Gov. Clements announces Mexican vegetable deal

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has topped off a state visit with the governor of Tamaulipas by announcing exchange agreements that will allow Mexican vegetables to come into Texas.

Gov. Enrique Cardenas Gonzalez was at Clements' side as he made the announcement. Cardenas Gonzalez was the third governor of a Mexican state bordering Texas to get the red carpet treatment from Clements.

Clements said he did not expect the vegetable agreement to precipitate a repeat of a 1978 riot at the international bridge by farmers protesting imports of Mexican produce.

"Most of that rumpus (on the bridge) was caused by farmers (from northern states) who were down here to get out of the cold," Clements said.

He predicted there would be no "dumping" of produce at low prices by Mexican farmers. Dumping undermines United States farm prices while giving consumers cheaper groceries.

"I would rather let the free market place work," Clements said.

Clements also announced that exchanges of students, teachers and technical information between Tamaulipas and Texas would begin immediately.

Clements and Cardenas Gonzalez also talked of the value of "twin plants" in border cities. Many firms have set up operations in adjacent cities along the Rio Grande.

The Texas governor said labor organizations should not object to twin plants because they "provide jobs and well being and prosperity on both sides of the river."

He said he did not care if those jobs in the Mexican cities resulted from plant closings elsewhere in the United States.

"I'm not really concerned about what some of these cities in other states have problems about. That's their problem," he said. "My decisions are based on what's right for Texas."

Cardenas Gonzalez presented Clements a large drop of oil, encased in plastic, from the runaway Ixtoc I well in the Gulf of Campeche. The blowout, capped only this week, has been a source of some political embarrassment to Clements because the well was drilled from an offshore platform leased from SEDCO, Inc., which he founded.

A House committee has refused to blame anyone for the worst oil spill in history but recommends roughnecks sign up for special college courses in how to avoid blowouts.

At a luncheon, Cardenas Gonzalez was given 19th century city documents from the Mexican border town of Camargo. The documents, were taken by unknown elements and only recently came into the hands of Texas state archives officials, according to a release.

Cardenas Gonzalez praised Clements for his support of Mexico during the Ixtoc oil spill and said the runaway well has been totally controlled.

Iranian runoff election delayed

By The Associated Press

Iran's foreign minister says the runoff elections for the new Parliament have been postponed as expected, indicating delay until the summer at least in the legislature's decision on whether the American hostages should be released.

Meanwhile, a member of the U.N. panel probing Iran's charges against the shah, Adib Daoudi of Syria, told the Beirut newspaper Al Sharq the shah's "escape" to Egypt "will doubtless have adverse effects on the case of the American hostages."

He suggested that Iranian leaders may fear that the United States is conspiring with the shah and his followers to overthrow the revolutionary regime in an Egypt-based plot.

Famed American surgeon Dr. Michael DeBakey was in Cairo examining the exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi preliminary to an operation for removal of his cancerous spleen.

Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh announced after a meeting of the ruling Revolutionary Council Wednesday night that it delayed the second round election, originally scheduled for April 4, to permit investigation of charges of vote fraud in the first round of balloting March 14. He said the investigating commission began work Tuesday and had a month, until April 25, to finish.

With this timetable, the voting for legislators not elected on the first ballot probably would not be held until some time in May. And this could be delayed more if the results of the first round were thrown out in some districts and new elections held.

In view of the slow counting of votes that followed the March election, the results of a May ballot are not likely to be known before June. Leaders of the revolutionary regime said earlier that it would take some weeks for the Majlis, or Parliament, to get organized and dispose of pressing domestic matters before it got around to the hostages.

Expectations that the Majlis will determine what happens to the Americans are based on a statement by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the leader of the revolutionary regime, that it should decide their fate. But there is no assurance that Khomeini will not change his mind. And at last report, about half the seats were being won by the hard-line Islamic Republican Party, which opposes releasing the Americans unless the shah and his fortune are returned to Iran.

U.N. commission member Daoudi told the Beirut newspaper he believes any decision on the hostages will have to await the convening of the Parliament. But he said the five-man U.N. panel "will return to Tehran to complete its mission, when circumstances permit."

The leader of the IRP, Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, who is justice minister and first secretary of the Revolutionary Council, said on Wednesday the majority of the council feels if the shah is not returned, the hostages should be tried. But Ghotbzadeh told reporters "no trial will be held." He said the same thing on Monday after another revolutionary leader, Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, said some of the captive Americans should be tried as spies because the shah was allowed to leave Panama and escape extradition proceedings.

Today was the 145th day of confinement for the 50 Americans held by militants in the U.S. Embassy and three in the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

DeBakey, who was to have operated on the shah in Panama until Panamanian doctors objected, arrived in Cairo Wednesday night with a full surgical team, seven boxes labeled human blood and several larger boxes believed to contain surgical equipment.

He examined the 60-year-old Pahlavi at the Maadi Military Hospital overlooking the Nile, where he has been since arriving in Cairo Monday, and a brief medical bulletin was issued afterward saying the shah's 104-degree fever had dropped slightly. No date for surgery for announced, although it is expected to take place within a week.

Big banks tighten consumer credit

NEW YORK (AP) — The squeeze on consumer borrowing has tightened once again with actions by Bank of America and Citibank — the nation's two biggest banks — to make credit card use more expensive and loans harder to get.

Finance companies, retailers and other banks also are instituting stricter credit policies to meet new Federal Reserve requirements to hold down loan growth and President Carter's program to cool inflation by reducing consumer spending.

Beneficial Corp., the nation's largest finance company with $4.3 billion in loans outstanding, plans to reduce its loans by 5 percent this year. Sears, Roebuck and Co., with 23 million charge customers, has boosted its minimum monthly payment on charge accounts from $8 to $10.

As the largest bank issuer of credit cards with 8.3 million cardholders, the San Francisco-based Bank of America said Wednesday it will boost its minimum monthly payment requirements on Visa and MasterCard accounts and stiffen criteria for new card applicants.

Credit card customers with the country's largest bank will have to pay 6 percent of each month's unpaid balance or $25 — whichever is greater — instead of the current minimum of 4 percent or $10.

Meanwhile, Citicorp announced plans to move its credit card operations from New York to Sioux Falls, S.D., so it can charge a higher interest rate on its 5.8 million credit cards.

Citicorp, whose chief subsidiary Citibank is one of the country's biggest consumer lenders, said it is losing money under a New York usury limit prohibiting interest rates of greater than 18 percent on credit card balances of less than $500 and 12 percent on greater balances. Starting May 1, South Dakota's usury limits will be 18 percent on the first $500 charge balance and 24 percent on greater amounts.

The company has no specific target date for the move, although it could occur as soon as July, a spokesman said. He added the company still is hoping the New York usury limit will be lifted soon.

Two seeking school board seat

Former school principal faces non-educator

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a two-part series examining four candidates' views of the issues in the April 5 election for Places 1 and 2 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees.

By DAVID CAMPBELL

The race for Place 2 on the Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees is between a former school principal and a self-proclaimed "grass roots person."

Bill Jackson, a Midland Realtor, says his experience as a school principal has provided him with an insight to the school system which is needed on the school board.

Also, he explained, as a business man, he is able to see "what is on the other side of the fence."

Worthy Gilbert Jr., a Texaco employee, explains his greatest asset is that he "is not an educator, not a businessman, not a politician."

"I consider myself a grass roots person who can appeal to the wishes of the people," he said.

The school district's highest priority, according to Jackson, is the curriculum.

"The school board needs to evaluate where we are in some programs, where we need to go and how we are going to get there," Jackson said.

"Look at the basics — reading, math, science — and let's evaluate and see how we are doing in comparison to other school districts," the former principal said.

If there is nothing wrong with the program, then "let's pat ourselves on the back," he said.

However, should a program have some faults, then they should be corrected, Jackson added.

His opponent contended a major emphasis should be placed on equa-

Questions from Census Bureau may be too probing for some people

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau doesn't care what your religion is, who you sleep with or whether you have a pet. But it does have lots of other questions and the census forms arriving in tomorrow's mail may seem too probing for some people.

If that is your impression, please don't blame the Census Bureau, pleads director Vincent Barabba.

"These are not the Census Bureau's questions," he said. "They are what the American people brought forth in 70 public hearings or were suggested by Congress or federal agencies."

The questionnaires being delivered to 86 million homes Friday are the basis of the nation's 20th census. Bureau officials hope at least 80 percent will be filled out and mailed back by Tuesday.

For most people that will be a simple exercise, taking 15 minutes or less, to answer the 19 questions on the short form.

But for one family in six — more in rural areas — it will take about 45 minutes to handle the long form, which has an extra 20 personal and 26 housing questions.

Your answers and those of other Americans are compiled to develop a statistical profile of the nation and no information on any individual is made public. The count itself is required by the Constitution.

"The questions have to have some relationship with an identifiable national interest," said Census Bureau spokesman Henry Smith. "We don't ask your religion, or who you sleep with or whether you have a pet."

Even though rejected by the Census Bureau, those are all questions one group or another sought to have included.

Ray Bancroft of the bureau recalled that other rejected suggestions included some dealing with sexual preference, what type of leisure activity is most enjoyed, whether a person is left-handed and whether he or she smokes.

The bureau held hearings starting in 1974 to develop questions.

The first question on all forms asks the name of each person living in the house as of April 1.

Some people in the past have limited their response to this one answer, and Barabba stresses that being so unresponsive will lead to a visit from a census taker to get more information.

Question No. 2 deals with how the people listed are related to one another and the next two questions ask the sex and racial background of the individuals.

Question No. 5 is on age, No. 6 on marital status and No. 7 on whether the individual is of Hispanic origin or descent.

The housing questions everyone will be asked cover such things as number of living quarters at the address, whether there are complete plumbing facilities, the number of rooms, whether you own or rent, the amount of rent and the size and value of the property.

On the long form, the more detailed housing questions include topics such as type of water and sewer service, the age of the building, the average cost of utilities, whether there is a telephone, the number of bedrooms and bathrooms, real estate taxes, mortgage and insurance.

Extra personal questions on the long form include place of birth, languages spoken, citizenship, ancestry, education, military service, health and means of traveling to work.

The House of Representatives is apportioned according to population, and Huddleston said including illegal residents in the count will unfairly add representatives to some states and deny them to others.

Since it is too late to change the census forms to add a question about citizenship, Huddleston and Roger Conner of the Federation for American Immigration Reform called for a public relations campaign to urge non-citizens not to answer the census.

Lions elect officers

B. Morris Hulsey was elected president of the Midland Downtown Lions Club for 1980-81 at its annual officer election held Wednesday noon in the Midland Hilton. Ray Gwyn is the retiring president.

Other officers elected include Jerry Speck, first vice president; Jack Darden, second vice president; Frank Marlow, secretary-treasurer; Kirby Dawkins and E.B. Tom Sawyer, Lion Tamers; and Wayne Martin and Jim Galyean, tail twisters. A runoff between Art Oestmann and Jim Chapman for the office of third vice president will be conducted at next week's meeting. Amy Stewart was re-elected as the club's sweetheart.

New directors elected are Gary Bruce Hart, Larry Rusk, George Lou-damy and Mike Nance. Holdover directors are Harry Hugly, Douglas Brown, Jim Chapman, Tom Mixon and Bob Truitt. The new officers and directors will take office on July 1.

The program at the luncheon session was presented by Kathy McIntyre, regional director of the American Heart Association. Chuck Logue arranged and introduced the program.

It was announced that receipts to date in the club's recent Pancake Jamboree total $22,010, with funds from the advance sale of tickets still being received.

The Downtown Lions Club has donated a check for $500 to the West Texas Boys Ranch to help pay for recent fire damage. Roy Minear, left, accepts the check on

Treatment of deaf probed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A lack of Austin State Hospital staff members trained in sign language makes it difficult for deaf children in the hospital's psychiatric unit to get the care they need, according to a federal investigation.

The parents who filed the complaint with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare said the children sometimes have to resort to handwritten notes to communicate.

A copy of the federal report obtained by the Associated Press says the hospital is violating a portion of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 that requires equal care for all children, regardless of handicap.

"The investigation revealed that the deaf children do not have the opportunity to develop close relationships with child care workers that are necessary for effective therapy," said the report prepared by the HEW office of civil rights in Dallas.

Benny Britton, assistant superintendent at the hospital, said the report was received March 4. The hospital was given 15 days to respond. Robert Gonzalez, deputy director in the Dallas office of civil rights, said hospital officials have asked for more time.

Britton said the changes would be made although "I have a personal feeling that we are not in violation as stated. To say that we are not making services available, I have difficulty accepting that."

The HEW investigation was prompted by a complaint from the parents of a deaf teen-ager who has been in the children's psychiatric unit since September 1978.

The child's mother told The Associated Press the four youngsters now in the psychiatric unit sometimes have trouble communicating with untrained staff members. The handwritten notes do not suffice, she said.

"That's hard for them because some of them are on a third-grade reading level," she said. "They get frustrated."

HEW stated the complaining parents' child and other deaf patients are "often secluded when they present problems to child care workers who have little or no sign skills."

Disciplinary action may go on for hospital aides

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Fifteen suspended state hospital aides accused of mistreating mentally retarded patients by kicking them, choking them into unconsciousness and other means, may face further disciplinary action from the Oregon Mental Health Division.

The employees from the Eastern Oregon Hospital and Training Center in Pendleton were interviewed by the division Wednesday, and a spokesman said a decision would be made soon.

The 15 were suspended without pay, and the division has filed complaints with the state Employee Relations Board that say patients were called obscene names, kicked into unconsciousness and slapped, hit and choked for no apparent reason.

The complaints were based on an undercover investigation by the attorney general's staff.

Al Blogg, merit system representative for the board, said Wednesday the division could fire the workers, continue their suspension for up to 30 days, fine them or reinstate them with retroactive pay.

THE 90 DAY WONDER.

Introducing the $1,000 Certificate That Earns 13% Annual Interest After Just 3 Months. (8% If You Withdraw Early!)

If you really want your eyes opened, read this ad, then compare with other ads by banks and savings and loan associations. You'll see why we believe "The 90 Day Wonder" just may be the finest thrift package in America today.

The key is an unbeatable combination of benefits: Short 3 month term. Low $1,000 minimum. High 13% interest with an effective annual yield of 13.64% when compounded quarterly.* Plus an extremely liberal penalty for early withdrawal, which means you still earn a big 8%.

Look at what others offer and you'll see how they compare. With their 30 month certificates, your money is tied up at today's interest rates for 2 1/2 years! And if you withdraw early you forfeit 6 months' interest.

Their six month certificates require $10,000 minimum...with forfeiture of 3 months' interest for early withdrawal.

So for the first time you can get certificate size rates with the freedom to use your money where it can do you the most good. To take advantage of higher rates. To invest in opportunity when it knocks.

To withdraw in an emergency without undue penalties.

And with passbook accounts, maximum interest is just 5 1/2% compared to 8%, which is the lowest interest our certificate earns, even after penalty.

If you'd like to see your money begin earning what it's really worth, without having it hopelessly tied up...send this coupon with your check or money order and start earning interest from the post-marked date. Or, for more information, call us.

Con Edison indicted for violations

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Commonwealth Edison Co., the nation's largest atomic power utility, ordered guards at its Cordova plant to conceal security violations, a federal grand jury has charged in the first criminal indictment of a utility in a nuclear security case.

The grand jury, in indictments handed down here Wednesday, charged the utility and two employees with fraud and conspiracy in connection with the plant's security operations from January 1976 to April 1977.

The nine-count indictment said Pinkerton guards employed at the Quad-Cities Nuclear Station were ordered not to record discovery of unlocked and unguarded doors to vital areas and not to record the presence of unescorted visitors in such areas.

An Edison spokesman said the charges were not related to the operation of the two nuclear reactors at the station, located near Cordova along the Mississippi River.

The spokesman also said the company believes it is innocent, "has violated no laws, and intends to defend itself and its employees vigorously."

The utility plant Superintendent Nicholas Kalivianakis and security director Walter Meehan are to be arraigned here April 9 before U.S. District Judge J. Waldo Ackerman.

The indictment specifically cited three instances of unescorted visitors and six of unlocked and unguarded doors at the plant.

It alleged that Edison and the two officials failed "to record such information in security records" as required by NRC regulations.

Edison and the officials, "having possession of slips of paper recording vital area doors found open by security guards ... would and did conceal those slips of paper from the NRC," the indictment charged.

The indictment said Edison and the officials knew security records presented to the NRC "did not accurately and truthfully reflect security operations" at the plant.

Edison is the nation's largest operating utility and largest nuclear utility, according to spokesman Bill Harrah. It serves the northern fifth of Illinois, including Chicago.

The utility operates and owns 75 percent of the Quad-Cities Station. Iowa-Illinois Gas & Electric Co. owns the other fourth. The plant began feeding power in the fall of 1972.

U.S. Attorney Gerald D. Fines said the indictments were the first brought by the Justice Department in a nuclear case.

He said a grand jury began investigating security at the plant in May 1977. He declined to say what prompted the investigation, but published reports indicated it followed complaints of lax security by a Pinkerton guard.

Afghan rebels free prisoners

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan rebels raided a government jail in the northeastern province of Kunduz and freed about 1,200 prisoners, a rebel organization claimed today in Pakistan.

The statement issued by the Hizbe Islami, or Islamic Party, claimed the rebels hit the jail last Thursday night because several prominent rebel leaders held there were scheduled for execution in the next few days.

Among those freed were rebel leaders Maulvi Ajab Gul and Gari Fida Mohammed Khan, both of whom were jailed during the regime of slain President Mohammed Daoud, the statement said. Daoud was the leader of the first of a series of pro-Moscow governments that seized power in Afghanistan in April 1978.

One prison official was killed in the attack, the rebels said. They did not report any rebel losses.

The statement also reported rebel attacks at a military airport on the outskirts of Kunduz City and on several government buildings in the city.

None of the rebel claims could be independently confirmed.

The Soviet Union has poured an estimated 80,000 troops into Afghanistan since December to help Afghanistan's pro-Moscow government battle the anti-Communist Moslem rebels.

Soviets reported to be defecting

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A reliable Western source said a number of Soviet Moslem troops have defected to the rebels in Afghanistan.

The source, who declined to be identified, said he met with three of the defectors in a rebel-controlled area last month, and that they were army reservists from Uzbekistan, a predominantly Moslem Soviet republic bordering Afghanistan.

Durward Wright, Midland County commissioner, reported the county has purchased 17 parcels needed for Loop 250 and started condemnation proceedings in one case.

The county was found deficient in three areas of jail standards when reviewed recently, Wright said. The county needs an auxiliary generator for emergency power, a second stairway exit and refitting of padded cells.

Design discourages use of seat belts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poor design makes seat belts such a hassle to put on that only one of nine drivers uses them, a new federal study says.

And the National Highway Transportation Safety Administration said Wednesday no relief is in sight before 1982, when a new regulation governing comfort and convenience in seat belts is expected to take effect.

NHTSA administrator Joan Claybrook said the new study showed only 10.9 percent of drivers used their belts last year.

The problem is that continuing poor designs of belts ... are a significant disincentive to the public," the report said.

The study found several flaws, including finding and bucking the latch plate, too much pressure from the shoulder belt and improper fit.

Chamber looks at membership

A closer look at membership and how to retain those members they have were discussed Wednesday when the Midland Chamber of Commerce met in its new building at 109 N. Main St.

One group will work on getting a certain amount of new members each month, the board was told.

The board also approved leasing 2,313 square feet in the south half of the chamber structure to Saber Petroleum Corp. Ray Moudy, chamber president, said this will fill the new building. United Way should occupy its quarters on the north half by mid-April.

Members for the Industrial Foundation were approved. They are T.L. "Ike" Cauthen, Joe Campbell, Bill Thomas, Bob Southerland and Bill Mewhorter.

Annual meeting for the Industrial Foundation will be Friday, said Grant Billingsley. Members will review projects the foundation has been involved in and new ones for the future, including the possibility of another Industrial Park, he added.

egg hunt, Hike-Bike-Ride to raise funds for mentally retarded persons and participation in Christmas in April.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce annual convention will be April 16-18 in San Angelo. Midland will be making a bid to bring the convention here in 1981 or 1982.

Credit cards losing their clout

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Your pocketful of plastic may carry less clout than it used to.

The impact of the recent credit controls announced by President Carter varies according to where you live, the type of credit you have and how much you spend.

More than a week after Carter unveiled his anti-inflation program, including moves designed to reduce consumer spending by making it harder to buy now and pay later, lenders are still trying to figure out exactly what to do.

"We don't see any clear-cut trend," Tim Lynch, a spokesman for MasterCard (formerly Master Charge), said Tuesday. "Most banks aren't promoting new cards...Others are making the qualifications more stringent."

Among the things faced by the millions of Americans who already have credit cards are bigger minimum monthly payments, limits on cash advances, annual fees and higher interest charges.

The burden of implementing controls lies with the Federal Reserve Board that has told banks to hold loan growth to 6 percent to 9 percent this year.

Lenders with more than $2 million in revolving credit outstanding must set aside 15 percent of new loans in a non-interest bearing account with the board.

U.S. Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., chairman of the House Banking subcommittee on consumer affairs, called officials of the board to testify at a hearing on the controls today.

Another hearing by another subcommittee was scheduled for next week.

Lynch said that because creditors are reacting in so many different ways, consumers simply have to check local lenders to find out how they are affected. Different cards have different strings.

charge on the balance. The Federal Reserve Board says the travel and entertainment cards are covered by the rules; the companies say they are studying the question.

James Stetler of Diners Club was quoted by Advertising Age, a trade journal, as saying:

"The new ruling is meant to restrain consumer credit and not business expenses. Diners Club members use the card primarily for business expenses."

A full-page American Express ad in The Washington Post on Tuesday was headlined: "How Washington's new credit guidelines affect the American Express card." The ad concludes: "You are expected to pay your bill in full every month...You don't get in over your head. That's why our Cardmembers can continue to use the American Express Card in the manner in which they always have...responsibly."

Rapid inflation spreading into entire economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Double-digit inflation, which was blamed mainly on soaring energy and housing costs last year, now appears to be spreading to the economy in general.

"It's a very, very dangerous development," Charles L. Schultze, chairman of President Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said.

Speaking to a political action conference of the Communications Workers of America on Wednesday, Schultze said January and February consumer price reports showed that "for the first time, inflation began to spill out ... into the economy more broadly."

In other economic developments:

—Carter was reported ready to propose even deeper budget cuts than those outlined in his new inflation-fighting program two weeks ago.

—New government figures indicated Americans are putting less money in savings accounts and withdrawing more. That could mean less money available in coming months for home mortgages.

Schultze said the administration has concentrated on limiting double-digit inflation to energy and housing areas. Government economists estimated that costs for items were well under 10 percent in 1979.

However, during the past three months, prices for medical care rose at an annual rate of about 17 percent and entertainment costs were up 10.3 percent on a yearly basis.

Inflation during the first two months of 1980 accelerated at an annual rate of 18 percent, up from 13.3 percent last year. If that rate continues, it would be the highest level since World War II price controls were lifted in 1946.

The administration's new anti-inflation program is keyed to a balanced federal budget, credit controls, a 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax and wage-price monitoring.

Carter is expected to unveil his revised 1981 budget next week, and his press secretary, Jody Powell, said the cuts from the budget recommendations submitted in January will be closer to $16 billion, instead of the $13 billion to $14 billion range announced earlier. The new figure would approximate spending cuts proposed by the House Budget Committee.

