticism of large refugee centers here, it also gave the government a chance to renovate its refugee facilities for future use if the evacuation flights start

A Costa Rican Foreign Ministry official said Cuba has promised to respond Wednesday to its request Sunday that the air bridge be reopened.

In suspending the flights, Castro said the refugees would be allowed out only if they flew directly to the countries that agreed to take them in. Costa Rica replied that it would accept all of the refugees.

18-year-old Andrews youth dies in Martin County oilfield mishap

MARTIN COUNTY - An 18-yearold Andrews youth died instantly Monday morning when he was struck by falling oil field equipment at a rig in Martin County.

According to a spokesman for Carl Ham Inc., owned by NL Well Service, the rig was located approximately 25 miles north of Midland, just off Texas Highway 349 in Martin County. The site was on Tenneco's Scharbauer

The spokesman said employees of NL Well Services were pulling tubing on a 100-foot well when the accident occurred

The accident was reported to the Andrews Police Department. However, since it occurred in Martin County, Garcia was pronounced dead by a Martin County peace justice and the incident was investigated by the Martin County heriff's Department.

Crime link charged in Chicago police

CHICAGO (AP) - As allegations of political misconduct and crime syndicate influence in police affairs swirled about City Hall, two top aides to Mayor Jane Byrne who figured prominently in the charges have abruptly resigned. Aides William Griffin and Michael Brady announced their resignations Monday night after a weekend of charges that politicians with alleged syndicate connections had forced or prompted the demotions of three top police officers.

A leading independent alderman said Chicago is in "a situation that's bringing our government to a standstill." Martin Oberman said the charges amounted to "a major crisis in government."

Meanwhile, the chief county prosecutor said two of the three officers former acting Police Superintendent Joseph DiLeonardi and former Deputy Superintendent William Duffy — had asked to testify before a Cook County grand jury that will investigate the charges.

The two officers and former Deputy Superintendent James Zurawski were demoted in an internal shakeup last week headed by the new police superintendent, Richard Brzeczek.

In addition, State's Attorney Bernard Carey said Monday that he will ask Griffin and Brady to appear before the jury. He said that if necessary, his office would subpoena the U.S. Attorney Thomas P. Sullivan said he would join with the Justice Department Strike Force on Organized Crime and local authorities in examining the allegations. The Chicago Tribune reported that DiLeonardi, Duffy and Zurawski had accused Griffin and Brady of fronting for politicians with mob connections in trying to control sensitive police

"I was dumped because of paranoia about what we might be doing against the mob," Duffy said.

In a written statement, Griffin and Brady denied any wrongdoing and said they had "acted with the utmost integrity and honesty."

The men said they were "shocked" to read DiLeonardi's allegation that they pressured him to demote Duffy, one of the police department's experts on organized crime.

DiLeonardi said Griffin and Brady asked for Duffy's demotion at the request of 1st Ward Democratic Organization figures who thought Duffy was harassing them. The Tribune said the organization is dominated by the crime syndicate.

Griffin and Brady said there was a "misunderstanding" over the conversation in which they allegedly asked DiLeonardi to remove Duffy and said "it is apparent from Capt. DiLeonardi's remarks that there were conversations between him and Mayor Byrne at which we were not present nor made aware of." They did not elaborate.

They also complained of reduced access to Mrs. Byrne and said it had become "increasingly apparent to us that we no longer enjoyed the confidence of the mayor.

They said their lawyers would contact the state's attorney's office and offer cooperation in any investigation. Oberman said he would talk with fellow alderman and see if the City Council could launch an investigation or take some other action to resolve

"Our City Council has an unfortunate habit of whitewashing matters concerning the mayor," Oberman remarked.

Mrs. Byrne, meanwhile, remained silent on the resignations. Earlier, she called the controversy a "squabble" and described herself as "clean as a whistle.

"I will willingly go before a grand jury," Mrs. Byrne said.

Supreme Court studies cameras in courtroom

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fifteen years after overturning Texas financier Billy Sol Estes' swindling conviction because his trial was televised, the Supreme Court has agreed to study anew the use of cameras in the courtroom.

The court said Monday it will use a Florida case to decide whether, after 15 years of technological development, television and still-photography coverage of trials is constitution-

Arguments in the case will not be heard until next fall at the earliest, and the justices' eventual decision is not expected before 1981.

