Huge migrant teen detention camp in Texas shutting down

This Dec. 13, 2018, file photo shows migrant teens walking inside the Tornillo detention camp in Tornillo, Texas. The non-profit group running what was once the nation's largest detention camp for migrant children confirmed it is closing down the facility and the last kids left on Friday, Jan. 11, 2019.

Frederica Wilson, a Florida Democrat, said she is worried about increasing the number of beds in a facility south of Miami. Last month, the government announced it would house more teens in the Homestead shelter, expanding the total number of beds from 1,350 to 2,350.

By The Associated Press

TORNILLO, Texas (AP) — The non-profit running what once was the largest U.S. detention camp housing migrant teenagers said the last children left the facility Friday.

The tent city in Tornillo, Texas, is shutting down, and all tents and equipment will be removed from the site by the end of January, said Krista Piferrer, spokeswoman of BCFS Health and Human Services.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees the care of migrant children, said all the children who were held at Tornillo have been either released to an appropriate sponsor or transferred to other shelters.

"Though Tornillo is on a path toward closure, influx facilities like Tornillo are necessary," said Lynn Johnson, an assistant secretary at the department, referring to the agency's need to expand and contract its shelter capacity depending on the number of children crossing the U.S.-Mexico border.

The Tornillo facility opened in June in an isolated pocket of the Texas desert with capacity for 360 children. It expanded into a guarded detention camp that in mid-December held more than 2,700 largely Central American teens in rows of canvas tents.

At that point, more people were detained in Tornillo's tent city than in all but one of the nation's 204 federal prisons. Rising from the cotton fields and dusty roads not far from the dark fence marking the border between the U.S. and Mexico, the camp had rows of beige tents and golf carts that ferried staffers carrying walkie-talkies. Teens with identical haircuts and government-issued shirts and pants could be seen walking single file from tent to tent, flanked by staff at the front and back.

Politicians and advocates for immigrants and human rights protested at the site over the seven months it was open, with some even taking up vigils.

"It was chilling to see thousands of children locked up in a tent prison in the desert. It's great news that those children have finally been moved out of Tornillo," said Oregon Sen. Jeff Merkley, a Democrat who in December introduced the Shut Down Child Prison Camps Act.

The tent city came under fire in November after a report that the Trump administration had waived FBI fingerprint checks for the 2,100 staff working there and allowed BCFS to staff just one mental health clinician for every 100 children. Lawmakers called for stricter background checks, more mental health support and a public hearing to further investigate problems at Tornillo raised by a federal watchdog report and an Associated Press investigation.

Some lawmakers said they were pleased to hear about the closure of the facility but warned that other detention centers holding migrant teens are still open. On Tuesday, there were 10,944 migrant children held in the government's network of shelters, foster homes and detention centers, according to confidential government data obtained and cross-checked by AP.

"It's a weight off my shoulders to have children now with family members. If you're trying to use kids to fix a broken immigration system, then you have a real problem," said Rep. Will Hurd, a Texas Republican whose district includes the detention camp.

Other representatives expressed concerns about the expansion of other detention facilities for migrant youth. U.S. Rep.

Instead of putting these children with family and a public school, they are warehousing these kids," Wilson said. "For most of these children that we have in detention, we have sponsors that have volunteered to take them and to sort of act as foster parents until their asylum cases have been heard."

Neha Desai, immigration director at the Oakland-based National Center for Youth Law, welcomed the closure Friday but said many more migrant kids remain in federal custody.

"We cannot forget that there continue to be thousands of children detained in facilities that fail to meet the basic medical, mental health and educational needs of children," Desai said.

"These children should be home with their families."

feel comfortable using their inhalers and spacers. The camp will also include outdoor activities, tours of Scenic Mountain and different areas in the community.

"Asthma may not seem like a big deal for those not directly impacted, but it can be limiting for those who have not learned what triggers their asthma attacks and how to manage those attacks," Parks said. "We want the kids to be confident in knowing what their triggers are, how to avoid them, what to do if they feel an asthma attack coming on, and reassure them that they don't have to sit on the sidelines when it comes to the activities they enjoy."

Some people don't realize that the majority of asthma attacks can be prevented by knowing how to recognize triggers and early on set signs. Knowing your triggers allows you to avoid or limit your interaction with them. Some of the more common triggers include animals, smoke, dust, perfumes, aerosol sprays (hairspray, bug spray, etc.), weather changes and car fumes.

The camp is open to children between the age of 9 and 12 years of age. There is no registration fee, but applications must be received by April 15. For more information or to pick up a registration form, stop by Scenic Mountain Medical Center at 1601 W. Eleventh Place or ask your pediatrician or primary care provider.

Waco is booming

Waco has the highest hotel occupancy rate in the state partly because of the TV show Fixer Upper and the Magnolia restaurant and store owned by Chip and Joanna Gaines, creators of the TV show. David Ridley noticed the big increase in tourism and decided to start a tour company. He calls it Waco Tours.

“Chip and Joanna did my house on the TV show,” says David. “Through that amazing experience we saw the 30 or 40 thousand people a week coming to Waco and decided there needs to be a tour company giving them something to do and showing them the city. So in June of 2016 we bought a Mercedes Van and developed a 2 and a half hour tour of Waco and took people around the city on a part time basis on weekends.”

David quit his hospice job to devote fulltime to his tour business. It has grown.

“In 2016 we hosted about 850 people. Then in 2017 we bought a couple more vans and hosted 12,000 people. We now have 7 vans and are running 7 to 10 tours a day from March to July. We have 63 guides and drivers and have hosted over 25,000 people now.”

The tour costs $79. Passengers call it a bargain.

“They tell us it’s the best part of their trip to Waco. We make it fun and show them the suspension bridge, Lake Waco, the Baylor campus and some of the homes that were on the TV show. We talk about Dr Pepper that was invented here and another soft drink Big Red, we show them where Snickers are made, we take them to Cameron Park, one of the largest city parks in Texas, where they look over Lovers Leap and are amazed to find cliffs and hills in Waco.

“We include some of the historic structures including the Amicable Life Building, which was the tallest building west of the Mississippi until the late 1920’s. We tell about the deadliest tornado in Texas history that hit Waco in 1953, killing 114 people. And everybody remembers David Koresh and the Branch Davidians. So a lot has happened here. We tell what Waco was like in the late 1800’s and early 1900’s with the cotton and the Chisholm Trail and the springs that were popular then.”

Last September Waco Tours started a 2-hour cruise on the Brazos River. David says drivers and guides go through rigorous training before they are allowed to take groups on tours. They have to learn 6 hours of script about Waco just in case someone asks a question that’s not covered on the 2 and a half hour script the tour guides memorize. Trip Advisor shows 1600 excellent reviews.

“People tell us they saw Waco through different eyes and learned things they would have never learned otherwise. We go above and beyond. We want our guests to feel they’ve had a VIP kind of experience. By the end of the tour our guides and drivers know the passengers. They come as strangers and leave as friends.”

Backs to the Wall?

My Uncle Mort’s telephone is almost always warm, mostly due to the heat generated from his hand held firmly against his cheek, wherein is a jawbone that’s almost always yakking.

Maybe that assessment is a bit harsh, but when the old duffer’s comments have been clocked at 150 words per minute with gusts to 200, you’ll get no argument here. Count me among the dozens of people on his “call list” who feel compelled to answer, if only out of curiosity.

He kicked off the new year with what he described as a “phone warning” about the danger of spending too much time worrying about walls. Before he finished, I was humming the Statler Brothers’ old hit, “Counting Flowers on the Wall.” You remember it, of course, the one about “playing solitaire ‘til one with a deck of 51.”

“I’ve been ‘studying up’ on walls,” my uncle began. “If you want to take on a topic that’s bound to add ‘muddle’ to a mind already ‘muddled,’ be my guest. Walls have been used for centuries both to keep people out and to keep people in. And in some cases, it took centuries to build ‘em. Recorded history hasn’t helped much to determine whether walls are good things or bad things.”

He claimed that there’s so much material about walls, it can lead to the “hurting of hair, the crossing of eyes and even turns to other political parties.”

What got him started, of course, is the brouhaha in Washington, DC, concerning President Trump’s insistence for construction of a wall between the United States and Mexico.

Mort believes that even with full funding and the employment of most modern construction techniques, there’s “no way” the wall will ever be more than a “bump in the road” when compared to great walls in history.

“The Chinese set the standard no other country can ever reach,” Mort claimed. “They started their ‘Great Wall’ seven centuries BC, and they had many ‘starts’ and ‘stops’ before winding it up in the 19th century AD. And, the exact number of construction years still is being debated.”

Best I can tell, he’s right about the arguments. About all I can add is that multiple centuries, many dynasties and much manpower led to construction of one of the Seven Wonders of the World.

I think I can better contribute to “wall conversations” by offering a frame of reference more easily understood.

Admittedly, a fly on the wall might well have a better understanding, whether studies include walls dating back to Biblical times, or the one proposed today for our southern border.

For comparison’s sake, let’s limit discussion to the proposed wall and another provided by a Mother Goose rhyme. I refer, of course, to Humpty-Dumpty’s experience with walls.

Like Humpty, we’ve arrived somewhat suddenly at “wall talk.” We really don’t know how Humpty-Dumpty—a figure described by a kindergarten as a “real egghead”—ascended the structure.

In the rhyme, the story begins with his sitting there, then falling.

It is suggested that it wasn’t a “Jack and Jill” kind of fall, but indeed a “great fall,” the kind that cracks both noggins and eggs.

What to do? The “rhymester” in jolly Old England opined that all the king’s horses and all the king’s men—try as they did—took a “SHELLacking.”

Putting Humpty-Dumpty together again was well above their pay grade.

American citizens, of course, generally feel that they have little more than an “ifs/buts/candy/nuts” understanding of the proposed wall. We do know that if the king’s horses—as well as his men (and women) are called—many of them may “call in sick” unless assured of being at the top of the list for payment as soon as the government shut-down ends. It may be a while before we learn if we’re to live happily ever after.

DAILY PRAYER

We can bless someone today by helping them, Lord, showing Your care and compassion to others. Amen.

