Pickens sets his sights on Phillips stock

Associated Press

AMARILLO, Texas — T. Boone Pickens, president of Mesa Petroleum Co., says his oil company is seeking control of Phillips Petroleum Co. simply because it is the best buy in town.

Pickens said Tuesday that the oil company wants to take over Phillips, the nation's eighth largest oil company, and that Mesa partners are making a $600 million bid to buy up to 15 million shares.

"We looked at the list and we studied the list and Phillips looked like it was the best product at this time to enhance values for all the stockholders," Pickens said. "So we then made our investment and we're one our way."

The Mesa group said it had purchased 8.8 million shares of Phillips stock or 57 percent of the outstanding shares prior to the offer. It offered $60 a share for 15 million more shares and said it is seeking financing to buy an additional 8 million shares to raise its stake to 20 percent.

At $60 a share, Phillips would be worth $9.3 billion.

On the basis of takeover speculation, Phillips stock had earlier shot up $3.37 to close at $48 a share, with more than 1.6 million shares changing hands Tuesday.

"We have no plan at this point to run the company, but I can assure you that if we get control of it by the time we get there, we'll have a plan," said Pickens, a native Oklahoma man whose father worked for Phillips and who started his own career as a geologist for Phillips in 1961.

The offer by a partnership made up of affiliates of Amarillo, Texas-based Mesa and of Wagner & Brown, an independent oil operation headed by Jack E. Brown and Cyril Wagner Jr. in Midland, Texas, was announced following the close of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

At Phillips headquarters in Bartlesville, Okla., spokesman Bill Fleisher declined comment on the offer, saying it was too early for us.

Pickens said he has no plans to move the company from its headquarters.

If the partnership gains control of Phillips, which is exactly what we intend to do, it does not intend to move the company headquarters from Bartlesville, Oklahoma," he said.

Stanford Margoshes, an analyst who follows the oil industry for the New York investment firm of Shearson Lehman American Express Inc., called the offer "an opening wedge that will probably lead to Phillips being taken over."

Margoshes said that either the Mesa Partners group would prevail or Phillips would seek out a "white-knight" suitor.

He estimated such a rescue might raise the bidding, and said that if Phillips oil reserves were valued at $7.50 a barrel, the company could go for its old logo — Phillips 66 — or $96 a share. That would raise the price to $10.2 billion, about what Texaco Inc. paid earlier this year for Getty Oil Co.

Pickens denied he was trying to stimulate a bidding war.

"We never have made an offer to flush out other bids," Pickens said in a telephone interview. "There's not anything cheap about this offer."

Pickens said he was attracted to make the offer because "the appraised value of the company is greater than its market value."

Phillips, which recently paid $1.7 billion for Ammonia Inc., has had its assets valued at about $3.4 a share by industry analysts.

While analysts had been awaiting another takeover move by Pickens, the target had been the subject of widespread speculation.

Mesa made a profit of more than $300 million earlier this year from its hostile bid for Gulf Corp., in which Wagner & Brown also was a partner. Gulf sought out a buyout firm as a white knight and they wound up paying $13.3 billion for Gulf, in the richest corporate buyout in U.S. history.

Pickens has built a reputation in recent years for unsolicited bids for bigger oil companies.

Like the Gulf deal, Mesa is once again staking a much bigger bet.

India faces fear of disease

BHOPAL, India — Doctors today warned disease could spread from the corpses of thousands of people and animals killed by a poison gas leak at a pesticide plant and a news paper reported that four previous accidents occurred at the facility.

Doctors and officials at cremation grounds and mortuaries said at least 1,200 people were killed and more than 200,000 were affected by the leak early Monday. They said 20,000 people may suffer serious after-effects, such as blindness.

The United News of India news agency reported the death toll had risen to 1,250 and the physician Dr. R. Srivastava, head of Jai Prakash Hospital, said more than 1,400 had died.

Police and rescue workers searched house to house today for bodies and assisted in mass burials and cremations during the night that lit up the sky of Bhopal, centered Environmental Minister T.N. Khoshoo said investigators have yet to determine the cause of the leak.

A Union Carbide spokesman in Bombay said his company was negotiating with Indian authorities on compensation to the victims. P.K. Akerkar, the spokesman, said the company would pay compensation but declined to specify if the government had requested payment.

Assant Sathe, India's minister of chemicals and fertilizer, said he expects Union Carbide to provide financial compensation to victims and their families according to American legal standards. Negligence victims in India typically receive considerably less in damages and compensation than in the United States.

"I expect Union Carbide management in the United States to rise to the occasion and provide relief as it would have done had this incident occurred in the United States," Sathe told a news conference.

He also alleged that Union Carbide failed to provide the same safety standards as it would for a U.S. plant. "We knew it was a dangerous industry," he said, "but what could we do when we were uninformed about the safety devices in the factory?"

Union Carbide Corp. has halted production and shipment of methyl isocyanate, the gas that leaked, in Bhopal and at its plant in West Virginia.

Most of the dead were children and old people who could not withstand the poisonous gas that leaked from an underground tank at the Union Carbide plant. Most lived in nearby slums and had moved there under a government resettlement program.

Some died in their sleep and others died while trying to flee the gas.

Council sets legislative priorities for region

By LAWRENCE BUDD, Staff Writer

ODESSA — Priorities were announced Tuesday for the North West Legislative Council, a group hoping to parlay the combined clout of Midland, Odessa, Lubbock and Amarillo into greater political influence for West Texas.

The priorities set by the group are:

- Governmental appointments
- Energy
- Agriculture
- Highway funding
- Statewide funding

Members of the Chambers of Commerce in the four cities met with smaller cities chamber representatives from 16 other cities Nov. 18-19, according to Bill Elms of the Greater Odessa Area Chamber.

The council will take action on an issue only when the four cities agree, said Elms, leaving individual chambers free to act in the local interest when necessary.

David Jenkins of the Odessa chamber suggested West Texas is not fairly represented on committees appointed by the governor. The region pays 21 percent of the state's total tax and makes up almost 8 percent of its population, but less than 3 percent of total gubernatorial appointments come from this area, said Jenkins.

"The committees are at the heart and essence of how things get accomplished in this state," he said.

The council will support legislation aiding and oppose tax issues expected to cost the oil and gas industry, said Charles Coffman from the Midland chamber.

Efforts will be made to place a

West Texan on the highway commission, said Grant Billingsley of the Midland chamber, noting the importance of an efficient highway system because of the geography and location of the region in relation to other commercial areas.

Judith Kerr of the Amarillo chamber stressed the need for a statewide water plan in the continued development of this arid region and John Logan from the Lubbock chamber spoke on the need for a combined voice on agricultural issues.

Irish named Beaumont publisher; Spence assumes Midland position

George B. Irish, publisher of the Midland Reporter Telegram since March 1982, has been named publisher of the Beaumont Enterprise, recently purchased by the Hearst Corporation. Charles A. Spence, publisher of Hearst's Midland (Michigan) Daily News will succeed Irish as publisher here.

The announcement was made today by Frank A. Bennack Jr., president and chief executive officer of Hearst. Both appointments are effective immediately.

Prior to coming to Midland, Irish also served as publisher of the Midland, Mich., newspaper where he earlier had been business manager and general manager. Before that, he was personnel manager for Lind say Schaub Newspapers.

While in West Texas, Irish has been active in numerous civic organizations serving as a member of the board of directors of United Way of Midland, Midland Chamber of Commerce, Industrial Foundation, High Sky Girls Ranch, Palmer Drug Abuse Program and Junior Achievement of Midland. He also is a member of the board of governors of Midland Community Theater and a member of the board of trustees of Trinity Towers. In 1983, he was named Midland Rotarian of the Year.

Professionally, he is a member of the board of directors of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association, chairman of the management and cost committee of the Inland Daily Press Association and on the journalism advisory committee of Texas Tech University.

"Leaving Midland will be the most difficult move I've made in my career," Irish said. "Midland is a dynamic community whose positive-minded citizens work together for the benefit of the city and all its people. I appreciate so much the many people who made me, my wife and daughters feel welcome from the day we arrived," Irish said.

Spence has been publisher of the Midland, Mich., newspaper since 1982 and prior to that served as general manager and publisher of Hearst's Huron (Michigan) Daily Tribune. Other newspapers with which he has been affiliated were the Southern Illinoisan (Carbondale, Ill.), the Florence Times (Florence, Ala.) and the Topeka Capital Journal (Topeka, Kan.).

WEATHER SUMMARY

The National Weather Service predicts rain through Thursday for the Pacific Northwest, while showers are expected in Florida. Snow is forecast from the Great Lakes into Minnesota.

Temperatures to plunge into low 20s overnight

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders who are just getting used to overnight lows in the low 30s had better brace themselves — tonight the temperature will plunge into the low 20s.

Tuesday's high of 43 was 42 degrees colder than the record for the date of 85, set in 1964, while the overnight low of 31 was 13 degrees above the 1960 record low of 18.

STATE

Ice and light snow frosted the Texas Panhandle and South Plains overnight, but Oklahoma took the brunt of a brisk winter storm.

Generally, most of the Panhandle and the South Plains to just north of Wichita Falls received one inch of snow overnight," said forecaster Michael Mach.

Mach said Oklahoma had more snow than Texas. "The storm system tracked a little bit to the north so Oklahoma took the brunt of the storm last night," he said.

Although the storm was not as severe as expected, travelers' advisories were still in effect Wednesday for the Panhandle, the South Plains and the Concho Valley, Mach said.

Ice patches were reported on bridges and overpasses in the Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland, San Angelo, Wichita Falls, Snyder, Sweetwater and Colorado City areas, Mach said. Ice and fog were reported in the Davis Mountains in West Texas.

John Boyd, a meteorologist with Weather Center — a private weather forecasting company — said after the storm clears the state today, another storm could hit the state by the weekend.

"We have another pretty wild winter storm headed for us for Friday and Saturday," Boyd said.

Overnight temperatures ranged from the upper 20s in the Panhandle to the lower 50s in the Rio Grande Valley, with much of the state reporting temperatures just barely over freezing, if at all.

Although freezing rain was reported Tuesday afternoon near Lubbock, officials with the Texas Department of Public Safety said warm road and air temperatures kept the streets clear.

"All of our roads are fine," said Olita Emerine, a DPS spokeswoman. "We don't have anything sticking to the streets."

Light rain and showers covered most of South Texas and the coastal plains Tuesday, with scattered but very heavy thunderstorms across portions of Southeast Texas.

NATION

Two storms unleashed "the first real taste of winter" from the desert Southwest to the Appalachians today, dumping 8 inches of snow in New Mexico, turning roads to treacherous ice-covered ribbons in many states and packing winds that made it feel like 26 below zero.

The heaviest snowfall overnight was expected over northwestern Arkansas and parts of Oklahoma, where up to 5 inches of snow was already on the ground early today. Ten inches was predicted in the higher elevations of Arkansas.

The mercury plunged over night in many cities. Early today, the National Weather Service reported temperatures at 10 degrees below zero at Butte, Mont. It was zero at Redwood Falls, Minn., with a wind chill temperature of 26 below zero.

Authorities in several states warned motorists to stay off the roads.

"Our patrolmen keep calling in, and they're finding motorists who are sliding off the roads all over the place," said Siegle Bell of the Washington County, Ark., sheriff's office. "I'm fairly certain that unless there is a major miracle in the morning, they would close the schools."

"Roads are pretty bad all over except in the extreme southeast," Liz Quoteone of the National Weather Service office in Oklahoma City said early today.

"For a good portion of the country, it's the first real taste of winter, the coldest air of the season in the northern Plains. The southern Plains are getting their first real widespread snow," said Paul Fike, a meteorologist at the Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The Texas panhandle had 3 inches of snow by early today.

On Tuesday, 8 inches of snow piled up at Cloudfcroft and Ruidoso, N.M. The State Highway Department said all roads were open but many were wet or slushy.

Seven inches fell at Greer, Ariz., and 6 inches at Alpine, Ariz. State police reported several weather-related traffic accidents, but no injuries.

Travelers' advisories were posted from the central New Mexico mountains across northwest Texas and Oklahoma; parts of Kansas, Missouri and Virginia, and the mountains of western North Carolina.

Travelers' advisories were also posted for the Sierra Nevada and the Lake Tahoe region because of a storm off the California coast.

One storm, in the southern Plains, was moving through the Texas panhandle early today, and was expected to move up the East Coast, possibly bringing snow as far north as western Maine by Thursday night, Fike said.

That storm was forecast to bring rain to much of the East Coast, with up to 6 inches of snow today in the Appalachians, he said.

A second storm, triggered by a blast of arctic air, was moving south from Canada, and spreading out through the northern Plains, Fike said.

Evacuation plan asked near plant

By STRAT DOUTHAT Associated Press Writer

INSTITUTE, W. Va. — Residents of this little college town want the nearby Union Carbide plant to devise an evacuation plan that would forestall a chemical disaster like the one that has been blamed for at least 1,000 deaths in India.

"We need a better system than ringing bells," said Charles White, president of the Institute-Dunbar Sub-Area Planning Committee, a neighborhood group. The plant has a system of whistles when something goes wrong.

"We need something that alarms us rather than lulls us to sleep," he said.

Institute's Union Carbide Corp. plant is the nation's only producer of methyl isocyanate, the pesticide ingredient that leaked from a company plant in Bhopal, India, on Sunday. Officials in India said many who inhaled the gas would be left blind or sterile.

About 30 Institute residents who met Tuesday night decided also to ask Carbide to include a representative of their group on the trip by company officials to India to investigate the accident. They were apparently unaware that the Carbide officials left this country Tuesday.

Institute resident Frank Walker said the community needs to know "what kind of precautions to take and what kind of evacuation program is in progress."

"Our intention is not to close Union Carbide. I think our intention is to establish a relationship with Union Carbide," Walker said.

Carbide officials in Institute ceased manufacture of the chemical immediately after the Indian disaster. Company spokesman Dick Henderson said he did not know how much of the chemical is stored here.

A state official said he intends to inspect the local plant as soon as possible, however.

"As soon as we find out what caused the leak (in India), we will go through the (Institute) storage facility," said Bob Weser of the state Air Pollution Control Commission.

Inspectors for the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration have visited the plant nine times since 1980, but never in connection with methyl isocyanate, said Perry Jones, area director for the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

"I don't plan any additional action at the present time," Jones said.

In Michigan, he served on the boards of directors of the Chamber of Commerce and Red Cross. He also was first vice president of Junior Achievement of Midland, vice president of the Midland Area Visitors and Convention Bureau, a member of the Midland Rotary Club and Midland Foundation.

He and his wife, Ruth, have two children, David and Pamela.

Of his appointment, Spence said, "I'm delighted to follow George Irish to Midland, Texas. I've heard so much about this dynamic area and am excited about the opportunity to become part of it."

The two promotions resulted from the Hearst Corporation's recent acquisition of several newspapers from the Jefferson-Pilot Company. In addition to the Beaumont Enterprise, the purchase included the Laredo (Texas) Times, the Clearwater (Florida) Sun, and community publications in Jasper, Texas, and Hillsborough, Florida.

The acquisition brings the total number of newspapers owned by Hearst to 16 daily and 40 weekly publications, five of the daily newspapers being in Texas. The company also has major interests in magazine and book publishing as well as cable, television and radio broadcasting.

Talking to reporters about the excavation of a Bronze Age ship is Dr. George F. Bass, professor of anthropology at Texas A&M University and director of the Institute of Nautical Archaeology.

Texas A&M team excavates ship's Bronze Age artifacts

By WARREN E. LEARY AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — The oldest underwater wreck ever excavated has produced an invaluable cache of Bronze Age artifacts that cast new light on Mediterranean trade and shipbuilding at the time King Tut ruled Egypt and the city of Troy flourished in Asia Minor, scientists have announced.

The most extensive collection of Bronze Age articles ever found beneath the sea has been discovered in a cargo ship that went down off Cape Ulu Burun near the town of Kas contains a mix of cargo that gives a new view of Bronze Age commerce.

The vessel and its cargo are one of the most significant finds in underwater archeology, scientists told a news briefing Tuesday at the National Geographic Society, which is co-sponsoring the research.

Dr. George F. Bass of Texas A&M University, the chief scientist and one of the world's leading marine archeologists, said the wreck located off Cape Ulu Burun near the town of Kas contains a mix of cargo that gives a new view of Bronze Age commerce.

"I can say without hesitation that this is the most exciting and important ancient shipwreck found in the Mediterranean," he said.

The cargo ship, estimated to have been about 65 feet long, probably sank around 1400 B.C. when driven onto nearby rocks while trying to round a peninsula, Bass said.

The wreck rests in waters ranging from 145 feet to 170 feet in depth.

The craft settled to the bottom of a steep slope without capsizing and took with it a cargo of metal ingots, pottery, jars, glass, gold and ivory. These raw materials probably were destined for craftsmen and manufacturers elsewhere in the area.

The most costly item excavated so far is a gold goblet found in a nearby gully, but the most valuable find was the simple, two-handled Mycenaean Greek pottery cup located next to it that helped scientists date the wreck.

Other cargo included two dozen cobalt-blue glass ingots about seven inches in diameter and two inches thick, which probably were to be fashioned into jewelry items. These are the earliest glass ingots ever found, Bass said.

Also included was a piece of elephant tusk, carefully squared off at each end and probably set to be carved, and a hippopotamus tooth. At the time, both animals were native to Syria, from which the ship apparently picked up much of its cargo.

The underwater researchers recovered pottery of two other cultures — Cypriot and early Phoenician, also known as Canaanite. Some of the Cypriot pieces were stacked in a large storage jar and other goods were carried in Canaanite amphoras, tall rounded jars with narrow necks and bases.

Bass, who is a director of the Institute of Nautical Archaeology located at the university, speculates that the ship sailed from Syria, stopped in Cyprus, and was headed for either Greece or western Turkey.

Bass said the excavation, which he began this summer with the aid of research associate Cemal M. Pulak, is expected to last five more years and yield unprecedented details about ancient Mediterranean trade and shipbuilding.

Divers raised a stone anchor and uncovered part of the vessel's keel and planking. When compared with later designs, this revealed that Bronze Age shipbuilding techniques were still being used by the Greeks 1,000 years later.

Hijackers' claims that diplomat slain unconfirmed by U.S. officials

Associated Press

Hijackers holding a Kuwaiti airliner at Tehran's airport say the passenger they shot and killed was a U.S. diplomat. Iran's official news agency reported today. U.S. officials, however, said they could not confirm the report.

The armed hijackers commandeered the Kuwait Airways Airbus A-300 with 161 people aboard Tuesday on a flight from Kuwait to Pakistan. They diverted the plane to Tehran's Mehrabad Airport, where the shooting reportedly occurred shortly after landing.

The wounded passenger was dumped out the door of the plane, and Iran's Islamic Republic News Agency said he was declared dead upon arrival at an airport medical center.

About 70 people, mostly women passengers and a few crew members, were reported released Tuesday night and today. Kuwait Airways said 120 of the 150 passengers were Pakistanis. One of those released was a Kuwait Airways on-board security guard who was wounded during the takeover attempt and treated by a doctor among the passengers, the Kuwait News Agency reported.

IRNA said the Arabic-speaking hijackers, said to number four to six, threatened to blow up the plane if their demands "for the release of mujahedeen (fighters) and detainees in Kuwait" were not met.

The news agency, which said Iranian authorities were negotiating for the release of the remaining passengers, also said the hijackers were demanding to be allowed to take off from Tehran for an undisclosed destination.

IRNA, monitored in Cyprus, reported today: "The hijackers in their negotiations have identified the dead passenger, who was previously said to be a British national, as an American diplomat."

In Washington, State Department press duty officer Anita Stockman said the department was aware of the report, but added, "We don't have any confirmation on the identity of the slain passenger."

The State Department said at least three Americans, whom it declined to identify, were aboard the plane.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said he had seen the reports but could not confirm that an American had been killed. He said there are at least three officials from the U.S. Agency for International Development officials aboard the hijacked aircraft.

Speakes said the United States has been getting information about the hijacking through the Kuwaiti government, and said there has been no direct contact between the United States and Iran.

David Good, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait, told The Associated Press by telephone, "There's nobody who is stationed with the American Embassy in Kuwait on the flight. That I can say categorically."

Sources in Kuwait said the slain man was one of four Americans aboard the aircraft. Saadiyah Hussein, a 17-year-old Kuwaiti student among the freed passengers, said the hijackers had separated the American passengers from the others aboard.

IRNA said it was not clear whether the dead man was killed during a clash aboard the jet or whether the hijackers had begun implementing a threat to start executing American and British passengers if their demands were not met. The agency did not elaborate on the reported threat.

The Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Watan said the hijackers were demanding the release of 14 prisoners from Kuwait jails. Three of the prisoners have been sentenced to death and the rest are imprisoned for their part in the suicide truck-bomb attack against the U.S. Embassy and French Consulate in Kuwait on Dec. 12, 1983.

Reagan issues expense-cutting directives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Still undecided on how much to trim the Pentagon's military buildup, President Reagan is giving his Cabinet marching orders today for cutting spending across the spectrum of the government's domestic programs.

Administration officials asking not to be quoted by name have said that the president and his advisers have been looking at a plan that would cap spending for some programs while cutting others.

White House officials have said the president wants to reduce planned spending in the 1986 fiscal year, which begins next Oct. 1, by $42 billion in order to hold total federal outlays to the current level.

The idea is to hold the deficit, now projected to reach more than $200 billion next year, to $170 billion. Cabinet secretaries can appeal the

By DENNIS GEORGATOS
Associated Press Writer

TIJUANA, Mexico — Firefighters overcame a severe water shortage to contain a spectacular blaze that sent flames crackling through a city block, destroying four commercial buildings, authorities said today.

"The city block is gone," said Denis McNeill, a spokesman for the San Diego Fire Department, which rushed personnel and equipment to help fight the Tuesday night blaze one-half mile across the border.

AP Laserphoto

A massive fire lights up the skyline of Tijuana, Mexico, Tuesday night. A city block was destroyed.

More than 200 U.S. and Mexican firefighters battled the inferno for about six hours before it was declared contained at midnight, McNeill said. Firefighters remained to extinguish pockets of flames that continued to burn in the buildings, he said.

There were no reports of injuries among civilians, but two Tijuana firefighters were overcome by smoke.

The blaze in the heart of this border city reduced to rubble a warehouse for the Dorian's department store chain, a hotel-apartment building, and two other commercial buildings, McNeill said.

Firefighters, handicapped much of the night by a water shortage, used about a dozen tanker trucks to shuttle water to the fire from a hydrant 100 yards north of the border. At times, only a trickle of water was coming out of the fire hoses.

"Tijuana has a limited water supply," said San Diego Fire Battalion Chief Al Thomason, "and when you have a fire of this magnitude, you just need hundreds of thousands of gallons of water."

Mexican officials said about 50 employees escaped safely from the burning buildings, and dozens more people were evacuated from nearby hotels and restaurants just north of the business district.

At least seven families took refuge in a fire station, said Tijuana Fire Department Sgt. Rafael Angel Reyes.

At the height of the blaze, a thick plume of black smoke was visible five miles on the U.S. side of the border. Mexican soldiers tried to hold back thousands of people who gathered to watch the blaze. A ring of about 20 fire trucks surrounded the block and poured water onto the flames.

Two Mexican firefighters narrowly escaped injury when their ladder truck burst into flames 50 feet beneath them. Other firefighters turned their hoses onto the truck fire, which was extinguished in about two minutes.

A second Tijuana fire truck also was destroyed, according to McNeill.

Residents of neighboring apartment buildings lugged couches, stereos, television sets and other possessions into the street in case the fire spread.

Tijuana Mayor Rene Trevino, who was in the crowd watching the fire, said the cause of the blaze was unknown.

Bottled note promises two bottles

By CAM ROSSIE

MONTERREY, Mexico — It was a final shipboard fling for five young friends. In a moment of "craziness" they wrote a note promising two bottles of wine to the finder, popped it into a bottle and hurled it into the ocean.

The young men — one American, one from Mexico City and three from Monterrey — never dreamed that more than three months later members of the Canadian Navy would ask them to make good on their promise.

Mario and Felipe Salinas, all of this northern industrial city, said they met Michael Oakley of Carecreek, Ariz., and Emilio Yarte during a summer cruise near Nassau in the Bahamas.

The young men, all in their early 20s, were partying on shipdeck in the early morning hours on the last day of the cruise when, on a whim, they decided to launch a note in a Paul Masson wine bottle they had just emptied.

"To whom it may concern," the message began.

"The date is July 24, 1984, 3:15 in the morning. It is the last night of a most beautiful cruise aboard the TSS Fairwind — we are having a wonderful time. Whoever may find this bottle, we wish you a long and happy life.

"If this bottle is found by a caring and trusting soul, there will be a reward of two bottles of Paul Masson Chablis — and the gratitude of all of us."

Each person then wrote his home address.

The young men said they had forgotten about their sea message — until last week when letters on Canadian National Defense stationery started arriving at their homes.

"I thought it was navy propaganda," Velazquez told The Associated Press.

Mexico joins fight against drug imports

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico is a major supplier of illegal drugs to the United States, but the government here is making "significant improvements" in its anti-drug campaign, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin says.

Gavin said Tuesday during a news conference that Mexico is the No. 1 supplier of amphetamines and barbiturates to the United States and ranks third behind Colombia and Jamaica in supplying marijuana to Americans.

He also said 30 percent of the cocaine in the United States either is transported or manufactured in Mexico with an estimated 20 tons transported through the country annually, mainly from South America. The ambassador said he had no estimate on the amount of cocaine manufactured in the country.