In the Estes case, the Supreme Court ruled that television's techniques as they then existed inherently interfered with a fair trial

But in writing for the court in that 1965 decision, the late Justice Tom Clark said, "When the advances in these arts permit reporting ... by television without their present hazard to a fair trial, we will have another case."

Many states have not waited for that other case predicted by Clark, deciding to allow television and stillcamera coverage of courtroom proceedings.

The American Bar Association's longtime ethical ban on such in-court electronic media and photographic coverage, however, still serves as a model for half the states and all federal courts.

Of those states permitting some form of camera coverage, only Florida and New Hampshire have adopted permanent policies that allow camera coverage over the objections of people directly involved in the case. Florida's policy was challenged by two Miami Beach policemen convicted in the 1977 burglary of a restaurant, Their appeal launched a broad attack against the camera-in-the courtroom concept, calling it "a constitutionally blind rush to electronic justice."

Some form of television and photographic news coverage of court proceedings now is allowed - either permanently or experimentally - in 25 states.

In other matters Monday, the court:

-Heard arguments over whether Congress can withhold federal welfare money for most Medicaid abortions. A decision is expected before the justices begin their summer recess in late June.

-Refused to reinstate a New York law that gave hiring preference in public works jobs to people who were state residents for at least 12 months. The law was struck down as unconstitutionally biased against new state residents and out-of-staters.

-Left intact Kentucky's authority to require an Iowa company selling magazine subscriptions by telephone to register each year in every county where phone solicitations are likely to Liddy, released from prison in 1977 after serving 52 months for his role in the Watergate incident, stands to make a good sum of money for a book he wrote about the scandal.

There should be little doubt in anyone's mind that Liddy was guilty of the crimes for which he was convicted.

In fact, his book-reportedly details plans for other crimes which never took place, including killing newspaper columnist Jack Anderson and dropping LSD into Daniel Ellsberg's soup at a dinner

That such crimes could even be contemplated by government officials boggles the minds of average citizens who believe in and support law and order.

It seems now totally unjustified that Liddy would be able to reap a profit, perhaps become wealthy, by capitalizing on his previous illegal actions.

Some might point out that Liddy has paid his debt to society and now should be able to earn a living even by capitalizing on his prior activities.

We don't think so.

What Gordon Liddy and the rest of the Watergate hoodlums - and hoodlums is an appropriate word - tried to do to this nation was horrifying. Had they succeeded, chances are freedom as we know it might not exist today.

To let them reap profits from the book or movie rights about their crimes is an insult to the law-abiding people of this nation.

To say the least, we hope the Liddy book won't make the Best Seller list.

CHARLEY REESE

Dr. Buscaglia preaches the wonder of living

I saw a genuine phenomenon recently. In my wicked past, I was for a time an advance man and flack for politicians and in my reformed present I do some speaking and hear a lot of speeches. I know how very hard it is these days to get a crowd to turn out for anything except entertainment or gambling.

The phenomenon I experienced was lecture by Dr. Leo Buscaglia. If I told you that a California educator with an Italian name was coming to town to deliver one lecture, that his appearance would not be advertised, that the tickets would be sold only at the local college - what kind of crowd would you expect?

If you guessed nearly 3,000, you'd be right and that, in this day of stay-athome-and-stare, is a phenomenon. Buscaglia walked into a standing ovation and rhythmic chants of, "We love you, Leo!" When he finished speaking, he was mobbed by people who wanted to hug him.

I know national politicians who would have died in their chairs from intense envy. It's too bad they weren't there. They might have learned something before they croaked.

What produces all of this affection for a man who says, "Don't follow me, I'm just human like you...I don't have any answers...nothing I'm going to say is original or new?

Indeed, Buscaglia doesn't say anything new or original. He doesn't even promise a free ride. He talks about death, grief, despair and loneliness as well as about joy, love, compassion and fun. He offers no ten easy steps to fame and happiness.

What then is his magic? It is the man himself. At last, here is an hon-dio 54 incident, as well as the private notes of reporters who worked on it.

When ABC resisted, there was discussion in the special prosecutor's office from a Buscaglia lecture is that people recognize and respond to genuine honesty and genuine compassion and having found those two qualities do not demand pat answers to every conceivable problem. The politicians could learn that people are tired of being used. People are crying out, "Doesn't anybody in this country care about me as just me even if I'm not a customer, a consumer, a market, a voter, a client, a dues paying member, or an excuse for a federal grant?'