Check it out at the Howard County Library

We hope your year is off to a great start. We have resumed our regular schedule for children's programming, Baby Time is on Tuesdays at 11 a.m. and Storytime is Wednesdays at 10:15 a.m. come by and connect with other families.

We have more mysteries for this week's reviews.

Private eye Alex McKnight is back in "Dead Man Running" (M HAM S) by Steve Hamilton. On the Mediterranean Sea, a vacationer logs on to the security-camera feed from his home in Scottsdale, Arizona, and something doesn't look right. Rewinding through the feed, he sees an intruder. When he shifts to the bedroom camera, he sees a dead body. A trap is set, and the man they catch is a deranged loner named Martin T. Livermore who is charged with murder.

It's the sixth young woman he has killed. But then Livermore gives the FBI some stunning news: number seven is still out there. Alive. He'll take them to her on one condition: a former Detroit cop comes along. Alex McKnight. To Alex, living two thousand miles away in Paradise, Michigan, Livermore is a stranger. He can't remember encountering him as a cop, can see no connection to this man whatsoever-but he agrees to accompany the search party to a remote desert canyon. And there the worst nightmare of Alex's life begins. Alex will now be forced to chase this killer through the shadows in a desperate race against the clock, across the country, and to the edge of his limits, until he finally uncovers the one secret from his own past that binds them together-and cuts closer to home than he could ever have imagined.

Police chief Jesse Stone is back on the job after a stint in rehab, in "Colorblind" (M PAR R) Robert B. Parker. Jesse's road to recovery is immediately made bumpy by a series of disturbing and apparently racially motivated crimes, beginning with the murder of an African American woman. Then, Jesse's own deputy, Alisha-the first black woman hired by the Paradise police department-becomes the target of a sophisticated frame.

As Jesse and his team work tirelessly to unravel the truth, he has to wonder if this is just one part of an even grander plot, one with an endgame more destructive than any of them can imagine. At the same time, a mysterious young man named Cole Slayton rolls into town with a chip on his shoulder and a problem with authority-namely, Jesse. Yet, something about the angry young man appeals to Jesse, and he takes Cole under his wing. But there's more to Cole than meets the eye, and his secrets might change Jesse's life forever.

A chilling letter promises a reign of terror in "Swift Vengeance" (M PAR T) by T. Jefferson Parker. Private Investigator Roland Ford is on the trail of a mysterious killer who is beheading CIA drone operators and leaving puzzling clues at each crime scene. His friend Lindsay Rakes is afraid for her own life and the life of her son after a fellow flight crew member is killed in brutal fashion.

Even more terrifying is the odd note the killer left behind, "Vengeance is justice. The thunder is coming for you. Sincerely Caliphornia." Ford strikes an uneasy alliance with San Diego-based FBI agent Joan Taucher, who is tough as nails. As the killer strikes again, Ford and Taucher dash into the fray, each desperate for their own reasons and each ready to risk it all to stop the killer from doing far more damage.

In "The Temptation of Forgiveness" (M LEO D) by Donna Leon, Commissario Guido Brunetti is surprised, if not dismayed, to discover from his superior, Vice-Questore Patta that leaks are emanating from the Questura Commissario. Brunetti, however, is more consequently affected by the unexpected appearance of a friend of his wife's who is fearful that her son is using drugs and is hopeful that Brunetti can somehow intervene.

When Tulio Gasparini, the woman's husband, is found unconscious and with a serious brain injury at the foot of a bridge in Venice after midnight, Brunetti is drawn to pursue a possible connection to the boy's behavior. But the truth, as Brunetti has experienced so often, is not straightforward. Brunetti pursues several false and contradictory leads while growing ever more impressed by the intuition of his fellow Commissario, Claudia Griffoni as well as by the endless resourcefulness and craftiness of Signorina Elettra, Patta's secretary and gate-keeper.

Exasperated by the petty bureaucracy that constantly bedevils him, Brunetti is steadied by the embrace of his own family and by his passion for the classics. This predilection leads him to read Sophocles' Antigone, and, in its light, consider the terrible consequence to which the actions of a tender heart can lead.

Lt. Gov. Patrick: Statement on President Trump's Meeting in McAllen

MCALLEN - Lt. Gov. Patrick made this statement today following his meeting with President Donald J. Trump in McAllen:

"I joined President Trump in McAllen today and I truly appreciate him coming to Texas to underscore the crisis at the southern border and immediate urgency of his border security plan. It is time for his opponents to put aside the partisan games and address this very real crisis. The president's comprehensive plan to build a wall where it is needed, along with additional funding for narcotics detection, additional detention beds and additional immigration judges to handle the deluge of asylum applications and immigration cases, is critical to Texas and the country and Congress should act immediately to fund it."

Illegal immigration costs Texas taxpayers billions of dollars every year in healthcare, education and law enforcement as well as direct spending on border security. In 2018 alone, over 500,000 illegal aliens were apprehended crossing the border illegally - 300,000 of those were in Texas. Law enforcement experts confirm that these numbers represent only 20-25% of the people entering our country illegally.

Huge migrant teen detention camp in Texas shutting down

This undated file photo provided by the Administration for Children and Families, a division of the Department of Health and Human Services, shows the shelter used to house unaccompanied migrant children in Tornillo, Texas.

By The Associated Press

TORNILLO, Texas — The nonprofit running what once was the largest U.S. detention camp housing migrant teenagers said the last children left the facility Friday.

The tent city in Tornillo, Texas, is shutting down, and all tents and equipment will be removed from the site by the end of January, said Krista Piferrer, spokeswoman of BCFS Health and Human Services.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, which oversees the care of migrant children, did not provide further details. But a spokesman said last month that the center had stopped receiving new referrals.

The Tornillo facility with capacity for 360 children opened in June in an isolated pocket of the Texas desert. It expanded into a guarded detention camp that held more than 2,700 largely Central American teens in rows of canvas tents.

At that point, more people were detained in Tornillo's tent city than in all but one of the nation's 204 federal prisons. Rising from the cotton fields and dusty roads not far from the dark fence marking the border between the U.S. and Mexico, the camp had rows of beige tents and golf carts that ferried staffers carrying walkie-talkies. Teens with identical haircuts and government-issued shirts and pants could be seen walking single file from tent to tent, flanked by staff at the front and back.

Politicians and advocates for immigrants and human rights protested at the site over the seven months it was open, with some even taking up vigils.

"It was chilling to see thousands of children locked up in a tent prison in the desert. It's great news that those children have finally been moved out of Tornillo," said Oregon Sen. Jeff Merkley, a Democrat who in December introduced the Shut Down Child Prison Camps Act.

The tent city came under fire in November after a report that the Trump administration had waived FBI fingerprint checks for the 2,100 staff working there and allowed BCFS to staff just one mental health clinician for every 100 children. Lawmakers called for stricter background checks, more mental health support and a public hearing to further investigate problems at Tornillo raised by a federal watchdog report and an Associated Press investigation.

Some lawmakers said they were pleased to hear about the closure of the facility but warned that other detention centers holding migrant teens are still open.

"It's a weight off my shoulders to have children now with family members. If you're trying to use kids to fix a broken immigration system, then you have a real problem," said Rep. Will Hurd, a Texas Republican whose district includes the detention camp.

Other representatives expressed concerns about the expansion of other detention facilities for migrant youth. U.S. Rep. Frederica Wilson, a Florida Democrat, said she is worried about increasing the number of beds in a facility south of Miami. Last month, the government announced it would house more teens in the Homestead shelter, expanding the total number of beds from 1,350 to 2,350.

"Instead of putting these children with family and a public school, they are warehousing these kids," Wilson said. "For most of these children that we have in detention, we have sponsors that have volunteered to take them and to sort of act as foster parents until their asylum cases have been heard."

Neha Desai, immigration director at the Oakland-based National Center for Youth Law, welcomed the closure Friday but said many more remain in federal custody.

"We cannot forget that there continue to be thousands of children detained in facilities that fail to meet the basic medical, mental health and educational needs of children," Desai said. "These children should be home with their families."

Texas set to remove Confederate plaque from state Capitol

By PAUL J. WEBER

Associated Press
AUSTIN, Texas — Texas Gov. Greg Abbott agreed Friday to remove a plaque in the state Capitol that rejects slavery as the underlying cause of the Civil War, bending after years of resistance by state Republican leaders in the face of Confederate monuments falling nationwide.

A unanimous vote by the State Preservation Board, which Abbott chairs, ordered the removal of the 60-year-old plaque that pledges to teach "the truths of history," adding that "one of the most important of which is that the war between the states was not a rebellion, nor was its underlying cause to sustain slavery."

The plaque is among nearly a dozen Confederate markers in and around the Texas Capitol. It's the first slated to come down since the deadly 2017 white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Virginia, that led to the removal of a string of Confederate monuments nationwide.

But Abbott and state leaders resisted acting on similar calls in Texas, and the governor made no comment after Friday's vote. Texas Republicans had been resolute after the Charlottesville rally that tearing down Confederate markers wouldn't change history, but pressure intensified after a black lawmaker from Dallas began condemning the plaque that hangs near his Capitol office as historically indefensible.

Dallas state Rep. Eric Johnson appeared unsure after Friday's vote whether efforts to remove other Confederate symbols at the Texas Capitol would become easier.

"Why shouldn't we be able to talk about the monuments on the Capitol grounds or anything else," Johnson said. "I don't think it's a conversation we should be afraid to have, not in 2019 in America, in Texas."

The State Preservation Board is governed by Texas' three most powerful Republicans — Abbott, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick and newly chosen House Speaker Dennis Bonnen. They quickly voted to remove the plaque with no discussion and left without speaking to about a dozen reporters in the room. None of their offices immediately returned messages for comment.

The plaque was first hung in 1959. It remained mounted to wall next to a staircase in the Capitol after the vote, and it was unclear when it would be removed.

Texas has taken down Confederate plaques before. In 2000, then-Gov. George W. Bush's administration removed two Confederate memorial plaques in the state Supreme Court building following pressure from the Texas NAACP.

But Texas Republican leaders since then have stood firm as scrutiny over Confederate monuments intensified in recent years. Following the Charlottesville rally in August 2017, Abbott said racism and hate-filled violence was never acceptable, but that "tearing down monuments won't erase our nation's past."

