Reinforcements dispatched to stop 'Freedom Flotilla'

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) - Coast Guard reinforcements have been dispatched to help shut off the "Freedom Flotilla" of Cuban refugees amid reports that some unwilling U.S. skippers were being forced at gunpoint to carry refugees from a Cuban port.

The Coast Guard late Thursday dispatched 400 active and reserve Guardsmen, six cutters, nine aircraft, six utility boats and 14 boating safety detachments to South Florida.

"We're going to have half the Coast Guard down here," said quartermaster Lou Merck, duty officer at the Coast Guard Station in Key West.

Merck said a handful of boats were known to have left Key West Thursday for the Cuban port of Mariel, despite warnings of seizures and stiff fines if they returned with refugees.

Refugee-laden boats were "coming in hot and heavy" here early today, said Federal Emergency Management Agency spokesman Clay Edwards.

Merck said, "We've had reports over the radio from Mariel all night that the Cuban government is holding them forcibly and at gunpoint and not letting them come back without refugees."

Edwards said beleagured immigration officials had not had time to update arrival figures since 9 p.m. Thursday, when 55 boats had brought ashore 3,346 refugees, swelling the 3-week total to 46,461.

Each of those boats, along with some two dozen arriving late Wednesday, was seized by Customs agents. As the boats tied up, agents slapped a bright red seizure sticker on each one, then served each captain with a notice he could face fines of $1,000 for each refugee for violating immigra-

In Washington, the Treasury Department announced that U.S. skippers who defied President Carter's order to end the boatlift could be fined 50,000 and jailed for 10 years.

In his statement Wednesday, the president said the ragtag boatlift was too dangerous, and ordered that no more boats leave Florida and that those in the Cuban port of Mariel return empty.

Carter offered to send planes and ships to ferry refugees back to the United States if Cuba would agree to let U.S. authorities screen refugees before departure.

"Nobody can leave there empty," said Pedro Morales, whose 24-foot pleasure boat landed with 10 Cubans. "They wanted to put 20 people on this boat and we had to fight to bring them down to 10."

Another boat captain, who declined to give his name, said, "The boats over there, they're going to come back with people. The Cubans have the guns. If somebody has a machine gun in his hands and says the refugees are going to get on that boat, what are you going to do?" Arriving captains estimated that 1,100 boats remained in Mariel.

Reports indicate Iran is suffering

By The Associated Press

Reports from Tehran tell of lines outside food stores and skyrocketing unemployment - indications that Iran is suffering from months of political and economic conflict with the United States and its allies.

Yet these reports say that few observers in Tehran believe that any economic sanctions by the European Common Market — a question sche-duled to be decided this weekend by the nine member nations meeting in Naples, Italy - would have an immediate impact.

Iran's revolutionary government draws most of its support from the working classes and peasants - people less affected by the economic downturn than the middle class.

The Iranian revolution is still a political and religious phenomenon despite an unemployment rate of about 30 percent and an inflation rate officially reported at 20 percent and unofficially estimated at 50 percent.

Iranian leaders are described in the Tehran accounts as looking for new oil customers and trading partners. Emissaries from Soviet-bloc countries are flying into Tehran with trade offers; the government has reached oil agreements with-Poland and Czechoslovakia, and is talking about oil and natural gas sales to the Soviet Union. China also is increasing oil imports from Iran. But Iranian leaders have been quoted as saying their country is already feeling the economic pinch, and that things could get worse if the Common Market countries go along with President Carter's call for the imposition of sanctions. The nine nations pledged last month to impose sanctions if no significant progress had been made toward the release of the U.S. hostages had been made by May 17.

Japan has indicated it will follow Western Europe's lead, but another U.S. ally, Canada, has taken a waitand-see attitude until the Common Market countries announce details of any boycott after their Naples conference.

"Yes, there will be some difficulties caused by these sanctions," Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti told reporters in Tehran last Wednesday, but he added that the sanctions would help Iran stand on its own feet economically.

Oil Minister Ali Akbar Moinfar said recently that Iran's daily oil production is about two million barrels, well below the government's target of three million, and far below the six million barrels turned out during the time of the shah. He blamed this partly on Iran's economic disputes with other countries.

Meanwhile, Key West Coast Guard Cmdr. Samuel Dennis said four U.S.

government-chartered boats were en route to Key West to begin a sealift of refugees if Cuban President Fidel Castro agrees to Carter's plan.

Carter's order was mocked by the official Cuban newspaper Granma. "Carter governs in Florida but in Mariel, Cuba governs," the newspaper said in an editorial broadcast by Havana radio and monitored in

Officials said 26 boats returned without refugees Thursday, as ordered by the president. But 35 had returned empty on Sunday, they noted, so there was no way to tell if Carter's order had any effect. Arriving captains said Cuban authorities weren't giving them a choice.

The horned toad reigns in this community

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) - The horse may be nobler, the elephant stronger, the rabbit swifter and the fox smarter. But this weekend - in Coalinga, anyway - the horned toad reigns supreme.

Looking like a refugee from an old Japanese monster movie, the tiny spine-back lizard - most natives call it a "horny" toad - is host, mascot and chief entertainer at the annual Horned Toad Festival and Horned Toad Derby

"We usually have 70 to 75 toads," said town councilman Keith Scrivner, "but cold weather in the high desert sent 'em all into hiding this year and we could only gather 30."