In the age of tinsel, make-believe, phoniness and imagery, Leo Buscaglia is the real thing. His message is simple: love life, love yourself, love others. It's not the self-indulgence of hedonism he preaches but the appreciation of the magic and wonder of life and of the uniqueness and value of each individual human being. It is not the escape-from-reality of cults and drugs but the courage to embrace life with all its pain and joy.

I hope you have the opportunity to experince this man. If you do, you'll probably join the crowd in shouting, 'We love you, Leo!

Prosecutor behaving like defense counsel

Distributed by L.A. Times Syndicete

WASHINGTON - Arthur H. Christy was appointed special prosecutor to investigate charges that Hamilton Jordan sniffed cocaine at the Studio 54 nightclub in June, 1978. But so far he seems far more interested in side issues than in determining whether Jimmy Carter's White House chief-of-staff broke any

First he concentrated on the witnesses against Jordan, intimidating them with not-so-subtle hints of perju ry action, and behaving generally more like Jordan's defense counsel than his prosecutor.

Now he's found a new target - and it's still not Hamilton Jordan. Christy has been interrogating witnesses about possible contacts with me and other reporters. He has repeatedly warned the witnesses not to speak to newsmen, whom he characterized as sly rascals who are "not to be trusted." Above all, he wants to know the source of my columns and other news

The irony of the situation is that it was the prosecutor's inquisitorial treatment of some witnesses that led them to talk to reporters. They concluded, from Christy's badgering, that he would rather charge a Jordan accuser with perjury than press the investigation of drug use, and this realization moved them to go to the press in self-defense.

Here's an example of Christy's Nixonian obsession with leaks to the

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. - In the crowded lobby of Genetti's Best Western Hotel an hour before Sen. Edward M. Kennedy addressed a rally in Wilkes-Barre's Public Square a half block away, the growing political danger to Jimmy Carter was laid

Sam Bianco, head of the local Central Labor Council, was complaining to fellow Democratic politicians about President Carter's budget cuts in the midst of an economic downturn. No matter that Carter political operatives have assured Bianco that Luzerne County's 4,000 government (CETA) jobs will not be lost. He does not believe them.

Bianco is, at least institutionally, a Carter man (because his union, the International Ladies Garment Workers (ILGWU), have endorsed the president for re-election.) This adds significance to Bianco's comment after hearing Kennedy's rally speech which thrashed Carter on economic ground as more Republican than Democratic. "Man, was I surprised." the union official told us. "I didn't think he (Kennedy) could give that good a speech."

Kennedy, a self-confident platform performer bearing little resemblance to the bewildered candidate of three months ago, now is able to exploit economic bad news. That is the essence of why he may well defeat Carter in today's Pennsylvaina primary and why the president's men are growing uneasy about what lies

Novak

Evans Kennedy is no oratorical stylist. Nor does the substance of his speeches offer new ideas or insights. But whereas he stumbled across Iowa in January seemingly with nothing to say, he now roars across Pennsylvania preaching the old-time Democrat ic religion of economic salvation through governmental intervention.

The political impact is seen here in the Wilkes-Barre and Scranton region, supposedly "Kennedy country" because of John F. Kennedy's 1960 victory margin. In fact, Kennedy pollster Peter Hart two months ago found a Carter lead of better than 20 percentage points in this congressional district The Kennedy turnaround came only after times became bad enough (11.5 percent unemployment here). Then voters could concentrate hard enough on what he is saying to put aside, at least temporarily, thoughts of Chappaquiddick - perhaps more difficult here because the Kopechne family lives nearby. Thus, in Public Square, Kennedy evoked cheers when he compared Carter's economic policy "high interest rates and unemployment") to McKinley, Hoover and Nixon, and declared "It's time to say

Kennedy's basic line in Pennsylvania makes not the slightest concession to any doubts about the old liberal verity of economic health achieved through government spending. In a day when fealty to the goal of a balanced budget" is nearly universal among politicians, those words do not escape Kennedy's lips in Pennsyl-Campaigning in Philadelphia, Kennedy has pounded relentlessly on the theme that Carter "has turned his back on the cities of this country." The Carter balanced budget with its spending cuts is reviled by Kennedy, particularly in pressing for black votes. Interviewed by influential black journalist Chuck Stone over television in Philadelphia, Kennedy said the president "instead of cutting back aid to the cities, should cut back" on oil drilling tax deductions. Such hammering on New Deal economics does not generate the emotion evoked by his two brothers. He could not fully rouse the big crowd at Public Square here. The night before in Philadelphia, he could not win either applause or complete silence from party regulars, gabbing and drinking red wine at their annual Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner.