Two months later, Johnson and Abbott discussed the plaque in a private meeting, which ended with both sides offering conflicting accounts of the conversation. Abbott's office pushed back on Johnson saying the governor indicated support for taking it down, but later said that "substantially inaccurate historical statements" don't belong on display at the Capitol.

TEXRail now serving Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The $1 billion TEXRail commuter line has begun service to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The 27-mile rail line from downtown Fort Worth began transporting passengers Thursday. TEXRail trains are operated by the Trinity Metro transit agency.

Service had been scheduled to start last weekend but was delayed until federal inspectors, amid the government shutdown, could review a new rail intersection near downtown Fort Worth.

Transit officials on Monday announced Federal Railroad Administration inspectors had finished certifying the entire route, which includes nine stops.

TEXRail fares are free through January. Fares are a maximum $2.50 per person, per way, following the complimentary period.

PHOENIX (AP) — Panicking staff members at a long-term care facility scrambled to save a baby born to an Arizona woman in a vegetative state amid their shock to learn she was pregnant, according to dramatic 911 audio released Friday.

The five minutes of audio from the Dec. 29 birth starts with a frantic nurse at the Phoenix facility yelling, "The baby's turning blue! The baby's turning blue!"

"One of our patients just had a baby, and we had no idea she was pregnant," the nurse said.

She then says the mother appeared stable but care workers were administering CPR to the infant, who was still unresponsive. When the dispatcher asked how far along the mother was in her pregnancy, the nurse repeated that it was a shock to everyone.

"This is a complete surprise. We were not expecting this," she said.

Within a few minutes, the nurse expressed relief, saying "thank God" the baby was now breathing and crying.

911 audio shows shock, panic after comatose woman gave birth

Since that day, the woman and the baby boy have been recovering at a hospital. Their conditions have not been released.

The 29-year-old woman, who has been incapacitated since age 3, was sexually assaulted, police say, and they are trying to track down the assailant. Investigators are collected DNA from the facility's male employees and anyone else who may have had contact with her.

The revelation that an incapacitated woman was raped inside a care facility has horrified advocates for people with disabilities and the community at large. The CEO of Hacienda HealthCare resigned this week as the provider announced new safety measures, including more than one staff member being present during patient interactions and more scrutiny of visitors.

The facility specializes in providing around-the-clock care for infants, children and young adults with developmental disabilities or who are "medically fragile."

The notion that none of the woman's caregivers knew she was pregnant has drawn skepticism. But medical experts say it's possible she displayed no outward signs that workers would have noticed, especially by staffers who don't work with pregnant patients.

While factors remain unknown, such as how far along she was, someone who is fed the same amount from a tube every day might not show any dramatic changes, like a swollen belly, said Dr. C. Kevin Huls, a clinical assistant professor and maternal-fetal medicine fellowship director at the University of Arizona College of Medicine-Phoenix.

The mother could actually lose weight in other places like her face or arms if a fetus is consuming nutrients, Huls added.

"A good way to understand it is that really, the baby's going to continue to grow even at the expense of the mom's nutrition," Huls said. "So, her weight may not change because she's not taking in additional calories. There may be changes to her body that are going to go undetected in a chronic care condition or at a facility like this."

The woman's mother, who is her legal guardian, is required under state law to submit an annual report that includes results of a physical, according to Maricopa County Superior Court documents. She was examined by a doctor on April 16 who found "no change" in her health during an external exam.

Her family, who are members of the San Carlos Apache tribe in southeastern Arizona, said in a statement through their attorney that they will care for the infant boy and have asked for privacy.

Bufs beat Ozona to open district with big second half push

FORSAN – The Bufs hosted the Ozona Lions Friday night to open district play with a key matchup at home. Forsan got a slow start to the game really struggling to shoot the ball from deep but were able to keep a narrow lead thanks to their great team defense and dominance on the boards. In the second half the Bufs finally found their range and built a double digit lead that they were able to maintain throughout to get the big 61-42 district win.

In the first quarter both teams were playing high energy defense that really limited both teams offensively and had both teams shooting a low field goal percentage. Forsan and Ozona both relied on their visits to the charity stripe to stay in the game early. The opening period ended in with both teams all square at 13-13.

In the second quarter, Bufs' guard Kobe Richardson and forward Zane Riffe came to life. With Richardson driving and putting pressure on the Ozona defense while Riffe controlled the paint and the glass grabbing 5 rebounds in the quarter. With Forsan gaining some footing offensively in the defensive battle they were able to take a 26-23 lead into the half. Coming out of the half, the Bufs looked like a completely different team offensively and came out firing. Richardson hit 3 clutch threes early in the 3rd quarter all of which came off of steals Richardson made on the defensive side of the court. Richardson's dominance on both ends of the court to start the second half gave the Bufs and early 12 point advantage that they would never relinquish.

In the fourth quarter, Forsan continued to play outstanding team defense and out rebounded the Lions. With their defense firing on all cylinders the Bufs' offense put the game away and extended their lead with great decision making and aggressive penetration which got them to the line to close out Ozona with the decisive 61-42 win to open district play and send their district record to 1-0.

Richardson led all scorers with 24 points while also getting 8 steals, grabbing 4 rebounds and rising high for 4 impressive blocks. Riffe led the Bufs in rebounding with 10 boards and also chipped in 5 points and 2 blocks. Caden Williams played great off the bench with 7 rebounds and solid defense. Paul Evans was also a major contributor with 8 points and 5 rebounds in the game.

The Bufs will host Christoval next Tuesday with the chance to improve their district record to 2-0.

Lady Bufs declaw the Lady Lions in lopsided 64-20 district win

By JORDAN PARR

Sports Editor

FORSAN – The Lady Bufs hosted the Ozona Lady Lions Friday night in an important district contest. Forsan jumped out to an early double digit lead and never looked back and they imposed their will on Ozona the entire game.

In the first quarter, the Lady Bufs defense completely suffocated the Lady Lions offense giving up just 7 points in the quarter. Emily Garcia was all over the court in the first period, scoring 9 points and grabbing 4 rebounds in the opening quarter to help her team take a decisive 16-7 lead heading into the second quarter.

In the second quarter, Forsan completely took over the game and showed that they are a force to be reckoned with in all phases of the game. The Lady Bufs' great ball movement and good shot selection in tandem with their outstanding team defense and rebounding dominance pushed their lead to an amazing 41-12 heading into the half.

Coming out of the break, the Lady Bufs really locked down on defense and didn't allow a single point in the third quarter. That type of defensive dominance is rare and was really fun to watch. With Ozona on the ropes the Lady Bufs kept their substitutions rotating in and the Lady Bufs took a 51-12 lead into the final quarter.

In the fourth quarter, Forsan continued to play great team ball on both sides of the court and the Lady Bufs controlled the ball as they continued to increase their lead. With a huge lead, Forsan got every player in the game, and the substitutions, to their credit, not only held on to the lead but continued to build on it as the game came to a close. The great team effort and performance gave the Lady Bufs an impressive 64-20 district win to take their district record to 2-1 despite shooting an abysmal 3-24 from behind the arc.

Emily Garcia led all scorers with 17 points and led the Lady Bufs in rebounds with 13 boards as well as 3 big blocks. Rylee and Macey Evans dominated the back court with a combined 29 points, 15 steals and 12 rebounds. Rylee had 14 points, 8 steals and 5 rebounds in the game while big sister Macey had 15 points, 7 steals and 7 rebounds. Ella Hoff also had a good game with 9 points and 5 rebounds.

The Lady Bufs will host Christoval next Tuesday with the chance to get their third district win of the season.

Harden has triple-double to lead Rockets over Cavs 141-113

By KRISTIE RIEKEN

AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets still have a way to go to reach their goal of earning the top seed in the Western Conference.

But it seems far more attainable than it was just a month ago.

James Harden had 43 points, 10 rebounds and 12 assists in 29 minutes — the first player in NBA history to have a 40-point triple-double in less than 30 minutes played — to lead the Houston Rockets to a 141-113 rout of the Cleveland Cavaliers on Friday night for their eighth win in 11 games.

"I think we've all had that in the back of our mind. It was just a far reach earlier in the season," Harden said. "Now it's pretty close. We've just got to continue to do what we've been doing. Playing well, taking care of opportunities like this tonight. Just continue to get better, strive to get better."

The Rockets, who were in 14th place in the West in early December, are 4 ½ games out of first place and tied with the Clippers for fifth.

After the Cavaliers got a 117-108 win in the first meeting with Houston this season, the Rockets were determined to take care of business this time around. They did that, racing out to a 28-point lead after scoring a season-high 77 points in the first half behind 24 points from Harden.

It's Harden's 15th straight game with at least 30 points, his franchise-record 13th game with 40 points this season and the seventh in the last nine games as he has carried the team with Chris Paul and Eric Gordon out with injuries.

Ante Zizic came off the bench to score 18 for the Cavaliers, whose season-long skid extended to 12 games.

"We just couldn't stop them," Cavaliers coach Larry Drew said. "They were raining 3s all over the place. They broke us down off the dribble. They are in a rhythm now and playing very good basketball."

Harden needed less than 2 1/2 quarters to reach 30 points on Friday night, hitting a 3 with 7:41 left in the third to give him 32 points and push Houston's lead 91-58. He joins Kobe Bryant (16 games in 2003) as the only players to score 30 points in at least 15 games in a row since the 1972-73 season.

Houston Rockets guard James Harden (13) drives to the basket past Cleveland Cavaliers guard Collin Sexton, right, during the first half of an NBA basketball game Friday, Jan. 11, 2019, in Houston.

About three minutes later, he pushed his total to 40 after he was left wide open to drive into the lane for an easy layup to make it 99-68. Harden grabbed his 10th rebound with about 90 seconds left in the third quarter to give him his sixth triple-double this season and the 41st of his career.

Harden played just 29 minutes and 34 seconds, and made eight 3-pointers to extend his NBA record to 12 games in a row with at least five.

"The step-back 3s, he's perfected that," coach Mike D'Antoni said. "He's got 16 3s and they're all step-backs. I don't know how he does it ... everybody knows what he's doing and he still gets them off, and they're kind of open. They're not forced, so he's just an incredible player."