Wood product firm cuts spending plans

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Georgia-Pacific Corp., the nation's largest producer of wood products, says it will cut its plans for capital expenditures this year by more than $100 million due to a severe slump in the nation's housing market.

The cutback announced Wednesday will trim the company's outlay for equipment and new plants this year from $500 million to $390 million down to $475 million or less, a company spokesman said.

In a letter to 44,000 employees nationwide, chairman Robert E. Flowerree said the cutback reflected a nationwide slump in the housing industry. "Quite plainly," he said, "the housing industry — our bread and butter — is weakening much faster than the experts had predicted."

Georgia-Pacific said its forecast last August of 1.7 million housing starts nationwide in 1980 has been scaled down to 1.2 million starts.

Building products accounted for 64 percent of the company's 1979 sales and 52 percent of its profits. Pulp, chemicals and paperboard accounted for the remainder.

Gold, silver decline as dollar advances

LONDON (AP) — Gold and silver slumped sharply on world markets today as the dollar scored strong new advances.

After gold prices sank below $500 dollars an ounce in New York Wednesday night, the metal dropped $39.07 in Hong Kong early today to close at $488.88.

Gold started off just below $500 in Europe, but by mid-morning London dealers were quoting a median $472.50, down $33 from $505.50 Wednesday.

Silver fell to a low of $13.75 at one point before rallying slightly to $14.75, down from $17.50.

In Zurich, gold was selling for $485.50, down from $504.50.

Mid-morning dollar rates in Europe, compared to late Wednesday:

Frankfurt—1.9085 West German marks, up from 1.8915.

Zurich—1.8078 Swiss francs, up from 1.7905.

Paris—4.4225 French francs, up from 4.3910.

Amsterdam—2.0895 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0705.

Milan—888.75 Italian lire, up from 878.40.

In London, the pound cost $2.1810, compared to $2.2030.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 249.625 yen, up from 249.075.

House panel opposes cut in state workers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A House study committee wants Texas legislative leaders to take a strong stand against Gov. Bill Clements' state employee reduction program.

"This climate has turned worker against worker and created an atmosphere of fear," Rep. Mary Jane Bode, D-Austin, told a news conference Wednesday.

"We know from our hearings so far and from other contacts, that state employee morale is at an all-time low," said Mrs. Bode, chairman of the House Committee on State Employee Productivity.

She said a recent meeting of her committee approved a resolution that urges the lieutenant governor, House speaker and legislative leaders to "resolve the threat to state employees through blanket reductions in force of set percentages across the board by jointly adopting a strong policy statement of legislative intent."

NLRB has own contract dispute

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Labor Relations Board, which is in charge of resolving other people's labor disputes, was the target of a nationwide protest Wednesday over a contract dispute with its own employees.

Unionized employees of the independent federal agency demonstrated outside NLRB headquarters here and regional offices around the country to publicize their bargaining grievances.

Members of the union, which represents about 2,000 lawyers, investigators and clerical workers, handed out leaflets that accused the agency of "acting in complete disregard for the rights of its own employees."

"The employees of the NLRB will no longer tolerate the agency engaging in tactics which the NLRB itself was established to discourage," the leaflet said.

Agency spokesman Ray Pikus said "management feels major concessions have been made, that progress is being made and that we are bargaining in good faith."

The union and management have been negotiating on a contract since November to replace an agreement that was to have expired at the end of last year. However, the contract has been extended on a day-to-day basis.

The union, which plans to demonstrate for the rest of the week, says the main issues in dispute involve working conditions, including union demands for improved seniority rights, more protection from discipline and discharge and better job opportunities for women and minorities.

"We've been bargaining for six months and no progress has been made until the last two or three days under the threat of this activity," said union president Pamela Hoffman, an investigator at the NLRB's San Francisco regional office.

Vote for the essentials

On April 5 Midland voters will be asked to approve the issuance of $3 million in bonds to be used for major repairs, improvements and renovations to existing Midland Independent School District facilities.

During the past few weeks much has been said and written about the bond election. When April 5 arrives, voters will have their say.

At The Midland Reporter-Telegram, we have spent much time looking into the merits of the bond election. The newspaper has published numerous stories concerning the proposal, including a three-part series which concluded Tuesday.

We are of the opinion that voters should approve issuance of the bonds.

Back in October last year, the school district presented a $10.2 million bond proposal. That issue was defeated.

School district officials had said at that time the items included in that bond package constituted "bare bones" spending for the district.

Now they have tightened their belts and issued this proposal which they say includes only items deemed "absolutely necessary." Having carefully studied the proposal, we agree that this package represents only essential expenditures.

Included in the bond proposal this time is $951,450 to repair Midland High School and the remainder — about $2,048,550 — to make critical repairs at Lee High School and other schools in the district. There are no "luxury" items included in this bond proposal, even though there were no frills in the last proposal. The repairs that will be made if this proposal passes are essential.

Those will be made even if voters do not approve the bonds this time around, according to school officials.

If voters do not approve the bonds, the repair and maintenance items will be incorporated into the school budget. School officials have indicated that if that action has to be taken, a 10-cent increase would have to be added to the tax rate of $1.13 per $100, collected for operations and salaries.

We realize some opponents of the improvements have been critical of trustees. They claim the board is giving voters no choice because they have said the projects will be accomplished via a tax increase in event the bond issue is not approved.

We do not feel that way. We believe the board is being honest in its appraisal of needs although it is true the real choice is in how those improvements will be financed.

It seems that approving the bonds and retiring that debt would be the wiser, more economical of the two methods.

All qualified Midland voters should go to the polls April 5 and vote their convictions. We believe that upon careful study and consideration of the options, they will find approval of the bonds the most satisfactory course.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, March 27, the 87th day of 1980. There are 279 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On March 27, 1977, 581 people died in the worst air disaster in history when a Pan Am jumbo jet and a Royal Dutch Airlines jumbo jet collided on a runway in the Canary Islands.

On this date: In 1945, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower declared that allied forces had defeated the Germans on the western front in World War II.

In 1964, an earthquake in Alaska killed more than 100 people.

In 1968, Yuri Gagarin, the Soviet cosmonaut who flew the world's first manned space mission, was killed when his training plane crashed.

In 1970, an earthquake struck western Turkey, killing more than 1,000 people and leaving 90,000 homeless.

Ten years ago, South Vietnam launched its first major operation into Cambodia.

Last year, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, meeting in Geneva, raised its crude oil prices by 9 percent.

Today's birthdays: Actress Gloria Swanson is 81. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is 63. Austrian skier Annemarie Moser-Pröell is 27. Actor Michael York is 58.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Carter's ploys stymie grand jury probe

WASHINGTON — The Georgians in the White House, beset by foreign crises and economic woes, have another worry that refuses to go away. It could cause them great political embarrassment in an election year.

They have tried, according to Justice Department sources, to sidetrack a grand jury investigation of the Robert Vesco scandal. But an unassuming citizen named Ralph Ulmer won't let them get away with it.

He is a plodding, conscientious fellow, with a docile manner and a character of granite. Unfortunately for the White House crowd, he is also the foreman of the grand jury which has been investigating attempts by Vesco, an international swindler, to buy White House influence.

There is nothing suave or subtle about Ulmer. He is just an average American of simple, stubborn integrity, a quiet, concerned American who believes deeply in the integrity of the grand jury system.

He also has an inquiring mind, and he has filled it with the details of the case. As each witness has testified, Ulmer has taken meticulous notes. Later at home, he has often stayed up long past midnight painstakingly reviewing the notes and piecing together the evidentiary fragments.

He scrupulously has refused to discuss the case with outsiders, not even his wife. But he has let his colleagues from the grand jury know that he is troubled by evidence of a White House cover-up. Once he tried to resign in protest. He complained in a letter to Judge William Bryant that "coverup activities are being orchestrated within the Department of Justice under the concept that the administration must be protected at all costs." He accused the Carter administration of "duplicitous" and "manipulation."

The judge refused to accept his resignation, and Ulmer is still pressing the administration for the answers to incriminating questions. Sources close to the grand jury investigation have told my associate Gary

Jack Anderson

Cohn that the jury foreman still believes the Justice Department is trying to cover up for the White House. Other grand jurors agree with him, the sources say.

The department has conducted the investigation in a haphazard manner, constantly shifting prosecutors, introducing procedural disruptions and creating confusion. The department also rushed ahead with indictments of several witnesses before they could testify against White House intimates. This had the effect of discrediting the unwelcome testimony in advance.

Now there are signs that the Justice Department is preparing to wrap up the case by next month when the grand jury's term expires. A premature halt to the investigation will leave a lot of loose ends; it will also limit the damage to the Carter administration.

President Carter himself was a key witness in the case. He was informed by aide Richard Harden in February 1977, that Vesco had offered "a large sum of money" to gain entry to the White House. But Harden claimed he had persuaded the middleman, White House crony Spencer Lee IV, to pull out of the deal. Lee also swore that this is what happened. But according to official sources, he failed at least two lie detector tests.

This cast a shadow on the White House version of the incident. In any event, the president had a legal obligation to report the Vesco bribe offer to the Justice Department, which he

ART BUCHWALD Nation's military might not shown in IQ scores

WASHINGTON — You would think that with the new emphasis on catching up with the Soviets, everyone at the Pentagon would be overjoyed. This is not so. The generals and admirals in charge of developing new sophisticated weapons are thrilled. But the officers who must train military personnel to use them are worried sick.

A recent Defense Department study revealed that 25 percent of all recruits in the three major services, after testing, had to be classified in the "low intelligence category." This means they could hardly read the instruction manuals that accompany the complicated weapons, much less understand how to fire them.

It has become painfully clear that even if we get all the new hardware that President Carter wants, the chances of a large number of our troops being able to understand how to use them will be minimal.

"Good news, Colonel. The XM-1 tank has just arrived."

"Very well, Sergeant. Instruct your crews on how to use it."

"Yessir ... All right now, you chowheads, hear this. This is the new XM-1 tank. It weighs 40 tons and can fire laser-guided missiles as well as artillery shells. Are there any questions?"

"Sarge, what's a tank?"

"A tank is an armored vehicle, capable of traversing any kind of terrain, and having the ability to destroy buildings, bunkers and people. It can go either forward or backward. It is the most feared weapon in ground warfare."

"Does it have an engine in it?"

"Yes, Klaus. That's what makes it go. I think the best thing to do is have you get into the tank and work it yourself. Here's the manual and the key to the ignition. I'll talk to you by radio. The range is over there where those large targets are. In order to aim the target, you push the red button on the control panel, then sight the gun with the green button above the temp gauge and, finally, fire the gun by moving the safety lock to 9 o'clock and the trigger mechanism to 12 o'clock, without taking your foot off the accelerator. Okay, you four over there, get into the tank and let's try it."

"Are you set? Start up Okay, move out. No, Slocum, drive toward the range Slocum, you're heading for the PX. Turn it around, TURN IT AROUND Slocum, you just knocked down the PX building."

"Hey, Sarge, this is fun."

"Slocum, aim your turret toward the targets. What button are you pressing?"

"This one, Sarge."

"SLOCUM, DON'T FIRE. YOU'RE AIMING AT THE OFFICER'S MESS. OH, NO, YOU JUST KNOCKED OUT THE SECOND FLOOR."

"Wow, Sarge — I wasn't even aiming at it. These laser guns are terrific."

"Come back, Slocum. No, Slocum don't back into the ammunition shack. Put the stick in drive, not reverse. Never mind — it's too late. Come back and we'll go over it once again."

"How's it going, Sergeant?"

"Just fine, Colonel. The men really like the new tank."

"Good. You better move your men out right away. Eye Company just got its new electronic-firing helicopter and wiped out F Company. We have no idea where they'll hit next. The whole base is on the alert."

"Yes, sir. Maybe this would be a good time to hold the remedial reading class."

"You better cancel it. The Navy just destroyed the base school with the new M-20 Cruise missile they got yesterday."

A CHANGING WORLD: Canada closing the door to American draft dodgers

Copley News Service

Here's some news for campus renegades who revel in burning their nation's flag. And, for their fellow potential draft dodgers.

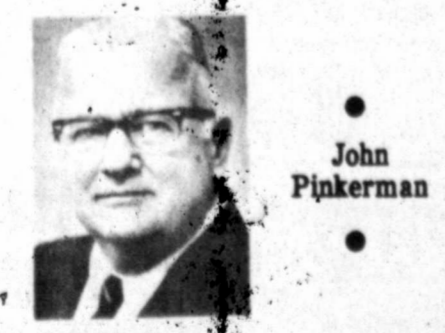

The back door you once used for cowardly flight from responsibility may have slammed shut on you. Canada appears to be withdrawing its welcome mat, used extensively by Vietnam War deserters and others who flunked their loyalty tests.

Canadian strong man Pierre Trudeau, speaking for his nation's consensus, said it very plainly: "If some Americans want to come into my country after breaking their nation's laws, whether criminal or dodging the draft, they will not be welcome."

So, "Burn baby, burn," the new rallying cry of the registration and draft protesters as they set the Stars and Stripes to flames, may not enjoy the tolerance that it did in the late 1960s and early '70s. And, that's a good sign.

As for those who are determined to shirk duty, their thinking processes, despite cohabitation with higher education, are disgraceful and stupid compared to the views of my hillbilly hardworking friends of Burley's, the mountain village saloon.

In the face of a situation in the Persian Gulf-Arabian Sea area that is of critical danger to American life, including their own, the campus crowd cries out, "We're not going to war for Exxon." These outbursts, mind you, come from college campuses that are becoming massive parking lots for student Mideast gasoline burning cars with a few academic buildings scattered in-between.

They come from students who profess that on graduation they want jobs in U.S. industry. How many jobs will there be within U.S. industry and business if there is no energy to maintain production? The same cries come from students who now proclaim, "I'm not going to die for the bungling politicians in Washington." Can they think of a more noble way to die than fighting for their country against the Communist menace that is Moscow — so their children may live?

They might listen to one Cliff Dorn, a 33-year-old ranch foreman who went to war at 19. "I'm proud of my service," this man said. "It was a great learning process, a maturing process."

Dorn makes a lot more sense than California Gov. Jerry Brown, who won't fight for oil and doesn't want nuclear power and says 40- to 50-year-olds should be the ones drafted, not the nation's youth. His stand is rather interesting because he was able to avoid serving his country when young. He becomes 42 on April 7. Will he join the other 40s to 50s he wants drafted?

Then there was the University of California (Berkeley) student who said she opposed the draft "unless they took only white men over 65." Does this kind of talk reflect the maturity and common sense of today's campuses? In any event, this 66-year-old former soldier and even now a part-time soldier, will be delighted to oblige her and join the fight against communism.

The flag burners ought also listen to 20-year-old Teresita Lim at the Los Angeles California U. campus. She is two years removed from her native Philippines. "My brother is 19 and I know he'd be drafted if this country needs him. And, I'd like to join the Air Force."

The determined draft dodgers also should listen to happy-go-lucky Puerto Rican Chi Chi Rodriguez of professional golf fame. "If it becomes necessary," Chi Chi said during a recent tournament, "I'll be with the first to go fight for this country, the greatest country in the world."

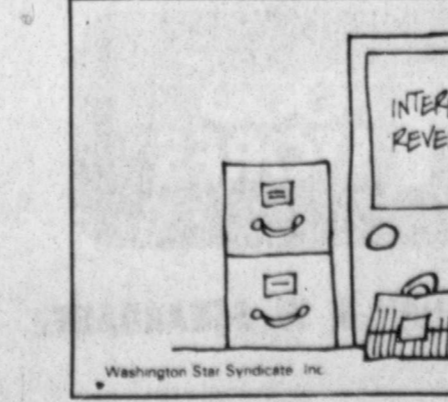

And, bear in mind, Chi Chi is 40.

One has to believe that the next thing the flag burners will do is what their predecessors did during the Vietnam period — parade with the enemy's flag lifted high and the American colors aflame.

But, there is one experience that would cure them, quickly and permanently, of such behavior. That is a two-year hitch with any one of hundreds of Army drill sergeants I have known. Several of my mountain hillbilly friends are the precise type of potential sergeants I have in mind.

Meanwhile, the campus crowd should bear one thing in mind. The "Canadian connection" that once was a refuge from patriotism and responsibility may not be available in the next go-around.

Gene research still lab art

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Those who tinker with genes and heredity—practitioners of a technology called recombinant DNA—are winning frequent headlines. But despite dramatic progress, their science remains more laboratory art than medical reality.

And that's why there's a muddy hole in the ground at the California Institute of Technology.

The hole will, in about two years, become a biomedical facility designed to learn how to use "these really striking breakthroughs" to understand, prevent and treat disease, said Dr. Leroy Hood, the research physician who will head Caltech's new Medical Science Program.

Recombinant DNA techniques for dissecting and rearranging genes promise to provide powerful new medical weapons that copy, improve or manipulate the natural drugs the body uses to fight disease.

"Caltech," Hood said, "has always been extremely good at guessing where the action is going to be in the future" and the prestigious school figures such medical applications are a very good guess.

Hood and his program will deal primarily with the immune system, the body's dazzlingly complex network of cells and chemicals that attack invading microbes and fight disease.

The scientific revolution being wrought by genetic engineers has produced "an explosion of information and insight into immunology, the likes of which has never been seen before," Hood said.

The medical potential is immense. Close at hand are such possible rewards as interferon, a natural substance many see as a wonder drug to fight diseases from colds to cancers. And Hood said scientists may even learn to redesign genes, improving on the body's natural pharmacy to produce such things as a super-interferon.

Beyond better drugs, Hood and other researchers hope eventually to harness the immune system—to be able to turn it on and direct it against a particular kind of cell, such as a colon cancer cell.

Hood said, "I'm quite convinced that recombinant DNA technology will, within the next 10 years, play a very fundamental role in allowing us to deal with cancer."

And some distant day, he said, doctors may even correct hereditary diseases by reaching into a patient's genetic heritage to turn off faulty genes and perhaps substitute healthy ones created artificially.

"That extremely delicate genetic engineering ... is a long way downstream, but it's the kind of thing we're aiming for."

The centerpiece of the Medical Science Program will be two remarkable machines designed by Hood and Caltech colleague Michael Hunkapiller. One is the world's most sensitive protein sequencer—a machine that maps the internal structure of proteins. Its companion, a DNA synthesizer designed to artificially produce pieces of genes, is still growing on Caltech drawing boards.

"This kind of instrumentation," he contends, "is going to open up a whole new world of experimentation we couldn't even look at before."

Genes, strands of DNA which carry the blueprints of life, tell each cell when and how to make proteins—substances that, among other vital chores, chemically supervise many functions. If genes are the body's architects, proteins are its foremen and workcrews.

The Caltech sequencer needs scarcely one ten-millionth of an ounce of protein to determine its internal structure. This supersensitivity—and Hood says a new version should be 20 times better—is invaluable on the frontiers of genetics.

The more potent the protein, the less the body needs to make. That means many of the most promising proteins can be obtained, at great difficulty and cost, only in minute amounts.

Interferon, for example, "works at a level of one molecule per cell," Hood said. The substance was discovered in 1957, but because of its scarcity no one had been able to map its interior until Hood and Hunkapiller announced in January their sequencer had sorted out about one-sixth of the protein and would soon complete the job.

Once a protein is mapped, scientists can work backwards to identify or synthesize the gene that produces it. Hood hopes to shortcut the slow task of isolating or building genes with a new machine.

"That's in the developmental stage. We think we can do it, but we don't have it done yet."

Ultimately, he said, the machine should be able to make entire artificial genes, spitting out pieces that could be stitched together to form the whole structure. The synthetic gene would then be spliced into bacteria that would become microscopic factories, mindlessly cranking out the desired protein.

But initially, Hood said, the machine would make a small piece of a gene—a DNA probe that could quickly identify and isolate the whole thing.

Hood envisions a center where top scientists from around the world could "come to have proteins sequenced, have probes made and maybe we can help them isolate the genes. Then they can take them home and study them."

Beyond the research value, however, the little probes could "absolutely revolutionize the way we do human genetics," he contends.

Through a simple blood test, probes for a variety of inherited diseases might identify dangerous but unexpressed genes that could be passed on to a patient's children.

Vermont citizens want dome built over city

WINOOSKI, Vt. (AP) — To the strains of "Dome Over Winooski," members of the Golden Onion Dome Club and hundreds of other residents are boosting a proposal to construct a giant energy-saving bubble over their small Vermont town.

Nearly 1,000 people turned out Wednesday night for the first session of a two-day International Dome Symposium, where an array of alternative technology experts are discussing the latest in domes.

Top billing went to R. Buckminster Fuller, inventor of the geodesic dome, who flew in from Brazil to lend his support.

"It is a wonderful thing that your community has stood up and said, 'Let's make some sense,'" the 85-year-old inventor told the symposium sponsored by the city and St. Michael's College. "I couldn't be more encouraged."

Winooski hasn't been quite the same since its community development office came up with the dome idea last year. A dome, they figured, would save energy and free Winooski's 7,000 residents from the inconvenience of the harsh Vermont winter — and the idea has drawn national attention.

Brendan Keleher, assistant director of community development, said his office has asked the federal government for $55,000 to study the plan.

No one yet has a good idea of what a dome might cost. "I like to think of Winooski as a place where new ideas are thought up all the time," said Ken Myers, president of the Golden Onion Dome Club.

"We've got to keep looking ahead," he said, as he played a tape recording of "Dome Over Winooski." Composed by a local English teacher, the song begins:

"Dome over Winooski,
Not far from the lake;
Transparent and plastic,
Still real and not fake."

Not everyone in Winooski is humming along, however. "Who's going to clean it?" demanded resident Sandy King. A dome, she added, would make people feel "really closed in."

Bo's Blow, manager of a beverage redemption center, agreed. "What happens if a plane lands on it or if God sends a 50-inch snowstorm to crush it?" he asked.

Keleher said those questions would be addressed by a feasibility study. If the federal study grant comes through, planners will have to decide whether a single dome covering all of the city's 1.3 square miles would be better than a series of smaller domes.

British royal family gets pay raise

LONDON (AP) — The British royal family came under fire again today after Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Tory government gave it a $1.3-million pay raise in a budget that makes the common folk pay more for medicine, drink, smokes and gasoline.

"Good Day for the Royals, Mean Day for the Rest," trumpeted a banner front-page headline in the mass-circulation Daily Mirror.

Veteran royalty-basher Willie Hamilton and other Labor members of the House of Commons promised to raise a storm.

Laborite Bob Cryer, from a working-class Yorkshire district, branded the budget "a kick in the teeth for the ill and the unemployed." Cryer cried loudest about a 30 percent pay hike for Queen Elizabeth II's daughter, Princess Anne, who got $195,000 of the taxpayers' money in the Civil List, the annual allowance given the royal family to maintain their palaces and perform public duties.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman admitted 29-year-old Anne got a 30 percent raise because she overspent her allowance last year by "several thousand pounds" and had to borrow from a bank to pay her debts. She ran into the red maintaining the $1.15-million Gloucestershire estate, Gatcombe Park, her mother gave her when she married Capt. Mark Phillips four years ago.

Princess Anne will have to work for her money by performing more official duties, a spokesman for the royal family said.

Altogether, Britain's first family will get $7.63 million this year, a 19 percent increase over last year in line with the current 19.1 percent inflation rate.

The queen herself gets a raise of $1.24 million, bringing her annual allowance to $6.26 million, most of it for staff salaries and for running Buckingham Palace and her other estates.

