Party leader among those at summit

By ROLAND PRINZ
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist leader Stanislaw Kania on Friday attended a meeting in Moscow with Warsaw Pact allies who expressed confidence Poland can overcome its current difficulties. At the same time, Poland's largest independent trade union said there were no strikes in progress and none was planned.

Yugoslavia warned against "any foreign interference" in Poland in its first official comment since reports of a buildup of Warsaw Pact troops near Polish borders. In a statement released in Belgrade by the state news agency Tanjug, a Yugoslav foreign ministry spokesman said Polish people must be left to solve their problems by themselves.

The Warsaw Pact leaders, in a communique distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass, said they received assurances that Poland "has been, is and will remain" a communist country and added that the Polish people "can firmly count" on pact members for support in the present troubled times.

In a statement distributed by the Polish information service Interpress, Poland's independent trade union Solidarity said it was necessary to "show the groundlessness of accusations that the union is sowing anarchy."

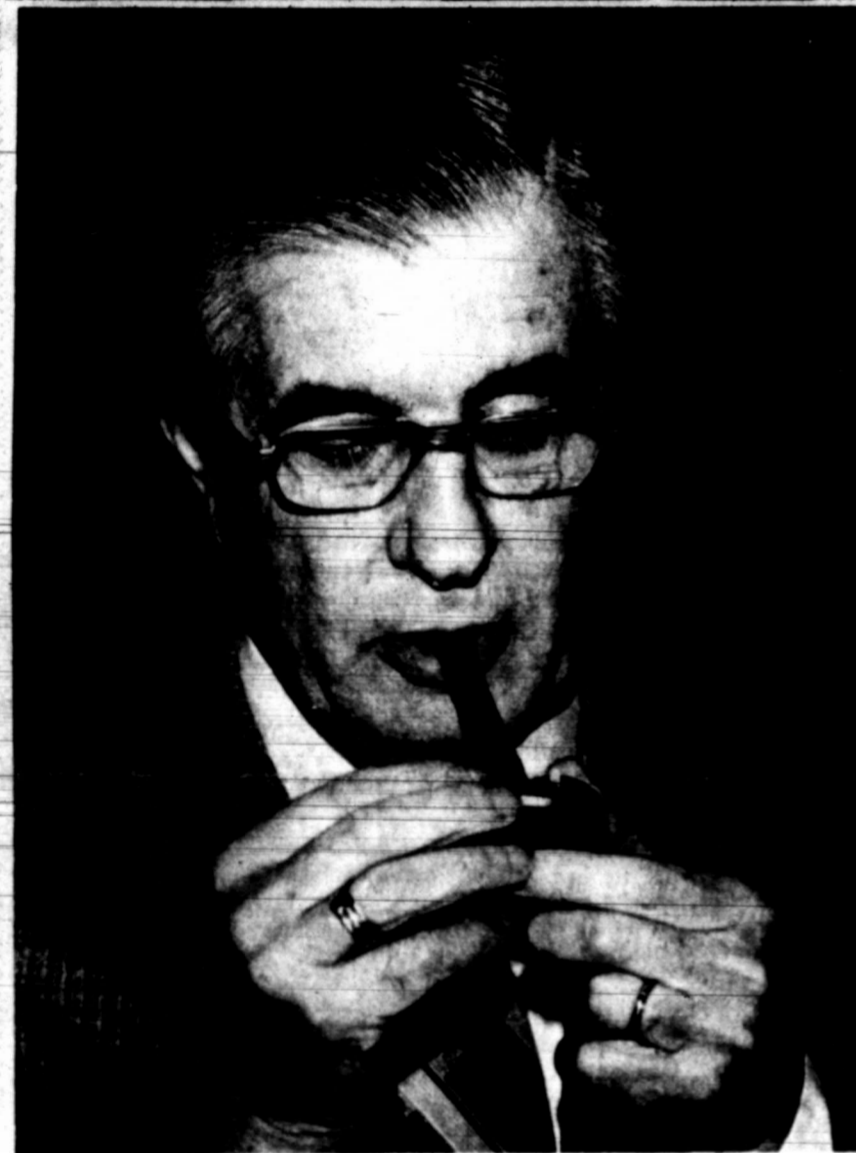

The statement appeared designed to dispel fears that the union, which claims some 10 million members in a workforce of 18 million, was bent on pushing this country into anarchy.

It was made public as Soviet sources reported the end of a meeting in Moscow of the leaders of all seven Warsaw Pact countries. The meeting apparently was called to discuss developments in Poland, torn by months of labor strife and a summer wave of strikes that produced independent trade unions.

Leaders of Warsaw Pact nations met in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, in 1968 three weeks before the Soviet Union sent troops into that country to discuss the "unity" of the Soviet bloc.

There was no indication the latest summit would lead to similar action against Poland. However, the fact that the meeting was held was interpreted by diplomats in Moscow as underlining the seriousness of the Polish situation.

Kania's trip to Moscow came three days after the Communist Party Central Committee dropped four members of the ruling Politburo who had been allied with party chief Edward Gierek, deposed after the summer strikes. After Kania visited Moscow in October, the Kremlin affirmed support for the Polish Communist Party in its efforts to restore order.

Their good judgment

Will summit end 'rumors of war?'

MOSCOW (AP) — Leaders of the Warsaw Pact nations expressed confidence Friday that Poland can overcome its "present difficulties." They issued the statement after an unannounced summit meeting in which the Polish Communist Party chief said his country "was, is and will be a socialist state."

The leaders' communique, distributed by the official Tass news agency, apparently was meant to quiet speculation in the West about a possible invasion of Poland similar to the Warsaw Pact action that ended Czechoslovakia's liberal "Prague Spring" in 1968.

President Carter said earlier this week that Soviet troops were massed along the Soviet-Polish border.

The communique also said, however, that "socialist Poland," the Polish Communist Party and the Polish people "can firmly count on the fraternal solidarity and support" of the rest of the Eastern bloc. It did not spell out what kind of support.

Earlier Friday, a Soviet television and radio commentator said in a television interview there was "no reason" to fear a Soviet "attack" on Poland. But the commentator, Vladimir Pozner, told NBC-TV's "Today" show in an apparent allusion to military intervention:

"There might be a possibility for Poland asking for aid from socialist countries... That would be, of course, a completely different issue and it would be, of course, a last resort."

Diplomats here suggested the meeting itself highlighted the gravity with which the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact members regard developments in Poland since a wave of labor strikes last summer forced authorities there to liberalize their policies, including permission for independent trade unions. There also have been party and government shakeups as a result of the unrest.

Leaders of six of the seven Warsaw Pact nations met in Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, three weeks before the 1968 invasion of that country by the Soviet Union and other pact nations following reforms there.

