Committee suggests raising parking fee

Proposal could increase permits by 10 percent

BY CAREN CARNEFIX
The University Daily

Texas Tech students, faculty and staff may pay more for parking permits in fall 1998.

Increasing permit prices by 10 percent is one solution Tech Traffic and Parking Systems Committee members proposed to finance the new parking system created by the Master Plan.

The Board of Regents approved the general concept of the Master Plan Friday, although a detailed parking system has not yet been worked into the plan, said Monty Davenport, vice president for operations.

The new system would include parking structures and possibly additional parking enforcement staff.

The money raised through increased permit prices would be used for salaries of additional staff, improvements to existing lots and costs for parking structures.

"In looking at the Master Plan, there are obviously some very major impacts on traffic on campus," Davenport said. "It's hard for us to move too far until we know what exactly is in the plan."

The committee, made up of a variety of campus representatives, formed Thursday with the purpose of dealing with the Master Plan's impact on the campus parking situation.

Other aspects the committee will consider are rules and regulations and managing a new parking system.

One student with a commuter permit did not want to pay additional parking fees.

"Apparently, (the university) likes to charge us a lot of money," said Carlos DeLeon, a sophomore finance major from Houston. "I don't want to take more money out of my pocket. I don't think (raising the permit prices) would fit too well for the students, especially if (the university) is pushing us out past Indiana (Avenue)."

A residence hall permit owner did not mind paying additional fees if the fees would help provide more parking spaces.

"I'd be for the parking increase if it would help add more spaces," said Horn Residence Hall resident Angela Glenn, a freshman business administration and pre-physical therapy major from Palestine. "I'll do whatever for more parking spaces, even if it is paying a little bit more."

Another proposed solution is a transportation fee, said Student Government Association President Russell Thomasson, a senior accounting major from Lubbock.

Tech finds ineligible athletes

BY GINGER POPE
The University Daily

Failure to meet satisfactory academic progress and participation in an unsanctioned game has led to the ineligibility of two Texas Tech Lady Raiders.

The Tech athletic department self-reported the violations concerning the academic progress of Kim Martinez, a junior forward. Martinez is expected to sit out during fall contests.

Keitha Dickerson, a sophomore forward, received a one-game suspension for playing in a 3-on-3 tournament, not sanctioned by the NCAA. She will be eligible for the remainder of the season.

Kyna Cosby, a junior guard for the Lady Raiders was declared ineligible, but Tech athletic officials discovered Tuesday that she qualified for a medical absence waiver.

Bob Burton, associate athletic director for compliance, said Cosby sat out last season because she gave birth to a daughter in 1996 and did not meet the NCAA standard of completing 50 percent of her courses toward her major.

Cosby's case was appealed during the fall and was denied, however, the previous decision has been reversed, Burton said.

In Dickerson's case, it is an NCAA rule that student-athletes cannot play in any tournaments not sanctioned by the NCAA.

The current ineligibility of the Lady Raiders are not included with the recent NCAA allegations nor will they impact any possible sanctions handed down by the NCAA Infractions Committee.

Tech faces 18 charges issued by the NCAA Nov. 3, and recently, Tech self-imposed sanctions of no bowl game or contention for a Big 12 championship.

Steve Uryasz, director of student-athlete academic services, said the NCAA has a rule that student-athletes must declare a major by their fifth semester.

Iraq conflict stirs student comment

BY APRIL CASTRO
The University Daily

Iraq's refusal to allow U.N. officials to inspect weapons may be the cause of another showdown in the Persian Gulf.

An American U-2 surveillance plane used by the U.N. resumed flights over Iraq early Monday after Iraq President Saddam Hussein threatened to gun down any American aircraft in Iraqi territory, saying the United States has used its flights to gather information for planning attacks against Iraq.

However, military officials in Baghdad said the aircraft flew outside the range of their gunners.

The U-2 entered Iraqi air space early Monday from a base in Saudi Arabia, the Iraqi military said in a statement.

The flight came hours after Hussein declared Sunday that his country had "to choose between sacrifice or slavery," suggesting that a confrontation with the United States was inevitable.

Lawrence Mayer, a Texas Tech political science professor, said the United States must take military force soon in order to maintain credibility in the Middle East and the rest of the world.

"The effect would be too humiliating to let him insist we go home," Mayer said. "(Clinton) can't let that happen and still have credibility. He has to do something soon." A strike of some sort would be necessary to retaliate against Hussein, he said.

"It's obvious that (Hussein) has no compassion for his people because thousands are dying of hunger and disease, and he's building palaces for himself," Mayer said. "So, we have to threaten to hit something that's going to hurt him if we want him to back down."

The possibility of striking communication sites or the areas with the weapons to be inspected might be the most effective places to strike, he said.

"Hitting the Iraqi population isn't going to do anybody any good," Mayer said. "Maybe a minor foray like that might convince him we're serious."

Mayer said Hussein's refusal to allow inspection of weapons indicates he is hiding something.

"Clearly the man has something to hide," said Mayer, who has been following the situation closely. "He has weapons of mass destruction that could have a major affect on Europe and be a threat to the rest of the Western World."

However, the United States military is clearly superior to that of the Iraqi government, as proven in the Persian Gulf War, he said.

"His military capabilities are limited," Mayer said. "I think an air strike

Kaczynski's mind focus of Unabomber trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The centerpiece of the Unabomber trial will be the mind of Theodore Kaczynski, the brilliant boy who turned into a technology-hating hermit embittered against everything from planes to pay phones.

With a mountain of evidence found in his Montana cabin pointing to him as the Unabomber, the trial that begins with jury selection today will focus on whether Kaczynski was a man with a "mental defect," not responsible for his actions, or prove that he's a rational, cold-blooded killer.

Kaczynski's own letters and journals provide the raw material for both sides.

One item, a letter in which Kaczynski wrote, "I can't wait until you die so I can spit on your corpse," suggests that the veneer of a socially concerned vigilante could well have masked childhood hatreds looking for an outlet, said Dr. Eugene Schoenfeld, a psychiatrist and forensic consultant.

"There's a lot of rage building up in this guy," he said.

"And people will rationalize anger and violence through a cause — a greater good that justifies destruction and murder."

In the Sacramento case, Kaczynski is charged with bombings that killed two and maimed two.

Separately in New Jersey, he's charged in one death.