Gavin also said one-third of the heroin used in the United States come from Mexico although the percentage has gone down since 1977 when 89 percent of the U.S.-consumed heroin came from Mexico.

But there are indications heroin production is on the upswing in Mexico, Gavin said, noting, "Poppy planting has increased, heroin production in Mexico will increase. We have seen an increase in poppy production."

He said the number of drug seizures has increased in recent years, but the amount being grown also has increased so that the production levels remain fairly steady. Statistics were not immediately available.

UNITED BANK has arrived.

We've arrived in more ways than one. Of course, we've arrived at our new address, 500 West Illinois, in the new United Bank Building. But we've also arrived as an important financial institution in Midland. A little over a year ago we set out to become the strongest bank in Midland, as measured in terms of capital as a percentage of total assets. We believe the capital-to-assets ratio is a key measure of a bank's strength and stability. And we've reached our goal by attracting a broad-based group of local shareholders. We've also acquired a respected group of Midlanders to serve on our board of directors.

Based on the published Reports of Condition of Midland banks dated Sept. 30, 1984, United Bank has the highest capital-to-assets ratio, at 21.05%. (Midland Reporter-Telegram, Sun, Oct. 28, 1984). Some selected comparisons:

Bank	Capital-to-Assets
United Bank	21.05%
Republic-First National	11.05%
First City National	6.76%
Texas American Bank	5.63%
Clay-DeSta National Bank	5.62%

We may be a new bank but you've known us a long time.

Look us over. Discover what we mean by "one-on-one" banking. Get to know our key people. Most of them have been part of Midland's financial community for a decade or two. Talk to Wayne Merritt, Don Jones, Scott Lovett, or Wendell Hoover. We also invite you to talk with any of our directors. If you're in the oil business in Midland, you'll know most of them.

Grenada wants troops

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Grenada's new prime minister, on his first day in office, wrote to President Reagan asking that U.S. troops remain on the island nation until its police force can take over security duties.

Herbert Blaize, a 66-year-old attorney who led Grenada in the 1960s while it was a British colony, was sworn in Tuesday after his moderate New National Party swept to power in elections Monday.

A national holiday was declared today to celebrate the installation of an elected government. It replaces an interim council established following the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada in October 1983, six days after Prime Minister Maurice Bishop was killed in a bloody power struggle within his leftist government.

The New National Party won 14 of Parliament's 15 seats, according to unofficial results. The winner of the 15th seat said he would resign because of what he charged were electoral irregularities.

The Reagan administration, which was officially neutral, favored Blaize, as did U.S. investors and island businessmen.

Rebels reject proposal

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The leader of El Salvador's main leftist coalition has rejected a government offer to participate in next year's local elections, saying "elections will not solve El Salvador's problems."

The rejection came after the rebels killed 45 government troops and wounding 35 at El Salto, 30 miles southeast of the capital, according to the army press office. The rebels' radio claimed 60 soldiers were killed, 43 wounded and 43 captured.

No rebel casualties were given, but correspondents said it was the worst beating the army has taken in six months.

NATO meeting resumes

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO defense ministers today resumed a meeting devoted to upgrading conventional arms supplies and correcting what one U.S. official called a "long-term deficiency of the alliance."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger was among the 14 ministers attending the third and final day of the conference.

The ministers agreed Tuesday to spend $7.85 billion over the next six years on equipment and facilities in Europe to be used by U.S. reinforcement troops in case of war, NATO officials announced.

U.S. professor convicted

LONDON (AP) — A jury has convicted an American university professor of beating and strangling his wife in a London apartment. The prosecution charged the killer lay in bed with the body until the couple's daughters went to school.

Jerry L. Kasperek, 45, a Ball State University faculty member, was sentenced to three years in prison after the jury on Tuesday ruled 10-2 in favor of convicting him of manslaughter.

After an eight-day trial in Old Bailey Central Criminal Court, the jury rejected a charge that Kasperek murdered his wife, Carol Ann, 42.

Judge Richard Lowry delivered the sentence, which Kasperek was to begin serving immediately. It was not known if Kasperek would appeal.

Betancur visits Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Colombian President Belisario Betancur arrived Tuesday for an official, four-day visit during which he will discuss the Central American situation with President Miguel de la Madrid.

Both are leaders of the four-nation Contadora group trying to promote a peace treaty for the troubled region. Their meetings here come as a third Contadora president, Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela, is in Washington for a meeting with President Reagan.

Winning basketball coach gets vote for president

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Marshall University basketball coach Rick Huckabay fell short by millions of votes in his unannounced bid for the White House.

The official Cabell County canvass of the Nov. 6 election showed that Huckabay received one write-in vote for president. The coach's team won the Southern Conference championship last year, but that apparently was not enough for Huckabay to win the really big one.

Art work of 'The Texas Kid' created from things in nature

DALLAS (AP) — Willard Watson didn't expect to be an artist.

"We had everything in my family," Watson said. "Pimps, gamblers, fry cooks, a robber who went to the pen and came out a preacher, but we never had any artists, no artists until me."

Willard Watson is a 61-year-old, Dallas-based folk artist who calls himself "The Texas Kid."

Watson recently addressed an audience in the Brown-Lupton Gallery in the Texas Christian University student center.

The Brown-Lupton Gallery recently exhibited a selection of work Watson has done as "The Texas Kid."

The title of the show, "Yard of the Month" referred to the first place where Watson's work was exhibited for the public: the front yard of his house at 6614 Kenwell St. in Dallas. That was in the early 1970s.

Zealous yard inspectors, deputized by the city of Dallas to whiff out unconventionality on the front-yard lawn, declared Watson's work debris and tried to make Watson do his Dallas duty and conform his yard to those of his neighbors.

The Dallas yard inspectors were perplexed to discover that the objects in Watson's front yard were works of art. What had fooled the inspectors was the fact that much of Watson's work was made from materials supplied him by nature or happenstance: a bois d'arc stump, a hunk of plaster shaped somewhat like the Venus de Milo and sprayed gold, a pickup truck "customized" into a rolling mini-kingdom, a rock in whose shape Watson had seen — what? A prehistoric lizard? A totemic being?

The Dallas yard inspectors didn't discover for themselves that Watson's front yard was full of art. They had to be told — by art critics, by public television, by collectors and museums who have paid increasingly higher prices for Watson's constructions, and most of all by pop artists Bob Wade and Clara Frost, owner of what is now The Smart Art Gallery in Dallas.

By 1980, the work of "The Texas Kid" was appearing in galleries in New York, California, Houston and New Orleans. The Dallas arts community has grown so fond of Watson that last year, when Watson found himself flat on his back in the hospital with emphysema and double pneumonia, Dallas artists and gallery owners staged an auction to help pay his medical bills.

"Don't never give in to dis-encouragement," Watson told his listeners in the Brown-Lupton Gallery as color slides of his work flashed on the wall in front of him.

"If I'd gone my own way I'd have been an artist sooner, and maybe I'd have gone farther. But I didn't go the way I wanted. I did what other people expected me to do: I was a mechanic, a handyman, an upholsterer..."

"At first, a few years ago, I made things and gave them away. Then I began to sell them for $50 or $100. And just last month, a fancy man paid me $1,000 for a work of mine. I think of the first giveaways and low prices as advertising," Watson said.

He offered some advice to parents:

"When I was growing up, people — my parents, my aunts, the school — all tried to tell me what I had to be. They never were gentle and told me what I might be. So be a little gentle with your children and with yourselves — don't insist too hard." Watson said and looked around him. Two students sitting in the gallery nodded.

As for his art, Watson said the raw materials have to mellow with time and thought.

"When I get something I'm going to work with — a stump, a rock, some Indian feathers, a tree branch — I don't just whomp, go to work on it. I look at it. I get to know it. I take a long time, months, years, maybe. Then I paint in the eyes..."

"People ask me why I don't give my work names and titles," Watson continued. "That's because I may see one thing in it and you may see another and I don't want stop you from seeing what's in it for you to see."

"Art," Watson concluded. "Art is beholden to the person who looks at it."

U.S. tried to destroy credibility of Nicaraguan election, report says

AUSTIN (AP) — While the Nicaraguan government tried to conduct an open election last month, the Reagan administration used military and political tactics to undermine and discredit the balloting, says a report by a group of Latin American scholars.

Richard N. Sinkin, a University of Texas professor and director of the Latin American Studies Association, said the association this week printed a detailed report concerning the Nov. 4 election in Nicaragua.

The report was being published in Forum, the association newsletter received by 3,000 subscribers worldwide.

The report asserts that Sandinista government officials conducted honest and open elections with significant participation by opposition parties.

"In the six-month period leading up to the election, the Reagan administration used a combination of diplomatic, economic, and military instruments in a systematic attempt to undermine the Nicaraguan electoral process and to destroy its credibility in the eyes of the world," the report charges.

Although the report criticizes the U.S. role in the elections, it also takes the Sandinista officials to task for their press censorship and use of government employees and equipment in the campaign.

"It seems clear that the FSLN took substantial advantage of its incumbent position and, in some ways, abused it," the report says.

Sinkin, a member of a delegation that observed the election, said the group spoke to several opposition leaders who were encouraged by U.S. diplomats to boycott the election.

"We found a barely concealed effort by the U.S. officials in Nicaragua to undermine the election," Sinkin said.

Fifteen professors of Latin American studies, including Sinkin and UT professor Michael E. Conroy, visited Nicaragua from Oct. 28 to Nov. 5 at their own expense, toured areas where rebels were fighting the government, and interviewed government and opposition leaders before the nationwide election.

"I think the consensus of the delegation was the elections were fair, honest, they represented a broad political spectrum, and the Sandinistas did everything possible to create a favorable electoral climate," Sinkin said.

"The main goal of the U.S. government was to prevent opposition parties from participating in the election, first by openly urging them not to and secondly, as the report indicated, there was pressure put on them. Thirdly, it has been alleged that substantial sums of money were offered to candidates and campaign workers to withdraw from the elections," he said.

The report notes that seven political parties were on the ballot. Three were to the right of the Frente Sandinista de Liberacion Nacional (FSLN) — the Sandinista party — and three were to the left of it.

The report says government officials lived up to promises to give opposition parties the resources to campaign against the Sandinista party, which controls the military, police, television, press, and purse strings in Nicaragua.

"The opposition leaders with whom we spoke indicated that they did, in fact, receive their legal allotments of campaign funds; were given access to paper, paint, gasoline, and other necessary campaign material; and were given their legal allotment of free media time," the report says.

The Sandinista party, which has controlled the country since the 1979 overthrow of dictator Anastasio Somoza, won 87 percent of the 1.1 million votes cast, the report says.

Doctor translates rules which govern Iranians

CLEVELAND (AP) — A Cleveland-area physician devoted three years to translating into English the Ayatollah Sayyed Ruhollah Mousavi Khomeini's complex and strict rules governing all aspects of life for most Iranians.

The doctor says his motivation came primarily from his perceived absence of a clear understanding among Americans of Iranian society.

But there was another motivation, one he called deeply personal, stemming from his years in Iran when he said he was persecuted because he would not recant his Baha'i faith.

Some 3,000 rules make up Khomeini's "Resaleh Towzih al-Masael," meaning "A Clarification of Questions."

The translator is a doctor in his 40s who uses the pseudonym J. Borujerdi — derived from the Iranian city of Borujerd — to protect his identity. He fears that relatives in Iran might be in danger if his real name is known.

Borujerdi's Baha'i religion was founded by the Persian Mirza Husain Ali, known as Baha'u'llah, in the latter part of the 19th century. Baha'is constitute less than 1 percent of Iran's population, and are persecuted by the Shi'ite majority who live by Khomeini's rules, Borujerdi says.

The 432-page book is considered to be the first complete translation from Persian of the religious "purity code" which guides the Iranian Shi'ite sect of Islam.

"The book shows with what closed-mindedness and what preoccupation they look at religion," the translator says.

The ayatollahs, or Shi'ite religious leaders, during their religious history have compiled rules for life. Khomeini, as the current leader, adapts those rules as he sees fit, and his followers must live according to the rules, Borujerdi says.

The ayatollahs order the right and wrong of things, from the very elementary, like how to wash your hands, to the most sophisticated things, like transplantation of a cardiac valve," Borujerdi said. "About a third of the book has to do with women and their standards of life. A good many (rules) have to do with divorce. "He (Khomeini) gives gradations, from persuasion to coercion, including the killing of the person not carrying out religious duty. If you see somebody is doing a sin, you as an individual have to react. This tells you how to conduct yourself, from frowning to that person and not answering his greeting to actually going and killing."

Persecution and killing, under certain conditions, are condoned by the ayatollah's laws, Borujerdi says.

"The killing of Baha'is is done through these mechanisms. The principle that this is done comes from ordering the right, and barring the wrong," he said. "They are considered apostates."

Khomeini was first recognized as one of six grand ayatollahs of Iranian Shi'ite Islam in 1962. He was forced into exile in 1962 because of his opposition to the Shah. While in exile, he emerged as a leader of forces which eventually overthrew Iran's Pahlavi regime.

Borujerdi left Iran in 1978, not long before Khomeini returned in January 1979 to become absolute leader in an Islamic government. "I could see what was coming," Borujerdi said. "The hardest hit community has been the Baha'is."

"As I try to inform the public about what has happened in Iran, I realize that the people here have no knowledge about who is a typical Iranian. I challenge you to read this (translation) and compare how a typical person here looks at the world and how an Iranian does. There is a vast difference."

He said a lack of understanding by Americans may have contributed to the national frustration in 1979 and 1980 during the hostage situation.

"International law would dictate that you don't take hostages," Borujerdi said. "But Iran is a nation that lives according to Shi'ite religious laws."

Borujerdi said he had made certain that his opinions were kept apart from what he emphasizes in a literal translation. Six scholars fluent in Persian, none of whom is Baha'i, studied and approved the translation before it was published, he said.

Florida's Seminoles 'nation within nation'

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Dan and Leota's Luncheonette, a popular eatery on the Seminole Indian reservation, still offers traditional fry bread and sofkee, but most local patrons prefer tacos and burgers.

The small luncheonette would probably go out of business, predicts part-owner Dan Osceola, if it didn't cater to contemporary appetites on the reservation.

Near the restaurant are a few other reminders of the past: some remaining chickees, or thatched huts; a handful of colorful totem poles, and some traditional Seminole artwork.

But the chickees, once the Seminoles' primary living quarters, are now used mainly to store lawn mowers or swimming-pool equipment. Some of the totem poles help advertise low-cost cigarettes. And the artwork either graces tribal offices or is sold at souvenir shops and flea markets.

"The Seminole Indians have clearly entered the 20th century," said Dr. John K. Mahon, an expert on Florida Indians at the University of Florida.

The Seminole Tribe of Florida was established in 1957 and operated on a federally subsidized annual budget of less than $10,000.

Since then, it has evolved into a prosperous "nation within a nation," as Chief James Billie is fond of saying, with several moneymaking businesses, modern medical clinics, educational programs, a gymnasium and even its own newspaper and insurance department.

The Seminoles have become shrewd businessmen, taking advantage of their status as citizens of a federal reservation which allows them to bypass some state and county laws.

Profits from the tribe's land-leasing and farming businesses are expected to reach a combined total of $1.3 million for the 1984-85 fiscal year, according to Seminole comptroller Ted Boyd.

But the biggest independent sources of revenue are the Seminoles' bingo halls in Hollywood, Tampa and Brighton — where the unrestricted pot far surpasses any church bingo game — and sales from the retail outlets offering tax-free cigarettes, according to Boyd.

Profits from the two were expected to top $7 million in fiscal 1983-84, he said. And every man, woman and child in the Florida tribe was expected to receive an annual dividend check from those profits, he added.

"We're not quite economically independent, but I think we're on the road to achieving it," said Barbara Doctor, an editor at the biweekly Seminole Tribune, who also performs in alligator wrestling shows in her spare time.

Unemployment among the Seminoles is still high compared with other minorities. The jobless rate for Indians on the Hollywood reservation is 17 percent, compared with 11.8 percent for blacks and 8.9 percent for Hispanics nationwide, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. The number of Seminoles in Hollywood living below the poverty level is at 27.5 percent, the bureau said.

However, the median annual income per household is $12,227, according to the bureau.

"I think the Seminoles (in the past five to seven years) have been able to make a better income, probably comparable with average Americans," said Seminole businessman Joe Dan Osceola. "The tribe as a whole also has made a tremendous stride toward having better housing and better medical care."

"I remember before the tribe was organized in 1957 that the Indians were back in poverty-stricken areas. The white man had forced us there."

White encroachment and the Seminole wars of the 1800s eventually pushed the Indians — many of whom had migrated to Florida in the mid-1700s from the Creek confederation of tribes in Georgia, South Carolina and Alabama — into the Everglades. There, they gained a reputation as a tenacious and elusive people.

"It was really a black mark in the history of this country. It was genocide..." said Joe Dan Osceola, a self-described history buff.

Although the Seminoles never surrendered or signed a peace treaty, the population was nearly decimated.

Not until 27 years ago did Indians living in the Dania, Big Cypress and Brighton reservation groups form the Seminole Tribe of Florida and a formal tribal government now based in Hollywood.

The official register of Florida Seminoles is now about 1,500 people, according to the 1980 U.S. Census report. Most live on the five Florida reservations — 480 acres in Hollywood; 35,000 acres at Brighton, west of Lake Okeechobee; 10 acres near Immokalee; 8.2 acres near Tampa and the 70,000-acre Big Cypress reservation in Hendry, Broward and Palm Beach counties.

About 6,000 Seminoles also live in Oklahoma.

Texas Christmas tree farmers planting more Virginia pines

HOUSTON (AP) — They're called Virginia pines, but local tree growers hope to find them in several Texas homes this Christmas.

Most Texas Christmas tree lots are forested with blue spruces, Scotch pines and noble firs from the northern and northwestern states. But the Virginia pine grows well in East Texas and is gaining acceptance by customers.

Noel Peterson of Cornelius Nurseries Inc., a major Houston retailer, said the Virginia pine is "real popular" and that his nursery sells living specimens in pots.

Some Christmas tree retailers refuse to handle the Texas-grown tree because it has a reputation for fading quickly after being cut.

However, James Chandler, a Texas A&M University forester, said the Virginia pine makes a good Christmas tree.

"If properly taken care of," he said, "it will stay fresh through the season."

Natural trees have only about a third of the Christmas tree market.

Members of the Texas Christmas Tree Growers Association expect to sell about 207,000 trees this season, grabbing a growing share of the state's estimated market of 2 to 4 million trees.

Chandler said Texas growers have an advantage in the Lone Star State because they don't have to cut their trees as early or ship them as far as growers in northern states.

Many Texas Christmas tree farms market their product by permitting customers to "choose and cut" their own.

This eliminates transportation and wholesaling expenses and enables customers to get fresher trees at lower costs.

Chandler said there are 55 choose-and-cut farmers in East Texas.

One of these, Ed Smith of Houston, said he prefers to deal directly with customers when selling his trees.

"You get only 40 cents on the dollar if the trees are wholesaled," said Smith.

Smith said the Christmas trees sell for about $3 per foot in height. He planted about 7,000 seedlings on 20 acres of land near Houston. The Virginia pines grow at the rate of about one foot a year and can be harvested about every six years.

Lanny Dreeseon, a Texas A&M forester, said that although most Texas growers are raising Yule trees only as a sideline, Christmas tree farming requires a heavy investment and lots of work. It's not just a hobby for a weekend farmer, said the professor.

He said the trees must be sprayed to control weeds and insects, and each tree has to be pruned two to three times a year to achieve the proper shape for a Christmas tree. He said it takes an initial investment of about $4,000 an acre to start a tree farm.

"I can see the market potential is quite good for Texas trees," said Dreeseon, but he added that because of the cost, "we are not encouraging a lot of new growers."

A worker unloads Christmas trees at a Houston wholesale tree lot. Some of the trees are Texas grown, but most come from northern and northwestern states. Texas Christmas tree growers expect to sell 207,000 trees of the 2 to 4 million sold in the state this holiday season.

People locked in vault released unharmed; Robber breaks leg

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Twenty-three people locked themselves inside a vault during a botched bank robbery, but no one was hurt except the alleged gunman, who apparently broke his leg while trying to flee, authorities said.

The 4½-hour incident ended peacefully Tuesday when the suspect took his gun apart and rolled himself out of a bank on a wheeled office chair and into the arms of police, police said. Minutes later, the 11 employees and 12 customers of the Security Pacific National Bank branch were led out of the vault to safety.

The 23 were taken to a police command center to be questioned by FBI agents, authorities said. Many were teary-eyed, but none had been harmed, police said.

William Ritter Wrapp, 42, of Oceanside, a former Marine sergeant, was booked for investigation of armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, then sent to the jail ward of the University of California at Irvine Medical Center, said San Clemente police Officer William Smith.

Wrapp apparently broke his leg trying to escape after a botched bank robbery, authorities said.

As police sharpshooters stood by, Wrapp left the bank in a wheeled office chair. He was lifted into a wheelchair and taken away.

The 23 people trapped in the bank had locked themselves in the vault behind a steel door and apparently hadn't been held hostage.

"They weren't hostages, but then they weren't free to leave either," police Lt. Al Ehlow said. "I didn't hear anybody say they were threatened."

One bank employee who didn't enter the 11-by-13-foot vault hid from the gunman and later escaped while a police negotiator talked with Wrapp, police said.

Negotiations were hampered by telephone problems, and Wrapp finally called the Orange County Sheriff's Department to say he wanted to surrender, Ehlow said.

When police spoke to Wrapp by phone, he indicated he didn't want to harm the people inside. "I have a broken right leg and I will not hurt any of the people in the bank," Wrapp told a hostage negotiator, Ehlow said.

Group charges CIA with 'wholesale violations' of law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing affidavits from Nicaraguans who say they have witnessed abuses by U.S.-backed rebels, a civil liberties group is charging that the CIA's covert war and its controversial rebel manual have led to "wholesale violations" of U.S. law and human rights.

In testimony submitted to the House Intelligence Committee for its hearing on the manual, the Center for Constitutional Rights cited dozens of cases in which rebels allegedly raped, tortured and murdered civilians. The charges are similar to ones made by the leftist Nicaraguan government and denied by rebel leaders.

Meanwhile, the House panel today planned to resume its closed-door hearings on the 90-page CIA manual, which advises the rebels on the "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" Nicaraguan officials.

The panel had been scheduled to hear from CIA Director William J. Casey and other top agency officials on Tuesday, but that testimony was postponed until today so committee members could review a report prepared by the panel's staff.

The committee has been investigating whether the manual violated a longstanding ban on U.S. participation in assassinations and a 1982 law barring the CIA from trying to overthrow the leftist Nicaraguan government.

A report last month by the CIA inspector general concluded that the manual did not violate U.S. law or the assassination ban, but did reveal "instances of poor judgment and lapses of oversight at low levels within the agency." President Reagan has argued that the booklet did not advocate assassinations.

As a result of the CIA's internal review, five mid- and junior-level CIA officers were disciplined, with several complaining they were being made "scapegoats" to protect senior CIA officials. The manual's author, a CIA contract employee, known by his pseudonym John Kirkpatrick, was allowed to resign.

The Center for Constitutional Rights, which has opposed the covert action, contended in its prepared testimony that the manual violated the 1982 law barring an attempted overthrow and the assassination ban. The New York-based group also claimed that rebel atrocities occurred before and after the manual was written in October 1983.

The group said the rebels, whom Reagan has hailed as "freedom fighters," could be "more accurately described as terrorists or death squad members."

Pentagon-funded quake experts seek ways to gauge nuclear tests

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Pentagon-funded earthquake experts are seeking better ways to measure the size of nuclear weapons tests to discourage cheating on future test ban treaties and help determine if the Russians are violating current limits.

"If a treaty were to be signed, we want to be able to verify it," said Bob Blandford, program manager for test ban verification research at the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, or DARPA.

"Even if we don't sign a treaty, it's good to be able to monitor the size of nuclear explosions," Blandford said.

Earthquake researchers who met Tuesday in San Francisco at an American Geophysical Union session on "nuclear seismology" presented highly technical papers on their efforts, which include:

— Making more accurate estimates of underground nuclear bomb explosion yields. Precise measurements could help settle debate on whether the Soviets are violating the informally recognized, unratified treaty limiting test detonations to 150 kilotons, said Tom Bache, Blandford's predecessor who is a consultant in San Diego.

— Improving the ability to distinguish underground weapons blasts from real earthquakes or earthquakes triggered by nuclear tests. That would help prevent cheating if the U.S. and Soviet governments sign a comprehensive test ban treaty, the researchers said.

A month-long experiment is under way in which the United States, the Soviet Union and 37 other nations are exchanging seismic records of earthquakes and underground nuclear tests, making it easier to check compliance with disarmament agreements.

Blandford said he would make no official statements for the Defense Department, but pointed to news accounts that cited Pentagon documents suggesting the Soviets have violated the 150-kiloton limit.

"There is evidence for serious concern," Bache said.

However, seismic records of Soviet nuclear tests reveal no credible evidence the Soviets have violated the 150-kiloton test limit since it took effect in 1978, said Lynn R. Sykes, director of Columbia University's Lamont Doherty Geological Observatory. The Soviets did detonate two huge weapons with a yield exceeding 500 kilotons in 1974 and 1975, said the co-author of Sykes' study, Graham Wiggins of Boston University.

The problem researchers face is, "There are lots of unknowns in our understanding of seismic waves near the source of earthquakes or explosions," allowing both U.S. and Soviet officials to claim treaty violations by the other side, said Ken Olsen of Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico, where much U.S. weapons research is conducted.