However, palace press secretary Michael Shea said the queen will dig deeper into her own purse this year, coming up with $570,400 from her personal fortune to help meet expenses, $82,800 more than last year.

Shea said the monarch isn't hiring palace staff these days to save money and "in the coming year we shall be making more economies."

That isn't likely to mean much to hardup Britons of the lower and middle classes, suffering from chronic inflation and increasingly tougher budget-cutting efforts to cure it.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe moved to tighten the national belt another notch Wednesday with what he said were "inescapable" cuts in government spending and increased taxes on drink, cigarettes and gasoline.

Labor Party leaders attacked proposed increases in the cost of prescriptions written by doctors of the state-run national health service, cuts in social security and a tax on sick benefits.

Prescription charges go up from $1.54 to $2.20 each, while new taxes increase the cost of a bottle of whisky from $11 to $12.10, a pack of cigarettes from $1.32 to $1.43 and an imperial gallon of gas from $2.71 to $2.93.

The imperial gallon is a fifth larger than the American gallon.

Labor Party leader James Callaghan said it was "the most socially-divisive budget since 1931." Len Murray, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, the British equivalent of the AFL-CIO, said it would plunge the nation "back into the '30s with a vengeance."

Among those hit hardest are the oil companies drilling in Britain's North Sea fields. Taxes on their profits jump from 52 percent to 70 percent.

Guerrillas attack four Israeli buses

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Arab guerrillas attacked four Israeli buses heading to pick up Arab workers in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River early today, a military spokesman said. The attackers firebombed one bus and smashed the windows of the other three, but no one was hurt.

Firing in the air, the three masked guerrillas stopped the first bus at a stone roadblock near Kfar Aboud, 15 miles east of Tel Aviv in a remote, hilly area of the West Bank.

After allowing its Arab driver to flee on foot, the guerrillas firebombed the bus, a military spokesman said. The three other buses arrived soon afterward and their Arab drivers also were allowed to escape before the guerrillas smashed the windows of the Israeli-owned vehicles. The last three buses were not burned, the spokesman said.

Israeli troops searched the rugged West Bank hills but failed to find the raiders, the military command said.

It was the most serious incident reported for some time in the West Bank, where feelings are running high against Israeli settlement policy and the proposed plan for Palestinian autonomy.

Arab saboteurs have frequently tried to disrupt the flow of West Bank workers to Israel, hoping to prevent Arabs from contributing to Israel's economy.

Bombs periodically explode near West Bank labor offices where workers sign up for jobs. Last summer 10 Arab laborers were wounded by a bomb tossed into a bus taking them to Israel.

Nevertheless, an estimated 100,000 Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza hold jobs in Israel, mostly in agriculture or manufacturing, constituting a significant portion of income in the occupied territories.

Primary voting shows public's patience wearing thin

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's twin setbacks in New York and Connecticut seem to signal growing voter frustration with his foreign policy, particularly his handling of the hostage crisis in Iran.

Although there likely was no single, overriding factor behind Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's upset of Carter in the New York and Connecticut primaries, a perception of Carter as a president confounded by foreign affairs may have hurt him badly in the two, generally liberal eastern states.

Inflation must have been a factor as well.

Nonetheless, it has been nearly five months since U.S. Embassy personnel were taken hostage by militant Islamic students in Tehran, and no breakthrough was imminent as voters went to the polls.

Carter has counseled patience, but the electoral reverses evidently demonstrate that patience is wearing thin. The president had counted on mediation of the crisis by the United Nations, but that strategy failed.

Even now, his hopes rest largely on election of a new Iranian parliament. But there's no certainty that will mean the Tehran government could — or would — crack down on the militants holding the Americans.

What also must be factored into any reading of New York and Connecticut is the ill-fated Carter administration vote in the United Nations Security Council in favor of a resolution condemning Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territories.

The vote angered Jews. Carter's subsequent disavowal of the March 1 vote did not cool the fires of resentment in heavily Jewish New York.

Even if the rush to Kennedy by Jews were discounted, Carter would very likely have lost both states.

Carter campaign manager Robert Strauss called the double loss "a dip in the road" toward the Democratic presidential nomination.

Strauss' expressed view didn't seem to conceal concerns within the Carter administration that the long stalemate in Iran and other soft foreign spots, including Afghanistan, could cost the president dearly at the polls.

Hardly a word was uttered on the New York campaign trail about Carter's inability to pressure the Soviets into removing their occupation forces from Afghanistan. The controversy over the United Nations vote on the Israeli resolution dominated the headlines.

But over the long haul, the nagging crisis in Iran may prove most troublesome for the president.

In the World Court, for instance, State Department legal adviser Roberts Owen observed gloomily last week that "no one in this courtroom has any way of knowing whether the Ayatollah Khomeini will continue to hold the hostages in captivity for a month, or for a year or for a decade."

Extension of the Iranian crisis by several more weeks could spell political trouble for Carter in the remaining primaries ahead.

In fact, an Associated Press-NBC News poll said that for the first time, since the Americans were seized last Nov. 4, less than half of the public approves of Carter's handling of the crisis.

Increasingly frustrated with the failure of the president's efforts, however, the public also is divided on whether Carter has taken every step possible to free the hostages, the poll said.

House panel voting on draft registration

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's draft registration plan appears headed for an important congressional victory that would erase the impact of an earlier setback and send the program to the House floor for debate.

The House Appropriations Committee scheduled a vote today on whether to give Selective Service $13.3 million — the amount needed to begin registering young men this summer. The president has legal authority to order registration for men, but needs money to revive the machinery for getting it done.

Administration officials said in advance they had enough votes to win in the committee, and later in the full House.

Opponents conceded they would lose in the committee, but claimed they still had a chance of killing the funding measure on the House floor.

"The vote count on the floor is very close," said David Landau, staff attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union. "The administration is close to a majority but they don't have it yet."

A victory for the administration in the full Appropriations Committee would nullify a vote by an Appropriations subcommittee a month ago against registration.

The subcommittee voted to give the administration $4.7 million — enough only for a standby plan in which registration would not be revived until the president ordered military mobilization in a national emergency.

Within days of the subcommittee's vote, all congressional action on registration came to a halt with the discovery that federal spending had exceeded the budget ceiling set by Congress. That put a freeze on Carter's request because registration could not be carried out without money.

Administration supporters, seeking a way around the spending freeze, came up with a plan to transfer to Selective Service money already appropriated for the Pentagon.

They also sought — and received — assurances that the plan would not run into a parliamentary objection with congressional budget committees, and that it stood a reasonable chance of winning approval in the Senate, according to sources who insisted on anonymity.

The month-long lull in congressional action was marked by an intense lobbying campaign by the administration.

Adult driver training school at MC in April

The Midland College Department of Community Services will be conducting a three-day adult driver training school at 7 p.m. April 14.

The three-hour course will be conducted in conjunction with the Department of Public Safety. Spanish-speaking and English-speaking classes will be limited to 65 persons.

The free course is designed to teach unlicensed drivers over 18 how to qualify for a Texas Drivers License.

Those interested in attending the school should bring their birth certificate and register at the Drivers License office at 2405 S. Holiday Hill Road.

Laura Kilburn

AUSTIN — Graveside services for Laura Kilburn, 58, of Austin, mother of Jorja King of Midland, were to be at 2:30 p.m. today in Oak Hill Cemetery in Austin with George Bomar, minister of the Oak Hill Church of Christ, officiating.

Burial was to be directed by Weed-Corley Funeral Home of Austin.

Mrs. Kilburn died Tuesday in an Austin hospital after a lengthy illness.

Other survivors include her husband; a daughter, two sisters, five grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Charles Allgood

BROWNWOOD — Services for Charles Ray Allgood, 47, of Brownwood, brother of Betty Holland of Midland, were Feb. 26 in the Faith Baptist Church here. Burial was in Eastlawn Memorial Park directed by Morelock Funeral Home.

Allgood died Feb. 24 in Brownwood following a lengthy illness.

He was born Jan. 16, 1933, in Brownwood. He was married to Virginia Ray Brooks May 18, 1952, in McCamey. He was a longtime resident of Brownwood. He served in the Army during the Korean War and later worked for Montgomery Ward Co.

Other survivors include his wife, two sisters, two sons, a daughter, his mother and his stepmother.

Frances Conner

Services for Frances Mozelle Conner, 52, 212 Club Drive, were Wednesday in Kevview Heights Baptist Church with the Rev. Frank Johnson, pastor, officiating. Burial was in Resthaven Memorial Park North.

She died Tuesday in an Odessa hospital after an illness.

Pallbearers were Chuck Collier, Elmer Caldwell, Shorty Light, Earl Brinlee, Bob Miller and David Jezek, Sr.

tration to round up support. Members of the Appropriations Committee were summoned to the White House at one point to hear Defense Secretary Harold Brown warn that rejection of registration would send a signal of U.S. weakness to the Soviet Union.

On the other side, opponents mobilized an anti-draft demonstration by an estimated 30,000 persons in the Capital last Saturday. They also visited and called congressional offices in search of votes to kill the bill.

In his original request, Carter asked Congress for $21.9 million, but that included about $8 million for registering women.

The House Armed Services manpower subcommittee has rejected authorizing the registration of women, and there appears little sentiment in Congress to override that decision.

Hospital seeks conversion permit for two rooms

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission will meet at 10 a.m. April 3 to consider an application by Martin County Hospital District in Stanton to convert two two-bed patient rooms to a three-bed intensive care, cardiac care recovery room.

The hospital plans to purchase a heart monitor, ventilator and intravenous pump for the room.

The meeting will be held at the THFC offices here at 1600 W. 38th St. The commission also approved an application by Memorial Hospital in Kermit to conduct a construction and renovation program.

The program will involve the radiology department, emergency room and support areas.

Suspect sought

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Dade County detectives were searching today for two men seen speeding away from a North Miami home where four persons were found slain in the county's third quadruple homicide this year.

The four deaths raised the county's homicide total to 102 in the first 85 days of the year, a figure well ahead of the pace leading to last year's record of 347 homicides, officials said.

The victims, three men and a woman, hadn't been identified by early today, authorities said, but were described as middle-aged.

Detectives said they didn't have enough information to tell if the shootings were related to the growing and often violent underworld struggle for smuggled drugs in Miami.

Two men were seen speeding away from the crime scene in a 1975 or 1976 blue automobile, detectives said. Witnesses told investigators the men had "a long-barreled weapon, possibly a rifle."

Election school set

City Secretary James McCullough announced today that an election school showing workers how to conduct the April 5 city, school, college and hospital elections will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

TMI hearings closed by PUC

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Hearings stemming from the Three Mile Island nuclear accident have ended with testimony before the Public Utility Commission about the cleanup at the crippled plant and the impracticality of converting the reactors to coal.

The record in the extensive four-month state investigation will be closed Friday, one year to the day after the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident ruined a TMI reactor and prolonged the shutdown of its twin.

At stake is whether customers should continue paying for the undamaged but idle reactor; whether Metropolitan Edison, the plant operator, should stay in business and how much Met Ed and its sister company, Pennsylvania Electric, should collect from customers to pay for replacement power.

Oral arguments in the case are scheduled next month, and preliminary and final rulings on all three issues are expected from the commission in May.

Two officers of General Public Utilities, the parent company of Met Ed and Penelec, testified Wednesday on the status of cleanup operations at the highly contaminated plant and the feasibility of converting one or both reactors to coal.

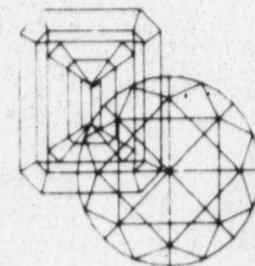

Bernard Cherry, GPU vice president for planning, said it would be impractical to convert either unit to coal. It would take a minimum of $1.4 billion and six years to convert each reactor to coal, with no federal funds available for such conversions, he said.

Starting from scratch, a new coal-fired plant built at a different site would take 9.5 years and cost $850 million to $900 million, he said.

Despite layoffs of 150 to 200 workers since January, court suits and regulatory actions, he said "I don't think there have been any significant delays in the cleanup."

DEAR ABBY

She set her own trap

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago Gary (not his real name) and I were married. I was 17 and Gary was 22. We agreed that I would work for two years and then quit and start a family. Well, I've been working for six years and Gary won't let me quit. He keeps buying things we can't afford; and I have to work to keep up the payments.

Now he says he doesn't want kids because they get on his nerves. He has a mean temper; he's twisted my arm and punched me out a few times. Once, after stumbling over our dog, he got so mad he cracked the dog in the mouth and three teeth fell out!

I'm an only child, and Gary takes me to see my folks once a week for one hour. He keeps looking at his watch all the time we're there, which hurts my folks but they don't say anything.

I feel trapped. I know this marriage was a mistake, but I married him against the advice of so many people, I'm ashamed to admit it.

Please help me, but don't suggest counseling. Gary won't go. — TRAPPED.

DEAR TRAPPED: What's "trapping" you? To spend the rest of your life in a hopeless marriage trying to prove you were "right," knowing you were wrong, is foolish. Take the dog (the four-legged one) and clear out while you're still childless.

DEAR ABBY: Last Christmas I bought a present for a male friend who is very special to me. When he came over I tried to give it to him, and he suggested I keep it under the tree until I take the tree down the day after New Year's.

Well, it's long after New Year's and he still refuses to open my gift or even take it with him! He says that doesn't mean he doesn't want it, he just wants to leave it until he is "ready" for it. I leave his gift out in sight so that every time he comes here, it will remind him, but he isn't ready to open it.

What do you think? — CONFUSED AND HURT.

DEAR CONFUSED: What appears to be ungracious behavior could mean he feels that he doesn't deserve your gift. Or he finds "thank-you's" so difficult, he delays them as long as possible.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for letting your readers know that trained pigeons still perform a valuable service.

During World War II, I was attached to the 9th Army as part of the Pigeon Signal Company, and when it was impossible to get messages through on radio, our pigeons carried messages across the Rhine.

Both sides used pigeons. Once near Brunswick, Germany, we captured about 2,000 German pigeons!

Pigeons are still used in London to deliver blood samples from the hospitals to the lab, as they are faster and cheaper than taxis. — (CPL.) HAROLD M. ROWLETTE.

20,000 persons sterilized in California involuntarily

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Involuntary sterilizations of more than 20,000 persons over a 60-year period in California went on with little publicity, a Richmond newspaper has reported.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch, in a copyright story today, quoted F. Burns Vick Jr. of the California Association for the Retarded as saying the practice was quick and easy.

"There was almost no comment. There was no objection at all," Vick told the newspaper.

The number of persons sterilized in California, including prison inmates and mental patients, is more than double the number in the second-leading state, Virginia, the newspaper said.

The newspaper's story followed the disclosure of some 7,000 involuntary sterilizations performed at Virginia mental institutions from 1924 to 1973. Some 5,000 people — epileptics, mentally ill and those labeled idiots, fools and feeble-minded — were sterilized at California's Sonoma State Hospital, the newspaper reported.

"It was one of the earliest and most vivid examples of science trying biomedical engineering under a tremendously distorted theory," said Dr. Jonas Robitscher, professor of psychiatry and law at Emory University in Atlanta.

Sterilization of state hospital inmates for other than medical reasons stopped in January when a law, which in part authorized the sterilization of anyone who deviated from normal mentality, was repealed.

The California law, which had been in effect since 1951, had many safeguards that reduced the number of sterilizations.

Eat right during National Nutrition Month

EDITOR'S NOTE: March is National Nutrition Month, and Midlanders are encouraged to focus on eating right, not just this month but year round. This is the last of several weekly articles from the West Texas Dietetic Association, Dairy Council Inc., and Midland Meals on Wheels by Elizabeth C. Glenn, registered dietitian, and Meals on Wheels director.

Milk—it's tasty and nutritious, too. Milk's most abundant nutrients are calcium, phosphorus, riboflavin (B12), protein and vitamin D.

To get the same amount of calcium in four servings of milk, you'd have to eat five pounds of beef, 10 pounds of bananas, almost five cups of green beans, or 15 slices of enriched bread. Wouldn't you rather enjoy a cup of Chocolate Steamer?

Everyone, even adults, needs calcium everyday. Children should have three or more glasses of milk (or the equivalent in cheese, yogurt, or ice cream). Teens need at least four servings while adults need two or more glasses of milk each day.

Here's some recipes for you:

ORANGE HONEY HERO

Put pudding makes a beverage.
4 cups milk
1/2 cup instant vanilla pudding and pie filling mix

6 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate
1 tablespoon honey

Combine milk, pudding mix, orange juice and honey; heat to serving temperature. Serve with an orange slice. Yield 4 3/4 cups.

CHOCOLATE STEAMER

Serve it instead of a dessert.

4 cups milk
2 tbsps. freeze-dried coffee

FOOD

2 tbsps. chocolate syrup
1/8 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1/2 tsp. brandy extract (optional)
Whipped Cream
Chocolate curls

Combine milk, coffee, syrup and salt. Heat to serving temperature. Add vanilla and brandy extract, if desired. Serve topped with whipped cream and chocolate curls. Yield: 1 quart.

BUTTERSCOTCH MARSHMALLOW WARMER

Bits o'butterscotch melted in milk

1/2 cup butterscotch pieces colored marshmallows

Heat together milk and butterscotch pieces, stirring occasionally, until butterscotch pieces are melted. Serve topped with small colored marshmallows. Yield: 4 cups.

All nutrition is important and much food value can be lost by improper cooking. Economy does not end with proper menu planning, buying and storage of foods. Here are more economy hints:

ECONOMY HINTS FOR COOKING

Save meat juices and drippings after fat has been skimmed off to use in other cooking. Date label and freeze if not to be used in a few days. Check with your menus.

Use raw or cooked fruits and vegetables with the skin or peel very thin. The skin contains a lot of mineral and vitamin content.

To retain vitamins, use as little liquid in the cooking as possible. Do not overcook! The ideal method is to steam the vegetables.

Save leftover vegetable cooking water to use in soups and sauces when recipe calls for liquid. Label, date and freeze if not used in a few days.

You can eliminate failure by using accurate measurements and tested recipes.

Foods prepared in the home are usually less expensive than ready-to-eat foods. Examples are rolls, breads and cereals.

In cooking, substitute inexpensive forms of milk for fresh milk (evaporated or powdered non-fat milk) and use fortified margarine for butter.

Use leftover bits of food in soups or in combination with other foods at one time and in quantity. Then freeze and use as desired.

Purchasing prepared foods in the delicatessen is an expensive practice.

Freeze any leftover portions of vegetables layering on top of each other

Handy food tips

When baking apples, choose a variety that holds its shape when baked. Yellow delicious apples are available in most supermarkets all year round and tend not to fall apart when cooked. They have a delicate flavor. Cortland apples, though not so widely available, are also good for baking.

cooked eggs (peeled) lengthwise down the center of meat, pressing down slightly. Put remaining meat on top and wrap bacon across the top.

Preheat oven to 350-degrees. Cover pan with aluminum foil. Set in a baking pan with hot water reaching halfway up the side of the pan. Bake for 1-1/4 hours, until meat juices run clear. Let stand uncovered for 30 minutes. Pour off fat. Cover and put weights on top. Refrigerate 24 hours. To serve, remove from pan and trim off excess fat. Cut in 1/2-inch slices and serve with gherkins and onions.

Stuffed eggs on salad greens along with cherry tomatoes and snap beans vinaigrette make a substantial and delicious luncheon salad for guests. To prepare the beans vinaigrette douse cooked fresh or canned snap beans with a dressing of oil, vinegar, prepared mustard and salt and pepper.

If you use an electric blender to grind blanched or unblanched almonds, grind no more than about half a cup at a time to keep the nuts from becoming oily.

To keep the strong red color of paprika, store it in an airtight container in the refrigerator.

UFOs taken seriously

Copley News Service

Did you know that most Americans take unidentified flying objects (UFOs) seriously?

A recent poll shows that nearly 90 percent of Americans keep an open mind about the possibility of UFOs. An influx of newspaper articles and investigations of apparent close encounters have made people think more seriously about the subject, it seems.

About 35 percent of the people polled believe in UFOs, and at least 10 million Americans claim to have actually seen one, including some high-level government and business people.

Use pork in preparing pates

By MERLE ELLIS

With pork prices as reasonable as they have been of late, and pork as good as it always has been, I find myself eating a lot of it lately. As is usually the case whenever you eat a lot of something, you usually have some of that something left over. That has certainly been the case at my house lately.

It is not at all unusual, at the end of any given period of time, to have an accumulation of leftover pork in the refrigerator. Bits and pieces of leftover pork chops, roasts, steaks, perhaps a sausage or two, maybe even some of it uncooked because one of the kids got a better offer and wasn't at home for a meal.

Leftover pork, fresh or cooked, is an ideal and versatile ingredient with which any imaginative cook can work miracles, miracles that the French call pates (PAH-tay).

The term "pate" is used rather loosely these days. Originally a pate, whatever it was made from, was baked in a pastry crust.

Any kind of cooked leftover pork, without bones, can be used to make a type of pork pate that in a French country kitchen is called rillettes. The meat is chopped into small pieces and put in a baking dish. Enough water is added to cover the meat, along with salt and pepper and, in some cases, a minced onion and a few cloves of garlic. The mixture is then roasted uncovered, in a 250-degree oven for several hours (4 or 5) until all of the water evaporates and the pork turns a rich brown color and starts to fall apart.

With the mixture at room temperature — if you want to be authentic — pound it into a paste in a mortar. A more convenient modern method is to put the mixture through a meat grinder, or use your electric blender or food processor to turn it into a paste. Press the mixture into individual serving crocks and top each with a thin layer of clarified butter. Chill for several hours. Serve with toast for a delightful and inexpensive breakfast or luncheon dish or as a first course at a dinner party. You won't even know you're eating leftovers.

For those of you who would rather start from scratch and work with a proven recipe, here are a couple that were given to me by Yvonne Boulteray, a charming French lady who lives and teaches cooking classes in the wine country of Northern California.

LIVER PATE

1-1/2 lbs. beef or pork liver
1/2 lb. ground pork fat
1-1/2 lbs. ground pork
3 slices pork fat
3 medium bay leaves,
1/3 cup brandy,
1 tsp. pepper
1 T. thyme
1 tsp. basil (dry or 1 T. fresh)
2 eggs
1 T. salt
1 large chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 T. chopped parsley
1 T. flour
1/2 cup whipping cream

Grind liver and let stand in cream for 1 hour. Meanwhile, grind the pork fat with the pork. Sauté onion in 1 tablespoon of butter for 5 minutes. Add garlic, parsley, basil and thyme. Remove from heat.

Add the liver and cream to the meat, along with eggs, salt, pepper, flour and brandy. Mix all ingredients well (using a mixer will help).

Place the 3 slices of pork fat in the bottom of a loaf pan. Pour in meat mixture. Add bay leaves on top. Seal with foil. Cover tightly. Place in a pan of boiling water with the water about half the depth of the loaf pan. Bake for 1-1/2 hours at 350 degrees.

Pate may be served straight from the cooking dish. If you do this, remove the foil 20 minutes before the end of cooking time so that the top can brown appetizingly. Cool for an hour, then weight it gently.

Remember, though, that it will taste better the next day.