Some of Kennedy's most important supporters in Pennsylvania privately criticize the exaggerated tremulous tone he sometimes affects and other recurrent fits of playfulness. His more sophisticated backers here only shrug shoulders at his simplistic bigspending prescription for the econ-

But such critics did not hear Kennedy in the early weeks of the campaign, whispering in Iowa and shouting in New Hampshire without a coherent theme in either state. Whatever his economic philosophy lacks in rationality, it has created buoyantly self-confident Kennedy who sees not only successive victories, but an epidemic of defections by Carter delegates.

Kennedy's rising optimism is buttressed by testimony from politicians such as Sam Bianco, the nominal pro-Carter labor leader who perceives a strong Kennedy trend — but only if the president does not emerge again as national leader in time of crisis. "The people around here," Bianco told us, "are very patriotic." Bad news internationally has helped the president so far. But bad news economically threatens to ruin him in Pennsylvania and could do the same

Americans observe 10th Earth Day emphasis

WASHINGTON (AP) - From a sunrise service at Jefferson Memorial in the nation's capital, where the Jefferson Memorial to observances in a thousand cities and towns across the land, Americans today celebrated Earth Day '80, the 10th anniversary of the nation's environmental awakening. Organizers hoped that by day's end more than 3 million people would participate in activities to recognize gains in the last decade and to spur lagging interest in the environment at a time when energy and the economy may have eclipsed ecology on the public's priority list.

The day began with a sunrise service at the environmental leaders of today read selections from environmentalists of the past including Margaret Mead, Henry David Thoreau, and E.F. Schumacher, author of "Small is Beautiful."

Byron Kennard, chairman of Earth Day '80, said he also wanted to pay tribute to the "motley crew" of radical students and activist housewives who staged the first Earth Day a decade ago.

"Here's to the mavericks, the dissidents and the cranks without which no social movement can long endure," Kennard told the crowd of less than 200.

Many of today's activities mirrored events of the first Earth Day, when thousands of Americans picked up trash along roadsides, wa ded into polluted rivers to cart out garbage and participated in environmental teach-ins.

This year, hike, bike and jog-to-work rallies and solar home tours were added to demonstrate pollution-free answers to the energy cruinch. In New York, organizers arranged to have several blocks of the Avenue of the Americas closed to cars for a giant, day-long fair expected to attract up to

'Earth Day' fulfills a vision

By JIM DRINKARD

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - When Denis Hayes dropped out of Harvard University in 1969 to get involved with the Environmental Teach-In, few people knew what it was - and fewer took it

But mention "Earth Day" now and it conjures up visions of thousands of students cleaning up litter, recycling tons of materials and demonstrating to save the planet's ecological life.

That day was April 22, 1970. Then 25, Hayes hung up his pursuit of a program in law and public policy to take on the challenge of being national coordinator ("We didn't believe in hierarchical titles like 'director' then") of the teach-in that came to be called Earth Day. There was a staff of one person, and there was no budget.

Hayes went on to head Environmental Action, a Washington lobby, and the Illinois state energy office. Later he joined the Worldwatch Institute, a Washington think tank.

Last July, Hayes was appointed director of the federal government's Solar Energy Research Institute in Golden, Colo., the largest group of solar researchers in the world. At 35, Hayes is the youngest person ever to direct a national laboratory.

In interviews on recent trips to SERI's parent organization in Kansas City, Midwest Research Institute, he reflected on a decade of environmen-tal ups and downs and looked ahead.

"We have seen a fundamental shift in the economic picture," he said. "From the premature aging of shingles on a rooftop to black lung, the deleterious effects of pollution are now considered part of the

"We've reached the point now where we're willing to spend $5 to stop $10 worth of damage. But we're not willing yet to invest $9 to stop the same damage, even though it makes economic sense."

