Byrd will try to end debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd served notice Friday that he will attempt to shut off debate next week on the "wind-fall" tax on the oil industry.

As the Senate began a third day of debate on the compromise legislation, Byrd announced that a petition to close off debate will be filed Monday. Unless Republican-led opponents of the measure agree voluntarily to limit debate, Byrd said, the Senate will vote on that petition on Wednesday.

And if that petition is rejected, he added, the Senate will consider another each day until the bill is brought to a final vote.

Ted Stevens, the assistant Republican leader, said he believes Republicans will be able to offer an agreement on Tuesday that would lead to ending the debate.

Shamir optimistic

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Friday he expects Israel and Egypt to reach agreement in the negotiations on Palestinian autonomy and urged Palestinian Arabs to join the talks.

Shamir refused to commit himself on the future of the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River in his first interview with Israeli news media since his appointment March 10.

He joins Israel's delegation at the next session of the autonomy talks among Israeli, Egyptian and American negotiators, scheduled next week in Alexandria, Egypt.

Shamir, who abstained in last year's vote on the Israel-Egypt peace treaty, is expected to strengthen the hawkish wing in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government in relations between the two countries.

In an interview broadcast by Israel radio, he said the autonomy plan "is for a temporary solution, for several years, that have to be years of peaceful coexistence."

$20,000 awarded

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A federal jury awarded $20,000 Friday to a couple who had sought $12 million in a damage suit alleging that their son's birth defects were caused by the morning sickness drug Bendectin.

The four men and two women returned their civil verdict on the fifth day of deliberations in a case filed by Michael and Elizabeth Mekdecil against Richardson-Merrell Inc. of Wilton, Conn.

The Mekdecils are the parents of 4-year-old David Mekdecil, born in 1975 with a sunken chest and malformations of the right arm and hand.

Before the case went to the jury, attorneys for both sides had agreed that if the jury decided against the company, the company would pay the $20,000 to cover the parents' medical expenses at the time David was born.

Bus crashes

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — A bus carrying Roman Catholic pilgrims skidded off the road and plunged 300 feet down a mountainside in Jalisco state Friday, killing 41 persons and critically injuring 17, Red Cross officials reported.

They said several of the injured probably would not survive.

The victims were taken to hospitals in Guadalajara, 20 miles away.

Several hours later, a truck crashed into two ambulances, a crane and a patrol car parked at the site of the bus accident and police said nine persons were injured, with four in critical condition.

The Red Cross and police said all of the victims of both accidents were Mexicans.

'Deterioration' noted in Colombia hostages

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The hostages held by guerrillas at the Dominican Republic Embassy are showing signs of "physical and psychological deterioration," and a quick, bloodless end to the 24-day-old crisis must be found, a special envoy from Venezuela said Friday.

The Venezuelan, Numa Quevedo, is one of the officials sent here by 16 nations, including the United States, that have diplomats captive in the embassy.

Bogota newspapers reported they received in the mail from New York an ominous pamphlet purportedly sent by Puerto Rican and Dominican terrorist groups threatening a terror campaign in the United States if the Bogota embassy is attacked by Colombian security forces.

The 16 special representative met for three hours Thursday with President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala and Foreign Minister Diego Uribe Vargas, who outlined what their government's negotiating stance will be for the sixth round of face-to-face talks with the guerrillas, scheduled for next Monday.

The two dozen or more leftist terrorists in the embassy hold 32 hostages, including U.S. Ambassador Diego Asencio and 12 other ambassadors or acting ambassadors. Their main demand is freedom for political prisoners in Colombia.

Quevedo, a personal representative of Venezuelan President Luis Herrera Campins, said Friday that Turbay Ayala had bolstered hopes for a peaceful solution to the crisis.

"I was pleased with the frank and open manner shown us over this unfortunate incident by the president and this filled us with faith and hope that a solution without the spilling of blood will finally be achieved," Quevedo told a reporter.

Quevedo said he told the president there was a "necessity of looking for a bloodless solution in as little time as possible, for there are unsettling signs of the physical and psychological deterioration of the hostages."

The envoy said three ambassadors — Asencio, Virgilio Lovera of Venezuela and Geraldo do Nascimento of Brazil — had been treated for heart-related problems, although the doctor who visited them said they did not require hospitalization.

In an act of leniency unusual in such situations, the guerrillas did permit a brief visit to the embassy by the daughter of Israeli Ambassador Elisha Barak, the Israeli Embassy announced. An Israeli spokesman declined to name the girl, but she appeared to be in her early 20s and stayed in the captured embassy only a few minutes. She walked alone to the occupied embassy and did not speak with reporters after she left.

The only other persons the guerrillas have allowed into the embassy were Red Cross volunteers delivering food and doctors.

A statement by the Israeli Embassy said, "The visit, solicited by the Israeli ambassador and authorized by Comandante No. 1, chief of the guerrilla commandos of the M-19 in the Dominican Embassy, was realized thanks to the efficient help of the Ministry of Foreign Relations and the Colombian Red Cross."

The threatening pamphlet received by Bogota papers pledged support to the M-19 guerrilla movement and was signed by the Puerto Rican terrorist group Armed Forces for National Liberation — FALN — and a group called the June 14 Movement of the Dominican Republic.

Council, officials tour proposed annexation area

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland has grown 25 percent in the past four years — a record 4,400 persons in 1979 — and most of that to the north.

With that in mind, Midland City Council and Planning Department staff Friday afternoon toured an area north of Midland that will be the subject of a public hearing at 4 p.m. Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

The area proposed for annexation stretches from Holiday Hill Road on the west to Lamesa Highway on the east. The northernmost point starts with Green Tree Country Club, but drops to include developments such as Melody Acres, Green Hill Terrace and Saddle Club North.

THIS PROPOSAL, said Director of Planning and Community Development Richard Hennessy, is a minimum plan. "We are supporting what we feel is critical today," he said.

Hennessy and Walter Ashby, a city planner, pointed out to the council problems existing in the proposed areas if they are developed further without a plan.

Stopping first in Hillcrest Acres west of Holiday Hill Road, Ashby said the addition wasn't annexed soon enough and as result has sparse development now. Houses were built at random in that area, he said.

A primary problem for tracts of land allowed to develop at will before being annexed is a large number of non-conforming uses, said the planners.

For example, Sinclair Street in Wallace Heights — which should be residential on both sides of the street, the planners said — has a tree nursery on one side and on the other side a decorating center now in the pre-fab housing business.

Because of these uses, Hennessy said, housing development is nil adjacent to the businesses, leaving wide spaces of pasture.

Much of the land proposed for annexation would be brought in as Agriculture-Estate District, said Hennessy. The animal-fowl ordinance is being revised to allow residents more animals on the land, and a grandfather clause would allow existing conditions to continue.

Mockingbird Lane is a narrow paved road, but city planners said it is designated to become a major arterial street and should be 100 feet wide. The city has enough right of way for only 80 to 90 feet, the council was told.

ONE PROBLEM that will crop up with continued growth in those areas is non-conforming uses, city planners reiterated, pointing out mud-logging trailers in one yard surrounded by homes.

The way many houses are situated now, they will back onto major streets with the horse stalls and chicken coops looking onto the road, according to the city planners.

"A lot of planning hasn't taken place in these areas, and there is still a lot of land that could be developed," he added.

Providing city services — especially water and sewer — to residents in the proposed area within the city's three year time limit wouldn't be a problem, said Fred Baker, director of public works.

The residents under consideration for annexation can be hooked into the city sewer line without many problems, he added.

Regardless of whether the city annexes that land, Baker said, the city will have to develop a drainage channel there. If not, "drainage will affect the value of that property; it will go straight down," he said.

The city will continue to grow north, Ashby said, and that will mean in the next three to five years half to a third of the growth will be outside city limits if the area isn't annexed.

WITHOUT ANNEXATION, the city has no control over how the land is developed and platted, said Hennessy. Midland Independent School District has purchased a tract of land north of Bluebird Lane for a future school site. And the city has bought a piece of adjacent land for a park.

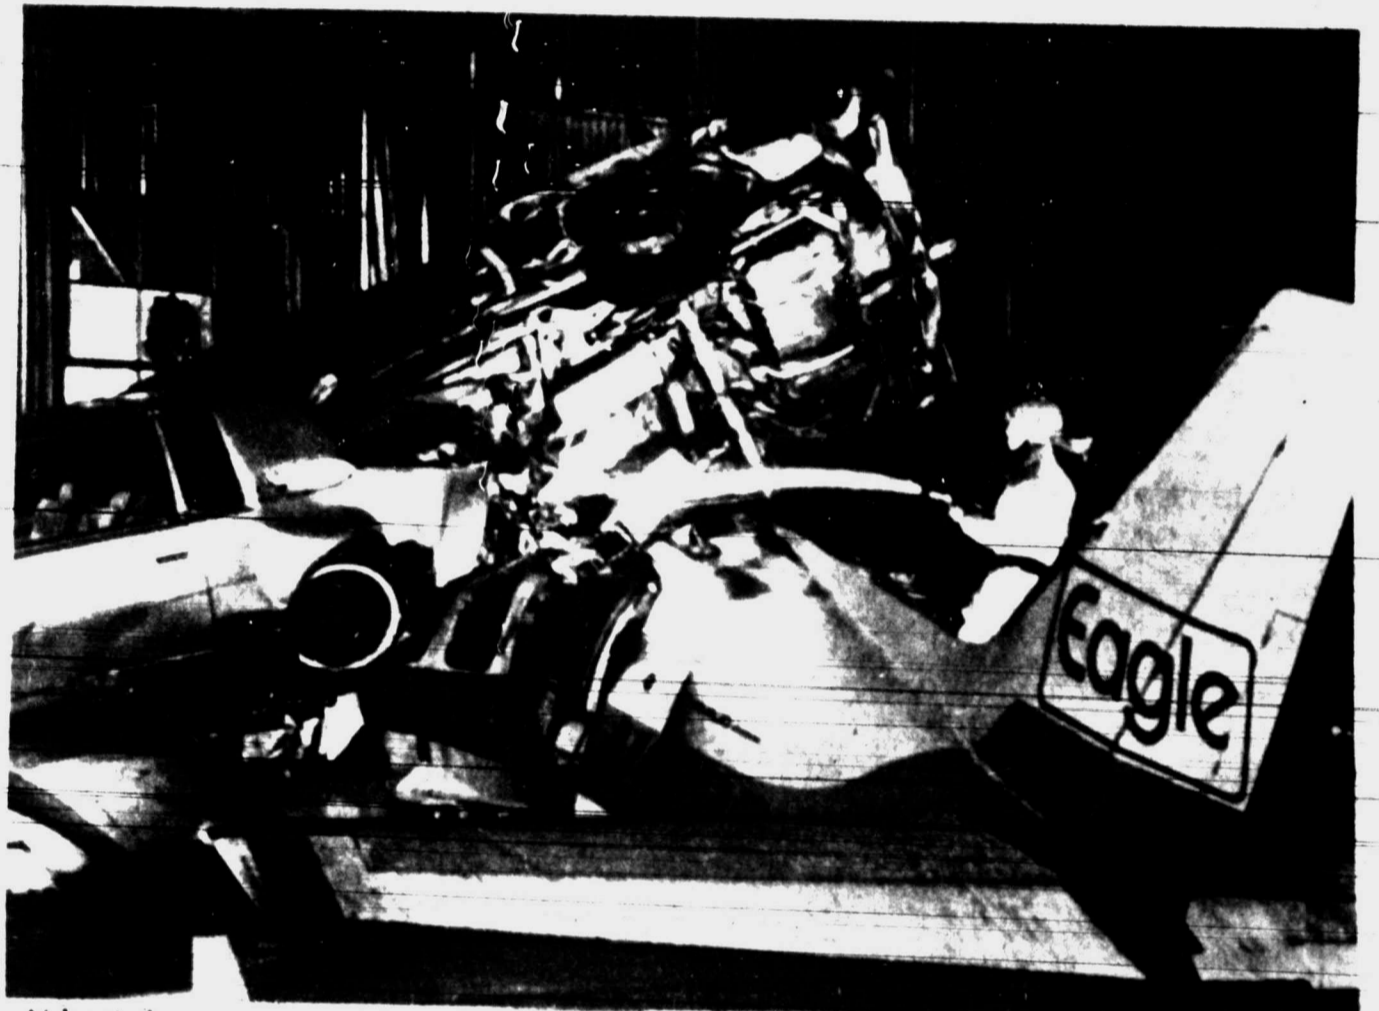

As the land stands now, there is no road to this school site. And if houses are built around without letting the city develop a proper street plan, it's feasible there could be no street leading to the school, said Hennessy.