One-vehicle accident on Interstate 20 fatally injures Fort Worth man, 22

Michael Anthony Lockett, a 22-year-old college student from Fort Worth, was fatally injured late Friday afternoon, when the 1980 two-door sedan he was driving went out of control while passing in the west-bound inside lane of Interstate 20, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

He was pronounced dead at Midland Memorial Hospital at 7:13 p.m. — almost two hours after the mishap — while undergoing treatment.

A DPS spokesman said Lockett apparently lost control of the car while passing another vehicle. The spokesman said the car veered into the median, the driver apparently over-corrected, the car returned to the lane and beyond, to the north service road, smashed into the dirt embankment and rolled over onto its top.

The driver was thrown from the vehicle.

The mishap was investigated by DPS Trooper David Jones.

Midlanders honor retiring judge

Pickett, 400 guests attend luncheon

The quality of mercy is not strained; It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven... It blesseth him that gives and him that takes. —William Shakespeare

"It's a great event," said the judge, as he, with his characteristic smoking-tobacco pipe, strolled off and returned to the courthouse to preside over court for the umpteenth time in 26 years.

Indeed, the event was notable, as was the honoree.

The judge, Perry D. Pickett, had just been exalted, honored, lauded and lovingly "kicked around" with the King's English for his service to the judiciary.

Soon, he'll be retiring from the bench.

"I'm greatly honored by your presence here today," Pickett, 64, told the 400 folks, including a dozen fellow judges, lawyers, courthouse cronies, friends and admirers in the Midland Center at high noon on Friday.

And folks were proud to honor the man who has been judge of the 142nd State District Court since its creation in 1954; he was appointed to the bench by then Texas Gov. Allan Shivers. He is being succeeded by Judge-elect Pat Baskin, 53, who will take office on Jan. 1, 1981.

"PERRY PICKETT has been a judge who has been conscientious," said the emcee, Pete Montgomery, who, in addition to praising his friend, the judge, joshed with him. "He has been a man of integrity, and he has been honest."

The emcee said West Texas, the country and the whole world would be much better off if judges held Pickett's qualities and traits.

"I have tried to mix mercy with compassion," the judge had said after the laurels and barbs had been cast his way. And he said he has been impressed with and that the community has been "blessed" by the quality of Midland's people, schools and the bar "and, I hope, (blessed) through the quality of our judiciary."

Pickett, wife Valerie, their son Jody and grandson, and the judge's brothers, minister and others were seated at the head table on the stage of the auditorium.

Behind them was the banner:

Thank You Judge Pickett
For a Job Well Done

And in the audience were those who respected Pickett and his loyalty to the law.

"I personally think Perry is one helluva fine individual — person," said C.L. Ware, a landman who 31 years ago hired Pickett, then about 33, as his lawyer in Midland. "He's made one of the finest jurists Midland could have possibly have

Carter expected to win 'last showdown'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislative leaders said Friday President Carter has the votes to win his last expected battle with Congress, a showdown over his promised veto of a government spending bill containing an anti-busing rider.

A House vote on overriding the veto was delayed until at least Tuesday after Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts and Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Alan Cranston of California both said they believed Carter would be upheld.

O'Neill told the House efforts were under way to work out a compromise as part of a stopgap spending resolution. In the Senate, a key opponent and a principal backer of the measure said they were uncertain whether a compromise could be reached.

The anti-busing amendment which Carter opposes is attached to a $1.9 billion appropriations bill for the Justice, State and Commerce departments and other federal agencies. A stopgap spending resolution approved by the House and pending in the Senate would continue financing those agencies at current levels until a new appropriations bill is enacted.

Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee said Congress probably would adopt the stopgap resolution to defer the busing issue until next year. But the resolution includes the same ban on busing contained in the appropriations bill Carter intends to veto.

Carter said he also would veto the resolution if it contained the busing ban, even if a veto threatened to disrupt government operations.

Carter had been expected to veto the appropriations bill Friday, but the White House announced in midafternoon that the action would be delayed.

White House officials did not elaborate, but Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., a key opponent of the anti-busing amendment, said he understood the administration favored dropping the busing language from the resolution.

This would provide funds for the departments without placing any restriction on busing.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., an opponent of busing, said he understood negotiations were under way, but added, "I don't know if you could satisfy both sides."

Weicker, who previously threatened a filibuster against the anti-busing rider, said, "The moment they try to pass a resolution with that language in it, I will be right back in the act again."

The president said he was vetoing the appropriations bill because of the amendment that would bar the government from seeking court-ordered busing to desegregate schools.

"I would think the president would be sustained," O'Neill told reporters. The real issue, Carter said, is not busing but "whether it is proper for the Congress to prevent the president from carrying out his constitutional responsibility to enforce the Constitution and the laws of the United States."

The amendment would bar government attorneys from initiating or supporting court actions seeking racial desegregation of schools under plans that involve busing children to schools outside their neighborhoods.

Before the House vote, prominent civil rights leaders discussed legislative strategy with administration officials in the White House Roosevelt Room and then headed for Capitol Hill to lobby members of Congress to sustain a presidential veto.

Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, conceded that sustaining the veto "may be a temporary victory," considering President-elect Ronald Reagan's opposition to busing and the likelihood the issue will resurface in the more conservative 97th Congress convening in January.

Reagan has indicated he would support an anti-busing amendment, saying he wholeheartedly backs civil rights laws but believes busing has been a failure.

Pickett honored

Ed "Big Ed" Darnell, former Midland County sheriff, described Pickett as a "great man" and a fellow with whom he had "a great relationship" at the courthouse.

"He's a catfish fisherman, and I'm a bass fisherman," said Darnell, who was sheriff for 36 years. Pickett is a many-faceted man. "He was a Santa Claus for years," said Ann Lindsey.

The judge's son, Jody, an Episcopal clergyman in San Antonio, in his invocation had described Pickett as a man who administered the law in a spirit of "integrity, compassion and fairness."

The annual Christmas tree lighting at Dennis the Menace Park drew several thousand Midlanders Friday night, but the young ones, at least, weren't totally satisfied until Santa arrived via fire engine to hear their requests.

Aid to El Salvador stopped pending probe of deaths

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States suspended military and economic aid to El Salvador on Friday pending clarification of the circumstances of the murders of four American women in that country three days ago.

The ruling civilian-military junta in El Salvador has accused right-wing extremists of assassinating the three Roman Catholic nuns and a lay worker.

The sisters were in El Salvador to aid refugees from rural areas who were fleeing the violence between leftist and rightist guerrillas. Trattner expressed "shock and dismay" over the killings and he extended the State Department's condolences to the families of the dead women.

Finding menorah a Hanukkah miracle

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Mike Goldberg's cleaning lady accidentally threw his 400-year-old menorah in the trash, he vowed to get it back in time for Hanukkah — even if it took a miracle.