PORK AND SPINACH PATE

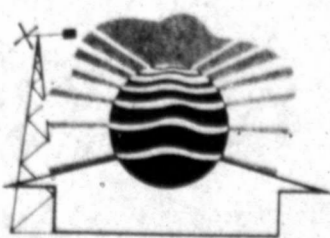

1 lb. boneless pork, untrimmed (leave fat)
1/2 lb. boneless veal
6 slices bacon
3 hard-cooked eggs
1 C. chopped onion
3 cloves garlic, minced
1 T. butter
1-1/2 C. fresh spinach, chopped
3 T. brandy
1 egg
1 tsp. basil
1 tsp. rosemary
1/2 tsp. thyme
1-1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. fennel seeds, crushed
1/2 tsp. pepper
Sour gherkins (or cornichons)
Pickled onions

Cut meat into small pieces and chop fine in food processor meat grinder. Sauté onion and garlic in butter. Add spinach and cook for a minute.

Put the spinach mixture in a bowl and stir in the chopped meat. Add brandy, egg and seasonings. Mix well. Arrange bacon across bottom and side of 8-1/2 x 4-1/2-inch loaf pan, letting slices hang over edge. Put half of meat mixture into pan. Arrange hard-

Hilton's chef Irish, easy-going

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

The typical chef—he's French, temperamental, and has a long list of titles following his name. Timothy O'Harra isn't typical. He's Irish and easy-going for one thing. And more concerned about doing a good job than adding titles to his name.

The new Midland Hilton chef said that he developed an interest in the culinary art at a young age. "I trained underneath my grandfather. He was an old Irishman, a pretty good chef," he said.

"I did everything then from washing pots to waiting on tables." He added that there isn't any part of the restaurant field in which he hasn't been involved. He worked in California for 16 years before moving to Texas, where he was employed in Houston. He worked for Associated Hosts, the Sheraton and River Plantation Country Club there.

He has also worked as general manager of an establishment, but went back to being a chef because he liked it better.

"I enjoy working with the food and the people," he said. "People are always happy when they're eating."

His daily schedule at the Hilton is a busy one. He rises while most of Midland is still sleeping, getting lined up for the breakfast crowd. He then makes schedules, orders food, and makes sure preparations are ready for the day's scheduled banquets and for the coffee shop and dining rooms.

He sometimes works until 10 p.m., depending on whether he has to prepare for a convention. He regularly works six days a week, and sometimes seven.

He is responsible for 10 outlets at the Hilton and sometimes it's a difficult job juggling food for these many areas.

"It's a hard job with long hours, but it's satisfying to me," he said. "The public can be harsh, but it is also rewarding."

O'Harra claims that he has no specialties. "I am always being asked that question, but it's true—there's no one thing that I like to prepare in particular because I like it all."

It's also difficult for him to give out his recipes because he usually has no set ingredients. "A pinch of this, a dash of that—that's how I work," he says.

"I go more by taste, look and smell than anything else."

Some of the highlights of his work since arriving has been the preparations for the larger banquets. He has done elaborate ice, tallow and butter carvings and other decorative workings.

For one affair, he had six-foot mirrors installed around the buffet table, made designs with the food and prepared a huge assortment of hors d'oeuvres.

In addition to his regular schedule at the Hilton, he also runs the catering and special bookings by downtown civic groups and other special events.

He has made an effort to keep the lunch crowd happy, too. "I'm just as concerned with the lunch crowd as any other crowd because they're here everyday," he said. "We need those people, too."

He's made a few changes since he arrived at the Hilton. The dining room has gone back to serving flambe style, with food prepared at the table instead of in the kitchen. He believes that the quality of food has also improved.

He worries about food costs, as always. "I have to make the meals good, but I have to do it within our costs and the customer's cost, too. It was the same 20 years ago, but is even more true today."

He is a member of the Texas Chef Association, a prestigious group, and the American Culinary Federation. He is an Executive Chef, but is working on obtaining the necessary credits to obtain the Certified Executive Chef title, his ultimate goal. "To get that, you've got to have years of experience in everything from menu planning to pot washing. I've done all of it, but still have to go to some culinary food shows," he said.

O'Harra, who lives alone, says that he avoids cooking for entertainment and doesn't cook much at home, either. "I guess I cook bachelor-style," he said. He does occasionally enjoy preparing a barbecue meal for entertainment.

"And I like to eat out, but never really get to enjoy it because I'm in the business and am always judging everything," he said.

"I do enjoy seeing what others are doing, however," he said. He never criticizes or complains because he knows what other employees are going through. "But if the meal is exceptional, I'll make a point of going to the kitchen and complimenting the chef."

He enjoys his staff and encourages those who are interested in the business. He has several high school students from the Vocational Adjustment program in the Midland Independent School District working in his kitchen.

"I've got one student who is cooking now. He started out as a dishwasher," he said. He tells of another one who began as a dishwasher years ago and has followed him in his career. "Most just need patience and guidance," he said.

"Some of the students can't read or write that well, but they can do other things here that are exceptional," he said.

Here are some of his recipes:

BLUEBERRY PIE

- 1/3 cup of sugar
- 1 1/2 tsp. salt
- 1/5 tsp. cinnamon
- 1 1/2 cups blueberries in water

Handy food tips

A basic way to make a sauce from broiled fish, roast poultry or meat drippings is to add liquid to the pan in which the fish or meat has been cooked. Set the pan over low heat and use a wooden spoon to scrape the drippings from the bottom of the pan. Use the sauce as is or reduce it for concentrated flavor.

- 1 1/4 tbsp. butter
 - 1 1/2 tbsp. flour
 - 1. Combine sugar, flour, salt and cinnamon.
 - 2. Stir combination into liquid drained from berries.
 - 3. Heat mixture, stirring constantly until thick and smooth.
 - 4. Add berries and butter, mixing gently.
 - 5. Pour into unbaked pastry shell and cover with top crust.
 - 6. Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees) for 30 minutes or until well-browned.
- Optional: 1 tsp. lemon juice may be added for flavor, if desired.

CHEESE CACHE CHICKEN

- 1. Take chicken breast and bone it.
- 2. Cut pocket in breast.
- 3. Place one strip of Monterey Jack Cheese in pocket.
- 4. Place sprig of sage in with cheese.
- 5. Roll in flour.
- 6. Dip breast in mixture of: egg batter, parmesan cheese, salt, white pepper and chopped parsley.
- 7. Sauté in hot skillet until browned.
- 8. Cool down.
- 9. Bake in oven at 375 degrees for 10-15 minutes.

Cocoa is basis of desserts for diet-conscious

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Many of us who are trying to lose weight resolutely shun chocolate. It's not necessary to pass it up.

I recently discovered that cocoa, a basic ingredient for many desserts, has the lowest fat content of any chocolate product.

I refer to untreated cocoa, when used with skim milk instead of whole milk, and with an artificial sweetener substituted for sugar.

The Western world first learned about the cocoa bean in 1519 when Spanish explorer Hernando Cortez was invited to the palace of Aztec Emperor Montezuma in Mexico.

Chocolate soon became popular in Europe, but the beverage had little similarity to what we drink today. Grainy sugared cakes of sweet chocolate were mixed with hot water for a thick beverage rich with the fat of roasted cocoa beans.

This changed in the 19th century when the Dutch invented a primitive cocoa press which squeezed and filtered fresh-ground cocoa beans to extract the liquid cocoa butter, leaving a dry, low-fat cake of hard cocoa.

Milk chocolate candy and cocoa were brought to their present peak in the United States by Milton Snavely Hershey, who opened a factory in Pennsylvania in 1900.

Cocoa powder today is used not only for drinks but as a substitute for chocolate in desserts, especially if you are dieting.

MOCHA FLUFF

1 envelope unflavored

- gelatine
- 2 cups skim milk
- 1/4 cup cocoa
- 1 tablespoon instant coffee granules
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- Sweetener equal to 1-3rd cup sugar
- 1/4 cup non-dairy topping, whipped

In saucepan, sprinkle gelatine over milk. Stir to soften. Add cocoa and coffee. Heat over low heat, stirring, till gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat. Stir in vanilla and sweetener. Chill until slightly thickened. Place container over ice in large bowl. Whip with electric mixer or rotary beater till doubled in volume. Spoon into dessert dishes. Chill till set. Garnish with whipped topping. Serves 6.

Fredrici's golden cheesecake is a spring delight

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

The quintessential cheesecake — golden in color and rich in eggs — is perfect for springtime entertaining. It's high and handsome enough to serve, garnished with fresh daffodils, on a footed compote.

In vogue in recent years have been recipes for cheesecake with a top layer of sour cream. We've baked some of these and they're delicious. But recently we came on a young cook whose favorite recipe calls for adding sour cream to the cheese mixture.

The beauty of this cheesecake is that it may be served right after it has completely cooled at room temperature. It takes to chilling too, so if you like you can make it well ahead of serving. Whether you prefer the fluffy texture of the room-temperature cheesecake to the creamier texture of the chilled cheesecake is a matter of taste.

FRANCINE FREDRICI'S CHEESECAKE

- 1 1/2 cups fine graham cracker crumbs
- 1 3/4 cups sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 5 tablespoons butter, melted
- 6 large eggs, separated
- 18 ounces cream cheese, at room temperature
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- Pinch of salt
- 1 1/2 cups commercial sour cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Stir together the graham cracker crumbs, 1/4 cup of the sugar, the cinnamon and butter. Press over bottom and 2 inches up sides of a buttered 9-by-3-inch springform pan.

In a medium bowl with an electric mixer, beat egg whites until they hold stiff straight peaks when the beater is slowly withdrawn. Gradually beat in 1/2 cup of the sugar; continue beating, if necessary, until whites hold stiff straight glossy peaks when the beater is slowly withdrawn. Reserve.

In the large bowl of the mixer, without washing beaters, at medium speed beat together until blended the cream cheese, flour, salt and the remaining 1 cup sugar; gradually beat in egg yolks until blended; add the sour cream and vanilla and beat until blended. Fold in the reserved egg-white mixture. Turn into the prepared pan.

Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until golden, puffed and cracked — 1 hour; mixture will rise above the rim of the pan. Turn off oven and let cake stand in the closed oven for 1 hour. Remove to a wire rack and cool completely. (Cheesecake will settle and cracks will be barely discernible.) With a spatula, loosen edges; remove springform band. Serve at room temperature or chilled. Makes 12 servings.

Junta asks Interpol for help

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's junta asked Interpol for help in investigating the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, as the U.S. government evacuated some 20 relatives of its employees from the Central American country as a precaution against further violence.

Junta member Majano said the killing could have been the work of extreme leftists who hoped to provoke a popular uprising or of rightists seeking vengeance against Romero for his outspoken advocacy of social reform.

Col. Adolfo Arnaldo Majano, a member of the junta, told reporters Wednesday that "technical experts" from Interpol had been requested to help probe the killing of Romero, shot by an assassin Monday as the archbishop was preparing to say Mass in a hospital chapel.

Police estimated some 5,000 priests, nuns and followers of Romero marched with the archbishop's body Wednesday from the Sacred Heart Basilica about 20 blocks to the Metropolitan Cathedral in downtown San Salvador.

The evacuation of the dependants of American employees in El Salvador was the latest in a series of security measures. Non-essential embassy employees have been withdrawn in recent months and a travelers' advisory has been issued warning Americans that a dangerous situation exists.

The marchers ran for cover at one point when shots were fired into the air as national guardsmen tried to arrest leftists distributing leaflets blaming the Defense Ministry for Romero's slaying. Several priests helped restore calm and persuaded the guardsmen to release the youths.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said in Washington that there are 25 U.S. diplomats in El Salvador, excluding U.S. foreign aid personnel. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance has said the United States still plans to give military and economic aid to El Salvador despite the Romero slaying.

When the marchers arrived at the cathedral a priest said a brief Mass.

Meanwhile, Salvadoran leftists called for eight days of mourning beginning today with a four-day national strike.

The body was placed on the main altar where Romero preached his weekly Sunday sermons that usually denounced repression and violence in El Salvador and called for social and economic reforms to aid the poor.

The strike call came from the Revolutionary Coordinating Committee of the Left Wing, representing four leftist groups fighting to establish a socialist government in El Salvador. The committee said it was "on a war-footing from today on."

Mourners lined up six abreast outside the cathedral to view Romero's body. The casket was closed, with the upper part of the body visible through a glass window.

Junta member Jose Napoleon Duarte said: "This government is not at war. We reiterate our call for peace." Another junta member, Jose Antonio Morales Erlich, denied that the government was responsible for Romero's slaying, as charged by some leftist and rightist groups.

Roman Catholic Church and U.S. Embassy officials have said the archbishop was killed by an expert marksman who may have been a right-wing Cuban exile.

Crime boss has stately funeral

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Angelo Bruno, who reputedly ran the city's numbers and loan-sharking rackets, was given a stately funeral then buried at a family plot beneath a simple gravestone.

"Money, fame and power" could not protect Bruno "against a fate that awaits every man and woman," said the Rev. John Dieckman in a brief eulogy during Wednesday's Mass of Christian Burial at the Epiphany of Our Lord Roman Catholic Church.

The 69-year-old Sicilian immigrant was killed Friday night by two shotgun blasts in the back of his head as he sat in an automobile in front of his south Philadelphia home talking to a friend. Police say there are no suspects.

"We tend to cast too many stones, too often trying to be judge, jury and executioner," Dieckman told some 250 friends and relatives, including Bruno's wife, Sue, and his two children at the 35-minute service.

"It is not for us to judge. We should show Angelo compassion as we commend him to the Lord. Let him be loved," he said.

Outside the church, more than 1,000 people jockeyed with reporters, photographers and TV cameramen for a view.

Volcano not only 'new activity' in area

By PAT CONNOLLY

KID VALLEY, Wash. (AP) — Curiosity-seekers and reporters are having more of an impact on the people who live at the foot of petulant Mount St. Helens than the earthquakes that have rumbled underground the past week.

In fact, the subterranean throbbing — which some worry may signal an eruption — is helping business in a tiny Kid Valley restaurant.

Ed and Barbara Brown, who run the four-table cafe, said a tremor Wednesday slammed the door shut and rattled dishes, but a sleeping piebald cat on the porch hardly stirred.

"Shucks," said Mrs. Brown. "I'm not nervous. Heck, why worry about it?"

Besides, she said, "I'd say business has about doubled, counting reporters, sheriffs' deputies and the state patrol."

Brown said he's noticed an increase in the number of cars with Oregon license plates driving up the highway, "and it couldn't be anything but curiosity-seekers."

They both laughed at the suggestion that Kid Valley might bolster its economy with a sweat-shirt, beer mug and bumper-sticker industry commemorating the underground wobbles.

The crest of the mountain was mantled in thick, gray clouds and was visible for only fleeting moments Wednesday. The clouds poured rain on the lowlands and snow on upper reaches of the mountain.

Skamania County Sheriff's Deputy George Barker turned back all but reporters at a point about seven miles down the road from the mountain. Authorities put up the roadblock as a precaution against avalanches.

A group of men who own homes and cabins up the road were angry when told they could not drive to their property to turn off gas and retrieve personal items.

"I can't believe how they can stop you from going to your own property," said Dwight Sutherland. "They are asking for a lawsuit."

Complained Randy Anshutz: "I wouldn't be up there 10 minutes. I wished they'd let me go."

About 100 cabins and summer homes sit in deep spring snow around the Spirit Lake Lodge beneath Mount St. Helens.

Highway 504, a two-lane winding road, is the only access.

One homeowner, Roy Ford of Kelso, called his insurance man Wednesday and took out an earthquake policy. He doesn't know if it was effective immediately or not.

Earthquake activity 'eases' some SPRIT LAKE, Wash. (AP) — Earthquake activity on Mount St. Helens had eased slightly by early today, as scientists prepared to check seismograph stations on the mountain and continued to speculate on the likelihood of volcanic eruptions.

Local officials, with assistance from government geologists, planned for evacuation in case eruptions sent lava or mud flows cascading into mountain valleys and streams. Volcanic ash also could pose a danger to local water supplies.

Rhonda Brooks, coordinator with the Washington Department of Emergency Services, said the quakes were less frequent and intense, but half a dozen tremors still registered between 3.0 and 4.0 on the Richter scale Wednesday afternoon.

The pattern of quake activity is similar to that which often precedes volcanic activity in Japan, said scientists. But they said there is no seismic history for 9,677-foot St. Helens and they could only guess what the quakes mean.

A geologist at Portland State University, Leonard Palmer, said "eruption is imminent...it could appear within days." But he later said the situation was "less threatening" and conceded: "We just don't know what it will do."

The mountain last erupted in 1857.

Donald Mullineaux of the U.S. Geologic Survey said St. Helens "has been virtually through a full range of kinds of volcanic eruptions in the past. We don't see why it couldn't do the same in the future."

He flew from Denver to Vancouver, Wash., about 40 miles southwest of the mountain, to more closely monitor the peak and met with Cowlitz and Skamania county officials to discuss evacuation plans.

"There could be major flooding," he said. "There could be thick pumice and ash falls. There could be hot flows of rock fragments down the side of the mountain."

Four teams of two persons each were to recover information taken at remote sites on the flanks of Mount St. Helens, said David Johnston of the U.S. Geologic Survey, University of Washington seismographic machines have been fed by two seismographic taps into the mountain. Information from the remote sites "will refine our present observations," said Johnston.

Saturday mail service threatened

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans could either pay higher postage rates or do without Saturday mail delivery under the proposed budget cut for the Postal Service, Postmaster General William Bolger says.

A one-cent increase in first-class rates, already scheduled to take effect next year, could come sooner if the cut is approved, Bolger told the House Post Office Committee on Wednesday.

The alternative would be to eliminate Saturday deliveries, a move that would eliminate 15,000 to 20,000 jobs, mostly urban letter carriers, he said. Post office window service would not be affected, he said.

The House Budget Committee recommended last week that $836 million be cut from the Carter administration's proposed 1981 budget for the post office.

Bolger refused to criticize the cut, saying, "It is not my place to tell the Congress what it should do with the taxpayers' money."

But the committee chairman, Rep. James M. Hanley, D-N.Y., was not so reticent. "I was appalled at the lack of wisdom by the Budget Committee," he said.

Wynette may be released

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Country singer Tammy Wynette, deluged by cards and flowers from well-wishers, may be released today from a hospital where she was taken Sunday night for stomach pains.

She was hospitalized after complaining of severe abdominal pains following two performances in Beaumont.

Doctors at St. Elizabeth's Hospital listed her in very satisfactory condition. Miss Wynette's husband and manager, George Richey, said she was suffering from chronic stomach adhesions, for which she has had corrective surgery five times.

He said his wife's doctors reported no surgery was required this time but recommended two or three days' rest.

Robbers take gold, gems

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Two well-dressed gunmen made off with an estimated $1 million in gold, gems and jewelry from the Kharouba Gem Shop after handcuffing two employees.

Bellevue police reported no leads in the Wednesday morning heist.

Shop owner Clare Brown said the loss from the robbery far outstripped her $150,000 insurance coverage from Lloyd's of London. The shop also lost $153,000 in a 1978 robbery.

"There's no way, when you keep getting robbed, that you can ever get ahead in this business," she said.

The robbery occurred about 10 a.m. Wednesday when two men pulled guns on two employees, handcuffed them and sent them into a bathroom in the rear of the shop.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Hospital programs can do much to allay children's fears

Dear Dr. Solomon: Several years ago when I was scheduled for a gallbladder operation, I was very anxious and concerned. That was nothing, however, compared with my feelings now that my 6-year-old son is scheduled for a hernia operation. I have tried to relieve his anxiety as best I can without lying to him about what to expect. But the hospital atmosphere itself is as foreboding. I don't know what else I can do. Aren't there many steps a hospital can take to ease the fears of a child about to undergo surgery? — Mrs. J.K.

Dear Mrs. K.: Many hospitals today recognize the need — and are taking steps — to make the hospital experience for children less anxiety-provoking. For example, the Journal of the American Medical Association reports that the Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City has a weekly lemonade party to which all youngsters scheduled for surgery the following week are invited. Parents, brothers and sisters also are welcome at the party.

The children dress up as doctors and nurses, use stethoscopes on each other and generally familiarize themselves with the hospital equipment.

They are taken through the X-ray department as well as the pediatric intensive care unit, and are shown the anesthetic machine and masks. Probably most important, nurses are there to answer questions for the children and their parents.

Those attending the party also watch a film which shows what a child undergoing surgery will experience, and the language used in the film is designed to reduce anxiety. For example, the operation is not described as a procedure for taking something out — terminology a child might find extremely upsetting — but as fixing something up. An anesthesiologist is shown using a puppet to distract a child while the anesthetic is being administered before the operation.

The program of the Salt Lake City Hospital is not at all unusual. In fact, many hospitals throughout the country are using similar techniques to help alleviate a child's fears of surgery. I suggest that you make inquiry at the hospital to which your son is to be admitted to see if a similar approach is used there. It might be advisable to start by contacting the institution's social work department.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I suffer an occasional attack of hemorrhoids for which my doctor says I may eventually need surgery. I would like to know what causes the condition and whether there is any kind of diet I can undertake to help avoid an operation. — Mr. D.S.R.

Dear Mr. R.: Hemorrhoids are veins that have ruptured or become distended. The most common cause of the condition is strain on the abdominal muscles because of heavy lifting, pregnancy, obesity or constipation.

From a dietary standpoint, I would suggest the intake of large amounts of fluid to help avoid constipation.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Riles death penalty upheld

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Death Row inmate Raymond G. Riles lost an appeal Wednesday of his capital murder conviction in the Feb. 11, 1974, slaying of Harris County auto dealer John Thomas Henry.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld a Houston jury's verdict that Riles killed Henry and must die for it.

Henry was shot and robbed at his John Henry Motor Co.

Testimony indicated Riles got involved in another man's dispute with Henry over the condition of a recently purchased car and shot Henry. As the victim lay on the pavement, Riles stood over him and demanded his money, then fled, witnesses said.

Riles' first conviction was overturned by the court, but his second trial also resulted in a death verdict.

On appeal, Riles complained that the trial judge allowed prosecutors to read from a psychiatrist's deposition portions that showed Riles was on death row during an interview.

The reading from the deposition followed the psychiatrist's testimony concerning Riles' "disturbed psychological condition," and the court said it was proper for the state to bring out the circumstances of the interview.

"We find the evidence and argument were both proper efforts to place the doctor's opinion in perspective with respect to the more recent events that he admitted would affect the condition observed by him, and the reliability of applying those observations to the issue of appellant's (Riles') sanity at the time of the offense," the high court said.

Like to get well?

AFTERWARDS Jesus returned to Jerusalem for one of the Jewish religious holidays.

Inside the city, near the Sheep Gate, was Bethesda Pool, with five covered platforms or porches surrounding it.

Crowds of sick folks—lame, blind, or with paralyzed limbs—lay on the platforms (waiting for a certain movement of the water.

For an angel of the Lord came from time to time and disturbed the water, and the first person to step down into it afterwards was healed).

One of the men lying there had been sick for 38 years. When Jesus saw him and knew how long he had been ill, He asked him, "Would you like to get well?"

"I can't," the sick man said, "for I have no one to help me into the pool at the movement of the water. While I am trying to get there, someone else always gets in ahead of me."

Jesus told him, "Stand up, roll up your sleeping mat and go on home!"

Instantly, the man was healed! He rolled up the mat and began walking! But it was on the Sabbath when this miracle was done.

So the Jewish leaders objected. They said to the man who was cured, "You can't work on the Sabbath! It's illegal to carry that sleeping mat!"