While residents in the area have voiced opposition to annexation, saying they wanted to retain the rural atmosphere, Ashby showed an advertisement by a real estate firm in advertising lots for houses near Green Tree Country Club in addition to lots for apartments and shopping in Green Hill Terrace. This development would destroy the rural atmosphere, Ashby contended.

And an owner of 200 acres has posted a sign his land is for sale. Hennessy said once a person "owns land and starts to break it down into smaller tracts, he's lost his argument against annexation."

Bluebird Lane serves as the city boundary with houses on the north side of the street considered in the county. However, said Hennessy, some of those residences are tied into city water and/or sewer lines. They receive city services but don't have to pay city taxes.

That policy, said some of the council, may be reviewed in the future.

At least six persons were killed and four others injured when a twin-engine airplane, operated by Eagle Commuter Airlines Inc. of Brownwood, crashed on takeoff shortly after 8 p.m. Friday from Houston's Hobby Airport. Officials said the plane, en route to Waco, developed engine trouble, plunged to the ground, struck a parked helicopter and small plane, two parked cars, slammed into a hangar and burst into flames. Names of the victims were not immediately available. (AP Laserphoto)

For New Year's, hostages get cookies, continued imprisonment

By The Associated Press

The U.S. Embassy militants in Tehran promised Persian New Year "goodies and cookies" for their 50 American hostages Friday — and continued imprisonment "until the criminal shah is returned."

In a New Year's Day speech, Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini assailed Marxists, strikers, army troublemakers, the Soviet Union and the United States. He also gave a boost to President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who is trying to assert central authority over a nation still recovering from the disruptions of revolution.

Khomeini made no mention, however, of the U.S. Embassy hostages and their captors, young Moslem radicals who have been among the most prominent in defying Bani-Sadr's authority.

The hostages end their 20th week in captivity Saturday.

Khomeini says the decision on whether to free them must be made by the new Iranian Parliament, but the election of its 270 members is not expected to be completed until mid-April, and action on the hostage question is not expected before mid-May or later.

Reached by telephone by The Associated Press from Nicosia, Cyprus, a spokesman for the militants said Friday's New Year celebration in the embassy would include the hostages. "We will give them goodies and cookies. It will be a simple ceremony," he said. "We will give prizes to a couple of them."

Would the "prizes" be freedom? "No, none of them will be released. They will not be released until the criminal shah is returned to Iran."

Hundreds of thousands of Iranians poured into a Tehran cemetery where revolutionary dead are buried to hear New Year addresses by Bani-Sadr and Khomeini. The ayatollah was read by his son Ahmad. Khomeini is recuperating from a heart attack.

Bani-Sadr declared that his "responsibility as your president is to establish order and security in Iran and to prepare the ground for economic progress and political and cultural order." He warned his foes he would "have no mercy. I will put all the plotters down."

In his address, Khomeini endorsed Bani-Sadr's goal, saying, "This is the year when security should be restored to Iran."

Khomeini also warned against trying to blend Marxism and Islam, the goal of some Iranian leftists, said troublemakers within the military "will be exposed as counter-revolutionaries," and called on Iranians to expose "ungodly" strikers.

Both the president and Khomeini assailed the Soviet Union, the ayatollah mixing in an attack on the United States as well.

"My dear friends," Khomeini said, "you should know that the danger of communist powers is not less than that of America, and the danger of America is such that if we show the slightest negligence, we shall be destroyed."

Bani-Sadr repeated his denunciation of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan, and disclosed that last month he proposed to Moscow that a five-nation commission be established to investigate the Afghan situation. The Soviets rejected the idea, he said.

In other developments Friday, officials of several Western European governments confirmed that the ambassadors of the nine European Common Market nations in Tehran have been consulting on ways to pressure Iran into freeing the hostages.

Ordinance working; Cincinnati hosts ZZ Top concert

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati's tough, new ordinances governing rock concerts passed their first test Friday night when an appearance by the rock group ZZ Top got under way without major incident.

The concert was the first to be held in Riverfront Coliseum since 11 people were died Dec. 3 as rock fans pushed to get into a concert by the British rock group "The Who."

Police had taken about 40 people into custody by show time Friday, but the flow of the crowd was orderly and no injuries were reported. Police Chief Myron Leistler said there were a few incidents related to drugs and bottles.

"My favorite phrase tonight is 'We're in control of the flow,'" said Mayor J. Kenneth Blackwell.

Blackwell had been the driving force behind passage of an ordinance that banned so-called "festival seating" in which patrons are allowed to mill about near the stage without assigned seats. "The sight of the uniforms kind of quelled everything," said John Taffaro, coliseum spokesman, who said the 28 doors were opened at 8:46 p.m., four minutes early.

City officials believed the ban on general admission or "festival" seating was the major factor.

"I think this (peace) vindicates our approach requiring reserved seating. I think other cities will see this and adopt the same thing," said Vice Mayor David Mann. "If we can't have a safe evening, we will never have a safe evening."

The crowd was far smaller than the one which attended The Who concert Dec. 3. Patrons said they believed this, and the orderliness of the crowd, was due mainly to the performers.

"ZZ Top is not a super group. Who fans are very intense, like the Beatles' fans," said Marty Stoney of Florence, whose girlfriend Diane Hubert was seriously injured Dec. 3. Others resented some restrictions.

Patrons had to pass ticket checks by police and coliseum officials to get onto the plaza. They then had to pass a police check for bottles, cameras or recording devices before going in.

It was the most heavily policed event in the city's history. Twenty-five uniformed police were outside and another 25 in plainclothes were inside to enforce liquor and drug laws. Fire inspectors were there also to prevent smoking and fires.

City police and coliseum security personnel were instructed to conduct visual searches for drugs and liquor, and only ticketed patrons were to be allowed on the coliseum plaza. "All the guidelines are meaningless if patrons don't have respect for each other," said coliseum spokesman Taffaro. Twenty-eight doors would be opened and 16 turnstiles would be in operation to handle the crowd, he said.

"All eyes will be on Cincinnati," said promoter Cal Levy. "I don't see anything (in the guidelines) that is so restrictive that will prevent anyone from having a good time."

Mayor J. Kenneth Blackwell, who took office the day of the December tragedy, said he would attend the concert.

"Cincinnati's reputation is at stake," Blackwell said regarding the massive security precautions. "We are attempting to take the guesswork out of this (concert). No public event will be held when we're not sure every safety precaution has been taken."

Three other rock concerts scheduled for Riverfront Coliseum were canceled following the December appearance by the British group "The Who," at which thousands of fans pressed through stadium doors in a rush to get to unreserved seating.

In the interim, City Council passed tough ordinances to eliminate some of the circumstances that contributed to the deaths. But only this week coliseum owners yielded to pressure from city officials to put their safety plan in writing.

Public Safety Director Richard Castellini said coliseum officials and the promoters, Electric Factory, Inc., finally agreed to "reasonable" safety measures.

"In general, their plans are reasonable and, basically, it's their responsibility, their facility," Castellini said. "They've made a reasonable effort for a safe event."

Spotlights would be used inside the coliseum to shine on people breaking major fire regulations, such as crawling into fire lanes, officials said. House lights would be turned up in case of a major disturbance.

An ordinance banned sale of all but reserved seat tickets, and formally gave police authority to handle crowd control on private property such as the coliseum plaza.

Investigations by Cincinnati police and City Council's law and public safety committee conclude that the sale of so-called festival seating or unreserved tickets contributed to the rush to choice areas near the stage.

Reagan's former foes to get aid?

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the name of party unity, workers for Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan are broaching the idea of helping his fallen foes raise money to pay off their campaign debts.

In a telephone interview from Los Angeles, William Casey, Reagan's campaign manager, confirmed that the project is under discussion but characterized it as "just a gleam in the eye."

Casey said the idea would be for Reagan to appear at a series of fund-raising dinners with proceeds to help his own campaign but also to assist GOP contenders who have fallen out of the race and remain in debt.

So far, Reagan spokesmen have been in contact with fund-raisers for Sen. Howard Baker and former Texas Gov. John Connally. Both have withdrawn from the race.

Connally, who spent some $12 million in a campaign that won him only one Republican convention delegate, is expected to wind up $1 million in debt and with his sources of income generally exhausted.

Baker is reported to be about $650,000 in debt after the fold of his campaign.

Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., has urged his supporters to help Reagan but has not officially withdrawn from the presidential sweepstakes. Crane has big debts but could wind up in the black once he has collected the federal matching money due him.

George Bush and Rep. John Anderson have the money to keep their campaigns alive and say they have no intention of dropping out.

Reagan backers say the fund-raising hint is not a ploy to gain endorsements from former rivals, but Connally is expected to join the Reagan bandwagon soon.

The Austin (Texas) American-Statesman reported Friday that Connally has agreed to come out for Reagan. The newspaper quoted Ernest Angelo Jr. of Midland, head of Reagan's Texas campaign, as saying Connally would campaign with the former California governor in Dallas-Fort Worth and Longview on Tuesday.

In discussing the fund-raising idea, Casey said, "I wouldn't even say it's an offer. It's something we've discussed, something we talked to each other about. It wouldn't be to help them. It would be a mutual effort to hold some dinners and raise money for all of us."

Sen. Bob Dole, who withdrew from the race on March 15, has offered to help in retiring some of the debts that other GOP candidates have run up, a spokesman said.

"In a very general sense we have discussed some unity effort after the thing is settled," Dole aide Bob Waite said. "But there has been nothing solid set up."