In all, the government claims Kaczynski is behind 16 bombings that killed three people and injured 23 over 18 years.

No longer the scruffy, wide-eyed mountain man arrested in April 1996, Kaczynski now appears in court wearing a tweed sports jacket with his hair and beard trimmed, looking every bit the professor he once was.

Donors allege laundered contributions to Clinton campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three donors to President Clinton's re-election campaign have told House investigators that an employee of Democratic fund-raiser Johnny Chung asked them to make the contributions and later reimbursed them, according to a House source.

Investigators were told that Chung's part-time bookkeeper, Nancy Na-Chi Lee, asked four people — one has since died — to make out $1,000 checks to the Clinton-Gore '96 campaign, said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. Lee was said to have immediately reimbursed the donors in cash, said the source.

Such arrangements would be illegal under federal election law, which bars contributors from giving money in the name of another to hide the true source of the money.

It was the first allegation of laundered contributions directly to the Clinton-Gore '96 campaign. The Democratic National Committee has returned nearly $3 million because the money came from questionable sources, including some donations made in the name of others.

The House Government Reform and Oversight Committee has issued a subpoena for records of the re-election campaign, said Robert Neuman, a spokesman for the campaign's Legal Compliance Committee.

Somali floods kill 130, leave others homeless

BARDERA, Somalia (AP) — Rain steadily beat down on the Juba River, day into night into day, until the winding waterway burst its banks and flooded the lush green valley in southern Somalia.

Mohamed Abdirisak said it took just five days of rain for the Juba to flood his house and cut his hometown in two.

The 50-year-old agronomist was among as many as 300,000 others without homes or food Tuesday.

At least 130 people have drowned since the flooding began three weeks ago, aid workers and local officials said.

Those trying to survive on dry patches of land amid the swirling waters have to contend with crocodiles and other creatures.

Entire villages have been submerged, roads washed away, bridges destroyed and towns cut off from all communications except by air.

With chocolate-colored mud dripping from his bare feet, Abdirisak shook his hand at the endless mass of brown water all around him.

"There used to be my house, just left of that tree," he said Tuesday, pointing to branches sticking out of the water. There was no sign of a house.

The Juba Valley is the breadbasket of Somalia, producing sorghum, a staple crop in this nation of 7 million.

Police still investigating grave robbing charges

BY JAMES WALKER

The University Daily

Lubbock police still are investigating charges of theft from a grave against a Tech student.

Christopher Ray Jessie, a senior human development major, was arrested Nov. 5 after police received information about tombstones, crosses and urns from graveyards inside his home.

After being charged and arraigned, Jessie was released Friday.

Lubbock Police Department detective Larry Manale confirmed that in the weeks prior to the arrest, police made several visits to Jessie's home, responding to claims by Jessie that he was being assaulted by an ex-girlfriend. No action was taken by police in these visits.

Police have located where most of the grave markers were stolen from, Manale said. Several were from the City of Lubbock Cemetery, and one was from Arlington.

"There's only one that we're still not sure about," Manale said.

Most of the markers were from the late 1800s or early 1900s and were from the graves of young children, so locating the families may prove to be difficult, he said.

The punishment for theft from a grave, a felony, is two years in state jail, he said.

The case has not yet been handed to the district attorney's office, and no court date has been set. Police still are looking for others possibly connected with the incident.

A friend of Jessie's said if he stole the gravestones, he must have had help, because many of the items stolen weigh more than 100 pounds, and he did not own a car at the time of the incident.

The friend, who did not wish to be identified, said she has seen him change dramatically in the past several months.

Jessie had a nickname in high school, Jett Black, she said.

The name carried over to college, and Jessie asked many of his friends to call him Jett.

"He didn't get really wacky until he started going on AOL," she said.

In the gothic-related chat rooms of America Online, Jessie used Jett Black as his screen name, she said. The name seemed to represent an alter ego; a dark, sinister role Jessie would play for the amusement of himself and friends.

Jessie was involved in what some people call the gothic subculture, which is characterized by an interest in death, classic horror literature and bands such as Sisters of Mercy, Marilyn Manson and Echo and the

Many "goths" often dress in all black and go to clubs wearing face paint and dark makeup.

"It's like an image; it's not real," the friend said.

"He knew that it was an image, but people started responding to it on the computer."

What Jessie was looking for was attention, she said. It became almost a competition in the chat room about who could be the most outlandish with their dark persona, and Jessie seemed to become lost in his.

"He went too far with it, he didn't understand there's a line between right and wrong," the friend said. "There are just certain things that you don't do, and he didn't think about that."

Some pictures and poetry that Jessie circulated to his online friends were available on the Internet at <http://members.aol.com/mpakegirl/2/index.html>. The pictures show Jessie with his face painted white, brandishing a sword in front of black candles and what could be gravestones in the background.

Although the poetry is still at the site, the pictures have been removed since the incident.

"I couldn't tell you what he's thinking right now at all," the friend said. "He wanted to be a lawyer, and his life is basically ruined. Whether that will snap him back into reality, I don't know."

Professor will lecture on Mayans

"Prehistoric Maya: The Skeletal Evidence" will be the topic of discussion during a lecture offered at 7:30 p.m. today in room 179 of the human sciences building.

David Glassman, physical anthropologist from Southwest Texas State University, will be the speaker.

Glassman will speak about newly-found evidence on the Mayan civilization.

The evidence was discovered through skeletal biology.

Glassman's research is helping to determine the collapse of the Mayan civilization.

Glassman is uncovering physical trauma, diets and diseases experienced by the Mayans.

The Texas Tech Anthropology Society and the Lambda Alpha Honor Society are sponsoring the event. The lecture is free to the public, and all people are invited to attend.

Parking

Although Thomasson could not estimate how much students would pay, he said students would pay the fee as part of their tuition and general use fee.

The fee would cover the costs of the Citibus apartment and campus routes, Thomasson said.

"It's just something that I want (the committee) to look at," he said.

"It's just another way to bring everyone into the same standard policy. I think it's better to encompass the whole student body, not just a specific group."

Committee members also proposed charging fees to visitors and to those students who only attend night classes upon entering the campus, said John Opperman, vice chancellor for administration and finance.

"We need to look at ways to spread out the costs," Opperman said.

The students who only attend night classes do not have the need to purchase permits of any kind, Opperman said.

