This was her fourth time to compete at the state level and her third time to receive a Division I gold medal with her flute solo.

Science Spectrum bringing programs to Floydada youth

Some of the most enjoyable and educational programs occur at the Science Spectrum in Lubbock. This summer, the Science Spectrum and the Discovery Center in Amarillo will be bringing six favorite shows to Floydada for local boys and girls to enjoy! Called "Wacky Wednesday", the shows will start on June 12th and continue for six Wednesdays: two in June and four in July at the Kid's Korner Learning Center. "This is a real plus for the Day Care and our town," said Laura Farris, president of the Kid's Korner board; "and we are indebted to six businesses for generously offering to sponsor the program."

The Friends of the Library will kick off the summer project on June 12th by sponsoring the space bubble show called "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star." Here boys and girls, age Pre-K through grade 5, sit under a nighttime sky looking at the stars and other heavenly bodies of space. Julianne Cornelius, president of the Friends group said, "The library is all about education, and we are excited to be a part of this exceptional summer program."

Each show will begin at 10:00 a.m. and if there is a crowd, another show will be offered at 11:00 a.m. Admission is free, and the order of the day

Rattlesnake bite sends Mary Ann Potts to hospital

Mary Ann Potts, of Motley County, was hospitalized at Covenant Care Hospital after she was bitten by a rattlesnake at her home, 20 miles east of Floydada, Sunday, June 2.

According to Potts, at approximately 4:00 p.m., Sunday, she went outside to drain the "kiddie pool" for her children. "I picked up the pool and the snake was nestled under it," said Potts. "It bit me on the foot and I dropped the pool and hollered. I said some words that children shouldn't hear."

Potts said the wound bled a little but that almost immediately she felt a deep ache in her foot.

"It was excruciating pain," said Potts.

Potts mother-in-law, Marisue Potts, was outside and ran into the house to get Mary Ann's husband, Jim. "Jim came out and smashed the snake's head with a 2X4," said Mary Ann.

"Then he brought the snake with us. The hospital said that was a good thing to do because it was better to see the type of snake so they can give you the right anti-venom."

Ice was applied to the wound and then Potts headed to Floydada. "We called the emergency room at Methodist Hospital and they called EMS in Floydada and told them to meet us at the Lighthouse Electric intersection. The helicopter was also dispatched. We met EMS at Lighthouse and I was loaded onto the ambulance."

Potts said that no chances were taken with the snake. "They told me just to be safe they wanted a police officer to come shoot the snake and make very certain it was dead. So they did."

Potts said within an hour she was in the emergency room at Methodist. Within 1 1/2 hours she was being given anti-venom.

"The pain was so bad that the little bit of morphine they gave me was not enough. The pain medicine did not start working until Monday," said Potts.

According to Potts the swelling moved from her foot to her thigh. "It swelled for 18 hours but it has stopped now," said Potts. "Although the swelling moved--the pain did not. Luckily they did not have to cut me open to stop the swelling."

Potts said she may get to go home on Thursday or Friday.

The rattlesnake, according to Potts, was 5 or 6 buttons in size. "I don't know if that is considered small or not."

Potts has three boys, 3 years, 6 years and 9 years. "I am so glad it did not get my children--that would have been terrible."

Randy Miller's music now published and ready to sell

Randy Miller's dream has been realized with the delivery of his first 1,000 CDs containing 8 of his own original Christian songs.

To celebrate this long anticipated arrival, Miller will be autographing the CD's at a party held in his honor, Thursday, June 13, at 2:00 p.m., at City Auto in Floydada.

Within a week half of the CD's have already been sold. "I'm pretty sure I'm going to have to order more," said Miller.

The CD is titled "Here and Now". The songs, "Cross Road", "Flow Through Me", "One and Only", "The Carpenter's Son", "Supper With a King", "Praise His Holy Name", "That's Why I Came", and the title song, "Here and Now", were all written and performed by Randy Miller.

Two other songs on the CD, "While Heaven's Looking In", by J.L. Windsor, and "Hold On", by J. Barilla, are also performed by Miller.

He has back-up on the tape by five Nashville studio musicians and 2 Nashville back-up singers. "The fiddle player/mandolin and acoustic player performs on all the Gaither videos," said Miller.

The tape, produced by Southstar Creative Group, was recorded in Nashville.