No injuries noted in airplane crash

No injuries and only minor damage was reported after the crash of a single-engine experimental plane in Midland County about 5:30 p.m. Friday.

The homemade 1966 Pittes Special flipped onto its back when pilot Don Hopkins tried to land it in a cotton field after the experimental aircraft lost power to the engine, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Hopkins, 35, a flight instructor for Basin Flying Service of Midland was alone in the plane. He was not injured. The tail section of the plane was damaged, DPS reports said.

The incident occurred two miles north of U.S. Highway 80 about a tenth of a mile from County Road 1100 North.

Agricultural Extension speakers discuss changes in Texas lifestyle

By BILL MODISETT Staff Writer

During this decade Texas will change more than it has since World War II. The lifestyle of Texans will change, along with the state's economy, and the political life of the state will be impacted by problems and opportunities never before encountered.

A number of economists from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service were in Midland Friday to detail some of the anticipated changes — the pressing needs of the state in the 1980s — and to discuss with local media representatives plans to disseminate information to Texans via newspapers, radio and television transmissions.

Participating in the meeting at the Midland Hilton were Dr. Dan Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service; Dr. Ron Knutson, economist in agriculture policy; Dr. Ernie Davis, economist in livestock marketing; Dr. Lynn White, home economist program leader, and several Midland and Ector County agriculture officials.

According to Dr. Pfannstiel, the TAES recently completed a survey of 25,000 urban and rural Texans and gained insight into what are considered the most pressing needs of the state in this decade.

Included among the six top priorities are energy, economic conditions, land and water use and availability, social changes, marketing and farm policy, and leadership.

The rapidly growing Texas population is forcing all the state's people to take a look at the way in which they live, said Dr. Pfannstiel.

Agriculture extension agents have long been important to teaching

Texas' residents ways in which to improve their lives, but that job will become even more difficult in the decade of the 80s, he said. Last year more than seven million Texans were personally contacted by TAES agents. This year — and in the future — such personal contacts will take on a new meaning because of the energy situation, he said. The media will take on an increasingly important role in the 1980s as a means of helping agriculture and home economy agents to educate Texas residents about ways in which to help themselves.

Philosophy of the Texas Agriculture Extension Service, Dr. Pfannstiel said, is to "help people learn to help themselves."

Theme of the extension service for the coming decade reflects that goal of "People Helping People."

Soviet bloc pressures Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Soviet bloc has launched a pressure campaign against free-wheeling Yugoslavia's independent policies, a government official hinted Friday.

This comes at a time when Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito lies gravely ill in a hospital in Ljubljana.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Mirko Kalezic singled out Vietnamese criticisms that he said had been repeated widely in the Soviet Union as well as in Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria, two of Moscow's firmest allies in the Soviet bloc.

Tito broke away from the Kremlin's style of communism in 1949 and charted an independent course for Yugoslavia. Romania, still a member of the Soviet bloc, also acts independently on some issues.

"It is seen that what is involved is not polemics between the press but an attack on Yugoslavia, initiated by official Vietnamese organs," Kalezic said in a weekly meeting with reporters.

"It is simply incredible how many pieces of nonsense were pronounced there about Yugoslavia and her non-aligned policy."

Kalezic said, "It is very difficult to wrench one's self from the impression that what is involved is exertion of pressure on the independent and non-aligned policy of Yugoslavia."

Some Yugoslavs fear that after Tito dies, a chain of events could bring Soviet troops and possible war to their country. Yugoslavia's importance comes from its location as well as its politics.

Last month, President Carter said he would take whatever action is needed to secure Yugoslavia as a non-aligned nation. He did not say if tgis would include use of U.S. troops.

Despite the illness of the 87-year-old Tito, the collective leadership which has been running the country since his hospitalization in January has been outspoken in its criticism of the Soviet Union's military intervention in Afghanistan.

The last formal messages Tito is known to have dispatched from his hospital bed also dealt with Yugoslav concern over Afghanistan, among other issues.

One article in the Vietnamese party newspaper charged that "under the pretext of non-alignment, Yugoslavia is aligning itself with the forces of evil." Kalezic criticized that comment and another that he said accused Yugoslavia of being a "mercenary of American imperialism and Chinese expansionists."

The Soviet tabloid Za Rubezhom, a weekly review of the world press published by the Union of Journalists, accused Yugoslavia's leaders of supporting "the policy of the imperialistic-Chinese bloc" and of "complicity in the propaganda war against the U.S.S.R."

Kalezic's comments marked the first open response by an official to the articles.

Tito, described by his doctors Friday as still gravely ill with kidney failure, heart weakness, pneumonia and internal bleeding in the 70th day of his hospitalization, is the inventor and last surviving founder of the movement of non-aligned countries, an organization of about 100 members.

The theoretically non-bloc organization has been badly split, with Tito and other conservatives battling an activist and pro-Soviet minority headed by Cuba's Fidel Castro.

Maintaining Yugoslav influence in the movement without Tito is widely regarded as one of the most difficult jobs facing Yugoslavia's collective leadership.

Kalezic accused the Vietnamese, who have sided with Cuba, of trying "to set Yugoslavia against other non-aligned and friendly countries."

El Paso businessmen assured passes won't hurt business

WASHINGTON (AP) — An El Paso, Texas, civic delegation was assured Friday that the Immigration and Naturalization Service's new plan for border passes would not disrupt the city's business.

David Crosland, acting INS commissioner, said a temporary pass would continue to be issued while a Mexican national waits for a new type of permanent card allowing 72-hour visits.

The wait for the visitors' cards currently takes 45 days and Mexican nationals receive a temporary pass in the interim.

Crosland said the new type of visitors' card should be available after 20-day waiting periods. He said they will be machine readable, designed to reduce fraudulent use of the passes.

The INS, however, had planned to do away with the temporary pass program that let a Mexican national cross the border while waiting for the visitor's card.

El Paso business groups complained that prospective tourists, and customers, would be turned back from the border if the temporary passes were discarded.

"We cannot accept the concept of even 20 days delay. That is not what we want," Arnold Pelnao, president of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce, said.

A particular concern was that the changes would be put into effect during the busy Easter season.

Crosland said the current program will not be changed in the immediate future, and arrangements will be made to continue issuing temporary passes when the new program starts.

"The idea is to replace over a period of time...the (visitors) cards with something more permanent that could be tracked more easily for fraud," he said.

Atlantic Treaty Organization on Europe's southern flank, its own territory holds no foreign troops

It is the only country standing between the Warsaw Pact nations and the Adriatic Sea. Its conversion to Moscow-style communism could upset the balance of power in the Mediterranean.

Tito built a "self-managed" communist country that was structurally different from Moscow's. It is more liberal and more prosperous despite serious economic problems.

Few experts worry about a Soviet military move against Yugoslavia as long as Tito is alive. But many worry that Soviet pressure might come after he dies if domestic politics become unstable.

Third party candidacy often 'hard row to hoe'

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Rep. John Anderson harbors any thought of seeking the presidency as an independent or third-party candidate, he'd better hurry because state election laws present numerous obstacles to such an effort.

It is possible to get on the ballots of all the states as an out-of-the-mainstream candidate, but it is a difficult course to follow. Each state raises its own hurdles — signatures to gather, petitions to file, conventions to call, and each within separate deadlines.

In fact, in some states the law is made particularly burdensome for the purpose of excluding primary losers from a second chance at election to office.

"If Anderson's serious about it," says Thomas Durbin, a Library of Congress expert on election laws, "he'd have to go now."

For the record, Anderson, for all his talk about forging a coalition of Republicans, independents and Democrats, denies that he might run as an independent, even if Ronald Reagan gets the Republican nomination.

But the Illinois congressman also has said he cannot support Reagan as the GOP nominee.

His standard answer to the question is that an independent race would be impractical because there is no time to work both sides of the street, to run for the GOP nomination while organizing for an independent effort.

But that doesn't slam and bolt the door. He might change his mind.

Anderson's problem is especially complicated. As a practical matter, he cannot continue running in the Republican primaries if word gets out that he is considering a third party candidacy.

One study says a candidate seeking a place on the nation's ballots better have $25,000 to $100,000 just to pay local lawyers to interpret varying state laws, which are often vague.

Political scientist Paul H. Blackman, in a study published by the nonprofit Heritage Foundation, found that half the states have filing deadlines for ballot positions between mid-June and Labor Day.

And some states require a large number of signatures, sometimes a number equal to 5 percent of the registered voters or 10 percent of all who voted in the state's last gubernatorial election.

In 1968, when George Wallace ran as an independent, he got on the ballot of every state except Delaware. But it took a massive effort. He had to collect 433,000 signatures to qualify in Ohio, for example.

In the early deadline states, Anderson could not wait until after the Republicans nominate their candidate at the July convention before starting his drive for a place on the ballot.

The Democrats take seriously the prospect of an independent Anderson race. They assume Anderson running independently would take more votes from President Carter, the likely nominee, than he would from Reagan.

The Democratic National Committee has calculated that even if Anderson waited until July, he could get on ballots as an independent in 31 states with 341 electoral votes.

In 1976, Eugene McCarthy, running as an independent, won enough votes in Iowa, Maine, Oregon and Oklahoma to keep them out of Carter's column. In 1968, Wallace won 10 million of the 73 million votes cast. And Republican Richard Nixon beat Democrat Hubert Humphrey by only half a million votes.

Bush sees new 'turning point'

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

Saying Connecticut "can be the turning point" in his presidential campaign, George Bush sought Friday to portray himself as the lone Republican candidate who reflects the mainstream thinking of the GOP.

"I stand somewhere near the center," Bush said as he laid plans for what aides said would be a major address aimed at reviving his quest for the White House.

Bush and Rep. John Anderson exchanged barbs in Connecticut while Ronald Reagan, the GOP front-runner, was at home in California escaping the campaign rigors.

On the Democratic side, Vice President Walter F. Mondale said President Carter is gaining re-election support because he "is dealing with the problems that face America." Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Congress should stiffen the so-called "windfall profits" tax on the oil companies.

In preparing a major restatement of his views, Bush is borrowing a page from Kennedy's campaign notebook. A campaign aide said Bush will deliver the address at Yale University on Monday, the day before the Connecticut and New York presidential primaries.

Kennedy delivered just such a speech at Georgetown University in late January, a week after he had been trounced by Carter in the Iowa precinct caucuses.

The Kennedy speech drew praise from many, but the senator still lost badly to Carter in the initial primaries and party caucuses.

Bush continued stumping hard for votes in Connecticut, the state where he was reared. "I am absolutely convinced I am going to hang in there, turn this thing around and win the nomination. Connecticut can be the turning point," he said.

The former CIA director sought repeatedly to establish himself as the middle-ground candidate between Reagan and Anderson, saying, "If you have three roads, mine is the middle."

"I oppose that 50-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax," he said in a reference to an Anderson proposal.

Bush said Reagan's proposal for a 30-percent income tax cut over the next three years would be inflationary. He also called Reagan's proposal for a blockade of Cuba in retaliation for the Soviet move into Afghanistan "a reckless statement."

On Anderson's chances of becoming his party's standardbearer, Bush said, "I don't see him as a factor nationally. I don't think there's a chance in the world a Republican convention would nominate him."