"The man who healed me told me to," was his reply. "Who said such a thing as that?" they demanded.

The man didn't know, and Jesus had disappeared into the crowd.

But afterwards Jesus found him in the Temple and told him, "Now you are well; don't sin as you did before, or something even worse may happen to you."

Then the man went to find the Jewish leaders and told them it was Jesus who had healed him.

So they began harassing Jesus as a Sabbath breaker.

But Jesus replied, "My Father constantly does good, and I'm following His example."

Retiree builds own rail depot

PRINCETON, W.Va. (AP) — Clayton Jones took a piece of his profession and put it in his back yard.

The 61-year-old retired railroad man has built an old-fashioned train station, complete with spittoon, benches, plastic people and even a check-board game in the stationmaster's office.

"What I've got here, money wouldn't buy it," says Jones, who worked 35 years for Norfolk & Western before retiring eight years ago.

"Right here, this old safety sign — this come off an old Virginia Railroad station. And here, this old wagon, we'd use it for milk, or corpses, or other freight," Jones said.

Jones started working for the railroad when he was 18. "I hung around the station and learned telegraphing from an old trainmaster when I was a kid."

His back-yard station contains a telegraph operator's desk. "All the old telegraph operators, they've all passed away practically. I'm the only one left," Jones said.

Pointing to an antique radio next to a picture of singer Roy Acuff, Jones said, "I've got this old radio hooked up so that when I push this switch, Acuff's voice comes out singing 'The Wabash Cannonball.'"

His home sits above the N&W train yard, and he listens for the familiar rumbles and whistles.

That pesky pooch did it — honest!

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Eric Nystrom will have to go to state officials to get a new tax refund check. His reason — the dog ate it. Honest.

Nystrom, 20, son of State Sen. Jack Nystrom, returned home Monday night and found that his 7-month-old basset hound, Alice, had mangled his Iowa income tax refund check for $195.16.

Alice declined to eat the portion of the check declaring the amount due, but she did consume the rest, making it non-negotiable. Nystrom, R-Boone, says he and his son pondered what to do.

One idea, he said, was to see if the consumed portion of the check could be recovered... ah, that is, to see if Alice digested the paper.

They waited a while with no result. Nystrom said he would approach state officials to get a new check. "I'm going to tell them that the first one was no good, that it didn't pass," he joked.

His store an ageless setting

TARZAN — The conversation is as ageless as it is age-old: "Reckon it's going to rain?" "I don't know. I sure hope so."

And the type of setting is almost as old as the plow that turns the soil that sprouts the food that keeps the human race alive: the country store where farmers and ranchers and travelers along the rural roads drop by to chat among themselves and with the storekeeper.

In olden times, they bartered. Today, they exchange paper money and sans-silver coins for goods and services. But mostly, they swap talk and a few tales.

IN THIS CASE, the grocer-hardware keeper is Allen Springer, who grew up with a family of storekeepers and farmers at Lenorah and who, after banging around West Texas and trying out the big-city life for a while, returned to home country.

"We (Springer and his wife, blonde Gayle) lived in practically every town in West Texas — Big Spring, San Angelo, Lubbock, Odessa, Midland...Tarzan and Lenorah."

He was into construction work. But that wasn't his life's task.

"We were wanting to do this (run a country store) when we first got married" 11 years ago, allowed Springer. "And when the opportunity came, we jumped at it."

The opportunity presented itself last October, when J.B. "The

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

Little Dutchman" Shewmake, who already was busy preaching, driving a school bus and doing office work at the Grady School midway between Tarzan and Lenorah in Martin County, sold the store to Springer, who dubbed it Allen's Grocery.

HIS HELPMATE — after school is over each day — is his 6-year-old son, Brad, who, as far as father is concerned, already is making inroads toward success.

"Ole Brad is an A-plus student; he's class favorite," father said, without intending to brag. "We're sure proud of him."

Brad is a kindergarten student at Grady.

"Ole Brad helps out around the store here... We fix flats, grease, change oil." Brad's fair-haired sister, April, who's "almost 2," helps out, too, the way a child of 2 can only do.

The Tarzan store shares a kinship with the far-more "country" Springer Brothers' General Store, which Allen Springer's father, Denver Springer, and his (Allen's) uncle, Grover Springer, have been running for more than three decades. The store is six miles to the east at Lenorah.

And even before the Springer brothers got ahold of the store in 1946, their father, Fritz Springer, operated a store at Tarzan and farmed. He moved here in the 1920s from Denton Valley in Calahan County.

"WE WAS RICH," Denver Springer said without meaning a word he uttered. "We had a brand-new 1928 Model A Ford and an old Model T truck."

Both brothers taught school, but the younger one, Denver, gave it up after he returned from the serving in the U.S. Army Air Forces from 1941 to 1945.

"When I came back (from the war), the salary was the same thing, and I said 'Shoot!'"

So, the Springer brothers got ahold of the general mercantile store at Lenorah and made a living at it until that big twister of May 11, 1947, twice visited Lenorah and just about wiped out the rural cotton community. The gin, the store, houses, the blacksmith's shop and all were either torn asunder or twisted out of proportion.

"IT JUST MOVED everything out of that town, nearly," Denver Springer said.

He recalled the tornado lurking around dusk on that Sunday. "I said, 'Dad, what in the Sam Hill is that thing?'" he recalled.

"He said, 'It's a twister,'" and they took cover.

The twister charged, waged war on Lenorah, retreated and returned for a second assault.

"I told Ruth (his wife), 'I guess the Boogie Man is after us,'" Denver Springer said.

The general store was rebuilt and opened up on Sept. 20, 1947, just as cotton-pulling season was in full bloom.

"We did about $500 worth of cash business" on that day and the store again was in good stead and has grown in stock and in reputation.

Unlike Allen Springer's more orderly but smaller store, the Springer Brothers General Store is more like a huge Fibber McGee's closet operated by Lum 'n' Abner.

It's worth a visit.

Priest held for robbery trial launches lobbying effort

ST. GEORGES, Del. (AP) — The priest who went midway through an armed robbery trial as the defendant before another man confessed to the "Gentleman Bandit" holdups is forming a lobbying group to help people who feel victimized by the criminal justice system.

Since his mistaken-identity case drew national attention last August, the Rev. Bernard T. Pagano, 53, said he has received letters from people in similar situations from around the world.

"It's a little frightening. I get the impression they feel I can perform some sort of extraordinary work for them — I hesitate to use the word miracle," the Roman Catholic priest said.

Pagano said the group would be a citizens' lobby similar to Common Cause and would provide advice to people who feel victimized by the criminal justice system.

"It's going to cover the gamut of the criminal justice system. It won't focus in on any particular problem, such as victims of mistaken identity."

"There is so much injustice in the system — victims of crime have been shunted off the side... things that are happening in prison to criminals," he said.

Shocking behavior results in more tender beef

DENVER (AP) — A Denver meatpacker gives his beef carcasses a 550-volt shot of electricity before cutting them up, and he claims the process makes for more tender beef.

"It's a lot like pounding on a steak with a hammer to tenderize it," said Leonard Litvak of Litvak Meat Co. He and other meatpackers say the process produces beef cuts up to 50 percent more tender than conventional beef cuts.

"It brings out the tenderness in all grades of beef," he said. The innovation is gaining wide acceptance among meatpackers nationwide after being introduced in Colorado plants last summer.

Litvak said Ben Franklin discovered that electric shocks make meat more tender back in 1749 when he killed turkeys electrically. He said that the shock system used at his plant was devised by researchers at Texas A&M University. A total of 150 carcasses are processed in an hour, with each carcass receiving 22 shocks, Litvak said.

Litvak said that the carcass is subjected to electric shocks about 20 minutes after the kill, and the stimulation breaks down muscle tissues, reducing the aging time required by about a third.

He said that the process soon may be applied to poultry and pork, as well.

Cost of farm chemicals increased over last year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers will pay an average of about 10 percent more for chemicals to protect their crops this year than they did in 1979, says the Agriculture Department.

Supplies of pesticides — which include chemicals to kill weeds as well as insects and other pests — are expected to be "adequate to meet overall farm needs," a new report said Wednesday.

"Manufacturers' insecticide supplies are off by 3 percent, but there are larger than normal stock carryovers for distributors, dealers and farmers," it said.

"Farmers' herbicide requirements will rise about 2 to 3 percent this year. Insecticide use is likely to be up to 10 percent over 1979's abnormally low levels."

The report, "Evaluation of Pesticide Supplies and Demand for 1980," was issued by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service. It was written by Theodore R. Eichers, an economist in the agency.

"Pesticides account for only 3 or 4 percent of farmers' production expenses, but they are essential tools in modern farming," the report said.

"Pesticides prevent major losses to insect and disease pests which could not otherwise be controlled, and they greatly reduce labor and machine time required to control weeds."

Environmental factors and federal restrictions are curbing the use of many pesticides — including some, like DDT, that have been banned outright.

Recent federal registration and re-registration procedures are expected to reduce the number of available pesticides further by 1985, when the process is expected to be completed.

"In addition to the likely removal of some current pesticides or pesticide uses, new product introduction has been drastically reduced because of higher research and development costs and added registration requirements," the report said.

"Farmers will likely have a smaller selection of pesticides from which to choose."

Meanwhile, those and other factors "all will tend to increase pesticide costs to farmers" in the next four or five years, it said.

"There are some forces that will increase pesticide use, and others that will reduce it in the future."

For example, the "increasing adoption" of Integrated Pest Management — called IPM by its advocates, which includes the Agriculture Department and the Environmental Protection Agency — and other nonchemical pest control techniques "will tend to reduce the use of pesticides," the report said.

"On the other hand, increasing costs of fuel, labor and machinery may reduce the use of mechanical cultivation (of crops) and increase the need for pesticides."

According to industry surveys, farmers spent $2.86 billion on pesticides in 1978, which "is somewhat higher" than USDA's estimate for that year of about $2.25 billion, the report said.

The industry figures showed that in 1978 crop farmers spent the most on pesticides (mostly weed-killing chemicals).

Bacteria helping livestock get more protein in feed

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time, scientists have successfully applied recombinant DNA technology to nutritional purposes, developing bacteria that make larger quantities of a protein used in livestock feed.

The breakthrough was announced Wednesday by scientists at Bethesda Research Laboratories, Inc.

The scientists produced bacteria which make larger amounts of proline, an amino acid that is a livestock food supplement.

The development could mean less costly livestock feeds and increased production, said Stephen Turner, president of BRI.

Recombinant DNA involves artificial manipulation of deoxyribonucleic acid, the basic genetic material found in every cell.

Turner said BRI scientists want to develop bacteria that produce 20 to 50 times more proline than bacteria now in use.

The livestock industry in the United States buys about $500 million worth of proline annually as a feed additive, much of it imported from Japan.

Proline now costs $50 to $200 per kilogram and the new development could drop the price to less than $10 per kilogram, Turner said.

He predicted the BRI discovery would be available commercially in two or three years.

BRI is a private firm founded five years ago in the Washington suburb of Rockville, Md., to produce biological lab products. BRI probably will license the process to other firms, he said.

BRI also is working on bacteria to mass produce at least two more of the 21 types of amino acids that make up protein, Turner said.

Schindler has more troubles than normal class president

DUNDALK, Md. (AP) — Michael Schindler, class president, told everyone he wanted to make his final year at Patapsco Senior High School his most memorable ever. It has been.

Today, as his classmates look ahead to graduation day, Schindler sits in a jail cell and contemplates a murder trial.

He is charged with the stabbing deaths of two women during Thanksgiving weekend last year in what authorities allege was a murder-for-hire scheme. He is being held without ball because a judge decided it was too dangerous to allow him to be at large.

A formal plea of innocent by reason of insanity was entered earlier this month by his attorney, William Ziman. Schindler, 18, is to undergo a psychiatric evaluation.

At Patapsco High, Schindler's name does not come up as much now; another youth has been elected senior class president. But in interviews with teachers and advisers, it was obvious Schindler is still well thought of. "Anything bad he's done has been so outweighed by the good," said Elva Venzke, an English teacher and adviser to the high school yearbook, "The Patriot."

"He told the kids he wanted this to be their most memorable year, something they'd never forget," said Thomas Dessecker, a history teacher and co-adviser of the senior class.

"He was such a remarkable kid. Mike was really a natural leader." Dessecker thumbed through several letters Schindler wrote to his classmates while he was class president, urging them to take pride in the school, pay their class dues and take part in school activities.

Last fall, his classmates voted the 18-year-old "most popular senior" and "the senior with the most school and class spirit."

"He ranks with the best senior class presidents I've seen," said Patapsco Principal David Driver, a secondary school principal since 1947, the last 12 years here in this working-class industrial suburb of Baltimore.

"He wanted to be helpful. Whatever he could do to make his class or his team or the yearbook shine, he'd do," Driver said.

Last year, when new helmets for the football team arrived and were the wrong color, Schindler took them home and painted them the Patapsco Patriots' school colors — red, white and blue.

"He was the kind of kid interested in preventing vandalism in the lavatory," said Dessecker. "He set a really good example for the rest of the school."

A few days before Christmas, the dark-haired, 195-pound, 5-foot-7 youth was arrested at his home, charged with two counts of first-degree murder and a number of related offenses in the deaths of Maria Zisser, 83, and her 23-year-old granddaughter, Mary Thompson.

The two women had been stabbed repeatedly and their throats were slashed, police said.

Flagman Jimmy Garcia plays crop-dusting role

STANFIELD, Ariz. (AP) — Even though he is not much taller than the rows of cotton he stands beside, Jimmy Garcia hits the ground each time the airplane swoops down toward him.

Then he gets up, walks a few rows down the field and gets ready to hit the ground again as the plane roars over and defoliant falls around him like rain.

Garcia, energetically waving a red flag that is almost as big as he is, works as a ground man for the cropdusting firm of Custom Farm Services Inc. of Stanfield.

His job as one of the firm's eight flaggers is to assist the pilots by showing them where to drop their loads. It is seasonal work that Garcia says he has enjoyed for the past four years.

"But I don't enjoy going up with them. It does terrible things to my stomach," Garcia says.

So he stays among the various crops, measuring off specific distances to guide the pilot's next path. He pushes a converted bicycle wheel to mark off the 50-foot span that is covered by each swoop of the plane.

Garcia says that when an airplane buzzes him he ducks more out of instinct than necessity. The plane usually comes only within 10 feet of the ground and Garcia stands about 4-foot-4.

The planes, which drop defoliants, pesticides, nutrients and even seeds, whiz overhead at about 105 miles an hour. So when two airplanes are spraying the same field, Garcia no sooner ducks one plane than the other is ready to make its swoop.

He says the working hours are "crazy for flaggers and pilots." Much spraying is done at night when there is no wind, so he often trades his red flag for a flashlight and works from 10 p.m. until dawn.

"You have to watch yourself so you don't trip," he says.

When the planes are dropping the harsher chemicals, Garcia says he protects himself by wearing a long-sleeved shirt and a hat and taking a bath as soon as he gets home.

"It's scary sometimes, but I'm used to it now," he said. "I realize, though, that I'm risking my life every day."

Youngster reaches out from England to Pacific

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — When the information desk telephone rang at Oak Knoll Naval Hospital, corpsman Richard Janushan thought it was a prank.

"It was a little kid, and I couldn't quite understand him," the 24-year-old sailor said. "At first I thought he was speaking a foreign language, but then I realized it was definitely a very strong British accent."

The boy said he was 10 years old, that his name was Gerard Love, and that he had dialed at random from Corby, North Hampshire, England.

During a 10-minute chat Tuesday that would cost about $15, the youngster said he was looking for a pen pal.

"I told him I would write him, and he gave me his address," said Janushan. "Then he said, 'Can I call you again tomorrow?' I told him I would be off work then, but he said he would call me Sunday morning."

Roger Orr of the Pacific Telephone public information office said a check showed there was no telephone in Corby listed to the name of Love. But he said Isabel Purdy at the Corby police station confirmed there is a family by the name of Love in that town. They have no telephone.

Navigation stars: Lighthouses in sky

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Navigation satellites are being sent into space as tomorrow's version of the old stone lighthouses that guided sailing ships through perilous waters.

The U.S. military's planned $5 billion Navstar program will tell ships, planes and even ground-pounding infantrymen precisely where they are and how fast they're moving. And the answers will come instantly, anywhere in the world, day or night, in any weather.

"I'd say we're talking about something that's four to five times better, in general, (than any navigation systems now available). And in the broad ocean areas it's even better than that," Air Force Col. Donald Henderson said in an interview.

"Navigation is basic to everything we do. Knowing where you are and how to get where you want to go — those things are key to all military operations," said Henderson, manager of the Navstar Global Positioning System.

He said Navstar, begun in 1973 and now in development stages, could be used for everything from air-sea rescues and Navy ships to bombing runs and guided missiles.

Designed for U.S. and NATO armed forces with the Air Force Space Division as the managing agency, Navstar ultimately will be available for civilian users from supertankers to surveying crews, he said.

The Navstar constellation of 18 satellites, which could all be circling the Earth by 1987, will give longitude, latitude and altitude with a precision of 33 feet, Henderson said.

Five satellites are already aloft and "we've tested this program on ships, jeeps, trucks, helicopters, planes, amphibious personnel carriers and so on," he said. "The results have been better than we could have hoped. This has proved to be a system that can live up to its reputation."

He said it will greatly surpass existing satellite navigation systems — one belonging to the U.S. Navy and another to the Soviet Union.

Navstar begins with the $20 million satellites. The space age beacons send continuous, encoded radio signals earthward.

At the heart of each satellite is an atomic clock, accurate to one second in 300,000 years, that calibrates the system.

The radio beams are received on computerized user sets which, at the push of a button, pick four satellite signals to compute precise locations.

Henderson said plans call for a deluxe, high-performance receiver set complete with anti-jamming equipment that will probably cost more than $30,000. He said ground troops will get a $15,000 backpack unit. A third version will be somewhere in between.

The satellites are designed to transmit two signals, he said. One will be crafted to keep any potential enemy from eavesdropping, imitating or interfering with it.

"We will also be able to send a signal down that will be useful to civilians, but at the same time won't enhance an enemy's capabilities," Henderson said. The civilian signal will be accurate to about a quarter-mile, compared with the military's 33 feet.

The colonel said many civilian users, such as airlines, commercial shippers and off-shore oil drillers, would probably buy into the system regardless of price.

"But getting the cost of the user sets down will be the key to widespread civilian use," Henderson said.

He estimates a no-frills receiver might sell for less than $5,000, a price that should attract owners of private boats and planes.

"If you really get way out," Henderson said, "I could see the luxury cars of the year 2020 with a little (Navstar) receiver in the dashboard. You could plug in a little map display and a little light would show you exactly where you are."

Staubach decision expected Monday

By FRANK LUSKA
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS — Before teammates read or hear his decision elsewhere, Roger Staubach wants them to get it first, in private, from him. So next Monday morning, in what surely will be a hushed atmosphere of a meeting room at the Dallas Cowboys practice field, he will tell them.

From that location Staubach is scheduled for a drive to Texas Stadium. There he will hold a noon press conference. He will stand before a forest of notebooks, recorders and cameras. And he will tell them.

In answer to the question of whether he will or whether he won't, Staubach will say he won't.

He won't play quarterback again. If Staubach says anything to the contrary, the first bodies to hit the floor in companion faint will be those of Coach Tom Landry and President-General Manager Tex Schramm. Theirs would be an ecstatic swoon because each is convinced, probably knows, the Staubach Era with Dallas has ended.

OH, THEY DON'T say that outright. Odds are that Staubach has told them directly and privately that he's retiring. Neither would betray that confidence. Neither yet speaks of Staubach in the past tense. But neither talks of Staubach in the future tense, which is quite, quite revealing in itself.

"Generally," Schramm pointed out, "you don't call a press conference to announce you're going to continue to play. I still have hope he will consider playing another year because I think it's very important to the team and all Staubach fans, myself included."

Landry's bedrock honesty puts him in a bind in these situations. On one side he must protect Staubach's confidence. On the other, it is not his nature to be evasive or willfully misleading to media inquiries.

Therefore, asked to guess Staubach's intentions, the coach said: "His inkling all the time was that he would retire. I haven't seen anything to say different to this point. But I don't know. When you make a decision that important, you may have a change of mind at the last minute. I don't like to put him on the spot and say what he's going to do one way or another."

OK, but would Landry be surprised if Staubach said he was playing in 1980?

"Yes," the coach admitted. "I would be at this stage."

WHAT WE HAVE, then, is virtual confirmation from in-house voices of Staubach's intention to quit. Retirement signals have been evident for months, often in ways not evident to the outsider. For instance, Staubach is a frequent visitor to the Cowboys' offices for purposes of business or prank, as on one memorable occasion when he ledge-walked outside Schramm's 11th story window. His vibrant mood is contagious, his outlook always on tomorrow's battles. If the Cowboys had won the last Super Bowl, he talked of making it two straight. If they had not captured the Big Soup-bone, he spoke of the coming assault on the summit. Staubach's conversation in some context normally got around to next season.

This year it hasn't, Schramm has noticed.

"He doesn't talk as he has in the past. There's no question that subject (retirement) is uppermost in his

If you think Tom Landry was bummed out watching Pittsburgh and Los Angeles fight it out at last year's Super Bowl, you should've seen him Wednesday after All-Pro safety Cliff Harris announced his retirement. It's rumored Roger Staubach will also retire. (AP Laserphoto)

Harris' retirement leaves Cowboys with empty feeling

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — Cliff Harris, an all-pro safety and cornerstone of the Dallas Cowboys' doomsday defense, says he's leaving the football field for the oil field.

"Pro football is not a real world. It doesn't last forever. I wish it could," Harris told a news conference Wednesday at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport.

The 6-foot-1, 192-pound Harris said had contemplated the change since the 1979 National Football League season ended "to take advantage of a good business opportunity" with U.S. Companies. The Dallas-based organization is headed by Max Williams, a former coach of the Dallas Chaparrals of the American Basketball Association.

"There comes a time when you have to make it. I've made my decision and I'm going to stick to it," Harris said. "I want to pursue the oil business the same way I did football."

Nicknamed "Captain Crash" by his teammates for his reckless pursuit of ball carriers, Harris came to the Cowboys 10 years ago as an unheralded free agent from Ouachita Baptist University in Arkadelphia, Ark.

Harris became one of the NFL's highest paid safeties, playing in five Super Bowls and six Pro Bowls. Twice he was named All-Pro by The Associated Press and was inducted into the NAIA Hall of Fame three years ago in Kansas City.

Stunned Cowboy officials said Harris spoke with Coach Tom Landry, General Manager and Club President Tex Schramm and secondary coach Gene Stallings earlier Wednesday.

Schramm said Harris told him, "I've had 10 good years and I want to go out on top. I'm in a new business and I feel like I need to devote my time to it."

Schramm also said he did not think the decision was irrevocable. Harris' retirement came as a double shock to Cowboy officials who anticipate veteran quarterback Roger Staubach will announce Monday that he also is leaving the Cowboys.

Landry said Wednesday that he would be surprised if the 38-year-old Naval Academy graduate returned for one more season.

Harris, 31, insisted Staubach's expected retirement did not prompt his decision to retire and did not anticipate the move would hurt the Cowboys.

"The machine will move on," he said.

Harris, who had 29 career interceptions, said last season was hard for him emotionally because of the loss of defensive back Charlie Waters to injury, the retirement of defensive end "Too Tall" Jones and the departure of linebacker Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson.