Phalangists sought revenge, reporter says

NEW YORK (AP) — Lebanese Phalangists called for revenge at the funeral of their assassinated leader the day before members of the group massacred Palestinians in Beirut, a Time correspondent testified in Ariel Sharon's libel suit.

In his fifth day on the stand Tuesday, correspondent David Halevy described a "very emotional" scene at Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel's funeral in the Phalangist village of Bikfaya, where hundreds of Phalangists chanted "revenge, revenge."

The next day, Sept. 16, 1982, the slayings of the refugees by the Christian Phalangists took place at the Sabra and Shatila camps.

Sharon, the former Israeli defense minister, alleges in his $50 million libel suit against Time Inc. that a Time magazine story accused him of encouraging the massacre by saying he discussed with Phalangist leaders the need for revenge after the Gemayel assassination.

Now his country's industry and commerce minister, Sharon has testified he never discussed revenge "with any Lebanese." Sharon testified that he knew the Phalangists were entering the camps, but he didn't fear a massacre because they had been told only to hunt for Palestine Liberation Organization members.

Gemayel was killed in a bomb explosion on Sept. 14, 1982. Describing the aftermath of the assassination, Halevy quoted the slain leader's brother, Amin Gemayel, now the president of Lebanon, as saying at the funeral, "We will avenge you, my brother, Bashir."

Sharon was forced to resign as defense minister after an official Israeli inquiry held he and other Israeli leaders bore "indirect responsibility" for the refugee killings.

Another summit

Whenever a summit meeting of the heads of government in the United States and Great Britain takes place, the life of an old and honorable alliance is renewed. So it will be when President Ronald Reagan and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher confer at Camp David in Maryland Dec. 22.

The term "summit meeting" first became fashionable when Franklin Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin sat down together at the Black Sea resort of Yalta in 1945. Since then the term has been used over and over in the public prints and in political circles, whenever heads of state or sub-heads of state engage in face-to-face dialogue.

Summit talk has been making the headlines all over the place in the past few days. It arose with the announcement that Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko would meet soon with the American Secretary of State, George P. Shultz. Then came the possibility of a Middle East summit, as Israel's Prime Minister Shimon Peres invited Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak to hold a conference. Jordan's King Hussein went to Egypt only this week to confer with government officials.

History can be made at these summit sessions, as the world learned when Egypt's Anwar el-Sadat made that historic decision to talk with Israel's Menachem Begin. Of course, nothing so dramatic is likely to happen at Camp David on Dec. 22, but conversations between Mrs. Thatcher and Mr. Reagan will help to strengthen the Atlantic community.

On the agenda are relations between East and West in general, and specifically the differences between the United States and the Soviet Union. Prospects for renewed arms control certainly will be discussed, as will the economic summit meeting in Bonn in May.

What would be surprising is if the two heads of the Western democracies did not engage in a little private conversation about UNESCO, from which both nations have threatened to withdraw if drastic changes are not made.

Whatever is said or done, all Americans and all Britons should be pleased that Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher, despite inevitable differences, are continuing their friendly working relationship. What this summit meeting means is that the alliance which has endured so long, will continue to endure.

The Baghdad barrier

Every time the United States shores up relations with a nation in the Middle East, it shores up hopes for peace and stability in that troubled part of the world. Thus it is with the resumption of diplomatic relations with Iraq.

The barrier between Baghdad and Washington has existed since 1967, when Israel won military victories over Egypt, Syria and Jordan. The Baghdad barrier came down the other day after a meeting between Tariq Aziz, Iraq's deputy prime minister as well as foreign minister, President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz. Full diplomatic ties have been restored.

The action inevitably led to speculation that the United States was taking a pro-Baghdad stand in the Iraq-Iran war, but the State Department quickly denied this. A policy of neutrality will remain, officials said.

What the drawing together does say, and very clearly, is that the Iraqi government has pulled away from the radical bloc of Arab nations. However slight this seeming shift may at first appear to be, in the long run it could be truly significant.

Headed for a crash

As a people, there is a part of us that seeks to bring order out of chaos, to till the land and build structures that will stand long after we are gone as testimony to the existence of a great civilization. And there is a part of us that likes demolition derbies.

Both Parts 1 and 2 were gratified over the weekend by the staged, bloodless crash of a Boeing jetliner carrying 75 dummies and a lot of scientific equipment. "This will be an important experiment that could go a long way toward making airliners safer," said Part 1. "It may help us determine a means of avoiding the fires that almost always follow a crash, and it will provide us with a wealth of other scientific information on what happens in airplane accidents."

"You bet," said Part 2. "Very important; could be a breakthrough — now let's get going and crash that plane."

After some delays caused by problems with the remote control apparatus, the crash came off on Saturday. It was witnessed by the secretary of transportation, 200 VIPs, aerospace industry officials and 40 journalists. It was the lead story on network news, where it was shown several times and then several times more there she comes, banking in, lower ... lower ... KABLOOIE! in slow motion. The next day it was on the front pages of the newspapers. Whatever the results (and in time they could prove to be important), as a scientific experiment it got a lot more coverage than something involving Bunsen burners or computer simulations.

This week a man in Los Angeles, unhappy with his Cadillac, plans to hoist the car on a crane to a height of 12 feet, and drop it as "a general statement against General Motors."

"Could be an important development in the relationship between consumers and manufacturers," says Part 1.

"Who do you think you're kidding?" says Part 2. "Now let's drop that Cadillac."

Ky named in crime probe

WASHINGTON — To be the victim of a Mike Wallace inquisition can be a disconcerting experience, as I had the misfortune to discover earlier this year.

CBS's lord high inquisitor pronounced one of my reports a dud. Now evidence has come to light that shows it was Wallace who produced the real dud. While I wait for him to acknowledge parentage, here are the details:

A year ago, I broke the story that Vietnamese gangsters were extorting money from "hard-working, law-abiding Vietnamese refugees through terror and intimidation." The gangsters, I reported, "are believed to be directed by former South Vietnamese generals."

I quoted from one police report, which identified the "godfather" of the criminal organization as Nguyen Cao Ky, the flamboyant former prime minister of South Vietnam. I also published Ky's vociferous denial issued by a spokeswoman who said there was "no truth" to the allegation.

Then along came Mike Wallace on a search-and-destroy mission for the CBS television show "60 Minutes." He spent a few weeks checking into a story that my associates, Donald Goldberg and Corky Johnson, had investigated for several months.

As a courtesy from one reporter to another, I directed Wallace to the Arizona task force that had linked Ky to the Vietnamese underworld. My office offered to make the arrangements for Wallace to get a copy of the task force's report.

Not long afterward, on an otherwise pleasant Sunday evening in March, Wallace jabbed a needle into my balloon. He showed three on-camera interviews with law enforcement officials. He also interviewed Ky, who had refused to talk to me unless I paid him. All of them pook-pooked my story.

Wallace disparaged the Arizona crime report. With a deepening frown and a short blast from his bassoon, he said his sources "either had no information on Ky's involvement in organized crime, or they dismissed the Arizona report that Anderson cites as unreliable."

I protested to CBS that "police in several cities had corroborated the report." In fact, my associates had spoken to police sources in a dozen cities. But Robert Chandler, a senior vice president of CBS News, wrote back, "I have seen nothing that challenges the accuracy of (Wallace's) report."

What Chandler couldn't see was later emblazoned across the country; it has been in plain sight since October. Yet apparently Chandler still can't see it; at least he hasn't acknowledged it. So let me point it out to him:

Both Chandler and Wallace should read the Oct. 26, 1984, edition of The New York Times. They'll find a two-column headline that declares: "Witness Asserts Ky Heads Vietnamese Gangs in U.S." The story, which runs more than 1,000 words, is hard to miss. Here's what it reports:

The President's Commission on Organized Crime alleges that Vietnamese gangs operate in 13 states. One of the middle-echelon gang leaders, testifying from behind a screen guarded by a dozen federal marshals, identified Nguyen Cao Ky as the top boss.

"Were you told by a superior that he was the leader?" the witness was asked.

"Yes, the information was that everyone should know that Ky was the leader," the witness testified. He later added that in Vietnamese communities "everyone knows" that Ky headed the crime organization.

According to the Times account, "the witness said the gangs committed murders, robberies and extortion and trafficked in marijuana." Besides Ky, the witness said former South Vietnamese army generals and officers were leaders in the organization that controlled the gangs.

The witness confirmed many other details that Wallace had condemned me for publishing, but which have now bubble-gummed in his face.

Sources close to the crime commission said the witness is credible and has supplied other reliable information.

Footnote: Ky has continued to deny that he is connected with the Vietnamese underworld. He acknowledged to the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner that he is called "godfather" by his people. But the reason, he said, is because he "helps people in the Vietnamese community."

STRICTLY PERSONAL: Why isn't everyone jumping for joy at the prospect of further declines in oil prices?

Well, consumers are. But the worry warts in the Reagan administration — who get paid enough so they don't have to fret about the cost of gasoline or heating oil — have managed to find a dark lining to the silver cloud. They're afraid falling oil prices will hurt not just the Arab sheiks, but two other groups that most of us shed no tears over: domestic oilmen and the bankers who lent them money.

Many bankers, especially in the Southwest, made energy loans in recent years based on the giddy assumption that oil prices would go from $41 a barrel to $80. Instead, the greed of the oil producers brought a worldwide glut and a drop in prices to around $27 — and falling.

"All sectors of the oil industry have reason to fear a price break," warns an eyes-only report by federal bank regulators. "Certain producers are in particularly precarious positions. These include field equipment and service companies as well as independent refiners."

The bankers also face trouble from international loans to countries that depend for their economic well-being — indeed, their very survival — on their oil sales. So when you buy that bargain gasoline, or smile over your lower home-heating bill, try to reserve a crocodile tear or two for the oilmen and the bankers.

Book documents overtaking

The first and most important battle of the new Congress will be over tax policy. Though President Reagan is firmly on record as being opposed to a tax increase, congressional advocates of higher taxes plan a major fight to attain their objective. And there is the danger that some advocates of tax simplification inside the administration may use this goal as a kind of legislative Trojan horse in order to impose new taxes on the American people.

Already there is a vast hue and cry from liberal pundits that tax increases cannot be avoided. They are discussing the federal deficit problem in "the sky is falling" terms, and some otherwise responsible members of Congress may fall for this line.

The role of the American business community in this congressional battle will be very important. Many congressmen will be waiting for signals from business as to how to approach the tax issue.

One prominent businessman recently gave me his views on the tax battle that is shaping up and business approaches to it. He wrote: "I find it incredible that some reputable business organizations are so enthusiastically fanning the flames of hysteria about deficits and even volunteering to accept tax increases as the solution to the problem. In the first place, we have had the recent experience of TEFRA (Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act) where even the President got taken in by this patently false argument, and found that his promised $3 of spending cuts for a dollar of added revenue turned out to be 18 cents of cuts and thus 82 cents of additional cost to the private sector.

"With more of a historical perspective, we have seen for the last 50 years a federal government whose revenues steadily rose, but which nevertheless continued to spend more than it took in, to the net effect that the national debt rose by more than a trillion dollars over this period. It is scientifically irrational in view of the evidence at hand, to believe that increasing revenues would result in lower deficits. Certainly the electorate doesn't believe it. Furthermore the voters are emphatically rejecting any presumptions by professional or government bodies that they know best what is good for the voter. He intends to make his own choices.

"Any efforts at this time by business groups to support tax increases to reduce the deficit are therefore likely to be counterproductive. Our efforts should be confined to the task of achieving spending cuts in accord with the mandate of those who pay the taxes."

Certainly, it makes no sense to argue for higher taxes when Congress has not used the opportunity it has to end wasteful public spending. The Grace Commission cited more than 2,000 places in the budget where spending cuts could be made.

Green Hill Publishers in Ottawa, Illinois, has published a timely and useful paperback entitled "A Taxpayer Survey of The Grace Commission Report." It's a practical guide to spending reduction, and every citizen who is concerned about public policy would benefit from reading it. It should be must reading for the new Congress. Americans are over-taxed, not undertaxed. This paperback fully documents this truth.

It's not easy being a wimp!

Whether we want to admit it or not there are serious emotional problems in the new man-woman relationships.

Peter Gastonrough, a young friend, asked me a very strange question the other day. "Do you think I'm a wimp?"

"I don't believe so. Why do you ask?"

"My girlfriend thinks I am."

"Why does she think that?"

"Because she says I'm indecisive and I don't know what she wants."

"Did you ask her what she wanted?"

"Yes, and she said if I didn't know what she wanted then I must be a wimp."

"You have a problem. Do you have any idea of the way she wants you to behave?"

"I think she wants me to be strong and assertive and masculine."

"Have you tried it?"

"Every time I do, she says I don't treat her as an equal. She maintains the days of pushing women around are over. She wants me to respect her feelings."

"Have you told her you do?"

"Yes, and then she calls me a wimp."

"Are you sure this is the girl for you?"

"We're very much in love, but there is a lot more going on than I bargained for. It's not easy being a man today," he said.

"We're all aware of that. Perhaps you should tell her your feelings and the problems you have satisfying her."

"If I told her my feelings, she would think I was a weak person."

"Well, she already thinks you're a wimp, so you really don't have too much to lose."

"I could lose her respect."

"How did you get in this mess in the first place?"

"I think it had something to do with consciousness raising. When we first met she said I was nothing but a macho jock, and if I didn't change my attitude she'd never see me again. So I made an effort to change. When she wanted to do something, we did it. When I wanted to do something, I left the decision to her. At first she liked the role I was playing, but pretty soon she got ticked off and asked why she had to make all the decisions for both of us."

"That could have been a signal. Women may pretend they like it, but they're much happier when someone makes a decision for them."

"I'm aware of that. But I spoiled her. Now when I make a decision, she gets mad and says it's only fair that since we're partners she should have as much of a say as I do."

"Maybe she said it but didn't mean it."

"I asked her if she really meant what she was saying, and she told me she was tired of always being questioned."

"On the basis of our conversation, she seems to enjoy making life miserable for you."

"I don't think so. I believe she's as confused as I am. It's not easy being a woman these days."

"We all know that. Why don't you take the bull by the horns and go back to being the macho jock you were before?"

"I don't think she'd stand for it. She's very much into being a liberated woman."

"Which means?"

"Even if she accepted it, her girlfriends would never forgive her."

"There has to be something between macho and wimp," I said.

"What happened to the new liberated man?"

"We cry a lot."

EPA, industry hammer out plan to tax polluting trucks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heavy trucks and engines that don't meet federal exhaust emission standards would be taxed under a pollution levy the government is ready to propose with the support of industry and environmental groups.

The pollution tax, based on a concept long advocated by economists but shunned until now by most environmentalists, was hammered out by the Environmental Protection Agency and representatives of 23 environmental, industry and trade groups.

All 23 participants agreed on a formula by which manufacturers will pay the government the costs they avoid by not bringing their trucks into compliance. The penalty would grow each year to provide an ever-increasing financial incentive to make the trucks comply. The most highly polluting products would still be banned.

David Doniger, an environmental lawyer who represented the Clean Air Coalition in the negotiations, estimated that in the first year, about 10 percent of new heavy trucks would be subject to the penalty, falling to about 5 percent the second year and 2 percent the third.

The talks among environmentalists, officials from EPA and the Office of Management and Budget, trade associations, truck and engine manufacturers and some state officials were aimed at avoiding lawsuits that inevitably arise when a government agency issues a controversial regulation.

The formula still must be adopted in formal rulemaking, which could take several months. EPA has not announced results of the negotiations, but The Associated Press obtained a copy of the agreed-upon proposal.

Doniger said the talks could not have succeeded if the subject under discussion had been a "gut issue" like radiation standards.

"We're not arguing over how safe is safe."

Under the proposal, amounts of pollution above the maximum standard would be grouped into tax brackets. For example, one to three grams of a pollutant over the standard might fall into one bracket and four to six grams into the next.

Each bracket would have its own tax rate, with the rate dropping as the amount of pollution increased. The standard, the brackets and the rates would be set later by the Environmental Protection Agency.

This, according to Doniger, was a key compromise in the discussions.

Manufacturers feared that they would be forced to pay "outrageous" penalties for emissions that were far above the standard.

Forty-three states run out of interstate highway funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — As of today, 43 states are virtually out of federal interstate highway money and there will be no more interstate grants coming from Washington until Congress approves a formula for distributing $7.2 billion from the highway trust fund.

The Federal Highway Administration considers a state "virtually out" of interstate funding when its account falls under $10 million.

Colorado, for example, is down to $66,000. It is one of 10 or so key states with big projects stalled, including major sections of the interstate system in the Denver area and interchange work held up for years by local squabbles over locations.

As one of the states that has drawn all of its interstate funds from the federal government, Colorado state highway officials know they have about $116 million waiting, if only Congress could agree to release it.

The projects "were ready to build and now are really under the gun" to get started, according to Francis B. Francois, executive director of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials.

In Wisconsin, a statewide resurfacing project was shelved because the money ran out. Now weather-wrecked roads face another damaging winter.

Also stalled are I-90 in Washington state; New York City's Westway; major segments of interstate in Florida; rebuilding of the Atlanta beltway; a freeway near Phoenix, Ariz.; interstate highways near Minneapolis-St. Paul; several small jobs Maryland planned in the Baltimore and Washington areas and what Francois called "lots of pieces" of the Missouri interstates "that were ready to go to bid."

The money, collected at the pump as federal gasoline, diesel fuel and truck taxes, has been held up in a dispute between the Senate and the House over hometown highway projects, including $2.5 billion worth of tunnel and road projects in Boston which have the support of House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. of Massachusetts.

The projects were added to a relatively routine bill designed to set a formula for dividing the trust funds for the last half of this year and all of next.

The House and Senate this year passed widely different versions of the distribution formula, called the Interstate Cost Estimate, and a conference between the two houses bogged down on the last day of the session.

In the end, the conferees could not agree on how large a share the federal government should pay for the Massachusetts project and a number of other so-called "demonstration projects" used to solve individual local highway problems.

The House bill, now dead, stipulated that the Boston project would be considered part of the interstate highway system and thus be eligible for 90 percent federal financing.

In addition to the few dozen local proposals, other political issues to be resolved include a demand by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, that the amount of money sent to each state more closely match the amount collected in gasoline, diesel fuel and truck taxes collected in that state and the interstate cost estimate formula itself.

What this means is no state gets money until some solution is reached. "We have 40 states essentially out of interstate funds" said Dave Lukins, special assistant to the Federal Highway Administrator in an interview.

NATION in brief

Analyst calls TV coverage of GOP ticket 'negative'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An analyst says television network evening news coverage of the Reagan-Bush ticket during the election campaign was far more negative than coverage of the Democratic ticket.

But it didn't matter in the end because the public always filters out "press spin" when it chooses a president, said Michael Robinson, director of the media analysis project at George Washington University.

Robinson said that his studies showed the viewing public got "something on the order of 2 1/4 times as much cosmic bad information concerning the viability or quality of the leadership of the Republicans" than it got concerning the Mondale-Ferraro ticket.

He participated Tuesday at an American Enterprise Institute discussion of campaign coverage by the evening television news shows.

Another participant, Barbara Cohen, manager of political coverage of NBC News, said Robinson's analysis took into consideration only what words were spoken by the television correspondent — not the impact of the picture the viewer saw.

Man faces another trial

CHICAGO (AP) — A man sentenced to death for murdering a pregnant woman and causing the death of her unborn baby faces trial in connection with another slaying.

Keith Sum, 24, of St. Louis, Mo., was convicted in September of killing Gwendolyn Whipple, 18, and her unborn child on July 7, 1982. He became the first person convicted under the state's 1982 law on feticide, killing of a fetus.

Shum, sentenced Tuesday to die of lethal injection on Feb. 26, is also accused of murdering an 18-year-old man in St. Louis in a dispute over a dice game.

Association seeks injunction

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A hearing is scheduled Friday on a request for an injunction barring members of a predominantly black longshoremen's union from refusing to unload South African goods from a freighter.

Members of Local 10 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union resumed work on the Dutch freighter Nedlloyd Kimberley Tuesday after a temporary restraining order was issued Monday to stop their 10-day boycott.

No contract 'not setback'

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — One of 1,500 strikers who returned to work at Yale University after a 10-week walkout said going back without a contract "isn't a setback at all."

Julie Hovey, a secretary in one of the residential colleges, said Tuesday that the action, which enabled dining halls to reopen, libraries to resume normal hours and classes to move back on campus, is "a very positive move. We're coming back on our own terms, not Yale's."

Some people have a special quality. They know who they are and where they're going. And they look for a special quality in the people they do business with.

At Texas American, special people like these are discovering bankers who are committed to building long-range relationships. Who are eager to solve problems in innovative ways. Who see their own success in terms of successful customers.

Survey sheds new light on Soviet life

OF CHRISTMAS

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Preliminary results of a survey of nearly 3,000 former Soviet citizens indicate that economic inequality is on the rise in the Soviet Union while worker productivity is decreasing, the director of the project says.

James Miller, a University of Illinois professor, said the survey provides new insight into life inside the Soviet Union.

The $7.5 million Soviet Interview Project examined politics, work and daily life in the Soviet Union through the eyes of 2,800 recent emigres. The preliminary results were released Monday.

Herbert Levine of the National Council for Soviet and East European Research said he was excited about the analysis of the information.

"It is the first extensive survey research that we have ever been able to do on a group of former Soviet citizens, and it has already shown some of the possibilities that it possesses for shedding really new light on many aspects of social and economic life in the Soviet Union," said Levine.

Social scientists from around the country conducted three-hour interviews with each of the former Soviets and asked them to fill out questionnaires. The federal government paid for the study.

The Soviets who were questioned were between 20 and 70 years of age, and were primarily Jewish emigres.

Among the preliminary findings: — During the 1970s, there was an increase in economic inequality and by the end of the decade, 44 percent of the total Soviet wealth was in the hands of 10 percent of the population, said Aaron Vinokur, an economist at the University of Haifa in Israel.

— The productivity of the Soviet work force "from the shop floor to supervisors" is declining, reported Paul Gregory, an economist at the University of Houston.

— The fear of being fired is higher among workers with more education, said Gregory. "It's the highly educated who have high unemployment, while the common workers have low unemployment."

— "Thought-crime" and other forms of nonconformity may be on the rise, especially among those between 20 and 40 years of age, said John Garrard, a Russian literature specialist from the University of Arizona. The behavior includes listening to foreign radio stations, holding strong views on the unreliability of the Soviet news media, and sampling unofficial literature and art exhibits, he said.

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram

Reb linemen like serving pancakes

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

When Midland Lee football players start talking about "Pancakes," they aren't talking about breakfast. It's probably a member of Lee's offensive line telling about the only tangible statistic they can put on paper.

According to Lee line coach David Browning, a "Pancake" is a block "where the first thing that hits the ground is the back of the opponent's head."

That sounds a little severe, but Lee players argue with Browning over reels of film just to get one marked by his name.

Offensive junior guard Jake Young must do some pretty good arguing too. He has 21 "Pancakes" to his credit through 13 games and that's a Lee season record. Last year, Devoe McMullen had the record with 16 in 16 games.

Young, who has a chance to add to his record breaking performance against Odessa Permian Saturday, said, "The 'Pancake' is like an award for linemen like rushing yardage is for the backs. It's really something that you shoot for, but I didn't know I had the record. I thought this was the first year it had been done. But that's good to know. I'll take the record."

Browning added, "A 'Pancake' isn't easy to get and we don't give them away. Jake, has done a good job for us this year. He had six in one game against Cooper. I've never seen anything like that."

It's also strange that the "Pancake" record would come from Young, who weighs only 185 pounds and is a junior. But it's also strange that the Lee Rebels are flying high with an offensive line that averages only 181.8 pounds per man. These Rebels defy the odds.

"What this line lacks in size, they make up in want-to," said Browning. "We haven't matched up with anyone we've played in size this year. It's getting to be a joke with the kids. They always know they are going to be facing some brute across the way."

"We don't have anyone in the line over 200 pounds and that's rare in 5A these days. A lot of 4As, 3As and 2As have bigger lines than we do. I know we are the smallest line of any of the playoff teams left."

Across the Lee front wall is center Wade Wiesepape at 173 pounds, guards Young and Ricky Lee (181) and tackles Ariel Elliott (190) and Mike Little (180). Elliott is the only senior. It is a young and small line.

It is also a line that has been revamped since August. Only Elliott was penciled in as a starter when August brought the first taste of pads. However, Young has started all 13 games and Wiesepape has started 12.

"Our line is small — really small," said Lee head coach Jack Tayrien. "The offensive line was a major concern for us last spring because we had no returning lettermen who had been on the varsity grass. We worked hard with them this spring and they began to gel. It looks like to me that they are coming together more every game."

"The one thing that impresses you about the line is that they don't miss too many assignments and they work hard together."

However, it's not all roses for Browning, who has had to change

Jerry Mennenga/Reporter-Telegram
Midland Lee guard Jake Young...All-time Rebel 'Pancake' leader

his coaching technique.

"I used to yell a lot at the big bruisers we had last year. All you needed them to do was get after it. With this line I don't scream as much. I have to give them a pat on the back every once in a while. We're not power-oriented like last year. We have to double team more at the point of attack because of the lack of size."

"Last year we had the 'Hogs.' This year we started out as the 'Gourds,' and we've advanced to the 'Piglet' stage."

Browning looks to Elliott when leadership is required. And since Elliott is the only senior in the line, he feels he should shoulder that responsibility.

Midland Lee's Quintus Hampton (12) goes in for a layup only to have it blocked by Lubbock Dunbar's Greg Holleman. Dunbar won the game, 69-52, to end the Rebels' six game winning streak.