Hilary Tompkins, a first-year music education graduate student from Austin, said she does not think charging visitors to enter campus is fair.

"To charge visitors is crap because (the university) does not provide good parking," Tompkins said. "The parking is really limited. To not even be guaranteed a place and to be charged is ridiculous."

The committee members will wait until March to propose any fee increases to the regents.

Players

"A lot of student-athletes don't know or have an idea about what degree they want," Uryasz said. "We try to help them to make a choice or cultivate an idea."

With the addition of new personnel, Tech officials also hope a new athletic services building will help student-athletes with academic eligibility.

Tech's Board of Regents approved the request to plan schematics for a new athletic services building Friday.

The new facility is expected to be centrally located in the athletic complex at an estimated 13,000 square feet.

The building will house an administrative suite and a fitness center as well as a learning center with several tutorial classrooms, computer rooms and a library.

Location possibilities include renovating the old power plant, between Main Street and Brownfield Highway, or providing an addition to the Wiggins Complex.

Funding for the building will come from private donations, which total more than $100,000.

Former church leader pleads guilty to felony

DALLAS (AP) — A former orchestra director at a high-profile Baptist church told a federal judge he failed to report multimillion-dollar frauds committed by his wife.

Richard Kingsmore, 37, pleaded guilty to a formal charge of misprision of felony.

Defense attorney Michael Carnes said prosecutors have agreed to recommend probation in return for cooperation.

Kingsmore's sentencing is scheduled for Jan. 9.

About 150 investors in 13 states lost more than $3.4 million they gave Kathy Kingsmore to buy Eurobonds and other securities, according to court records filed by Assistant U.S. Attorney Leonard Senerote.

No legitimate investments were made and $800,000 was spent on a Florida beach house for the Kingsmores.

Other money was spent on parties and trips.

Kathy Kingsmore, 36, has pleaded guilty to one count of securities fraud. An associate, 47-year-old Charles Adams, has pleaded guilty to one count of mail fraud.

Kathy Kingsmore and Adams are to be sentenced Jan. 23.

The scheme lasted from October 1993 until at least last December.

Victims included the Kingsmores' relatives and friends, some of them fellow members of Prestonwood Baptist Church.

will be effective because it's a different terrain, and it's wide open from up there. Everything is vulnerable, so it's a very effective weapon for the U.S."

Hussein's chemical weaponry is still very dangerous in creating mass destruction in the area, but the delivery is still a problem for Iraqis, Mayer said.

"Maybe it's changed since the Persian Gulf, and that's what he is hiding," Mayer said.

"Who knows what he is capable of. It's kind of scary actually."

One Tech student said he thinks a compromise can be worked out before the country goes to war.

"I think Saddam Hussein probably will (shoot down any American aircraft in Iraq)," said John Janak, a freshman exercise and sports science major from Georgetown.

"I think we will probably end up going to war again, but I don't think it's necessary."

Janak said a possible solution might be to allow inspectors from nations other than the United States to inspect Iraqi weapons.

However, another Tech student said he thinks the situation will be amended before the country goes to war.

"I think they should just blow him away," said James Parker, a freshman civil engineering student from the U.S. Virgin Islands.

"They should threaten him with military force, and hopefully he'll just let them inspect his weapons."

'Master of Modern Blues Music' Performer Corey Stevens makes stop in Hub City

BY SEBASTIAN KITCHEN
The University Daily

Since realizing he did not have the size to be an athlete, Corey Stevens began fantasizing about a new goal. He wanted to be a musician.

"I think I dreamed of being a baseball or football player," Stevens said. "In high school, I realized I wasn't going to be a big guy. I started to get into music. I realized I could do it until I was 60 or 70. I think it was a good decision."

Stevens began playing the guitar at age 11.

"He is the master of modern blues music," said Wes Nessman, program director and disc jockey for KFMX-94.5 FM.

Stevens receives major radio play nationwide at stations such as KFMX.

His latest record, Road to Zen, has had two Top 10 singles so far, the first being the title track.

The track is Stevens' favorite song. "I'm really proud of the way it turned out," he said. "I think it's a little better than your average song."

Stevens believes the bigger someone gets, the busier they get. He continues to get busier.

He toured in the summer with Lynard Skynard and played some dates with Sammy Hagar.

“My favorite thing is getting up on the stage and playing...”

Corey Stevens, singer/songwriter

Stevens currently is headlining his own tour.

"My favorite thing is getting up on the stage and playing when ... there are a lot of people there to see you," he said. "You see all of your dreams are coming true. This is it."

A lot of the rock musicians Stevens looked up to in his younger years, such as the Rolling Stones and the Allman Brothers Band, cited blues musicians as their influences.

"I was just a kid in Illinois and never really had any friends who were into blues," he said. "It wasn't like all of my friends were into blues, it is something I did myself."

In the eighth grade, Stevens considered quitting playing, but a mentor in his hometown talked him out of it.

"I had a mentor in my hometown who was really a great guitar player," Stevens said. "After almost quitting in the eighth grade, I have never thought about quitting since."

After playing in Lubbock, Stevens is heading home to Los Angeles to see his wife and daughter.

"I've got a bunch of songs I have started," he said.

A while back, Stevens met up with Storyville, the band of former guitar great Stevie Ray Vaughan. Stevens said the band will play on his next album.

"That would be a dream come true," Stevens said.

'An Evening of Broadway' premieres at local theater

"An Evening of Broadway" will premiere at the Cactus Theater, 1812 Buddy Holly Ave., at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The show is a chronological journey through time, starting in 1904. The cast will take the audience through the decades and showcase some of Broadway's finest productions.

Highlights from "Anything Goes," "Carousel," "The Music Man," "My Fair Lady," "West Side Story," "Camelot," "Hello Dolly," "Fiddler on the Roof," "Phantom of the Opera" and many more will be showcased.

The production is produced and directed by Patti Honacki with choreography by Christy Andrews.

Starring in "An Evening of Broadway" will be Honacki, Andrews, Kelly Bohannon, Heather Caddell, Anna Ruth Aaron De-Spain, Mark Garner, Amy Johnson, Scott Johnson and Mike Morgan. Special guests Tim McIntire and the Lubbock High School cast of "Grease!" also will make an appearance.

Floor tickets cost $12.50, and balcony seats cost $10. Tickets may be purchased and/or reserved by calling the Cactus Theater at 747-7047.