He referred to Anderson as the "Ted Kennedy of the Republican Party."

Bush also continued his heavy criticism of Carter, demanding that the president explain why White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan was involved in discussions with the Panamanian government over medical treatment for the deposed shah of Iran.

Democratic primary weathers challenge

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The presidential "beauty contest" approved by the State Democratic Executive Committee has withstood an internal challenge from committee members who sought to kill the May 3 primary, party leaders said Friday.

Garry Mauro, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party, said 23 committee members have notified state headquarters they want another vote. Mauro said Billy Goldberg of Houston, Democratic state chairman, would not call another meeting unless 33 members asked for it.

Spokesmen for the Carter and Kennedy campaigns said Friday they oppose the primary, but added they have not worked to get it cancelled.

The committee voted 35-27 on March 10 to hold the primary, which has nothing to do with selecting delegates to the national convention. Those delegates will be chosen through the caucus system that begins after the polls close.

Mauro said the 23 committee members who asked for another vote included three or four who originally voted for the primary.

"It's not a bitter thing," Mauro said Friday after the day's mail failed to bring more support for a second vote. "There are two viewpoints and there are rational points for both sides."

Any action concerning the primary must be taken 45 days before the election, Mauro said. Saturday is the deadline.

Bob Beckel, spokesman for the Carter Texas campaign, said the president's supporters have opposed the primary. He said there might still "conceivably be other avenues" to avoid a costly primary campaign.

"We still oppose the beauty contest, and if there were some feasible way to seek a compromise to do away with the primary if Sen. Kennedy is out of the race, then we think it would be in the best interests of the party," Beckel said.

He predicted the primary battle will cost the Carter forces more than $100,000 "which could be better spent on registering voters."

SDEC member Harold Hammett of Fort Worth, a Carter supporter, said Friday he favors the primary and found it "obnoxious" for committee members to seek another vote.

"There's no evidence since then to justify a different vote. To change it at this time would make the state party look wishy-washy and I'm afraid that would adversely reflect on the people running on our ticket," he said.

Alamo activists released on bond

Contrary to tales told school children, George Washington didn't wear wooden false teeth. A UCLA dentist reveals the nation's first president wore dentures carved from a variety of materials, including walrus and elephant tusks. (AP Laserphoto Cartoon)

False tales of false teeth put to rest by UCLA dentist

By ROBERT LOCKE

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stories that George Washington wore wooden false teeth turn out to be tall tales, but what America's first president really had in his mouth is even stranger, a UCLA dentist said Friday.

At various times during his two terms of office, Washington's awkward dentures included such materials as lead, cow's teeth, carved elephant and walrus tusk, hippopotamus teeth and human teeth, said Professor Emeritus Reidar Sognaes.

"He must have had a very difficult time talking and eating," said Sognaes, who said he's been interested in carved ivory as an art form for many years.

The founding dean of UCLA's School of Dentistry has studied "perhaps the most famous teeth in American history" off and on for about 10 years and has examined six surviving sets of Washington's dentures. Sognaes even reconstructed several sets using the same materials as the originals.

He outlined his study at a conference of the American Association for Dental Research on Friday.

School children for years have heard that Washington is never shown smiling in portraits because he had false teeth made of wood. This legend is also used to explain Washington's pouting lips, as seen on millions of dollar bills.

But, Sognaes said in an interview, "There is absolutely no scientific basis for the widespread impression that Washington ever wore wooden teeth. That is simply a myth."

He said elaborately carved and inlaid wooden teeth were crafted in China 100 years before Washington's first inauguration in 1789. By Washington's time, wood had long since been replaced, mostly with carved ivory but with many other materials as well.

Sognaes said Washington's pout probably stemmed from the fact that denture adhesive hadn't been invented yet. The false teeth were held in place by two springs that pushed them up and forward.

"I suppose that when he talked, he almost always had to talk with his mouth closed or else they would come out," Sognaes said.

Dentures of the time were hand-carved, often by artists or instrument makers.

The fit was inevitably imperfect, Sognaes said, "since the trial and error way of doing this must have been incredible."

When Washington first became president, at the age of 57, he had but one tooth left, probably because of gum disease.

the dentist said. A hole cut through the ivory base of his dentures let that tooth poke through. The rest were made of carved ivory and some human teeth, including one taken from Washington's own mouth, Sognaes said.

Perhaps the most interesting of Washington's carved dentures included an assortment of carved materials mounted on a lead base.

"That's just ridiculous today," Sognaes said. "It was also dangerous. If you drank port wine the acid (in the wine) would react with the lead" with potentially poisonous results.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Two of the three avowed Maoist-Chicano rights activists, who seized the roof of the Alamo and flew a red flag over the historic shrine for 40 minutes Thursday, posted $1,000 bonds late Friday and were released from jail.

The third, however, remained jailed in lieu of bond, officials said.

The three Houstonians are charged with desecration of a venerated object, a misdemeanor that carries a maximum sentence of a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Damian Garcia, 31, and Abigail Bayer, 33, each posted $1,000 bond Friday afternoon and were released from the Bexar County Jail. Hayden Steel Fisher, 31, remained jailed.

Three other supporters of the trio were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. They were released Thursday night after posting $200 cash bonds.

The three rooftop protesters, members of the obscure "Texas Revolutionary May Day Brigade," scaled the outer walls alongside the famous, 20-foot Alamo chapel about 2 p.m. Thursday, tore down the United States and Texas flags and replaced them with a red one.

The desecration charge stems from the protesters' ripping down the flags, officials said.

The trio also unfurled a banner that read: "Revolutionary May Day 1980 — Take History Into Our Hands."

They waved other red flags, shouted revolutionary slogans through a bullhorn and threw out leaflets, which said the action was a protest against the "vicious oppression of the Chicano people."

But many of a crowd of some 200 onlookers jeered and shouted to police to remove the protesters.

As a police helicopter hovered overhead, officers climbed up the back walls of the 226-year-old Spanish mission and captured the protesters.

The crowd applauded and cheered when officers seized the three and replaced the Texas flag.

The Alamo, known as the "Cradle of Texas Liberty," was the scene of a legendary 1836 battle of the Texas Revolution in which 187 Texas soldiers were wiped out by hundreds of Mexican soldiers after a 13-day siege.

The lengthy siege gave Gen. Sam Houston enough time to rally the Texas army and later defeat the Mexicans.

But the protesters said they viewed the Alamo as "a hated monument to slavery, U.S. plunder of Mexico, and the vicious oppression of the Chicano people."

"We remember it as it has stood for over 100 years — as a monument to the tiny handful of parasites who have sucked the blood of the Chicano people, driving them into the ground, destroying their language and culture and trying to force them to live on their knees," the group said in its leaflet.

"We remember it, as it touched off the bloody invasion of Mexico by the U.S. and the theft of the entire state of Texas," the leaflet added.

The protest was aimed at drumming up support for May Day protests on May 1, said a spokesman for the Houston-based group.

In Dallas, a spokesman for the Texas Brown Berets disavowed any connection with the three protesters, saying they were Communists and

"The only kind of 'ism' we support is nationalism."

Brown-Beret spokesman Juan Perez said his Mexican-American activist group agrees with the demonstrators that the Alamo "represents oppression of the U.S. government at that point in history and an invasion into our lands."

"But the Chicano movement does not support any type of communism," he said. "These people have mangled the credibility of the Chicano movement."

"They had no support from us. They think a revolution is going to start May 1," he said.

State presents last witness in hearing on alien education

HOUSTON (AP) — The State of Texas presented its last witness Friday in defense of a law that prohibits a free public education for children of illegal aliens.

The state statute is being challenged by a group of Hispanic parents whose children have either been denied admission to the public schools or required to pay tuition.

The trial before U.S. District Judge Woodrow Seals is expected to end by Tuesday of next week.

The final witness for the state was James Duderstadt, a Houston businessman and former professor at the College of the Virgin Islands.

He testified that a similar law affecting illegal aliens in the Virgin Islands had been declared unconstitutional and in turn "had led to double sessions in the schools and a lowering of the overall educational system."

Duderstadt said he eventually sent his children to Houston to complete their education and he didn't want "to see what happen in the Virgin Islands happen in Texas."

Under cross-examination, he said, "If there are illegal aliens here I wonder why they are allowed to remain. I feel this is the same type of situation that forced me to leave the Virgin Islands."

Minimum price guides for steel imports suspended

Action follows filing of U.S. Steel trade complaints

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration suspended its minimum price guides for imported steel on Friday after U.S. Steel Corp. filed trade complaints against steel producers in seven European nations.

The so-called trigger price mechanism was suspended "effective immediately," but the statement from the Commerce Department left open the possibility that the program could be reinstated if the U.S. Steel petitions "are withdrawn or otherwise satisfactorily resolved."

The action had been threatened earlier in the week by Commerce Department officials. They argued that major anti-dumping cases, such as those brought by U.S. Steel, negated the need for the triggers, which were set up early in 1978 to provide a quick means of determining if imported steel was coming into the United States at unfairly low prices.

"It (the trigger price mechanism) was designed as a substitute for individual anti-dumping petitions by the domestic steel industry," the Commerce Department said in a statement. "With the filing of major anti-dumping petitions by U.S. Steel Corp. against steel imports ... the basis upon which the trigger price mechanism was maintained no longer exists."

The statement added that the complaints will require the Commerce Department to divert personnel that had been involved in policing the triggers to investigate the U.S. Steel complaints.

The nation's largest steelmaker, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, claims that steel from France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy, the United Kingdom, the Netherlands and West Germany is being imported at unfairly low prices.

It also has threatened to seek relief in the form of U.S. duties on the imports of Japan and "others," whom the company has so far declined to identify.

Suspension of the trigger prices, which were designed to block imports of steel that unfairly undercut U.S.-produced products, probably won't create too many problems in the market, one steel analyst said.

"In the past, a case filed by a company like U.S. Steel traditionally has been a 'yellow light' that importers don't take advantage of," he said.

Prior to the administration's announcement, Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, had termed the threat of suspension of the trigger price mechanism a "temper tantrum response of the administration." And Rep. John Heinz, R-Pa., said, "No matter which way the industry moves, the jobs of thousands of American steelworkers will be in severe jeopardy."

The trigger system was set up by the Carter administration two years ago to protect U.S. steel producers. Steel brought into the United States at a price below the trigger — currently set at an average of $358 per ton, based on production costs in the steel-proficient Japan — automatically is subject to U.S. anti-dumping investigation. As a result, most foreign exporters try to keep their prices above the trigger level to avoid the Judge rules against steelworkers, allows closing of U.S. Steel plants

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — U.S. District Judge Thomas D. Lambros ruled against steelworkers Friday in their effort to force U.S. Steel Corp. to continue operating two aging Youngstown mills employing 3,500 workers.

Lambros ordered that the "facilities are to be put in mothballs for 60 days" to give the workers a chance to try to buy U.S. Steel's Ohio and McDonald works in Ohio city of 130,000.

There was no immediate statement from U.S. Steel on when production at the mills would stop.