Miller was "discovered" by Southstar when he auditioned at a Nashville Starseek Show. Miller performed "The Carpenter's Son" and Miller's songwriting talent was quickly noticed by the Christian and Country music promoters.

The producer, Steven Brown, has also asked Miller to make a return trip to Nashville to tape a patriotic show for PAX cable to be aired September 11.

"The show is being made in memory of the victims of the September 11 terrorist attacks," said Miller.

Miller has already written an original patriotic song which he will perform on the September 11 show.

He has also been invited to come back, in October, to a "command performance", which is sponsored by several independent record companies.

Miller has said that the focus of his music has always been to "get the message out". "I don't want to be a star," said Miller. "I want to lift up Jesus' name through music. I hope something in my songs will bring people closer to God."

Miller is the music director of the Methodist Church in Floydada, and also leads the praise and worship music in the early service at the Methodist Church in Plainview.

The CD's can be purchased for $16.00 at City Auto, First United Methodist Church in Floydada and the First United Methodist Church in Plainview, Wayland Baptist Bookstore, and KCM Music Company in Plainview.

Floydada plans first "Ole Country Market" for July 13th

Floydada's first "Ole Country Market" will be held downtown, around the Courthouse square, July 13th.

Proceeds from the County Market will go towards the Floydada Chamber of Commerce beautification projects.

The square will be full of arts and crafts booths, food vendors, vegetable stands, live plants, jewelry, etc.

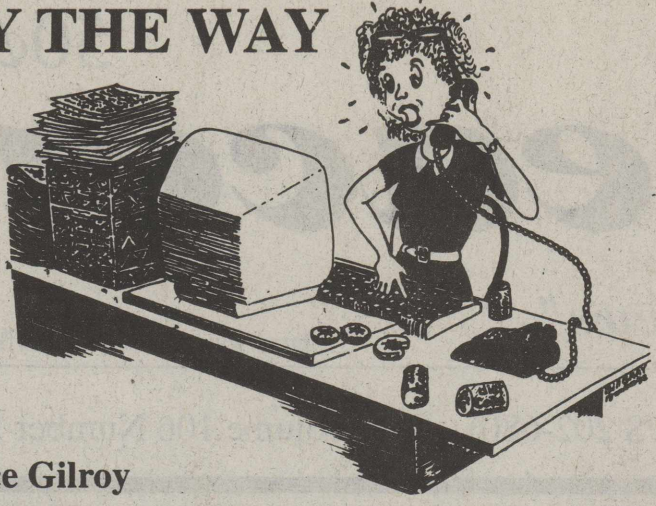

"The proceeds the vendors make will of course be kept by the vendors," said organizer Julie Duke, "but the chamber profits will go toward beautifying downtown Floydada. Donations can also be made to the beautification projects at Floydada's First National Bank."

According to Duke, the Country Market will also be held in conjunction with the annual City Wide Garage Sale. "We will have some booth space available around downtown sidewalks for garage sale spots," said Duke. "If you list your garage sale address with the chamber, for $10.00, then you will be included on a map that will be distributed out at 8:00 a.m., July 13th," said Duke. "This will

BY THE WAY

By
Alice Gilroy

Thelma Parr has made our whole year. That sweet lady just walked into our office last week and, for no reason whatsoever, brought us a bag of fresh--still hot--homemade--chocolate chip cookies.

Thank-you, Thank-you, Thank-you!

Whatever we did to deserve that I hope we do it again!

We have been having a great deal of discussion around here about the definition of "paternal twins".

The brand new twins of Dr. Sheri and Sam Moore, of Lockney, were dubbed paternal twins in a thank-you in this paper a couple of weeks ago.

It was believed "paternal" meant identical twins, and Sam Moore called us back and made it clear that first of all the twins weren't identical and second of all he didn't think paternal meant identical. (By the way--Sam was very nice and laughed about the whole incident).

We had originally found the definition of paternal twins on the internet--which led another reader to tell us you can't believe what you read on the internet--and then that same reader brought us a bunch of internet research. He said he checked the British Medical Journal and the Journal of the American Medical Association and could access no articles about paternal twins--however the 2001 Merriam-Webster Dictionary said that paternal means: "relating to the father", or "received or inherited from one's father".