Dunbar trio ends Lee's streak, 69-52

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Lubbock Dunbar has a tough combination to beat on the basketball floor now that football is over and Midland Lee's Rebels paid the price of learning that fact Tuesday night, losing 69-52 at Chaparral Center.

The Panthers have two giants inside and a veteran three-year guard that walks through the press like a mouse in Swiss cheese. Lee just couldn't handle that trio all at once.

The giants inside were 6-6 Sam Collins, who scored 17 points, and 6-4 Brian Jones, who canned 21 to lead all scorers. Guard Joey Torres hit for 15 points in the three-pronged attack, but it was his job of handling the Lee press that helped the Panthers most.

"Joey has started for us since he was a sophomore and he is a jewel," said Dunbar coach Joe McWilliams. "We've been playing together for seven days now and are just now beginning to come together. We got the two big guys from football and this is the best they've played. We're only 4-3 on the season, but it looks like we might be on the right track now."

that's tremendous outside shooting," McWilliams added. "Lee will be an awesome team when they get their board men out from football. That's the price basketball has to pay when you have successful football programs at your school."

THE LOSS ended Lee's winning streak at six games as the Rebels fell to 6-2 and things won't get any easier Friday when they host a powerful Lamesa squad, which has split two games with Midland High this year. That game will be at 8 p.m. in the Lee gym and there will be no junior varsity game.

Still, Lee is off to a good start and Lee coach Paul Stueckler has been pleased with his squad. "The kids have played hard this year and we were pleased to win six in a row, including the Tall City championship. And we are going to be much better when we get our kids out from football."

On the loss to Dunbar, Stueckler said, "Dunbar is big and strong and that kid at guard (Torres) is very smart. We've been getting a lot of points off the press this year, but pressure doesn't bother that kid. He's a good player and he's smart."

Rangers claim three; Lovington beats MHS

The Rangers will shoot for their eighth straight victory on Friday when they host Crane at 4:15 p.m.

For the girls, Maria Morgette scored 18 points, Stephanie Smith 15 and Deonna Dean 13 to lead Greenwood past Sands by a 69-29 count.

The victory ups the girl's record to 6-1 for the season. On Friday, the Rangerettes travel to Ozona where they will open the Ozona Tournament against Junction at 5:30 p.m.

In junior varsity action, the Greenwood boys ripped Sands, 60-30 to improve to 2-1 on the year.

MIDLAND HIGH, went to New Mexico Monday night where they suffered an 87-72 defeat against Lovington.

The Bulldogs, 4-3, were led by Darrell Davis with 23 points and Matt Sears with 18.

The Bulldogs, who finished second in the Tall City Tournament behind Midland Lee this weekend, will be looking for a first place finish this weekend when the take on the winner of Thursday's Permian-Andrews game at 11:30 a.m. Friday in the Canyon Reef Tournament in Snyder.

Curren upsets top-seeded Lendl in Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — South African Kevin Curren knocked top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia out of the $1.28 million Australian Open Tennis Championships Wednesday and advanced to the quarterfinals.

In another match two-time former champion Johan Kriek, the fourth seed, romped into the semifinals with a straight sets victory over No. 5 seed Pat Cash of Australia 7-5, 6-1, 7-6 and American Ben Testerman won his fourth round match with a 7-6, 6-3, 6-7, 7-5 victory over Sweden's Jokim Nystrom.

No. 1 women's seed Martina Navratilova won her quarterfinal match against American Barbara Potter 6-3, 6-2 and second seeded Chris Evert Lloyd kept pace by beating fourth seeded Wendy Turnbull of Australia 6-3, 6-2.

Curren, who had never before beaten Lendl, won the fourth round match 6-1, 7-6, 6-4.

The match resumed Wednesday after being halted by rain on Tuesday when ninth seeded Curren led 6-1, 2-1.

Lendl, who has won only one Grand Prix title since his French Open victory over John McEnroe, played Wednesday with his stomach heavily wrapped in bandages.

Officials said he was suffering from a painful pulled stomach muscle.

Lendl broke back to 3-3 when the match resumed but Curren broke for 6-5 and Lendl had to break back immediately to force the second set to a tiebreaker.

Curren reeled off three straight points to take the tiebreaker seven points to four and then powered through the third set.

McCroly stops Taylor in fourth

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — World Boxing Council welterweight champion Milton McCroly unleashed a three-punch flurry to stop Lloyd Taylor in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round bout Tuesday night.

McCroly, of Detroit, trapped Taylor along the ropes 56 seconds into the fourth and landed a right to the head, followed by a left hook and another right to the head. Taylor dropped face first on the canvas.

Ratliff Stadium vandals can expect severe punishment

MIDLAND (AP) — Midland Lee High School's principal said Tuesday he plans "the most severe punishment possible" for overly zealous Lee fans who apparently vandalized a restroom and stands at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Fans reportedly spray-painted and rubbed white shoe polish on stands, aisles and ramp walls in the stadium and on mirrors and stall doors in the Midland Lee students' section women's rest room, said Don Nelson, the Greater Odessa Area Chamber of Commerce's play-off game coordinator.

The vandalism occurred sometime during Saturday afternoon's football playoff game, attended by about 10,000, between Midland Lee and Fort Worth Richland high schools, Nelson said.

Nelson estimated damage at a few hundred dollars.

sand-blasting over the graffiti, Ector County Independent School District Athletic Director Jack Brewer said Tuesday.

Brewer added that school officials plan no punitive action against the vandals and will not file a police report on the incident.

In Midland, however, Lee High Principal Stan Cobb said school officials plan at-home or in-school suspensions — as well as making parents pay for damage.

Either the Midland school district or Midland Lee High School will pay for damages until they identify the vandals, Cobb said.

As a result of the damage, the women's rest room — one of two on the student side — was closed for a Class A football play-off game Saturday night between Sanderson and Robert Lee high schools, said Nelson. He noted that about 3,000 persons attended that game.

Mule deer season was hot, cold

The Texas mule deer season, which closed Dec. 2, ran hot and cold.

Hunters in the Davis and Glass Mountains near Alpine said most of the mule deer hadn't moved into the easily hunted areas.

The easiest places to hunt desert mule deer, distinguished like other mule deer by their outsized ears, black tail and raccoon-like face markings, are along the sides of mountains. By spotting a trophy and then stalking to within range, a hunter can usually have some success. But when the deer hold in heavy cover like they were on opening weekend, when much of the mountainous section of the Trans Pecos was washed by rain, they're tough to spot and approach.

One group that was successful was G. W. "Zac" Zachary's. Zachary, a Sanderson resident who also outfits mule deer hunts, put his clients on deer with spreads as wide as 23 1/4 inches.

"We had some excellent hunting this year," the 33-year-old Southern Pacific engineer said. "The deer were in good shape. They had had plenty of browse and their horns were mostly heavy and big."

Nine of 11 hunters in his first group, which arrived on opening day, Nov. 24, left with trophy mule deer. In his second group, which hunted from Nov. 27-30, all seven hunters left with a buck.

"The 23 1/4 inch wide buck was the largest we've ever taken off this ranch," Zachary said. Zachary, who's been running the guide service for two years, didn't want to name the ranch at the landowners request.

Football and pheasants

If you're planning to attend the Lee-Permian quarterfinal game in Lubbock Saturday, you might plan to stay an extra day or so.

Pheasant season opens in the Panhandle Dec. 8 and runs through Dec. 24. Contact nearly any of the chambers of commerce of towns north of Lubbock and they'll be provide lists of landowners who allow day hunting.

Day hunting charges vary between $25 and $50.

Drowning decreasing

Drownings decreased in Texas during the first eight months of 1984, compared to the same period last year.

Mule deer season ran hot and cold in the Trans Pecos. The season closed Dec. 2.

Research going on computer for ski bindings

CLEVELAND (AP) — Downhill skiers would crisscross the slopes on computerized bindings if research now underway pans out, according to a ski safety expert at the Case Institute of Technology.

Eugene Bahniuk, 57, associate professor of mechanical and aerospace engineering at the institute, which is part of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, has been trying for more than a decade to perfect a device that can release the boot from the ski at the proper moment to help reduce injuries.

Improved ski bindings since the early 1970s have reduced injuries to the lower leg, but injuries to the knee and upper body remain a challenge, Bahniuk said.

A skier now could lean far forward without generating much force, fail to trip the binding's release, fall and risk an injury.

"But suppose you had a binding that could sense that you were leaning way forward. I would like to see the acceleration of more modes of release in bindings — the rollout or the ability to release in a backward fall," Bahniuk said.

Some manufacturers and researchers are studying electronic bindings, said Bahniuk, who is chairman of the American Society of Testing Materials' Committee on Ski Safety. He also represents the United States in the International Standards Organization.

Bahniuk began his research at the institute in 1971, using a laboratory model.

Big money spent on feeding birds

Americans spent more than $550 million on bird feeders and bird seed last year, hoping to bring a little bit of wildlife close to a window. Success in feeding depends on the type of feed you use and the way it's presented to the birds, David

Most commercial bird feeders cost $10 and up. But Fish and Wildlife Service biologists Alex Knight and Willard M. Spaulding Jr. have come up with two almost anyone can build at home for about $1, using two-liter soft drink bottles.

Going around Bain like taking a road trip

Conundrum: Why do the Rams call tackle Bill Bain the "refrigerator"?

Answer: because he's always full of half-eaten food, a six-pack, he's usually found in a kitchen, he's hard to move, no one knows what he weighs, he keeps the quarterback from spilling, and you can't be sure from looking at him whether his light is on or not.

He's built along the general lines of an ice cream sundae. "He should have a cherry on top of him," a teammate grins. He'd have to diet just to be called "Pudge." If he gets any heavier, he'll float. When he gets through with football, he could rent himself out for the Macy Parade.

He's heard all the jokes. "Bill wasn't born, he was beached. He wasn't drafted, he was harpooned. The Rams didn't know whether to suit him up or throw him a fish. He breathes through a hole in the back of his head. Some people have a birthday. Bill Bain has a birth week."

But he also knows rival linemen have been known to refer to him as "Detour" Bain. "As in 'use alternate routes,'" they explain.

Bill Bain doesn't have a physique, he has a fuselage. He's a perfect "50." Punishment around the Ram camp is having to do 10 laps around Bill Bain. You could hold a circus in his overcoat.

But this girth also makes the quarterback feel as if he is plying his trade in the shadow of Mt. Rushmore. If Bill Bain is hard to fit at the clothiers, he is hard to get around on the 50-yard line. "It's like getting around the World Trade center," a writer once observed. "Taking an outside rush on Bain is like going on a road trip," a tackle told him.

BILL BAIN, as such, is the idol of every man who ever asked for seconds on the banana cream pie or who ate whipped cream straight. But, like Sinatra, he could croon "I Did It My Way."

Like every apparently obese person who ever lived, Bill Bain lived life in a chorus of good advice.

Every magazine, every billboard, every commercial extolled the advantages of looking like a chorus boy — or a Greek statue.

"Lose 50 pounds," became a litany. "I heard it from Bart Starr when I was with the Packers and I heard it everywhere I went." Which was almost everywhere there was since Bain went from Green Bay to Denver and from Denver to New York and New York to unemployment where the Rams picked him up from the backyard where he was fixing a barbecue.

Bain, who had been a No. 2 draft pick, no less, of the Packers, entered a phase of "backing up." This is a less-than-felicitous station in life where your best hope lay in someone's breaking a leg.

Because he was fat and jolly, the Rams thought Bain revelled in the existence, that he would be gnashing his teeth if somebody did indeed break a leg and broke up his idyllic existence. "Actually, I hated it. I was frustrated and disgusted and I didn't care for my role at all," he admits now. "I didn't wish anybody any bad luck I just wished I had some good."

Instead of just laughing it off and saying "Where's the beer?" Bain worked harder than anybody. From Monday to Thursday, that is. "I knew my week was over on Thursday. I knew Saturday and Sunday, I'd just sit there like a log."

IN SPITE of the fact he wasn't counting on him, Coach Ray Malavasi wanted his bench-sitter to look good in his blanket. "Lose 50 pounds," he told him.

"I tried it," recalls Bill Bain. "I'd go two, three days without eating. I wouldn't eat Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday. I'd come in Friday, I'd be a mess. I'd get the shakes, I'd get so weak. Then, on the weekends when I wouldn't get to play again, I'd eat my guts out. The doctors told Ray 'Hey, you're killing this guy!'"

Bain got his break when John Robinson became coach. No matinee idol's silhouette himself, Robinson was more interested in attitude than avoirdupois. ("It's now what you weigh, it's how you play.") "The way

I felt," recalls Bain, "if I was, say, Henry Ellard, if I had to run 40, 50 yards every play, then come back to the line of scrimmage, then run 40, 50 yards again — well, I'd have to weigh 210. But I had to run — what? — 4 to 10 yards at the most. What was the difference? Besides, what we were talking about was, maybe, 8 pounds."

When Irv Pankey went down with a torn Achilles tendon, Bain surprised the Rams — and the league — by slipping into an unfamiliar (tackle) position and playing All-Pro games. "While I was backing up, I studied the whole play book. Do you know there are 28,000 variations, 28,000 things to learn if you take every position, every blocking pattern against every different defense? I knew all of them. I'd read them. Twice."

An outstanding pass-blocker, Bain, with the addition of Eric Dickerson, had to become an agile run-blocker. "I had pride. I had been an All-American at SC. But when I got to Green Bay, I couldn't block an egg-I said 'I better learn this game or I'm gone.' From that day, I lifted weights, I ran. Of course, I ate, too. And so, I had a tougher job convincing people I was serious."

The Rams finally perceived that, inside this fat man was a scholar struggling to get out. The dietary suggestions stopped, the play improved till Coach Robinson announced last week that his fat man was now decidedly all-pro at his position. "No one ever said Orson Welles couldn't act," says the new all-pro proudly.

If he gets any better and the Rams make the playoff, the prospect is for the club to hide the cottage cheese and skimmed milk and push the chocolate eclairs and banana splits. "You're looking a little peaked there, No. 62, as if you might be getting down below 315 again. Have some more gravy." The way to the Super Bowl might be through the ice cream bowl after all.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African Gerrie Coetzee is appealing his World Boxing Association heavyweight title loss to American Greg Page because the eighth and final round lasted 3 minutes, 48 seconds.

Page, 26, knocked out Coetzee 48 seconds after the eighth round was supposed to have ended Saturday night at the Sun City gambling resort. It was Coetzee's first defense of the title he took from Michael Dokes in September 1983 in Richfield, Ohio.

"The WBA rules say a round must be three minutes long," Hal Tucker, Coetzee's manager, said Tuesday. "If a round goes way over three minutes, anything that happens during that period can't be construed as taking place within the round."

Whether the "long round" occurred because of a daydreaming timekeeper or a faulty clock is in dispute.

"We will take whatever steps are necessary. That may mean a court case or an objection to the WBA. We say the result was invalid. We say Gerrie is still champion," Tucker said.

He said he was investigating procedures for either a court challenge or an appeal to the WBA to have the result nullified.

On Monday, Coetzee won a temporary court ruling that blocked repayment of a $175,000 loan that American boxing promoter Don King gave to Coetzee in August. The terms of that loan were that Coetzee would pay back King the full amount if he lost the Page fight, and half the total if he won, straight from the purse.

Coetzee argued in court papers that since he was challenging the outcome, no more than half the loan should be paid to King. Judge A.J. Heyns granted the emergency application and gave Coetzee's lawyers 14 days to file for a formal ruling.

Moore assured he'll be back

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech head football Coach Jerry Moore was assured on Tuesday that he will be back next year to direct the Red Raiders' fortunes.

Moore met with Texas Tech President Dr. Lauro Cavazos and afterward Athletic Director John Conley said, "Jerry Moore is our coach. He has three more years to run on his contract and nothing will be done to change that."

Tech had a 4-7 record and rumors were flying that Moore was in trouble. "There were a number of positive changes made in our coaching staff last year," Conley said of the addition of five new assistants. "We had an excellent opportunity to win 9 of 11 games last season. We certainly are closer to being where we want to be than at any time since Jerry has been here. We just need to win the close games."

Tech led going into the last quarter in four of the defeats and trailed by just one point in another.

Subaru tops import and U.S. autos in customer survey

Subaru has risen to outrank all other Japanese and U.S. automobile makes in the latest independent customer satisfaction survey conducted by J.D. Power & Associates.

The latest Customer Satisfaction Index rates the value-leading Subaru well above quite an impressive array of imported and U.S. makes, noted Thomas R. Gibson, executive vice president, operations, for Subaru of America, Inc.

He observed, "We were judged against the rest of the industry and the only vehicle with a higher percentage of satisfied owners than Subaru was the exclusive European luxury car, Mercedes Benz."

The impartial J.D. Power 1984 C.S.I. measured customer satisfaction levels of 31 domestic and import automotive nameplates using a weighted average of a variety of factors such as the condition of the car upon delivery, frequency of mechanical problems, the dealer's attitude and results in performing warranty work.

Gibson noted, "By the time the survey was run, the new car glow had pretty well worn off for the owners. They had plenty of time to really get to know their vehicles and the dealers. Obviously, consumers endorse our dedication to producing a car which is inexpensive as it built to stay that way."

"We're very pleased to be a highly regarded by our owners," he commented. "In last year's survey, Subaru was ranked third in the automotive industry, while we were fifth two years ago. So, we are definitely headed in the right direction."

"The results of the survey also attribute to the outstanding Subaru dealer and distributor network across the country. Like our corporate commitment to customer satisfaction, their dedication is more than just a sales or service program — it permeates every area of our business," said Gibson.

Subaru is also frugal on fuel. Forty-nine state Environmental Protection Agency manufacturers' emissions tests on an exhaust manifold-mounted oxygen sensor in a

Two 25-year-olds, Eric Eisenberg and Francois Crozet, were the stars of France's come-from-behind win in the 1984 European Junior Championship. Here is Eisenberg at the helm of a three no trump contract.

In theory South's opening bid showed 21-22 points, but he decided his five-card suit and good intermediate cards more than compensated for any high-card shortage. North's raise to game was based on the hope his diamond suit would be a source of tricks.

The same contract was reached in both rooms of the France-Belgium match, and the lead by both Wests was the nine of hearts, ducked to declarer's ten. That gave declarer eight tricks. The Belgian South elected to play on clubs for his ninth trick. He cashed the ace of diamonds, overtook the queen with dummy's king and led club to the jack.

West won the queen and exited with a heart. Declarer won, cashed dummy's diamonds on which he sluffed two clubs, and led another club from the board. That enabled West to score three more club tricks, and the ace of spades completed a one-trick set. Unlucky.

Eisenberg found a simpler way to insure his contract. After winning the ten of hearts, he led the king of spades from hand. He could now set up a spade trick by force, and the contract could be defeated only if West started specifically with A-Q-10 of clubs and East with the ace-queen of spades. Since East had only a singleton club, declarer could not be prevented from making his contract and gaining 12 International Match Points.

Television's portrayal of women improves in 1984

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television improved its portrayal of women in the 1984 season, with a majority of women characters shown holding jobs outside their home "like their real-life counterparts," the National Commission on Working Women said today.

And "instead of being locked into aggressive roles, some male TV characters on the new fall shows actually care for their children, love their families and do so without being objects of ridicule," the commission noted, citing "The Cosby Show" as an example.

Television is getting away from the prevailing pattern of the past 12 years, when female TV characters were usually "white, single, beautiful women," the commission said. It is a private organization that campaigns on behalf of women who hold jobs.

Last year, the commission complained that TV portrayed too few minority women, not enough older women and hardly any working mothers.

But in a 12-page report, the organization said that all three types have become more visible on the screen and "There are more women characters, more minorities, new family structures, job diversity, new roles for men and a focus on issues of interest to women."

Ten years ago, men outnumbered women in TV roles 3-1, but in the 1984 season, of 143 new TV characters, 67 are women, the commission said. There were 10 black female characters in new shows, compared to only one last year.

The analysis found that 76 percent of all adult female TV characters in new shows have jobs outside the home.

It also found — and applauded — "an increase in the number of divorced female TV characters, who now account for 10 percent of all women on TV, and of female characters who are widows, now 9 percent of all women on TV."

In addition, the commission welcomed "the emergence of men as nurturers" on TV as "one of the most encouraging signs this season."

The commission also honored radio and television documentaries and news stories exploring issues of importance to working women — from sexual harassment and pay discrimination to the impact of new technologies on women.

First place winners: — Public affairs documentary-television: "Working Women" by Maryland Public Television, Owings Mills, Md., producer Donna Faw. It offered a profile of a woman head of a maximum security prison for men, advice on salary negotiations and financial counsel for working women.

— Public affairs documentary-radio: "Educating Rita: Encountering the Computer Era" by WGBH-FM, Boston, producer Jennifer Abod. It discussed the effect of the computer era on working women.

— News Series-television: "Poverty Has a Woman's Face" by WTVD-TV, Durham, N.C., producer Carol M. Rosenbaum. It explored the nationwide increase in the number of women living in poverty.

Having children education for Prince Charles

Prince Charles

NEW YORK (AP) — Having children in the royal family has been an education for the Prince of Wales, who says that before Lady Diana gave birth he never before knew "just what fun they can be and how important they are."

"Apart from having stinking colds, poor old things, they're in very good form indeed — and bring us both an immense amount of happiness," Prince Charles said of his sons, William, 2, and Henry, 3 months.

Speaking to Barbara Walters in an interview to be televised Thursday on ABC's "20/20" program, Charles said his older son has taken well to the newer arrival, although "a tractor comes winging through the air and things like that occasionally, which is only to be expected."

William is "a spindly little character and very good-natured," with "quite a good sense of humor," Charles said. He called Henry, known as Harry, "absolutely adorable" and "a thoroughly splendid chap."

He said the cancellation threat was triggered when Sullivan stopped payment on a $1.9 million check due the Jacksons because of expenses due to cancellation of two concerts in Phoenix when Jermaine Jackson fell ill.

"Chuck Sullivan has created a new theory of promoting," King said. "It's, 'If I lose, give me my money back' (The Jacksons) are going along with it because of their fans."

Sullivan was in a convalescent home recovering from heart trouble Tuesday, but spokesman Jim Murray said: "Chuck Sullivan...will not respond to any personal attacks by Don King..."

"Chuck Sullivan's more than willing to take criticism for the things he did wrong and is happy that he played a part in getting three million people to see the Jackson family perform."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cable television entrepreneur Ted Turner struck a conciliatory note with a group with which he is often at odds — television producers — urging them to help promote world peace and understanding.

"We should move away from the real violent cops 'n' robbers programs and show people getting along with each other," Turner, 46, told an Academy of Television Arts & Sciences luncheon Tuesday.

He said the entertainment media — particularly film producers — possessed the most powerful tools to benefit mankind and urged TV executives to raise their eyes above the financial sheet's bottom line.

"What good does it do if you win the ratings battle and pollute the minds of the people?" Turner asked.

Turner, the broadcasting and sports entrepreneur who has spoken out against TV violence, has waged a licensing battle with the Hollywood community on payments for programs rebroadcast nationwide through cable TV outlets.

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge ordered an inquest to determine how much television actor Tony Danza must pay a hotel security guard who sued him for $16 million for a beating by Danza and a friend.

Danza, 33, former boxer and star of the situation comedy "Who's the Boss?," was convicted July 30 along with Albert Sinaori, 29, of assaulting William Sawyer in a brawl in a hotel restaurant on Feb. 3.

They were sentenced Sept. 17 to 250 hours of community service and three years on probation.

State Supreme Court Justice Beatrice Shainswit ordered the inquest Tuesday, saying conviction in a criminal proceeding is proof of the facts in a civil lawsuit.

NEW YORK (AP) — Four writers "who have brought true distinction" to the literary scene were honored by New York University as recipients of Elmer Holmes Bobst Awards in Arts and Letters.

The awards, which carry a $2,500 cash prize, were presented Tuesday to critic Malcolm Cowley, poet James Merrill, novelist Eudora Welty and dramatist Harold Pinter.

ELMIRA, N.Y. (AP) — Getting people into their seat belts is tough. But getting them out can be even tougher, one sheriff's deputy discovered the day after New York's mandatory seat belt law took effect.

A "rather large" woman who spent 20 minutes trapped in her seat belt in a supermarket parking lot told Chemung County sheriff's Deputy William Fitch "it was the first time she ever wore it and she would never wear it again."

SMU slips by Kentucky, 56-54

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — "People down here think we're a football school from where we come from," said 7-foot Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist, "but we showed them we also can play basketball."

Eighth-ranked SMU narrowly got by unranked Kentucky 56-54 Tuesday night on junior guard Butch Moore's six-foot jump shot with four seconds to go.

"We never won a big game like this," said Koncak, a senior and a member of the Olympic team. "We were waiting to get the monkey off our backs, and when it came down to the big play, we made it."

Last season, SMU suffered one-point losses to Houston, Arkansas, and, in the NCAA playoffs, to Georgetown, the eventual champion.

In snapping Kentucky's 23-game winning streak at home, the Mustangs from Dallas raised their record to 3-0 and dropped the Wildcats to 1-2.

"I thought Kentucky's young players played a fabulous game," said SMU coach Dave Bliss, who reached the .500 mark at 60-60 in his fifth season as the Mustangs' head coach. "If this is a rebuilding year, I'd like to have some of them."

Kentucky coach Joe B. Hall was upset about the officials failing to heed his team's call for timeout after Moore's goal, but said, "SMU was a very poised ballclub. They did what they had to do the last minute, the last half-minute and the last 10 seconds of the game."

SMU's pressing defense bothered Kentucky early and the Wildcats climbed back into the game by switching to a zone defense.