The Cowboys also fielded the poorest defensive team of the decade last season.

After the news conference, Harris said goodbye to close friend Waters and then boarded a plane for Utah for what he said was his first vacation since July 1979.

Baseball strike a possibility

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — The meeting that will determine if and when major league baseball players will go on strike is less than a week away, yet club owners and players remain miles apart on a new four-year basic agreement.

"I'm not optimistic until I see a reason to be," said Marvin Miller, the director of the Players Association, after negotiations between owners and players reopened Wednesday. Miller said no movement was made on any of several key issues during the session, which lasted just under two hours.

"The owners are not seeking a strike," said Ray Grebey, chief owners' negotiator. "But at the same time, they feel very strongly about their proposals."

"We've had very constructive negotiations so far," he added.

The two sides planned to meet again today and Friday.

Miller is also meeting this week with members of several teams to outline what is going on in the talks and to discuss the possibility of a strike. He met Wednesday with 40 members of the San Francisco Giants and 22 players from the Cleveland Indians, who voted unanimously to authorize a strike if no agreement is reached by April 1. Of the nearly 800 players to vote thus far only one, on the Kansas City Royals, has voted against strike authorization.

Barring a major breakthrough

Ken Babbage, right, gets suggestions of how to move fast from former St. Louis Cardinal Lou Brock. Babbage was preparing to begin a 430-mile walk from St. Louis to Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati. (AP Laserphoto)

soon, "it's been pretty much decided we'll have to take some sort of strike action. The question is when," said Gary Lavelle, the Giants' player representative.

"We're so far apart that everything is questionable," said Indians' player representative Wayne Garland.

"The meetings have been pretty much at a standstill," said San Diego pitcher Randy Jones, who attended Wednesday's negotiations.

Player representatives from all the mind. In the past, all he ever talked about was getting started again."

Retirement of franchise rocks, players of ability and commitment above and beyond the norm, always throws Schramm into a mental funk.

Schmidt blasts homers as Phillies sidestep Mets

By The Associated Press

Mike Schmidt, who once hit a speaker hanging from the top of the Astrodome ceiling and has sent residents across the street from Chicago's Wrigley Field scrambling to avoid his home run shots, can add St. Petersburg, Fla., to his list of conquered cities.

Despite his career of long clouts, Schmidt called his home run off Juan Berenguer in Philadelphia's 9-8 exhibition victory over the New York Mets Wednesday "the hardest I've ever hit a ball in my life."

The blast, estimated at 450 feet, easily cleared the fence and nearly bombed the Bayfront Center Auditorium across the street.

Schmidt had another homer and knocked in six runs Wednesday, giving him a spring batting average of .480, with 11 RBI in eight games, four homers and nine runs scored. But he takes a reserved approach to the significance of spring statistics.

"I've had the best spring in the world and had a bad year," he said. "I've had mediocre springs and had a great year."

"Down here all I want to do is get mentally and physically ready. Statistics mean nothing, and I've said that in springs when I hit .050."

"The game's always fun when you're hitting the ball, whether it's winter or whether it's a softball game."

Elsewhere in spring games, Cleveland edged San Francisco 3-2, Seattle outlasted San Diego 8-6, the Chicago Cubs nipped California 2-1, Los Angeles bombed St. Louis 12-8, Houston tripped Boston 5-3, Texas beat Montreal 6-2, Atlanta topped Cincinnati 6-2, Minnesota whipped Pittsburgh 4-1, Oakland beat Milwaukee 7-2, Toronto blanked Kansas City 2-0, the Chicago White Sox shut out the New York Yankees 1-0 and the Detroit Tigers bombed the Baltimore Orioles 7-3.

Designated hitter Steve Kemp did the damage for Detroit, driving in five runs with a three-run homer and a double against Baltimore.

Matt Keough, who was 2-17 for Oakland last season, won his third straight spring training game with a solid seven-inning performance as the A's beat the Brewers. Dave Revering homered for Oakland.

Steve Trout allowed only six hits in eight innings and Glenn Borgmann hit an eighth-inning homer off Tom Underwood in Chicago's defeat of the Yankees. Chicago got only five hits off Ron Guidry, Luis Tiant and Underwood.

Rico Carty slammed a two-run homer and five Toronto pitchers stopped Kansas City on six hits as the Blue Jays beat the Royals.

Preston Hanna won his fourth straight spring game with four scoreless innings as the Braves defeated the Reds. Glenn Hubbard had a three-run double for Atlanta.

Danny Heep had three hits, including a homer, and Joe Niekro pitched six hitless innings in the Astros' defeat of the Red Sox.

Steve Ontiveros hit a two-run double in the sixth inning and Rick Reuschel pitched six strong innings to lead the Cubs over the Angels.

Left-hander Geoff Zahn pitched seven strong innings and Jose Morales had three hits, scored two runs and knocked in another as Minnesota defeated the Pirates.

Rick Honeycutt and Rick Anderson combined for three hits in eight innings and Seattle survived a ninth-inning rally to beat San Diego. The Padres scored five runs on six hits in the ninth, including a three-run homer by Jim Beswick, while the Mariners pounded 15 hits.

Monterey Plainsmen rip Midland Lee Rebels

LUBBOCK — Senior righthander Rick Pinkerton set the Midland Lee Rebels down on a one-hitter here Wednesday in a non-district baseball game at Lowery Field.

Lee, fresh from a big 5-4 10-inning victory over Abilene Cooper Tuesday, started it's No. 3 pitcher Jeff Hicks and the Monterey Plainsmen romped to an easy 12-0 victory.

Pinkerton also contributed to his own cause with two singles and a triple and knocked in two runs while first baseman Ricky Potts, who has been out of action for three weeks, had four hits in four trips to the plate.

The big senior knocked in two runs and had three singles and a double. If that wasn't impressive enough for you, catcher Kelly Smith had a perfect day at the plate in three trips, including a pair of doubles.

Monday scored five runs in the first inning and four more in the second for the easy victory.

Potts, Monterey's ace pitcher, is expected to finally pitch again in two more weeks after hurting his arm in the season opener against Odessa Permian back on Mar. 1.

Hicks worked three innings and David Corrales the final four for the Rebels who are now 6-8 on the year going into Saturday's District 5-4A game with the Big Spring Steers in Midland.

The Plainsmen face the Pecos Eagles on Friday, a team they pounded 16-2 on Tuesday.

Tall City tracksters to be tested at San Angelo

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — If it's a true test of strength the Midland Lee and Midland High track units really want, then they should have an exam to their liking here Friday and Saturday in the gigantic San Angelo Relays — West Texas' supreme meet of the year.

Here is where you find out what you are made of, so to speak. It's the largest meet of the year, so naturally, the competition is keener than anywhere else. Just making it through the qualifying trials is an accomplishment.

This year will be no different as 15 other teams join the locals in the AAAA division, including Killeen, the defending champion and a 1/2-point winner over Lee a year ago. The Kangaroos are favored to nail down another title with a simple hop, skip and jump.

Other teams include, El Paso Burges, Del Rio, Eagle Pass, Killeen Ellison, Hereford, El Paso Eastwood, El Paso Riverside, El Paso Austin and all the District 5-4A teams with the exception of Odessa Permian.

And if that is not enough for the most avid track fan, then there are three other divisions of competition with 50 other teams. Kerrville Tivey will be back to defend its AAA crown against the likes of Andrews and Odessa Ector while Breckenridge will face a 20-team AA field while defending its title. Crane will also be in that division. Defending A-B champion Crosbyton will head an 18-team field against the likes of Stanton, McCamey and Reagan County.

Friday's action begins at 2:30 p.m. with selected field events and running preliminaries while Saturday's session begins at noon with the remaining field event finals. Saturday's running finals will have a 1:30 p.m. start.

Midland High's David Simmons will try to keep his unbeaten streak alive in both the discus and shot put, but this could be the toughest test of the year. Simmons is gearing for a shot at the discus record on Friday and would like an effort to exceed the 189-foot record.

Midland Lee hopes to see just how good its two relays can be on the fast track against rugged competition. Arthur Williams, Darrin Williams, Steve Waldron and Phil Carleton will carry the hopes of the sprint relay unit while Keevin Harper, Gary Butler, Waldron and Carleton head the 1600-meter relay unit.

Carleton has also shown strength in both the 200 and 400 meters this season and has even earned points in the 100. It is not known which race he will compete in this week. Harper has set Lee's school record in the 800 meters with a 1:56 this season, but this has been a year of excellent half millers and he will have his work cut out for him again.

Lee also hopes to improve in the 100 with Mark Landers, Waldron and Arthur Williams. Williams has an impressive 10.7 this year, but his only finish was a third place in some fast company.

Midland High's Billy Taylor was a member of the fast company last week in Andrews when he recorded his best time of 10.6. Taylor will also return to the 200 meters, an event he skipped last week to concentrate on the MHS relay teams, which have failed to show punch this season, mainly due to the injury of sprinter Jeff Robnett.

Local hurdlers also hope to perform well with Lee's David Piccolo and Midland High's Bruce Fisher and Jerry Zachery leading the way. Zachery and Piccolo both had their problems last week. Piccolo jumped the gun in the 300 hurdles at Andrews while Zachery failed to qualify in the 120 highs.

KENNY REDIN'S Fin & Feather

It's certainly a good thing that we don't go out and catch a new or near world-record largemouth bass each time we go fishing. Problems, hassles and downright lies do develop after someone catches some huge, monstrous beast. Just follow this little story and see what we mean.

Dave Zimmerlee of San Diego, was on the phone to Ray Easley of Fullerton, Calif., the fireman who topped Zimmerlee's seven-year reign as California bass champ. He reported his end of the conversation in this fashion: "Congratulations to you," he said. "I'm glad it's your problem now. You'll get such a swelled head you won't need to walk, you'll float. There's not much money in it. But it's the greatest ego trip in the world."

Zimmerlee's bass weighed 20-pounds, 15-ounces and was the first inking that a possible world record bass — one weighing in excess of the 22-pound, four-ounce standard set by George Perry at Montgomery Lake, Ga., in 1932 — might be swimming in a California lake.

EASLEY'S FISH was caught from deep-water Casitas, a reservoir supplying Ventura, Calif., and weighed 21-pounds, three-ounces. The fish struck a live crawfish and came aboard Easley's 17 1/2-foot SeaFlight boat with relative ease.

"It ran toward the boat," Easley reported later, "and it only jumped once."

The fish was weighed on certified scales and checked by a game warden and a Department of Fish and Game biologist and was attested to by witnesses. It seems assured of being the heaviest bass ever caught in California waters and the heaviest bass reported anywhere in 48 years.

The unexpected catch by Zimmerlee, a 26-year-old electrician at the time, propelled him to instant celebrity status and brought a rash of stories suggesting that a world record bass, if promoted astutely, could be worth $1 million to the person who catches it.

Zimmerlee, who now lives in Mira Mesa, claims that June 23, 1973, when he caught the giant, was the first time he fished Miramar reservoir.

"I was out in a boat and I saw this big swirl in front of a buoy line," he recalled. "I went over to investigate and saw this big fish down about five feet. I threw out a nightcrawler. It floated down and he grabbed it."

THEN EVERYTHING went wrong. Zimmerlee's Zebco closed-face reel locked and he was reduced to hand-lining the super-heavy fish.

"I got that fish close and shoved my hand down his gullet. He wasn't going to get away."

Back at the dock, the weighmaster figured the fish at 10-pounds, 14-ounces, then 10-pounds, 15-ounces.

This was on a 10-pound spring scale, and the fish seemed heavier than that. Upon re-weighing, it was noted that the needle twice passed the 10-pound mark, coming to rest 15-ounces past. The fish weighed 20-pounds, 15-ounces.

The arguments really started then. Some said Zimmerlee netted the fish as it spun on the surface, egg-bound and ready to die — even though the fisherman didn't own a net.

Some said he foul hooked the fish with a trebel. DFG investigated, found witnesses who watched Zimmerlee cast to the fish and play him from the boat. And they saw him stick his hand into the fish's mouth.

HE CAUGHT the fish, he said, with a Zebco 33 reel, with a Wright and McGill backpack rod, Trilene 10-pound monofilament and an Eagle Claw hook.

Of the $1 million, not even a healthy portion thereof, ever flowed into Zimmerlee's pocket.

"Tommy Morgan (lake concessionaire) paid for the mounting of the fish," Zimmerlee said. "I have an arrangement with Lyons and O'Haver, local taxidermists, for replicas. I fished three days with Homer Circle and Glen Lau for their TV series, but I never saw the show."

"I got $100 for exhibiting the bass at a Chicago show. I guide people bassing for $75 a day and guarantee 'em five bass or no pay during April and May. I got a Lowrance fish finder and a new Garcia rod and reel. Two years after I caught the bass, Zebco sent me two rods and reels with my name on them. That's about it."

"When I caught that fish, somebody at the dock said I got $1,000 for catching the record. I said 'Give me the $1,000 and the bass is yours.' Tell you the truth, I didn't even know what the record was. I just took the fish home and put it in my mom's freezer."

Zimmerlee apparently wishes fate had treated him differently.

"Well, I'd like to be invited to fish in more tournaments," he said. "I'd especially like to be invited to fish Zaza or Treasures lakes in Cuba. I'd like to go to an Irvin Lake opening; I hear there's a big Zebco meet coming up there."

His advice to record fish-catchers: Don't say anything about the equipment you're using; don't allow any pictures; get weight verified; get names, addresses and phone numbers of witnesses.

Here in Texas we don't have much of a chance to catch world-record largemouth bass, but some of these years, it will be a possibility. The big bass which inhabit the California lakes where Zimmerlee and Easley made their catches were Florida-strain largemouth. Beside Florida, only Florida, Alabama, Georgia and Texas now have this strain in some lakes.

Roland Martin tops bass event

SARDIS, Miss. (AP) — Roland Martin, of Broken Arrow, Okla., led the pack Wednesday in the first day of Mississippi Invitation Bass Anglers Sportsman Society fishing tournament at Sardis Reservoir.

Martin, the all-time leading money-winner in professional bass fishing, finished the day with 16 pounds, six ounces of bass, beating out 225 others in the first round of the tournament.

First prize is $10,500, and the tournament purse totals $62,000.

Martin, who has won more than $100,000 in his ten-year fishing career, held a comfortable lead over his nearest rival, Ricky Green, of Arkadelphia, Ark. Green, a 35-year-old bass pro and perennial Bass Masters Classic qualifier, caught six bass weighing 12 pounds, 15 ounces on Wednesday.

Olympic great Owens fights cancer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Former Olympic track star Jesse Owens is continuing chemotherapy treatments for lung cancer at the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center here, after being transferred from a hospital in Phoenix.

A hospital official said Owens, 66, was in stable condition Wednesday night, although a spokesman said earlier he was "very ill, but comfortable." They said Owens is receiving no visitors.

Owens spent a week in the University Hospital in January under the care of a cancer specialist, before returning to his Paradise Valley home near Phoenix.

He continued treatments as an outpatient before his emergency admission to Good Samaritan Hospital in Phoenix March 3.

Owens' doctor at the university hospital, Dr. Stephen Jones, said the former athlete's cancer was discovered last December at the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago. He said the cancer was inoperable.

Jones said it would take several months before doctors could tell whether Owens' treatments were successful.

Owens, winner of four gold medals in the 1936 Olympics in Berlin, has operated a public relations firm in Phoenix for several years.

Carter continues boycott campaign

By The Associated Press

The Norwegian Olympic Committee voted Wednesday to send its athletes to the 1980 Summer Games in Moscow, following by one day a similar action by the British Olympic Association.

Meanwhile, in Washington, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell reiterated President Carter's opposition to U.S. participation in the Moscow Olympics because of the Soviet Union's military presence in Afghanistan.

"As a matter of principle, Carter is not in favor of participation in the Moscow Games, period," Powell said.

Powell also said he had read a story about Afghan soccer players seeking asylum in Western Europe and added, "Those who feel there is no, and should be no, relationship between what's happened in Afghanistan and Moscow may want to solicit the views of these Afghan sportsmen about whether they see a connection."

Norway's government had left it up to the national sports organizations and the Olympic committee as to whether the country would send teams to Moscow.

A proposal to boycott the Olympics was voted down 28-8 Wednesday, and another proposal to postpone a decision until after the Norwegian Sports Federation meets next month was also voted down 18-16 with two abstentions. The Norwegian Basketball Federation then put forward a proposal calling for participation, and it was passed 19-13 with four abstentions.

In London, a spokesman for the Department of the Environment, which has responsibility for sport, said the decision taken by the British Olympic Association on Tuesday to defy government pressure and send a full team to the Games "is not the end of the matter."

But sports officials warned against further government interference. "Let the athletes get on and make their own choice in their own time and without any sort of pressure," said David Shaw, secretary of the British Amateur Athletic Board.

Britain's Prince Phillip, president of the International Equestrian Federation, said he will not attend the Olympics in accordance with the strong stand Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government has taken against participation.

In other Olympic developments, Hong Kong's government said it favors a boycott because it has "become clear that ... participation in the Games would have very definite political implications." But Chief Secretary Sir Jack Carter said the final decision lay with its Amateur Sports Federation and Olympic Committee.

Midland's Denton third in PBA meet

STERLING HEIGHTS, Mich. (AP) — Carmen Salvino's scoring pace slowed, but he retained a 135-pin lead Wednesday night after three rounds of the $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association national championship.

After averaging 250 for his first 16 games, Salvino dipped to a 206 average in the third round, bringing his 24-game total to 5,663.

John Denton, a one-time PBA champion from Midland, Texas, jumped from 11th place into third with 5,518, one pin ahead of Mal Acosta of Fremont, Calif.

Fem hoopster Lieberman backs Carter's stand on Summer Games boycott

NEW YORK (AP) — Nancy Lieberman, voted "Player of the Year" in women's college basketball, supports President Carter's call for a boycott of the Summer Olympics at Moscow.

She adds, however, "We have to be ready, regardless," in case, by some chance, the boycott is called off and American athletes are permitted to compete at the Games.

The native of Far Rockaway, N.Y., who scored 2,430 points in her four-year career at Old Dominion, acknowledged a boycott could hurt her chances of turning professional.

Cashen strives for balance

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A quick peek at their roster shows the New York Mets tilting distressingly to the right side on offense. New General Manager Frank Cashen is determined to correct that imbalance. Cashen returned Wednesday from two days of owners' and general managers' meetings in Arizona, more hopeful than he's been of doing some trade business. The Mets' need for left-handed bats is glaring. Their only fulltime lefty hitters are catcher Ron Hodges, first baseman-outfielder Mike Jorgensen, third baseman Phil Mankowski and outfielder Bruce Boicclair. There is also Lee Mazzilli, a switch hitter. So Cashen is hungry for some southpaw hitters and he's shopping. "The problem is everybody offers tin for gold," he said. "The trick is to find somebody who'll give you gold for tin." Cashen did say he felt the Arizona trade talks were productive and the conversations more intense than at any time since the winter meetings in Toronto. "That's not unusual," he said. "Teams have had time to assess their strengths and weaknesses in training camp and you pretty well know who your 25 players will be, what you need and what you have to spare. That picks up trade talk."

MC's Tate earns laurels

Robert Tate, the whirling dervish guard from Midland College, capped a brilliant sophomore season recently by being named first team All-Western Junior College Athletic Association and first team All-Region V.

California-Fullerton, Pan American and Gonzaga have all expressed interest in the dynamo. "He'll be able to go and play NCAA," attested Stone. Midland College landed Shelby on the second team All-WJCAA while freshman Charles Johnson from Midland High earned honorable mention status.

Snyder dominated both the WJCAA and Region V picks. Magic man Paul Pressey, also named the loop's most valuable player, joined teammate Craig Stewart as first team WJCAA. Amarillo's version of Sasquatch, 6-foot-10 Victor Mitchell, and Howard's scoring machine Mike Wallace completed the honor outfit. The second team was Carlos Judkins of New Mexico Military, Bill Patterson of Western Texas, David Bradley of Amarillo and Odessa's Kelly Kitchens. The Region V first team selections were Pressey, Stewart, Tony Massey of Hill, Mitchell and Wallace. The second team choices were Dennis Mayes and Fronnie Clark of Cooke, Phil Spradling and David Brown of Western Texas, Rickey Guy of Grayson County, Mack Reddish of Ranger, and McLennan's Anthony Lee and Chris Jones. The third team was Odessa's John Savoie and Kitchens. Mitchell and Pressey, said Stone, were nominated for NJCAA All-America.

"He's really helped us for two years," said MC coach Jerry Stone of his sharpshooter from Chicago. Stone will get to coach Tate at least two more times. The MC taskmaster said Tate will be representing the Region V all-stars Saturday night in Waco when they tangle with the all-stars from Region XIV. And Stone will also be directing a squad featuring Tate April 5 in Amarillo when the Region V all-stars will divide up and battle each other. Also, MC guard Tim Shelby will play in the contest. Stone said the purpose of the game at Amarillo is to provide a focus for major college recruiters. But Tate, according to Stone, has had little problem attracting looks from the biggies. Stone said Idaho State,

In the all-region balloting, Johnson was named to the third team, becoming the only freshman this season to attain that status, according to Stone. If there was a disappointment for Stone with the selections, it was the absence of Chucky McGill, hobbled by injury much of the season, from the All-WJCAA team. "In my opinion," said Stone, "Chucky should've at least been on the second team. I think it's just one of those unfortunate things." Stone said McGill might participate in the Amarillo all-star clash. National Junior College Athletic Association champion Western Texas College of

Edmonton blitzes Detroit Red Wings, 5-2

By The Associated Press

Seven years ago, when Marcel Pronovost was coaching Tulsa of the Central Hockey League, one of his goaltenders was Ron Low. The two faced each other again Wednesday night, with Pronovost coaching the Detroit Red Wings and Low playing goal for the Edmonton Oilers. The 29-year-old Low, acquired by Edmonton from Quebec on March 11, has played with five teams over the last four seasons. He thought he had reached the end of the line. But Oilers Coach Glen Sather felt differently. He hit 49 of the Red Wings' 51 shots Wednesday night while right wing

Don Murdoch, acquired from the New York Rangers the same day as Low, paced the offense with two goals, including the 100th of his career. Wayne Gretzky added two assists as Edmonton collected its sixth victory in seven games and vaulted into 15th place in the overall National Hockey League standings. The points gave Gretzky 127 for the season — four behind NHL scoring leader Marcel Dionne of the Los Angeles Kings. That resulted in the rest of the Oilers goals and helped Edmonton drop Detroit to 17th place, two points behind the Washington Capitals, who beat the St. Louis Blues 4-2.

In other NHL games Wednesday night, the Chicago Black Hawks beat the Quebec Nordiques 7-2 and the Winnipeg Jets blanked the Hartford Whalers 7-0. Blair MacDonald, Doug Hicks and Dave Lumley had the other goals for the Oilers while Errol Thompson and Reed Larson scored third-period goals for the Red Wings, who have won only one of their last eight games.

Sanchez beat Tim Holsworth of Milwaukee, Wis., in his 147-pound match. Three other New Mexico fighters lost first round bouts. They were Steve Hindi of Albuquerque at 119, Umberto Lucero of Albuquerque at 132 and Mike Glassman of Las Vegas in the heavy-weight division. Willie Hall of Roswell was unable to compete in his 156-pound match because of an injury and Paul Segura of Raton drew a first round bye at 106. Other New Mexico boxers were slated for first round bouts Wednesday night.