"I thought, the thing has gone through the Inquisition, it's gone through the Holocaust — there's no way I'm going to lose it to the LA trash dump," Goldberg, a 35-year-old custom kitchen designer, said Friday. "And somehow I just got the feeling I could do it."

The silver menorah — an eight-pronged candelabra in which one additional candle is lit each night of Hanukkah — had been left wrapped in newspapers in the family den and was tossed out last week.

Goldberg didn't discover it missing until the weekend and first thing Monday, he telephoned the sanitation department in West Los Angeles. The first person he spoke with told him to forget it.

"I tried to explain to him what the menorah meant to us. I realized what I needed was someone who understood. So I just sat there and asked for every Jewish name I could think of," he said.

When he ran out of Jewish names in his own mind, "I opened a phone book, and the first name I found was Ackerman. I asked if a Mr. Ackerman worked there, and the man said, 'We have a Mrs. Ackerman.'"

"I got Mrs. Ackerman and she says, 'Oy vey, we've got to find it.'"

Evelyn Ackerman, a clerk at the refuse collection division, got her supervisor, Edward O'Neal, to do some checking. As a result, Goldberg found the drivers who picked up his trash that Saturday, Ray Brown and R.C. Clayborne, and they still had his trash in their truck.

They dumped their eight-ton load, and one of the first things Goldberg saw was a shovel he had discarded.

"I was whistling because I knew it was in there," he said. "I just sat, immersed in my elbows in trash, and I dug right through it. And about three hours later I found my bag."

Goldberg said family tradition has it that the menorah, embossed with the monogram "G," was commissioned in Poland in 1539 and has been passed down through the generations as the family moved to Paris and then New York.

Goldberg, who grew up in Forest Hills, N.Y., and moved here several years ago, keeps it in a bank vault except during the holiday season.

"It's not tremendously valuable — maybe $50, $60 worth of silver — but to us it's priceless," he said.

Last month, his wife, Ellen, wanted to show it to a class she teaches at a temple, so to protect it she wrapped it in newspapers and put it in a bag. When she brought it home, she left the bag in the den and forgot about it.

The next Tuesday, the cleaning lady saw what looked like a bag of crumpled newspapers and threw it away.

"It wasn't her fault," Goldberg said, adding that the woman was still employed by his family. "She only saw the newspapers and thought it was garbage."

Goldberg said that when he found the menorah among the refuse, it was badly crumpled, but not irreparable. "Just looking at it made me feel it was a perfect symbol of the Jewish tradition," he said. "No matter what happens, we keep the faith."

Texas publishers to ask PUC to halt information service

By The Associated Press

A group of Texas newspaper publishers will ask the state Public Utility Commission to stop the telephone company from offering a home electronic information service in Austin that would include various kinds of advertising, according to a published report in New York.

In the 14-month experiment, AT&T and its Texas subsidiary, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., plan to provide free computer terminals to 680 private homes and 60 businesses that would let a user consult the normal white and Yellow Pages telephone listings as well as advertising by supermarkets, department stores and other subscribing businesses, according to documents filed in Austin.

The New York Times this week said the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. experiment, scheduled to begin in June 1981, has produced a major battle between the phone company and Texas newspaper publishers over the home information system industry.

The publishers contend letting AT&T provide both the information system and the information would give the company an unfair advantage in competing for that market, while AT&T counters by arguing the Austin experiment is merely a "natural extension" of its existing white and Yellow Pages services.

Telephone company spokesmen say the publishers, who realized $14.5 billion in advertising revenues for 1979, are trying to squeeze them out of the technological revolution growing out of the home computer business.

Local publishers plan to file a formal action asking the PUC to reconsider last June's approval for the Austin experiment, said Phillip J. Meek, president of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Trees available but more costly

Scotch pine, Douglas fir most popular

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Christmas shoppers will find plenty of trees in every size, shape and species this year, but they'll have to pay more than in 1979.

That's the word from the National Christmas Tree Association, which also says that the summer drought did not have a major effect on the trees which are being sold this month.

"There appears to be a plentiful supply," said Donald L. McNeil, a spokesman for the Milwaukee-based association.

McNeil said it was impossible to estimate prices for trees because they vary so widely from place to place. He said, however, that on the average, prices will be about 5 percent to 7 percent higher this year than last year.

McNeil noted that the increase is less than the general rate of inflation, now over 12 percent, and said: "There ought to be a tree for every pocket-book."

The heat and lack of rain this summer destroyed or damaged many trees in scattered areas of the country, McNeil said, but added that the trees involved were the ones planted in 1979 and early 1980. The mature trees, he said, generally survived.

Scotch pines and Douglas firs remain "neck and neck" as the most popular trees, McNeil said, and together will account for about 65 percent of the more than 30 million Christmas trees expected to be sold this season.

A growing number of buyers are cutting their own Christmas trees, but McNeil said the number of places where this type of operation is feasible is limited. He said the "choose-and-cut" segment of the market now accounts for about 9 percent of all Christmas tree sales. An additional 1 percent of sales, he said, are the "balled-and-burlap" variety — live trees that can be planted outside after the holiday.

As prices rise, it becomes more and more important to shop carefully. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has a voluntary grading program for Christmas trees. Participating growers tag trees with their name and address, with the species and with the grade — U.S. Premium, U.S. No. 1 and U.S. No. 2.

The best trees are symmetrical in shape and tapered at the top. But you should base your selection on your own home and taste. Some people prefer a full tree; others want space between branches for decorations. Where will you put the tree? If you are going to stand it in a corner or against a wall, symmetry may not be important.

Freshness is the key to a successful tree. Here's what to look for:

- Needles that spring back when you bend them.
- Needles that are firmly attached. Shake the tree or bounce the stump against the ground a few times; if you get a shower of needles, look for another tree.

- A stump that is moist and sticky with sap. After you select the tree, have the salesman cut off an extra inch or so from the base so the tree will be able to absorb water.

Industry fights insulation ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Industry scientists on Friday urged the Consumer Product Safety Commission to reject government scientists' call for a ban on urea formaldehyde home insulation, which has been used in half a million houses.

Scientists representing the Formaldehyde Institute made the plea at a meeting with the commissioners, who delayed a decision on the ban until later this month.

Dr. Joel R. Bender, chairman of the trade association's medical committee, cited "the need for further extensive investigations."

A panel of federal scientists, in a report released last month, said the formaldehyde insulation causes cancer in rats and should be presumed to pose a cancer peril for humans. The commission staff recommended a ban on further manufacture or sale of the substance that has been sprayed into the walls of an estimated 500,000 homes.

Dr. Bender said research findings have been preliminary and pointed to flaws in the design of studies on formaldehyde effects.

