Congress abruptly ends moratorium on Iran crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress' self-imposed moratorium on the Iranian stalemate is ending abruptly with investigations of last week's failed commando raid.

Pollution groups moving concern to the indoors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concerns about air pollution are moving indoors. Indoor air quality, generally ignored as environmentalists have urged crackdowns on pollution outside, is becoming a new concern as consumers insulate homes.

free the U.S. hostages in Iran. The latest Iranian crisis was stealing congressional attention away from domestic issues, at least for the moment.

The failed mission, which resulted in the death of eight U.S. servicemen, has brought to an end the hands-off policy that Congress has observed since the hostages were since last Nov. 4.

Congressional leaders have resisted the temptation to hold hearings into the matter for fear of undermining the president's efforts to win their release.

But that's all changed. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee tentatively scheduled an inquiry to begin Tuesday into the overall Iran-hostage situation.

Calculating your own inflation

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Are you winning or losing the war against inflation?

One way to figure out where you stand is to calculate your own inflation rate and compare it to the government's Consumer Price Index. It will take some time and you'll have to wade through a lot of numbers, but you'll be able to tell at a glance which areas of your budget are rising faster than average and where you need to cut spending.

Economists at Citibank, the nation's second-biggest commercial bank, developed a step-by-step method consumers can use to determine their "Personal Price Index." Here's how it works.

Start by determining your spending patterns. The government index is weighted to measure average spending, based on surveys conducted in 1972 and 1973. Very few people match the average exactly. That's why increases and decreases in your spending don't match the index.

Collect receipts for spending over a fixed period of time in seven basic categories: food, housing, transportation, medical, entertainment, clothing and upkeep and miscellaneous.

Do not include income taxes, Social Security, life insurance, gifts or any type of savings. Those items are not included in the Consumer Price Index. Housing should cover maintenance expenses like fuel and property taxes, but should not include money that goes to pay off the mortgage itself. That's considered savings.

Add up the bills and figure out what portion of the total went for each category. It's easier if you have a calculator, but you can work it out with a pencil and paper if you must. Simply divide each category by the total sum to get the percentage.

Suppose, for example, you spent $3,000 in the first quarter of the year. Assume $600 went for food, $1,450 for housing, $100 for transportation, $200 for clothing, $125 for medical care, $75 for entertainment and $150 for all other goods and services.

Your percentages or personal weights are: Food, 20 percent, housing, 48 percent, transportation, 13 percent, clothing, 7 percent, medical care, 4 percent, entertainment, 3 percent, and other, 5 percent.

The approximate national averages for urban consumers, according to the Labor Department, are: Food, 18 percent, housing, 44 percent, transportation, 18 percent, clothing, 6 percent, medical costs, 5 percent, entertainment, 4 percent, and other, 5 percent.

For the next step, you'll need the individual indexes that make up the CPI. Each category has its own index. You can use the national figures or you can contact the nearest office of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and ask to be put on the mailing list for the more localized, regional index.

Multiply each category index by your personal spending weight. (Don't forget the decimal point, 20 percent, for example, should be expressed as .20.) Here's how it would work if you used the national indexes for March and the hypothetical weights calculated above.

Category CPI Weight Personal Index
Food 241.0 20 48.2
Housing 254.5 48 122.2
Transportation 243.7 13 31.7
Clothing 176.0 7 12.3
Medical 260.2 4 10.4
Entertainment 200.6 3 6.0
Other 208.9 5 10.5
Add up the personal index figures. In the example above, the total comes out to 241.3. The overall Consumer Price Index in March stood at 239.8.

U.S. Ambassador calls captors 'teeny-boppers'

HOMESTEAD AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Diego Ascencio, freed after 61 days as a hostage in Colombia, called his guerrilla captors a "bunch of spaced out teeny boppers" and said he nearly dissuaded some of them from Marxistism.

An exuberant Ascencio told a State Department spokesman he could have converted a few of the leftists to capitalism if he had more time with them in the Dominican Republic Embassy at Bogota.

He said he was making great progress in converting some of them to capitalism. Passage said by telephone Sunday from the ambassador's suite at the base.

DPS recovers nine stolen rigs

Officers from four branches of the Midland office of the Department of Public Safety have recovered nine truck tractor semi-trailer rigs heaved stolen in a theft ring operating in Alabama, Tennessee and Texas.

According to a department spokesman, the nine rigs recovered in Andrews, Crane and Ward counties are estimated at $700,000.

Details were sketchy this morning but, according to the spokesman, the rigs were recovered over a period starting last Tuesday when the department received information concerning the theft ring.

The trucks recovered were 1978 to 1980-model vehicles and included new and used trucks.

There apparently have been no arrests in connection with the thefts.

The investigation, which includes officers from the department's motor vehicle theft, motor vehicle inspection, narcotics and Texas Rangers services, is continuing, said the spokesman.

Refugee boatlift survives storms

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The week-old Cuban boatlift that has ferried 2,500 refugees to freedom in defiance of U.S. government warnings survived a furious storm that swept the Florida Straits with hurricane-force winds and temporarily stopped the exodus.

"If there was anybody out there, they wouldn't have a chance," a National Weather Service forecaster said Sunday as winds gusted to 90 mph across the 90 miles of churning sea.

But the U.S. Coast Guard, which received 29 rescue calls in one five-minute period alone Sunday, reported no deaths or serious injuries.