However, Coalinga, about 200 miles north of Los Angeles, is not a town to takes its horny toads lightly.

"They're just going to have to run twice as hard," said Scrivner. Indeed, when pesticides and agriculture sent local lizards packing to the hills, Serivner said Coalinga had to appeal to the state Department of Fish and Game to help save its festival, now in its 41st year.

And that's where Coalinga met up with "The Horny Toad Lady of Antelope Valley."

Environmental legislation prohibiting the commercial trapping of desert wildlife had also taken its toll on Pat Hargrave, an Antelope Valley pet store supplier 150 miles to the south.

Hearing of Ms. Hargrave's prowess as a horny toad hunter, Coalingans found a way to save their tradition and her business.

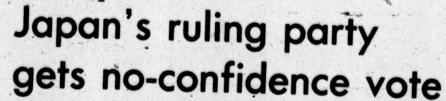

A deal was cut with the state and Ms. Hargrave was granted a special permit to catch horny toads exclusively for the festival, but only if they were treated humanely and returned to their homeland after the event. As sole supplier, "The Horny Toad Lady ... " earns not only her nickname, but $1.50 a head as well.

"It's not a money-making proposition for me and my kids," she says. 'I just love to run the desert looking for the critters.

As part of the bargain, Scrivner agreed to use his plane to transport the toads to and from Antelope Valley.

"You have to remember that this is a big event in Coalinga," he explained. "I mean, there's not even a bowling alley here. The horned toad is our high school mascot. And the festival is the biggest business week of the whole year."

The toads are kept in a cage during the plane ride, and Scrivner said he's never had a mishap. "They don't even get nauseous."

TOKYO (AP) - Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party suffered a surprise defeat in a no-confidence vote today that will force Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira to resign or call for new parliamentary elections. It was the first time since 1953 that a ruling party in Japan had lost a noconfidence vote.

Ohira, who expected to weather the balloting by a simple majority, looked stunned by the 243-187 vote against him and his 17-month-old cabinet.

In the vote climaxing a day-long debate in the lower house of the Diet, or parliament, a coalition of the Japan Socialist Party and other oppo-sition parties won a stunning victory based on claims that Ohira's party had failed to combat inflation, neg-lected welfare needs and had defied the national will by agreeing to U.S. pressure to boost its defense budget. Kyodo news service said the Liberal democrats, who have ruled Japan through most of the post-World War II period, agreed following the vote to dissolve the Diet on May 22 and hold elections a month later.

The decision reported by Kyodo means the 70-year-old Ohira, who just returned from a series of meetings abroad with President Carter and other top international leaders, will remain in office pending the outcome.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President small price to pay." Carter is complaining that Congress

As Carter was speaking to the businessmen, the House Ways and Means Committee was postponing until next week its efforts to stop the president from imposing the fee.

A U.S. District Court judge in Wash-ington ruled earlier this week that Carter overstepped his authority in trying to make the fee apply only to gasoline, and a hearing on the White House appeal of that ruling has been set for the first week in June.

Carter also told the business that political pressures of the election year are "working counter" to steps he and Congress agreed upon to reduce inflation.

"We jointly committed ourself to a balanced budget," he said. "That was clear public commitment by the Congress, both Democrats and Republicans, and myself to the American people. In recent days we have seen disturbing signs in the Congress that this commitment to a balanced budget might be in danger."

Houston may integrate city and suburb schools

HOUSTON (AP) - In a sweeping move to integrate the nation's sixth largest school system, the Justice Department is seeking a desegregation plan for all 23 school systems in Houston and its suburbs. It is the first time the federal government has asked a court for cross-district desegregation in a large urban area.

A suit filed Thursday in U.S. Distict Court here adds 22 suburban school districts as defendants to a 23-yearold desegregation suit against the Houston schools, said Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti.

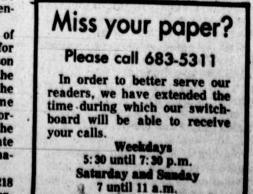

The revised suit blames the city of Houston, the state and the schools for concentrating minorities in Houston schools, pointing specifically to the schools' student transfer system, the city's refusal to allow low-income housing outside minority neighbor-hoods, the state's refusal to allow the school system to expand and state encouragement of racial discrimination in the housing market. Houston's school system has 177,218 students in 225 schools. About 46 percent are black, nearly 28 percent are Hispanic and the remaining 26 percent are white or in other groups.

Of the 310,000 students in the 22 districts around the city, 10.9 percent are Hispanic and 10.7 percent are black.

While Houston's students represen only 36.6 percent of the area-wide student population, 71.3 percent of the blacks and 59.6 percent of the Hispanics are in city schools, the suit said,

Rains move out of area

Dark clouds belched out one more heavy rain late Thursday afternoon before rumbling out of the Permian Basin area, leaving clear skies in their wake.

That final rainfall brought the day's precipation total to ,49 of an inch. This brings the total for the month to 1.68 inch and for the year to 3.32 inches.

Thursday's rain should be the last of the wet stuff for several days, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Skies should be partly cloudy through Saturday. Winds are expected to come out of the north and northwest at 10 to 15 mph tonight. The mercury should drop into the middle 50s tonight and climb back up into the middle 80s on Saturday, giving promise to a typical West Texas spring weekend: High on Thursday was 69 degrees, far off the record high of a sizzling 101 degrees set in 1937. The overnight low today of 46 degrees, however, almost matched the record low of 42 set in 1945.