The first Earth Day benefited from a national emotional swell as Americans started noticing belching smokestacks and polluted water and began to cast a wary eye toward industrialization, he

But environmental progress brought increasing technical considerations. Ways had to be found to identify and measure the dangerous substances in the cloud of smoke or the murky water.

"The spirit of the movement has in some instances been displaced by the need to do the hard work, the calculations involved," said Hayes. "When we started, we were trying to fundamentally, dramatically improve the quality of life. In some instances, we succeeded far beyond what we expected. But in others, we have failed to do much.'

An example of success, Hayes points to controls on pollutants dumped into rivers by industrial plants. But in areas like recycling, little has been done, he said.

In many ways, Earth Day marked the end of America's environmental ignorance. Just eight months later, the Environmental Protection Agency was set up and, after years of inaction, Congress passed the landmark Clean Air Act. The membership of the previously little-known Sierra Club dou-

SS recipients to get cost of living raise By EILEEN ALT POWELL

WASHINGTON (AP) - A top government economist says Americans should realize any significant slowing of inflation is several months off. But 35 million Social Security recipients can look forward to fatter checks beginning this summer because of what has happened to prices over the last 12

The Consumer Price Index for March, being released later today, is the final figure in the formula that determines how much Social Security benefits will be raised in July.

Based on projections of the March cost of living figures, the increase was expected to be about 14.3 Consumer prices rose 1.4 percent in both January and February, which translated to a torrid 18 percent annual inflation rate and analysts expected the March data to show little improvement. Prices last year rose just over 13 percent.

Anticipating today's figures, Robert Russell, director of the president's Council on Wage and Price

Stability, warned that prices are likely to increase 1.2 percent or more per month through June before the inflation rate slows markedly. Although inflation for the first part of 1980 is running at an annual rate of around 18 percent, the Social Security cost of living adjustment is based on the change from 12 months ago — thus the somewhat lower increase.

If inflation were to continue at current levels for another 12 months, the July 1981 adjustment would be about 18 percent.

A 14.3 percent increase would boost the average monthly Social Security benefit by $45, to $360 a month. The maximum individual benefit would go from $572 to $654.

Russell warned Monday in a speech: "I think we have to brace ourselves for increases in the Consumer Price Index through June in the 1.2 percent to 1.3 percent range per month."

But he also told the gathering of meat packers and processors he expects the inflation rate to "drop markedly" in the second half of the year.

His reasoning: mortgage interest rates should level off and oil prices should rise at a much slower rate than in earlier months.

In fact, Russell said, price increases in the last half of the year could average about 0.7 percent or 0.8 percent a month — what he termed "near below the double digit range."

President Carter and other administration officials have been predicting a similar pattern for prices. Such a decline could be helpful for Carter, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for re-

Prices went up 4.8 percent in the year before Carter took office, escalated to 6.8 percent in 1977, 9 percent in 1978 and more than 13 percent last

Earlier Monday, Russell and Alfred Kahn, who chairs the Council on Wage and Price Stability, urged the Senate Banking Committee to increase the council's budget and staff.

Nation's economy must be corrected by 1980's policies

HOUSTON (AP) - Walt W. Rostow, the economist-nistorian, say the nation's supply policies of the 1980s must be aimed at correcting degenerative characteristics of the current economic situ-

Such characteristics, the former presidential adviser said, include excessive outlays for oil imports, a weak balance of payments, an undervalued dollar, and extremely low level of productivity in-

Rostow said correcting such pathological conditions share one simple characteristic.

"They all require large increases in investment," he said Monday in speaking at the annual conference of the Financial Analysts Federation.

"But the central point that distinguishes this argument from a good many others is that, by one device or another, the increase in investment must be directed to particular sectors."

Energy, he added, is evidently the critical sector.

The increased investment in energy production and conservation to achieve President Carter's target of 4 million barrels of oil per day imports by 1990, with a reasonably high and steady growth rate for the economy, requires an additional 39 percent of gross national product allocated to energy related investment," he said.

Rostow said such an increase in investment in both production and conservation requires an accelerated energy price deregulation, plus a substantially in-creased federal tax on gasoline. He said it also calls for a ploughback of excessive profits into energy production and conservation "rather than the diffuse reallocation of revenues now envisaged."