"The people today should consider themselves very lucky," Cmdr. Samuel J. Dennis said.

Six boats carrying 650 Cubans arrived Sunday morning before the thunderstorm interrupted the influx. Among them was a 6-hour-old boy, born to one of 200 refugees packed aboard a 68-foot shrimp boat.

While the flow of refugees was momentarily halted, the battle over what to do with them intensified. In Miami, the ultimate destination of most refugees, Mayor Maurice Ferré said he would seek to have the city declared a disaster area to obtain more federal aid.

Meanwhile, an Immigration and Naturalization Service official in Key West said there are signs that Castro is beginning to clean out his jails and mental institutions.

"We had some people here today who said they had been in prison and we had a couple who were obviously mentally deranged," INS officer Kent Wheeler said.

Coast Guard cutters towed in nearly 20 disabled boats Sunday, and six exiles were plucked from the sea by a Coast Guard helicopter after their boat sank. One 24-foot boat was found capsized about 30 miles north of Cuba with a life jacket the only remaining sign of its crew.

"I felt like this was it, welcome to death," said Rafael Sotolongo, rescued after his 21-foot boat overturned. "I commended my soul to God."

Apparently, no boats left the Cuban port of Mariel Sunday, but the morning arrivals swelled the total to more than 3,500 since the mass exodus began a week ago.

Motherly love on movie set

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Audrey Hepburn finished shooting her scene in the movie, then bundled herself in a blanket and watched a young actor rehearse his role.

Professional interest? No, motherly love. The young man with a small role in 20th Century-Fox's "They All Laughed" is Sean Ferrer, her 19-year-old son, the Daily News reported today.

His father is actor Mel Ferrer, who divorced Miss Hepburn in 1968 after 13 years of marriage. Miss Hepburn is 51.

Young Ferrer also is working as an assistant to the production staff of the film. He recently worked as assistant director while filming "Inchon," which stars Laurence Olivier as Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Tommy Caldwell, bass player for the Marshall Tucker Band, died early today at Spartanburg General Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

The 30-year-old musician had been listed in stable but critical condition since last Tuesday when he suffered extensive head injuries in an automobile accident.

Authorities said Caldwell's jeep flipped over after it hit a stalled car on a Spartanburg street.

On Sunday a spokesman for the Southern rock band said the group had canceled its spring tour of several Midwestern cities scheduled to begin Wednesday.

The band will not appear in concert for "maybe 90 days, maybe six months," the spokesman said. He indicated the tour would be rescheduled, but could not say when.

NEW YORK (AP) — There was the wet bikini role in "Dr. No." Playboy centerfolds, dozens of films and adoring fans. And now, at 44, there's going to be a baby for Ursula Andress.

"Love affairs (Jean-Paul Belmondo) and husbands (John Derek) can end, but a child is forever.... With the baby, I feel that I am taking off my training wheels and getting into the mainstream of life," she told People magazine.

The father-to-be is Harry Hamlin, 28, an actor and Yale graduate who will appear with Miss Andress in "Clash of the Titans," to be released next year.

They plan to marry after the baby (a boy, according to the amniocentesis test recommended for mothers-to-be over 35) is born in mid-May.

"The decision to have a child is not easy," she said. "I lived without restriction until today."

The 84-year-old actor, star of many gangster movies in the 1930s and '40s has been hospitalized for several weeks.

Two Americans survive air crash

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Two Americans were among the 13 survivors of the crash of a Thai airliner north of Bangkok in which 40 persons were killed, officials said. The plane was struck by lightning.

The Americans were identified as Peter Laramy and Tony Stein. No hometowns were immediately available.

Laramy, originally from a New England state, is sales manager of Adams International in Bangkok. An employee of the company said Laramy had gone back to Khom Kaen province in northeastern Thailand in connection with the company's tobacco export business.

A spokesman for the American Embassy said Stein is still in the intensive care unit of Bhumipol Hospital, suffering from severe back, rib and hand injuries.

The plane, a twin-engine British Avro prop-jet, crashed in a rice field Sunday after it was hit by lightning and was coming in to land at Bangkok's Don Muang Airport. It was arriving from Khom Kaen, in northeast Thailand.

A spokesman for Thai Airways said a preliminary investigation indicated that the pilot lost control of the plane when he encountered atmosphere turbulence. The spokesman said the pilot had come down to about 300 feet preparatory to landing when the plane was hit by lightning during a sudden storm.

Villagers told police the plane dove to the ground trailing smoke, buried its nose in the earth and exploded, sending bodies flying through the air. The tail section remained intact, and two men ran from it, the villagers said.

All four crew members were killed.

Queen Sirikit went to the Phra Sri Mahatit temple Sunday night to attend the funeral of one of the crash victims, the wife of Privy Councillor Chao Nasilavant. She was returning from the northeast with seven monks she invited to come to Bangkok to perform religious ceremonies in connection with the 30th wedding anniversary of King Bhumipol and the queen today.

All seven monks died in the crash.

Kokomo Klan march peaceful

KOKOMO, Ind. (AP) — Mayor Stephen J. Daily says he's pleased the Ku Klux Klan marched peacefully in his city, but he hopes the group doesn't ask permission to do it again next year.