Some steel workers who packed the courtroom for the decision expressed disappointment at the ruling. However, Reno DePietro, president of United Steelworkers Local 1307, one of locals that brought the suit, said Lambros' ruling "didn't shut the door."

"It at least gives the company a chance to do something halfway decent, giving the workers an opportunity to work out purchase of the mills," he said.

More aid asked in firefighters strike

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Joseph Teasdale called in Highway Patrol officers and additional National Guardsmen on Friday to boost the ranks of local safety forces to help the city cope with a five-day-old firefighters strike.

City officials, meanwhile, agreed not to send termination notices immediately to the 143 union firefighters who walked off the job Monday. The city had said the notices would be mailed Friday.

Teasdale called up 250 more National Guardsmen and 168 special Highway Patrol officers after declaring that no end was in sight to the firehouse walk-out.

The governor had sent 250 Guardsmen into the city earlier in the week. He said the contingent called up Friday would guard the city's 31 fire stations, form anti-arson squads and patrol city streets in military jeeps.

Teasdale said military policemen would be used "because of the emergency of this situation."

"I must frankly tell you that I am concerned about the quality of fire protection now available in Kansas City. We are in the fifth day of this strike and I see no immediate end in sight," the governor told reporters after an afternoon meeting with advisers.

The strike began Monday night when firefighters deserted their posts to protest the city's refusal to rehire 42 firemen dismissed during a job action in December.

The firefighters, members of Local 42 of the International Association of Firefighters, have said they would not return to work until all 42 men dismissed in December were returned to duty.

Water district expenses run well under budget

Expenses for the Colorado River Municipal Water District are running substantially under budget for the first two months of the year, but much of that is seasonal. As demand for water in the spring and summer grows, so will expenses.

Through February, disbursements for operations, maintenance, administration, general and recreation services were $485,087, or $191,238 less than for the budgeted period. However, water purchases from well fields were $39,000 under budget and electric power from the lakes $134,000 under budget because of the lighter amount of pumping.

Operations and maintenance expenses for two months were $386,198 against a budget of $584,553 for two months. Administrative and general expenses were $85,496 against a budget of $76,611 for the period, principally because of earlier payment of insurance. Recreation expenses were $13,393, compared with a budgeted figure of $15,161.

Gisnt winmill blades too noisy

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A three-man team from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is conducting tests at the site of the world's largest windmill in an effort to eliminate excessive noise and interference with television reception.

The team members arrived Thursday for an indefinite period, and officials said they would test noise levels, atmospheric problems and other conditions at the site.

About 20 residents of this mountain town in western North Carolina have complained to NASA that the demonstration windmill makes a loud, thumping noise and interferes with TV reception.

Richard Puthoff, a NASA official and the original project manager, said that the speed of the windmill will have to be slowed to deal with the problems.

"But that won't be accomplished quickly," he said. "The important thing is to let the people know that we're trying to improve the problem."

The turbine now operates at a speed of up to 35 revolutions per minute. At 25 mph it can provide electricity for 300 to 500 average-sized homes.

Puthoff said the windmill is turned off after 5 p.m. each day and if crews must run the machine after that time, they notify residents.

Puthoff said NASA engineers may try to develop more powerful antennas for the residents. NASA officials also have suggested cable television. The government installed cable TV for residents near Block Island, R.I., when NASA installed a small windmill there several years ago.

NASA has also discussed changing the material the blades are made of.

West Side Lions choose Angie Casbeer as queen

Angie Casbeer, 16, a student at Midland High School, Thursday was named queen for 1980 by the West Side Lions Club.

Connie Miller, 17, a student at Lee High School, was runner-up. Beth Poer, West Side Lions queen for 1979, was present for the ceremonies. Bill Drummond was chairman of the queen's contest.

The club also nominated officers for 1980-81, with Tommy Miller named as president. Other nominees were Bentley Anderson, first vice president; Bill Drummond, second vice president; Tom Gravala, third vice president; Billy Burfeind, treasurer; Richard Stubblefield, lion tamer; J.E. Barrington, chaplain; Carl Pickle, taitwister; and Warren Wallace, second taitwister. Lee Roy Shannon presented the officer nominations.

Richard Greenwade, George Bush, Merlin Ketchum and Bert Rankin were also nominated to the board of directors.

Foxx Returns

Redd Foxx marks his return to NBC as junkyard dealer Fred Sanford — this time with a love interest, a rich widow from Beverly Hills — in "Sanford," which premieres with a special one-hour presentation Saturday, March 15, on NBC. The series will be regularly colorcast Saturdays beginning March 22.

The favorite dealer returns without his son who is said to be working on the Alaska pipeline. Whenever his new love interest causes Fred any grief, he continues to shake his fist in the air and tells his woes to his deceased wife, Edith.

Exhibit shows new side of Vikings

By GRAHAM HEATH-COTE

LONDON (AP) — A wooden boat with oars and a sail, a replica of the craft used in Viking raids 1,000 years ago and more frightening looking than a jet-age warplane, stands dramatically on the lawn outside the British Museum.

It is there in connection with an exhibition on the Vikings, who for more than two centuries terrified Europe. Their plundering raids along the coasts and up the great rivers, their feats of navigation over thousands of miles of open sea, left a folk-memory of fear that has survived to our times.

Now historians and archeologists hope that the exhibition will make people think better of the wild Norsemen.

"The Vikings have had a bad press and have a fearsome image. We are hoping to redress the balance," said David Wilson, director of the British Museum, which is staging the exhibition. It will run for five months and then go to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

There are weapons in the display of more than 500 relics from 40 institutions in eight countries, but the emphasis is on the Vikings' skills as sailors, navigators and explorers, traders, craftsmen, artists, lawgivers, settlers and farmers.

There are wood, iron, bronze and ivory relics, stone carvings, treasure, jewelry, ornaments, household goods, a gaming board, farming, hunting and fishing implements, and the tool chest of an itinerant craftsman, found in a bog on the Swedish island of Gotland.

"Such an exhibition is unlikely to be repeated in this generation anywhere in the world," says the British Museum. It has been helped to put on the show by Times Newspapers Ltd. of London and Scandinavian Airline Systems, and by a grant from the five-nation Nordic Council (Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden).

They colonized Iceland and Greenland and made the first European contact with North America by settling briefly in Newfoundland. They founded Dublin and other Irish towns, established a powerful kingdom based on York in northern England, and settled across eastern England and in the Scottish islands.

The Vikings extorted treasure from the kingdoms of Western Europe. In the East, they colonized the Baltic coast and regularly navigated the Volga and Dnepr river systems of Russia.

They reached the Black Sea, the Caspian and the Arab lands, trading for luxury goods and silver.

Scandinavia is dominated by water and the exploits of the Vikings are bound up in their ships. They developed a vessel with a sail and lines of oarsmen that could ride the ocean at 10 knots and be rowed up rivers deep into enemy territory. The ship could glide through the surf up on to a beach to unleash its armed horde.

The ship — not strictly in the show — on the lawn outside the museum, is a two-thirds scale replica of a Viking longship and is named Odin's Raven. It comes from the Isle of Man, which hopes by showing it in London to attract tourists to the island between Britain and Ireland.

The wooden ship was built in Norway and sailed and rowed by 11 men and five Norwegians 1,500.

Former Lao leader dies

PARIS (AP) — Prince Boun Oum na Champassak, former Laotian premier and leader of the pro-Western forces in a 25-year postwar power struggle, died here Monday after a long illness, his family announced Friday. He was 68.

His power base came from his leadership of the Champassak family which dominated the southern provinces of central Laos, and in 1949, he signed the nation's independence agreement with France to become its first premier.

He was overthrown in 1950 by his cousin, Prince Souvanna Phouma, who formed a neutralist regime, but regained power 10 years later with the aid of anti-communist rebel forces.

A three-sided civil war ensued among the armies of the pro-Western Boun Oum, the neutralist Souvanna Phouma and the pro-communist Pathet Lao, led by Souvanna Phouma's half-brother Prince Souvannavong.

The war concluded with three princes signing the Geneva agreements in 1962 formally making Laos a neutral state.

A government of national union was led by Souvanna Phouma, and Boun Oum became inspector-general of the kingdom.

Iowa sees problem with Griffith

Purdue's Joe Barry Carroll is also big test for UCLA's Bruins

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Iowa basketball team has a tall problem in today's NCAA national championship semifinal against Louisville, and nobody knows it better than Coach Lute Olson.

"We don't have anyone who jumps 48 inches," Olson said Friday as his Big Ten team, winner of the East regional championship, prepared to meet the high-jumping Cardinals prior to the UCLA-Purdue game at Market Square Arena.

Olson, of course, referred to Louisville's All-American guard Darrell Griffith, who plays taller than his 6-foot-4 height. The Hawkeyes have been practicing all week to defend Griffith, who can hit an incredible 48 inches with his vertical jump.

Kenny Arnold has drawn the starting assignment to try to stop Louisville's star senior and admittedly might need some assistance.

"I know he'd like to go back-door," said Arnold at a pre-game news conference Friday. "And I'll have to get some help from my teammates."

Should Arnold fail to contain Griffith, even with a little help from his friends, then Olson might throw Ronnie Lester into the breach.

"If he (Lester) doesn't think his buddy is doing the job, then he may take over," said Olson with a grin.

Lester, though, has not been at his best at late, because of an injury and mid-season surgery that knocked him out for a good portion of the season. Iowa's leading man has been playing at "60 to 70 percent" of capacity, according to Olson, but still is the dominant figure in the Iowa lineup.

"Ronnie Lester is our glue," said Olson. "Ronnie is a quite leader, but he's a great leader on the floor."

The Hawkeyes will not only be playing a team that can jump, but one that appears to be pressure-proof.

"We're a lot looser this time than we ever have been before in the NCAA playoffs," said Louisville coach Denny Crum, who has brought his team to the Final Four two times before.

Crum's team is ranked second in the country, but he doesn't think that will give the Cardinals any edge in the nationally televised game Saturday.

"Rankings don't mean anything," said Crum. "The championship will be determined by the team that plays well."

The Hawkeyes are sure to see, along with Griffith, a tough press that has helped the Midwest Regional champions carve out a fancy 31-3 record so far, best in the Final Four.

"We went to the press earlier in the year because we wanted to spread the other teams out and make them play the full 94 feet," said Crum. "The press has helped up play the kind of tempo we want."

UCLA will also have a tall problem in the second game — Purdue's 7-foot-2 Joe Barry Carroll.

"We need him in the game and if he gets two fouls in the first half, he's coming out," said Purdue coach Lee Rose.

Carroll has been the dominating figure for the Boilermakers in the tournament, leading them to the Mid-east championship with some sparkling one-man performances.

Carroll is obviously Purdue's tower of strength, controlling the middle and intimidating while allowing his four teammates to occasionally over-play and gamble.

UCLA's surprising West regional champions might be considered the Cinderella team in this tournament, having already lost nine games. The Bruins' chief asset is speed and aggressive rebounding.

A sellout crowd of more than 17,000, along with a national television (NBC) audience in the millions, will witness today's semifinals. The winners will play for the national championship Monday night, and UCLA is the only team that has won that title among this year's Final Four.