Midland Lee gymnasts face district tournament

The Midland Lee girls' gymnastics team will travel to Abilene for the District 5-4A meet Friday and Saturday.

Mark Townzen, who coaches both the Midland and Lee girls' teams, will be taking six participants to the meet.

Junior Dayna Dixon and sophomore Patricia Johns will represent Lee in the all-around competition. Junior Risa Reddell will be in the beam, bars and vault while junior Karen Mosely will be in the beam. Sophomores Lori Brewer (floor exercise) and Pam Gordon (vault) complete the unit.

Although Townzen is in his first year in Midland and claims he knew nothing of last year's program, he believes his kids have made progress. "We've improved a lot since the meet with San Angelo," he said.

Townzen thinks three of his athletes, Dixon, Johns and Reddell, have good chances of qualifying for the state meet since they've already achieved scores capable of landing them there. But first, they must prove it to the judges at the region meet, April 3, at Odessa Permian.

Townzen said either of the Abilene schools had a good shot at the 5-4A girls' championship, but the coach quickly added, "A little fall here and there can make a lot of difference."

5-4A girls take break from golf

The girls' District 5-4A golf season is dormant this week but that doesn't mean Midland High, the leader after two rounds, won't be on the links.

Coach Mary Baird's Bulldogs will be in Amarillo Friday and Saturday for tournament action.

Lee is not expected to be in action this week.

The final 5-4A tour stop will be April 3 in San Angelo. Then regional competition comes April 20-25 before the state meet, scheduled for May 5-9.

Currently, Midland owns a three-shot advantage over Lee (715-718) after two rounds of district play.

And there's quite a fight between the two schools for individual medalist honors. Lee's Michelle Marburger is first with a 161 total while Midland's Ann Coombes and Lee's Penny Sutcliffe are next with 164 each. Midland's Patty O'Neill is fourth with 172.

MHS, Lee boys' golfers to Abilene

The boys' District 5-4A golf tour swings to Abilene Friday as everybody will be trying to make up ground on runaway leader Abilene Cooper.

The Cougars enjoy a whopping 20-shot buge on second-place San Angelo (640-660) after two stops.

Big Spring is right on Midland's tail at 676. Midland Lee is tenth with a 698 total.

Local tennis teams to Amarillo

Midland High, fresh off an excellent showing last week in the Abilene Invitational, and Midland Lee, looking for more upset victims, will participate Friday and Saturday in the Amarillo Relays tennis tournament.

Midland received two titles at Abilene, one in boys' A singles and the other in girls' B doubles.

Lance Armstrong defeated teammate Richey Houdek for the singles crown while the Midland tandem of Monica Blair and Renata Hasek claimed the doubles championship.

Lee fared poorly last weekend, but it was just two weeks ago when the Rebels' Peter Brewer and Joni Brittain earned singles titles at the Lubbock Invitational.

The season is slowly drawing to a close. Following the Amarillo event, Midland and Lee will tangle in a dual meet April 1 at MHS before the all-important District 5-4A meet, April 11-12 in Abilene.

Tall City Junior Relays slated

The Midland junior highs and freshmen schools will host the two-day Tall City Junior Relays Friday and Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

The girls will compete Friday with field event finals and running preliminaries to be held at 2:30 p.m. Running finals will start at 5 p.m. Friday.

The boys will take over Saturday with field event finals slated for a 9:45 a.m. start and running preliminaries to begin at 10 a.m. Running finals will be held at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

The Midland and Lee freshman girls and boys will take on a field of Big Spring and San Angelo teams of Lee and Glenn.

The seventh grade girls and boys will feature the local teams of Goddard, San Jacinto and Alamo against Lee and Glenn from San Angelo and Goliad of Big Spring. The eighth grade competition will feature the same teams with the exception of Runnels of Big Spring.

The junior high season will come to an end April 9-10 in Odessa when the annual Odessa-Midland meet is held.

Odessa Jaycees plan softball event

Odessa's Jaycees will hold a "No home run" (Over-the-fence-is-out) double elimination softball tournament May 10-11. Entry is $75 per team and deadline is May 2. For information contact Steve Mareschal (563 01040) or Tom Wetmore (333 8331).

Racer Ray Beadle to visit Midland

Ray Beadle, known in Drag racing circles as driver of the famed Blue Max, will be in Midland March 28-29 for the grand opening of the first West Texas-Eastern New Mexico Blue Max Performance Center.

The Center, located at Illinois and Midkiff, will handle everything from four-wheel drive accessories to window louvers and engine performance equipment and Beadle will be on hand for the giveaway T-shirt days.

A 35-year-old from Dallas, Beadle moved into exclusive company at the 1978 U.S. Nationals when his Blue Max led all qualifiers in 5.98 seconds in the 440-yard straight line sprint. However, while Beadle and his Blue Max Plymouth Arrow aspire to the World's Fastest title, right now it is the second fastest Funny Car in the sport, one of the two cars to cover the 440 under six seconds.

Beadle's present car is described as the "most exotic" of all Blue Maxes. It was built by Tony Casarez and is set on a 118-inch wheelbase, powered by a 2,100-horsepower aluminum engine built specifically for the Drag strip.

Beadle sees the day when international drag racing goes legitimate after introducing the sport in England in 1977 to a populace who knew of the Blue Max as only the German medal for valor.

Actually, Beadle isn't much for the mechanical end of racing. He relies on Fred Miller and Dale Emery to "load it up and I fire it" at 240-miles per hour over a five-second-plus span.

Triple Crown eludes Shoemaker

But venerable jockey may have one more chance

By JIM MURRAY
The Los Angeles Times

Nobody ever did or made more on horseback than William Lee Shoemaker -- not Paul Revere, John Wayne, Julius Caesar, Genghis Khan, the Seventh Cavalry, Lady Godiva, Geronimo, or the Headless Horsemen. Or, for that matter, not Earl Sande, Eddie Arcaro, Johnny Longden or Steve Cauthen.

Nobody ever sat a horse like Willie Shoemaker. Nobody ever won as many races, as many stakes, as much money. One out of every four horses he rode came in first. Shoemaker made more money out of horses than Rockefeller made out of banks. He rode horses like Hemingway wrote books. Damon Runyon would have written poems about him.

It is thus with considerable astonishment that one realizes Willie Shoemaker never won race-riding's biggest bauble -- the Triple Crown. It is not quite akin to Sam Snead's never having won the U.S. Open, or Ernie Banks never having played in a World Series -- but it's close.

BILL SHOEMAKER has won the individual portions of the Triple Crown often enough -- three Kentucky Derbies, two Preaknesses and five Belmonts. But he has never won them in the same year. He is the only one of the jockeys listed above never to have done so. Eddie Arcaro, in fact, won two, and Johnny Longden won the only one he ever contested all the way.

Part of Shoemaker's problem was geography. And part of it was Shoemaker. In the early days, as a California rider, Shoemaker found himself on two Kentucky Derby winners, Swaps and Tomy Lee, who pointed for the Kentucky Derby and then declined the issue in the other two legs of the Triple Crown.

For the rest, Shoemaker puts the inquiry sign on himself. In addition to making a poor pick of mounts, Shoe says he "should have won the Triple on Candy Spots in 1963 and on Damascus in 1967." Damascus, beaten by a 30-1 shot in the Derby, coasted to win in the Preakness and Belmont. Candy Spots won only the Preakness, but Shoemaker admits, "I rode him bad in Kentucky and at the Belmont" where he finished third and second, respectively.

Shoe also stood up in the stirrups in the 1957 Derby with Gallant Man, who then ducked the Preakness, and smashing won the Belmont over Preakness winner Bold Ruler. The supposition is, had Gallant Man won the Derby, he probably would have been supplemented for the Preakness which he skipped. For the rest, Shoe simply made bad choices. Jockeys are notoriously poor handicappers.

SHOE HAS NOT won a Kentucky Derby since 1965 when he was 33 years old. He has not won a Preakness since 1967, but he won a Belmont in 1975 when he was 44 years old, the oldest winner in that event ever.

The oldest rider ever to win a Kentucky Derby was either Eddie Arcaro in 1952 or Jean Cruguet in 1977, depending on which conflicting birth-date you accept. In any case, they were either 36 or 37 years old when they won. Johnny Longden rode in the race till he was 42. Willie Shoemaker hopes to win his fourth this year -- at age 48.

The Shoe begins what may be his last serious attempt to rectify the one blank spot in his otherwise illustrious riding record this Sunday when he takes to the track for almost his 34,000th time on a horse who will be making only his fifth appearance on a race track. It seems an audacious combination, a pair of unlikely pretenders for such an elusive crown, the man nearly 50, and the horse, Raise A Man, a green youngster who never raced as a 2-year-old. Only one horse unraced as a 2-year-old has ever won a Kentucky Derby -- Apollo -- and that was as far back as 1882. Only two other horses who ever subsequently won the Kentucky Derby, Tim Tam and Lucky Debonair, ever came into their 3-year-old years as maidens.

Triple Crowns are harder to win than national lotteries. To ask a horse who was a 3-year-old maiden, and a rider who was a champion when Truman was President, to pull it off is to believe in the Easter Bunny. But, if the Odd Couple do bring off the Santa Anita Derby this Sunday at Arcadia, Calif., look for the rider to be riding in his record-tying 21st Kentucky Derby at Louisville in May on a horse running his seventh race.

Florida's Gators favorites to win NCAA swim crown

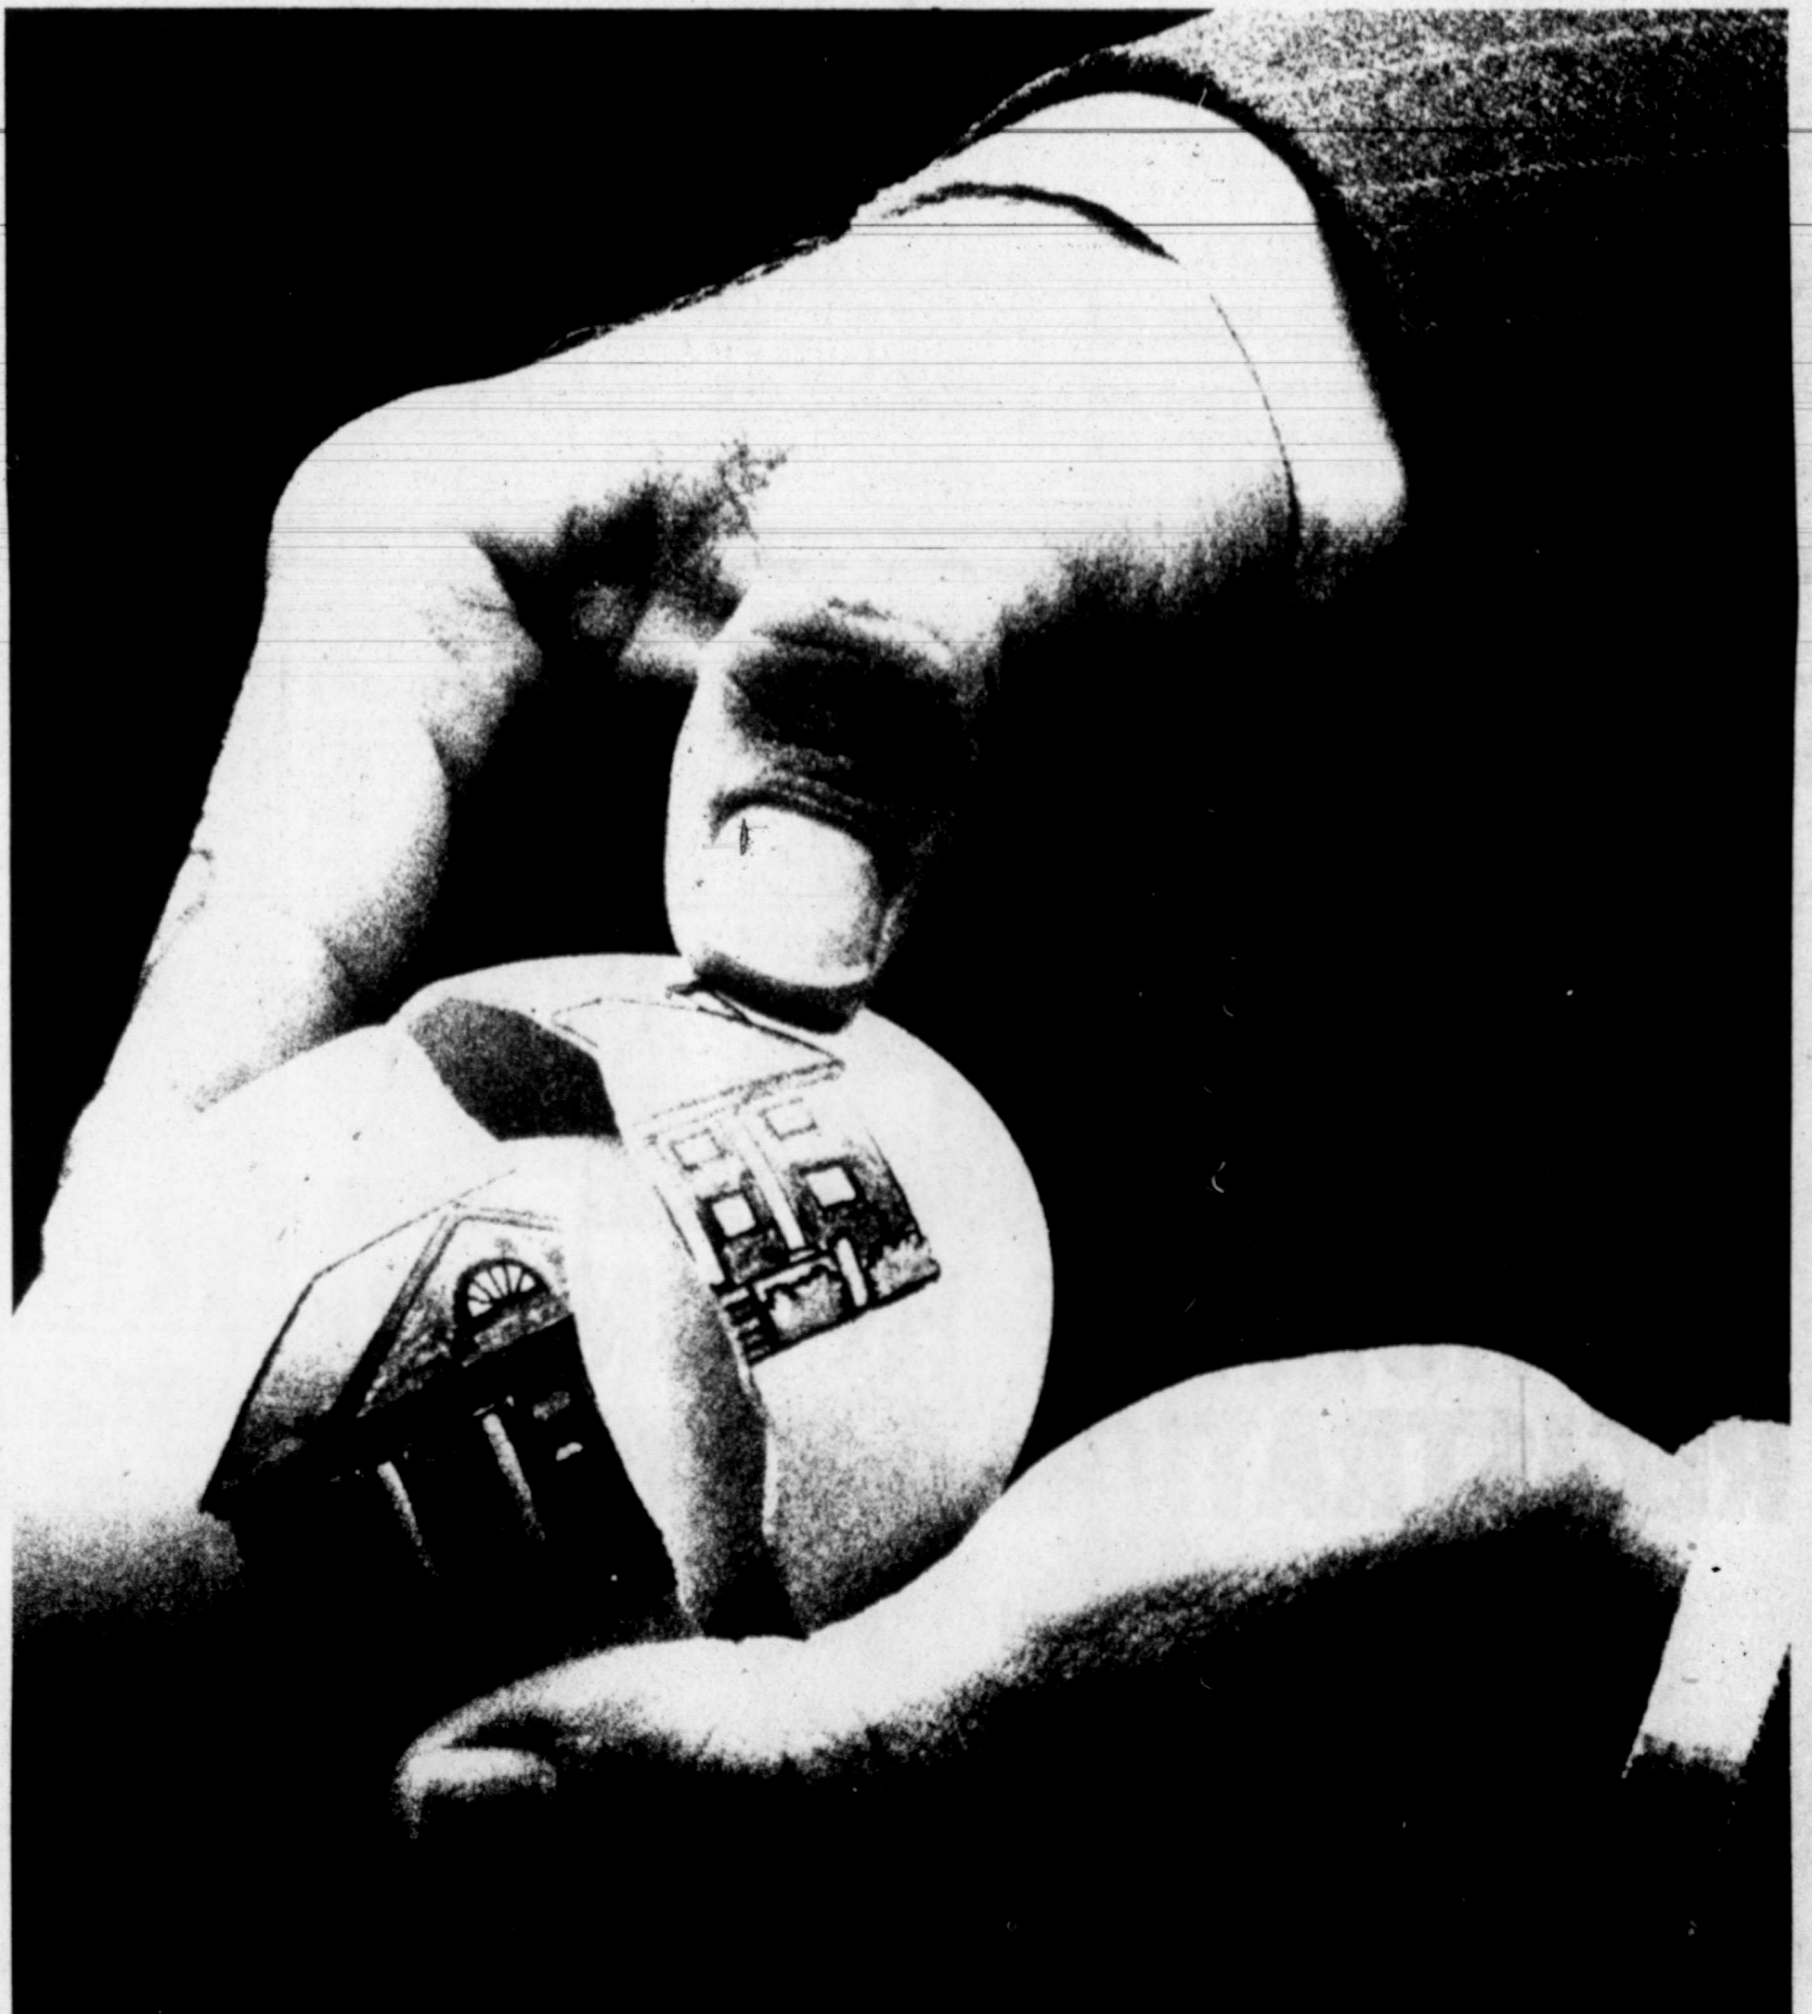

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The fingers are pointing again at Randy Reese's Gators, but the Florida swimming and diving coach isn't so sure they are pointing in the right direction.

Florida is considered the favorite to win its first NCAA swimming and diving championship in the three-day competition beginning today at Harvard. The Gators were third last year behind California and Southern California.

"Last year a lot of people pointed their finger at us (as a favorite). I don't know what they go by. There are four or five teams who can win," Reese said Wednesday.

"It's going to be a mental game throughout the meet. I think the first day is going to be the key," he added. "I think a lot of teams have depth. I think it's going to come down to whoever gets a good start and gets the momentum going."

While some teams have several good swimmers, Florida has a poolful, including Grant Os'lund, who is seeded first in the 100-yard butterfly.

Barbara Mandrell will appear in concert with the Statler Brothers Friday night at Chaparral Center, 3600 Garfield St. Miss Mandrell's hit records include "Married But Not To Each Other," "Woman To Woman," "If Loving You Is Wrong," and "Sleeping Single In A Double Bed." A native of Houston, Miss Mandrell won the Country Music Association's top female vocalist of the year award in 1979, was named top female vocalist by the Academy of Country Music and in the Music City News cover awards.

Four award-winning artists featured at M-OSC concert

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Choral's fifth subscription concert at Lee High School Tuesday night featured four national award winning artists — pianist Kenneth Bookstein, flautist Eugene Tripetsky, violinist Andres Cardenes and pianist Karina Eberl.

It was classical, in more ways than one. Bookstein, a 16-year-old Californian, performed Rachmaninoff's "Rhapsody on a Theme by Paganini" in a very disciplined manner. Although young artists often have a tendency to lead the orchestra, Bookstein was listening for the conductor. Despite the fact that the percussion was at times a little overpowering, Bookstein's piano was not drowned out; his techniques and his rhythm flowed through.

Bookstein, a private student of Aube Tze at the University of California at Los Angeles, won the piano competition at the Aspen Music Festival in 1979 and the national music camp concerto competition held in Interlochen, Mich. He has appeared as guest soloist with the San Diego Symphony, the Redlands Symphony and the World Youth Symphony Orchestra.

Eighteen-year-old Russian-born Juilliard student Tripetsky's performance of the first movement of the Mozart Concerto in G Major was smooth with good arpeggios. His strong solo attack was impressive. Tripetsky's musical studies began in 1966, when he was enrolled in a specialized music school at the Leningrad Conservatory. He is currently studying under the famed performer and teacher, Julius Baker.

At 22, Cardenes' performance of the first movement from the Sibelius Violin Concerto was perhaps the most exciting of the evening. His octave control was excellent and the forte parts he played with three violin luminaries of the 20th century, Ivan Galamian, Nathan Milstein and, at present, Josef Gingold.