Clint Capela added 19 points on 7-of-8 shooting after making just four of 16 field goals in a loss to Milwaukee on Wednesday night.

Harden and fellow starters Capela and Tucker also sat out the fourth quarter with Houston up 113-81 entering the fourth. Even with the trio watching the final quarter from the bench, the Rockets maintained a huge lead and their 141 points were a season high and the most Cleveland has allowed this season.

TIP-INS

Cavaliers: Rodney Hood returned after missing the last three games with a sore left Achilles tendon. He had six points, two assists and two rebounds in 18 minutes. ... Cedi Osman had 15 points and Collin Sexton added 14. ... Jordan Clarkson and Jalen Jones added 12 points each.

Rockets: Paul missed his 10th game in a row with a strained left hamstring. ... Gordon missed his sixth straight game with a bruised right knee. ... It's the sixth time this season Houston has scored 70 points or more in the first half.

DATE NIGHT?

Tucker boxed out a couple of Cavaliers and avoided grabbing the ball to help Harden collect his 10th rebound on Friday night. Tucker joked that Harden might owe him for the move.

"Dinner, movies. I need a date," Tucker joked.

Later, Harden was asked if Tucker deserves dinner for helping him get his triple-double.

"I took P.J. to dinner, movies, Europe," Harden said laughing. "I take P.J. everywhere with me. He gets enough already."

Doncic leads Mavs past Timberwolves in Saunders' home debut

By JOE ZIEMER

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Luka Doncic nearly recorded a triple-double, falling just two rebounds short. The final score was the only set of numbers he was focused on.

Doncic scored 29 points and hit the go-ahead 3-pointer to lead the Dallas Mavericks over the Minnesota Timberwolves 119-115 on Friday night, spoiling rookie coach Ryan Saunders' home debut.

Doncic, who helped secure the win by scoring seven of Dallas' final nine points, also finished with 12 assists and eight rebounds.

"I don't care about that," Doncic said of nearly getting the triple-double. "We've just got to win. That's all that matters."

Harrison Barnes scored 23 points, while JJ Barea and Dwight Powell came off the bench to score 16 and 15 points, respectively, for the Mavericks. Dallas (20-22) had entered the game 4-11 in its previous 15 games and was 3-18 on the road.

"We showed a lot of resilience," Dallas coach Rick Carlisle said. "Tough game, tough crowd. The road's been a challenge for us all year. I loved the way we hung in. I really did."

Karl-Anthony Towns had 30 points and 11 rebounds for the Timberwolves (20-22), who were playing their first home game since Saunders was named interim coach.

Taj Gibson gave Minnesota the lead at 115-114 with a tip-in of Jeff Teague's miss with 35.7 seconds left. But with 22.9 to play, Doncic hit a pull-up 3 to put the Mavericks ahead for good.

"That's what he does so far for us," Dallas' Dirk Nowitzki said. "He's been a great closer for us."

Derrick Rose scored 21 points for Minnesota, while Andrew Wiggins added 17 and Josh Okogie hit a season-high four 3s, finishing with 15 points.

The Timberwolves trailed most of the game after shooting only 36.4 percent from the floor in the first half. But a 12-2 run in the fourth quarter tied the game. And with 1:41, left Towns gave Minnesota its first lead since the first quarter with a jump hook.

"We played the tempo we wanted in the second half, got ourselves back in the game, played well," Towns said. "Just some things didn't go our way throughout the night and it led to our demise. We also hurt ourselves, too."

Doncic took over down the stretch. Before the winning 3, he hit a tough runner and put down a dunk in traffic. All three gave the Mavericks the lead and all three came in the final 1:28.

"He's a talent," Saunders said. "Big-time players make big-time plays. He made one tonight and we're feeling it."

Saunders, who received a loud ovation from the Target Center crowd before the game, took over as coach after Tom Thibodeau was relieved of his duties Sunday. He won his first game in charge Tuesday at Oklahoma City. Saunders is the son of the late Flip Saunders, the winningest coach in Timberwolves history. A banner hangs in the Target Center rafters in honor of Flip Saunders, who died in 2015.

"Obviously, disappointing, especially in front of the home crowd," Ryan Saunders said. "We had a lot of easy looks, I thought. They just didn't fall for us early. The second half, we didn't do a great job in terms of communicating as a team. So, that's something we've got to get better with moving forward."

Derrick Rose scored 21 points, Andrew Wiggins scored 17 points and Josh Okogie scored 15 and hit a season-high four 3s for Minnesota.

FOLLOWING IN DAD'S FOOTSTEPS

Carlisle called it emotional to see Saunders coaching the Timberwolves. Before Friday's game, Carlisle recalled borrowing Mavericks owner Mark Cuban's plane to attend Flip Saunders' funeral along with fellow NBA coaches including Doc Rivers and Scott Brooks.

Carlisle and Ryan Saunders have talked often since Flip Saunders' death.

"You never know what's going to happen," Carlisle said. "But this opportunity is something that is great for him. He's built so similarly to his dad in terms of his character, in terms of his amazing way with people and his positive view on everything."

TIP INS

Mavericks: Barea left with what Carlisle called a lower-leg injury. Carlisle said Barea would undergo an MRI on Saturday. ... The Mavericks' seven turnovers were their fewest of the season. ... Had Doncic gotten his triple-double, he would have tied Philadelphia's Markelle Fultz as the youngest player to record one at 19 years, 317 days. ... G Dennis Smith Jr. did not play because of mid back tightness. It was the 14th game he's missed this season.

Timberwolves: Towns briefly went to the locker room in the first half with an ankle injury. ... Rose had missed the previous six games with a sprained right ankle. ... F Robert Covington missed his fifth consecutive game with a bruised right knee. ... The Timberwolves' 11 offensive rebounds in the first quarter were tied for the most by a team in one quarter since 1996-97.

LOS ANGELES — As if the pressure of playing for the Los Angeles Rams' first playoff victory in 14 years wasn't enough, Todd Gurley carries an extra imperative into the Coliseum on Saturday night.

"Basically, everybody I know hates the Cowboys," the Rams' All-Pro running back said. "They've been hitting me up all week, so I've got to try to take care of business for those guys." And then there's Wade Phillips, the 71-year-old Los Angeles defensive coordinator who was fired as Dallas head coach in 2010 and replaced by his assistant, Jason Garrett. With a straight face, Phillips calls the divisional playoff showdown "a revenge game for me."

The Cowboys (11-6) inspire strong feelings across the football world, but these Rams (13-3) are just joking around. Their ability to do so indicates they're not feeling crushed by the extraordinary weight on both teams in this matchup under the Hollywood spotlight.

A trip to the NFC championship game is more than enough motivation for two franchises that haven't been that close to a Super Bowl in many years.

"It's a prime-time game in the playoffs," Gurley said. "What better game would you want? Playoff game in LA versus America's Team. It's going to be a great matchup."

Dallas has won three playoff games in 22 years, and it hasn't won a road playoff game since January 1993. The Cowboys haven't reached the NFC title game since the 1995 season, losing five straight times in the divisional round.

"Yeah, it would mean a lot," Dallas quarterback Dak Prescott said. "And more than what it means for the past, but because of this group of guys that I'm going to do it with. Just simply how we've been able to persevere (through) all the adversity and everything that we've been through together, off the field, on the field. I just know we've got the right guys to do it."

The Rams haven't been in a conference championship game since the 2001-02 season, and they only ended a 12-year playoff drought last January with a home loss to Atlanta in the wild-card round. Coach Sean McVay's incredible turnaround of his franchise has inspired a wave of copycat coaching hires across the NFL this month, but McVay knows it doesn't mean much without his first playoff victory.

The matchup also showcases two of the best young quarterback-running back combinations in the league. Prescott and Ezekiel Elliott are the heart of a team that has won eight of its last nine games since trading for receiver Amari Cooper, capped by Dallas' gritty victory over Seattle last week in the wild-card round.

Jared Goff and Gurley make it happen for the Rams, who rolled to an 11-1 record with a nearly unstoppable offense. Losses to the Bears and Eagles in December raised questions about their run defense and offensive line, but McVay's team is rested and determined to make a Super Bowl run.

"I think there's a confidence that's been earned," McVay said. "We have a lot of respect for the Dallas Cowboys, but we expect to win this game. We know it's going to take a great effort, but we're going in with the mindset and mentality that we expect to win. I think that confidence is something that's been earned every day by our players, and then we've got to go out and prove it."

Here are more things to watch in these NFC mainstays' ninth playoff meeting — the most in NFL history — but their first since January 1986 in Anaheim:

GURLEY GOES

The matchup will be a showcase for arguably the NFL's top two running backs — as long as Gurley's balky knee is good. Gurley hasn't played since Dec. 16, but McVay has seemed certain he'll have his offensive centerpiece at full strength. Gurley finished third in the NFL rushing race behind Elliott, who won his second title in three years. Gurley hesitated to say whether he'll be limited, but backup C.J. Anderson had two huge games in his absence.

ANKLE ISSUES

Dallas receiver Cole Beasley and tight end Blake Jarwin didn't practice all week because of ankle injuries. Beasley was limping badly at times against Seattle. Jarwin, who had three touchdown catches in the regular-season finale against the New York Giants, was getting more playing time because of a season-ending injury to Geoff Swaim. Guard Xavier Su'a-Filo returned to practice after sitting against the Seahawks with an ankle injury. If the UCLA product is able to play, Dallas will have to decide between him and rookie Connor Williams at left guard.

GOFF'S SHOULDERS

Goff will be tested by Dallas' defense, which has one of the NFL's best collections of linebackers and backs. The Pro Bowl quarterback's production and effectiveness slipped in December when opponents increasingly refused to bite on McVay's play-action schemes, and Dallas' defense also has enough talented pass rushers to apply pressure. Goff realizes he'll be judged on his ability to answer the challenge. "Winning is the most important stat, and that's no different in the playoffs," he said.

SOME QB HATE

Speaking of Goff, Cowboys defensive end DeMarcus Lawrence had a little fun when asked his impressions of his fellow Pro Bowler: "He's a quarterback. I don't like quarterbacks." Lawrence had his second straight double-digit season in sacks with 10

½, but he finished well behind the NFL leader, Los Angeles All-Pro Aaron Donald (20 ½).