Best of college theatrical performances featured today at Tech

BY LAURA HENSLEY
The University Daily

Only the best of the best area college theatrical productions will be featured today at the American College Theatre Festival at Texas Tech.

The university's Department of Theatre and Dance will be hosting the four-day festival which will include 10 plays from Texas colleges and universities.

"These are the best productions these departments can put forth — the best actors, the best designers and the best directors," said Jim Bush, teaching assistant. "This is a unique opportunity without traveling to see such great theater in such a short amount of time."

The festival begins at noon today on the Mainstage with Tech's production of "The Imaginary Invalid." This production is a new translation by director Jonathan Marks.

The play was produced last spring and was chosen to compete in the festival.

The festival will conclude at 8 p.m. Saturday on the Mainstage with an awards program.

The festival is one of the two stepping stones toward the national festival early next summer at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. Plays will advance from this festival to the regional competition in February.

"There is a great variety of shows that will be put on this week," said Linda Donahue, assistant professor. "There are contemporary plays as well as classic. They really run the whole gamut of play genres."

Smaller colleges as well as junior colleges will compete together, performing plays such as "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

"The purpose of the festival is to give the schools a chance to showcase their best shows," Donahue said. "It also helps the students learn about touring and gain exposure."

In addition to the seven productions being featured on the Mainstage, there will be four smaller, original plays featured in the Laboratory Theatre.

Donahue said the festival is something not to be missed by theater lovers, and she said tickets will go fast.

Tickets for the festival are $8 for the general public and $4 for Tech students. Student rush will begin five minutes prior to each production.

For the last week or so I feel like I've been standing in line for my turn in the gas chamber or maybe my chance to put a gun to my head for a nice, friendly game of Russian roulette.

The bullet at the end of the barrel of the gun that's going to shoot me in the head is Tech's outdated, inefficient registration system.

I'm a veteran, so I know how the system works.

You stand in a line that winds around and around the second floor of the University Center, down the stairs and ends somewhere in a crowd of sobbing, heartbroken Red Raiders mumbling @##!

Let me translate this little expletive — we need telephone phone registration.

As the line begins to crawl forward — through the UC, up the stairs, down the hall, through the doors — the ladies at the computers with all of our fates at their fingertips get closer and closer.

Finally it's your turn, but your glee quickly turns to sorrow when the lady at the computer looks at you mockingly and grunts, "Those classes are closed."

So, you stand there stunned, and the cold reality of taking three hours next semester slaps you in the face.

I've taken summer school at colleges that don't have athletics, student publications or a Greek system, but they do have a telephone registration system in place.

It works great, and apparently it's not too hard to implement.

But don't get me wrong, there are so many good things about Tech's registration system.

I know a couple who actually met in a registration line a few years ago and are getting married next spring, so it's like Tech's own little version of "Singed Out."

If someone would take the initiative to design T-shirts and slap some Greek letters on them, it could be a mixer.

And it's a great time for prayer and meditation.

I'll be praying that I can get into the classes that are prerequisites for every other class that I need — if not, I'll enjoy taking 12 hours of PE next semester.

Also, it's a good time to invent things. So if anyone has a few extra minutes at the registration party, you might come up with a phone registration system that will keep me out of the three-mile registration line in the UC twice a year.

724, 742 — use any prefix you want, I don't care.

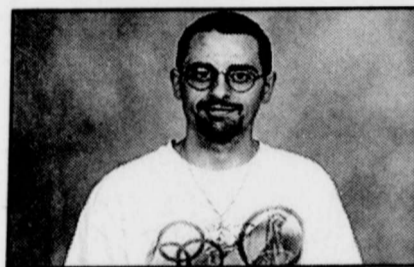

So, tomorrow, my roommate and I will be at the UC when it opens at 6 a.m. because we don't want to go to drop/add where the line — I mean party — is much bigger.

The theme of this semester's registration party is pajamas.

And I'll work on getting the keg for all you morning drinkers.

We all may need it before the day is over.

Some days

COLUMNIST

I slept in Monday, however, I still managed to get on campus in time for my class. Unfortunately, I was unable to find a parking space until half an hour later, which made me that much late to class. On any regular day I would've already given up, but that day was different. I had a paper due, and I needed to turn it in at that class meeting. So instead of going to class, I conscientiously sat outside the room so as not to disturb the lecture. Once class was over, I related my events to the professor who was quite understanding. In fact, since I had missed the lecture, he offered to redo it for me during his office hours, which were immediately after the class.

After listening intently to the concise and generous lecture, he then offered me the opportunity to copy his notes, so that I could have them for future use on the final exam since I was not present to obtain the entire notes that he delivered originally. Well, his office is in the mass communications building, and I couldn't find a copier anywhere, not even a willing volunteer to manually copy them for me. So I decided to go to room 277, the Forensics HQ, in the hopes that some of my teammates would know where I could get copies made. My luck, still not out but getting close, gave me the grace of there being some teammates in the aforementioned room. They informed me that a certain secretary would do copies for 10 cents apiece, a fairly reasonable deal. As I am walking toward the room, I check my pockets and realize that I haven't so much as a cent. Now I begin to get more frustrated, and as I slowly mope through the Xerox-less lonely halls of the mass comm building, I remember something.

I remembered that I had a copy card in my wallet. Hallelujah, the copy machine god was smiling on me. The closest copy machine with card accepting capabilities I knew of was in the English building, on the second floor. So with confident steps I trod to the mecca of reproduction. Once there, I was lucky to be the only one in need of the machine's services. Before I slipped my card into the slot I did some praying and sacrificed a freshman upon the copy machine altar in the hopes that 1) the copy card would still be accepted, 2) that I had at least 40 cents on the card for the four copies I desperately needed, 3) that the copy machine wasn't malfunctioning, 4) that it had plenty of paper and ink and 5) that no one would notice the dead freshman in the recycling bin right next to me. Luckily for me all went well, and I made the copies successfully with 30 cents to spare on my card. I returned the pages to my professor (10 minutes after he issued them to me) and recounted my tale of woe, to which we both had a good laugh. Thank goodness for his charity. I guess we all just have one of those days (for me it seems like just one of those semesters, but oh well), at least mine wasn't as bad as that freshman's.

READERS ASK

Readers Ask is printed in The University Daily every other Wednesday to answer students' questions about health issues. Drop boxes are set up in the University Center, West Hall and the Student Recreation Center. Not all questions are answered, but most topics will be discussed.