The Bruins have a record 10 NCAA championships to their credit.

Coaches always performed antics

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Tony Hinkle has been doing some research since he retired 10 years ago. Mostly watching the antics of some of today's coaches and trying to remember if they were just as crazy 60 years ago.

"They were," he says.

And Johnny Wooden, still twisting his program, recalls a missed free throw in 1928. It cost his high school team the state championship.

"If you're not familiar with Hoosier Hysteria, you won't really appreciate this," he says.

For Wooden, the most memorable game of his long basketball career wasn't one of his 10 NCAA championships. It wasn't even with UCLA, he said Friday, but as a player in the final game of the Indiana high school basketball tournament 52 years ago.

Wooden was playing for Martinsville High School, which beat Muncie's Bearcats for the state title the year before. The two teams were again battling for the championship, and Martinsville was leading 12-11 with seconds to go.

Muncie's center turned his ankle and the Bearcats called an illegal time out, Wooden said. The officials slapped a technical foul on Muncie.

SPORTS

"I was captain and didn't want the technical foul," said Wooden. "The fella chosen to shoot the technical shot missed it ... I won't say who that was ... and the ball went back for a center jump."

Well, it turned out that Muncie got the ball, scored and beat Martinsville 13-12.

"That doesn't sound like much to many of you, but in Indiana high school basketball it meant a lot," said Wooden.

Wooden, Hinkle and three other coaching legends talked to several hundred members of the National Association of Basketball Coaches on Friday, describing their most memorable moments. And there have been a lot for the five coaches whose teams totaled a stunning 2,600 victories going back to the '20s.

The others were Henry Iba, who coached Oklahoma State to two NCAA championships; Pete Newell, who guided California to one national title, and Harry Litwack, who coached Temple to third place in 1958.

Hinkle, who recently turned 80, was coach at Butler University, site of that memorable high school game for Wooden.

"It's hell to be old," Hinkle said. "But as far as basketball is concerned, I think I've lived in the greatest age there was in the sport."

"The thing I've been doing is studying the game for 10 years since I retired. It's been interesting to watch the coaches. We have various types."

"Al McGuire of Marquette was the greatest television coach there ever was," Hinkle deadpanned.

"He was on TV more than his team was. Digger Phelps of Notre Dame is a good TV coach too. I call 'em TV coaches because they have that type of personality, they dress well. Then we run into coaches like Johnny Wooden. The only thing he ever did was sit there and twist that damn program."

Hinkle recalled the antics of some of the coaches of yesteryear, including his own coach, Pat Page, at the University of Chicago.

"We were up at Minnesota, and he sent six guys out on the floor. Minnesota had five guys, and their coach saw we had six. Well, he wouldn't send his five out until we got our sixth man off the floor. It took 10 minutes to settle that."

A Strange surge ties Hale

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Curtis Strange birdied his last two holes and tied Hale Irwin for the second-round lead Friday in the storm-delayed second round of the Tournament Players Championship.

Strange, one of the last men on the course, finished a round of 71 with birdie putts of 15 and five feet for a share of the lead in the event that is billed as the annual championship of golf's touring players.

He finished two trips over the unforgiving Sawgrass course with a 139 total, five under par.

Irwin, the current U.S. Open champion, had to work hard to match par-72 which he called "a good score, excellent."

"There was a lot of golf course out there today," Irwin sighed wearily after his journey through howling winds and a series of rain squalls that caused a one-hour delay in play.

"It was the kind of day that you couldn't expect to get a lot of good breaks. There were a lot of scary shots out there."

Tom Watson, one of three players tied a single shot back, agreed. "Another fun day at Sawgrass," he said, tongue-in-cheek. "It was hard to pull the trigger out there."

Watson, the outstanding player in the game over the past three seasons and the only two-time winner this year, played his front side in a spectacular 32 and had a three-shot lead at that point. But he bogeyed three of his last five holes — played into the teeth of the winds that gusted well over 30 mph — and finished with 71 and a 140 total.

"I'm happy with the 71," Watson said. "Anything under 74 is a pretty good score today."

He was tied at 140 with Lee Trevino and Melnyk.

"I scratched and clawed and did everything I could to shoot 73," Melnyk said. "It was no fun at all out there today."

Trevino matched par 72. South African veteran Gary Player shot a 71 and was tied at 141 with John Mahaffey, Greg Powers and J.C. Sneed. Sneed, twice a runnerup in this event, was the only man in the field able to escape without a bogey. He shot 71. So did Mahaffey. Powers was the first man off the tee in the morning and got in most of his round of 69 before the weather turned really severe.

Nicklaus had to fight his way back from a double bogey-7 on his second hole. Nicklaus, trying to write an end to a 20-month non-winning string, finished with a 73 that left him at 142, only three strokes back.

Gibson faces rookie press

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Kirk Gibson's football days are behind him, but he says his four big-time college grid yards help him cope with the pressures of being a major league baseball rookie.

Gibson, a 6-foot-3, 210-pounder who set several pass-catching records at Michigan State, has been handed the center field job vacated when Detroit traded Ron LeFlore to Montreal over the winter.

He graces the cover of a recent issue of Sports Illustrated magazine, which touted him as among baseball's super rookies.

"I don't look on the season as filling Ron LeFlore's shoes," Gibson said during a break in spring drills. "I look on the season as a challenge — me and the rest of the team."

"I know I can't fill Ron LeFlore's shoes. We're two different types of ballplayers; two different types of hitters. The only thing we probably are similar in is our speed. But I'm not going to match his 78 or 80 stolen bases — at least not this year. I'm not going to be playing as much as he did, for one thing."

"But what I will do, I will try to pitch in as much as I can to pick up that slack. Hopefully, I'll drive in more runs than he did; maybe hit some home runs."

Gibson injured a finger during an early spring exhibition game and was held out of batting practice for almost two weeks. Still, he continued to work out every day — running, shagging flies and doing calisthenics. He also was in the stands for every game, watching and learning what he could.

"I've learned over the years in athletics to shake pressure for the most part," Gibson said. "I mean it's there, my finger's hurt, there's nothing I can do about it. But when I'm well, I'll work a little extra hard and try to catch back up."

"There's no use of me going home and losing sleep every night because I've got a sore finger or because (Manager) Sparky (Anderson) says I'm going to start in center field and that I'm going to do this and do that. It's great for him to say that, but it means nothing to me. I'll have to go out and give my best effort and whatever happens, I'll have to live with it."

Gibson, who reportedly huddled with the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League prior to spring training, said he has no intention of ever playing football again.

"I wouldn't be down here if I was thinking about playing football," he said. "My mind is strictly on baseball and, hopefully, I can make it a life-long occupation."

Although he qualifies as a rookie, Gibson was called up to the Tigers from their Evansville, Ind., farm club of the American Association on Sept. 9. He said that month in the big leagues was a big help.

"I'm a little looser," he said. "I've been around a year now, and I know how the system is run. I've learned a lot about the big leagues."

"I haven't set any hitting goals (but) I feel confident about my hitting. I feel I can hit good. I don't know what my average will be and I don't see any sense in speculating about it," Gibson said.

Gibson hit .245 at Evansville and under major-league pitching he hit .237 in 29 games with Detroit.

"As I say, I'll give my best effort and I'll have to live with whatever comes out."

John Cappelletti will 'start over' with San Diego

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Fullback John Cappelletti, who won the Heisman Trophy at Penn State in 1973, was traded Friday by the Los Angeles Rams to the Chargers and referred to San Diego as "a place where I can start again."

The Chargers gave up an undisclosed draft choice for the 6-foot-1, 220-pound Cappelletti, who was the Rams' best ground-gainer in 1978. But he sat out last season on injured reserve with a groin tear, and Cullen Bryant replaced him.

After passing the Chargers' physical, Cappelletti ran in a workout this week.

Coach Don Coryell said the Chargers have "been looking for somebody who not only can carry the ball but is strong enough to pick up the blitzing linebackers."

"Linebackers today are very big," noted the burly Cappelletti, "and picking them up can be very difficult on small halves."

Coryell also noted at a news conference that he likes backs who can catch passes. Cappelletti caught 41 passes for 382 yards in 1978.

Although the Chargers' highest college draft choice this year comes up in the fourth round, the National Football League deal reportedly involves another, possibly higher pick in another year.

The Rams named Cappelletti their top draft choice of 1979. The Upper Darby, Pa., native rushed for a total of 2,246 yards with Los Angeles, an average of 3.6 per carry. He was used only sparingly — in short-yardage situations — in his first two National Football League seasons.

In 1976, he became a regular, gaining 688 yards. He ran for 598 yards in 1977 and 604 in 1978.

Lee, MHS invade Andrews for Mustang Relays today

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

ANDREWS — The Midland High and Midland Lee thinclds invade Mustang Bowl today at 9:30 a.m. for the Mustang Relays, seeking to hone their skills for two upcoming meets.

Today's preliminaries will be held in the morning session while finals are set for a 2:30 p.m. start.

The prestigious San Angelo Relays comes next Friday and Saturday in the Concho City while the all-important District 5-4A facoff will be held in Abilene on April 11. Now is the time for all good Rebels and Bulldogs to start reaching their top performances.

And again today, the Bulldogs and Rebels will be facing Odessa Permian in the seven team field. Also in the AAAA division are Odessa High, Big Spring and the New Mexico schools of Hobbs and Carlsbad.

Host Andrews will be taking on Odessa Ector, Lake View, Roswell, Goddard and Lovington in the AAA division. The A-B division will feature Forsan, Klondike, New Deal, O'Donnell, Plains and the Andrews freshman team. There will also be a junior varsity division to round out today's action.

Midland High's David Simmons will be out to keep his unbeaten strings in the discus and shot put intact. He has not lost this year, and is fresh off breaking a 17-year record in the discus last week in the West Texas Relays with a toss of 183-feet. The previous record was set by former Olympian Randy Matson.

MHS should also get some help from James Lary in both events and Jim Kemper in the pole vault. Kemper had a 13-3 last week, his personal best.

Lee has been weak this season in the field events, but have made up for it with strengths in the relays and sprints.

Sophomore Arthur Williams is coming on strong for the Rebels and will show his form in the 200 and 100 meter races. Phil Carleton, the mainstay of the Rebel staff, will anchor the relays and will be in the 200 meters.

Lee can also expect help in the hurdles from David Piccolo, who would like to return to the winner's circle after a couple of weeks absence. Steve Waldron will be in the 400 and both relays while Kevin Harper, who set a school record with a 1:56.7 in the 800 last week, will be in the 800 meters and mile relay. Gary Butler is another 800 and mile relay entry. Robert Schooler is also improving a great deal in the 1600 meters.

