Louise Stone Spends Week At Girls State

Louise Stone

Louise Stone has returned home from a week of study and recreation at Girls State in Austin. The trip was sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary. She makes the following report of her experience.

"I left from Amarillo Tuesday night, June 12, on a chartered bus with 28 other girls. We arrived in Austin the following morning and were taken to the Texas School for the Blind where the 1962 session of Blue Bonnet Girls State was held.

We were assigned to a city, county, political party and the House and Senate. Girls State is run the same as any other state. All city, county, and state offices are filled and function while at Girls State.

I ran for County Commissioner. I won in the primaries but was defeated by the Nationalist nominee in the general election. I was in the Federalist Party.

A bank was provided for the girls during their stay. Checks were written and records kept. This prevented loss of money. A general store was also provided. They offered necessities and souvenirs.

A thorough study of city, county and state governments was taken. Special speakers such as Jack Cox and John Connally entertained the assembly during the study of government.

Monday, June 18, we had the inauguration of Bluebonnet Girls State officials in the Rotunda of the Capitol. We toured the buildings and had lunch on the Capitol grounds.

We also had speakers representing the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary. The chairman of the National Girls State Committee, Doris Anderson, was a guest speaker.

There was also a lot of fun and excitement along with the learning. The party campaigns were very lively and the demonstrations were often extreme. Skits were presented by both parties, expressing their superiority as a party.