All questions are answered by Jo Henderson, Student Health Services education coordinator.

I heard some rumors that the date rape drug was being used here at Texas Tech and that some girls were raped. Is that true and how can I stay safe?

Unfortunately, Rohypnol, also known as the "date rape drug" or "roofies" or "roaches," has survived on our campus, and there have been instances of its use on unsuspecting students. Rohypnol is a white tablet that comes in a bubble package and is an illegal tranquilizer. It is sometimes used to incapacitate women so they can be sexually assaulted. When placed in liquid, it causes decreased blood pressure, memory impairment, drowsiness, visual disturbances, confusion and slurred speech. Too much of it can be fatal, and three deaths in Texas have been linked to the drug. This year authorities already have seized more than 1,700 pills in El Paso. To stay safe, do not ever accept a drink from someone else. Get your own drinks at a bar, a party, etc. Do not leave your drink unattended at a party. Carry it around with you at all times. Do not leave a drink unattended at a bar. Try to make sure a friend you know and trust is watching the drink. Just because your date offers to mix or get a drink does not mean you can trust them. Unless you know them very well for a long time and implicitly trust them, get your own drink. When I say drink, I also do not just mean alcoholic drinks because Rohypnol works the same when placed in alcohol or a soft drink.

I think sex education promotes sexual activity, and I think that if you people would quit talking about it so much students wouldn't think that it's OK to do it. What do you have to say about that?

I think that on this point we will have to agree to disagree. I respect your right to your opinion, and I may not be able to change your mind about sex education, however, I want to provide you with some information from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention who most would agree is a very respectable organization dedicated to the health and well being of our citizenry. The information relates to "Myths About Condoms" and states... "Five U.S. studies of specific sex education programs have demonstrated that HIV education and sex education which included condom information either has no effect upon the initiation of intercourse or resulted in delayed onset of intercourse; four studies of specific programs found that HIV/sex education did not increase frequency of intercourse, and a program that included resistance skills actually resulted in a decrease in the number of youth who initiated sex. In addition, a World Health Organization review cited 19 studies of sex education programs that found no evidence that sex education leads to earlier or increased sexual activity in young people. In fact, five of the studies cited by WHO showed that such programs can lead to a delay or decrease in sexual activity. In a recent study of youth in Switzerland, an AIDS prevention program focusing on condom use did not increase sexual activity or the number of sex partners. But, condom use did not increase among those who were already sexually active."

I would tell anyone considering the start of sexual activity in their life that abstinence is the best choice. No doubt, you don't have to worry about disease, children you aren't ready for, financial obligations you can't meet, the emotional toll it takes when things go bad or you get used and the dozens of other negatives that sexual activity brings with it.

But, if someone says to me that they refuse to consider abstinence and they want to know what I have to say to that, then I say INSIST ON A CONDOM, and use it right. I do believe that if I had a magic potion that I could serve to everyone from age 12 to 25 it would be designed to enhance positive peer pressure "not to" instead of the prevailing attitude I see today that says "if it doesn't hurt me, I don't care what you are doing." The basic bottom line is: this is personal responsibility, and actions have consequences.

I am petrified every time I have to speak in front of the class, and my voice shakes so bad it sounds like I'm about to cry. Is there some medicine I can take to calm down and speak without being so nervous?

I don't recommend drugs to help you through this because anything that calms you down or tranquilizes you could also dull your alertness and ability to think. Consider taking a speech communication class here at Tech or joining Toastmasters International (a group that enhances public speaking) to help you with this problem because you'll probably have to learn to express yourself in public or at meetings in order to be more successful in your career. You may also want to take these tips and use them to ready yourself when you have to speak: 1) be prepared and really know your material, 2) practice speaking in front of a mirror or into a tape recorder, 3) relax and talk to classmates before the presentation in order to calm yourself, 4) look at the people in the audience, 5) speak from your heart with a smile on your face, 6) if someone in the audience is looking at you and nodding and smiling, their body language is encouraging, so smile and let that encourage you, or you may ask a friend in the audience to provide that encouraging face for you, 7) if you turn a page in your script or start a new point on a note card, use this time to pause just a few seconds to take a deep breath and gain your composure, and 8) remember that this moment in time is brief and you get to sit down soon.

My last column had a question about grief support groups. I indicated I would relay any groups I heard about. If you have lost a loved one and want to join a support group, check with Nita Stevick at Resthaven and Westminster Presbyterian Church (794-2861).

Johnson helps Red Raiders outrun controversy

BY HEATH ROBINSON
The University Daily

The weight of the previous week on the Texas Tech football team could be felt throughout Memorial Stadium in Austin Saturday.

A week earlier, Tech's offense was shut out for the second time in three games. The following Monday, Nov. 3, Tech Chancellor John Montford read a letter from the NCAA outlining 18 rules violations, most of which concerned possible illegal activity among football players and coaches.

Then, two days before its game against hated Texas, Montford declared the Tech football team ineligible for any bowl consideration, or the Big 12 Championship Game, this season.

Then, two days before its game against hated Texas, Montford declared the Tech football team ineligible for any bowl consideration or the Big 12 Championship Game this season.

Then in the first half against the Longhorns, Tech's offense again looked sluggish as it scored three points against the No. 94 defense in the country. In that context, it was senior Dane Johnson awaiting the second half kickoff of the nation's premiere kicker, Phil Dawson.

Johnson shook two Texas defenders, hit the Tech sideline, and outran Montford, the NCAA and several Longhorn pursuers into the endzone. The senior from Southlake looked like he was running downhill.

Johnson shook two Texas defenders, hit the Tech sideline, and outran Montford, the NCAA and several Longhorn pursuers into the endzone. The senior from Southlake looked like he was running downhill.

"I think that might be the fastest I have ever ran in my entire life," Johnson said. "It's a great feeling. I think this might have been the best game I have ever played at Tech."

For Johnson, it was his third touchdown this season. He returned punts for touchdowns against Southwestern Louisiana and Baylor. But this time, the return was special.

No touchdown he ever scored as a running back at Southlake Carroll while leading them to 46 wins in 47 games was ever this special.

Not only did Johnson give Tech a 10-7 lead over the Longhorns, he gave the Raiders new life in a seemingly lost season.