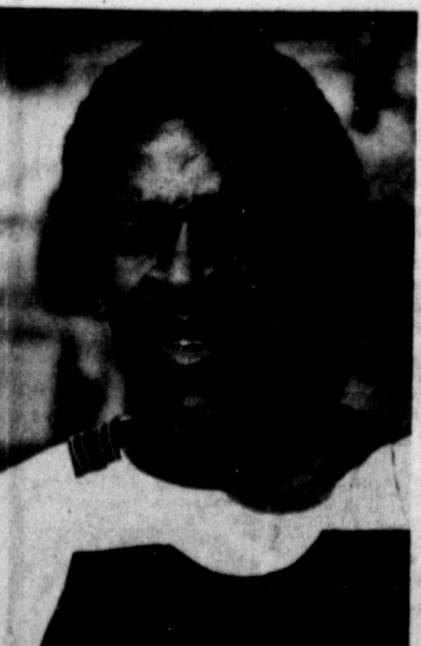

Midland High has been hurt in the running events with the loss of sprinter Jeff Robnett, but junior Billy Taylor is hoping to take up the slack. Taylor placed third last week in both the 220 and 100 and was not satisfied. He has promised a return to victory lane.

MHS should also have help in the hurdles from Bruce Fisher, Scott Yocham and Jerry Zachery. Zachery ran the hurdles for the first time this year last week, qualifying for the West Texas finals, but didn't run in the finals due to a baseball engagement. He also promises an all-out effort today.

MHS should also be aided by Robert Crawford in the 400 meters.

Lee and Permian have staged all out war this year in search for team titles. The Rebels could be considered the favorites today in the AAAA division since Lee has beaten Permian in point totals in two of the three meets the teams have squared off in this year.

Lee and Permian have both won team championships this year, Permian winning at Fort Stockton and Lee at Pecos. Lee edged Permian for second place by two points last week, but 5-4A favorite San Angelo won the title by a wide margin.

Midland High's Billy Taylor ... sprinter with hopes

Lee's Arthur Williams ... a star on the rise?

Carter tells athletes 'No'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter told American athletes Friday in emphatic terms that the United States will not participate in the Summer Olympics in Moscow.

"I can't say at this moment what other nations will go to the Summer Olympics in Moscow," Carter told a group of about 100 athletes summoned to the White House. "Ours will not go. I say that not with any equivocation. The decision has been made."

The president does not have the legal authority to order the Americans to honor his boycott plan. He also does not have authority to cancel visas, which are to be issued by the Soviet Union.

BUT HE has broad legal powers under which he can revoke passports if he finds it necessary in the interest of national security. Such an action most likely would be challenged in the courts.

Carter called the athletes to Washington for a face-to-face talk about a boycott and his plan to set up alternative games for those who don't participate at Moscow.

The president has pressed the U.S. Olympic Committee to keep its team away from Moscow as a means of protesting the Soviets having sent troops into Afghanistan.

But so far the committee has not agreed specifically to a boycott, even though it said originally it would abide by the president's wishes. The deadline for entries to the Games is May 24. Last weekend the USOC administrative committee drafted a resolution recommending that the USOC House of Delegates delay a decision until the last possible moment. The House of Delegates meets April 11-13 and will take up that recommendation then.

BEFORE MEETING with Carter, the athletes were briefed by presidential aides. Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, outlined for the athletes the reasons for a boycott. Lloyd Cutler, special White House counsel, briefed the athletes on the plans for a substitute competition.

In urging the athletes to accept the boycott, Carter said the American people and Congress have expressed support for his stand and added that "many of our allies, particularly the democratic countries who believe in freedom will not go."

"It is particularly important that you join with us, not in condemnation even of the Soviet Union, not in a negative sense at all, but in a positive sense, what is best for our country and world peace," the president told the group.

"There must be a firm, clear voice of caution given to the Soviet Union, not just in admonition and criticism of what they have already done to despoil a small and relatively weak country, but to make sure that they don't look upon this as an achievement without serious adverse consequences that then can be followed with additional aggression along similar lines," he said.

MANY OF the athletes summoned to the White House session had expressed distaste for a boycott, arguing that they should be allowed to participate in the Games because athletics and politics don't mix.

But before the White House meeting, Olympian Willie Davenport said Carter should simply order American athletes to stay away from the Summer Games if he really believes they should not compete in Russia.

"All it would take is one telephone call to the State Department and have them cancel the visas of the athletes," said Davenport, who has competed in both the Summer and Winter Games. "Athletes and politics are separate. We should not get involved."

Davenport, a gold and bronze medal winner in the 110-meter high hurdles during previous Summer Games and a bobsledder in this year's Winter Games, said Carter's plans for an alternative Olympics was not viable.

"An alternative Olympics doesn't stand a chance," he said. "I see no significance to it."

THE CARTER administration has been seeking support from the international community.

Indications are that the International Olympic Committee, various national Olympic committees and national and international sports federations are united against a boycott and are fighting it.

Even in countries where the governments support the boycott — such as Britain, the Netherlands and Australia — the national Olympic committees, which must decide whether to send teams to Moscow, appear committed to participating in the Summer Games.

Matlack's arm is holding

By The Associated Press

Texas left-hander Jon Matlack, trying to come back from elbow surgery, pitched four perfect innings Friday as the Rangers defeated the Atlanta Braves 6-2 in an exhibition baseball game.

It was the Rangers' third consecutive triumph after dropping their first nine outings.

Matlack, who had 21 bone chips and spurs removed from his elbow late last summer, extended his spring string to seven hitless innings while Al Oliver hit a solo homer and Pat Putnam had a three-run shot for the Rangers.

Meanwhile, Kansas City's Rich Gale extended his scoreless skid to 12 innings by limiting Cincinnati to one hit in five innings and Steve Braun and Pete LaCock homered as the Royals whipped the Reds 9-3.

Oakland received shutout pitching from Matt Keough, Dave Heavelro and Dave Hamilton who combined on a five-hitter in the A's 2-0 triumph over the Seattle Mariners.

San Diego's Randy Jones and Bob Shirley scattered eight hits in hurling the Padres to a 1-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Robin Yount drove in five runs, three on a home run, to help the Milwaukee Brewers pound the Cleveland Indians 14-3 and Fred Patek's two-run homer in the ninth inning gave the California Angels a 5-3 decision over the Chicago Cubs.

The Boston Red Sox rallied for three runs in the top of the ninth inning, capped by Glenn Hoffman's sacrifice fly, and edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-6.

A three-run homer by Jose Morales in the sixth lifted the Minnesota Twins over the New York Mets 5-4 and the St. Louis Cardinals tagged Nolan Ryan for six hits and four runs — two of them unearned — in four innings to defeat the Houston Astros 10-4.

Ken Macha's three-run double capped an eight-run seventh inning that enabled the Montreal Expos to defeat the Detroit Tigers' 'B' team 9-5.

Philadelphia's 'A' team scored five times with two out in the eighth inning, including Mike Anderson's two-run single, and outlasted the Chicago White Sox 11-7 while the Phillies' 'B' squad bowed to the Toronto Blue Jays 6-5 on J.J. Cannon's two-run homer in the bottom of the 11th.

In night action, the Baltimore Orioles met the New York Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates faced the Tigers' 'A' team.

Eminent domain suit caused Davis' contempt

OAKLAND (AP) — The agreement signed by Oakland Raiders boss Al Davis to move the team to Los Angeles was not legally binding on either party, former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto testified Friday.

However, Alioto, who represents Davis, conceded to Alameda Superior Court Judge Spurgeon Avakian that the agreement signed March 1 in Los Angeles technically violated a restraining order against proceeding with the move.

But he said that such "civil disobedience" was necessary to challenge an entangling eminent domain suit by the city of Oakland.

Alioto followed Davis to the stand at a hearing on contempt of court proceedings against the Raider managing general partner. The city of Oakland contends that by agreeing to move his National Football League team, he violated an order issued last month by Judge Allen Broussard, who shifted both the eminent domain and contempt case to Avakian.

"The agreement signed in Los Angeles was not a legally binding document on either side," Alioto said. "But only this method gave him a chance of playing the season in Los Angeles in the event that the way the negotiations worked out."

"I concluded he (Davis) was being victimized by a business conspiracy. I did not think there was a judge in California who would sustain eminent domain."

"Under California law the only way we could test the validity of an overly broad restraining order was with an act of civil disobedience."

The restraining order issued in connection with the eminent domain suit prevented Davis from doing anything aimed at moving the team south. But Alioto said that was too broad and he advised Davis to continue to negotiate with Los Angeles officials, without signing a final agreement to move.

He said the agreement already signed was temporary because it needs the approval of the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission before it can take effect.

Davis, in his testimony, backed up Alioto's contention that he only continued working on the move with the advice of his lawyer. "He ... advised me to go about my business," Davis said. "I had great confidence that what I was doing was right."

Davis said that after the eminent domain suit was filed, George Vukasin, a representative of Oakland Mayor Lionel Wilson, told him the suit was filed only to buy time and not with the intention of taking the team away from Davis.

Aggies blow big lead, but rally to nip Tech

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M lost a four-run lead in the seventh, but cracked three runs in the eighth inning to take a 10-7 victory over Texas Tech in Southwest Conference baseball Friday.

Rusty Laughlin of Midland and Craig Noonan homered in the seventh when the Raiders scored six runs and pulled ahead 7-5. But the Raiders committed three defensive errors in the seventh and eighth, giving A&M four unearned runs and the game.

The Aggies pulled ahead early in the game with four runs in the second and added another in the fifth on Harry Francis' home run.

Perry Kilgo, now 2-1, was credited with the win in relief and Mark Johnston, now 2-3, was tagged with the loss.

The Aggies are 7-3 in SWC play and 20-4 on the season while Tech dropped to 2-5 on the conference and 10-12 overall.

Aguirre, Meyer honored

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mark Aguirre and Ray Meyer picked up their awards Friday in a nifty double play honoring The Associated Press Player of the Year and Coach of the Year.

And after thanking the Commonwealth Athletic Club of Kentucky for the dual distinction, they thanked each other.

"He's made me a good coach," the DePaul basketball coach told a press conference. "If not for him, I wouldn't be up here today."

Nor, possibly, would have Aguirre been there without Meyer. The gifted forward acknowledged that Meyer has meant more to him than most people know.

"He has helped me both on and off the court," said the 6-foot-7 Aguirre, attired nattily in a black suit with open collar and gold chains around his neck. "He certainly has given me all the smarts I need to know about basketball. But the biggest plus is that he's been there when I have needed him. I have great respect for Coach Meyer. I know we will always be friends."

Aguirre thus became only the second sophomore to win the Adolph

Rupp Trophy as the best collegiate basketball player in the land. Bill Walton of UCLA was the first to win the trophy as a sophomore. In 1972, Walton also won in 1973 and 1974.

Other players who have won the award in honor of the legendary Kentucky basketball coach are David Thompson of North Carolina State, Indiana's Scott May, Marques Johnson of UCLA, Marquette's Butch Lee and Larry Bird of Indiana State.

The voting by a nationwide panel of do not want to see a strike.

"That's the last resort," he said. "But if this is what we have to do to make the owners stand up and talk to us than that's what we have to do."

The players and owners are to meet again March 26-28 in Phoenix, Ariz., and if no progress is made the players will meet in Dallas April 1 to decide a strike date.

Asked if he thinks there will be a strike, Miller replied: "that's the one question I can't answer because I don't know."