So--before I made another correction to my correction, we tried to go back and find where we got our information the first time. It took some looking but on an internet Biology Course for "grade 9 applied": Topic of "Human Reproduction": Lesson References: <http://www.pregnancycalendar.com>, Schraer & Stoltze, Biology: The Study of Life USA, 1990, it says:

"Paternal Twins: Another name for identical twins--one egg is fertilized and splits in two. Both fetuses share the amnion and placenta and the children are always the same sex and look very much alike."

So before we have to write another correction, I'd like to go on record as saying--we don't know for sure what paternal twins means--AND FRANKLY I DON'T CARE.

However--we do care that the Moore twins are healthy happy baby boys--AND THEY AREN'T IDENTICAL!

Please bear with us, gentle reader. This won't take long, but we will rest easier, someday, knowing we have noted the passing of a good friend, and a good soldier, and knowing too that his life here among us did not go unnoticed.

There is, or there was, a cadre of a few men who survived Corregidor and went on to survive the prison camps that followed. Johnny P. Turner, from somewhere around Lamesa, was one of those men. He was not a well educated man, as things are now determined, and he sometimes drank too much, but he was a brave man who did his duty. In fact, he lived to do his duty, as he saw that duty, but sometimes other things interfered. Quite often, before hostilities broke out, he could be found digging a hole, under orders from First Sergeant Beaman, only to fill the hole once it was completed...with the same dirt dug from the original. As I say, sometimes he drank too much. Beaman didn't like that. In fact, Beaman didn't like much of what went on in the world. Nearing completion of 30 years in the Army, he took a dim view of "first timers" in general.

Johnny P., or "Tombstone", as he was called by his fellows (he once slept through an alert exercise carried out in the dead of night prior to hostilities, awakening only when everyone else returned from the guns, thus earning the nickname "Tombstone"), was a machine gunner. Against all the odds, he and "Little" George Williams, his machine gun partner, lived through Corregidor. When airplanes were not overhead, particularly when we were not under attack by dive bombers or low level attack aircraft, George and Johnny were instructed to vacate their post, which consisted of a tower that loomed high above the battery's 3-inch anti-aircraft guns. It was a very vulnerable position.

When the tower, and the machine gun nest, was blown away by artillery fire during one such absence, they were assigned to other guns. The three of us were close friends, perhaps because we were all country folks from Texas, and about the same age. We stuck together like fleas, and ended up in a Mukden, Manchuria, prison camp. George was number 856, Turner was 857, and I was 858. Another friend, and a member of our group, was Roy Creecy, a farm boy from Montana. He was 861. By hanging together and helping each other, all four managed to weather the storm. Then, time and tide took its toll. Creecy was first to go. His widow wrote from Montana, seeking help. She got it. Then George. I visited him in a Veterans Administration hospital in San Antonio shortly before he died some years ago. His wife sat nearby. Within days after his death, she died as well.

But with Johnny P. it was a different story. His wife of many years preceded him in death, and eventually he married again. In my own opinion it was a disaster, but others, especially Johnny P., could have a different take on the subject. He called me from Orange, Texas, shortly after his new marriage, happy as a lark. She was considerably younger than he, and, according to Johnny, very, very beautiful. He put her on the phone, saying again and again that he wanted her to talk to me. All I could get out of her was giggles.

Johnny died shortly thereafter, but none of his old comrades were told. His new wife, now modestly well off, evidently saw no need. We found out about it at a recent gathering of veterans of Bataan-Corregidor from the widow of H.C. Griffen, who was a valued member of my own gun crew. "Griff", as he was called, came out of prison camps with advanced tuberculosis and never recovered. Mrs. Griffen, or Illava, found out about Johnny's death when she called the new Mrs. Turner to tell Johnny about her own husband's death.

The world moves on. I just thought there ought to be some mention, somewhere, about a man who served his country honorably and did his duty without complaining. After all, it is Memorial Day, as this is written. Johnny was a good soldier, even if he did drink a little too much, most of the time. In prison, he had only one eye for many months. A Jap guard hit him in the eye with the butt of a rifle when he mistook an order, leading Johnny P. to a rigorous study of the Japanese language. By the time we were freed, he could speak the language almost as good as a native.