Skies were clear and the temperatures cool early today in area towns.

Andrews reported it got "two bucketfuls" of rain Thursday while Lamesa reported scattered showers. Big Lake and Rankin saw only a small amount of rain, and weather watchers reported the storms passed by them.

Big Spring reported rain Thursday morning and afternoon. But Lake Thomas on the east side of Big Spring received about 41/2 inches, said a spokesman in Big Spring.

Soviets call for peace summit

VIENNA, Austria (AP) - Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko today to probe the Kremlin's position on Afghanistan and other critical issues after the Soviet bloc issued a call for an international summit to defuse world ten-

Muskie, on his first diplomatic foray since succeeding Cyrus Vance as secretary of state last week, predicted Thursday that his talks with the Kremlin's foreign affairs chief will be a "diplomatic minuet" that is not likely to yield any significant changes in Soviet policy.

The Muskie-Gromyko session will be the first Cabinet-level meeting of U.S. and Soviet officials since the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan last December chilled relations between the superpowers.

The two men will meet after attending ceremonies here marking the 25th anniversary of the end of the post-World War II Allied occupation of Austria. Their talks are expected to focus on a new Afghan peace plan proposed Wednesday by the pro-Soviet government in Kabul, and the world peace initiative raised Thursday by the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact.

There was no immediate U.S. comment on the Warsaw Pact proposals. But Muskie and other U.S. officials discounted the Afghan peace plan, which for the first time spelled out conditions for the withdrawal of the nearly 100,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

Muskie got a boost on the eve of the meeting when West Germany agreed to join President Carter's boycott of the Moscow Summer Olympics, organized to protest the Kremlin's Afghan intervention. The West German decision raised to 77 the number of countries expected to boycott the games.

Shortly after his arrival in Vienna from a NATO conference in Brussels, Muskie said the Afghan peace plan was designed to gain recognition for the government of Afghan President Babrak Karmal and "legitimization of the (Soviet) invasion.'

"I regard it as 'a cosmetic and not a meaningful proposal at this point," he said. One U.S. official traveling with the secretary said the plan was a "nonstarter," and another said it was "nice, but no sale."

The plan, as reported by the official Soviet news agency Tass, call

Kemp pushed as GOP vice president nominee

WASHINGTON (AP) - A group calling itself "Republicans for Victory in '80" announced a drive on Thursday to promote Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., as a vice presidential running mate for Ronald Reagan.

Pre-registration continuing at Midland College

More than 450 students already have pre-registered for the first summer session at Midland College with seven days left.

Registrar Dee Windsor pointed out that pre-registration continues all of next week and May 27-29 of the following week, since Midland, College will be closed May 26 in observance of Memorial Day.

Students who pre-register receive time permits and have a specific time to report for registration. This shortens the time required to complete registration and also provides students a better opportunity to take classes at the most convenient times for them.

During the first summer session, Midland College offers a wide variety of academic and vocational programs, both in daytime and evening classes.

Students may pre-register from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday in the Office of Student Services. They may also talk with counselors regarding their degree plans and transfer of course credits to ther educational institutions.

First summer session registration will be Monday, June 2, in the Physical Education Building from 2 to 4 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m. Classes start June 3 and conclude July 8. The second summer term will begin with registration July 9 and classes opening on July 10. Additional information regarding course offerings or registration may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extensions 166 or 251.

Kemp, a top adviser to the GOP presidential frontrunner, immediately disassociated himself from the effort and urged it be halted.

But at the same time, the former Buffalo Bills guarterback said that, if asked by Reagan "or any Republican nominee" to serve on the ticket, "I would be honored and would consider the offer.'

Calling Kemp "the strongest running mate for Gov. Reagan," the organization promised a full-scale lobbying effort among delegates to the 1980 GOP convention to see that Kemp gets on the ticket.

It said in a statement that Kemp would be an ideal running mate for Reagan because "at 44, he satisifies the need for a younger man.. (and) he is from New York which provides geographical balance.'

The statement also said Kemp appealed to "Republicans all across the philosophical spectrum" and could easily win the support of ethnic goups and blue-collar workers.

But Kemp told the organization in a letter that its drive "interferes with my efforts to help nominate and elect Ronald Reagan to the presidency." "I have said repeatedly, both publicly and privately, that I am not seeking the vice presidency," Kemp said.

He called on the group to disband, claiming it was "diverting money, talent and other resources away from or main goal — the nomination and election of Ronald Reagan."

Jim Roberts, a Washington public affairs consultant who is director of the draft-Kemp effort, acknolwedged that Kemp did not approve of the effort nor support it.

But, he said, "We think Kemp would make the strongest running mate for Gov. Reagan and we're going to do our best to make the case for a Reagan-Kemp ticket."

Finance chairman of the group was identified as Bruce W. Eberle, who is president of the direct mail fund-rais-ing firm that handled Reagan's campaign fundraising in 1976.

Roberts said the move has already raised some funds to help promote Kemp.