Miss Eberl, an 18-year-old New York-born daughter of Russian-German emigres, performed the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1 in E-Flat Major with a light touch on the delicate parts that was impressive especially when weighed against her strong attack on the heavier sections.

A student of Nadia Reisenberg at the Juilliard School, Miss Eberl has performed annual recitals in New York since the age of 11. She has also studied in Paris under Jean Marie Darre and Yvonne Lefebvre.

The standing ovation that these artists received was well earned for it was obvious that not only talent, but also years of work, dedication and practice had gone into each one's classical performance.

Gonzalez' foe will run

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A visiting state judge ruled Wednesday against Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, who had sought to have Republican opponent Merle Nash removed from the May 3 Republican primary ballot.

Both men are unopposed in their respective primaries. Gonzalez cited a technical violation, saying the city of residence had been left off the addresses of voters signing petitions Nash used to get a spot on the GOP ballot.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE Census Bureau almost misses family in Plains

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is only one house on Woodland Drive in Plains, Ga. It belongs to Jimmy Carter.

You might assume that the U.S. Government would know the address of the president's comfortable brick ramblar in a town where everyone knows everyone else.

But the Carters — Jimmy, wife Rosalynn and 12-year-old Amy — might have been missed in this year's census if the Census Bureau and the Postal Service hadn't staged a dress rehearsal earlier this month of their planned mailing Friday to practically every household in the United States.

On March 5, the district census office at Albany, Ga., about 30 miles from Plains, mailed a test questionnaire addressed to "President James E. Carter, Woodland Drive, Plains, GA 31780."

A few days later, the folks who run the Albany office were startled to see the Carter questionnaire returned stamped: "Undeliverable. Show Box Number."

When folks at the White House heard about it, they were equally surprised and, like Americans everywhere, were quick to make choice comments about the Postal Service.

But Gus Saul, a spokesman for the Postal Service, insisted the discredit is undeserved.

There is no city delivery in Plains, Saul explained. Therefore, residents must get their mail in rural roadside mailboxes or at the Post Office. The Carters for years have had a lock box at the local Post Office and, since Jimmy became president, their mail has been forwarded to the White House, the spokesman said.

He added that postal employees, in returning the census form, were following specific instructions designed to weed out duplicate questionnaires, out-of-date addresses and other snafus that could affect the accuracy of the count.

"Of course they knew where the president lives," Saul said in defense of the men and women who deliver the mail. "And when they returned the form, they sent along a blue card with the box number, so the bureau could correct its records before the mass mailing."

THERE WERE TIMES a few weeks ago when the president must have been glad he writes many of his notes and letters in longhand.

That, of course, was after his efficient personal secretary, Susan Clough, was bitten on the right hand by her Chesapeake Bay retriever.

"She's about the fastest typist I've ever seen," Carter marveled as he emerged from a visit to Ms. Clough's bedside at the Bethesda, Md., naval medical center.

But the dog's bite was deep and doctors were fearful for a time that tendon damage might end Ms. Clough's typing career.

The story has a happy ending. Therapy helped save her typing skills and she's back on the job in Carter's outer office, typing almost as fast as ever. She also keeps handy, and squeezes, a hard rubber ball to keep the injured hand in shape.

DO THE PEOPLE who schedule Carter's official appointments speak to those who line up his political activities, limited as those activities have been?

The question arises because Carter's announced schedule for last Friday ended at 3:05 p.m. with the president slated to board a helicopter for Camp David, Md.

Early Friday afternoon, however, reporters were told that Carter's departure would not occur until 4:30 p.m.

These being days of global uncertainty, the White House press corps scurried to find out if some unexpected development had prompted the change of plans.

As it turned out, someone had failed to insert into Carter's announced schedule enough time for separate and unannounced presidential interviews with representatives of five New York television stations.

The interviews, hardly spur-of-the-moment affairs, had been arranged several days earlier as part of the president's "non-campaigning" in advance of Tuesday's New York primary.

Kiker to speak at C. of C. dinner

Midland residents can get a peek at what's going to happen in the future when Douglas Kiker, NBC political correspondent, speaks Monday at the Midland Chamber of Commerce annual membership dinner.

The affair will begin at 7:30 p.m. and is being held in the recently-completed Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

Topic of Kiker's speech will be "What Lies Ahead for the Nation: A View from Washington, D.C." Kiker was named a political correspondent for NBC News in July 1976, after serving for a year as Washington correspondent for the "Today" program. He joined NBC News in September 1966 as a Washington correspondent. Kiker remained in that position until November 1969 when he was assigned to Rome.

He returned to Washington in October 1971 and played a vital role in NBC News' 1972 election year coverage. At the Democratic and Republican conventions that year he was a member of the NBC News' acclaimed floor team.

Before joining NBC News, Kiker was The New York Herald-Tribune's White House correspondent, beginning in 1963. Prior to that, he was director of information for the Peace Corps.

Tickets to the dinner are still available and may be obtained by calling the Midland Chamber of Commerce, 683-3381, or going by the office at 109 N. Main St.

Suit appeal dismissed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday dismissed for want of jurisdiction an appeal in an Ector County lawsuit in which the El Paso Court of Civil Appeals had held venue should be retained in Ector County.

The lawsuit was brought by Verne Drilling Co. against Parks-Davis Auctioneers, Inc., with the defendant asking to have the case transferred to Dallas County.

According to the appeals court opinion, Verne Drilling was interested in purchasing the assets of another drilling company and contacted Parks-Davis concerning an appraisal.

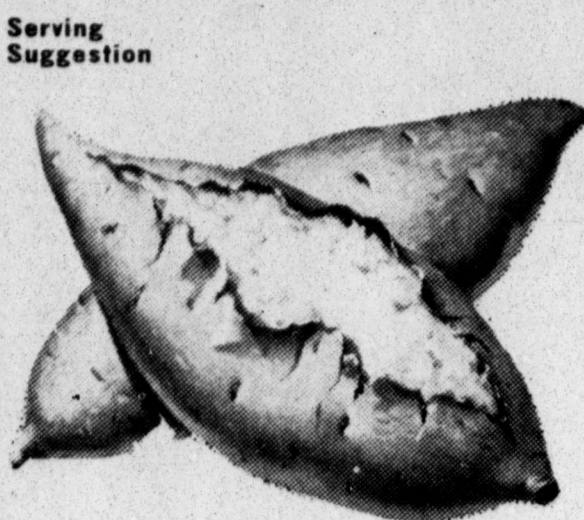

Verne Drilling alleged Parks-Davis used information related to that agreement to purchase a drilling rig in Saudi Arabia for itself.

The question of where the case should be tried arose, with the appeals court holding it should be tried in Ector County.

Laureates claim Nobel prizes mixed blessings

PALM COAST, Fla. (AP) — Winding the Nobel Prize can be a mixed blessing, five Nobel laureates agree.

Donald Glaser, winner of the 1960 physics prize for his invention of the bubble chamber used to trace the paths of subatomic particles, told reporters here Tuesday the notoriety of the prize had "an interesting psychological effect."

"It made it very hard to continue to do science," Glaser said. "It's hard to discipline yourself to recognize that the next thing you do won't be as important."

The Nobel laureates spoke at a news conference on the last day of a three-day science conference sponsored by the French Institute de la Vie and the universities of Florida and Uppsala, Sweden.

Sir John C. Eccles, 1963 medicine winner for his description of the way nerve impulses travel throughout the body, said the prize means easier access to publishers but "in your local community, it's an embarrassment."

Stock market report

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market lapsed into another broad decline today, resuming the slide that began six weeks ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Wednesday at its lowest level in almost two years, lost another 7.34 to 754.78 by noon today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than an 8-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market made a bid to rally in early trading Wednesday, but the advance collapsed late in the session.

Analysts said that showing prompted more selling today.

Brokers said concerns over record-high interest rates, inflation and the prospect of a recession were still weighing down the market.

The NYSE's composite index lost .81 to 55.17. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 9.09 at 222.83.

Volume on the Big Board, came to 22.48 million shares at noon.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market lapsed into another broad decline today, resuming the slide that began six weeks ago.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Wednesday at its lowest level in almost two years, lost another 7.34 to 754.78 by noon today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than an 8-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market made a bid to rally in early trading Wednesday, but the advance collapsed late in the session.

Analysts said that showing prompted more selling today.

Brokers said concerns over record-high interest rates, inflation and the prospect of a recession were still weighing down the market.

Precious-metals stocks tumbled as gold prices fell to around the $475-an-ounce level, down more than $20 from Wednesday's late price in New York.

The NYSE's composite index lost .81 to 55.17. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 9.09 at 222.83.

Volume on the Big Board, came to 22.48 million shares at noon.

Men with cash, wits may realize inflation profits

NEW YORK (AP) - The weakening economy is not without opportunities for those with cash, wits and willingness to assume risk.

In housing, for example, buyers can find perhaps more bargains than a month or two ago, despite the almost prohibitive cost and shortage of conventional mortgage money.

Some buyers are surprised by the willingness of sellers to cooperate, until they learn that the sellers stand to gain too, especially if they have big capital gains on which they wish to avoid taxes.

The seller can sidestep a good deal of the potential tax liability by agreeing to accept a down payment of less than 30 percent, with the remainder to be paid in installments over a period of years.

To close the sale, the seller is likely to offer a lower interest rate than would a commercial lender, although he is likely to seek repayment over a brief period, perhaps no longer than 10 or 15 years.

To help lower monthly charges, sellers often permit the buyer to repay on the basis of a longer (and lower) amortization table, making up the difference after 10 or 15 years with a final "balloon" payment.

Real estate agents and their organizations maintain that this and similar financing techniques have managed to keep the resale market from dipping below 3 million sales a year, despite the credit squeeze.

In the stock market, some investors view the low price-earnings ratios of blue chip stocks as a rare opportunity. Those ratios generally have been in double digits - from 10 to 50, for example - until the past few years. Last week a Dow Jones average of 65 stocks fell to just 6.3.

Scores of reasons for the decline can be offered, but they add up to the same conclusion: Investors are unwilling to pay for future earnings when they can see so little of the future. They are uncertain.

But, say some long-time stock investors, with the industrial might of America available for less than book value, and at one-half or less the traditional price-earnings ratios, the potential for gains is good.

Corporate bonds also present possibilities for the financially endowed risk-taker. As interest rates soared, bond prices plunged, and some brokers now view the scene as a disaster area.

Still, for those with nerve, and faith that economic stability will return, the possibilities for sizeable capital gains are there. Some highly rated bonds can be picked up for 75 percent of face value.

Meanwhile, the bond buyer can enjoy historically high yields, just as can those with cash to invest in money market funds. The latter now can earn close to 16 percent, a rate that at least helps to retain capital.

As families seek to cut down, bartering has become more popular. While it is difficult to obtain figures for such an unorganized, unregulated activity, advertisements give an idea of its prevalence.

Flea market activity is also said to be expanding, as individuals seek to dispose of attic items. An added advantage, it is claimed, is that such cash income leaves little evidence for the tax-collector.

Buyers as such sales often obtain objects at far below the price they might have to pay through commercial outlets, especially since they can better employ their bargaining skills.

Whatever techniques are used to create or exploit such opportunities, the investor still has to have wits, courage and some verewithal, and at least two of those qualities are difficult to rush these days.

Now she likes letters

MADISON, Wis. (AP) - Lori Monk never liked reading anyone else's mail. But that was before she was hired to answer the thousands of letters from all over the world for Olympic speed skaters Eric and Beth Heiden.

She says about 15,000 letters, hand-made gifts and news clippings have arrived here for the brother and sister since the Winter Games ended last month. The mail is running about even for Eric and Beth, even though she won one bronze medal while he captured an unprecedented five golds.

"After reading these letters, it makes me really proud of Americans and the way they responded," Ms. Monk said in her office, known as "The Heiden Room" of the Madison Chamber of Commerce.

Many of the letters are simply addressed "Eric Heiden, Madison, Wisconsin," and a half dozen or so were delivered with only the words "Eric" or "Beth" scrawled on them.

"No address, no city, no nothing," Ms. Monk marveled.

Ms. Monk said Eric and Beth eventually will get every piece of mail.

"If it was me, I'd save it all and go through it slowly, over the years. That's probably what they'll do," Ms. Monk said.

Canada's Western provinces revive separatism talk

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — As French-speaking Quebec in the East prepares a referendum on the separatism issue, some Western Canadians are beginning to talk again of going their own way too.

The talk of separation by Canada's Western provinces comes as a result of the loss of last month's elections by the Conservative Party of Joe Clark, a Westerner who had served as prime minister for nine months.

Many people here in oil-rich Alberta said "the West" had lost the election. The Liberals won a majority with 146 seats, but not one west of Winnipeg in Manitoba.

It was not the first time that Albertans had turned their minds to independence. There were rumblings of separation in the mid-1970s, with suggestions of linking with the United States, but the idea drew little support.

"In the past it has been a knee-jerk reaction," Warren Blackman, an economics professor at the University of Calgary, said in an interview recently. "I think this time it has a greater significance. Never in Alberta history has the province been in this position. It is one of the wealthiest provinces. The population has grown. It has all the necessary qualifications for an independent state."

Blackman says he doesn't believe in separatism, but a study he did in 1974 on the costs of continued confederation with Canada convinced him it would be economically feasible for Alberta to go it alone or form an alliance with the other three Western provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

Canada is too large and would work better, economically, divided into regions with some sort of regional federation or common-market association, he says.

Western independence caught the interest of many Albertans in 1974, when the Liberal Party of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau formed a minority government with only 13 Western seats, mostly from British Columbia.

A group of Calgarians, upset over the Liberals' oil export tax that subsidized imported oil for Quebec and the Atlantic provinces, formed a loose-knit group called the Independent Alberta Association.

The association was momentarily buoyed by the election of separatist Rene Levesque as premier in Quebec, but never did form a political party.

Some in Calgary who talk of separation express the belief that Trudeau, who was re-elected in February, will continue his hard federalist stand and this will mean unfavorable changes for the provinces and the West.

Others, such as Glen Morrison, president of Renn Industries Inc., reject separatism, but agree the time for a strong central government in Ottawa is gone and the West needs more autonomy.

James Richardson, a former Liberal defense minister who quit the party over a disagreement on language policies, says most Western Canadians don't want to separate, "but most people want to express their frustration. They want some strong voice in Ottawa to represent them."

Central to the separatist argument is the feeling that Westerners pay billions of dollars in taxes to Ottawa, but without representation in the government they have little say in how the money is spent. While the Quebec independence movement is based largely on cultural and linguistic matters, the basis of Western discontent seems mainly economic.

Long-standing grievances persist: tariffs and freight rates that appear to encourage manufacturing in central Canada (chiefly Ontario) at the expense of manufacturing in the West.

Blackman's 1974 study concluded that federal programs for all provinces and territories and the oil and gas export taxes that subsidize imported oil cost Alberta $2 billion a year. The figure today would be much higher.

The study says the West has become a provider of raw materials and energy for central Canada and such a "colony" system is no longer efficient.

A common complaint is that railroads charge more for shipping manufactured goods eastward than westward. That and the higher wages paid in Alberta's resource-based economy mean manufacturing here will be non-competitive, says Blackman. And the federal tariff structure forces Westerners to buy goods from central Canada at high prices.

Another Western economist, Kenneth Norrie, says the study was a "snowjob."

The University of Alberta economics professor says it is difficult to prove consistent discrimination by the federal government against the West, but he agrees with most economists that the price of Western oil for sale within Canada is too low at $14.50 a barrel. The world price of oil now is more than $30 a barrel.

Tariffs, Norrie says, are meant to protect all Canadian industry and there is nothing to prevent a Western manufacturer, if all other conditions were favorable, from setting up shop to compete with central Canada.

There is no federal legislation compelling railroads to favor central Canada, he says, but adds the West faces the disadvantage of being far from the large central Canadian market.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — The developer of the Scarsdale diet left the woman charged in his shooting death $220,000 and willed another $200,000 to a nurse who was reportedly the third member of a love triangle.

Dr. Herman Tarnower, 69, was slain March 10, and Jean Harris, former headmistress of a posh girls' school, was indicted Tuesday on a charge of second-degree murder in his death.

Tarnower's will, filed Wednesday in Westchester County Surrogate Court, disposed of about $1 million to family and friends, including $220,000 to Mrs. Harris and $200,000 to Lynne Tryforos.

The doctor, who never married, was a long-time companion of Mrs. Harris. Recently, he had been seeing Mrs. Tryforos.

The 13-page will also set aside $190,000 for the college educations of Mrs. Tryforos' two children. She is divorced.

Committee organized

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ended its jurisdictional disputes on energy issues by creating a new committee, but the House is trying to do the same thing by giving an old committee a new name.

The House voted 300-111 Tuesday against forming a panel similar to the Energy Committee the Senate established five years ago.

Instead, House members decided to keep sending energy bills to the Commerce Committee, where most of them have been going since 1946, and to rename it the Energy and Commerce Committee.

Tuesday's vote was a stinging defeat for activists in the House who have sought for years to consolidate widely scattered energy jurisdiction in a separate, central committee.

"It was self-serving and damaging to the nation's energy future," said Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Calif., who chaired the six-month, $700,000 House study that produced the legislation calling for the energy committee.

Chairmen of the committees and subcommittees who would have lost jurisdiction under the reorganization led the battle against the plan.

The reorganization would "waste lots of money and accomplish nothing," said Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the Commerce Committee's energy and power subcommittee.

The House action slightly expands the jurisdiction of the Commerce Committee to make clear it is the prime energy panel. But critics said that was merely a cosmetic change to go along with the new name.

And Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, D-N.Y., who offered the winning plan to retain existing committees, conceded in an interview after the vote that the Commerce Committee "doesn't get substantially more than it's had."

Of the House decision to reject flatly the proposal of its own Select Committee on Committees for the new energy panel, Bingham said: "I'm afraid that's happened around here before."

During House debate, Bingham called the plan for a single energy panel "a totally impossible dream." Rather than streamlining the handling of energy bills, it would only "add to the complexity," he argued.

But Common Cause, a citizens' group that supported the reorganization, said in a statement issued after the vote:

"Members of Congress have shown they are far more concerned about protecting their own political turf than they are in solving the nation's energy crisis."

While the new committee would have gained jurisdiction from a total of 83 separate House panels, its major elements would have come from the Commerce, Interior, Public Works and Science-Technology committees.

In 1974, the House rejected a similar plan that would have established a consolidated energy committee with additional jurisdiction over environmental legislation.

Field work announced

Wood, McShane & Thams of Monahan spotted No. 1 Hunt Oil Co. in the Block A-34 (Yates gas) pool of north Andrews County.

The field brackets the Andrews-Gaines county line.

Contract depth is 4,400 feet.

EDDY AREA
Meadco Properties Ltd. of Midland spotted No. 1 Harris-Federal as a 4,400-foot test in an undesignated Delaware area of Eddy County, N.M.

It is 3,153 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 4-21-29e and 15 miles northeast of Carlsbad.

Contract depth is 4,400 feet.

GARZA COUNTY
WTG Exploration Inc., Midland, No. 1 P. C. Head is a re-entry operation in the WTG (Glorieta) pool of Garza County.

It is the former J. D. Hunter No. 1 Head which was abandoned in 1946 at 3,510 feet.

The re-entry, 10 miles north of Post, will be tested at approximately 3,200 feet.

The site is 2,633 feet from north and 1,787 feet from west lines of section 1142, TW&NG survey, abstract 1113. It is an east offset to No. 5 Williams, an active project.

Midland line work talked

TULSA, Okla. — Pacific Coast Pipeline Co. of Houston is making preliminary plans to build a 36-inch artery to move 500,000 to 800,000 barrel of crude oil from California to Midland, Texas, according to Jim West, news editor of the "Oil & Gas Journal."

"It's merely a proposal; they're just looking at it," West told The Reporter-Telegram this morning.

West said the system would be "somewhat similar" to the scrapped Pactex line, which Sohio Petroleum Co. had planned to use to pipe Alaskan crude oil from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland. From Midland, the oil would piped to refineries elsewhere in the nation.

But Sohio, which gained the bulk of environmental clearance to build links in an existing line, was blocked in its effort by Long Beach environmentalists, who were apprehensive of potential oil spills polluting the ocean and land.

All Sohio lacked for the go-ahead on the Long Beach-to-Midland project was a permit to build a receiving terminal at the seaport city in Southern California.

Pacific Coast Pipeline's proposal calls for piping crude oil from a terminal at Bakersfield, which is about 100 miles inland, and moving it via the proposed 36-inch line to Midland.

Field wells final

Sun Oil Co. No. 3 Roy Mullen has been completed as the fourth well in the Mullen Ranch (Ellenburger) field of Stonewall County, five miles northwest of Swenson.

Senate ready for final ballot in 'windfall' bill

By JIM LUTHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is ready for a final vote on a compromise "windfall" tax on the oil industry, a $227.7 billion measure designed as a cornerstone of President Carter's energy policy.

Senate leaders predicted the bill would pass its last test in Congress today — 11 months after Carter recommended it. That would send it to the president for his signature.

But opponents were assured two final chances of stopping the measure:

—Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., asked the Senate to send the bill to the Appropriations Committee, which would study how the suggested allocation of the tax revenues — including 60 percent for income tax reductions — would affect efforts to hold down federal spending.

—Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., asked that the bill be sent to the Finance Committee for hearings on how the tax would affect U.S. oil production, especially independent producers.

Passage of either motion would delay final action on the tax, which is due to take effect retroactively to March 1. Defeat of both would bring a final vote immediately.

The bill is a compromise version of the $294 billion tax Carter recommended last April after deciding to phase out federal price controls on U.S. crude oil. He began decontrol in an effort to spur domestic oil production and reduce reliance on imports.

Decontrol will allow U.S. prices to rise to world market levels and cost consumers an estimated $1 trillion in the 1980s. The tax will take $227.7 billion of that "windfall" and, after other federal and state taxes are subtracted, will leave the oil industry $221 billion it would not have had under continued controls.

Opponents of the bill said the tax would cripple the drive for energy independence by taking money the oil industry could invest in the search for more energy.

Dole, who represents an oil-producing state, told the Senate, "I do believe the oil industry can live with what we've done with this tax."

The Carter administration insisted that without the tax, the public and Congress would demand a return to price controls. Many economists say controls have held U.S. prices so much below world levels that there has been little incentive for Americans to conserve energy.

The tax would be paid by 12,000 oil producers and by hundreds of thousands of people who own lands from which oil is pumped.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., I-Va., said the $227.7 billion tax will stimulate additional government spending, rather than additional energy production. "Funneling this money to the government is like giving a spendthrift a new set of credit cards," he said.

The Senate-House conference committee that worked out the compromise version of the tax recommended that 60 percent of the $227.7 billion — $137 billion — be set aside for income tax reductions. But that is not binding. Any tax cut would have to be approved by Congress in separate legislation.

An additional 25 percent — $57 billion — would help lower-income families pay rising energy costs. The remaining $34 billion would be earmarked for energy development and improvements in the transportation system.

The bill authorizes spending $3.1 billion next year for energy aid to the poor. It includes $8.3 billion in business tax incentives for energy conservation and development, and $600 million for individual incentives.

Our Used Cars Are Sold With As Much Pride As Our New Cars.

Many people are not aware that on many occasions we spend good money and time on the used cars we sell. Those trade-in cars that do not meet our standards never appear in our used car department. The newer model trade-ins in fine condition, get a quick check, a lick and some polish...while the good older ones do get fixed up, if we feel they are worth the money. That's why we offer every used car with pride.