SMU led 31-25 at halftime, but Kentucky kept coming, tying the score at 48 with 5:39 left on James Blackmon's free throw.

Blackman's layup gave Kentucky its first lead, 53-52, but Koncak's rebound layup and one of two free throws by Kentucky's Kenny Walker tied it again at 54 with 1:17 to play.

Koncak, who finished with 15 rebounds and 13 points, made a game-saving rebound, setting up Moore's game-winner.

Dunbar came out and gunned in eight of 10 shots in the first period to lead by as many as nine. However, Raymond Morney and Brian Marczyński each came back with all of Lee's 16 points in the second quarter to tie the game at 28-28, heading into halftime. Morney ended the night with only 10 points after the eight-point second period and Marczyński had 16 on an eight of 17 shooting night.

The Rebel downfall came in the fourth period when Lee started the period with a two of 11 shooting eye and ended the period with five of 22 shots from the field in the period while Dunbar was scoring on six of nine shots. Derek Westbrook, the only other player in the game in double figures with 12, hit three of six in the fourth period, but he had little help as the Rebels were stone cold. The rest of the team had a meager two of 16 effort.

The Lee junior varsity scored a 58-53 win over Dunbar's JV as Steve Tyler led the way with 13 points and Carl Brackens added 10. Dunbar's Furnace had 12 and Lewis 11.

LEE

"Someone has to have the role in leadership situations and this is my last year, so it's up to me," said Elliott. "I think we've done a good job. At least, we're still playing."

Browning said, "I call Elliott the old man. He's probably the only one out there who can shave. We rarely mention his name when looking at the films because he rarely makes mistakes. He's been a much better player than we ever thought he would be."

Browning thinks Young is one of the best he has ever coached. "If Jake weighed 215 or 220 he'd be a dead solid prospect. As a junior, he's one of the very best I've ever coached."

But Young is quick to go the other way. "We've performed this year because Coach (Browning) brought us along slow. Every team we play we know what they're going to do and it shows in our record."

Wiespape is very small for a center at 173 pounds and he sometimes wishes he had more weight to work with. "It bothers me sometimes that we are always facing someone larger. I'm always down about 40 pounds in a game. I have to use my quickness and get there before they react," he said.

"Wade is so quiet that I have to check to see if he is still breathing," said Browning. "But he always knows what is going on and is a talented center with what we do."

Little has started the last five games, the fewest of the regulars, but Browning feels he is going to be a Rebel great before he's through. "Mike has the right attitude to be a tackle. He played as good a game against Richland as could be played. It was an exceptional effort."

Little agreed, saying, "It was probably my best game. I think we know what we've got to do. We know the other team is always going to be bigger, but that doesn't bother us anymore. We just look forward to playing every week."

Lee has started the last seven games and has been one of the big surprises in the plus-column for the Rebel line.

"Ricky has improved every week. When we started, he had a lot of baby fat because he had grown so much too soon. But he's turned into a good guard," said Browning.

"I got my chance when Craig Kamradt got that pinched nerve and I wanted to make the most of the opportunity," said Lee. "We should be better next year."

The Rebels also have a solid crew of backup players, who see a lot of action. Robert Johnson, who was a Lee cheerleader last year, plays at center. Darrell Robertson is a guard, who did a bang-up job against El Paso Austin when Young was injured. Chris Bridgford is another guard, who is a converted split end. Cleveland Tolver, a tackle has started some and tackle Paul Sharick is a dependable replacement for Elliott. None of them, however, is over 200 pounds either. Of course, Kennards started at guard at the first of the season, but has been limited to highly visible kicking chores since an early season injury.

So, it will continue to be the Huston Joneses and the Tyrone Turners who get credit for the line mauling in obscurity. But it doesn't seem to matter to Young, who said, "When the backs make a lot of yards, you know you did the job."

And doing the job is something this unlikely bunch of heroes has done in 1984.

Boston win streak ends

Pistons find way to cool Celtics

Associated Press

The only way to cool off the red-hot Boston Celtics may be to cool them off, literally.

night that most of the 19,413 fans kept their coats and gloves on. The Celtics, who won two National Basketball Association Championship Series games last June in steamy, unairconditioned Boston Garden, didn't find the low temperature to their liking as Detroit ended the defending champions' 10-game winning streak with a 104-99 decision.

"Early, we missed many easy layups and wide open shots," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Plus, it was a cold, cold building. Maybe if they'd pay the heating bill..."

Guards Vinnie Johnson and Isiah Thomas scored 24 and 23 points, respectively, for the Pistons, who handed the Celtics only their second loss in 17 games this season.

In other NBA games, it was Utah 107, Golden State 105; Portland 112, Phoenix 104; San Antonio 114, Atlanta 106; Los Angeles Clippers 116, Houston 100; Chicago 112, New Jersey 97; Los Angeles Lakers 116, Cleveland 112 and New York 100, Denver 98.

Johnson, who had only two points at halftime, scored 22 in the second half, while Thomas scored 11 of his 23 points in the crucial fourth quarter.

The Pistons held the chilly Celtics scoreless after a Robert Parish free throw put Boston ahead 99-98 with 2:50 remaining. The Pistons used Kent Benson to guard Larry Bird, who scored 23 points.

"Bird beat us both games (this season) in the last two minutes," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "We went to Benson to guard him — it was just a hunch. Maybe it won't work next time."

"We were a little more physical. I don't know if we played great defense, but it was adequate enough to win."

"I think our defense was the key," Johnson said. "We switched off and rotated very well. I thought our guys played Bird well tonight, too."

Johnson hit a short jumper in the lane to put the Pistons ahead for good at 100-99 with 2:38 remaining. Thomas scored on a driving layup 22 seconds later, after a Bird miss. Bird was forced to foul Thomas with 11 seconds remaining and the All-Star guard canned both free throws to finish the scoring.

"It's a great feeling to beat Boston, but I get the same feeling beating Cleveland," said Thomas. "I just like to win. You have to feel that way. Otherwise, you'd gear up to play great against teams like Boston and maybe not play as hard against teams you should beat."

Lakers 116, Cavaliers 112
Los Angeles survived a 13-point deficit and a career-high 37 points from Phil Hubbard to beat Cleveland, which fell to 2-16.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 31 points and 13 rebounds, and Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who finished with 28 points and 14 assists, scored eight points each in the third quarter to lead a 31-18 Laker run in the period. The Cavaliers trailed only 108-107 late in the game, but two hook shots by Abdul-Jabbar put the Lakers ahead by five with 2:18 left.

Trail Blazers 112, Suns 104
Portland stayed one game behind the Lakers in the Pacific Division as Kenny Carr had 22 points and 16 rebounds against Phoenix.

The Suns led 59-56 in the third period, but the Blazers scored eight straight points, four of them by Carr, to take the lead for good. Carr and Jim Paxson had 10 points each in the quarter.

Larry Nance had 26 points to lead Phoenix, while Kiki Vandeweghe had 23 points and Paxson 21 for Portland.

Knicks 100, Nuggets 98
New York rallied from a 33-18 deficit to overcome Denver, which had won 10 of its previous 11 games.

Darrell Walker, who scored nine of his 12 points in the fourth quarter, hit the game-winning basket from the baseline with three seconds left and led a Knicks defense that held the Nuggets to 16 points in the final period.

It was New York's first victory in five games with Bernard King, the NBA's leading scorer, out with injuries.

Jazz 107, Warriors 105

The comeback story of the night was at Oakland, where Utah fought back from a 65-42 deficit to defeat Golden State on Adrian Dantley's two free throws with one second left.

The Warriors still led 82-66 going into the final period, but the Jazz outscored Golden State 41-23 to pull ahead at the end. A three-point play by Purvis Short, who led the Warriors with 24 points, gave them a 105-104 lead with 31 seconds left, but Dantley tied the score with a free throw.

Larry Smith missed two free throws for the Warriors before Dantley, who led all scorers with 26 points, was fouled with a second to go.

Bulls 112, Nets 97

Orlando Woolridge scored 20 of his 37 points in the pivotal third quarter as Chicago rallied to whip New Jersey.

The Nets, who got 22 points from Micheal Ray Richardson, led 48-44 at halftime, but the Bulls outscored them 33-22 in the third period to pull ahead 77-70. Michael Jordan then scored 14 of his 20 points in the fourth quarter as Chicago extended its advantage.

Spurs 114, Hawks 106

Artis Gilmore had 24 points and 15 rebounds and George Gervin added 23 points for San Antonio against Atlanta.

The Hawks, who got 34 points from Dominique Wilkins, went without a field goal for an 11-point stretch in the second half to allow the Spurs to take the lead.

Clippers 116, Rockets 100
Los Angeles won for only the second time in nine road games as Norm Nixon scored a season-high 28 points against Houston.

The Clippers, who also got 25 points from Marques Johnson and 23 from Bill Walton, coasted to victory after leading 66-49 at halftime.

Rookie Akeem Olatunji had a season-high 30 points and 19 rebounds for the Rockets, but the Clippers held 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson to nine points.

Mets add year to Johnson's contract

HOUSTON (AP) — The New York Mets, pleased with their 1984 resurgence under rookie Manager Dave Johnson, have rewarded him by extending his contract.

Johnson had an additional year added Tuesday to his original two-year contract.

His new pact, which includes a restructured and increased 1985 salary, will run through the 1986 season.

"It wasn't really important, but it's nice to have the security," Johnson said.

Johnson took over a team that had gone 68-94 in 1983 under managers

George Bamberger and Frank Howard and finished last in the National League East.

But the team demonstrated new spark in 1984, fueled by young players Johnson had managed in the minor leagues, and remained in contention for the NL East title until the final two weeks of the season.

Hoosiers latest Irish victim

Associated Press

Notre Dame, a team which for years has specialized in dealing out home-court misery to visiting basketball teams, has added Indiana to its list of victims.

The Fighting Irish dusted off the 11th-ranked Hoosiers 74-63 Tuesday night, using an 18-2 first-half run to take control and deny Indiana Coach Bobby Knight his 400th coaching victory.

"We got a spurt, we kept going," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps.

"The first half we were just careless, took bad shots and had too many turnovers," said Knight, whose team lost for the second time in three games.

ALTHOUGH INDIANA was the only member of the Top Twenty to taste defeat, two others narrowly escaped. No. 8 Southern Methodist needed Butch Moore's short jumper with four seconds left to nip Kentucky 56-54 and No. 12 Syracuse was pressed into an overtime before subduing Canisius 52-48.

In more routine outings, No. 7 Illinois mauled Chico State 92-47 and No. 19 Kansas slipped by South Dakota State 85-72.

In other college action Tuesday night, it was Providence 84, Holy Cross 75 in two overtimes; Rutgers 54, Princeton 41; Florida 82, South Florida 68; Iowa State 54, Iowa 50; Marquette 74, Loyola of Illinois 67; Arizona 82, Loyola Marymount 75; New Mexico State 67, New Mexico 64; Utah 65, Weber State 59 and Utah State 97, Brigham Young 93.

INDIANA HELD a 22-16 first-half lead before the roof fell in Notre Dame barreled into a 34-24 lead and enjoyed a 45-30 cushion at the half.

Indiana cut the deficit to nine points on three occasions in the second half, but Notre Dame, 40, held firm.

"In the second half, we had three opportunities to go under 10 points, and that was our first objective," said Knight. "Our second objective was to go under five and take the lead. Obviously, we didn't do that."

Freshman guard David Rivers led the Notre Dame offense with 23 points while his sidekick, Scott Hicks, was the defensive standout by holding Indiana's Steve Alford to one field goal. Alford came into the game averaging 20.5 points a game.

"We worked on it all week, but I didn't think it would work as well as it did," Hicks said of the defensive plan for Indiana.

"Hicks did a fantastic job on Alford," Phelps added.

Heavily favored Syracuse was on the ropes early against Canisius, 2-2, which held leads of 13-4 and 25-19 in the first half and a 30-29 advantage early in the second half.

SYRACUSE, 2-0, led 42-36 with 10:06 to go, then endured the catcalls of their home crowd while freezing the ball for most of the last seven minutes.

Ray Hall, who led Canisius with 21 points, scored from under the basket as time expired to tie the game 44-44 and force the extra period.

Syracuse finally took the lead for good on two free throws by Andre Hawkins and Wendell Alexis finished things with two more free throws only nine seconds from the end.

Rafael Addison had 16 points for the Orangemen.

CHICO STATE, a Division II school which absorbed a 77-37 drubbing at the hands of No. 2 DePaul on Monday, got another bitter taste of big-time basketball against Illinois.

Anthony Welch scored 25 points, center George Montgomery added 12 and Scott Meents 10 for the Illini, now 6-1. Illinois Coach Lou Henson started Montgomery and four reserves against Chico State, and went with that lineup for 10 minutes before the other starters saw action.

Illinois led 53-18 at the half and enjoyed a 45-point lead with eight minutes to play.

Richard Ross' 13 points paced Chico State, 2-3.

POOR SHOOTING and ball-handling hurt Kansas until the second half. South Dakota State trailed only 39-35 at the half and took a 43-41 lead early in the second half before Kansas used the scoring of Ron Kellogg to take charge.

Actress Lamour says she keeps working because it's 'therapy'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hold onto your sarongs, nostalgia buffs. Dorothy Lamour, that raven-haired sex symbol of the 1940s, is about to mark a milestone — her 70th birthday, and she's not afraid to say so.

"I've got to tell my age," she says with a laugh. "Everyone thinks I'm a year or two older than Bob Hope!"

Miss Lamour, who was part of a famous film trio with Hope, 81, and the late Bing Crosby, said that because of their long association in the string of successful "road" pictures she is often listed in movie almanacs as 80 years old or more.

"When I was in my late 50s, they had me 13 or 14 years older," she said in dismay. But age, she added, doesn't mean a thing. "I feel better in a lot of ways now than I did when I started out."

Still, she plans not to count her 70th birthday on Monday. "I think I'll skip it. I don't feel that old. I probably look it, but I don't feel it."

AT 70, DOROTHY Lamour is an attractive matron who doesn't stand out in a crowd until one studies the wide hazel eyes, instantly recognizable as those of the South Seas beauty she often played on screen. She smiles and the strains of Tahitian music which always accompanied her appearances seem not so far away.

Now, after years of marriage and motherhood in the San Fernando Valley, she's back on the road again, doing occasional dinner theater plays around the country, mounting her own club act and stage show and even appearing at shopping center openings or auctions.

She also makes a cameo appearance as herself Tuesday on the TV series, "Remington Steele."

"Why do I keep working? Because I love it. Let's put it this way — it's therapy," she said in an interview.

Six years ago, Miss Lamour almost gave up when Bill Howard, her husband of 35 years, died after a long illness. Theirs had been one of Hollywood's model marriages, a union that never faltered under the pressures of her stardom.

"When Bill died...I sat for six months and wouldn't see anyone, not even my children," she said. "My doctor, my friends, all said to go back to work."

SHE CREDITS a combination of factors for rousing her from deep mourning: Her sons brought her a little black Scottish terrier, Coco, who is still her beloved companion; she saw a play on television she wanted to do — "Barefoot in the Park"; and her friend, Earl Holliman, who owned a dinner theater, asked her to appear there.

"Three days later I was going and I haven't stopped since," she said.

Betty Grable talked her into doing dinner theater. "She said, 'They treat you beautifully and you get your self-respect back.'"

Her club act, which appeals to nostalgia buffs, has been a hit in theaters around the country, and most recently took her home to her birthplace, New Orleans, where she played the old Saenger Theater.

"When I was in elementary school, my mother used to grab whatever change she could to let me go to the movies on Saturdays," Miss Lamour said. "I went to the Saenger and saw a movie called, 'The Fleet's In' with Clara Bow. I loved it. In fact, I once played hooky and took my lunch to the Saenger theater and sat there all day long watching 'The Fleet's In' over and over."

That planted her passion for movies, she said, and spurred her migration to Hollywood after becoming "Miss New Orleans" as a teenager.

A FEW YEARS later, she was under contract to Paramount. She had done the "Jungle Princess" and five other movies.

As the long-haired exotic beauty in a form-fitting sarong, she was hot box office. Her 60 movies are now relics of a distant past, she concedes — an era she's sorry is gone.

"You go into a movie today and nine times out of 10 you come out depressed," she said. "When I was doing those silly, wonderful jungle pictures and road pictures they didn't make any sense. But you'd forget the mortgage and the operation for grandma and you'd come out and be happy. And that's what I think show business is all about."

Director: '2010' entirely different from '2001'

Galloping gymnast

Olympic gold medalist Mary Lou Retton dashes across an intersection of Tokyo's famed Gionza. She was recently in Japan to promote a commercial for the Japanese clothing industry.

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Peter Hyams was 25 when he saw Stanley Kubrick's classic, "2001: A Space Odyssey," and he knew from that moment that he had to be a filmmaker.

Hyams is now 41, and he has written, directed and produced the sequel to Kubrick's masterpiece, "2010." In a rare display of virtuosity, he also photographed it.

"I didn't want to make the movie," he said. "Stanley Kubrick is my idol; to me he is the greatest director in the world. I certainly don't mean to be compared to Stanley Kubrick. That would be like comparing a dwarf to Wilt Chamberlain."

Hyams has $24 million of MGM/UA's money on the sequel to the 1968 classic. But he was understandably nervous about comparisons, especially as "2010" approached its public exposure. The release date is no great comfort: Dec. 7, Pearl Harbor Day.

The preview reaction has been mixed, but Hyams seemed hopeful during an interview at his studio office.

"When I read the (Arthur C. Clark) book, I saw a chance to make a film so different from '2001' that it could stand on its own," said the filmmaker. "I believe that '2010' is entirely different — in intent, style, content and approach. I think it can be enjoyed by those who hadn't seen '2001.'"

Whether "2010" hits or misses, Peter Hyams' achievement merits notice. Not only did he perform four major functions in the production, he completed the mammoth film on schedule and within budget. All this in a mere 18 months. Kubrick required two whole years just to edit "2001."

"I started writing the script in June of 1983, and I began on the designs at the same time," Hyams said. "As I was writing, creation of the sets, costumes, models and effects was going on. So everything was ready in time for the start of filming in February of this year."

Hyams wrote the script with his leading actors in mind: Roy Scheider as the mission commander Heywood Floyd; John Lithgow as engineer Walter Curnow; Bob Balaban as Dr. Chandar, designer of the computer HAL. Scheider agreed to sign on after reading 70 pages of script and the book — "an amazing act of faith," said Hyams.

Careful planning kept the budget under control, and it helped that almost all of the film was shot on the Culver City lot. The only locations were six days at a space tracking station in New Mexico, the White House and a California beach.

Hyams is the first director of a major film to take credit as cinematographer, though he claims "more has been made of that than it deserves; other directors have performed the same function but didn't take credit for it."

He calls himself the black sheep in a family with deep roots in the theater. His grandfather was the legendary impresario Sol Hurok and his father was a Broadway press agent. Peter Hyams grew up with wide exposure to the best of the theater and concert world.

Filmmaker well known to viewers of B-movies

READING, Pa. (AP) — When Ray Dennis Steckler was 16, growing up in Reading during the 1950s, he used to wander with his pals to the banks of the Schuylkill River and shoot pirate movies with an 8mm camera his stepdad had bought him.

"Everybody thought I was kind of crazy, but I knew that with a camera I could do something with my life," Steckler said. "At that point, I wanted to do photography and become a film director more than anything."

And become a filmmaker he did. Steckler today is known to legions of B-movie fans as the director and sometime star of such luridly titled quickies as "Rat Pflink A Boo-Boo," "The Thrill Killers," "The Hollywood Strangler Meets the Skid Row Slasher," and "The Incredibly Strange Creatures Who Stopped Living and Became Mixed-Up Zombies."

Some of those attractions were supplemented with the best 3-D effects ever devised. Steckler and his cohorts would go to the theaters themselves, in costume, and scare the wits out of unwary audiences.

Steckler also helped support himself by freelancing as a cinematographer. Among other assignments, he shot "The Professionals" television series in 1969, an advertising film with David Steinberg for Playboy magazine, the Olympic trials at Lake Tahoe for ABC, and 16mm educational films for children.

Most recently, he filmed a 4½-minute short called "Thunderbirds in Concert," which captures the first performance by the U.S. Air Force precision-flying team since a 1982 accident that killed four members.

Steckler now 46 and a cinema instructor at the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, is in the process of acquiring rights to many of his old movies, which he plans to distribute anew on the midnight circuit.

Steckler is certain a new generation of fans is ready to embrace his handiwork. He's buying back the rights to his old movies, and he guarantees that his films will be showing up at local midnight bookings within a year.

"I'm trying to build a cult following so that eventually something will drop in my lap," he said. "I feel that's just around the corner because I'm getting all sorts of offers to do small films."

Meanwhile, Steckler continues his first full year of teaching at Las Vegas, guiding his 50 students — there are 132 on a waiting list — in everything from minute technical chores to securing financing.

There's little loss of Vitamin C when fruits are frozen

Dear Dr. Solomon: I like to freeze fruits because I can then have a greater variety in my meals during the off-season. However, I would like to know if I am sacrificing vitamin C by not using the fruits as soon as they become available. — Mrs. E.E. Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Dear Mrs. E.: There is little loss of vitamin C when you freeze fruits. However, it is not a good idea to thaw and then refreeze foods since this can not only diminish their nutrient value but cause spoilage as well. Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine recommended a diet aid that she says helped her. But another friend told me that it might make my blood pressure go up. Since I have a high-normal blood pressure anyway, I would not want this to happen. Do you have any information on the effect of diet aids on blood pressure? — Sandi, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Sandi: Many of the diet aids that are available over the counter contain medications that are called sympathomimetics. These medications may cause an increase in blood pressure. I do not recommend these diet aids for my own patients. If you are thinking of using them, I suggest you play safe and first check with your physician.

Dear Dr. Solomon: According to what I read in the papers, the American Cancer Society has recommended certain changes in diet that it says can prevent cancer. As an expert in nutrition, do you go along with at least some of their recommendations? — Mr. J.T., Muskegon, Mich.

Dear Mr. T.: I believe it is important to note that while the American Cancer Society has said that its nutritional guidelines may help reduce the risk of cancer, it emphasizes that its dietary recommendations cannot guarantee prevention of any specific human cancer.

If you will review the society's nutritional guidelines, you will see that they are in keeping with my own recommendations for a nutritional, well-balanced diet. I have been making these recommendations for years in this column and in my books. Therefore, even though following the guidelines does not guarantee against the prevention of cancer, I believe they are worth following from the standpoint of one's general health.

For example, cutting down on fat; eating more fruits, vegetables, and whole grains; eating foods rich in vitamins A and C; using alcohol in moderation; and cutting down on the consumption of smoked or cured meats — all these recommendations that I have been making to my patients for years, regardless of their risk of developing cancer.

Schroeder may leave ICU, join other patients

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — If William Schroeder continues his brisk recovery, the second recipient of a permanent artificial heart may leave intensive care next week and join other heart patients in this hospital, a spokesman said.

Schroeder's doctors haven't set a date for his transfer from Humana Hospital Audubon's coronary-care unit, but "they're kind of implying early next week," Humana Inc. spokesman Robert Irvine said Tuesday.

"He's an open-heart patient, but it's a little slower recovery than a normal open-heart patient because he was awfully near death," before the transplant, Irvine said. "He's probably behind" the recovery pace for conventional open-heart surgery, he added.

The attention lavished on Schroeder since his transplant bespoke a belief that one can't be too cautious when the patient has a plastic heart. But that attitude has been overhauled, said Dr. William DeVries.

DeVries, who implanted the Jarvik-7 heart on Nov. 25, said Tuesday that Schroeder's status as a "special patient" made his nurses reluctant to prod him toward the diet and exercise he needs.

"This patient, if he says, 'I've had a tough night,' you tend to say, 'Why don't you rest a couple more hours?' And you kind of lose your bargaining power," DeVries said.

"We've had to re-educate many people on the staff that this guy is the usual patient like everybody else."

Later, in an interview, DeVries said Schroeder's quick recovery could enable surgeons to perform history's third permanent implant of an artificial human heart sooner than expected. But he said it's "impossible to say" how far the timetable could be advanced and that "we don't want to desert Mr. Schroeder."

DeVries said the prescription for Schroeder is more exercise, including short walks with the aid of a portable air pump that can power his heart for three hours at a time.

Schroeder also will be weaned from carbohydrates and sweets and given more protein and vitamins, DeVries said. That presumably would mean an end to Schroeder's beloved pineapple sherbet and grape Popsicles.

Sesquicentennial commemorative items chosen

AUSTIN (AP) — Sales of Texas Sesquicentennial merchandise ranging from coffee cups to bumper stickers are expected to bring in considerable revenue for local celebration committees, and businesses large and small are getting ready.

Last weekend, hundreds of representatives from the 1,070 sesquicentennial committees around the state converged on Austin. Marketers of promotional items showed off wares including beer mugs, hats, T-shirts and cigarette lighters.

Anthony Canton, commemorative products director for the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission, said the commission has approved more than 200 products for sale in the state in connection with the 150th anniversary of the state's independence from Mexico.

The revenues from the sales are expected to be enormous, and a good share of the money will go to local committees for capital improvement projects. The state will keep only a royalty on official commemorative objects approved by the commission.

Canton, a former buyer for Macy's department stores, said he negotiated low prices from distributors wanting the state's sanction to sell official sesquicentennial items.

Those items will be sold to the local sesquicentennial committees, which will resell them to raise money for local improvements, including some plans for historic preservation projects around the state.

Bumper stickers, for example, will cost the committees only 18 cents apiece, so the fund-raising potential on many items should be substantial.