"We felt we couldn't turn down their request on constitutional grounds, but we've been tense for the last two or three months," said Daily, who watched Saturday's rally from an empty office building facing the downtown square in this north-central Indiana city of 43,000.

The march, which lasted less than 10 minutes, attracted about 40 Klansmen dressed in white robes and the traditional pointed hoods.

"Yes, I'm nervous," said one Klansman, who would identify himself only as Boyd. "There are not as many Klansmen here as we had hoped, but I think that's because we were taken to a secret place, and many couldn't find it."

Before the parade, the Klansmen were searched for weapons at an undisclosed location. After the march they were led through a side alley, herded into a waiting moving van and senior citizens bus, and driven away.

The most direct confrontation occurred after the Klan left the area as about 75 policemen, armed with guns and riot sticks, drove back members of the United Coalition Against the Klan.

The coalition, with many of its 60 participants wearing helmets, carrying sticks and chanting "the cops and the Klan go hand in hand," were driven back by the threat of tear gas.

Earlier in the day, the coalition held a rally and urged about 100 observers lining the streets to join them in an effort to stop the Klan from marching.

The Klan's march was termed a recruitment effort, but most residents did not participate in either demonstration.

"I don't think either group made any friends in the city of Kokomo," Daily said.

13 inmates escape San Francisco jail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police say they are ready for possible bank robberies and burglaries in the Bay area today after the largest jail break in the city's history.

Thirteen prisoners broke out of the Hall of Justice's seventh-floor jail early Sunday, police said. Three were quickly recaptured. No injuries were reported.

Those at-large were described as dangerous and possibly armed.

"We have information that they'll attempt armed robberies and burglaries," said San Francisco police Sgt. John Willet. "We know they're armed, and we assume they're trying to get out of the Bay area."

Willet said most of the fugitives came from the maximum security area and were in jail on burglary and robbery charges. They had a revolver, tear gas and several knives during the escape. Seven were inmate trustees.

Police dogs, heavily armed police and sheriff's officers combed San Francisco Bay area Sunday, checking out several residences of friends and relatives of the fugitives.

The breakout occurred during the breakfast hour and was planned by trustees and some prisoners.

ers, Sheriff Mike Hennessey said.

Hennessey's successful election campaign last year called for tighter security for the jail.

Women guards file lawsuit

DETROIT (AP) — Two female prison guards who say they were denied promotions because they weren't allowed to work in men's cellblocks have filed a $225 million lawsuit.

But the state says it only wants to protect the convicts' privacy.

Jennie Griffin, who works at Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson, and Constance M. Anderson, who works at the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia, contend male prison employees who put in two years in the cellblocks are automatically boosted to a civil service level higher than women can receive.

"They're obviously saying you can never be promoted," their attorney, Kurt Berggren, said Saturday.

which had seen numerous escapes.

First, the trustees locked six unarmed deputies and the jail cook in a holding cell after jumping them with knives and a revolver. Then they selectively released four prisoners from the maximum security area.

One of them, murder suspect Maurice Keenan, 29, had escaped twice from the jail, and the other three had escaped once each. Keenan was later captured. Others were released from a holding area, Hennessey said.

The escapees then rode elevators and ran down stairs and out the front door of the Hall of Justice. One of them was captured in the building parking lot after an officer fired a warning shot, police said. Another was captured in a nearby alley.

Meanwhile, in New Mexico, searchers are continuing to comb the Santa Fe area for an inmate who slipped out of the state penitentiary apparently by hiding underneath a truck.

Bill Clare Killingworth, 45, serving two consecutive life sentences for kidnapping and criminal sexual penetration, escaped from the prison Sunday afternoon by apparently concealing himself under a National Guard truck at the prison.

National Guard trucks are used to ferry meals prepared at the National Guard armory in Santa Fe into the prison, officials said.

The prison's kitchen was destroyed during a bloody riot at the state penitentiary Feb. 23 that left 33 inmates dead and millions of dollars worth of damage.

Alamo YMCA begins classes for handicapped

By PATSY GORDON
Lifestyle Writer

Alamo YMCA has instituted a pilot program of gym and swim classes for the handicapped.

Children from the early childhood development classes at the Cerebral Palsy Center, Opportunity Center and special education students at Jane Long and Bonham Elementary Schools will be used initially. Other handicapped children will be added later, said Cloris Thurston, instructor and coordinator.

Ms. Thurston, a certified recreational therapist for the handicapped, received her training at the University of Albuquerque.

Purpose of the classes, said Ms. Thurston, is to develop motor and social skills, to give a lot of exercise and to increase overall potential of the handicapped to give them the opportunity to succeed. These things are necessary for successful mainstreaming into regular PE classes in the Midland school system, said Ms. Thurston.

The instructor explained that when the handicapped were mainstreamed into the public schools, they didn't know anything, and the PE teachers at the schools had to start out with basic skills. The special education teachers are not certified to teach PE.

This information, said Ms. Thurston, comes from feedback from the PE teachers.

She further pointed out that these children are going home after school and spending too much time in front of the TV and not getting enough exercise. "We call the gym and swim classes the TV breaker. We will encourage the children to take activities home to practice."

There are 150 mentally retarded in the Midland school system, said Ms. Thurston.

The classes will begin May 5 for monthly sessions, Mondays and Wednesdays from 10 to 11 a.m. will be swimming days, while gym activities will take place from 1 to 2 p.m. and 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. The schedule will be subject to change, said Ms. Thurston.