"It is also unfortunate that the scientific community will not have the opportunity to review the final texts of this research for another six to twelve months when it will be published," he said. "I suggest that we look cautiously at any recommendations based on our preliminary knowledge of the potential toxicity of formaldehyde."

The five commissioners did not indicate how they will vote on the ban at a meeting now scheduled for Dec. 17, but several showed irritation at the request for further delay.

"I remember sitting in this same room at a similar meeting about a year ago and getting an estimate that we would have a fairly definitive answer in six months," said Commissioner Stuart Stalter.

Chairman Susan King added, "If you ask us to wait, we certainly can ask you to hurry" with the new test results.

Under questioning by Stalter, the panel of industry scientists said they would use the substance in their own homes, provided it were properly installed.

"You say you want to see what comes out of further tests. But what concerns me is that we are not urging consumers to wait and see what comes out of the findings," Stalter said.

The industry scientists also criticized the commission's use of consumer complaints to help decide health effects of formaldehyde. The analysis of complaints does not include investigations of medical histories to see if those who complained were unusually susceptible or to determine if their exposure was unusually high, they said.

Urea formaldehyde foam insulation, which looks like shaving cream, is mixed outside the house by a contractor and pumped through a hole in the wall.

Government workers get 4-day Christmas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's 2.9 million government workers are getting a Christmas present from President Carter — a four-day holiday weekend.

The president signed an executive order on Friday declaring the day after Christmas, Friday, Dec. 26, 1980, as a paid holiday. In doing so he followed a tradition — dating to 1952 — of granting federal workers a four-day holiday when Christmas falls on a Thursday, as it does this year.

There wasn't any immediate word on whether postal deliveries would be suspended.

where it hardens. Homeowners who buy it qualify for federal tax breaks designed to reward those who save energy.

Formaldehyde is a pungent, colorless gas used in many products, including plastics, textiles and paper. The safety agency is most concerned about use of the chemical in insulation because of a finding that homes where it has been applied have much higher concentrations of formaldehyde gas than do homes without it.

'Largest oil field' reportedly discovered in Siberia

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—The world's largest known oil field, with seven times the estimated proven reserves worldwide, has been discovered in Western Siberia, a Swedish firm with close contacts with Soviet petroleum experts said Friday.

Oil experts in the United States said the amount of oil in the Bazhenov field was probably "grossly exaggerated" and a Central Intelligence Agency official said the discovery was previously reported as oil shale, which is difficult to exploit.

Petrostudies, a four-year-old Swedish consultant firm specializing in Soviet oil and gas resources, said it would issue a detailed report on the discovery Monday.

"Our study is based on very reliable information from the Soviet geology ministry," said Manlio Jermol, Petrostudies' director.

The Oil and Gas Journal, an industry magazine, in January estimated the world's proven oil reserves at 642.2 billion barrels, including 67 billion barrels in the Soviet Union, 27.1 billion barrels in the United States and 163.4 billion barrels in Saudi Arabia.

In Tulsa, Okla., Oil and Gas Journal Editor Gene T. Kinney said the claim was "ridiculous," adding the field was not new and oil from it was difficult to tap. He said the well was discovered in 1965 and that 1976 production was about 10 million barrels, or about the same as Prudhoe Bay, Alaska.

"It's nothing like the largest in the world, nor is it new," Kinney said. "It's absurd on the face of it."

Petrostudies said the Siberian field has estimated reserves of 619-billion tons, which when multiplied by seven, the approximate number of barrels of crude oil in a ton, would amount to about 4.3 trillion barrels. A barrel of oil equals 42 gallons.

Petrostudies said the oil is of excellent quality and half is easily recoverable.

An American petroleum geologist who follows Soviet oil activity said, "There just isn't an oil field that large. Unless we had some evidence from drilling, I would not even quote such a reserve figure."

Dale Peterson, a spokesman for the CIA in Washington, said: "The oil field Petrostudies apparently is referring to is a huge oil shale deposit at a depth of about 10,000 feet and has been known for a long time."

"Because of the depth of the deposit and the fact that it is shale, only a tiny fraction of the oil could be recovered and at an exorbitant cost," he said.

Don Kelly of the U.S. Geological Survey said the survey's estimates of the field size and character is similar to that of the CIA's. He said the Soviets exploded a nuclear device in the field on Oct. 4, 1979, as part of its exploration work.

The investment firm Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith, Inc., told its branch offices in a conference telephone call the field in question was originally discussed in a U.S. trade publication that indicated it contains oil shale.

"Our bottom-line conclusion is that there is a low probability that today's news release will prove accurate as stated," the firm said. It said the report, based on a translation of Soviet documents, may have been exaggerated because of a misplaced decimal point, and the correct estimate is probably 6.19 billion tons, rather than 619 billion tons.

The Soviet Union last week published a draft five-year economic plan that calls for production of anywhere from 12.4 million to 12.9 million barrels of oil a day in 1985.

Production this year has been about 12.12 million barrels a day, down from goals under the current five-year plan.

In Paris, the Bulletin of the Petroleum Industry said it had received a summary of the Petrostudies report. It said the Soviet Geology Ministry called the discovery a "unique and sensational natural phenomenon."

Mexico plans reduction of oil exports to U.S.

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Mexico has announced it is reducing oil exports to the United States and other countries by 50 percent this month because of port backlogs caused by November's Hurricane Jeanne, industry sources said Friday.

Since last month, tankers have been "all queued up and waiting" to take on crude at ports on the Gulf of Mexico, said a source at a large oil company. The source and others said the oil shipments are expected to resume at normal levels by January as the backlogs are cleared.

The sources, who requested anonymity, said the export reduction was not unprecedented and probably will not result in increases in the price Americans pay for petroleum products.

The United States obtained 602,500 barrels of oil a day—or 3.5 percent of its oil needs—from Mexico in August, the latest month for which U.S. government figures are available.

In 1981, Mexico is due to raise its exports to the United States to about 750,000 barrels a day, or nearly two-thirds of Mexico's oil output. Other major buyers of Mexican crude oil include Canada, Spain, Japan and France.

According to Petroleum Intelligence Weekly, Mexico exports about half of its 2.4 million barrels-a-day oil production. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

The Mexican action, which was said to affect all buyers of the country's oil, was confirmed by traders for several international oil companies and by a spokesman for Petro-Canada, the Canadian government oil company. The Mexican embassy in Washington and the U.S. Energy Department had no immediate comment on the report.

John Ridsdel, a spokesman for Petro-Canada in Calgary, Alberta, said delays caused by the hurricane in early November and an increasing number of customers have left Mexico "overwhelmed" and "caught in a backlog" of tankers at its Gulf Coast ports.

"We've had a ship sitting there (in Mexican waters) waiting for a couple of weeks for its cargo," Ridsdel said in a telephone interview. He said shipments "are going to be back to normal" next month.