"The committees get the same deal (on price of promotional goods) as the largest retailer," Canton said.

Canton sees the chance for large sales of promotional items. "When a cup manufacturer tells me he can produce 50 million cups, what does that tell you? How many cars are in Texas? How many kids that wear T-shirts?"

AMERICAN HERO

Born in a large Irish Catholic family, John F. Kennedy was the youngest elected president in American History. As a young man he showed great courage in World War II while on an important torpedo mission. After a destroyer annihilated his torpedo boat, he physically saved the lives of his crew by swimming 19 hours for help. No only did he fight well but with his keen mind he authored two best selling history books, one of which won the coveted and sought after Pulitzer Prize. After winning the office of the Presidency his spirit and accomplishments benefitted man and mankind in all walks of life. He put the first American in space, he increased wages for laborers, he fought for civil rights of minorities, he extended social security for the aged, and he also reduced tariffs for businessmen. When the Russians threatened world peace with nuclear missiles in Cuba, he swiftly and strategically crushed them with a naval blockade. Once again proving what a strong leader can do with this great country to guard world peace. It is a sad fact that a man with the seeming powers of a god who touched the lives of everyone on this great planet had to suffer the fate of death by assassination. John F. Kennedy, perhaps the greatest leader in the history of the world died like a soldier — under fire.

Mobil boycotts Wall Street Journal

Los Angeles Times,
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Mobil Corp. has begun a boycott of the Wall Street Journal, pulling all advertising from the newspaper and instructing employees not to talk to the paper's reporters.

The new Mobil policy was recently approved by the company's top management and extends to all of Mobil's operations "worldwide," according to company spokesman John Flint. He said Mobil has also stricken the Journal from its mailing list for press releases.

"Our company takes the position that we won't have anything to do with the Wall Street Journal," Flint said. "Specifically, we will not answer their questions on or off the record, provide them with any data or grant any interviews."

Mobil currently places about $500,000 worth of advertising in the Journal each year, almost all of which are company-written opinion columns and which now will be terminated, Flint added.

Flint said the new policy comes after "five years of problems with working with the Journal." He refused to elaborate. Stewart Pinkerton, assistant managing editor of the Journal, said he had "no idea" why Mobil had chosen to take the action.

"We're not going to respond," Pinkerton said. "We're going to continue to do our job and cover the oil industry and (Mobil's) part in it."

Two Journal reporters said Tuesday that Mobil's action was triggered by a Nov. 16 story reporting that Mobil was building a $300 million Chicago office tower with Galbreath-Ruffin Corp., a real estate company that employed a son-in-law of Mobil Chairman Rawleigh Warner Jr.

The story, quoting from a Mobil proxy statement, stated that Mobil had agreed to the real estate company's request to transfer a "small part" of its shares in the joint venture project to Percy R. Pyne IV, Warner's son-in-law. It also quoted Mobil's proxy statement and a company press release as saying that Pyne would participate in leasing the new office building and would be compensated on a commission basis.

Richard B. Schmitt, coauthor of the article, said that Flint called him that day and told him "Mobil was very angry at me and my colleagues, and he particularly cited the coverage we gave to the real estate company."

Flint did not dispute any of the facts in the story, according to Schmitt, but complained that the company had sent the reporter three press releases that day and that the only one the paper chose to write about was the one involving Pyne.

Boycott unlikely to hurt paper's business

By THOMAS B. ROSENSTIEL

Mobil Corp.'s decision this week to cease any contact with the Wall Street Journal, the nation's largest newspaper, apparently is the largest case ever of an American corporation attempting to retaliate against a news organization through a news and advertising boycott.

Yet, many business and press officials said Tuesday that the plan to stop advertising in the Journal and to not talk to Journal reporters would present little obstacle to the paper's ability to cover the nation's fourth-largest company and was unlikely to win the support of most other corporations.

"Have you ever got so mad at the TV set you wanted to kick it?" Jim Michaels, editor of Forbes magazine, said. "That is what Mobil is doing. It won't make a bit of difference, but it makes them feel a little bit better."

Mobil, the New York-based oil company, disclosed Monday that it decided to boycott the Journal because "of five years of problems working with the paper," spokesman Michael Gross said. "There are numerous situations that have led to this decision."

The company, however, refused to explain why it thought such a boycott an appropriate way to handle its differences with the Journal. Gross said that Mobil had purchased about $500,000 worth of advertising in the Journal this year.

Journal spokesman Lawrence Armour said that the paper had not received any formal notice from Mobil, but that such an amount of advertising was a tiny fraction of the Journal's advertising revenues, which are undisclosed. Armour also said that the paper's advertising space in any case already is sold out for the rest of the year.

Although Mobil said it was the first time it ever had taken such action against the press, it did in 1977 stop funding the Bagehot Fellowship in Economics and Business Journalism at Columbia University in New York after journalist Chris Welles was selected as program director. Welles, now a Los Angeles Times writer, seven years earlier had written a book containing criticism of the oil industry.

Most cases of business trying to retaliate against news organizations for negative publicity usually are restricted to smaller companies protesting against their local newspapers, journalists said.

The only other case journalists recalled of a major corporation attempting to boycott a paper occurred in 1955, and also involved the Wall Street Journal. General Motors Corp., angered over the Journal publishing advance sketches of the then-unreleased 1956 model cars, withdrew advertising and attempted to deny Journal reporters access to the GM building.

"It lasted for all of three days," said Donald Postma, GM's manager of news relations for Detroit. "Everybody looked at it and realized it was inappropriate. The only lesson was that it was not the right way to handle this kind of problem."

Journalists and business officials Tuesday agreed that the Mobil action was unlikely to hamper Journal coverage of the oil company significantly. Armour said that Mobil still will release information over electronic wire services to which the Journal subscribes, and that Mobil also will continue to supply information to the Dow Jones News Service, which is owned by the Journal's parent company, Dow Jones, and staffed in part by Journal reporters.

"To a good business reporter these days, the company is only one source used to put together the story," said James K. Gentry, director of business journalism at the University of Missouri. "The Securities and Exchange Commission requires a substantial number of documents to be filed. The reporter also uses industry analysts, competitors, suppliers, former employees, and experts of all sorts. I wonder if Mobil could even muzzle all its executives."

Future car?

This model of a city-car is on display at the Essen Motor Show in West Germany. For city shopping, one can uncouple the rear seat compartment, which has an axle of its own, and have a two-seater that is easier to park. The car is powered by a Volkswagen Rabbit engine and should be priced at about $10,500 at the current exchange rates. The designer, Ludwig Aper, is still looking for someone to build the car however.

Sharing of offshore revenues still undecided after Tuesday meeting

By KATHRYN BAKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of the Interior and seven coastal states, including Texas, remain at odds over how to divide more than $5 billion in shared offshore oil revenues, an Interior Department official says.

The two sides met all day Tuesday in order to try to reach an agreement in the six-year battle, which centers on more than $5 billion in offshore oil revenues being held in escrow until the dispute is settled. The issue of future revenues is also unsettled.

"There was no concurrence or agreement on any issue raised," Interior Department Solicitor Frank Richardson, chairman of the meeting, said Tuesday.

Richardson said most of the discussion centered on the amount of money the states would receive and which different kinds of revenues would be included. The oil leases involved are on federal tracts that border state waters.

When Congress decreed six years ago that the states and the federal government should share the revenues, it said only that the money should be divided in a "fair and equitable" manner.

But what's fair and equitable is a matter of opinion. Texas Gov. Mark White said he would be satisfied if the state got a third of the revenues.

Richardson said the figures discussed Tuesday ranged from the 16-2/3 percent offered the states by Interior Secretary William Clark to a 50-50 split favored by Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

"The states' representatives outlined a number of issues on which they feel agreement can be reached, on condition that the Secretary of the Interior will be 'flexible' — to use their word — on a few basic points," said a statement Richardson issued after the meeting.

Besides Texas, other states involved are Louisiana, Alaska, Alabama, Florida, California and Mississippi. Texas and Louisiana have sued the federal government over the issue.

Waldenbooks experiments with small discount chain

By STEVE LIPSON
The Stamford Advocate

STAMFORD, Conn. — The first offspring of the summer union between Waldenbooks Co. and giant K Mart Corp. was born this past weekend: a five-store discount book chain.

The Reader's Market stores were converted from Waldenbooks stores as part of the Stamford-based book retailer's 90-day program to enter discounting, a field forbidden by its previous upscale parent.

Waldenbooks hopes that the stores, and an additional 65 stores that could be opened next year if these first five succeed, will be able to battle for a share of the rapidly growing discount book market without pilfering sales from the 876 established Waldenbooks stores.

"This is new business," said Patrick Padden, Waldenbooks executive vice president who has directed the move into discounting. "I think we're relating to two different customers."

In markets where Waldenbooks has faced competition from discounters such as Crown Books Corp. and Pickwick Discount Books, it has not seemed to surrender much business, Padden said. "The truth of the matter is where we have had Crown and Pickwick come in, we only felt the impact for a short time and then business returned," he said.

Crown, a 50 percent-owned subsidiary of Maryland-based Dart Drug Corp., is credited with developing the discount book chain concept. The company opened its first store in Washington, D.C., in 1977 and now has nearly 200 stores concentrated in a few major cities.

Pickwick is a subsidiary of Minneapolis-based Dayton Hudson Corp., which is also the parent of B. Dalton Booksellers, the nationwide rival to Waldenbooks in the full-price, full-service market. Dayton Hudson tested the Pickwick Discount Books concept during 1982 and 1983 in Columbus, Ohio, and then began national introduction of the stores earlier this year when the first of 20 stores planned for 1984 was opened.

Waldenbooks also formulated a plan for starting a discount operation at the time Dayton Hudson was first testing the market for Pickwick, Padden said. But Waldenbooks' former parent, Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc., declined to fund the project.

Analysts have said the upscale retail company was uncomfortable with the concept of discounting, but K Mart built its national reputation on aggressive price-cutting.

After Waldenbooks' sale to the nation's No. 2 retailer, Padden was sent from K Mart headquarters in Troy, Mich., where he served as director of new business. His first task after arriving in August was merging the unit's financial reports with K Mart's. Then he turned his attention to developing a discount book chain.

The first stores include one in Norwalk, Conn., one each in nearby Port Chester and Mamaroneck, N.Y., and two on New York's Long Island in Manhasset and Cedarhurst. Their proximity to the company's Stamford headquarters will allow them to be observed closely, Padden said.

Waldenbooks stores were converted to Reader's Markets because the company wanted to introduce the new stores quickly, but he said that future stores would probably be entirely new locations.

The company should know by April 1 whether the Reader's Markets are succeeding, Padden said. In the meantime, the search is on for potential locations to build additional stores. "You could see 40 to 65 stores opened in the next year," he said.

The Reader's Market stores will offer 35 percent discounts on hardcover editions of books on the New York Times best-seller list. Other books will carry 15 percent to 25 percent discounts.

Special ordering and other services associated with full-price stores will be retained. The biggest difference from Waldenbooks' other stores will be that each Reader's Market will stock only about 70 percent of the titles carried by a Waldenbooks, focusing on the most rapid turnover high, Padden said, leaving it to full-price stores to offer wider selections.

Using that formula, each Reader's Market should be able to generate higher sales volume than a typical Waldenbooks outlet. "We would like to think so," Padden said. "But we don't have the history."

Pipeline equipment auction may be West Texas' largest

The voluntary liquidation of more than $4.5 million in pipeline construction equipment today by McVean & Barlow, the Odessa-based pipeline company, may have been the largest auction of its kind in West Texas, according to William S. Miller, president of Miller & Miller Auctioneers.

The two-day auction was conducted at the new Permian Basin auction facility of the Fort Worth firm. The 44-acre yard located on West Loop 338 in Odessa was packed with equipment for the sale.

More than 160 pieces of heavy construction equipment, plus 150 vehicles of all sizes and hundreds of tools and spare parts were involved in the auction. Items for auction included: crawler tractors, crawler pipelayers, backhoes, front-end loaders, track rigs, cranes, trenchers, fork lifts, boring machines, test equipment, air compressors, drills, tractor trailers, winch trucks and pickups.

"All the equipment was in top shape," said McVean. "McVean & Barlow had an excellent maintenance program which they continued right up until the time of the sale. Also, necessary repairs were made to the equipment to make it field ready."

The veteran auctioneer said

that a buyer who knows what he wants and knows his business can find relatively new or slightly-used equipment for a good percentage below the price of new equipment.

Buyers from throughout the nation were on hand for the auction of the established pipeline company.

President of Mexico calls on oil union for assistance

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The powerful Mexican Oil Workers Union, plagued by allegations of corruption, is holding its annual convention here with President Miguel de la Madrid as the keynote speaker.

Calling the union "patriotic and nationalistic," de la Madrid asked for continued help in his efforts to bring Mexico out of its worst economic crisis in decades.

He said oil workers should increase efficiency, productivity and honesty "because Mexico demands it." De la Madrid opened the three-day convention Monday.

"We can't be satisfied with what we have achieved. I myself, at the start of my third year in office, can declare sincerely that I'm not satisfied and I am going to work even harder," the president said.

The union, with 190,000 members, is Mexico's strongest and wealthiest labor group.

For years, the state oil monopoly Pemex allowed the union to decide who gets contracts. Allegations are that kickbacks for awarding construction projects were widespread, although there have been specific figures.

Changes in contract procedures were made this year in what was seen as a major step forward in de la Madrid's campaign of "moral renewal" to rid the government and society of endemic corruption.

A dissident faction within the union has called for an official investigation, but it is widely believed that the government would be reluctant to act in fear that the union could disrupt petroleum production — the nation's No. 1 source by far of foreign exchange.

The allegations center on Joaquin Hernandez Galicia, the union's leader popularly known as La Quina, and union Secretary-General Salvador Barragan Camacho.

Hernandez Galicia said in welcoming de la Madrid to the convention that oil workers are "true, loyal and self-sacrificing men."

"This great convention, frank and sincere, is not going to hide the errors that the business (Pemex) and the union have, because with truth you will govern better," he said.

Hernandez Galicia noted that union members had been among the dead in the explosions and fires last month at a Pemex storage site in San Juan Ixhuatpec, where at least 452 people died.

Some early reports have said that the union will make its most complete financial disclosure statement ever during the convention. Holdings reportedly include thousands of acres of land, manufacturing companies and a chain of 61 supermarkets.

Dollar falls in Japan, Europe; gold prices unchanged

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in Japan and Europe in early trading today. Gold bullion prices were little changed.

The dollar was quoted at lower levels against all other major currencies a few hours after European markets opened today.

Dealers said investors were selling dollars to take profits on the currency's recent high levels. However, they said no firm trend was apparent in morning dealings.

Midmorning dollar rates in Europe included:

-3.09425 West German marks, down from 3.1100.
-2.55025 Swiss francs, down from 2.5675.

-9.4775 French francs, down from 9.5515.

-3.4900 Dutch guilders, down from 3.5140.

HL&P gets 27 percent drop in lignite price

AUSTIN (AP) — The coal supplier for a proposed Houston Lighting & Power Co. generating plant at Malakoff has dropped the price by 27 percent, according to HL&P.

The cut boosts the attractiveness of the proposed plant, say two lawmakers who are fighting efforts to cancel Public Utility Commission approval for the East Texas facility.

The lignite supply agreement between Getty Oil Co.-North American Coal Corp., and an HL&P affiliate was lowered to $1.54 per million Btu from $2.13 per million Btu. HL&P spokesman Steve Gonzales said Tuesday. That could mean savings of $40 million a year for ratepayers, according to Sen. Chet Edwards, D-Duncanville.

The 35-year contract is for lignite to be used at the Malakoff plant scheduled to come on line in 1990. The PUC has scheduled a Dec. 12 hearing on whether the plant is still needed.

Edwards said the price reduction "guarantees that HL&P ratepayers will have no cheaper or longer-lasting source of fuel" than the lignite. Edwards and Rep. Tom Waldrop, D-Corpus Christi, want the PUC to allow HL&P to proceed with construction of the plant.

Edwards said Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's "involvement and interest in behalf of HL&P ratepayers played a major role in making this rate reduction possible."

"Now that the contract price has been renegotiated, our intention will be to convince the PUC that the Malakoff plant is essential to fuel diversification and that the plant should be built as scheduled," Edwards and Waldrop said in a joint statement.

Gonzales said the lower price makes the plant "more appealing."

Union's oil shale project still not working after 14 months

PARACHUTE, Colo. (AP) — After 14 months of starts, stops, revisions and adjustments, Union Oil Co.'s pioneer commercial oil shale project still doesn't work.

Union Oil officials, while saying they remain confident of the project's eventual success, continue designing potential new components of the project in an effort to produce oil, according to sources on the project near Parachute.

The Union Oil project is the only remaining active oil shale undertaking in western Colorado, more than two years after Exxon USA closed its Colony project, ending three years of astronomical growth in the fledgling industry.

Union Oil's failure to this point casts a shadow over possible future funding by the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corp., according to federal officials.

Future oil shale project funding depends on Union's Phase I project, Missy Malloy, a spokeswoman for the SFC, said Monday. "If Phase I doesn't work, no one will go on with Phase II."

When Congress created the SFC in 1980, the government envisioned a synthetic fuels industry in the United States producing close to a million barrels of oil per day.

The decline in oil prices took the immediacy away from synthetic fuels, and proponents of the project barely staved off extermination of the program in the closing days of Congress this fall.

Union Oil kept on, spending an estimated $650 million on its project near Parachute with an eye toward a contract worth $400 million in federal price supports for shale oil.

Two months ago, Congress cut $5.4 billion from the SFC's spending authority, leaving about $7 billion to fund projects holding letters of intent from the SFC.

The Union Oil project has become the "linchpin" of the country's oil shale projects, SFC officials have said.

And since Phase I still has not reached production, price supports, and loan guarantees for other projects continue to wait in the wings.

The SFC board of directors, reconstituted by President Reagan last month after Congress cut the board's spending power, will meet Dec. 13. Ms. Malloy said planning, not decision-making, makes up the agenda.

A Union Oil production success would make it easier to retain synthetic fuels funding, Rep. Ray Kogovsek, D-Colo., said Monday.

"It's going to be a continuing battle" to fund syn-fuels, he said. "When you're talking this kind of money, it's a large target out there. It's going to be vulnerable with $200 billion deficits."

Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., is more confident, saying he believes the recent funding cut "seems to me we've gone to the bare bones for a modest synfuels industry."

Union is seeking $2.7 billion in federal price supports for Phase II. The Cathedral Bluffs Oil Shale Co., a joint venture of Tenneco Inc. and Occidental Petroleum Corp., is asking $2.2 billion for its project, which will produce 80 percent of its oil from Union Oil technology.

Union Oil's Phase I project, including its pioneer retort, which "cooks" oil from rock, was completed in September 1983, and the company has been trying to produce oil ever since.

Its major problems, according to sources at the project, stem from disposal of waste rock. The cooling and disposal system has received the most attention from engineers, they say.

Phase I is designed to produce 10,000 barrels of oil per day, but its best production so far has been about 1,000 barrels in each of several successful runs — operations that ran only six hours, according to employee sources at the project who asked not to be identified. The California-based Union Oil has ordered all its workers not to discuss the project with reporters.

Union is close to acquiring permits for its planned Phase II, which would expand the operation in increments of 20,000 barrels per day up to 100,000 barrels.

At a planning and zoning commission hearing in Parachute last week, Union spokesman Lowell Torkelson said Phase I's troubles "really don't matter" in obtaining permits for Phase II because "you know how long it takes to get a permit. Two years at least. We want to be ready."

However, it is unlikely the SFC would agree to further oil shale funding for Union or Cathedral Bluffs until Union's Phase I produces, Ms. Malloy said.

Yields increase first time in three months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose for the first time in three months at this week's auctions.

The government on Monday sold $13.6 billion in new securities — half in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 8.52 percent, up from last week's 8.43 percent, and half in six-month bills at an average rate of 8.67 percent, up from 8.5 percent.

The average for three-month bills had dropped for 12 straight weeks since it was at 10.63 percent on Sept.

4. The average for six-month bills had dropped every week but one during the same period, declining from 10.75 percent.

The new yields were the highest since Nov. 19, when they were 8.59 percent for three-month bills and 8.79 percent for six-month bills.

Nuke plant fuel loading on schedule

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station remains on schedule for fuel loading in 1985's first quarter, possibly as early as January, a spokesman says.

"We're maintaining officially that the fuel loading will be during the first quarter of 1985, but we're optimistic about January," Dan Canady, of the Arizona Nuclear Power Project, said Monday.

Canady said all construction work and major testing has been completed on the first reactor unit of the three-reactor plant under construction about 50 miles west of downtown Phoenix.

The ANPP is a unit of Arizona Public Service Co., which manages Palo Verde for the consortium of Arizona, California, New Mexico and Texas utilities building the $9 billion plant.

"Things are just really looking good out here now. It looks like most of the main hurdles we've faced in the past have been gotten over," Canady said. "It looks as if Unit 1 is on the eve of loading fuel."

APS executives had said in recent months they thought fuel loading might occur as early as December, but Canady said there had been no problems delaying the plant's progress toward fuel loading.

"Everything's just kind of day to day on this," he said. "We really can't put a finger on any date."

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has yet to issue a low-power generating license for Unit 1, needed before fuel loading can commence.

Canady said he anticipates no problems in getting the license.

"The NRC is deeply involved with the project now," he said. "The NRC has a pretty good handle on just where the project is, what kind of shape it's in."

Greg Cook, an NRC spokesman at the agency's Walnut Creek, Calif., regional office, said the NRC expected Palo Verde's managers to formally apply for the license late in December.

"They have a couple of weeks of testing left," he said.

Once fuel is loaded during a two-week period, the plant's managers will begin a lengthy testing program in which the plant will be operated at several stages, including production of electricity at less-than-capacity levels.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Treasury's new tax proposal represents a big change in tax policy from what has prevailed over the past several decades.

It will be fairer, said Secretary Donald Regan, in that two people earning equal amounts would pay roughly the same taxes. But fairness, in the sense of equality of tax payments, has not always been the goal of tax policy.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP)—The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 2.85 Tuesday, fell 9.94 to 1,175.13 by noontime today.

Losers held a 9-5 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Phillips Petroleum jumped 7 to 55. A group led by T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum, said late Tuesday that it would offer $60 apiece for at least 15 million Phillips shares as a step toward gaining control of the company.

Gold futures

Home-buying partnerships were arranged and structured in such a way that the tax deductions exceeded investment.

Oil exploration schemes were developed that produced more deductions than oil.

Tax-reducing investments in machinery were made that did little to make U.S. heavy industries more competitive with foreigners. Meanwhile, service industries, which have been growing faster, were denied such deductions.

Investor's Guide

Bonds can't pay more than value

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I have a $10 Series E bond, purchased for $7.50 in June 1944. It seems to me that this bond, which no longer is accumulating interest, must be a collector's item. Do you have any idea what it is worth?

A. It's worth exactly $41.32 — the $7.50 you paid for it, plus $33.82 accrued interest. You can get that redemption value by cashing the bond through a bank or other U.S. Savings Bond redemption agent.

There are lots of old savings bonds around. It's unlikely any collector would pay you more than the bond's redemption value. Even if you found one, you both would fracture the rules, because according to the Treasury Department "savings bonds are not transferable in the form in which they were issued." In other words, you can't sell your bond. You only can redeem it. I advise you to do just that.

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP)—The Treasury's new tax proposal represents a big change in tax policy from what has prevailed over the past several decades.

It will be fairer, said Secretary Donald Regan, in that two people earning equal amounts would pay roughly the same taxes. But fairness, in the sense of equality of tax payments, has not always been the goal of tax policy.

Gold futures

Home-buying partnerships were arranged and structured in such a way that the tax deductions exceeded investment.

Oil exploration schemes were developed that produced more deductions than oil.

Tax-reducing investments in machinery were made that did little to make U.S. heavy industries more competitive with foreigners. Meanwhile, service industries, which have been growing faster, were denied such deductions.

'Tis The Season To Be Baking

The aromas of holiday baking signal to all that the season to be jolly is here! This year, start the holiday excitement with the most festive and flavorful kitchen creations ever.

Add decorative pizzazz to the table with Snow-Capped Cookie Trees, made from an old-fashioned sugar cookie dough delicately flavored with lemon. Each tree is ingeniously created by sliding together two cookies cut with opposite slots from the top and bottom. Decorate simply, as shown here, or more elaborately, with a thick or thin drizzle of glaze, colorful "M&M's" Chocolate Candies and shiny silver dragees. Once finished, the tasty "trees" make a festive forest for display.

Traditional pumpkin has never tasted better than in Streusel Pumpkin Cake, a moist cake marbled with a brown sugar, cinnamon and chopped nut mixture and crowned with a delicious crumb topping. Served with a hot drink, the cake is a wonderful treat for brunch, after caroling or while waiting up for Santa. Presented on a pretty plate, it also makes a nice offering when visiting friends.

When guests drop in, bring out a tray filled with special holiday goodies. Traditional shortbread takes a new, but familiar shape with Santa's Shortbread Crescents, a delicate buttery cookie with a sprinkling of cinnamon-sugar. Caramel Sparkle Bars are a bountiful combination of favorite holiday flavors—chewy caramel, delicious chocolate, toasted oats—with a special touch of orange.

Keep your merry munchers singing with Golden Graham Crunch, a surprise twist on traditional brittle. Chopped nuts and multi-colored chocolate candies make a fun, tasty topping on graham crackers glazed with homemade toffee. Keep some within reach for tree trimming or gift wrapping breaks.