Volunteers of mothers are needed for in-water work to assist in a group of three, including the qualified instructor, the student and a volunteer. Transportation is being worked out at this time.

Sessions will not be held the first two weeks in July because the MRs will be attending the Midland Association for Retarded Children's summer camp in Cloudcroft, N.M.

Parents will be allowed to watch their children every other Thursday only.

Officials prefer that parents sign up their children a week before the classes begin so they can find out how many instructors are needed.

The gym classes will include instruction in soccer, frisbee, basketball, volleyball, etc., and will be adapted for use toward Special Olympics, along with swim training.

A re-evaluation meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. May 22 to get feedback from parents on the program and to exchange ideas. Parents will be required to attend this meeting, said Ms. Thurston.

Cost of the pilot program will be $4 for members and $14 for non-members. Ensuing months will cost $8 for members and $20 for non-members.

For more information, call Ms. Thurston or Genie McCartney at Alamo Y, 694-2528. Mrs. McCartney is Alamo's aquatic director.

Swimming instructor Clarice Thurston gives Dee Adams a lift during a class at Alamo YMCA. Special Education students from Bonham and Jane Long schools and the Cerebral Palsy Center will be participating in a new swim and gym program beginning May 5 at the Alamo Y. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Poisonous plants film set to show

Did you know that one of the 300 species of harmful plants known in America may be in your kitchen? Or your garden? Do you know the rules for avoiding toxic plants?

The film, "Poisonous Plants," to be shown at Tuesday's Lunch Bunch, is an opportunity to become informed. It is designed to alert the public to the hazards posed by some common plants such as iris, mistletoe, azalea and potatoes, as well as their antidotes.

"Poisonous Plants" is reviewed as "Excellent — a serious film that can save lives." It won the Red Ribbon Award at the American Film Festival of 1976 and was produced by Arnold Arboretum at Harvard University.

This film is one of the many varied resources available through your public library. Besides the well-known book and magazine sections, the Midland County Public Library has tapes, pictures, records and projectors for your use.

Lunch Bunch also offers varied programs each Tuesday at 11:45 a.m. at 206 S. Colorado Ave. It is sponsored by the Friends of the Library for all noon brown baggers through May 27; Coffee is courtesy of Luby's Cafeteria.

Last Tuesday, 160 laughing people held their sides as the hilarious antics of Erma Bombeck were reviewed by Mary Lou Cassidy in "Aunt Erma's Cope Book." Erma and her version of the total woman, snappy retorts to friends, plus the attempt at orderliness while coping with a box-saving mother, are just a few of the everyday comedies told with such humor, timing and fun by Mary Lou. She created the mood to make an ordinary noon hour burst with cheer.

Carter to visit wounded commandos in Alamo City

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is breaking out of his long, self-imposed isolation in the nation's capital to make bedside visits in San Antonio to the five American military men injured in the ill-fated rescue mission in Iran.

The president's trip today to Texas was the first time since Oct. 29 — 182 days ago — that he has ventured farther than the presidential retreat at nearby Camp David in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

A White House spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the Texas trip was strictly a brief hospital visit to the injured commandos. No public appearances or political activities were scheduled and Carter was to be accompanied by only a small pool of reporters. The president was scheduled to leave Washington at mid-morning and return in late afternoon.

But the trip comes at a time when Carter, described by Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd as a hostage to the Iranian situation himself, is under growing pressure to abandon his stay-at-home politics. Texas holds its Democratic primary on Saturday, and word of the presidential trip was relayed to Bexar County Democratic Chairman Joyce Peters before it was confirmed at the White House late Sunday night.

Carter has said repeatedly he will not hit the campaign trail until the 33

American hostages in Tehran are released.

But instead of marking the end of the crisis, today's trip was a journey borne in the failure of last week's dramatic rescue raid to bring the hostages home.

Eight American military men died when a helicopter and a transport plane collided on the ground in the darkness of the Iranian desert as the rescue squad prepared to retreat after the mission was scrubbed because of mechanical malfunctions.

Carter had been scheduled to discuss Iranian developments in a speech shortly before noon to the annual meeting here of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Ms. Peters said the Texas itinerary called for him to fly to Kelly Air Force Base and go to the Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio to visit the four commandos who were badly burned in the Iran crash. He then was to see the fifth serviceman, Airman 1st Class William Tootle of Walton Beach, Fla., at Wilford Hall Hospital at Lackland Air Force Base.

Army hospital officials said there is a "better than 50 percent" chance that the four burned servicemen will recover.

A Brooke spokesman Sunday reported Air Force Staff Sgt. Joseph J. Beyers III, 37, Charleston, S.C., in critical condition; Marine Maj. Leslie

B. Petty, 34, Jacksonville, N.C., in serious condition; Air Force 1st Lt. Jeffrey B. Harrison, 26, Warren, Ohio, in satisfactory condition; and Marine Maj. James H. Schaefer Jr., 36, Los Angeles, in satisfactory condition.

Tootle was listed in good condition with an injured knee.

Col. Basil A. Pruitt said he planned to move two of the burn victims to a convalescent floor today because they require a lesser degree of care. They probably will remain hospitalized eight to 10 days, the Brooke director said.

"The individual patients' burns range from 2 percent to 41 percent of the total body surface," he said.