The pickup was found abandoned later that morning by Andrews County sheriff's deputies 15 miles east of Andrews. A Department of Public Safety helicopter joined in the search along with Chief Deputy George Thompson, Sheriff's Patrolman David Cobos, Sgt. Richard Dolenger, and Jones.

Indictments were also handed down to 17 people in drug-related charges. The defendants, arrested Tuesday in a drug-bust "round-up" by Midland police narcotic officers, were charged with delivery of such controlled substances as majijuana, cocaine, "speed," hallucinogens and Preludin, an "upper."

Afghanistan and neighboring Pakistan and Iran to sign bilateral agreements barring hostile action against each other and a U.S. pledge not to conduct "subversive activity" against Afghanistan. "The question of the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Afghanistan will depend on the resolution of the issue of effective guarantees of the bilateral agreements of Afghanistan with Pakistan and Iran," Tass said.

Moscow has repeatedly said the Afghan government invited it to sent in troops to help it quell anti-government Moslem rebels, whom the So-viets say are backed by the United States, China and Pakistan.

All three countries have denied the Soviet charges, and America has demanded a total Soviet withdrawal as a precondition for negotiations on the neutralization of Afghanistan.

The Warsaw Pact pact "peace offensive," unveiled on the eve of the Muskie-Gromyko talks, goes beyond the Afghan crisis in calling for a world conference to defuse "hotbeds of international tension" including Iran and the Middle East, and a freeze in the size of military forces in Europe.

However, the statement released after a two-day Warsaw conference of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and leaders of the six other Warsaw Pact nations, stressed "the necessity for a political solution" of the Afghanistan crisis that would guarantee an end to "any forms of outside interference ... against the government and people of Afghanistan."

Western observers have long been awaiting the Kremlin-led peace offensive, apparently designed to counter public opinion losses due to the Afghan intervention.

The Warsaw Pact communique said an international conference should bring together "the leaders of states of all the regions of the world." It did not say when or where the meeting should be held.

"The participants should focus their attention on a task which is the concern of both European nations and all mankind — the task of removing the hotbeds of international tension and preventing war," the statement said.

It also urged ratification of the SALT II agreement, stalled in the U.S. Senate because of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

CINCINNATI (AP) — A rare 1847 Matthew Brady photograph of famed nature painter John James Audubon has been found in a Cincinnati attic trunk.

Cincinnati photography dealer Walt Burton, acting for the family which owns the picture, withdrew the photo from sale at a New York art auction house Thursday night when bidding failed to reach his anticipated $25,000 price.

"This is the picture that everybody knows Audubon by, from a copy from this plate," said Burton, who refused to identify the photo's owners. "I believe there is a buyer out there somewhere, but he wasn't here tonight."

The Audubon portrait was made in New York City only eight years after Brady, who is famous for his Civil War photographs and for his portraits of Abraham Lincoln, began his pioneering work.

Brady made the Audubon portrait for his book, "Gallery of Illustrious Americans," which featured 12 engravings of prominent Americans which were done from daguerreotypes, an early method of printing photographs on chemically treated metal or glass.

Audubon was 62 when the picture was taken and had completed his famous study of "Birds Of America" 10 years earlier.

Audubon lived in Cincinnati in 1820. He worked for the Western Museum and had his first exhibiton of bird paintings there.

"Cincinnati is a treasure trove of old photographs," Burton said. "I'd love to know what else is hiding away in the attics of Cincinnati homes."

something, not to be appointed to something.

Agnew did not say what office he might seek, but an ABC spokesman quoted him as saying off-camera that he was thinking of Congress.

When Agnew resigned on Oct. 10, 1973, he pleaded no contest to a single charge of failing to report income of $29,500 received in 1967 when he was governor of Maryland. He accepted a felony conviction, a maximum allowable fine of $10,000 and three years unsupervised probation. He said he understood that his plea was tantamount to a plea of guilty.

The conviction does not preclude him from running again for office.

Elliot Richardson, attorney general at that time, put in the record a 40-page summary of evidence which he said established that Agnew accepted bribes while governor and that the payments continued even while he was vice president.

Agnew said he didn't hear from Nixon for more than a year after they had both resigned, and then he refused to take his former boss' phone / call.

"I didn't take the call because I thought it was a little late. I was never on the inside of what you might call the inner circle of the Nixon administration," he said.

"We never had a close relationship," said Agnew, who now contends he was forced out of office by what he interpreted as White House-inspired death threats.

Hospital to have exhibit of various departments

Ever wonder what happens in a hospital?

The first time most persons discover the hospital is when they need it. Saturday in Dellwood Mall from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Midland Memorial Hospital will have an exhibit showing various departments within the health institution.

The event is part of the week-long celebration denoting National Hospital Week, May 11-17, according to Pat Dishman, MMH public relations director.

The theme for the annual event is membership in the IMF We're America's Health Team," she and the World Bank was a foregone conclusion said. Since Midland Memorial Hospital employs about 500 people, this would make the hospital the largest health team in town, Miss Dishman said.

Numerous departments and special areas will have displays depicting the various functions within a hospital, Miss Dishman said. "This is our way of showing the public what goes on in Midland Memorial Hospital," she said.

Besides displays, blood pressure checks and blood typing will be performed with no charge, she added. "This will give Midlanders the opportunity to see exactly what a physical and occupational therapist does, to talk with business office personnel about hospital bills and insurance procedures and to witness cardiopulmonary resuscitation demonstrations and discover why CPR training is important for every Midlander," the public relations director continued.