Mexico in the past has announced monthly export reductions of 15 percent to 40 percent because of problems in its oil fields or ports; however, its shipments have tended "to bounce back up again" as conditions return to normal, one trader said.

Because Mexico's oil industry is operating at capacity, its exports can drop sharply "when something goes wrong," the trader said.

Sun-powered airplane sets altitude, time aloft records

MARANA, Ariz. (AP)—The sun-powered Solar Challenger airplane set records Friday for time aloft and altitude in a practice flight undertaken despite gathering clouds.

The 29-foot aircraft designed by Paul MacCready circled slowly to about 3,400 feet and remained aloft about 90 minutes—both records for solar-powered aircraft.

Initially, the plane's crew said the plane would attempt a 40-mile flight from Marana Air Park north of Tucson to an airfield near Coolidge, about halfway between Phoenix and Tucson.

But after pilot Janice L. Brown of Bakersfield, Calif., got the craft airborne, the cloud cover began to thicken, reducing the efficiency of the solar equipment that provides electricity for the engine.

At that point, project director Ray Morgan decided to permit the pilot to practice with the plane above this desert air center. The previous solar airplane records of 22 mi-utes in the air and an altitude of about 1,000 feet were set Wednesday in an unsuccessful attempt at a 63-mile flight to an air park near Phoenix, MacCready still hopes that trip will be made once the clouds vanish as a step toward flying the craft from Paris to London in June.

Earlier, a spokesman said that flight might be delayed till Monday if forecasts were correct. Predictions called for at least three more days of the variable cloudiness that kept the Solar Challenger grounded Thursday.

MacCready, the Pasadena, Calif., aeronautics specialist who designed the plane, had said Wednesday that if the weather turned bad, crew members might return to their California homes until next week.

But spokesman Jack Conmy said Thursday that after discussing it, the crew decided it was "going to stay put and wait for the weather to change."

At this time of year, with the sun so far south in the sky, even the thinnest cloud cover or haze adversely affects the Solar Challenger's ability to produce its own electricity and fly, MacCready said.

As always, a discerning few will appreciate the finest.

State Sen. A.R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, tells an Austin environmental conference that Texans can't depend on legislators to protect the environment. He says industry lobbyist carry a lot of clout. (AP Laserphoto)

Government won't protect environment, Schwartz says

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sen. Babe Schwartz, a two-decade veteran voted out of office in November, warned Friday that Texans must not depend on their legislators to protect the environment.

"Do not believe anyone in Washington or Austin is taking care of your business without you looking over their shoulder," he told a conference on environmental affairs. "And now I'll be there there looking with you."

The meeting was sponsored by For the People, Inc., a non-profit corporation working for public education on environmental issues.

Schwartz said Texas legislators long have been manipulated by energy and petrochemical industry lobbyists. "Things haven't changed much" since he first came to the Senate in 1961, he said.

Some of the companies "have come a long way, but they are kicking and screaming and being dragged." "They ain't come far enough," he said.

Left on their own, Texas legislators — without threats from the federal government — would have passed few laws to protect the environment, said Schwartz. Schwartz said federal officials are "the conscience of the state."

"Most of us would not have any decent waste control laws if we had to depend on the state legislature to pass laws without the carrot and stick of the federal government," he said.

Schwartz renewed his long-standing complaint about Todd Shipyards in Galveston, and its handling of low-level nuclear waste. Todd "happened to not know a damned thing about what they were doing," he said.

"That's the story of the waste processing business in Texas," he said. However, State Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein said the state has not done a bad job in monitoring wastes.

"The emotionalism about this subject is almost unbearable," he said.

Bernstein said part of the blame lies with the state for not educating the public about such wastes. However, more of the blame belongs with the news media for careless coverage of the matter, he said.

The commissioner said a member of his staff wears the "biggest, blackest hat" in Texas because he must make solid waste disposal decisions shrugged off by local officials.

"Nobody at the local level wants to deal with that in any significant way," he said of garbage disposal.

Muniz 'not through with politics'

DALLAS (AP) — A drug conviction has made running for public office a thing of the past for two-time Texas gubernatorial candidate Ramsey Muniz — but he says that does not mean he is through with politics.

Muniz is a free man for the first time since 1977, now that he has completed a federal prison term on a marijuana smuggling conviction. Friday he left a halfway house where he had spent the last 2½ months working as a law clerk and paralegal by day and a prisoner by night.

The 37-year-old political activist was La Raza Unida's candidate for governor in 1972 and 1974, but he and his brother were indicted in 1976 on charges they conspired to smuggle 1,100 pounds of South American marijuana into the United States. He fled to Mexico after his indictment but later surrendered. In 1977 Muniz pleaded guilty, lost his license to practice law in Texas and went to prison.

Now, three years later, his political instincts remain strong, as do his belief in activism on behalf of Mexican-Americans, but he admits his political career is ended.

"I don't have...any intentions of ever considering running for office again. I don't see my role as a candidate. What happened to me would always be brought out."

Future political involvement, he said, would be on behalf of issues or other candidates.

"I think that I'm going to be taking that on, in time," he said. "I've always been involved before and if it's in your blood, it's in your blood."

Muniz' third-party candidacy surprised political experts in 1972 by garnering an unprecedented 6 percent of the vote, but his 1974 race was less successful and the party disintegrated after that. However, Muniz said the issues have not vanished.

"Right now would be a good time for a party like La Raza Unida. The fact that you have the present (Reagan) administration...means that there were questions in the minds of people about who they could vote for."

"It doesn't have to be the Raza Unida party," he continued. "but I know that the Mexican-American people should not be sitting on their hands waiting for someone to organize them. They will have to do it themselves."

Muniz said he spent much of his prison term studying U.S. immigration laws and the corrections system.

"I know that incarceration made a believer out of me. And I think that, by being able to say that I'm a survivor of the penal system in America, I'll have some input into changes there."

"I won't say that I shouldn't have been sentenced...that would be mudslinging against the government."

"And if I'm going to make some impact, it's going to be through the government's own legal system."

Two sentenced for mail fraud

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Abilene businessman J.W. Hooker and a former Texas Education Agency official were sentenced Friday to three-year prison terms on federal mail fraud charges.

U.S. District Judge James DeAnda lectured Hooker and co-defendant Kitty McLaughlin of Dilley during the sentencing.

"Your conduct just strikes at the very heart of our system and I hope that this sentence will deter others from committing crimes of this nature," DeAnda told Hooker, owner of West Texas Coffee and Equipment Co.

The pair were indicted in June for an alleged scheme carried out between 1975 to 1977 involving use of "trickery and deception" to obtain equipment contracts from a dozen South Texas school districts.

The contracts involved the federal Non-Food Assistance Program, intended to help poor school districts improve their lunchroom. The Texas Education Agency reimbursed school districts 75 percent of their purchases through the program, which was administered by the state.