He said the men were able to read newspaper stories and watch television accounts Sunday of their drum-and-bugle corps welcome at Kelly Air Force Base the day before.

In a message read during a memorial service for five of the dead in Florida, the president said the eight commandos killed in the abortive attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran left "the legacy of their daring spirit."

Maj. Gen. Robert Bond, commander of neighboring Eglin Air Force Base, told the approximately 4,000 civilians and military personnel at the Sunday morning service that the president had called him with the statement earlier in the day.

Although families of the five casualties stationed at Hurlburt Field near this city in the Florida Panhandle had been expected to attend the 30-minute service, an Air Force spokesman said he did not know whether they were actually there.

Several chairs reserved in front of the podium for the families were empty.

"If they are here, they are here very quietly," said Major John Toner, Eglin public information officer.

Three other Americans died when a helicopter and a cargo plane collided in the Iranian desert in the unsuccessful effort to rescue the U.S. hostages in Tehran.

Although she was not present, Janis Ann McMillan, wife of Capt. Charles McMillan, one of the dead, sent a message to the crowd through Lt. Col. William Page, Hurlburt chaplain.

"I am very grateful for the thoughtfulness and support of this community to my husband and me," she said. "Although I am not able to attend, my heart and prayers will be here in remembrance of my husband." Reading from Carter's message, Bond said: "These men of your family, of America's family, acted for our nation's honor. Their bravery and their free acceptance of great hazard in the line of duty, enable not just them but all of us."

The president's statement recalled

the statement of Pericles, describing the soldiers of his city 2,500 years ago: "When Athens shall appear great to you, consider that her glories were produced by valiant men and by men who knew their duty, by men who felt the urgings of honor when they came to act."

Itinerary announced

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House today issued the following itinerary for President Carter's trip to Texas:

1:05 p.m. — Arrives Kelly Air Force Base; leaves for Wilford Hall Hospital.

1:20 p.m. — Arrives Wilford Hall Hospital.

1:40 p.m. — Leaves Wilford Hall Hospital.

2:05 p.m. — Arrives Brooke Army Medical Center.

2:40 p.m. — Leaves Brooke for Kelly AFB.

U.S. has lost its war against the smuggling of narcotic drugs

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is an update on the "war on narcotics" announced seven years ago by the federal government. We are losing.

By MORT YOUNG
Assistant National Editor
The Hearst Newspapers

MIAMI — Dusk. Propellers feathered, three DC-3s skim the darkening waters off Bimini Island, 100 miles east of here. The cargo doors open. Waterproofed bales tumble into the darkening seas. The planes veer east, climbing out of the sea.

Below, 20 high-powered speedboats suddenly spit foamy wakes from their sterns and head for the splashdown points. The bales are ailed on deck. As a vessel secures its catch the boat arcs, picking up speed, west to this city.

Another load of narcotics is on the way to market. Ashore, it will be broken down into smaller units and transported to Los Angeles and San Francisco and Seattle, to New York and Baltimore, to San Antonio and Boston. Everywhere. In its many wakes, the narcotics will leave poor men rich, rich men wealthy. The fountain of youth remains elusive. But El Dorado has been found and is being sacked.

On the wrong end of the law, men are making $10,000 to $15,000 a night. They are the peons, the lowest paid except the police attempting to stop them.

We have lost the war against narcotics smuggling, declared seven years ago by the federal government. And Miami retains its primacy as the major entry port for narcotics.

No one knows how much marijuana, cocaine, heroin is smuggled into the United States each year. The amounts intercepted are trivial, and diminishing.

LAST YEAR, 3.3 million pounds of marijuana were confiscated by police: 3 million pounds less than the year before, according to the Drug Enforcement Administration in Washington. Of cocaine, 1,900 pounds were taken in 1979: 500 pounds less than in 1978. Of heroin, 303 pounds were confiscated: 460 pounds less than the year before.

Police — federal, state and local — might as well try baiting the oceans.

The nationwide urge to lower taxes threatens to cut police manpowers and deepen the failure to combat narcotic smuggling.

Against this background, the importance of Florida to the narcotics trade becomes more obvious. Geographically, the state is perfectly located for the smugglers. It pushes toward Latin America and the isolated islands of the Caribbean.

Physically, it is nearly ideal thanks to its myriad coves, inlets, waterways and a coastline that curls from the Atlantic into the Gulf of Mexico.

Miami is the hub. It is connected to the rest of the state and nation by good highways, seaplanes, airways. Miami is the pivot of the Bermuda Triangle, tying together the other narcotics entry points along the eastern seaboard from North Carolina to the Florida Keys.

ONLY THE LONG Mexican border competes with Miami as a focus of drug smuggling into this country. New York, Boston and San Diego are runners-up. So much of the illegal drug trade is conducted through Miami that it is almost unremarkable that only two officers of the 75-man Dade County Organized Crime Bureau last year confiscated 42 tons of marijuana.

Sergeant Anthony Prieto and Detective Ray Bello constructed maps detailing narcotics trade routes. One charts air routes from Colombia into the Caribbean. From there, the sealanes are depicted. They end in Miami, Galveston, New Orleans and on the Carolina and Georgia coasts.