Now they are all gone, except me. Creecy, Turner, Williams, even a guy named Cook (number 860) who attached himself to our little group. Cook earned his spurs, or his place, by furnishing us with the liver of a dog trapped by English prisoners when it wandered into camp in sub-freezing weather. The carcass was stolen from its original trappers by people who lived in our own barrack, and hidden in a snow bank. Cook was a witness, and demanded a portion of the dog as hush money. Then he shared. Johnny P. cooked the liver. We savored our share. Four of us feasted on one dog's liver. It was very, very, good.

There were others who we survivors ought to remember on this day, and all days. There was Francis Tuerman, from Decatur, Texas, our "relay" man, who died in our own gun pit, turned into ashes by artillery fire. There was Shook, from El Darado, Kansas, who had lied about his age and came in the Army when he was 16, and who died less than ten feet from me on the day (May 6, 1942) of the Japanese invasion of Corregidor. There was "Alabama" Freeman, who died the same day when shrapnel ripped through his intestines, worrying with his last breath whether he was going to be able to have children, when the war was over. There were many more.

To all of them, and to all who served on all the battle fields around the world, from all of us, we say thank you. We know it's not much, but it is about all we can say. God bless!

Refreshments were served to guests who were also treated to view several new exhibits. Martha Farris and Jo Wester worked with Nancy Marble, Exhibit Chairman, to fill a case with items from the First Christian Church. One of the display windows is now filled with World War I artifacts. It includes a uniform, medals, etc. The first glass cheese case to arrive in Floydada is now on display. It was in the Duncan Grocery Store in early Floydada.

On Friday, May 24 and Saturday, May 25, visitors registered from New Mexico, Colorado, Florida, Mississippi and Texas. One guest registered from London, England.

Children were lined up most of the day Saturday to make a rope on the rope making machine. Ed and Pat Musser from Canyon, Texas and Eddie Brown from Lamesa, Texas have come for several years for the Floyd County Pioneer Reunion and Punkin Day to supervise the making of rope. The Boy Scouts from Floydada and Lockney assisted them this year. There were 56 ropes made on Saturday.

Museum board member Donnell Gowens was again in charge of the Wildflower Show this year. It is held in the Mary Lou Bollman History and Genealogy Center or East Room of the Museum. The flowers always draw many visitors wanting to see the various arrangements and containers.

Keith and June Patzer went to Grand Canyon Wednesday, May 23rd through Sunday the 26th. Their son, Bart and Kellye Patzer, and friends, Dennis and Michelle Robertson from Austin were also with them. They swam in the ocean, laid on the beach, went down in the ocean on a submarine, and viewed fish and coral. They also did some shopping.

Eating at the center last week were Sue Daniels and Jane McCulley. They have not eaten with us before. We were glad to have them.

Sue Lovell spent 10 days recently in Paris, France. She visited lots of museums such as St. Denis Cathedral and Notre Dame. They also visited the Eiffel Tower, by train to Giverny and visited the artist Monet's home. They also visited Chartres Cathedral, Versailles, and Vaux de la Comte. I think her most fun was shopping at the largest flea market in France.

Tips on Turf

Floyd County Extension Service by J.D. Ragland

Planning a Garden

You probably have a good reason for wanting to grow a garden. Maybe it's because you like to be outdoors, working with the good earth and letting the fertile soil run through your fingers. Maybe it's because you like the taste of fresh vegetables right out of the garden. Or maybe it's because you spent $100 on your last trip to the supermarket. Regardless of the reason, you want to grow a garden. So, where do you start? Certainly not with your hands in your pockets looking at pretty seed packets at the local garden center or nursery. Do it right. Think. Plan.

First, make sure you have room for a garden. You won't need a lot of space if you are a beginner with an average size family. Your garden might only be 20 feet by 30 feet, or maybe even less. Whatever size garden you have, think in terms of four basic requirements.

First, you need sunlight, because all vegetables need some sun, and most must have full sun for highest yields of quality produce. Unless you are concentrating on leaf or bulb crops such as broccoli, collards, spinach, or onions, your crops need every available ray of sunshine.

Next, consider the location of your garden. Put it as near the back door as possible. Make bringing home the fruits of your labor a pleasant and enjoyable chore. The out-of-sight, out-of-mind principle applies here. A garden does not demand constant care and attention, but it thrives and does better if you visit it once a day. If you do not check it regularly, insects, diseases, or lack of water can destroy your garden in a short time. So put the garden close to the house where watching it will not be a hassle.