Miss McLaughlin was South Texas supervisor for the program.

"It's incomprehensible to me that you would have done this, a person with your background and tenure with the state," DeAnda told the woman, who was a TEA employee for 25-years.

According to trial testimony, each district required at least three bids on each contract before it could buy equipment.

Hooker allegedly mailed fake bids from other companies which were always lower than his own.

He obtained contracts totaling $593,600. Witnesses testified the final purchase price for his "low bid" actually was inflated.

The government claimed state and federal agencies were cheated out of the right to award the contracts legitimately and honestly.

The school districts involved were Benavides, Ed Couch-Elsa, Hidalgo, Lyford, Mercedes, Mirando City, McAllen, Odem, Pharr-San Juan-Alamo, San Isidro, San Perlita and West Oso.

More gates to be opened between El Paso, Juarez

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — U.S. officials have bowed to pressure from the mayors of El Paso and its adjacent neighboring city, Juarez, Mexico, and announced they will soon open up more gates at this international port of entry to allow the traffic to flow more freely.

A shortage of American border guards has limited to about four the number of gates open on the U.S. side of each of the two international bridges.

Stella Walsh, 1932 Olympic track gold medalist, was shot and killed Thursday evening during an apparent robbery attempt. She was 69 years old. She is shown, above, in a 1970 awards presentation at the International Womens' Sports Hall of Fame. (AP Laserphoto)

Police report no suspects in death of former track star

By MARIANNE MCGOWAN
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Police said Friday they had no suspects in the shooting death of Stella Walsh, a 69-year-old former Olympic track star known as the "Polish Flyer."

Miss Walsh, who held 65 track records, was found Thursday night lying face down beside her car outside a department store, where she had gone to buy welcoming ribbons for a visiting Polish basketball team. She died late in St. Alexis Hospital as doctors tried to remove a bullet from her lower abdomen.

Although police said they found more than $200 with Miss Walsh, they said robbery was a possible motive. Her purse was on the car seat. There were no known witnesses.

The Polish-born Miss Walsh won a gold medal in the 1932 Olympics for the 100-meter dash with a record time of 11.9 seconds. She took a silver medal in that event in the 1936 Olympics. She competed for Poland after failing to qualify for the U.S. team because she was born in Poland.

Mayor George Voinovich called Miss Walsh, an employee of the city's Recreation Department, a "Cleveland institution and an outstanding employee."

Casimir Bielen, a Polish community leader, said Miss Walsh went to the store to buy ribbons for a welcoming ceremony for Poland's Olympic women's basketball team, which plays an exhibition game next week at Kent State University. Bielen said he and Miss Walsh spent earlier the same evening planning the event.

"It's unbelievable," he said. "However, we will remember her as being not only in love with athletics, but for her love of Poland...she fiercely loved Poland."

Miss Walsh won three gold medals in the world championships of the Women's International Sports Federation in 1930 and 1934 and numerous silver medals.

A U.S. citizen since 1947, Miss Walsh was born Stefania Walasiewicz in Poland on April 3, 1911. Her family moved to Cleveland in 1912 and she later attended South High School where she starred in track.

For the last two years, she worked as a sports organizer for the Recreation Department. She was active in the sports youth programs of the Polish Falcons, an ethnic organization, and was director of the group's summer camp.

Miss Walsh was inducted into seven halls of fame, including the National Track and Field Hall of Fame in Charleston, W.Va. She was married briefly to an American, Harry Olson, and lived for time in California.

Niece may face prison term

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Elizabeth Eagleton Weigand was given an indeterminate sentence Friday that could result in a maximum 4½-year term for an extortion attempt against her uncle, Sen. Thomas Eagleton.

U.S. District Judge H. Kenneth Wangelin said Mrs. Weigand's sentencing would be turned over to the U.S. Parole Commission under the Young Adult Offender Act.

Mrs. Weigand, 24, could receive up to 4½ years in prison.

Her former attorney, Stephen Poludniak, was sentenced to four years in prison and three years probation for conspiring to extort $220,000 from the Eagleton family business, Missouri Pipe Fittings Co., days before the August primary election. Eagleton, a Democrat, won renomination and was re-elected last month.

Poludniak testified that he and Mrs. Weigand tried to blackmail Eagleton with a fictitious document accusing him of being bisexual in order to force him to buy back Mrs. Weigand's share of the company.

Following a two-week trial, Mrs. Weigand and Poludniak were convicted of extortion on Oct. 24.

Wangelin said both Mrs. Weigand and Poludniak could remain free on bond until Jan. 5, at which time they must surrender to federal authorities.

Atlanta searchers seek varied help

ATLANTA (AP) — Leaders of volunteers who plan to search another Atlanta neighborhood today for clues in the murders and disappearances of 15 children are appealing nationwide for help.

City Councilman Arthur Langford Jr., leader of the United Youth Adult Conference, which has spearheaded the searches on seven consecutive weekends, said his group has mailed letters to about 35 national firms and about 200 local companies asking for cash, food and equipment.

Langford said radio equipment is particularly needed in the weekend searches of neighborhoods, housing projects, vacant lots and woods.

As many as 4,000 volunteers have participated on some weekends.

Meanwhile, an arraignment is set for Dec. 18 for a man arrested this week by the special task force investigating the child crimes, but police say no connection has been made between the man and the missing and dead youngsters.

Ronald Larry Johnson, 37, of suburban Forest Park, Ga., was released on bond after a brief hearing Thursday.

He was arrested Wednesday on charges of attempted kidnapping and simple battery in connection with a Nov. 25 incident in which a 19-year-old black youth, Kent Merritt, told police two men tried to pull him from an Atlanta street into a van.

Police said this week they are convinced that more than one person is responsible for the murders of 11 children and the disappearances of four others.

Salvation Army Christmas projects under way

The Salvation Army Advisory Board is well into its annual Christmas project, according to John Hendrix, board chairman. Don Jones was chosen as the 1980 Midland Christmas chairman, while Lesa Wagner is heading the Doll and Toy Tea program. Dolls are dressed for use in the Salvation Army's toy store. In the past, the store has provided two new toys for more than 2,000 children. Parents will select new toys for children at the store. The popular "Dress a Live Doll" program is chaired by Billie Karcher. This year's goal is to outfit 200 children in new clothes, Karcher noted. Often these are the only new clothes a child has ever received, he added. Midlanders can adopt a child or work with others to dress a child. Sizes and information are available at the Salvation Army office at 300 S. Baird or call 683-3614. The Salvation Army will also provide Christmas dinner for more than 700 families. Christmas applications at 300 S. Baird will be accepted from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., Monday through Friday. Last day to make applications will be Dec. 12. Toys will be distributed Dec. 20. Those wishing to make donations may send their checks to the Salvation Army, P.O. Box 594, Midland 79702.