Another map illustrates marijuana caravan routes. These, too, begin along the wild, lawless northern coast of Colombia. Docks have been built large enough to handle freighters: the so-called "mother ships." These sail into the Caribbean and may stop off an island — Bimini is an important rendezvous — to shift their marijuana cargoes to smaller, faster boats for the final run to the United States.

The necklace of Caribbean island, close to the Florida Keys, offers smugglers secluded meeting places. A DC-3 can airdrop a 2,500-pound bale of marijuana to speedboats idling below. From there, any of the marinas in the Miami area serves as destination. If not Miami, then the waterways leading into the coastal swamps provide protective transit for the narcotics smugglers.

The other maps are of Florida and the rest of the continental U.S. Pins denote drug busts. No town is small enough to be without its pin.

PRIETO AND BELLO accept that they are fighting a losing battle.

"If we catch a boat, before we can unload it and confiscate the narcotics, the people we arrest are out of jail on bail," Prieto said. "Sometimes you wonder why."

Violence is rare, the officers say. Drug runners accept arrest stoically, aware they will soon be on the street again with another chance to make an overnight fortune.

"We arrest the same people often," Bello commented. "The loaders get caught, the people waiting for the drugs get caught on the dock. You get to know

"Why so many savings plans?"

The Savings Place.

Ask the place that knows.

Every time I open a newspaper I see some kind of new savings account or certificate of deposit. To me it's very confusing. And I don't know what's best for me. Can you tell me why there are so many savings plans, and how I can figure out which is best for me?"

The reason there are so many savings plans is, because different people have different savings needs. For example, people near retirement often want to liquidate some of their non-earning assets, like their lake cabin, and put the funds into a long-term, high yielding certificate of deposit which will provide them with monthly income. Younger families may prefer the flexibility of a regular savings account so they can withdraw funds in case of an emergency. The point is, everyone has a different set of savings needs. Ask one of our Professional Savings Counselors for advice on the right plan for you.

Al Oerter has it figured, they'll postpone Olympics

BY JIM MURRAY Los Angeles Times When Jimmy Carter was a young man, he had this dream. He was going to become President of the United States. And nothing, or nobody, was going to stop him.

out of the sled by their President in a desperate struggle to fend off the wolves of history. They are the shock troops, the first wave to be hurled into the breach and sacrificed by a country stalling for time while it tries to find harder, more permanent solutions to its peril.

countably, who sees merit in what the other Olympians see as meretricious. And for the most novel of reasons. Oerter, to be sure, has won his Olympic gold medal. Four of them in fact. But this year, America's Discobolus, the all-time premier at the event, would have a chance to implement the incredible — to become the first man who has ever won medals in the same event five times over 24 years.

work when they told me there was a boycott imminent. I said, 'No way. I put in the work and I'm going to the Soviet Union, no matter what.' WHAT MADE Al Oerter change his mind? Well, first there was his conscience. "It got to me. I sat down and said to myself that there was no way I was going to Moscow and pretend not to notice the blood."

believe President Carter plans to scuttle the Moscow Olympics, at all, merely to postpone them. The scenario goes like this: The boycott movement will attract "three or four dozen countries," the flower of the world's athletics. Says Oerter: "Now, if the Russians do not want to end up with nothing more than a Spartakiade, the Russians will find some excuse with the International Olympic Committee to delay it one year. So, they will then have something to present to their own citizens and say, 'Well, there's a one-year postponement. It's called for by the IOC.' The IOC will oblige them, and call for it to preserve the Games themselves."

1980 Olympics will then become the 1981 Olympics. Will the United States consent to this? Oerter believes it will. "I have talked to Lloyd Cutler about this and said, 'What would be the Carter Administration's position to have a one-year postponement and then still have it in the Soviet Union even if there is no withdrawal of troops, no rollback in Afghanistan?' And Lloyd said, 'Well, that's within our statement.'"

76er defense expels Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — Julius Erving wants to play a team with an injured center. Lionel Hollins wants to play Seattle so the Philadelphia 76ers will have the home-court advantage. But Bill Fitch doesn't think it matters a whole lot. "They'll go all the way," the Boston Celtics coach said after the 76ers disposed of the team with the best regular-season record in the National Basketball Association.

"If they stay right where they're at now and maintain it — that's the challenge to them right now — they'll be tough," Fitch said. The 76ers were awesome in ending the Celtics to the sidelines by winning the best-of-seven Eastern Conference final playoff series in five games. The clincher came Sunday as Philadelphia never trailed after Darryl Dawkins' free throw tied the score 18-18 with 4:11 to go in the first period. The 76ers rolled to a 105-94 triumph. Hollins led all scorers with 24 points and handed out seven assists, while Erving scored 14 points and took only 10 shots. The bread and butter of the Boston offense, penetration and moving the ball quickly to the open man, crumbled in the face of the 76ers' team defense. "Taking the ball inside to Philadelphia is playing to their strengths because they have a big front line," said veteran Celtics center Dave Cowens, who scored 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. "They were on top of us all the way up the court. They disrupted our offense quite a bit. We couldn't adjust."

"I think the big key for us to be successful is to play defensively," said 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham. Boston never could generate any momentum in Sunday's game, and one reason was Larry Bird. The rookie scored only 12 points and sank just five of 19 field-goal attempts. Bobby Jones and Caldwell Jones took turns guarding him, and Fitch said, "If you look at the times they hurt us most it's when Bobby Jones was guarding Larry."