Holiday Snack Packs are a sweet and savory combination of sesame sticks or pretzels, plain or peanut milk chocolate candies and raisins. This handy snack mix is ideal when the helpers are hungry and you're running short on time. It also makes a clever stocking stuffer or tree ornament when wrapped in colored cellophane tied by a snazzy ribbon, or an easy gift idea when presented in an attractive glass container.

Friends and family will agree: the quickest way to spread Christmas cheer comes through the kitchen door.

|-----------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Cookies              | Glaze                      |
| 3/4 cup butter or margarine | 2 egg whites                      |
| 3/4 cup sugar               | 4 cups sifted confectioners sugar |
| 3/4 cup light corn syrup    | 2 tablespoons lemon juice         |
| 1 teaspoon vanilla          | Hot Water                         |
| 3-1/4 cups flour            | Food Coloring                     |
| 1 teaspoon baking soda      | "M&M's" Plain Chocolate Candies   |
| 1/2 teaspoon salt           | Silver Dragees                    |
| 1 tablespoon lemon rind     |                                   |

For cookies, beat together butter, sugar, corn syrup and vanilla until light and fluffy. Gradually add combined flour, baking soda and salt, mixing well. Blend in lemon rind. Divide dough in half. Wrap each portion securely; chill 2 hours. On 17 x 14-inch cookie sheet, roll out one portion of dough to 1/4-inch thickness. Using patterns,* cut out one large tree half. Remove pattern; mark center point by making slight indentation in dough. Remove excess dough from around cut out tree; chill excess dough reserving for small tree halves. On separate cookie sheet, repeat with remaining portion of dough, forming a second large tree half. Bake at 350°F. for 16 to 18 minutes or until edges are lightly browned.

Immediately cut a slot on one large tree half from the center point to the top as wide as the cookie is thick (about 1/2-inch wide). Repeat on the second large tree half from center point to the bottom. Remove excess dough from center of slot of cookie.

Immediately, gently loosen entire cookie from cookie sheet; cool 3 minutes. Remove to wire rack to cool 20 minutes. To test if slots are wide enough, carefully assemble tree halves by sliding cookie with bottom slot onto cookie with top slot. If tree halves do not fit, trim slot area so cookies will slide together and rest evenly while standing upright. Separate cookies; cool thoroughly. To make 4 small tree halves, repeat procedures with small tree pattern for rolling, cutting, baking and making center slots with reserved chilled dough as directed above.

To assemble, beat egg whites until foamy, gradually adding confectioners sugar. Add 2 tablespoons lemon juice, beating until glaze is of spreading consistency. Reserve 1/2 cup glaze, covering with damp cloth. Tint remaining glaze with food coloring, as desired. If glaze thickens, add a few drops of water. Glaze top side of each tree half; let dry. Carefully slide tree halves together. Add 1 to 2 tablespoons water to reserved 1/2 cup glaze and drizzle on trees. Decorate as desired with candies and silver dragees. Makes 1 large and 2 small cookie trees.

VARIATION: For Ornament Cookies, roll out chilled dough on lightly floured board about 1/8-inch thick. Cut with floured 3-inch assorted Christmas shaped cookie cutters. Transfer to cookie sheet. Bake at 350°F. for 10 to 12 minutes or until edges are lightly browned. Immediately make a hole at top of each cookie. Cool as directed. Glaze and decorate as desired. Makes about 4 dozen (3-inch) cookies.

*NOTE: To make large tree pattern, trace tree half outline onto wax paper. Fold wax paper in half along center line of tree and cut out pattern. Unfold to form pattern. Using wax paper tracing, cut one pattern from cardboard. Repeat process for small tree. Place cardboard pattern onto dough and cut around with sharp knife.

STREUSEL PUMPKIN CAKE

- |   |                                   |
| 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar | 3 1/4 cups flour                  |

Combine brown sugar, nuts and cinnamon in small bowl; reserve. Beat together pumpkin, granulated sugar and oil in large bowl until smooth. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Gradually add combined 3 cups flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt and pumpkin pie spice; mix well. Pour one half of batter into greased 10-inch tube pan; top with 1/2 cup reserved brown sugar mixture. Top with remaining batter. Add remaining 1/4 cup flour to remaining brown sugar mixture, mix well. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Sprinkle over top of batter; press lightly. Bake at 350°F. for 1 hour or until wooden pick inserted in center of cake comes out clean. Cool on wire rack 15 minutes. Remove from pan; cool upright on wire rack. If desired, drizzle with glaze by combining 1 cup confectioners sugar and 5 to 6 teaspoons warm water, mixing until smooth and of desired consistency. Makes one 10-inch tube cake.

SANTA'S SHORTBREAD CRESCENTS

Mix together egg white and water; reserve. Combine 1/4 cup sugar and cinnamon; reserve. Combine remaining 1/2 cup sugar, flour, cornstarch and salt; cut in butter with pastry blender until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Work mixture together with hands until dough forms ball. Divide dough into 6 portions. Roll out one portion of dough on lightly floured board about 1/4-inch thick to form a 6-inch circle. Cut into 8 wedges. Brush reserved egg white mixture over circle; sprinkle circle with 3/4 teaspoon cinnamon-sugar mixture. Roll up each wedge starting with wide end to form a crescent shape. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Brush with additional egg white mixture and sprinkle with cinnamon-sugar mixture. Repeat with remaining dough. Bake at 325°F. for 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Cool completely on wire rack. Makes 4 dozen cookies.

Food trends sweep country

By MERLE ELLIS

I'm not sure just how this letter will reach you, but I had to write. You would not believe what has been going on in the kitchens of this country since the fire went out on your wood-burning stove.

Cooking in this country has gone through several cycles of super-silly insanity since you passed away. They call them "trends" today. The big one these past few years has been dubbed nouvelle cuisine. It got its start a while back in France, then made it across the Atlantic to New York with a lot of hoopla and fanfare because it doesn't use flour and cream — nouvelle cuisine is light and lean.

By the time the trend hit Berkeley, not too far from my front door, the trend had been labeled the New California Cuisine and the catch phrase is "less is more."

Do you remember those tiny little carrots you used to pull out from between the good ones so there'd be more room for the good ones to grow? Then, instead of feedin' 'em to the hogs, you'd cook 'em up for us kids because we thought they were so cute.

Well, it seems lots of folks here in California are still kids at heart, too.

They must think those little veggies are really cute, or else they've got a whole lot more money than they have good common sense. They'll pay a small fortune for a few of those teeny little carrots, two or three pip-squeak little potatoes on a plate alongside a skimpy little chicken breast swimming in a sauce-made of raspberry vinegar. I know it sounds strange, but it's really not all that bad — once you get used to it. It's just not very filling.

There's another trend these days, the health trend. It seems that most of the food we used to eat wasn't very good for us. It was loaded with sodium, cholesterol, fat, and calories. It's a wonder we survived. You might have lived way past your 89 years if you hadn't cooked all that fabulous fried chicken in all that lard, and used that same somewhat saturated fat to make all those delicious flaky crusts for all those wonderful apple, pecan, and pumpkin pies. We'll never know for sure, but you might have lived to be 100. You might have, but with all due respect to the creative young cooks of the New California Cuisine, with all of its "less-is-more", I'm not sure you'd have wanted to. There's more to life than "light and lean."

out all those wonderful chocolate cakes that we used to consume, before they had time to cool, covered with fresh-churned butter. And if your fried chicken and chicken-fried steak have contributed to an earlier than might be demise — so be it! I wouldn't have it any other way. The good food you taught me to love has been one of the major joys of living for me. And, evidently I'm not the only one that feels that way about their Grandmas' cookin'.

That's really why I'm writing, to tell you that you're "in" again. Your kind of cooking is the latest trend. It's as hot as August in Nebraska, I wish you could see it. It seems that there are all kinds of new restaurants that specialize in what one food consultant called "momma food." Pot roast, fried chicken, mashed potatoes (preferably lumpy), meat loaf and apple pies — all those good foods you used to fix — are "in," they're "hot," they're "trendy," I thought you'd like to know.

Thanks for lots of good food and fond memories.

Your loving grandson

Costly butter not necessary for best cookie

By SYLVIA CARTER
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When a suitor arrives with the wrong brand of butter cookies, the woman on the radio ad cries, "Don't try to 'buttercup' me! Take your cheap butter cookies and beat it!"

But does "cheap" butter really make for a cheap butter cookie? Not necessarily.

In Newsday's test kitchen, we baked plain butter cookies with butters from France, West Germany, Denmark and even Spain, as well as with familiar American supermarket brands.

One margarine-butter blend and several margarines also were used to see whether the butter really makes a difference when it comes to baking holiday cookies.

In an informal taste test, some tasters chose cookies baked with one or two of the French butters, but many preferred cookies made with Hotel Bar, Land O' Lakes, Breakstone or other American butters.

Possibly this is because the domestic butter does not have to travel long distances and is more likely to be fresh. People had so many different favorite cookies, however, that there was no real consensus.

And even when a taster chose one of the French butters, the difference cited was slight. Unless you are bent on impressing your friends with name-dropping an imported brand, it probably is foolish to spend extra money to buy an imported butter for as high as $3.25 to $6 a pound when $2 worth of local butter will make good cookies, too.

"Normandy butter is indeed wonderful — in Normandy," wrote Irene Sax in her book "Cook's Marketplace New York." "But when you're dealing with a food that is so perishable, one that picks up every other odor in the vicinity, why add an extra element of risk? And then pay three or four times as much for it?"

She adds, "I, for one, am perfectly happy with Land O' Lakes on my English muffin."

All the butters, the butter-margarine blend and the margarines also were tried alone, and spread on Italian bread. Again, supermarket butter tasted fine on a slice of bread. But one or two butters that tasted almost disagreeable on bread were all right in baked products.

One of the fancy brands had an odd taste that seemed like artificial orange flavoring, though it probably wasn't. Whatever it was, it didn't taste good on bread, but baked into cookies the unacceptable flavor was not noticeable.

Butter, despite woeful news on cholesterol, is one of the most easily digested fats, and certainly is one of the best-tasting. If one is cutting down on butter for health reasons, it may be more satisfying to sharply curtail the amounts of butter used instead of giving it up entirely.

That way the tiny allotment can be had on one slice of good crusty bread per day, or in one butter cookie, or on one vegetable.

We tried a few whipped butters, and they tasted pure and fresh, but baking with them is tricky because the proportions change.

Here is what we thought of some of the best and worst of the 18 butters tested, both on bread and in plain cookies made of flour, sugar, egg and butter, without additional flavoring. A few butters were not used in baking cookies.

—Familiar butters. Butter from J.J. Farms Creamery Inc., of Brooklyn, packaged for a specialty store, was creamy and smelled and tasted sweet. It also had a natural pale color. Breakstone's unsalted butter was so pure and sweet it had an almost innocent taste. Hotel Bar butter was delicate and pale. Land O' Lakes unsalted butter was about the same as the other leading brands. Of one taster's top three cookie choices, two were made with American butter, one with French butter.

Jones scores at halftime with winning snacks

By MURIEL BUCKLES
Copley News Service

Bert Jones likes the action "hot." On the football field or in the kitchen, Jones, a former NFL quarterback and popular Lite Beer all-star, looks for zest in whatever he does.

When Jones wants to make points in the kitchen of his Louisiana home, he starts with football's favorite halftime snacks, beer and peanuts. But he makes them sizzle with Cajun-style seasonings — heavy on the cayenne pepper and other Southern spices — inspired by his wife, Danielle's, Cajun heritage.

Spicy Cajun Peanut Tongue-Teasers, so flavorful that you can hardly stop eating after the first bite, and Creole Cheese 'n' Peanut Crackers, a slice-and-serve refrigerated dough that bakes into crisp wafers, are two easy favorites that Jones likes to tackle at halftime in his own kitchen.

For heartier appetites, Jones likes to serve Cajun Cornbread "Pizza," made with a cornbread dough and topped with crunchy peanuts and hot and spicy andouille sausage.

Beer is the ideal beverage with Cajun cooking, teaming beautifully with such ingredients as shrimp, crab and crawfish, which are so much a part of this unique American cuisine. You can even cook the shrimp with beer to make an interesting Shrimp Etouffe and Beer stew — a "super bowl" that can be quickly put together during halftime.

With Jones's recipes, you can stir up your own halftime action in the kitchen with beer and peanuts and score winning points with fellow football fans gathered around the tube.

Chocolate snobs scorned

Hearst News Service

Americans may be crazy about chocolate, but they sure don't know much about it, says TV cook Annemarie Huste.

The German-born Huste, whose "Cooking with Annemarie" program is seen on cable television, does know chocolate. She was making truffles when most of us were still eating Hershey bars.

Huste says that "Americans feel very insecure about their own products. They think if it isn't imported, it isn't good." On the contrary, she says. "There are some really terrible chocolates made in Europe and some very good ones made here. And vice-versa."

Huste scorns chocolate snobbery and says pretentious packaging does not make the product. What does make the chocolate is texture, taste and percentage of cocoa butter, she says. And cocoa butter is the key.

Chocolate is made from cocoa beans which are roasted, broken up into "nibs" and then crushed or ground to produce pure chocolate liquor (not to be confused with creme de cacao), Huste explains.

All chocolate products come from this liquor. Chocolate can be left unsweetened for baking chocolate, blended with sugar or other sweeteners to make semi-sweet or sweet varieties, mixed with dairy products to make milk chocolate, and paired with all manner of ingredients to make candy.

Isolate the solids from the butter and you have cocoa powder (sometimes pressed into dry cakes for commercial use). Blend the liquid cocoa butter with vegetable shortening, sugar and vanilla and it becomes "white chocolate" — a misnomer.

Generally, Huste says, the higher the cocoa butter content, the better the chocolate. But there are other ways of measuring chocolate quality, she says.

A bar of chocolate should be true in color, from nutty brown to almost black, depending on the variety. A grey-blue "bloom" on the surface means the cocoa butter has risen to the surface because the chocolate was not stored in a cool enough place. Chocolate should be kept in a cool, dark place well away from other strongly flavored foods.

Bite the chocolate. It should break cleanly, rather than crumbling. The texture should be smooth, never gritty. In the mouth, the chocolate should literally melt on the tongue. The longer it lingers, the lower the quality and less pure the chocolate.

The flavor should "open up" at the first bite, and it is here that the taster's individual preference takes over, Huste says. No chocolate, not even the unsweetened baking variety, should leave a bitter aftertaste. Beyond that, the only question is, "Do you like it?"

As with coffee, Huste says, the flavor is dependent on the temperature at which the beans were roasted, the length of roasting time and the quality and blend of the beans, as well as the presence of any other ingredients.

Price can be an indicator of quality, Huste says. Good chocolate is never cheap, but some lesser quality chocolate is also expensive. And chocolate that's not been properly handled may not be worth the price.

Huste recommends conducting your own chocolate taste test by purchasing the smallest possible amount of the chocolate brands you're investigating.

To put baking chocolate to the test, try truffles, Huste suggests. With this blend of chocolate, cream, butter and flavorings, she says "you only get out what you put in." If the chocolate wasn't the best, if the cream and butter weren't fresh or if you stunted on the liqueur, you can taste it.

The truffle is the one-chocolate candy that can easily be made at home. It may, in fact, be better homemade because it has a limited shelf life, she says.

DEAR ABBY

Parents won't discuss will

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My brother, sisters and I are trying to deal with an issue I'm sure you hear about often: Our parents do not have a will.

I am 52 and the oldest of eight children. My father is 78 and in very poor health. My mother is 71, and she is also in poor health and failing fast.

Over the years when they were in better health, we tried to get them to draw up their wills, but they wouldn't even discuss it. Now that they're both ailing, it's even more difficult to get them to face reality. Two of my brothers tried to bring it up last Christmas, but Mom and Dad both pretended they didn't hear. My sister mentioned it again last August, but the folks refused to talk about it.

I know I'm not alone in this dilemma, but that doesn't help me. Do you, or any of your readers, have any suggestions? — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: Perhaps if your parents' lawyer were to tell them what would happen to their estate should they die without leaving a will, they would make one. (Maybe not.)

I think you children have said enough. Quit nagging them about it, or they might call in a food taster.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter (educated, attractive, poised, mid-20s) told me two years ago that she is gay. (I don't want to go into details for fear of detection.) "Mary" spoke to a therapist at my suggestion, who told her: "It's your life, you are over 21, and if you're happy, you don't have a problem."

I spoke to another therapist at the same time who told me, "Learn to accept it or lose your child."

My husband and I refuse to accept it. We love our daughter very much and have always been supportive of her, but this is too much. It is affecting everything we do.

Is there hope for a reversal? We can't get her to see another therapist. I guess I'm looking for a miracle. Is there a support group for parents? Will they send information in a "plain brown wrapper"? I have many unanswered questions. Please don't use my name or city, either. — DISTRAUGHT MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I can't give you any better advice than the therapist gave you. If your daughter is happy, she has no problem. If you can't accept her, then you have a problem. Don't look for a miracle and don't hope for a reversal.

Write to: Parents FLAG, P.O. Box 24565, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024 and ask for its enlightening literature. It's free. This is a non-profit organization, so please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Do you know how "Kathleen in the Bronx" knew that the "ghost" in her house was Jewish?

Because it kept saying "NOO?" instead of "BOO!" — BERNIE SABER IN SCOTTSDALE

DEAR ABBY: Back in 1958 you printed a confidential to "Cannot Be Consoled." It was a very comforting message to parents whose child had died. My wife kept that clipping all these years because we lost a daughter about that time. As you can see, it is now old and faded and falling apart. Please run it again. It may give comfort to others as it did to us. Thank you. — JOSEPH J. ATTARDO, JEWETT CITY, CONN.

Olive oil used in different dishes

Copley News Service

BISTECCA ALLA FIORENTINA
2 (1 lb.) shell steaks (strip sirloin, T-bone)
¼ cup olive oil
2 tbsps. melted butter
½ tsp. freshly ground black pepper

Salt to taste
4 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. lemon juice
2 tbsps. minced parsley

Buy steak with bone left in. Trim most of fat. Let stand in mixture of oil, 2 tablespoons melted butter and pepper 30 minutes, turning steak over once or twice to coat.

Steaks are customarily broiled over charcoal fire, but very hot broiler will do. Broil steaks 5 minutes on each side, or to desired degree of rareness, turning only once. Salt to taste.

While steaks are broiling, melt 4 tablespoons butter. Stir in lemon juice and parsley. Pour over steaks.

SPAGHETTINI WITH FRESH BASIL AND TOMATO SAUCE

1 large bunch fresh basil, preferably with smallest possible leaves
2 cups canned Italian plum tomatoes, seeded, drained and coarsely chopped
5 large cloves garlic, peeled and chopped fine
¼ cup olive oil, more if desired
Salt
Freshly ground pepper, about 6 twists of the mill

1 lb. spaghetti (thin spaghetti)

Pull off all basil leaves from stalks, rinse briefly in cold water and roughly chop. Yield should be about 1½ to 2 cups. Put chopped basil, tomatoes, garlic, olive oil, 1 teaspoon salt and pepper in uncovered saucepan and cook over medium-high heat for 15 minutes. Taste and correct for salt.

Drop spaghetti in 4 quarts boiling salted water. Spaghetti should be truly al dente, very firm to the bite.

Drain spaghetti in large colander, giving colander two or three vigorous upward jerks to make all water run off, and transfer quickly to large hot bowl. Add sauce, mixing it thoroughly into spaghetti. You may add few drops of raw olive oil. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

¼ cup chopped celery with leaves
¼ cup chopped onion
1 bunch (about 1½ pounds) broccoli, cut into small pieces
2 cups clear fat-free beef broth
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk

In a medium saucepan gently cook celery and onion in the butter until wilted. Add broccoli, broth, salt and pepper. Bring to a boil; cover and boil gently until broccoli is tender — about 20 minutes; puree. Stir in milk and heat. Makes about 1 quart. If soup is thicker than you like, add broth or milk and correct seasoning. Repeated by request.

Indian moglai foods exotic

By BARBARA HANSEN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

Northern Indian moglai dishes resemble a rich tapestry in their ornate spicing, their varied and sometimes brilliant coloring and their complex flavors.

These qualities make them appropriate for the holidays, an exotic change from ham and turkey, caviar and cranberries, pates and plum pudding.

Although unusual, the dishes presented here will not spittle palates unaccustomed to Indian food. While authentic in flavor, they are delicately seasoned, never overpowered by the chiles that set one's mouth aflame when eating southern Indian curries.

Ingredients such as brown cardamom pods, black cumin seeds and garam masala, a spice blend, may be unfamiliar, but all are available in Indian spice shops.

It may surprise some that "curry powder" is missing from these recipes. However, Indian cooks season with individual blends of ingredients, not pre-mixed powders. One should be aware that American-style curry powder is radically different from the Indian blends. Thus, the meat curry included here will not taste like meat seasoned with supermarket curry powder.

The recipes for this holiday buffet come from Omar Khayyam, a northern Indian restaurant in Singapore.

OMAR KHAYYAM PRAWNS

Salt
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
1 1/2 teaspoons white sesame seeds
1/2 teaspoon black sesame seeds
3/4 teaspoon caraway seeds, scant
1/4 cup flour
8 to 10 medium prawns, shelled and deveined
Oil for deep-frying
Beat eggs. Add salt to taste, cayenne pepper, sesame and caraway seeds and mix. Add flour and mix well. Stir in prawns and let stand 15 minutes. Heat oil in saucpan or skillet over medium heat. Coat prawns well with batter, then add to oil and fry until golden brown. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MEAT CURRY A LA SAKHRANI

2 pounds boneless beef, lamb or chicken
1/2 cup oil
8 cloves garlic, sliced
3/4 teaspoon cardamom seeds, scant
2 large onions, finely chopped
1 teaspoon turmeric
3 tablespoons grated ginger root
2 teaspoons grated garlic
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons cayenne pepper, or to taste
10 whole cloves
1 (3-inch) stick cinnamon
1 cup finely chopped tomato
1/4 cup plain yogurt
1 1/4 cups hot water

1 teaspoon ground cardamom
4 teaspoons white cumin seeds, lightly crushed
1 teaspoon black cumin seeds
Cut meat into bite-size pieces or thin slices. Set aside. Heat oil in large saucpan over medium heat. Add sliced garlic and cardamom seeds and stir 4 seconds. Add onions and cook until golden brown. Add turmeric, ginger, grated garlic, salt, cayenne, cloves, cinnamon stick, tomato and yogurt and stir 30 seconds. Add meat and mix. Cook and stir 10 minutes.

Add hot water and mix. Cover and simmer over medium heat until meat is almost tender. Add ground cardamom, white and black cumin seeds and stir 30 seconds. Cover and cook until meat is tender. Add more hot water, if needed, for sauce. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

FISH MOGLAI

2 (3-4 pound) frozen pomfret, thawed, or 1 (1 1/2- to 2-pound) whole fish
1 tablespoon finely grated ginger root
2 cloves garlic, finely grated
1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
Salt
1/2 teaspoon ground mustard
1 tablespoon tamarind pulp
1 1/2 tablespoons hot water
2 teaspoons red chili powder
1 teaspoon grated ginger root
1 1/2 teaspoons ground cumin
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1 1/2 tablespoons finely grated onion
2 tablespoons finely cut cilantro
1 tablespoon oil

Clean fish and remove gills. Cut deep slits crosswise 3-4 inch apart on both sides, from tail to head. Mix ginger, garlic, lemon juice, 1-2 teaspoons salt and mustard. Spread mixture over fish and in slits. Marinate in refrigerator 1 to 2 hours.

Soak tamarind in hot water. Knead to blend, then strain. Combine tamarind liquid, 1 teaspoon salt, chili powder, ginger root, cumin, coriander, onion, cilantro and oil. Coat fish and slits with mixture and marinate 1 hour longer. Place fish in baking pan and bake at 350 degrees 20 minutes or until flesh flakes easily. Makes 4 servings.

NENTARA (Mixed Vegetables)

1/4 cup butter
1 1/4 teaspoons cumin seeds
1/4 teaspoon turmeric
1/4 teaspoon cayenne pepper, or to taste
Salt
1/2 head cauliflower, cut in 1-inch pieces
1 1/2 cups diced potatoes, 1-inch pieces
3/4 cup diced tomato, 1-inch pieces
1 1/2 cups fresh or thawed frozen green peas
10 small whole onions
2 fresh California chiles, julienned
2 tablespoons julienne strips ginger root
1/4 teaspoon garam masala
2 cups loosely packed cilantro leaves, finely chopped

Heat butter over medium heat in large saucpan and add cumin seeds. Stir 3 seconds, then add turmeric, cayenne and season to taste with salt. Add cauliflower, potatoes, tomato, peas, onions, chiles and ginger and mix well. Sprinkle garam masala over vegetables and mix. Cover and cook over very low heat until vegetables are tender, 10 to 15 minutes. If mixture seems dry, add small amount of water. Before serving, sprinkle vegetable mixture with cilantro. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

SAFFRON RICE

2 cups basmati rice
1 teaspoon salt
1 (3-inch) stick cinnamon
5 green cardamom pods
3 brown cardamom pods
3 bay leaves
1/4 cup oil
1/4 teaspoon black cumin seeds
1/2 teaspoon saffron threads
Wash rice in cold water until water runs clear. Soak rice in cold water 2 hours. Bring 5 cups water to boil in large saucpan and add salt, cinnamon stick, green and brown cardamom pods and bay leaves. Add rice to boiling water and boil until rice is about 3-4 done or until rice is still firm and crackly to bite. Drain off all water. Cover rice and place over very low heat to steam.