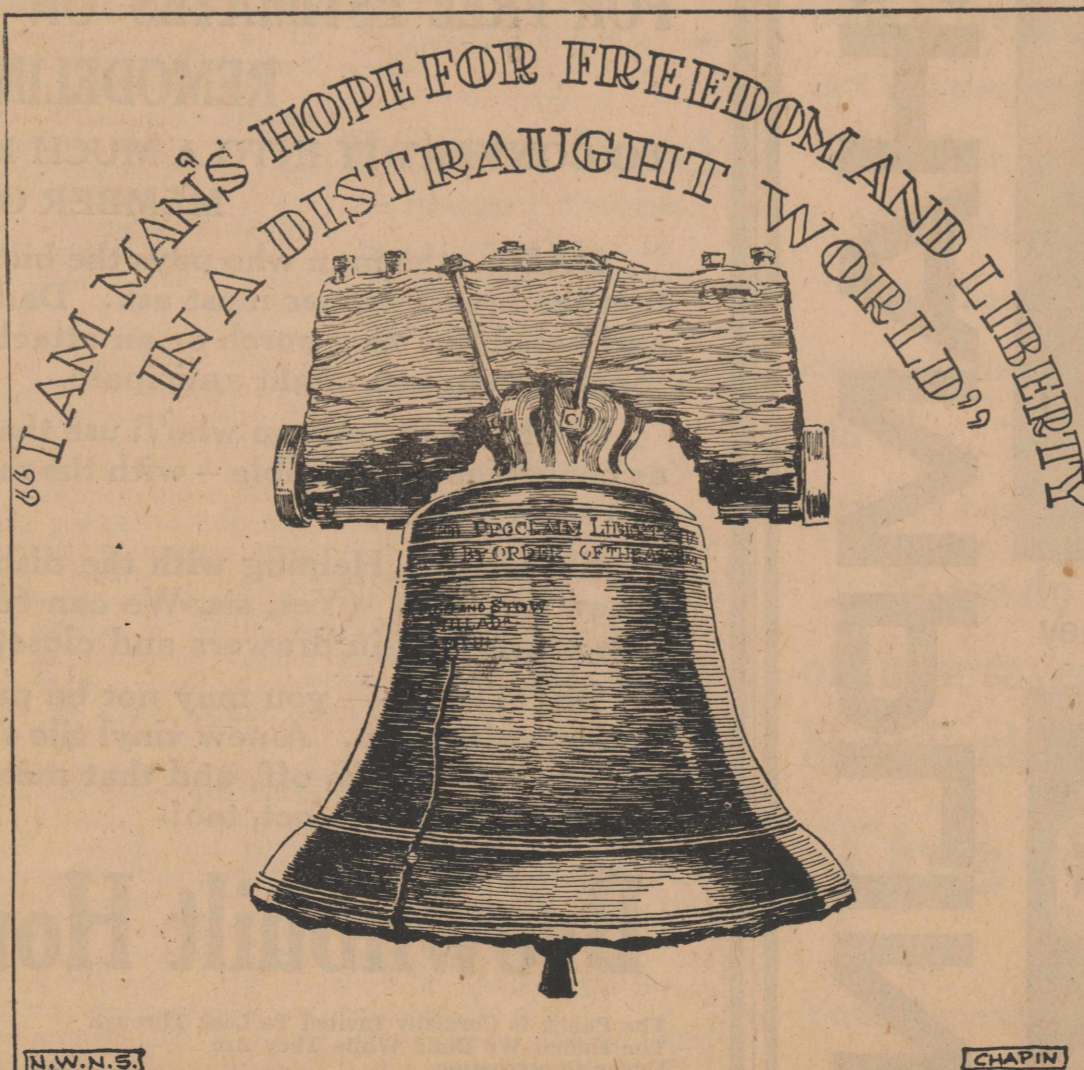

However, the offices were split even in county and state offices. This is the only time this has happened at Girls State. It helped to bring unity of parties after the election.

There was much talent among the citizens and counselors. The citizens auditioned the first day and we had at least three exhibitions of talent each night in closing assembly. The last night was left open for stunts and city parties. My city had a watermelon feast.

Thursday afternoon we were taken to Barton Springs for the afternoon. This was the only time we were cool during the 10 days we were there.

We had closing assembly Friday morning. We were present- (Continued from Page 6)

DAD — the man who pays the bills, "Can I afford it?" That's the first question the bread winner must ask. Dad, you can afford a new kitchen, a new den, and possibly a new porch or an attached garage. The costs are much more reasonable than you might anticipate.

MOM — the person who'll use that new kitchen the most. You'll want it just as convenient as possible — with the most storage space for the money the family can afford to pay.

SISTER — Helping with the dishes won't be half as unpleasant if you do it in a new kitchen! (Yes, sis, We can fix you up with a pegboard wall for your room plus extra built-in drawers and closets.)

BROTHER — you may not be particularly interested, but you're concerned in the project, too. A new vinyl tile floored kitchen will be twice as easy to clean your muddy tracks off, and that means less griping from mother. So you'd better vote for this project, too!

ed a governor's certificate, a Girls State pin, and a commencement certificate.

We rode a chartered bus home.

Citizens of Bluebonnet Girls State learned many new and wonderful things about county government and the people who run it, but at the same time we have learned respect and fear for our country. We have passed one phase of Americanism.

I will speak on my trip Friday night, June 29, at the American Legion Hall. The public is invited and refreshments will be served by the American Legion Auxiliary.

WHILE there are fish and more fish, the favorite of many anglers is a little fellow some folks don't even bother to burden with a creel limit. In many states you can catch all you want, any time of the year.

You're right. We speak of the bluegill, that highly cooperative member of the panfish family. Considered by some anglers a poor, country cousin to real "game" fish, the bluegill, ounce-for-ounce is perhaps the gamest brawler in the piscatorial arena. Tackle bluegill with light equipment and you will probably join the chorus who claim he has no peer in his own weight class.

Bluegill thrive in warm waters. They like some rooted vegetation but tend to become stunted in waters of dense weed beds and low fertility. Bluegill do well in farm ponds and are so prolific that fish management officials usually recommend that fish of all sizes be kept by anglers. It takes plenty of fishing to keep a good bluegill pond producing bragging-size fish. Over-population—too many fish for available food supply—is more often a problem.

The bluegill will respond to many kinds of live bait. Crickets, worms, grasshoppers, grubs, small minnows are top producers, but artificial lures are effective as well. Artificial flies and poppers, imitation beetles and bugs are popular with fly fishermen and under most conditions will take as many bluegill as live bait.

The bluegill usually inhabits the same type of territory as that preferred by largemouth bass. Like the bass, bluegill seek cool, deeper waters during summer, although they frequently feed in shallow coves in early morning and late afternoon.