SuperSonics' reign tottering

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics' reign as National Basketball Association champions is tottering. "The Sonics say they like to play with their backs to the wall," said Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. "At this point, they're about to go over the wall." After Los Angeles overcame a 21-point deficit midway in the second half to beat the Sonics 98-93 Sunday, the Lakers hold a 3-1 lead in the Western Conference finals. The Lakers could finish off the Sonics at Los Angeles Wednesday night and earn a spot in the NBA finals against Philadelphia, which won the Eastern Conference title with a 4-1 romp over Boston.

"They're the world champions until we beat them four times," reminded Lakers guard Norm Nixon, who had 19 points Sunday. Abdul-Jabbar scored 25 points and Jamaal Wilkes added 24, 12 in the last quarter, as the Lakers made it three straight over the Sonics and two in a row at University of Washington's Hec Edmundson Pavilion. A capacity crowd of 8,524 watched the Sonics build a 57-39 halftime lead and a 69-48 advantage with 6:39 left in the third quarter. "Los Angeles took the lead at 72-71 with a 24-2 blitz but Seattle led 86-80 with 6:11 remaining in the game. The Lakers then went on a 15-2 tear for a 95-88 lead with 21 seconds to go. Texans to meet in precinct conventions

Saturday's neighborhood gatherings help guide party activities

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Voters who want to have a personal say in how their political party operates this presidential election year should attend precinct conventions Saturday night after the polls close.

Those neighborhood gatherings are the last chance for a person to have a direct vote in party affairs, unless he or she is one of the few delegates chosen to county, state or national conventions.

The precinct convention not only involves the selection of a presidential nominee, particularly in the Democratic Party, but also the stand the party will take on public platform issues.

Resolutions passed in precinct conventions indicate public opinion on issues in which the politicians should be interested.

Much of the clout of the Republican precinct meetings has been removed this year because selection of delegates to choose a presidential nominee will be based on the May 3 preference poll, not decisions made in conventions.

However, GOP precincts will consider resolutions and other party matters.

The Democratic precinct meetings are all-important as the first step in choosing the Democratic presidential nominee. The Democratic preference poll held by Democrats May 3 is merely a "beauty contest," with the final decision left to state convention delegates.

When Democratic precincts convene at 7:15 p.m. Saturday, or later if there is still a voters' line, the first action will be for each person attending to sign in, according to his or her presidential preference.

Any presidential candidate getting

15 percent or more support at the precinct gets his share of delegates to the county conventions.

At the county level, there is another sign-in to determine division of the 3,900 delegates to the state Democratic convention in San Antonio, June 20-21.

A final sign-in at San Antonio decides how Texas' delegates will vote on a presidential nominee at the New York national convention.

Under Democratic rules, one third of the delegates from a precinct to the county or senatorial district convention must be of the opposite sex from the rest of the delegation.

After selection of delegates, there may be a quick vote for adjournment in some precincts with no more action. In other precincts, the arguments over resolutions is likely to go on and on.

State headquarters for the Democratic and Republican parties say they have recommended no statewide resolutions to the precincts, but this does not mean that local issues will not spark plenty of controversy.

In Austin and Dallas, where there are controversial school desegregation moves underway, both parties expect resolutions against forced school busing.

One anti-busing organization in Austin is making special efforts to get their supporters to attend precinct conventions.

In some East Texas counties, conservative Democrats are considering an effort to send delegates uncommitted to county conventions, as a slap at both President Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy. If the uncommitted delegate effort fails, then there likely will be anti-Carter resolutions.

A new group called the Safe Energy Caucus says it is sponsoring a series of four resolutions in Democratic precincts in the Austin, Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth and San Antonio areas.

"We are not just anti-nuclear," said Noel Levy, Austin, one of the organizers. "Our caucus includes environmentalists, those who favor solar power and a lot of people tired of utility bill ripoffs."

The Safe Energy Caucus resolutions oppose the transport and storage of nuclear fuel materials in the state; favor the repeal of the Price-Anderson Act (concerning damage claims in nuclear accidents); oppose the construction and operation of any nuclear power plants in the state and support the development of solar power in Texas.

Examining trial set in Dallas in 'lipstick' case

DALLAS (AP) — An examining trial for an appliance repairman, charged in what police call the "Lipstick Murder," will be held Wednesday, the man's attorney said.

Donald Wayne Hemphill, charged in the strangulation death of Debera Martinson, has been jailed under $500,000 bond since his April 13 arrest. The examining trial was reset from April 16, according to attorney Bob Cady, who said he is "still heavily investigating the case."

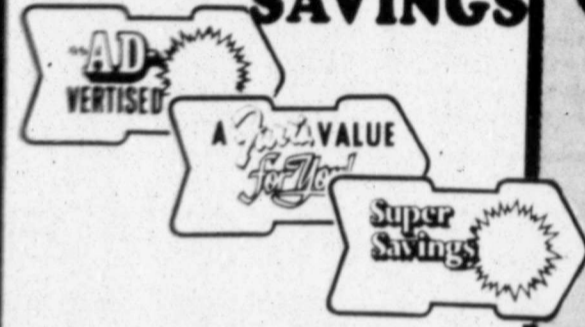

Mrs. Martinson's nude body was found in her north Dallas home March 31 by her husband, attorney Don Martinson.