About 14 different departments will be represented in the exhibit located in the southwest section of the Dellwood Mall near Thornton's Department Store, Miss Dishman explained.

A recruitment table showing 250 various job offerings within the hospital will also be equiped with applica-tion blanks, she said, adding that the exhibit's primary purpose is to inform the public.

There will even be a hospital food sampling display which will allow people to taste hospital food, she

Spread of nuclear weapons considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter ad-ministration officials are considering several major changes in American policy designed to counter the spread of nuclear weapons.

Officials said the changes would preserve the administration's determination to prevent more countries or terrorist groups from obtaining nuclear weapons while recognizing that some of the policies adopted in 1977 have gone nowhere.

The most significant proposal under discussion would end American. opposition to the commercial use of plutonium and make this country a guarantor of commercial plutonium supplies to selected countries.

In return, the United States would demand that countries such as Japan, Switzerland, Germany and France tighten their export controls on sensitive nuclear technology to countries that refuse to accept safeguards against nuclear weapons development.

Another proposal would involve the United States in an international plan to store spent nuclear fuel.

The proposals are expected to be submitted to President Carter shortly, say the officials, who asked not to be identified.

One administration initiative which has not worked was an effort to delay the advent of commerce in plutonium. Plutonium, unlike the uranium that powers the current generation of commercial reactors, is readily usable in weapons.

But it also holds out the promise of an endless supply of fuel when used in "breeder reactors," which produce more plutonium than they consume.

France, among other countries with limited supplies of oil and coal, is intent on developing a commercial breeder reactor. Plutonium does not occur in nature but is a byproduct of nuclear fission. It can be separated from spent uranium fuel through a complicated "reprocessing.'

The administration fears that once large amounts of plutonium are moving in international commerce, some might be stolen or diverted for weapons. For that reason, it has tried for three years to convince the rest of the world that reactors using plutonium were both dangerous and uneconomical.

The administration has also insisted on reviewing on a case-by-case basis requests from countries such as Japan for a license to extract plutonium from spent fuel originally supplied by the United States. Licenses have been granted only rarely, and then generally for research pur-

Earlier this year, however, the rest of the world insisted on preserving the plutonium option in the report that concluded the U.S.-sponsored International Nuclear Fuel Cycle Evaluation.

"Countries without the uranium and coal reserves we have are not going to rule out any option that might make them less dependent on foreign energy," one administration official said last week.

With that in mind, the proposals under consideration suggest using the leverage the United States retains as the largest source of uranium in the Western world. As the original supplier, the United States can control the right to reprocess fuel.

That leverage can be used, some officials are arguing, to try to wrest concessions in another troubled area of U.S. non-proliferation policy. The administration has been dismayed by a spate of recent sales of sensitive materials to countries such as Argentina that refuse to sign the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty or allow international monitoring of their facilities.

Countries with advanced nuclear technology are reluctant to turn down any potential customer, officials said. With projected demand for electricity going down and environmental objections to nuclear power going up, the nuclear industry is ailing. Some nations are fearful that their nuclear industries will whither away if they do not encourage foreign sales. The proposals being considered now would offer such countries guaranteed, long-term licenses to reprocess U.S.-supplied spent fuel in return for their agreement not to sell nuclear technology to countries which fail to accept full international monitoring or sign the Non-Proliferation Treaty. Officials said that the concept of an internationally-controlled storage site for spent fuel is less developed. Until now, spent fuel has been stored on reactor sites, usually in pools. But those pools are nearing their storage capacity.

Carter's MX missile plan. wins support in House

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's MX missile system has won a vote of support in House, with defeat of an effort to delay the project for further study.

The House rejected 250-152 Thursday an amendment that would have knocked $500 million for the MX from a $53.1 billion weapons bill, leaving only $66 million for more study of the Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who said military experts disagree whether the MX, estimated to cost $56 billion before it is completed, is the best replacement for present Minuteman missiles.

"Let's make sure we know what we're doing," Simon said. He said the Soviets are already far ahead in land-based missiles and retired Gen. Maxwell Taylor, a former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, believes most U.S. nuclear missiles should be put on submarines.

But MX supporters, saying the study would delay the system for two years, argued that time is short because Pentagon planners believe the Soviets will be capable of overwhelming the Minuteman by the mid-1980s.

Colorado woman receives call, 'finds' twin sons

SALIDA, Colo. (AP) — At 19, she lost her twin infant sons in an Ohio courtroom. At 61, a telephone call brought them back.

"It was May 13, 1938, and he came home and told me to get the children dressed, that we had someone to see," Rosemary Redfield recalled of her soldier husband - the babies' father.

They had married six months before the boys were born. "Times were hard and feeding the twins and ourselves was really a chore My husband told the judge he no longer wanted any of the responsibilities of our marriage and that I was not in any position to take care of the children," Mrs. Redfield said.

The judge went along, a divorce was granted, she said, and the 3-month-old boys — Jerry Stanley Smith and Thomas Howard Smith — were placed in St. Ann's Infant Asylum in Columbus, Ohio.

On Tuesday, the 42nd anniversary of that day, a telephone call ended Mrs. Redfield's years of wondering about her boys.