"If we can't go to a bowl game, then we can win the rest of our games," Johnson said. "We can prove that we belong in one. Thursday's announcement really hurt. But this is still football, and it's still fun. There are other reasons to play."

Johnson's return took the air out of Texas, and it gave Tech the impetus it needed to defeat the Longhorns, 24-10. Listening to Tech players and coaches, it seems they have found new reasons to play the rest of this year.

"Naturally, I think the guys had their heads down a little bit Thursday when they found out," Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "So, of course, we were worried about what their mindset would be going into this game. They're great kids, so we felt like they would give a big effort."

In the second half, Tech played a "bowl game," Johnson said.

"These last two games are our national championship games," Johnson said. "And for a lot of guys, like me, these are the last two times we'll get to suit up for Tech. That's motivation for me. It could very well be the last two times I ever put on a football uniform."

For the Red Raiders, maybe they learned from Johnson that football can still be fun, whether a bowl game or a berth in the Big 12 Championship is at stake or not.

Freshman I-back Ricky Williams said the Johnson return was a moment he'll never forget.

"For me, the school's decision hurt," Williams said. "But I've got three more years to go to bowl games. We really felt bad for the seniors that had to leave on this note. I think Dane's return was great. Maybe it gives them a better memory from this season."

For the Red Raiders and Johnson, they don't plan to quit running.

Games against Oklahoma State and Oklahoma remain on the schedule. Those games present opportunities for Tech to prove itself even more.

"We had things to play for," Johnson said. "It's always fun to play against Texas. And it was one of the few times we ever beat Texas, Texas A&M and Baylor in the same year. Now, I think we want to win out just to prove we were worthy of going to a bowl and of representing the South in the title game."

Still, Johnson harbors no hard feelings toward Montford or Tech's administration.

Mover and Shaker: Tech free safety Dane Johnson shows his defensive prowess in the Red Raiders 13-2 loss to Kansas State Nov. 1. The senior from Southlake was named Big 12 Special Teams Player of the Week for his second half kickoff return in the Red Raiders' 24-10 triumph over Texas Saturday.

"When we finish Nov. 22, a big part of my life is going to die," Johnson said. "It will be weird to not put those pads on again. But we had to make this decision, because in the long run not going to a bowl game this year was only going to help out this school.

"We owe this school a lot, because they gave us a chance. Hopefully, this can be a way to help them out when the NCAA makes its decision."

WNBA announces Detroit, Orlando as expansion franchises for next season

NEW YORK (AP) — Detroit and Washington are officially entering the WNBA. Orlando and Chicago may be next.

The WNBA received formal approval Tuesday from the NBA Board of Governors to expand to 10 teams. Detroit and Washington will join Charlotte, Cleveland and New York in the year-old league's Eastern Conference.

To make room, the defending champion Houston Comets will shift to the Western Conference and join Los Angeles, Phoenix, Sacramento and Utah.

The league's operating committee will recommend another two expansion cities by June 1. While no one is publicly pushing any single candidate, Orlando and Chicago would seem the two favorites.

Orlando was considered for one of the two 1998 expansion teams. But Magic president Bob Vander Weide, chairman of the WNBA planning committee, wanted to wait until the team completed building its practice and office facility.

"With the logistics involved in moving all of our functions to the new building, we would not have been comfortable operating a team for the upcoming season," Magic spokesman Alex Martins said.

"We're eager to have a team, and we spent the second half of last season traveling to NBA cities to look at the logistics of having a team, everything from logistics to game presentations to basketball operations."

The WNBA also figures to be eager to place a team in Chicago, the largest U.S. city without one.

Nicknames and logos for the expansion teams are expected to be announced before the end of the year.

WHY DARWIN'S SHIP IS SINKING THE BIG BANG, MARTIAN ROCKS AND A BLACK BOX

Thomas Woodward
Saturday, November 15, 1997

Texas Tech Univ., 15th and Flint, Business Administration
LH 202, 7:30 P.M.

In this talk, Woodard will present contemporary evidence in support of intelligent design. Consideration will be given to Darwin's Black Box, Martian rocks, as well as recent evidence from astronomy/ cosmology. The discussion will treat both the naturalistic perspective as well as the intelligent design perspective. Recent work by Denton, Johnson, Behe and others will be described.

ABOUT TOM WOODARD:
Tom Woodard is professor of science and cross-cultural studies at Trinity College of Florida, located in Tampa Bay. He is the founder and director of the C.S. Lewis Society, Inc. which held academic conferences and lectureships on campuses of Princeton, Yale, Univ. of Pennsylvania and Univ. of Florida.

A graduate of Princeton University, Professor Woodard is a frequent lecturer at universities and colleges in the U.S., Europe, and Latin America on the topics of biological evolution, astronomy, and cosmology. He has also spoken on contemporary ethical dilemmas, comparative religions and world views.

His articles on the origins debate have appeared in a number of journals, including a recent cover story article on Lehigh biochemist Michael Behe, titled "Meeting Darwin's Wager" that appeared in Christianity Today. He is a graduate of Dallas Seminary and an Adjunct Professor of Dallas Seminary, Tampa Extension.

World Champion Marlins begin to dismantle high-price roster

MIAMI (AP) — H. Wayne Huizenga promised to make the Florida Marlins a winner when he spent $89 million to fill the 5-year-old franchise's roster with very high-priced talented players.

Two weeks later, Huizenga is fulfilling another promise.

The Marlins started the breakup of their world championship team Tuesday, dealing Moises Alou to the Houston Astros for two minor-league pitchers and a player to be named.

"Experience teaches you when this happens, the perception is that it's not a good deal," said Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski.

"It's not what you prefer to do. But in this situation we're looking for young quality players that are ready to step in."

Huizenga, the Marlins' owner who said he's losing $34 million this year on the franchise, intends to sell the Marlins to a group headed by team president Don Smiley.

The pair said they will cut the payroll to below $20 million next season, virtually assuring Florida will become a low-drawing non-contender.

The Marlins traded Alou, 31, for right-handers Oscar Henriquez and Manuel Barrios, both 23, and a player to be named.

The deal was made just before 2 p.m. EST, the deadline for freezing rosters for the Nov. 18 expansion draft.

Astros general manager Gerry Hunsicker sounded thrilled.

"Moises Alou obviously is one of the premiere players in the game today," Hunsicker said.