RAMS REINFORCEMENTS

After last January's loss to the Falcons, the Rams bolstered their defense with three prominent veterans eager for postseason success. Defensive tackle Ndamukong Suh is hoping for his first playoff victory after going 0-3 with Detroit and Miami, while cornerback Marcus Peters will attempt to reach his first conference title game after losing his last three playoff games with Kansas City. Cornerback Aqib Talib won a Super Bowl ring with Denver, and he feels a similar vibe in the Rams' locker room. "Everybody knows it, so I don't have to tell them," Talib said. "If you want (your team) to be popular and get your name out there, make a couple of plays in the playoffs."

Lubbock Lights- UFO Unsolved Mystery

By AMBER MANSEFIELD
Staff Writer

On Aug. 25, 1951 it was a quiet summer night not too far from Big Spring in Lubbock, Texas. On that particular evening, a handful of scientists from Texas Technical College were hanging out in the backyard of geology professor Dr. W.I. Robinson, like, chemical engineering professor Dr. A. G. Oberg, physics professor Dr. George and Dr. W. L. Ducker, head of the petroleum-engineering department.

This made what happened that night and the story of what they witnessed that night all the more curious.

"If a group had been hand-picked to observe a UFO, we couldn't have been picked a more technically qualified group of people," wrote U.S. Air Force Captain Edward J. Ruppelt later in his definitive 1956 casebook, The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects. In the early 1950s Ruppelt served as lead investigator for Project Blue Book, the official Air Force investigations into UFO sightings, after working on its precursor effort, Project Grudge.

Sightings of the blue-green lights kept growing

Around 9:20 p.m. that August night, the university colleagues saw something otherworldly in the expansive Texas sky: a V-shaped formation of 15 to 30 blueish-green lights passing overhead. Stunned, but being men of science they still tried using their trained scientific reasoning, they figured the lights would reappear. And they did, about an hour later, in a more haphazard formation. The scientists were all in agreement: They had witnessed something fantastic—but what was it?

The professors weren't the only ones witnesses to the mysterious blue-green lights that night. At dusk, in Albuquerque, New Mexico (about 350 miles away from Lubbock), an employee of the Atomic Energy Commission's top-secret Sandia Corporation—a man with a high-level "Q" security clearance—had been sitting outside with his wife. According to Ruppelt:

"They were gazing at the night sky, commenting on how beautiful it was when both of them were startled at the sight of a huge airplane flying swiftly and silently over their home... On the aft edge of the wings, there were six to eight pairs of soft, glowing, bluish lights."

By the time Ruppelt flew into Lubbock to investigate the sightings in late September, hundreds of residents had seen the lights over a period of two weeks.

Locals investigate, and even snap some photos

But not everyone had waited for the government to start looking into what happened. After alerting local papers like the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, the Texas Tech professors started their own informal investigation. In the weeks after their initial August 25 sighting, they and their friends observed the lights 12 more times. They measured the lights' angles, roughly calculated their speed and noted that they always traveled from north to south. Armed with walkie-talkies, the scientist-sleuths and their friends formed two teams and attempted to measure the UFO's altitude, with little success.

As the days went on, more and more Lubbock residents claimed to have seen the lights. And when the professors cross-checked these reports against what they themselves had seen and recorded, many of the facts lined up, Ruppelt wrote. Of course, few if any had recorded the phenomena with the same level of detail as the professors.

But while many observers offered incomplete or poorly expressed recollections, there's little doubt that whatever people were seeing was something real. UFO sightings are usually one-off events, but these blue-green lights were observed multiple times, by hundreds of people.

Plus, for many, there was physical proof: black-and-white photos taken by a Texas freshman named Carl Hart, Jr. on August 31—the same night an Air Force wife and her daughter claimed to have seen a UFO while driving northwest from Matador, Texas, to Lubbock—Hart was keeping vigil in his bedroom, looking out for the infamous lights. According to Ruppelt:

"It was a warm night and his bed was pushed over next to an open window. He was looking out at the clear night sky, and had been in bed about a half hour, when he saw a formation of the lights appear in the north... cross an open patch of sky, and disappear over his house. Knowing that the lights might reappear as they had done in the past, he grabbed his loaded Kodak 35, set the lens and shutter at f 3.5 and one-tenth of a second, and went out into the middle of the backyard. Before long, his vigil was rewarded when the lights made a second pass. He got two pictures. A third formation went over a few minutes later, and he got three more pictures."

These hotly debated images, which show a cluster of dim lights in a V-formation moving through the night sky, are the only visual representation of what hundreds were now claiming they saw.

So, what exactly did all these people witness?

In The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects, Ruppelt—by all accounts an honorable and fair man who oversaw what many describe as the "golden age" of the government's official UFO investigations—offers a strangely evasive explanation:

I thought that the professors' lights might have been some kind of birds reflecting the light from mercury-vapor street lights, but I was wrong. They weren't birds, they weren't refracted light, but they weren't spaceships. The lights that the professors saw...have been positively identified as a very common and easily explainable natural phenomenon...I can't divulge exactly the way the answer was found because it is an interesting story of how a scientist set up complete instrumentation to track down the lights. Telling the story would lead to his identity and, in exchange for his story, I promised the man complete anonymity... With the most important phase of the Lubbock Lights "solved"—the sightings by the professors—the other phases become only good UFO reports.

And so, the mystery of the Lubbock Lights remains unsolved.

"The Lubbock Lights incident persists in the memory of many older citizens, and to this day captivates researchers from across the country," Dr. Monte L. Monroe, Southwest collection archivist at Texas Tech University told Texas Highways Magazine. "Mention the event, and everyone has an opinion. Some believe the bright, semicircular, so-called 'string of beads' crossed the sky at great speed, high in the stratosphere. Few agree with the streetlight-illuminated, migratory duck-bellies theory ventured at the time by skeptics or in the Air Force report."

Amber's Appetite

Most towns that have a restaurant have at least one, but usually two Chinese buffets. For some, these restaurants are a quick, cheap way to consume a lot of food. However, there are some whose love for the Chinese buffet grows into a passion or a way of life. These individuals will affirm there are some things about the buffet everyone else just doesn't understand.

There are two types of people in this world: those who dump their Chinese buffet bounty into one pile and happily munch away (mixers), and those who feel that somehow physics will abandon its rules and the buffet takings won't mix together (wallers). There's no wrong way to do your buffet. This plate can be found at Hunan.

Texas TV meteorologist describes 2008 near-death incident

By LAURA GARCIA

Victoria Advocate
VICTORIA, Texas (AP) — Bill Alexander opened his eyes Nov. 23, 2008, and saw a young man standing over him.

"Mr. Alexander ... you have been in a coma since Nov. 17, when you were brought into this hospital."

The Victoria Advocate reports Alexander remembers hearing that and realizing he was connected to a respirator, tubes and IV connections. He was placed on a bed that rotated every so often.

The now-TV weatherman learned on that day, just over 10 years ago, that he had survived an ordeal that should have killed him.

For the better part of a decade, Alexander has been a household name in the Crossroads, and area residents make plans based on what he says.

He smiles in a suit and tie as he explains weather patterns. His voice often plays in the background as residents prepare for their day, when they return home from work and again in the evening before bedtime.

But the chief meteorologist for Newscenter25 didn't always work in broadcast journalism. He recently shared how the difficult experience led him to work in Victoria.

It's a rainy day. An active weather day.

Alexander, 66, sits at the weather forecasting system inside the KAVU-TV station's studio. His equipment is set up just outside the "weather cave" he shares with meteorologist Trey Meynig.

Meynig walks out of his office and they plan coverage for the day. Alexander says his co-worker has tolerated him for the past eight years.

Earlier that morning, Alexander was sworn in as a volunteer Court Appointed Special Advocate for abused and neglected children.

His wife, Adalia "Dolly" Alexander, is a dedicated CASA volunteer and clinical mental health counselor.

Her vision has deteriorated because of diabetes, and Alexander wants to be able to drive her to work. Mostly, though, he jokes, he just tries to stay out of her way.

Alexander helped his wife get through graduate school by reading documents to her because at that time, much of the material was not available in large print or in closed-captioned format.

"That's the kind of thing that you do," he said.

Alexander said thankfully, he has no recollection about the

ROGER'S REVIEWS:

A DOG'S WAY HOME

Oh, joy. Another dog movie.

Faithful readers may know my most recent foray into the warped dimension of canine cinema: the Will Arnett/Ludicris/Stanley Tucci/Jordin Sparks/Shaquille O'Neal/Alan Cumming epic "Dog Show." The fact that "Dog Show" received my lowest rating of 2018 – two stars out of 10 – didn't fill me with much hope for "A Dog's Way Home." But I enjoyed its predecessor – 2017's "A Dog's Purpose."

"Way Home" focuses on the female mixed-breed dog Bella (voiced by Bryce Dallas Howard) – the narration is in her mental voice. No other animals speak English, but Bella is an engaging narrator.

Bella is born a stray, and lives under a demolished house with her brothers and sisters, and mother; as well as "Mama Cat" and her kittens. One day, some men come and capture a bunch of puppies and cats, and Bella's mother. Bella, Mama Cat and most of the kittens manage to evade the men, and continue living under the house. Mama Cat adopts Bella, and becomes part of the cat family.

A young man and woman begin sneaking onto the land, leaving food for the animals. We'll learn later that they're Lucas (Jonah Hauer-King) and Olivia (Alexandra Shipp), and they're self-appointed animal rescuers trying to save the cats (they don't know about Bella yet) from developers who want to remove the demolished house so they can build something on the land.

One day, Bella, who has learned to trust Lucas, emerges from her hiding place and jumps into his arms, and he adopts her. We learn that Lucas lives with his veteran mother Terri (Ashley Judd), who is battling depression related to her service. Initially doubtful about the dog – there's a "no pets" provision in their rental agreement – Terri comes to love the irrepressible Bella.

We get to see a lot of Bella and Lucas' play together, the different (as Bella sees them) games – such as "Don't Chew Shoes" and "Tiiiiiiiny Piece of Cheese"; and, ultimately the most important: "Go Home."