'Devoted' dog dies in fire

STILLMAN VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — A 48-year-old farmer described on Friday how the family's Great Dane routed him and eight others from a burning house before the dog died in the flames. "If it hadn't been for Sam (Samantha) we wouldn't be here now," said Ross Yarbrough. "I'm convinced of that." He said the dog was asleep like the others when a pre-dawn fire Thursday swept the two-story, frame dwelling. "Sam was 4 years old and weighed 158 pounds," he said. "In the two years we had her she was like one of the family. She could sleep anywhere she wanted. Well, Sam was sleeping in the living room at the time. She must have smelled the smoke. She went to a downstairs bedroom, awoke my son-in-law (Scott Clark) with her paws and began barking. Clark and his wife, Vickie, awoke to a house filled with blinding smoke and flames licking a wall. The dog went through the house barking, waking up Yarbrough and his wife, his wife's sister, three Yarbrough children and a 6-months old niece, Nickie. Yarbrough said four of the family went out the back door. "The other five were turned back by a fallen ceiling, but got out the front door," said Yarbrough. "My daughter, Sarah, brought out Bingo, a little Chihuahua, but Sam refused to leave the house. "That dog wasn't sure we were all out. I really believe this. She was such a good dog. She was quiet, but she would bark at strangers if they picked up the baby and headed for a door. She was a good watchdog. We all loved her so much." Yarbrough said two of Sam's favorites were Kelly, 10, and Jerry, 13. They shared an upstairs bedroom. "When we could get back in the house, we found Sam dead," said Yarbrough. "She was up by the bed of Kelly and Jerry. I just know she was checking to see if the kids were there." Authorities said an overheated wood-burning stove in a utility room caused the fire. None of the Yarbrough family was hurt.

New York's Gov. Carey orders investigation of state fire codes

By TOM KELLY Associated Press Writer

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Hugh Carey on Friday ordered an investigation with an eye toward tightening of the state's fire codes after a blaze swept through conference rooms of a suburban Westchester County inn, claiming 26 lives and injuring about 40 persons. Most of the dead and injured were executives of major national corporations. Arrow Electronics, reporting 13 dead or missing, lost much of its top management, and Nestle Company named 11 managers as missing and presumed dead. Some had leaped two stories to escape a deadly curtain of blinding smoke and poisonous fumes that killed in a matter of moments. There were no sprinklers or fire alarms in the conference-room section of the Stouffer Inn, since they were not required by law. Had there been, fire officials said, many lives might have been saved. However, sprinklers were installed in the 336-room guest section when the $20 million suburban inn was built three years ago, some 20 miles north of mid-town Manhattan, in affluent Westchester County. The guest rooms were connected to the public area by a covered passageway.

"I am firmly convinced that we must have a countywide fire code," declared Westchester District Attorney Carl Vergari, "and therefore I have created a special county fire committee. "If the fire codes permit operators of these buildings, where numerous people congregate, to dispense with Man survives two big fires NEW YORK (AP) — Businessman Howard Levin survived the fire two weeks ago that killed 84 people at the MGM Grand Hotel in Nevada. On Thursday, he escaped from the nation's second major hotel fire of the year. "It is a unique situation, but I just can't talk," Levin of Great Neck, N.Y., said Friday, citing advice by his attorney. Levin, an employee of Arrow Electronics Inc., said he was attending a business seminar at Stouffer's Inn, but was in a building adjacent to the conference room that caught fire. Twenty-six people were killed. He said he was attending another business seminar at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas on Nov. 21 when that hotel was ravaged by fire. "I was in the MGM fire very directly," he said. Asked if he considered himself lucky or unlucky, he said, "I consider it the former."

the use of proper alarms and sprinkling systems, then these codes should be changed. I have no doubt that such devices would have saved many of the lives." The fire here followed by two weeks the MGM Grand Hotel blaze in Las Vegas, Nev., which claimed 84 lives and left more than 700 injured. A lack of sprinklers was blamed for the high death toll in that fire also. By coincidence, Howard Levin, of Great Neck, an executive of Arrow Electronics, Inc., escaped uninjured in both fires. He was attending company sales meetings in each case. Meanwhile, Carey ordered Secretary of State Basil Paterson, in charge of fire prevention for the state of New York, to join county officials in investigating the Stouffer blaze over the weekend and to report to him on Monday. "By Monday they will have in my hands their recommendations to deal with this matter," Carey added. "Over the long pull it would look like we need some tightening of the code. "I think all of us are surprised and upset that this could happen. With the technology we have, we find highly expert business executives who normally don't take chances with their lives, are wiped out." When the fire erupted at 10:20 a.m. Thursday, the inn had meetings of executives from Arrow Electronics, Nestle, General Foods Corp., International Business Machines Corp., and PepsiCo, Inc. Trading in Arrow shares was halted on the New York Stock Exchange upon word of the death in the fire of the company president, Biddle Duke Glenn, 44, and two of his top corporate lieutenants. Computer equipment in the Arrow meeting room was impounded in the search for some clue as to the origin of the blaze, the worst in the history of Westchester County. The fire, apparently of electrical origin, spread rapidly. Westchester County's medical examiner, Dr. Gary Paparo, said the victims — 25 men and one woman — died within two to three minutes by inhaling carbon monoxide in the smoke. "Fourteen of the bodies were charred badly, the others partly so," he reported.