"It's unusual that anybody can acquire a player of this magnitude. Adding him to our lineup makes us a force to be reckoned with."

Alou is to be paid $5 million in each of the next two seasons and $5.25 million in each of the 2000 and 2001 seasons.

He was one of the free agents Huizenga signed last winter to build a contender, agreeing to a $25 million, five-year contract. He hit .292 during the regular season and led the team with 23 homers and 115 RBIs.

Alex Fernandez, expected to miss all of 1998 following rotator cuff surgery, agreed Tuesday to a partial waiver of his no-trade clause that will allow Florida to expose him in the expansion draft.

Lady Raiders win first exhibition

BY KRISTIE RIEKEN
The University Daily

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders trailed the majority of the game but came on strong down the stretch to capture a 65-54 win over Slovan Bratislava in an exhibition game Tuesday at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

"Obviously it wasn't as pretty as we wanted it to be at times," said coach Marsha Sharp. "Our timing was often off, and it caused us to look ragged, but that is why you play exhibition games."

The Lady Raiders trailed by seven, 31-24, at the half and struggled to gain the lead during the second half of play.

Sharp said the key point of the game came with less than 15 minutes to go in the second half. That is when true freshman guard Katrisa O'Neal made a three-point goal and followed it with a steal and a layup just seconds later.

"I feel like the turning point of the game was when Katrisa made the three-pointer and followed it with a steal," Sharp said. "She has outstanding speed and quickness and had an outstanding performance for her first game."

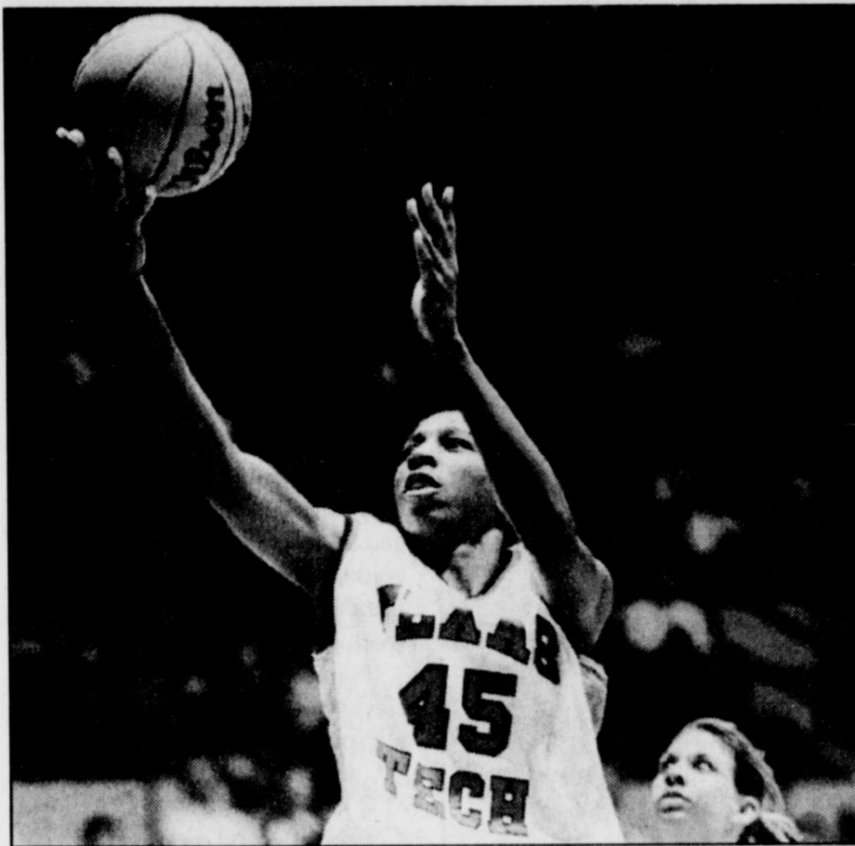

O'Neal said she was happy she did well in her first outing and that coming off of the bench to spark the team is something she wants to be counted on to do.

"I knew I had to go in and try to make something happen," said O'Neal, who scored 12 points against the Slovaks. "My strength is my defense."

Senior All-American candidate Alicia Thompson led all scorers with 24 points and 12 rebounds.

Thompson said it was great to be on the floor again, but the Lady Raiders have some areas they need to improve.

"We were a little bit shaky and had some nervous energy (Tuesday)," Thompson said. "But we did do a lot of nice things, and we can learn from our mistakes."

Red Raider volleyball loses to Cornhuskers

LINCOLN, Neb. (Special) — The Texas Tech volleyball team was swept by Nebraska in three straight games 15-7, 15-7, 15-8 Tuesday.

In game one, Tech (20-8 overall, 7-7 Big 12) had the score tied at 5-5, but the Cornhuskers went up 12-6 in route to winning the first game 15-7.

The Red Raiders gained a 5-2 and 7-4 advantage in game two, but Nebraska rallied back to win the game.

In the final game it was all Nebraska. The Cornhuskers jumped out to an early 6-1 lead. Tech crept slowly back into the game at 7-5, but Nebraska scored the final four points to win the game and hand the Red Raiders their second straight sweep.

"Nebraska looked real good (Tuesday), and they looked a lot better than what I saw on tape going into it," Tech coach Jeff Nelson said.

"I was quite sure they would have a good match."

Nebraska was led by Mandy Monson who had eight kills and a .348 hitting percentage.

As a team, the Cornhuskers had 54 kills.

For the Red Raiders, things did not look so bright.

Lisa Hilgers led the Tech charge with four kills and a .444 hitting percentage during the game.

Assisting Hilgers was Kristen Holmes, who recorded eight kills and a .292 hitting percentage in two games.

Nelson said Nebraska was ready to play from the first point.

Whiffleball Tourney

It's back-- the Second Annual Whiffleball tournament will be held Friday and Sunday evenings on Court 5 of the Rec Center. You need at least 4 players on your team-- this is an open tournament so men and/or women may play on the same team. Register your team by Thursday in the Fit/Well or Room 202. Natural high t-shirts to the winners.

Rock Climbing Tomorrow

Recreational Sports' Outdoor Program will be conducting a beginners rock climbing workshop tomorrow at 3 p.m. at the rock climbing wall on the upper level of the Rec Center.

Persons attending will learn the basic techniques of climbing on the indoor climbing wall. Equipment, procedures and safety will also be discussed.