One day the landlord announces that he's coming over to perform a maintenance task, and Lucas is forced to take Bella to work with him...he's a doctor at a VA hospital. Bella bonds with disabled veterans at the facility, and manages to hide from the "by the book" authorities who would ban her from the hospital, but Lucas engages in an argument with Gunter, the guy charged with demolishing the old house, over Mama Cat and her kittens, who are still living there.

Later, Lucas receives a visit from Animal Control Officer Chuck (John Cassini), who warns him that Bella has been designated a pit bull – a dangerous animal – and is not allowed on city streets. If Bella leaves the house, she can be impounded by Animal Control and euthanized. That's when she learns the "Go Home" game – Lucas thinks that, if they're stopped, she can elude the dogcatchers and make it home to safety.

Lucas and Olivia (who are now romantically involved) begin looking for a new home in a city with less-restrictive laws, and ship Bella off to a friend's (Darcy Laurie) home to wait out the move.

Unfortunately, Bella keeps hearing the words, "go home," ("It'll only be a little while, then you can go home," "Lucas is coming to get you and you can go home," so she thinks she's supposed to play the Go Home game. She escapes and makes her way toward home...a 400 mile journey.

I'll stop the narration there. "A Dog's Way Home" is not a sparkling exemplar of cinematic brilliance. It's a simple, fairly uninspired, emotionally manipulative movie. It's been done before and better – at least twice – by 1963's "The Incredible Journey" and its remake, 1993's

"Homeward Bound: The Incredible Journey."

But for all that, it's not a bad way to spend an hour and a half. A couple of quick words of warning – there are some themes in this movie that might be a bit scary for very young viewers. A homeless man dies, and there's an avalanche in which a man is trapped and injured at one point. There are fights with mean coyotes. Just use your judgement about your kids to decide whether that type of stuff is acceptable.

Like I said, this wasn't a great movie, but it was no "Show Dogs" either. Five and a half stars out of 10.

health scare that occurred in 2008 or the days immediately afterward.

"I was circling the drain," he said, but his wife refused to give up on him: "She fought for my very existence."

He remembers that night he went to bed late after eating a bowl of very hot chili that he made. He developed indigestion and had taken a couple of sleeping pills to get to sleep because he had planned to work the next day.

"In my sleep, I had an acid reflux attack and aspirated the chili into my lungs," he said. Because of the sleeping pills, he did not wake up and went into cardiopulmonary arrest.

"My wife noted me not moving and not breathing and called 911," he said. "The long story short, I went 20 minutes without oxygen to my brain. But I survived."

Alexander had permanent brain and lung damage. Doctors didn't expect that he would ever fully regain his independence and would live out the rest of his life in a nursing facility.

Incredibly, in the months after he woke up from the coma, he learned how to use his arms and legs again and how to write and interact with others.

He credits his unlikely recovery to his wife, whom he met at college in Corpus Christi. "She hated me," he chuckled. They now have a grown son and two grandchildren.

At the time of the incident, they were living in El Paso, where he was a senior manager at the National Weather Service.

During his 35 years with the government weather agency, he earned two Department of Commerce Bronze medals – one for redesigned severe weather warnings and the other for exceptional work during the disastrous El Paso flash floods of 2006.

He returned to work in March 2009, but excruciating headaches and stiffness in his neck and shoulders led him to retire the next month.

His brain eventually remapped around the damaged areas, but those headaches have never gone away. "I allow it to remind me that I am still alive," he said.

Meteorology was all he knew, and he wondered what he would do with the rest of his life. He saw a vacancy for a television weather person in Victoria.

An extreme introvert, he auditioned anyway. General Manager Jeff Pryor and the late Don Bradley, who was the news director at the time, gave him a chance.

"I did not know if I could ever be useful again, but I am forever thankful for the patience of my supervisors and peers at KAVU," he said. "I was pretty bad for a few months but, by God's grace, was able to reinvent myself."

When asked about his status as a small-town celebrity, he said it gets tiring at times. He describes running to H-E-B for a sack of potatoes: By the time he checks out, he's given three or four weather forecasts and taken a few selfies.

Still, Alexander loves his job. He produces several live and recorded weather forecasts on six networks throughout the day and serves as a mentor to up-and-coming broadcasters at the station, which is ranked 203 of 210 media markets in the United States.

Crossroads residents, he says, have a vested interest in the weather. This region is home to farmers, ranchers, fishermen, aviators and workers in the oil and gas business: "We need to be more technical here."

He said covering Hurricane Harvey, which struck in August 2017, was exhausting but vitally important to the community. The news crew was continuously on air for 48 hours, livestreaming on-line and powered by a generator.

And when all of the big networks left, he said, the local TV and newspaper staff continued reporting on the community.

"That was a situation when people were in danger and their lives depended on how well we performed," Alexander said.

US stocks drift in a quiet close to another winning week

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. stock indexes nestled a hair lower on Friday after the falling price of oil weighed on energy companies, but the S&P 500 nevertheless closed out its third straight winning week following a brutal stretch in December.

It was a day full of broken streaks — oil fell for the first time in two weeks, and the yield on the 10-year Treasury note sank to its first loss in more than a week — but the market remained calm through it. Gradual moves for markets in recent days have offered a respite following the tumultuous trading that rocked investors in late 2018.

"After some of the initial gains we saw earlier in the week I think it's just a rally looking tired," said Willie Delwiche, investment strategist at Baird. "I think it's probably not much more than a chance for people to digest the move and try to get a sense of whether we've had a bounce — and this is it — or maybe a pause as we continue to move higher."

The S&P 500 edged down by 0.38 points, or less than 0.1 percent, to 2,596.26. Last month, a typical day for the index was a swing 10 times that.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average dipped 5.97 points, or less than 0.1 percent, to 23,995.95. The Nasdaq composite lost 14.59, or 0.2 percent, to 6,971.48, and the Russell 2000 index of smaller stocks ticked up by 1.95, or 0.1 percent, to 1,447.38.

It was the first loss for the S&P 500 in six days, and much of the reason for it was the falling price of oil. Benchmark U.S. crude lost 1.9 percent to settle at $51.59 per barrel, and Brent crude, the international standard, sank 1.9 percent to $60.48 a barrel.

That helped pull energy stock in the S&P 500 down 0.6 percent, the largest loss among the 11 sectors that make up the index. ConocoPhillips, Marathon Oil and Hess all fell more than 1 percent.

Big gains earlier in the week meant the S&P 500 was still hanging onto a 2.5 percent rise for the last five days. The three-week winning streak for the S&P 500 is its longest since August. Not only that, the last three weeks of gains have all been of more than 1.8 percent. The last time that happened was in 2001.

The S&P 500 has been clawing back gains since running to the edge of what traders call a "bear market," when it dropped 19.8 percent between setting a record in September and a low on Christmas Eve. Stocks have climbed on soothing words from the Federal Reserve about the future path of interest rates, plus hopes that the U.S.-China trade dispute may ease. That's helped to at least paper over worries about slowing growth for corporate earnings and the possibility of a looming recession.

Companies across the country are gearing up to report how much profit they made in the last three months of 2018, and expectations are for a fifth straight quarter of growth topping 10 percent.

General Motors gave an encouraging sign Friday when it gave better-than-expected profit forecasts for both 2018 and 2019. That helped the automaker surge to the biggest gain in the S&P 500, and it jumped $2.45, or 7.1 percent, to $37.18.

Other big-name companies have recently offered a more discouraging picture of revenue trends due to slowing growth in China and elsewhere.

That's why analysts say this upcoming earnings reporting season, which kicks off in earnest next week, could be the next trigger for volatility in the market. Delwiche said he wants to hear how optimistic CEOs are given all the uncertainties about the economy.

"We've seen some retrenchment in business confidence," Delwiche said. "Is it a blip or evidence that those animal spirits that we saw are starting to dissipate?"

In overseas markets, Japan's Nikkei 225 index jumped 1 percent, the Kospi in South Korea rose 0.6 percent and the Hang Seng in Hong Kong gained 0.5 percent. In Europe, France's CAC 40 dropped 0.5 percent, and Germany's DAX lost 0.3 percent. The FTSE 100 in London fell 0.4 percent.

The yield on the 10-year Treasury note fell to 2.69 percent from 2.73 percent late Thursday.

In the commodities markets, gold rose 0.2 percent to $1,289.50

How's the US economy doing? Shutdown makes it harder to say

By CHRISTOPHER RUGABER
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The partial shutdown of the U.S. government has begun to make it harder to assess the health of the economy by delaying or distorting key reports on growth, spending and hiring.

Government data on home construction and retail sales, for example, won't be released next week because staffers who compile those reports have been furloughed. The retail sales report provides a snapshot of consumer spending, which fuels more than two-thirds of the economy. With Macy's and Kohl's having said Thursday that their holiday sales were weaker than expected, a broader gauge of retail spending would have provided important clarity.

In addition, the next report on the economy's overall growth, set for Jan. 30, won't be released if the shutdown remains in effect. Even if the government has fully reopened by then, federal workers won't likely have had enough time to produce the scheduled report on the nation's gross domestic product.

Not all agencies are closed. Congress approved funding last year for the Labor Department, so the government's next monthly jobs report will be released as scheduled on Feb. 1. But it's unclear how long the department will be able to issue jobs reports — the most closely watched barometer of the economy — after that.

Though the economy remains healthy in most respects, there are rising concerns that growth could slow or even stall in coming months. The trade war between the United States and China, which has helped depress global growth, is likely slowing business investment. The stimulus from the Trump administration's tax cuts is expected to fade.

And borrowing costs have risen since the Federal Reserve raised short-term interest rates four times last year. Before rebounding this week, stock markets had plummeted roughly 16 percent from their peak Oct. 2.

Many economists increasingly see the shutdown, should it persist, as a drag on the economy. Michael Feroli of J.P. Morgan has downgraded his forecast for growth in the first three months of 2019 because of the shutdown. He now expects the economy to grow at a 2 percent annual rate, down from his previous estimate of 2.25 percent.

The shutdown is costing the economy about $1.2 billion a week, according to Standard & Poor's. Some of that loss will be regained after federal workers eventually receive back pay for the time they missed. But many government contractors won't be made whole. And lost business — such as scheduled hotel stays from trips to national parks that won't be taken — may not be made up.