"I think it should be stressed, however, that the players want an agreement," Miller said. "The vote is in the event that the owners keep up this posture in provoking a strike, which I think has been evident from the beginning."

Miller said out there has been a lot of confusion put out by the players' relations committee office and the league officers and the commissioner's office.

"The basic agreement was terminated by the owners Dec. 31," he explained. "However, under the law the agreement is still in force. Now it remains in effect until the owners declare an impasse. Once an employer declares an impasse, he is then free to change all the terms and conditions of employment without agreement."

Miller is concerned that the owners will attempt to drag out negotiations all season long and then declare an impasse in the fall. "What do you do, strike them in November?" he asked.

Howell agreed. He said, "I don't want to strike if they (owners) are going to show good faith and negotiate, but we can't let it drag out and go to the end of the season."

Lonnie Truelove earns state bowling finals

Lonnie Truelove, Midland High, bowled 561 and 618 scratch series to top qualifiers in the All-American Youth Bowling Championships at Air Park Lanes and advance to the state finals at Austin. Joe Hernandez, El Paso, was 57 pins back in the 14-bowler Boys Handicap division.

Mike White and Robbie Powell, both Midland, finished fourth and fifth, respectively. Darrell Hopkins, Midland took fifth in the boys open division with a 1056, 37 pins behind El Paso's Paul Ramsey, the top qualifier. Odessa's David Keeton was second.

The AAYBC awards $28,000 in scholarships to contestants, based on scholastic and academic achievement. Bowling in the national tournament accounts for 50 percent of the 100-point formula while a college entrance type exam counts 40 percent and high school transcript and class ranks counts five percent. Personal recommendations and an essay counts for another five.

Louisville cage fans upset over tickets

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—University of Louisville basketball fans are alleging that too many of the school's tickets to the NCAA basketball tournament in Indianapolis went to public officials, politicians and the media.

Too few, they complain, went to the fans who supported the team throughout the season and to students who stood in long lines in the rain last Monday to get their names on the list for a lottery.

Louisville, representing the Midwest Regionals, meets Iowa Saturday as the NCAA Final Four's showdown gets under way. UCLA and Purdue meet in the other game.

Indianapolis only is about two hours' driving time from Louisville, and demand in Kentucky's largest city for tickets has been vigorous.

Sports Columnist Earl Cox of The Courier-Journal reported in a story Friday that many people have been calling his newspaper to complain about the ticket policy.

Cox contacted Steve Bing, University of Louisville vice president for university relations, who confirmed that of the school's 1,600-ticket allotment, about 240 students got tickets through the lottery.

"This is grossly unfair," said the mother of a student who was among people who called the newspaper to complain.

Bing said among about 150 persons invited to use tickets as guests of the school were legislators, aldermen and Fiscal Court members. Public officials were provided tickets, with payment optional, "because they represent the commonwealth and the community," Bing said.

Hands key to swing

By REX WORRELL, Hogan Park Golf Pro

In today's column, we will take a look at the golf stance, which is the second fundamental of the four we plan to cover in this series.

There are several factors in the stance which can be varied, but the position of the hands is the only MUST. The reason for the importance of the hands' position is the maintaining of balance during the swing.

The hands must stay in the zone between your legs and your eyes. To help clarify where this zone is, take your driver by holding the butt-end of the grip between your thumb and forefinger. Place the butt-end of the grip on the bridge of your nose and then bend over at the waist. The hands must remain between the club and legs during the swing.

Two more stance positions that are common are (1. knees flexed, and (2. bent at the waist. But remember the hand position is the must during the swing.

The Hogan Park Men's Golf Association held a tournament last weekend with Boogie Childers winning first flight honors. Bill Edwards placed second and was followed by Jesse Madrid and Carson Munzell. Leonard Hernandez took the second flight and was followed by Art Miller, Joe Moreno and George Hamblin. The third flight trophy went to Jim Thorne, who was followed by Tom Standley, Ron Airhart and R. L. Faulkner.

The 18-Hole Division of the Hogan Park Women's Golf Association held a Poker Hand event March 13 with Polly Mackey winning first place honors and Dede Plank taking second. The weather was too bad for Playday Thursday.

The 18-Hole Division voted to give 12-inch putts, starting April 6, which will be trophy day for April. Girls, be sure to mark your putters.

The 18-Hole Division will also hold a "Choice of 3 Clubs and Putter" event on March 27. Pairings are as follows:

18-Hole Division Pairings: Fern Barnett, Margaret Mills, Anelle Mack and Gene Veltan, Bernice Cox, Evelyn Guidry, Nell Kimball and Polly Mackey; Cheta Mae, Dorothy Meiler, Jane Wagner and Margaret Stricker, Betty Mathis, Pat Walker, Gloria Delienbach and Renee Boique; Marilyn Philip, Ella Heath, Dede Plank and Betty Cobb; Merrily Walker, Meris Kenner, Charlotte Marburger and Jane Thomas; Florence Matley, Lucha Haskins, Dottie Turk and Shirley Mayes; Bernice Webb, Wilma Cox, Alice Bullard and Helen Brandt.

Walton sues Trail Blazers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton's long-threatened lawsuit over medical malpractice became a reality Friday as the off-injured center sued the Portland Trail Blazers' team doctor for inappropriate treatment of Walton's broken left foot.

Walton, who signed with the San Diego Clippers as a free agent last summer, accused Dr. Robert Cook of failing to diagnose the fracture, prescribing medications and injections that were inappropriate and failing to provide proper therapy.

The 6-foot-11 Walton suffered a stress fracture of his foot during a Blazers' National Basketball Association playoff game against Seattle in the spring of 1978.

HE SAT OUT the 1978-79 season and played only 14 games this year as a result of what he claims are complications from the injury.

The suit, filed in Multnomah County Circuit Court, does not specify the amount of damages Walton seeks. The complaint, written by attorneys Bruce Walkup of San Francisco and John Bassett of Portland, says the damages "are presently unascertained and ... are still continuing."

Earlier this week, the Clippers announced that Walton is lost for the remainder of this regular season because of problems in the same area of his foot. Continuing to play could lead to a stress fracture in the area, the team said.

Cook reportedly was out of town and his secretary said he will not be available for comment until Monday.

In the face of earlier reports of a pending lawsuit, Cook said he would be glad to discuss the matter fully — if and when a suit was filed.

THE BLAZERS, who are not named in the suit, had no immediate comment. The Clippers said they are not participating in the suit.

Ironically, the Blazers and Clippers are locked in a struggle for the last Western Division playoff spot. As usual, Walton refused on Friday to comment. But his disenchantment with Blazer medical practices was among the reasons cited for his defection to the Clippers, who are paying him in excess of $800,000 a year.

YMCA gym tryouts set for girls

Tryouts for the Midland Central YMCA girls gymnastics team are scheduled from 1 to 3 p.m. today. Any girl between the ages of six and 18 may try out. Those interested must be at the Central Y by 1 p.m. For details contact Gary Seth (682-2551).

Walton claimed that pain-killing injections given him by Cook led to the fracture.

The suit names Cook and twenty "John Does" at the Oregon City Orthopedic Clinic who treated him between March and July of 1978.

"During said period he relied on the medical advice of the defendants and was not informed of the true nature and extent of his injury and its negligent cause," the suit alleges.

Walton further claims that he did not discover the severity of his injury until he began consulting other doctors in July.

AS A RESULT of Cook's alleged carelessness and negligence, Walton claims he "sustained severe, extensive and permanent damage and injury to his body."

The damage includes impairment of his foot, injury and damage to his nervous system and general physical health and other injuries presently undiagnosed, the suit maintains.

The big redhead, a three-time All-America at UCLA, was the NBA's most valuable player in 1978. Before his injury, the Blazers were 50-10. They were eliminated soon after he was lost for the season.

Mexico plans to import U.S. grain

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown, accompanying a trade mission of 12 Texas grain producers here, said Friday that Mexico has agreed to import 90 percent of its grain needs from the United States.

Brown credited the plans to buy more U.S. grain — Mexico is already the United State's fifth-largest customer — to "the high quality of our grain and the great relationship between the two countries."

Brown reported by telephone to Austin, Texas, that Mexico will import 5.5 million metric tons of grain in the next few months, including 2.3 million metric tons of corn.

"The country of Mexico consumed 9 million metric tons of tortillas last year," said Brown, "and the basic ingredient is corn."

He said Mexico also would import 1.8 million metric tons of sorghum and 1.2 million metric tons of wheat.

Brown said Mexico has been importing only 3.2 million metric tons of grain a year from the United States.

He said he and the grain producers had met "eyeball-to-eyeball" with Mexico's Secretary of Commerce, Jorge de la Vega, and with Juan Salazar, director of Mexico's grain agency.

He beheld the city... and wept

Today cities have problems involving budgets, bond issues and taxes.

The only large city Jesus knew came in for a dramatic expression of his concern. Through his tears he said of Jerusalem, "If thou hadst known the things which belong unto thy peace, but now they are hid from thine eyes."

Of course, it wasn't a city for whom He wept—it was people. Whether we live in cities, towns, hamlets or villages we sometimes become blind to the spiritual resources on which true peace depends.

In those narrowing days, not long before His Crucifixion, our Lord was thinking about our spiritual vision. The destiny of every family, the life of each community, rests upon our fruitful use of our spiritual opportunities.

Do you go to church faithfully? Every Sunday widens our spiritual horizons!

THE NEWSPAPER BIBLE

How does one discover 'The Fountain of Truth'?

One day someone began an argument with John's disciples, telling them that Jesus' baptism was best.

So they came to John and said, "Master, the man you met on the other side of the Jordan River—the one you said was the Messiah—He is baptizing too, and everybody is going over there instead of coming here to us."

John replied, "God in heaven appoints each man's work."

My work is to prepare the way for that man so that everyone will go to Him. You yourselves know how plainly I told you that I am not the Messiah. I am here to prepare the way for Him—that is all.

The crowds will naturally go to the main attraction—the bride will go where the bridegroom is! A bridegroom's friends rejoice with him. I am the Bridegroom's friend, and I am filled with joy at His success.

He must become greater and greater, and I must become less and less.

He has come from heaven and is greater than anyone else. I am of the earth, and my understanding is limited to the things of earth.

He tells what He has seen and heard, but how few believe what He tells them!

Those who believe Him discover that God is a fountain of truth. For this one—sent by God—speaks God's words, for God's Spirit is upon Him without measure or limit.

The Father loves this man because He is His Son, and God has given Him everything there is.

And all who trust Him—God's Son—to save them have eternal life; those who don't believe and obey Him shall never see heaven, but the wrath of God remains upon them."

John 3:25-36

KNOW WHY VESPA'S MY MOPED? IT'S CLEAN AND QUIET. That's because Vespa enclosed the engine and all moving parts. Vespa mopeds have a clean, dry belt between the engine and rear wheel instead of a chain. No clanking or oil splatters on your bobbysocks. I chose Vespa. You might like Grande or Ciao! All three are poppy little numbers, even though they get up to 100 mph. Take one for a spin around Pasadena or your home town. You'll see what I mean. *Saw show Italian for hi