Attendees will have an opportunity for personalized instruction while climbing the indoor wall. The workshop is free and is open to anyone interested in learning more about rock climbing.

Cross Country Run Saturday

Saturday morning at 10 a.m. is the scheduled start for the annual Cross Country Turkey Trot sponsored by the Recreational Sports Department. It will begin at the West Rec Softball Complex and will be 2 miles in length.

The run will have divisions for men and women individuals, women's team, men's team and co-rec team. Trophies will be awarded to the top individual winners and smoked turkeys will be given to the first place team in each of the three divisions. A minimum of four runners are needed to compete as a team.

Entries are available in the Student Rec Center and the Rec Sports Office. Late registration will occur on Saturday morning prior to the race beginning at 9:15 a.m. There is no charge to run though there is a $6 t-shirt fee for those wanting a race t-shirt.

Exercise a little Charity-- Canned Food Drive to begin at the Student Rec Center

Beginning Monday, boxes will be placed throughout the SRC and the Aquatic Center.

Cholesterol Screening

Register by noon today for the cholesterol and glucose screening. The screening, which will be done by the UMC technicians, will be done in the morning from 6:40-8:30 a.m.

Every adult is encouraged to know their cholesterol readings to have better knowledge of their health.

This is a total lipid profile which includes total cholesterol, HDL, LDL, and triglycerides.

The cost is $8 and Rec Center Membership is not required.

For an additional $2, a glucose reading will be done-- this is a test for adult onset diabetes.

For more information, please call 742-3828 by noon today to register for the screening.

Payment is due at the time blood is drawn.

Please be a good sport and bring a can of food to help those less fortunate than you.

Table Tennis Champ Named

Last Thursday, 22 men and three women participated in the 1997 fall intramural table tennis tournament at the Rec Center.

The players competed in a consolation, best 2 of 3 game match tournament for the title.

All players agreed to play in the same division. In the final match, Gary DeJarnett defeated Nick Johansson 21-17, 21-18 to win the overall competition. Gary is now eligible to receive an intramural champion T-shirt. In the consolation bracket, Aravind Ratakonda met Garrett Swyman in the finals and outlasted him in a very even match throughout to win 21-16, 21-16.

The intramural department would like to thank all of those who participated in this year's event.

Racquetball Doubles Tournament Entries Due Tomorrow

The Recreational Sports Department is accepting entries for a doubles racquetball tournament through 5 p.m. on November 13.

There is no entry fee but participants must supply their own balls. Racquetballs may be purchased at the equipment issue desk at the Rec Center. The two day, single elimination tournament is scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m. on Friday, November 14, and continue on Saturday beginning at 10 a.m.

Entrants must be available to participate on both days.

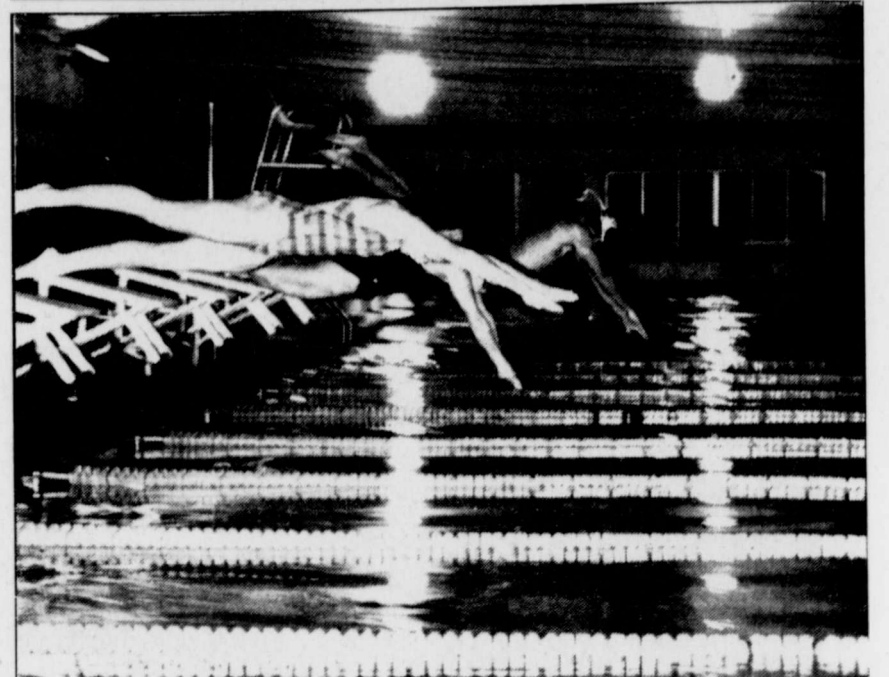

All students, faculty and staff are eligible to participate in intramural sports may play in the men's, women's or co-rec divisions.

Open divisions will be available for more advanced players and novice divisions will be available for beginners. Winners of each division will receive an intramural champion T-shirt.

Stretch! Swimmers explode off the starting blocks during last two weeks' Intramural Swim Meet held at the Aquatic Center. CL2 won the team event.

Intramural Swim Meet Results

On November 5, the intramural swim meet was held at the Recreational Aquatic Center.

Thirty seven swimmers showed up to show off their skills. Marc Stout won the Men's Individual Division by taking First place in the 200 yard freestyle and second place in the 50 yard backstroke and the 100 yard individual medley. Jubal Mann was not far behind taking second place in the Men's Individual Division.

There was a great turnout for the Women's Individual Division. Kelly Nichols won by placing first in the 100 yard individual medley and the 50 yard freestyle and second in the 50 yard breaststroke. Jill Goff took second place with just one point behind Nichols.

CL2 Crew, the lifeguards of the RAC, and the Tadpoles, a PF&W intermediate swim class, were the only two teams in the swim meet.

These two Co-Rec teams swam neck and neck during the entire meet. It came down to the last two events to determine the winner. The Tadpoles gave it their best, but the CL2 Crew could not be stopped. CL2 Crew took first place with Stephanie, Irby and Marlene Grayson racking up the most points for their team.

A special thanks to everyone who helped make the swim meet a success.

Snow Ski Specials

The Outdoor Shop in room 206 of the Rec Center will be having specials on snow ski equipment. During Thanksgiving Break, Nov. 24 or 25-Dec. 1, they will several specials.