Government workers, American Federation of Government Employees union members and members of supporting local unions, pose for a group photo during the rally to highlight the effect the federal shutdown, Thursday, Jan. 10, 2019, in Minneapolis.

Fed officials are now stressing their flexibility on rate hikes, emphasizing that they will be patient and their policy "data dependent." By this, the Fed means that the government's latest readings on hiring, inflation and growth will factor heavily in its rate decisions. Yet much of that data will now be unavailable — to the Fed or anyone else.

"For us, one of the biggest effects of the shutdown has been around data," Raphael Bostic, president of the Fed's Atlanta regional bank, said Wednesday. "We're worrying about that."

Even some reports that are released on schedule are likely to be distorted by the shutdown. For example, the January jobs report may show an artificially high unemployment rate and low employment figure. That's because up to 380,000 federal employees who aren't working or being paid during the shutdown — but who will return to work afterward — could be counted as unemployed for January.

If so, that would raise the unemployment rate by 0.2 percentage point, estimated Ben Herzon, an economist at Macroeconomic Advisers, a per ounce, silver edged up 0.1 percent to $15.66 per ounce and copper rose 0.9 percent to $2.66 per pound.

Natural gas gained 4.4 percent to $3.10 per 1,000 cubic feet. Heating oil lost 1.4 percent to $1.88 per gallon, and wholesale gasoline slipped 2.1 percent to $1.40 per gallon.

The dollar rose to 108.50 Japanese yen from 108.42 yen late Thursday. The euro slipped to $1.1465 from $1.1500, and the British pound rose to $1.2845 from $1.2746.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Impulsive Lunar Shift

Impulses, by nature, have short lives. If you don't follow an impulse within five seconds, you're unlikely to follow it at all, and it dies. Of course, another could take its place. Then you'd have another five-second window to act. Use the timing of impulses to your benefit as the moon shifts from active Aries to rooted Taurus.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). The old saying "a penny for your thoughts" wasn't accounting for inflation. Your thoughts are worth much more, and if you organize and present them, you'll be paid.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Whereas some attack projects, you approach, negotiate, arrange, organize, compartmentalize and dance with them. Your work today will be as graceful as art.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Can you provide people with a reason to feel delighted, uplifted and hopeful about what's to come? If so, you'll be one of the few today. But be warned: Though they are "few," they are disproportionately popular.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). You'll deflect praise back to the praiser, channel attention and resources to where they will do the most good, and direct negativity and criticism toward a constructive purpose -- all practices of a great leader.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). When hurt or offended, you rarely react in the moment. You need time to process your feelings and may, in the meantime, behave differently toward the source of your discomfort, which is only natural. Give yourself space.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You've been gentle with yourself and let yourself ease into the work, but now it's time to change tone, get serious, make demands and push, perhaps even force yourself to discover your grit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). It's not like you to pursue a thing halfheartedly. When it happens, you have to ask yourself, "Why am I holding back?" Do you sense something's off about the situation, or is this about your confidence? You'll get honest and solve it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Finally, some progress in affairs of the heart. And the best part is that you didn't have to ask annoying questions such as, "Can we talk?" Somehow, you just naturally got onto the same page.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Harmony isn't always reached through hard work and finagling. Today will prove the concept. Metaphorically, you just open your mouth and start singing. The tones match up. It's as natural as wolves howling in a pack.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The critical find it easy to criticize; the agreeable find it easy to agree. Both have advantages and follies. A learning exercise: Wherever you are on the spectrum, seek a tone on the other side and give it a whirl.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). For 90 percent of the day, what you say will not be so important as how you say it. But for the remaining 10 percent (and you'll sense it when you're there), do endeavor to get the message exactly right. It will save you from wasting time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Having someone to report to will make the difference when it comes to getting to the goal. If this sort of relationship doesn't exist naturally in your current life, set it up. It will quickly become a fixture when you see how well it works.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 14). Greatness always involves some level of surrender. Novice performers sing a song. Great performers let the song sing them. This metaphor best describes the shift you make this year, and the improvements happen across the board, from the personal to the professional; your "audience" will move to your groove. Aries and Gemini adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 40, 28, 1 and 27.

Many years ago, a British Columbia team journeyed to Seattle to play a team-of-eight match against a U.S. Pacific Northwest team. One deal produced a startling series of results and indicates how bridge players' minds run in different channels.

At one of the four tables, the bidding went as shown. The U.S. South reached five clubs doubled, North redoubled, and declarer then took all the tricks for a score of 1,150 points.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ANSWER:

Annie's Mailbox®

Overwhelming New Friend

Dear Annie: My husband, "Bob," and I have been married for over 30 years. I work full time; Bob is retired. Over the past year, Bob has befriended a man in his early 40s, "Martin." This man has gotten in the habit of coming over to our house every day, uninvited, for hours.

They usually stay in the garage, where Bob keeps his hobbies. They often hang out until the early morning hours. Sometimes Martin doesn't even show up until after I go to bed. I feel deprived of my husband's company. Martin has a girlfriend, who comes over sometimes, but she's 20 years younger than I am, and we have nothing to talk about.

Bob says I'm being mean. He tries to help everyone and never wants to offend anyone. I'm a charitable person. But I feel this "friend" has way overstayed his welcome.

When Bob and I take time to go away together, we get along fine -- that is, unless I try to talk about this problem; then we end up in a huge fight. What should I do? -- Lonely and Frustrated Wife

Dear Lonely: Bob "never wants to offend anyone," but he doesn't seem to extend that courtesy to you. Though it's healthy for him to have friends, especially in retirement, I agree that he should set better boundaries with Martin. It's not OK for Martin to come over unannounced, at all hours of the night. I'd be peeved, too.

But I think the core issue here is not that Bob is spending so much time with Martin; it's that he's not spending enough time with you. Put the focus on that rather than tell your husband he can't hang out with his friend (which would probably only make him want to do it more). Set aside a weekly date night that is yours and Bob's alone.

My guess is that if you feel more connected to Bob and feel as if you're getting enough quality time together, Martin's antics will be a lot less irritating.

Dear Annie: My girlfriend and I are in a long-distance relationship. We met in grad school. She finished up in the spring and got a job up north, about a 12-hour drive away, while I stayed behind to finish school. We decided that we would try to make a long-distance relationship work for this year and that then I would find a job near her.

A good buddy of mine happens to live in the same city as she does. Recently, he sent me a screenshot from a dating app that shows you other people in your area who are looking to hook up. It was my girlfriend. She had created a profile on the app and posted flirty photos. I recognized one of the photos from a beach trip we'd taken, but she had cropped me out of the picture. Her "About Me" section said, "New to the city! Looking for fun!"

I immediately called and confronted her. She acted surprised by my anger, saying she was just using that app to make friends. She got angry and said it hurt that I didn't trust her. By the time we got off the phone, I felt bad for doubting her. That night, I had a pizza delivered to her place as an apology.

But now I'm having second thoughts. Am I being paranoid? -- Wondering

Dear Wondering: You should have sent that pizza to your buddy. He saved you a lot of trouble and an expensive move for a woman who clearly doesn't think much of you -- first cheating on you and then disrespecting your intelligence with a whopper like that. Time to crop her out of the picture as she's already done to you.

Poland: Huawei exec, Polish security expert spied for China

AP photo

The Huawei logo displayed at the main office of Chinese tech giant Huawei in Warsaw, Poland, on Friday, Jan. 11, 2019. Poland's Internal Security Agency has charged a Chinese manager at Huawei in Poland and one of its own former officers with espionage against Poland on behalf of China.

By VANESSA GERA and KELVIN CHAN

Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland has arrested a director at the Chinese tech giant Huawei and one of its own former cybersecurity experts and charged them with spying for China, authorities said Friday.

The development comes as the U.S. is exerting pressure on its allies not to use Huawei, the world's biggest maker of telecommunications network equipment, over data security concerns.

The two men — one a Chinese citizen who was a former envoy in Poland before moving over to a senior position at Huawei and the other a Pole who held several top government cybersecurity positions — were arrested Tuesday, according to Poland's Internal Security Agency.

Polish security agents searched the Warsaw offices of Huawei and Orange, Poland's leading communications provider, where the former Polish security expert recently worked, seizing documents and electronic data. The homes of both men, also in Warsaw, were also searched, according to agency spokesman Stanislaw Zaryn.

It's the latest setback for Huawei in Europe, where the company has ambitious plans to roll out next-generation "5G" mobile networks, which it is a leader in developing. The arrest is a fresh sign that a U.S. dispute with China over its ban on the company is spilling over to Europe, Huawei's biggest foreign market.

Some European governments and telecom companies are following the U.S. lead in questioning whether using Huawei for vital infrastructure for mobile networks could leave them exposed to snooping by the Chinese government.

Maciej Wasik, deputy head of Poland's Special Services agency, said the operation that resulted in the arrests of the two suspects had been underway for a long time. He said "both carried out espionage activities against Poland."

Zaryn told The Associated Press that prosecutors have charged the two men with espionage, but agents are continuing to collect evidence and interview witnesses. Further indictments are expected, he said.

He said no further details would be released about the case because it is classified and the investigation is ongoing.

Polish state television TVP reported that the men have proclaimed their innocence, but Zaryn said he could not confirm that. If convicted, they could face up to 10 years in prison each.

TVP identified the arrested Chinese man as Weijing W., saying he was a director in Poland at Huawei. It said he also went by the Polish first name of Stanislaw and had previously worked at the Chinese consulate in Gdansk.

A LinkedIn profile for a man named Stanislaw Wang appears to match details of the man described by Polish television.

Wang's resume said he worked at China's General Consulate in Gdansk from 2006-2011 and at Huawei Enterprise Poland since 2011, where he was first director of public affairs and since 2017 the "sales director of public sector." The resume said he received a bachelor's degree in 2004 from the Beijing University of Foreign Studies.

State TV identified the Polish man as Piotr D., and said he was a high-ranking employee at the Internal Security Agency, where he served as deputy director in the department of information security, until 2011.

The Polish state news agency, PAP, said the man had also held top cybersecurity positions at the Interior Ministry and the Office of Electronic Communications, a regulatory body that oversees cyber and other telecommunications issues.

It said, while at the Internal Security Agency, he was involved in building a mobile communications system for top Polish officials, and he was fired in 2011 amid a major corruption scandal.