A message reading, "Now we're even Don," was scrawled on a full-length bedroom mirror in pink lipstick.

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — May promises to be a cruel month for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's dream of convincing the Democratic Party that he has a better chance to win in November than President Carter.

Kennedy scored narrow victories this month in Pennsylvania and Michigan that underlined his contention that Carter is vulnerable in the northern industrial states, often the key to Democratic presidential victories.

But in May the battleground is shifting to states that are likely to push Carter's delegate total close to the 1,666 he needs for nomination to a second term.

The first test will be on Saturday in Texas, hostile territory for Kennedy outside the Mexican-American community. Carter seems certain to capture a clear majority of the state's 152 delegates.

Kennedy was on a trip to Mexico today for a meeting with President Jose Lopez Portillo, a visit likely to enhance his standing with the Mexican-Americans in Texas.

But that journey was upstaged by the President's flight to Texas, his first major trip outside the White House since the Iranian hostage crisis began, to visit with the men who were wounded in last week's aborted rescue attempt.

Tuesday, May 6, promises to be another big day for the Carter-Mondale ticket with primaries in Indiana, North Carolina, Tennessee and the District of Columbia. Only in the nation's capital is Kennedy likely to emerge a winner.

And coming up later in the month, states like Arkansas, Idaho, Kentucky, Nebraska and Nevada seem far more friendly to Carter than to Kennedy. Only in Maryland and Oregon would the senator seem to have a chance to emerge on top.

The harsh realities of the May political calendar raise some thoughts about the Kennedy candidacy.

First is that Kennedy probably is correct that he has demonstrated that Carter is vulnerable in the industrial states.

Kennedy was the winner, not only in Pennsylvania and Michigan, but also in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut. That's quite a record against an incumbent Democratic president.

But the other side of the equation is that while Kennedy has done well in those big states, Carter won a healthy share of delegates and still has a commanding lead overall.

And while Kennedy strategists talk about convention challenges that will shake loose Carter delegates and open the way for a surge by the Massachusetts senator, it's hard to imagine any such thing occurring.

Incumbent presidents are particularly tough to combat in the arena of a political convention and this president has demonstrated his ability to work his will under those conditions.

Those who recall the Democratic Mid-term Convention in Memphis in 1978, know that while Kennedy grabbed the headlines with a dramatic speech challenging the administration's budget priorities and questioning Carter's commitment to the poor and disadvantaged, it was the president who was an easy victor on all the floor votes.

Not only will Carter go to New York in August as the incumbent, but he also appears certain to have a claim on more than the 1,666 votes needed for renomination. Political conventions have no history of reversing that kind of arithmetic.

The Kennedy forces would claim, rightly, that this is an extraordinary year.

But perhaps the cruelest lesson for Kennedy is that while he has demonstrated discontent with Carter, he also has shown that a large portion of the party does not look upon him as a suitable alternative. So even if Kennedy managed to stir a convention revolt to block the president's nomination, he has no guarantee that he would claim the prize. The final irony, for Kennedy, might be the ticket's promotion of Vice President Walter F. Mondale.

It could be a long month for Kennedy's campaign to get Demo nomination

Stress can cause tooth, gum diseases

NEW YORK (AP) — While stress may cause headaches, ulcers, heart attacks or other ailments, it sometimes first turns up as mouth and gum disease, a professor of dentistry says.

But the pain can also be felt in the neck, cheek, head, shoulders or back, masking its origin, he said.

Bruxism sometimes causes "wear facets," which are shiny surfaces on the tops of teeth. A dentist who finds these can correct the problem by making a "night guard" which allows the jaw to strike against a flat plane of acrylic.

But grinding, clenching or clamping the teeth also can cause a thickening of the membrane which holds the tooth to the bone, Ward said.

BRAKES WHILE YOU WAIT Replace front disc Pads or Rear Brake Shoes Includes parts & labor. 2995 Midland Dayton Tires I.S. 20 at Garden City Hwy. 682-5248

Stress also alters the acid content of saliva in the mouth, Ward said, which can promote tooth decay and gum disease.

"The mouth is often a manifestation of similar degenerative problems elsewhere in the body. The same kind of (stressed) people are more likely to get strokes, heart attacks and ulcers," Ward said.

Tranquilizers can help control stress in the short run, Ward said. He also teaches patients to train themselves to wake up in the night if they start grinding, clenching or clamping their teeth.

Volcano tilting

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — While visible volcanic activity remains minimal, Mount St. Helens tilts northward amid continuing earthquakes, scientists report.

Steve Martin of the U.S. Forest Service said Sunday night the tilting was "continuing at the same rate."

Martin said observers from both agencies flew over the peak late Sunday and noticed "a small stringer of steam coming from the crater ... but it never even cleared the crater rim."

The volcano in southwestern Washington erupted March 27 for the first time since 1857, and ash spewed thousands of feet into the air sporadically for several weeks. There has been no eruption of lava.

"I say activity has remained at a low level, but I'm not saying the mountain has stopped volcanic action," the USGS geologist said. "The tilt on the north side of the mountain shows that."

There were 30 earthquakes Saturday measuring 3.0 or greater on the Richter scale, with six of 4.0 or greater, he said. A.B. Adams at the University of Washington in Seattle said 37 quakes of at least 3.0, including eight of 4.0 or greater, were recorded Sunday.