Recent economic improvements may be short-lived, experts say

By GLENN RITT Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pace of inflation at the wholesale level slowed in November and the unemployment rate dipped slightly, the government said Friday. However, as major banks increased their prime lending rates, economists cautioned that the improvement could be short-lived. The Labor Department reported that wholesale prices climbed 0.6 percent last month — down from October's 0.8 percent increase. Unemployment, meanwhile, dropped from 7.6 percent to 7.5 percent as the number of people holding jobs rose by 220,000. Private economists and government officials were quick to point out, however, that inflationary pressures remain intense and ever-rising interest rates could lead to increased joblessness in coming months. "There is a dark lining in our silver cloud," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress. With interest rates still climbing, Bentsen said, "we cannot take much comfort from a single month of good news." The prime interest rate — that charged by banks to their best customer — reached 19 percent Friday. Citibank took the lead in raising the rates charged to its most credit-worthy customers one day after the Federal Reserve Board increased the discount rate — the rate it charges on loans to banks — from 12 percent to 13 percent. The prime interest rate is expected to rise toward last spring's record 20-percent level as the Federal Reserve further tightens the supply of money and credit. Moreover, November's price slowdown was due almost entirely to automobiles, said Labor Department economist Craig Howell. Their cost rose only 0.7 percent after going up 3.4 percent in October when 1981 models were introduced. The Labor Department said November's overall rise in producer prices translates to a 7.9 percent compound annual rate. However, for the first 11 months of 1980, this rate stands at a seasonally adjusted 12 percent. That is nearly the same as 1979's pace, despite this year's sharp recession. Moreover, the core inflation rate — which does not consider food, energy and housing costs — has reached 9 percent to 10 percent, higher than a year ago, the council said. The price of consumer-ready food increased 0.5 percent last month, the same as in October. And economists expect further advances through 1981 due to grain shortages that are sure to affect what consumers pay for beef, poultry, eggs, pork, and baked goods. In addition, gasoline prices in November climbed 1.7 percent, the first increase in six months, and the Council on Wage and Price Stability said these prices "were almost certain to rise at double-digit rates over the next year." Supply shortages from the continuing Iran-Iraq war could help push that annual inflation rate as high as 40 percent, the council warned. Also worrisome, says Howell, is a November price jump for intermediate wholesale items such as steel, plastics and chemicals. The cost of these products will increase prices of finished wholesale goods, and these, in turn, will be passed on to consumers. The Labor Department refers to its wholesale prices report as the Producer Price Index for finished goods, which surveys items ready for sale at retail, such as an assembled car. The department also measures prices for goods at an intermediate stage, such as rolled steel, and at a crude stage, such as iron ore. The Producer Price Index stood at 253.2 in November, meaning that it cost $253.20 last month for a basket of goods and services that cost $100 in the 1967 base period. Intermediate goods rose 1 percent in price last month, compared with 0.9 percent in October and 0.6 percent in September. Raw wholesale goods climbed 1.1 percent, compared with a 1.9 percent boost in October. The jobless rate, meanwhile, has shown little change since May, when the recession sent unemployment soaring to a peak of 7.8 percent. In the last four months, the jobless rate has hovered between 7.6 percent and 7.5 percent of the labor force. "The November data provide further evidence of the gradual improvement that has been in effect since late summer," said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. "Certainly, we are moving out of the recession," she told the Joint Economic Committee. However, Ms. Norwood said rising interest rates and the prospect of more food price hikes could provide a "fairly quick" jump in the unemployment rate. She also said the current recovery will not be as vigorous as past expansions. The pace will depend on how much money people must divert to buy more expensive food instead of cars and other big-ticket items, she said. In addition, she said, "the rest of the world is going through difficulties" and this "could well affect our exports." Sandra Shaber, senior economist at Chase Econometrics, predicted an 8 percent unemployment rate by early next year. Rising mortgage and interest rates already are hurting the housing industry and dampening consumer sales, she said. At worst, companies will cut back production and lay off workers, Ms. Shaber said. At best, she added, they will not hire even as the workforce expands. The Labor Department reported that total employment in November rose to 97.4 million, with the increases concentrated among women, whose employment had declined during the previous two months. Prime rate raised to 19 percent mark NEW YORK (AP) — Major banks across the country raised their prime lending rates to 19 percent Friday, climaxing a week of sharp increases in all kinds of interest rates. Citibank, the second largest of the nation's commercial banks, led the jump from the prevailing 18.5 percent set only three days earlier. Other banks quickly matched the new rate, which is the highest since late April when the prime was falling from its peak of 20 percent and the economy was sinking into a recession. The prime rate is what banks charge on loans to their best-risk corporate customers, while smaller businesses generally pay at least one percentage point above the prime. Wall Street analysts attributed the latest round of prime rate increases to sharp jumps in banks' cost of acquiring funds. Most said they expected further increases and one said the prime could climb above 20 percent before year's end. Evidence of banks' higher cost of funds was the Federal Reserve Board decision Thursday to boost the discount rate, which is the rate it charges on loans to member banks. Believing it must tighten credit to bring inflation under control, the reserve board raised the discount rate from 12 percent to 13 percent. "It is a unique situation, but I just can't talk," Levin of Great Neck, N.Y., said Friday, citing advice by his attorney. Levin, an employee of Arrow Electronics Inc., said he was attending a business seminar at Stouffer's Inn, but was in a building adjacent to the conference room that caught fire. Twenty-six people were killed. He said he was attending another business seminar at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas on Nov. 21 when that hotel was ravaged by fire. "I was in the MGM fire very directly," he said. Asked if he considered himself lucky or unlucky, he said, "I consider it the former."

Resident status sought for illegal aliens

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A report prepared for President Carter's Select Commission on Immigration and Refugee Policy urges permanent resident status for many illegal aliens and worker identification cards for every U.S. citizen, a Hispanic rights activist says.

The permanent resident status would apply to aliens who have lived in the United States two or three years and meet other eligibility requirements, according to the staff report obtained by San Diego immigration activist Herman Baca.

The 400-page report, to be voted on by the commission Saturday in Warrenton, Va., says such measures would virtually eliminate illegal immigration within 10 years.

The commission estimates there are 3.5 million to 6 million illegal aliens in the United States. To continue such individuals in their current illegal status would create a permanent "fugitive underclass," the report said.

The only alternative to legalizing the illegal aliens would be a massive roundup and deportation which would be "destructive" of civil liberties, and difficult to carry out successfully, it said.

But Baca, chairman of the San Diego-based Committee on Chicano Rights, said Thursday that the report is "faulty, racist and... a total waste of taxpayers' money."

Baca called it "20th century slavery...slightly expanded and streamlined."

The worker card "is a dangerous and simplistic recommendation reminiscent of totalitarian states like Nazi Germany and South Africa," Baca said. "In practice, it will be the Chicano-Latino community whom employers and law enforcement agencies will be asking for ID cards."

He said the document prepared over 18 months at a cost of $2 million is "riddled with major contradictions" and is a rehash of the Carter plan which Congress rejected in 1977.

He refused to say how his committee obtained a copy of the report. The New York Times also obtained a copy.

In addition to national worker ID cards, he said it recommends beefed-up border patrols and a slightly modified temporary foreign worker program.

The commission's staff recommendations call for an "independent immigrant" category which would benefit affluent, white-collar immigrants and would eliminate the current immigration law which allows U.S. citizens to bring brothers and sisters into this country, Baca complained at a news conference.

A counterfeit-resistant card would replace all border crossing cards. Baca said night viewing devices are recommended for border patrolmen along with expanded use of aircraft sensor systems.

What Baca described as a staff recommendation taken without changes from the report said, in part:

"The proposed legalization program will probably grant immediate permanent resident status to all undocumented aliens who have resided in this country for two to three years prior to passage of the legislation and who can meet additional eligibility requirements...

"It is also proposed that the residual group of persons who are not eligible for immediate permanent resident status but who are not otherwise excludable will be eligible for conditional entrant status, leading to permanent resident status after five years.

"During this five-year period these applicants must show that they worked in the United States for four out of the five years."