Geopolitical tensions over Huawei have intensified since Canada arrested a top executive last month at the request of U.S. authorities. The company has been blocked in the U.S. since 2012 over fears that its equipment is a security risk, and last year Australia, New Zealand and Japan instituted their own bans against using Huawei.

U.S. officials have reportedly fanned out across Europe recently to make their case with governments and Huawei suppliers for blocking the company.

The company and analysts have long maintained that it has never been found guilty of a cybersecurity breach but the latest accusation, if confirmed, will deal a blow to that defense.

"One thing is clear: this is another nail in the coffin of Huawei's European ambitions," said Thorsten Benner, director of the Global Public Policy Institute, a think tank.

The arrest might not have a big impact on broader trade tensions between China and the U.S., but it shows that "there will always be competition and acrimony related to Chinese tech companies," Benner said.

Huawei, which also makes smartphones and other consumer devices, issued a statement from its Chinese headquarters saying it was aware of the situation in Poland and was looking into it.

"We have no comment for the time being. Huawei complies with all applicable laws and regulations in the countries where it operates, and we require every employee to abide by the laws and regulations in the countries where they are based," the statement said.

Poland is Huawei's headquarters for Central and Eastern Europe and the Nordic region.

An official at the Chinese Embassy in Warsaw said China attaches "great importance to the detention" of the Chinese citizen in Poland and that Chinese envoys had met with Polish Foreign Ministry officials to urge them to arrange a consular visit "as soon as possible."

Orange Poland told the AP on Friday it was cooperating with Polish security services in the case and had "handed over belongings of one of our employees" in Tuesday's search of its offices. Orange told the AP it did not know if the suspicions against its employee were related to his work at Orange or elsewhere.

Huawei's chief financial officer, Meng Wanzhou, was arrested Dec. 1 in Canada in connection with U.S. accusations that the company violated restrictions on sales of American technology to Iran.

The United States wants Meng extradited to face charges that she misled banks about the company's business dealings in Iran. She is out on bail in Canada awaiting extradition proceedings.

forecasting firm. And the monthly job count could decline by 380,000 if the shutdown continues through the end of January, Herzon said. That could push the monthly job figure into negative territory.

If all the federal workers eventually receive back pay, as occurred after previous shutdowns, then the January jobs report would later be revised to restore those 380,000 jobs, according to the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Future jobs reports could be jeopardized, too, if the government remains shut down. The Census Bureau conducts the monthly surveys that the BLS uses to calculate the unemployment rate. Census is part of the Commerce Department, which remains closed during the shutdown.

The BLS wouldn't say whether data collection will continue beyond January if the shutdown continues.

Other economic reports have already been missed. They include a monthly report on factory orders that was scheduled for Monday. That report typically provides insights into how much U.S. companies are spending on large equipment.

Inflation data will also be affected: The consumer price index was released Friday morning as scheduled, because it was prepared by the Labor Department. But the Fed's preferred inflation gauge is published by Commerce's Bureau of Economic Analysis, which is closed.

And because the Agriculture Department is closed, future reports on wholesale prices and import prices won't include farm-related data, the BLS said Thursday.

A report on the number of people seeking unemployment benefits, considered a nearly real-time reflection of layoffs, is still being published. But it could be distorted by the shutdown: Nearly 5,000 federal employees sought benefits two weeks ago, according to the latest data available, roughly five times the usual figure.

And only a portion of the government's report on productivity, or output per hour worked, will be released Feb. 6, the Labor Department said. That's because that report requires data on the growth of GDP, the broadest measure of the economy.

Even after the government fully reopens, weeks will likely be needed before all the postponed reports can be prepared and released.

"It may take some time to get a 'clean' read on the economy," economists at Bank of America Merrill Lynch said Thursday.

Off-camera at the Globes with Roberts, Ali, Theron

By BETH HARRIS AND LYNN ELBER

Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — It's not only who wins or loses at the Golden Globes, but how stars occupy themselves during the three-hour-plus ceremony and manage to navigate a packed ballroom.

Here's a glimpse at what happened off-camera during Sunday's awards at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

ALI'S MOMENT

Mahershala Ali's timing was a bit off early in the evening.

The star of "Green Book" got stuck at the back of the International Ballroom during the show's first commercial break. He stood waiting for a chance to return to his seat when a security guard urged everyone to move along.

"Can I take my seat?" Ali asked. "I didn't know that."

Ali and his wife were among the last to arrive into the ballroom after the show began. They hesitated before entering the so-called pit, where the biggest stars and nominees are seated at the front of the stage and in view of the cameras.

In the end, the Oscar-winning actor was in the right place at the right time.

He won best supporting actor for his role as an African-American concert pianist in the 1960s. It was one of three awards won by "Green Book" from its five nominations.

COMMAND PERFORMANCE

When Julia Roberts and

Emmy Rossum summon you, you jump.

The actresses were chatting during a break in the ceremony when they spotted Sam Rockwell.

"Sam!" they called out in unison. He rushed over, first offering a "How are you, man?" to Roberts' husband, cinematographer Daniel Moder, who was patiently standing by.

Patricia Arquette, her best-actress award for the miniseries "Escape at Dannemora" cradled in her arm, joined the circle and got congratulatory hugs from Roberts and Rossum.

THE WAITING GAME

Charlize Theron was ushered into a crowded women's restroom at the back of the ballroom, cutting ahead of a long line and apologizing along the way.

The nominated star of "Tully" found Regina King standing at the sink and the actresses hugged.

"You look so beautiful,"

Theron told King, who won supporting actress for her role in "If Beale Street Could Talk."

Theron took a bottle of eye drops out of her tiny black clutch and reapplied her lipstick before she was hurried out of the restroom.

Rosamund Pike had no such escort. The nominated star of "A Private War" got in a long line like everyone else during a commercial break.

"Is it moving quite fast?" she asked. Assured that it was, Pike waited her turn.

SELFIES AND SCHMOOZING
Melissa McCarthy, husband Ben Falcone and Jason Bateman formed an impromptu comedy trio in the bar area, taking time out from the three-hour ceremony.

McCarthy proved a good sport when approached by attendees seeking selfies with the "Can You Ever Forgive Me?" star.

She wasn't the only one asked to pose by star-struck audience members, who may work in entertainment or were just lucky enough to have a connection.

Richard Gere, waiting in the back of the ballroom for a commercial break to return to his seat, was ap-

The question kept coming up for David Mazouz throughout the run of “Gotham”: When will Bruce Wayne finally transform into Batman?

And while we know the answer will be “soon” now that the hourlong drama is in the midst of its fifth and final season Thursdays on Fox, the 17-year-old actor reasons that has always been the case from the premiere episode in 2014. But until this season, he had been as in-the-dark as the show’s fans.

“You always have to tease it a little bit,” he explains, “so I usually would be like, ‘Well you know, you’re going to see Bruce transform into Batman this season.’ Which is always true. Every episode, he does get closer to Batman. But Batman himself, I didn’t know. But now going into Season 5, I don’t know how much I’m allowed to say but I’m going to leave it there. ... I know something now.”

As he looks back on five seasons as Wayne, Mazouz is sad to leave what he considers to be a rich character behind, no matter how painful playing him could be. For the young actor, this has been a learning experience like no other.

“On this show even, there’s been so much that Bruce has gone through,” Mazouz says, “... and he’s always surprising us with either his strength or his pain or the strength that comes out of his pain. He’s had so many arcs where they’ve been really fun to do, but they’ve been really hard to do because they’re really unique.”

Full name: David (pronounced ‘Dah-veed’) Albert

BY GEORGE DICKIE

With a good many of us trying to eat healthy these days, we'd all like to know more about what goes into our foods – and hence our bodies.

So foods heavy on fats, sugars, carbs, sodium, corn syrup, gluten, partially hydrogenated oils and GMOs raise red flags for the label-reading set, and for good reason.

Food, to put it succinctly, is fuel and if we put garbage in, then what comes out won't be great. And we'll be overweight, sick and tired as a result, as the recent epidemic of obesity and diabetes proves.

But there are reliable sources for good food info out there, particularly on YouTube, which offers up a library's worth of documentaries and programs to educate you on what you consume. Because life is too short to eat crap.

"Nutrition 101 With Dr. Mike": In this 30-minute video, Dr. Michael VanDerschelden explains the basics of a proper diet, starting by debunking the myth of the "Food Guide Pyramid" introduced by the USDA in 1992 and replacing it with a diet rich in fruits, vegetables and lean proteins. Lots of good common-sense advice here.

"The Surprisingly Dramatic Role of Nutrition in Mental Health": Yes, what you eat affects not only your body but your mind, and in this TED talk, clinical psychologist

Dr. Julia Rucklidge goes through a range of scientific research, including her own, showing the critical role diet plays in mental health.

"Processed Food Documentary: Processed Food vs. Nutritional Needs": Beware of processed foods, is the message of this half-hour film, in which Dr. Maya Adam outlines how our increased reliance on convenience foods combined with decreased physical activity has led to the rise in childhood obesity and obesity in general.

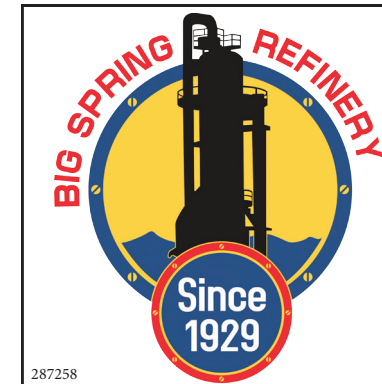

"Organic Food: Hope or Hype?": From German broadcaster Deutsche Welle comes this 2018 documentary that questions organic foods, whether they really do carry health benefits, if there really are fewer pesticides in them and whether there is any way for consumers to determine if they are indeed organic.

"Food on the Brain": It's no secret that junk food is bad for our bodies but in this documentary from the BBC, host Stephen Nolan travels the U.S. to learn about the inner workings of our brains and how a junk food diet can affect it.

"Super Size Me": Morgan Spurlock's 2004 documentary, in which he lived on a McDonald's-only diet for a month, still stands as a cautionary tale of the perils of fast food.

Dr. Michael VanDerschelden