"I answered the phone and a man said, 'Are you Rosemary Redfield?," " she said Wednesday at her home in this central Colorado town in the midst of the Rocky Mountains.

"I said I was," Mrs. Redfield recalled. "He said, 'I'm David Su-pensky and I think we've found each other.' I think I went into shock. I couldn't believe it."

The night brought nearly four hours of telephone calls with David Supensky of Albuquerque, N.M., and his brother, Thomas Supensky of Balti-

Each man has three sons of his own. And Thomas, like Mrs. Redfield, works professionally in ceramics. David is a retired Army major.

"They're (David Supensky's family) going to try to come up here to see us this weekend," said Mrs. Redfield, who married John Redfield, a widowed Army officer, in 1952, and helped raised his three children. She never had other children of her own.

The twins only learned they were adopted eight years ago, told by their adoptive father, John Supensky, after the death of his wife. In the late 1970s, Mrs. Redfield and her sons began searching for each other. But a judge in Columbus stalled the efforts, refusing to open records of the adoption and ruling the case was closed. A year ago, Mrs. Redfield said: "I have no idea what started it (the search.) It was a hurt, a yearning in my heart ... I don't think I'll' ever rest until I find out something."

They finally connected because of a United Feature Syndicate story about Mrs. Redfield's search by Arlene Shovald, a Salida area free-lance writer.

The article, which appeared in newspapers early this month, was read by Hazel Vorheese of Dayton, Ohio, who told a relative, who in turn called her brother-in-law — John Supensky of Arizona. On Tuesday, the elder Supensky called David, and he called Mrs. Redfield.

Mrs. Redfield was also given up for adoption as a child — and didn't find her birth parents until age 23. She spent some of her early years in the Good Shepherd Convent in Columbus after her foster parents gave her up and she was made a ward of the court.

After high school, she went to work in a drug store and met the young soldier she lived with briefly, married, then never saw or heard from again.

"I was not even allowed to make a phone call...I just had to do what I was told. I feel as though I was treated as a criminal," she remembers of the day the boys were taken from her.

She added: "It was just one of those things that gives a person nightmares."

MC adds courses to evening scheudle

Two new short courses have been added to the schedule of evening classes offered to area residents through the Midland College Department of Community Services.

A 12-hour course in aerobic dancing and a six-hour course in lingerie making will begin during the week of June 9.

Aerobic dancing, taught by Carole McCarter, is geared toward increasing cardiovascular endur-ance. The one and one-half hour sessions also help decrease body fat, increase stamina and tone muscles.

Classes include both exercise and dance movements accompanied by disco, ballroom and ballet music.

Students meet 8-9: 30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays for four weeks, beginning June 10. The course fee is $12.

How to make your own lingerie will be taught in two three-hour sessions 7-10 p.m., scheduled Thursday, June 12, and Thursday, June 19.

Jennifer Cochran, course instructor, demonstrates ways to obtain the proper fit and construction when making slips, camisoles and other undergarments. Students learn the commercial methods for applying lace and elastic and will gain ideas for gowns, negligees and robes. Techniques taught in class are applicable to all types of lingerie. Classes are limited to 13 students and students should bring their own sewing machine to both sessions. Course fee is $8.

Those interested in entering either course should pre-register now in room 156 of the MC Administration Building. The office will remain open between 7 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, including the lunch hour.

Iranian oil pipeline blown up

By The Associated Press

A pipeline in Iran's major oil-producing region was blown up and set afire overnight and despite an immediate shutdown of the oil flow the flames burned through the night and today, Tehran Radio said.

The radio, quoting an official Pars news agency report, did not say who blew up the pipe between Naft-e-Shah and Kermanshah, but Iranian Arabs who want autonomy for the region, have been fighting the central government and are believed to have sabotaged pipelines in the past. The Arabs are an ethnic minority in Iran which is mainly Persian - and they make up a large part of Iran's oil field work force. It was Iranian Arabs who seized the Iranian Embassy in Lon-don earlier this month and held it for six days until crushed by British comtionary said "genuine spy suspects" among the American hostages should be tried, but he hoped none had committed "grave sins" and that all would be returned safely to their families.

Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, who displayed the remains of the eight American servicemen killed in the aborted hostage rescue mission three weeks ago, spoke Thursday to Iran's official Pars news agency.

The call for spy trials has been made before by hardliners like Khaikhali and some of the members of the Islamic Republican Party that dominates the new Iranian Parliament that is to decide the hostages' fate late next month.

In the meanwhile, the 53 hostages seized Nov. 4 when militants took over the U.S. Embassy in Tehran - have been reported dispersed among 15 cities, including Tehran, in an attempt to foil another rescue attempt. The Iranians claim 96 U.S. agents and 19 Iranian exiles recently were landed by helicopter in Iran for a two-week mission of assassination and sabotage, but a White House aide denied the claim Thursday as "ridiculous.

However, President Carter has not ruled out another rescue attempt, and in a new step aimed at readying U.S. troops for possible intervention in the Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf area, a California headquarters for a 12,000man quick-reaction Marine brigade goes into operation today. At present, the only U.S. ground combat troops in the Indian Ocean-Persian Gulf area are 1,800 Marines aboard a Navy amphibious task force in the Arabian Sea. One of the carriers in the task force, the Nimitz, was the launchpad for the helicopters used in the aborted hostage rescue mission April 25.