Next, consider the soil. Ideally, the soil should be fertile and easy to till, with just the right texture — a loose, well-drained loamy soil. If your soil does not meet these specifications completely, don't panic. You can work it into shape without breaking your back. Avoid areas heavily infested with Johnsongrass, nutgrass, and other weeds. Don't put your garden on a rocky ledge or in a poorly drained area. These things make gardening more difficult.

Next, consider the availability of water. Place your garden near a spigot or at least where it can be reached easily with a garden hose. In a typical year, watering is necessary about once a week. Now you are ready for the planning stage. The first step is to select the vegetables you want to grow. Plant vegetables you like to eat. Avoid those that your family doesn't usually buy at the local grocery store. With a few exceptions, you can plant almost anything you like in your garden.

After you have selected your vegetables make a rough diagram of your garden. Indicate the number of rows and different vegetables you wish to plant. Also show the desired location of each crop, the number of plants or feet of rows you want to plant, and the best time to plant. Usually these recommendations are provided on the seed package or bag. The plan will help you meet planting deadlines, make decisions on what you need to buy, and put some order into your gardening activities.

It's A Great Time To Have Your Soil Tested

If your garden performed below expectations last year, or maybe things just didn't grow quite right, a few dollars invested in a soil test may be just the solution. A properly prepared and fertilized garden soil is the real key to successful gardening in most areas of Texas. You can't look at the soil, taste it, smell it, or feel it to tell whether your soil is low in nitrogen, high in phosphates, or maybe just right. One sure way to overcome the mystery, and avoid confusion when it comes time to purchase fertilizers, is to have your garden soil tested.

Why is it important to know how much phosphorus or nitrogen is in the soil, or what the pH of the soil is? The answer is simple. Vegetables don't do well in improperly fertilized soil, whether it be too fertile or not fertile enough.

The soil test report will tell you the level of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, calcium, and magnesium available to your garden plants. It will also indicate the pH (acidity or alkalinity) of your garden soil. For the most part, this is all you need to know to properly fertilize your garden soil, and insure a bountiful harvest.

To take a soil sample, make a hole about a foot deep in the garden with a spade or sharpshooter. Throw out the first spade-full of soil. Then, from the back of the hole, cut a slice of the soil 1/2 inch to 1 inch thick. Be sure the slice is at least 6 to 7 inches in depth, with fairly even width and thickness. Then place the soil slice in a bucket or tub. Repeat this procedure 4 to 6 times in different spots in the garden, depending primarily on the size of the garden. Thoroughly mix the composite of the soil, and mail it to the Soils Testing Laboratory here at Texas A&M University. Soil testing is a service provided by the University; soil test kits, with instructions, can also be obtained from your local county Extension agent.

If a soil sample is taken in late winter or very early spring, you should expect to get your results back within 2 to 3 weeks. If you wait until spring, then it may take considerably longer to get your results back. An adequate soil test, properly done and properly interpreted, will go a long way toward insuring a bountiful harvest from this spring's garden.

Farm Bill specifics unclear

By Shawn Wade

With questions concerning specifics of the new Farm Program mounting, Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. continues toward full implementation of the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002.

Probably the most frustrating part for High Plains growers is the wait and see aspect of the situation. And as most observers would expect the last pieces of the puzzle continue to be the ones that are most critical to pulling together an accurate measure of the new programs impact.

The efforts of organizations like the National Cotton Council, PCG and Texas Cooperative Extension to host meetings explaining the legislation, answering producer questions when possible, and more often gathering in questions that need further clarification have been tremendously helpful to growers.

Eventually the process of identifying specific details of the new program will give way to full-scale implementation and a head start for cotton producers.

The majority of the process was clearly spelled out in the Bill as to how the base and yield update process would be carried out. The only part that is really missing at this time is the final methodology that will be employed to provide yield "plugs" for a producer who experienced below average or zero production during the 1998-2001 yield update window.

USDA Farm Service Agency officials are in the process of finalizing the rules that will govern the use of yield plugs and it is hoped that the final decision will be made in this regard in the very near future.

Other decisions regarding the timing and process through which growers will enroll in the new program are also being worked on at USDA. It is likely that when many of these pending decisions are made a flurry of detail will begin to emerge from Washington.