And, he said, there would be need for prompt and definitive settlement of energy-environmental con-flicts. This, he added, probably would require state of emergency legislation or, at least, full and vigorous use by the President of the 1975 modification of the Defense Production of 1950.

demand has been created with virtually nothing done to encourage sup-

Boomtown Rats cancel San Diego appearance

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Bowing to parent-led protests, the Irish punkrock group Boomtown Rats has canceled its first appearance here. The group's hit song — "I Don't Like Mondays" — was based on a sniper attack by a San Diego schoolgirl 15 months ago.

Saying "our presence would only fan the slowly cooling embers," the group agreed to cancel their Monday show at the 2,400-seat Fox Theater. A spokeswoman for the concert organizer said just over 600 seats were sold for the event.

The parents contended the group's song glorified the Jan. 29, 1979, shootings at Cleveland Elementary School. Two persons died and nine were wounded when gunfire raked a park-ing lot crowded with school-bound

Brenda Spencer, then 16, told reporters during the siege: "I don't like Mondays. This livens up the day."

"Obviously, the band didn't want to incite the situation any further," said Barbara Thomas, spokeswoman for the Los Angeles production firm that promoted the concert. "They didn't want it to look like they were cashing in on it (the sniper attack)," she said. Plans call for rescheduling the group sometime next year, she said.

The group's lead singer, Bob Geldof, called the protest "spurious" and issued a statement explaining the cancellation. "We will not be a party to cheap morality," said Geldof. "Our presence there would only fan the slowly cooling embers.'

When the song was first released in San Diego, most of the radio stations refused to air it. Miss Spencer's attorney, Michael McGlinn, called the song "deplorable ... exploitive" and requested it not be played.

The trial was later moved 100 miles away to Santa Ana. Lyrics to the British release included the lines: "All the playin's stopped in the playground now.

She wants to play with her toys awhile.

"And school's out early and soon we'll be learning, "And the lesson today is how to die.'

Miss Spencer is currently serving a sentence of 25 years-to-life for the slayings of school principal Burton Wragg and school custodian Mike Su-

"I've had a lot of cancellations, but none caused excitement like this," said Ken Monzingo, whose firm booked the group.

A spokesman for the parents' group could not be reached for comment.

WE SPECIALIZE IN SOLVING REGULATORY MATTERS. LET US TAKE SOME OF THE MYSTERY OUT OF IT FOR YOU.

PAPER WORK BANGIN

How WE TAKE THE MYSTERY OUT OF DEALING SUCCESSFULLY WITH GOVERNMENT REGULATORY AGENCIES (True stories from the files of Zinder-Witte, Inc.)

UNLESS INDUSTRY is soon afforded administrative relief, history may refer to the NGPA as the Natural Gas PAPERWORK Act of 1978.

Mountains of paperwork stem both from regulatory excess in filing requirements and in the number of notices issued by well and facility operators, their co-owners and investors, and the gas producers. MORE THAN A YEAR after enactment, industry and the regulatory agencies are yet unable to avoid delays inherent in paper processing.

Resultant delays in collection and disbursement of funds are a burden to producer and taxpayer. THE FIRST STEP TOWARD paperwork reduction is identification of the separate paper processes and resulting accounting burdens produced from each filing. In December, 1978, FERC released the final version of Interim Regulations, which established that only one producer need file for agency determination of NGPA price catagory. This welcome decision reversed earlier drafts which required separate filings by each interest owner. However, there are several additional filing steps needed for final approval and collection that should be eliminated. THE NGPA IS AN accountant's nightmare. The quantity of paper files being accumulated staggers the storage capabilities of most firms. FERC's interim collection filing is making a shambles of gas-income accounting in larger, more complex joint-ventures. The nightmare is this: Payment distribution interest changes every month for every owner in every major joint-venture unit.

THE NATURAL GAS Policy Act of 1978 is one of the most complicated pieces of legislation ever enacted by Congress. This incredibly complex law-45 sections covering 66 pages of fine print, plus a 67-page addendum to explain the previous 66-has now been in effect 16 months. Although some of the miles of strangling red tape have been unwound, that remaining is choking efforts to increase the nation's gas supply.

PRODUCERS, INDIVIDUALLY, and collectively through trade associations, should work actively to focus FERC's attention on this continuing problem.