While keeping its military options open, the Carter administration is trying to get its European allies and Japan to join it in imposing economic sanctions against Iran.

The Common Market foreign ministers have vowed to cut off exports to Iran Saturday if there is no "decisive progress" toward freeing the hostages, and are expected to keep their word at a meeting in Naples, Italy, this weekend.

Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, who will chair the session, said Thursday in Rome: "The European Economic Community hoped that there would be a word on the part of Iran, an orientation toward some small opening. That has not happened and the EEC is therefore leaning toward greater severity."

French exports to Iran in the first two months of 1980 nearly doubled from the average monthly level of last year, the Iranian Embassy said in Paris today, adding that the trend is likely to continue. The bulk of exports from France, which is an EEC member, consisted of agricultural and food products.

The Japanese government decided today it needed more time to work out new sanctions against Iran. Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira told report-ers in Tokyo his cabinet will meet again after the Common Market announces its decision.

While reports from Tehran tell of lines outside food stores and skyrocketing unemployment, few observers in the Iranian capital believe that any economic sanctions by the Common Market would have an immediate impact.

However, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr talks often about Iran's huge budgetary deficit this year and moribund industry. If Iran's economic problems aren't solved, the inflation rate might hit 100 percent, he said recently.

Record supplies won't halt gas increases, say analysts

By ROBERT BURNS

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1980

NEW YORK (AP) - Crude oil supplies are at an all-time high and refineries are cutting back production because they can't find enough customers, but that won't mean lower prices at the gas pump. Analysts say gasoline prices will go up this summer anyway.

The increases, however, could be tempered for part of the summer by price wars in parts of the country particularly in New York, Washington and sections of the Midwest - one analyst says.

The retail price will rise about one cent per gallon each month, predicts Dave Knapp, an analyst with the Economics Group of Chase Manhattan Bank. He cautions that his forecast assumes there will be no unexpected changes in the production or pricing of foreign oil.

There are several reasons the impending glut is not expected to reduce prices. For one, gasoline prices traditionally rise in the summer, when driving increases.

Another is that, even with slackening demand overall, the price of crude oil is not going down. Saudi Arabia has just raised the price of its oil to $28 a barrel, bringing it closer to the prices of $30 and up charged by other members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. There are 42 gallons in a barrel.

And the federal government is gradually removing price controls on domestic oil, allowing those prices to rise to world levels.

"No one can say for sure what's going to happen, but the underlying cost of making gasoline will continue to go up because, in part, of the government's decontrol program,' said Gary Ross of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

President Carter's effort to impose a fee of 10 cents per gallon on gasoline has been stymied for the moment, but gasoline prices would of course go up again if he succeeded in imposing that fee. It has been blocked by a judge and faces stiff congressional opposition.

tion. For the time being, however, the tremendous surge in gasoline prices has ended. The average price of lead-ed regular gasoline actually fell a bit during the first week of May, from \$1.209 to \$1.206, according to Dan Lundberg, who publishes a newsletter $\frac{1000}{1000} \frac{1000}{1000} \frac{1000}{1000}$

Thursday that refineries operated at only 73.9 percent of capacity in the week that ended May 9, down from 75.5 percent the previous week and 83.9 percent in the same week of 1979.

The API also reported that crude oil inventories reached record levels during the week and said supplies of gasoline and home heating oil were far above normal.

Lundberg said he thinks the Saudi increase will boost U.S. retail gasoline prices by at least three-fifths of a cent immediately and "as that increase churns through the entire economy it will come out within 90 days as a 3-cent-a-gallon increase." It may be gasoline retailers who will suffer if motorists don't increase their purchases this summer as they usually do. Knapp said he expects increased competition to result in short-lived price cuts in some regions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The U.S. Department of Transportation has given Texas more time to round up financial support for a proposed deepwater port to accommodate jumbo tankers carrying imported oil to Texas refineries.

Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt gave the state an extension to June 30 and said he probably would allow the state another six months, to Nov. 15.

Goldschmidt warned, however, there would be no further extensions unless the Texas Deepwater Port Authority can show signed commitments from potential port users by November.

Until 'the extention, Texas had a May 15 deadline to accept a federal license for the port, to be built near Freeport. DOT offered the license Aug. 15, 1979, but state acceptance has been delayed by difficulty in securing oil company commitments to use the port.

OPEC cartel's quadrupling of foreign oil prices. President Gerald R. Ford temporarily imposed new import fees as a tactic to push energy legislation through Congress.

The third idea, that of a gasoline surcharge, goes back at least to 1974. when it was proposed as a way of cutting oil consumption after the Arab oil embargo.

John C. Sawhill, then head of the Federal Energy Administration, backed this unpopular idea and, partly as a result, was dismissed by Ford. Now Sawhill is back, as deputy en-ergy secretary, and so are gasoline surcharges.

While the federal government has for years collected a four-cent-pergallon tax to pay for federal highway programs, Congress has repeatedly rejected a tax aimed at conserving gasoline.

Highway construction brings jobs, business, easy travel and grassroots political support. Gasoline conservation doesn't.

In fact, although authorizing the president to adopt fuel-saving measures, Congress specifically said he could not do it through a gasoline tax.

The president could impose oil import fees to protect national security, but not to balance the budget.

The three ideas came together last March, when the Carter administration linked them ingeniously.

Carter would put a large fee on all imported oil, to be paid by American refiners. But those refiners would be allowed to recover the fee only on gasoline sales.

The resulting pump price hikes

It takes Olympic conditioning to interview Bill Buckner

Los Angeles Times

To interview the Cubs' Billy Buckner, you have to get ready for it like running the Olympic mile. What is needed is a new pair of Adidas, enlarged lungs, a lower pulse rate and a finishing kick. It helps if you sleep with your clothes on and slide down a pole to get to your interview quicker.

Bill Buckner is never still. He makes even Pete Rose look like a cigar store Indian. Buckner swoops into a dressing room like a flight of doves. He immediately looks for things to do. If the phone is not engaged, he charges to it, picks it up and calls somebody, Lord knows who. Maybe the White House. He snatches open mail and reads it on a dead run.

He checks the comp tickets he has left, then rushes to the trainer's room where he goes through more rituals than a doctor scrubbing up for major surgery. He doesn't walk, he darts. It is like interviewing the drum major of a fast-stepping parade. He talks like something coming from a jammed shortwave radio from a spy in the Balkans whose transmission keeps being interrupted.

"WHY, uh, did Herman Franks say he, uh, disliked me? Well (excuse me, I got to see this thing, there!

That's OK!) Now, what was your question again? Oh, yes, Herman Franks ... Well, Herman said he thought I was jealous of Dave Kingman ... Excuse me, could we finish this later? You see I gotta ... What? Telephone for me? Wait a minute ... Oh, I think Herman was disappointed about a lot of things ... We got along OK ... Was I jealous of Kingman? Naw, I didn't know whether to augh or be sorry for Herman ... Look, can I come right back? You see, I have to ... I don't hold anything against Herman ... Look, would you mind? I gotta take batting practice ...

AT THE batting cage Buckner hastily wipes a bat handle with a resined rag, flops to the ground, begins knee-bending exercises, jumps up, runs into the cage. "Oh, yes, I'm having a good year (smack!), I'm seeing the ball good (smack!), sure this could be the best Chicago team ever (smack!), I like Chicago (smack), I have a condominium downtown (Smack!), and a ranch in Idaho, (Smack!), my brothers run it in season (Smack!)"

The conversation is like a man-in-the-street interview in the middle of Times Square during rush hour, or the pilot-to-tower transmission of a plane in trouble.

Buckner dashes around the bases, then hurries down the ramp to get a glove. He walks like a man leaving the scene of a crime and trying not to run, looking like one of those speeded up reels of Chaplin movies.

This young man in a hurry even gulps his food. He doesn't play first base, he paces it. He reminds you of a caged animal tied to the bag on a short chain.

A DOZEN years ago Billy Buck was a star member of that famous group of L.A. Dodger youngsters the press called "Kiddie Korps." Baseball's Class of '68 was like a Harvard group of baccalaureates that would produce a secretary of state, two congressmen, a senator or a President, and a justice of the Supreme Court. It was the group of Garvey, Cey, Russell, Lopes, Ted Sizemore, Billy Grabarkewitz, Billy Buckner -- with one or two exceptions, a National League All-Str team. Certainly an all-rookie team. And many people considered Buckner the best of the lot. Among these was Ted Williams. "Bill Buckner," the great man intoned, 'has a chance to become the next .400 hitter. He's got the best swing of any young hitter I've ever seen."

Sixty colleges wanted Buckner when he was in high school for football. A. dozen major legaue teams wanted him for baseball. The Dodgers got him. Buckner batted .344 for Ogden, .307 for Albuquerque, and .335 for Spokane. Then he batted .319 and .314 for the Dodgers and led them to the '74 pennant and World Series where, characteristically in a hurry, he got thrown out at third on the pivotal play of that tournament.

Then, Buckner got a severely sprained ankle. Typically impatient, he ran it into a serious injury that all but immobilized the foot and ultimately required surgery. Then he was traded to the Cubs for Rick Monday. Once one of the best runners in the game (he stole 31 bases in 1974) Billy Buckner stopped getting leg hits. So he never did get to hit .400, but he was batting .394 as the season moved through the second week of May this year when Dodger pitching threw a couple of 0-for-4's at him. This is not usual. Buckner batted .340 against L.A. last year and usually rips them up.

If Billy Buck does win the batting championship or hits 400 this year, to interview him the networks may have to bring in barricades, bullhorns, remote crew and bloodhounds, rope off the area where he is holed up and communicate with him like on ship-to-shore radio. They'll need at least 10 camera locations. Otherwise, Billy is not going to be on screen long enough for people to know what color his hair is.

free agent-reserve areas. That means maintaining the six-year waiting periinstead of switching to the four or five years which the players have proposed. It would also postpone any changes on matters such as player eligibility for total free agency, limiting the number of rounds in the re-entry draft, the time when a player may demand a trade and other related issues.

By definition, however, it also means that management must accept a two-year hold before it can get compensation and that demand has been a cornerstone of the owners' position since these difficult negotiations began last winter.

"It is our judgment that a perfectly respectable agreement can be made on that basis," Miller said. "It's a compromise proposal. Baseball operated for 80 years under the old reserve system and it has had the revised system for only four years. That's miniscule by comparison. The parties would be well advised to get four more years of experience and look at the results."