In separate pan, heat oil until it smokes. Add black cumin seeds, then pour oil over rice. Stir saffron into 3 tablespoons boiling water and let stand 15 minutes, mashing with spoon to dissolve saffron. Pour saffron solution over rice and mix gently. Cover and steam until rice is tender. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

LASSI (Yogurt Beverage)

3 (8-ounce) cartons plain yogurt
1 1/2 cups ice water
3/4 cup sugar
Turn yogurt into bowl and beat until smooth. Add water, then beat in sugar until dissolved. Serve over ice cubes in tall glasses. Makes 6 servings.

KULFI (Indian Ice Cream)

2 quarts milk
3/4 teaspoon ground cardamom
Generous dash saffron threads
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup brown sugar, packed
Combine milk, cardamom and saffron in large saucpan. Boil over medium heat, stirring to prevent burning, until reduced to 3 cups. Add honey and sugar and cook and stir until dissolved and blended with milk. Pour mixture at once into 6 Indian kulfi molds, if available, or into large custard cups or paper muffin cups set in a muffin pan. Cover molds with lids. If using custard or muffin cups, cover with plastic wrap. Freeze until firm. To unmold, dip kulfi molds or custard cups briefly into cold water or peel off paper muffin cups. Turn out ice cream. If using cylinder-shaped kulfi molds, slice ice cream crosswise in large chunks. Serve on chilled plates. Makes 6 servings.

Beating cream, egg whites an art

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

When beating egg whites without adding sugar and stabilizers, such as vinegar or cream of tartar, they should be beaten only to soft peaks even though many recipes often say to beat until stiff. This soft, smooth foam will be easier to fold into any other mixture and will have less chance of breaking.

With sugar, which is added when the whites start to foam, the whites should be beaten stiff until the sugar crystals dissolve. However, when used for meringues, they should be spread right away to prevent drying.

"How thick you whip your cream depends on what it is being used for," writes Flo Braker in her new book called "The Simple Art of Perfect Baking" (William Morrow and Co. Inc., $24.95). She says there are four stages of whipping or degrees of thickness for every purpose. Thickness is indicated by a track or furrow left after drawing the beater through the middle of the cream.

The Bavarian stage, which is used for folding into other ingredients such as mousses, requires the cream to be whipped until it just begins to thicken. Any track made will melt quickly.

The Chantilly stage, used to accompany a slice of cake or to be folded in sabayon-type frosting, has more body than the first stage. It clings softly to the beater and is thick enough to create swirls in the bowl.

The decorating stage, often used for decorating or frosting for spreading, is whipped to soft peaks and, when lifted, will not fall off the beater.

The piping stage, primarily used for piping through pastry tubes as well as filling and assembling some desserts, is a little stiffer, the peaks still soft but more defined. The track stays in place a while and moves only slightly.

Sweet potatoes don't have to be baked

Hearst News Service

Sweet potatoes are as much a part of our fall eating ritual as apples or turkeys. Usually, they are baked, and we are supposed to eat them with butter or gravy. But there are all sorts of acceptable ways that involve neither butter nor gravy topping. Sweet potatoes are more than acceptable; they're down-right delicious.

SWEET POTATOES GEORGIAN STYLE

6 medium sweet potatoes
Boiling salted water
1/4 cup sugar
4 tablespoons water
1 tablespoon butter

Wash and pare the potatoes. Cook 10 minutes in boiling salted water. Drain, cut in halves lengthwise and put in a buttered pan. Make a syrup by boiling the sugar and water for three minutes. Then add the butter. Brush potatoes with syrup and bake 40 minutes, basting twice with remaining syrup.

SWEET POTATO BISCUITS

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons sugar
6 tablespoons shortening
2 medium-sized sweet potatoes, cooked and mashed
1/2 cup milk

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add sugar and shortening to sweet potatoes while hot. Combine potato and flour mixture with milk. Knead for one minute. Roll or pat to 3/4-inch thickness. Cut out and bake at 400-degrees for 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 24 biscuits.

SWEET POTATO PUDDING

1 egg, beaten
4 tablespoons butter
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon each ground cinnamon and ginger
1 tablespoon molasses
1 cup boiled mashed sweet potatoes
1 tablespoon flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 to 1 cup milk
1 lemon, juice and grated rind
2 to 4 tablespoons cognac (optional)
Pastry for bottom of pie

Beat the egg; cream the butter, sugar, spices and molasses together and combine these with the egg, then with the cooked potato. Stir the flour and salt into the mixture, add the milk. When beaten smooth, stir in the lemon juice and rind, mix and add the cognac. Turn into a pastry-lined pie dish and bake about 45 minutes in a moderate (375-degrees) oven until the crust is golden. Or turn the mixture into a greased baking dish without the pastry and bake at 300 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes. For this, set the dish in a shallow pan of water. Makes six servings.

SPANISH SWEET POTATOES

Cooked, cubed sweet potatoes
Green pepper, chopped
Onions, chopped
Shortening
Salt and pepper

For each cup of cubed, cooked but not mushy, sweet potatoes, use 1/4 cup each of chopped green pepper and onions. Fry all together in 1/4 cup shortening until the potatoes are brown and crisp. Salt and pepper to taste. This is surprisingly good with fish, but it's good with meat and turkey, too. Makes three servings.

Champagne being made in California

Associated Press

Americans are drinking more and more sparkling wines, but the labels read "methode champenoise" instead of "champagne" and the price tags read in single instead of double digits.

Well-known French champagne houses are sinking roots — and growing grapes — in California, according to the December issue of Town & Country, while Americans also are drinking sparkling wine from other regions of France and from Spain, Italy, Germany and Romania.

And they are paying as little as $4 a bottle, instead of the $20 and up that French champagne costs.

The trend away from French champagne (according to Common Market rules only wine produced in the Champagne district of France can use that name) goes back to 1952 when California's Beaulieu Vineyard made a small amount of sparkling wine in the French manner. By the early 1970s other West Coast wineries were trying to produce premium sparkling wines.

In the 1970s, the French champagne house of Moët & Chandon bought 1,200 acres in California's Napa Valley, where they now produce Domaine Chandon sparkling wine. Piper-Heidsieck followed suit in 1980 with Piper-Sonoma, which one wine expert called "Perhaps the most elegant sparkling wine made in this country."

The French houses of Roederer, Deutz and Lanson now are in the process of moving into California.

California winemakers also are turning to the more intricate and costly "methode champenoise" — the process of producing sparkling wines practiced in the Champagne district. So are wineries in Washington, Idaho and New York.

Unfortunately, methode champenoise wine can be costly, and the wine fancier may wind up paying more for a premium California bubbly than for a discounted genuine French champagne.

That's where the wines of other regions of France, as well as those of Spain, Italy and Germany enter the wine picture.

French sparkling wines not produced in Champagne are called vins mousseux, and such labels as Veuve Amiot, Bouvet Brut and Brut Royal sell for from $5 to $10 a bottle.

Spanish sparklers such as Freixenet Cordon Negro may not have the delicacy of elegant champagne, but at $4 or $5 a bottle they are much more affordable.

Italian sparkling wines require caution, since there is some cloyingly sweet Asti Spumanti on the market as well as such dry and zesty Asti as Vibosa, Fontanafredda or Bersano for $8 or $9 a bottle.

'Kasha' provides variation on rice, potatoes

Hearst News Service

Have you run out of variations on rice and potatoes? Maybe it's time to convert to kasha.

If you're like most people, you're probably thinking "Kasha? Isn't that that awful tasting, mushy grain?" But kasha is not a grain, nor does it have to be mushy or awful. Properly and imaginatively prepared, it will win you over with its robust, nutty flavor.

Kasha — a Russian and Eastern European staple made of roasted buckwheat kernels — goes well with roasts, pot roast, beef Stroganoff, Swiss steak, goulash and stuffed cabbage rolls. It also makes a good main dish with a mushroom sauce.

Botanically speaking, buckwheat is a fruit, related to the rhubarb plant. However, its dark brown, three-cornered seed is treated as a grain. It is a good source of vitamin B, protein, potassium and phosphorus.

When purchasing kasha, know what you are buying: It is sold in fine, medium and whole grain. Most recipes will stipulate which to use.

Kasha is usually cooked by stirring a raw egg into the dry grain to keep the grains separate, then roasting the grain in a dry, hot, heavy frying pan. The next step is adding two parts liquid to one part grain and cooking covered over low heat until it is dry and fluffy, about 15 minutes. Kasha also can be cooked as a cereal, using five parts liquid to one part grain, to yield a creamy consistency.

From "Nela's Cookbook," by Nela Rubinstein, here is a basic kasha recipe plus mushroom sauce from the widow of pianist Arthur Rubinstein.

KASHA

2 cups wholegrain buckwheat groats
2 eggs, well beaten
3 cups boiling water
2 to 3 tablespoons butter
Salt to taste (optional)

Set a heavy frying pan over low heat. Spread the buckwheat groats evenly over the pan surface and let them warm through. They won't stick. Pour on the eggs and stir vigorously with a fork until each bit of buckwheat is coated. Some of the egg will stick to the pan; don't worry.

Immediately stir in the boiling water, which will pick up and distribute all the egg bits in almost invisible shreds among the grains. Add the butter. Cover the pan and cook slowly, tasting after 10 minutes, until the grains are cooked and the water has been absorbed.

Each grain should be distinct and unsticky, and, with whole grains, each should show a fleck of white where it has opened up. Serves 6.

For variety, add sliced sauteed mushrooms, sauteed chopped onions, cooked bowtie noodles, chopped parsley or snipped dill.

KASHA WITH MUSHROOMS

¾ pound mushrooms, sliced
2 tablespoons butter
1 recipe kasha (above)

Saute the mushrooms in butter in a fairly large skillet. Stir and turn them over medium-high heat to seal in the juices. Mix into kasha. Serve with mushroom sauce.

MUSHROOM SAUCE

2 cups sliced mushroom caps
2 tablespoons grated onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups beef or chicken broth
6 tablespoons sour cream
Salt and pepper to taste

Saute the mushrooms with the onion in butter until the mushroom juices have exuded and about half evaporated. Sprinkle them with flour and mix well. Add the hot broth slowly, stirring, until you no longer taste the flour and the mixture has thickened. Add the sour cream, taste the sauce, and season it with salt and pepper. Makes 3 cups.

In "The Gold and Fildale Cookbook," authors and duo pianists Arthur Gold and Robert Fildale offer this recipe for kasha from their good friend, the late George Balanchine. According to the authors, Balanchine called this recipe "nice crusty kasha, not mushy mess most people make."

KASHA PILAF

1 egg
½ cup kasha
1 stalk celery
1 small onion
1 tablespoon oil
1 cup chicken stock or broth
Salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste
½ cup toasted slivered almonds

In a sauce pan, beat egg slightly and then spoon off about one teaspoon of it; discard. Mix kasha with remaining egg. Stir frequently over medium heat until each grain is separate and dry. Slice celery thinly. Chop onion coarsely. Push kasha to one side of pan. Add oil. When oil is hot, add celery and onion and saute over medium heat a few minutes until onion has just begun to soften. Add chicken stock; mix ingredients together and season. Reduce heat; cover pan and simmer about 15 minutes until kasha is tender.

While kasha cooks, toast almonds in toaster oven or regular oven until golden brown at 400 F. for three to four minutes. Stir into cooked kasha. Serve.

Serves 3. From "Keep It Simple" by Marian Burros.

Cauliflower versatile

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

I thought it might be nice to start out this little discussion of cauliflower with an amusing anecdote or perhaps a bit of historical trivia concerning this winter vegetable. I couldn't find a thing but I did learn that Italians favor cauliflowers with green or purple heads. These varieties are not available in our country. Too bad — I'd like to try one.

So the cauliflower may not be the most celebrated of veggies. But I like it anyway. It's an excellent source of vitamin C, low in calories and extremely versatile. Boiled, steamed, baked, marinated, served raw in a salad or with dip, fresh cauliflower can add variety to a vegetarian's winter diet.

When shopping, look for heads with compact flowerets and fresh-looking leaves and stems. Cauliflower should be creamy white in color (except in Italy). Do not wash until ready to use, and do not overcook or it will become mushy and develop a strong flavor. This vegetable is done when the stem end yields to the touch of a fork.

To keep your cauliflower a bright white, add a little milk or lemon juice to the cooking water. I have no idea what Italians add to keep theirs the proper shade of green or purple.

When raw, cauliflower is a good source of iron, as well as of vitamin C. Be sure to include tender young flowerets among other raw vegetables when serving with dip.

Cauliflower Vichyssoise substitutes our veggie-of-the-day for the traditional potatoes — with deliciously different results. This, or either of the other recipes, should provide you with a new way to serve a nutritious vegetarian standby.

C. CAULIFLOWER VICHYSOISE

1 lb. leeks
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 cup boiling water
3 tbsps. vegetable bouillon
1½ cups raw cauliflower flowerets
1 cup milk
¼ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. ground white pepper
Chopped chives (for garnish)

Wash leeks thoroughly and dry well. Slice thinly and saute in butter or margarine over medium heat until soft. Let cool. Combine boiling water with bouillon; stir well until dissolved; let cool. Place sauteed leeks and vegetable broth into blender; process until smooth. Pour into large pot and add cauliflower, milk, salt and pepper. Simmer over low heat 10 to 15 minutes, stirring often. Let cool, then process in blender again until smooth. Chill several hours before serving and garnish individual bowls with chopped chives. Serves 4 to 6.

GOURMET CHINESE CAULIFLOWER

3 tbsps. vegetable oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tsp. shredded ginger root
1 medium onion, thinly sliced
1 large head cauliflower, washed and broken into bite-size pieces
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
¼ cup vegetable broth
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. brown sugar
2 tbsps. mashed tofu
2 tbsps. Tamari soy sauce
4 tbsps. light cream
2 tbsps. white wine
2 tbsps. sesame oil
Freshly ground black pepper to taste

Heat vegetable oil in a wok or large frying pan and add garlic, ginger and onion. Stir-fry over medium heat for 1 minute, then add cauliflower and butter. Continue stirring until butter has melted and vegetables are coated with oil. Gently stir in vegetable broth, salt, soy sauce and cream. Reduce heat to low and simmer, covered, 10 to 12 minutes. Remove cover, add wine, sesame oil and pepper, tossing gently. Serve hot. Serves 4 to 6.

Celebrities share recipes

Hearst News Service

Gather together the taste buds and favorite recipes of such noted Italians and Italian-Americans as Sophia Loren, Geraldine Ferraro, Anna Moffo, Luciano Pavarotti and Mario Cuomo, put them together in the new "Salute to Italy Celebrity Cookbook," rush to the kitchen, prepare and savor the results.

"That's Italian!" you might well be tempted to sigh, for the "Salute to Italy Celebrity Cookbook" is certainly a glossy publication, its 112 pages filled with overflowing with gorgeous color photographs. But for all its slickness, it doesn't really impress in one area: The recipes, which is why most people buy cookbooks.

The problem is a common one in the celebrity cookbook genre: After all, the celebrities aren't famous because of their cooking, and one really can't expect their recipes to reflect the creativity and imagination of seasoned chefs.

That being the case, the recipes (as edited by Peggy Healy and Iris Ihde Frey) are mainly standard fare, the usual run of Gina Lollobrigida's "Spring Spaghetti" (which bears a strong resemblance to ordinary Pasta Primavera), Mario Andretti's Gnocchi and the like. Some of them are a bit unscientific in ingredients and methods. Some have puzzling names. Others don't seem to be authentically Italian, relying on packaged convenience foods rather than fresh.

Still, some recipes offer some interesting personal touches, and all give interesting insights into the celebrity in question — after all, stargazing is the chief ingredient in celebrity cookbooks. And with the big pictures of each dish appealingly jumping from the page, it's almost enough to push even the most inexperienced cook into the kitchen.

Here's a taste of the "Salute to Italy Celebrity Cookbook":

GOV. AND MRS. MARIO CUOMO'S VEAL SPEDINI TERMI
1 pound of veal, cut in three-inch squares
1 (22 ounce) can crushed tomatoes
2 cups breadcrumbs
1/4 cup grated Locatelli or Parmesan cheese
6 sprigs of parsley, chopped
1 1/2 cups corn oil, divided
1/4 pound imported Fontina cheese, cut into one-inch pieces
2 medium onions, sliced
12 bay leaves

Marinate the veal squares in crushed tomatoes overnight, or at least two hours before preparing. Combine breadcrumbs with cheese and chopped parsley in a bowl. In a frying pan, put one cup of the oil and toast the breadcrumb mixture until golden. Set aside to cool. Pour the remaining one-half cup of the oil in the bottom of a 13-by-9-inch baking dish, coating the entire bottom of the pan. Coat each piece of veal on both sides with the toasted bread-crumb mixture. (Reserve the tomatoes.)

Place a piece of Fontina cheese in the center of each piece. Overlap opposite sides over the cheese. Place in baking dish in rows and top each with an onion slice and bay leaf. Spread the reserved crushed tomatoes over the top. Bake at 375 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Don't overcook. Serves 4 to 6.

GERALDINE FERRARO'S MANICOTTI

Pancakes:
1 cup flour
1 cup water
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 eggs

Combine flour, water and salt and beat until smooth. Beat in the eggs one at a time. Heat a five- or six-inch skillet and grease with a few drops of the oil. Put about three tablespoons of batter in the hot skillet and roll around pan to distribute evenly. Cook over low heat until firm. Do not brown. Turn and cook lightly on the other side. (Do not grease skillet the second time.) Makes 12 to 14 pancakes.

Filling:
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2 pounds ricotta cheese
Pepper to taste
1 pound mozzarella cheese, cut in strips
Tomato sauce, to taste

Mix the salt, eggs, ricotta cheese, Parmesan cheese and pepper together for the filling. Put about two tablespoons of the mixture and a strip of mozzarella on each pancake and roll up. Pour tomato sauce on the bottom of a large, shallow baking dish (just to cover). Put pancakes seam-side-down in dish. Cover with more sauce and sprinkle with additional grated cheese.

Bake in 350 degrees F. oven for 45 minutes. (The pancakes may be made the day before and refrigerated. On serving day, just fill and bake. If pancakes are made the day before, put wax paper between them to prevent sticking.) Serve with additional sauce and grated cheese, according to individual taste. Serves 6 to 8.

EDWARD VILLELLA'S HOT SALAD

Butter
3 large zucchini, thinly sliced
Yellow cheese, grated or thinly sliced
3 large tomatoes, thinly sliced
Parmesan cheese
White cheese, thinly sliced

Place pats of butter in an oblong baking dish or pan. Make lasagna-like layers of zucchini, yellow cheese, tomato, Parmesan and white cheese — and repeat. Put pats of butter on top and set aside until one hour before serving. Bake at 350 degrees F. for an hour. Serves 4 to 6.

Odessa's former city marshal gets probation

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Odessa's former city marshal was placed on federal probation for three years on Tuesday for misprision — criminal concealment of knowledge of a crime.

The ex-marshal, Patricia Columbus "Pat" Trout, 35, who pleaded guilty to the offense, was a federally-licensed firearms dealer who had been indicted in September for failure to keep records of firearms transactions and for illegal possession of a machine-gun, a Colt AR-15, which was not registered to him in the National Firearms Registration and Transfer Record.

Those transfers were dismissed in a plea-bargaining agreement in exchange for Trout's pleading guilty to misprision. Had the indictment route been pursued, Trout could have been sentenced up to 25 years in prison and fined $25,000.

"You're the second person in law enforcement that I've had the last 20 days standing before me," U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton told Trout.

The judge's apparent reference was to former Hudspeth County Sheriff Mike Armstrong of Sierra Blanca. The ex-sheriff had pleaded to possession of 23 pounds of marijuana with intent to distribute the contraband. Bunton sentenced Armstrong to five years in prison. That sentence is to be followed by a two-year special parole and a five-year probation period.

"I'm certainly not pleased having to pass sentence on someone who has served in law enforcement," Bunton said.

The judge said it's "always a black-eye" for law enforcement when a lawman or ex-officer gets involved in criminal offenses.

Bunton referred to a series of letters to him on Trout's behalf and said one in particular "made me extremely mad." He did not reveal the nature of the letter. Bunton said he was not angry with Trout but with the letter writer. The letters were to attest to Trout's character and to seek mitigation of any sentence which Bunton might impose.

more worthy of probation," Warren Heagy of Odessa said.

"He's a very fine individual," said Steven Clack of Andrews.

With his conviction, Trout will be barred from serving in law enforcement, cannot hold a law-enforcement commission and cannot carry or possess firearms.

Trout's lawyers had charged the indictment against their client was a "result of selective prosecution" and that he was singled out on the weapons violations as a result of a "political squabble or hassle" between the Odessa City Marshal's Office and the Odessa Police Department.

"The state and federal authorities were called in to prosecute Trout during a period of time when the City Marshal's Office was fighting to retain its identity and the city marshals were arresting city managers and city finance directors," Heagy and Clack said in a motion to dismiss the indictments.

The attorneys said the indictment was pursued by law enforcement agents of Odessa and the U.S. government out of "vindictiveness or through a retaliatory purpose."

According to the indictment, Trout had sold a Winchester shotgun to Kerry Sweett, former Odessa city manager, in 1981; a 44-caliber magnum Smith & Wesson revolver to Bobby Ray Forbus, a former Texas Department of Public Safety trooper and now an Odessa warrants officer, and a Marlin .357-caliber magnum rifle to Carlos Trevizo, an Odessa warrants officer.

Trout had been city marshal until Aug. 25, 1983, when he was fired while he was under investigation for possession of stolen cars. His firing also involved Odessa Mayor John Minor, who at the time was administrator for the Odessa Municipal Court.

Trout headed up the Municipal Court's warrants division, which was transferred from Minor's supervisor to the Odessa Police Department. Minor was fired after he had filed official misconduct charges City Manager John Harrison and fiscal oppression charges against Fiscal Services Manager Frank Muser. Both were arrested.

Police to get stricter on alley parking

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

While some Midlanders were seeking their own solutions to downtown parking problems, city officials have been around the corner plotting ways to put an end to alley parking.

A city ordinance passed Nov. 13 prohibits parking without a delivery permit in any alley in the downtown area bordered by Ohio, Missouri, Pecos and Main. And the time the Midland Police Department allows citizens to become acquainted with new laws has screamed to a halt.

"It's going to be a lot more stricter than it was," said Lt. A.D. Carlton of the MPD traffic division. Although former restrictions kept cars from parking 50 feet away from the large dumpsters in the alleys, "it's getting more congested all the time. We're doing away with what the alley has become and getting it back to what it was meant to be."

Complaints from utilities and sanitation workers prompted city officials to do a survey of downtown alleys in September, said Fred McGary, city traffic engineer.

"There were certain people who knew they could get away with parking in a certain place," McGary said. "There were some who'd stop and have a cup of coffee and leave the car there an hour."

One delivery employee told McGary "not only whose car it was, but where he worked. He goes every morning at 7:30 and leaves it there until 5 p.m.," McGary said.

Nineteen alleys are included in the ordinance, which prohibits any person from stopping, standing or parking a vehicle for any purpose or length of time "other than for the expeditious unloading and delivery or pick-up and loading of materials."

"It makes all the alleys in the downtown area freight loading zones," Carlton said. Vehicles without permits or those with them that exceed the 30-minute limit will be given a $25 citation on the first offense. Penalties for subsequent offenses include towing.

The delivery permits, which will be limited to three per company for vehicles such as vans or trucks, are available in the MPD traffic division, Carlton said. The permits are for one year.

"All the utilities are in the alleys — gas, water, electricity," Carlton said. "The alleys are for those services and for fire trucks. They were never meant to be parked in in the first place."

Bullock: Lawmakers have no choice but to raise taxes

Bob Bullock

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Tuesday legislators would have no choice but to increase state taxes in their upcoming session if Texans want "a bigger piece of the pie" in the future.

"If you want a bigger piece of pie, you've got one recourse, you've got to raise taxes," Bullock said during a speech at the mid-year meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Bullock estimated the legislature could come up short by as much as $2 billion in spending by the coming year's state budget if no tax increases were made.

The comptroller said his office had estimated the deficit of revenues over expenses at $460 million before the approval of a $200 million trust fund for state colleges by voters in the November election. Noting the effect of the latest drop in oil prices on revenues, Bullock said this figure could rise to $2.2 billion if the 1985 inflation rose to 6 percent in 1985-86.

State Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland, one of several legislators Bullock appealed to directly several times during the speech, said afterward that cuts would be made in various programs to avoid the need for a tax increase.

"I think we can cut enough to keep from having to raise taxes," said Craddick, adding that legislative committees had already found about $500 million in program cuts in areas such as education and the prison system.

Bullock insisted "neglect" in the past, rather than a faltering oil and gas industry, was the reason for the tax bill which came from July's special session. He applauded as "far reaching" the resulting educational reforms and the "shot in the arm" the bill gave to the highway department.

"If you want a bigger piece of pie, you've got to raise taxes."

— Bob Bullock

"The number one priority in January will be balancing the state's budget. And that's easier said than done," said Bullock.

The annual influx of about 350,000 people into the state is the reason for the state's budget woes, he said, pointing to the overall effect of this yearly addition to the state's population.

"It's growth. It's Texas," said Bullock. "I don't think you want to build a fence around this state."

Newcomers do not "pay their own way" after coming to the Texas because the state has few ways to benefit financially from the influx. "Texas doesn't have any growth taxes but one," he said, adding that the state sales tax represents only 40 percent of the state's tax revenues.

For the past 20 years, the state's budget has grown 12 percent of living and operating a business, said Bullock.

These costs have risen more quickly in Texas than other states because "We're an urban state, we're not a rural state anymore," he said.

Legislators would be balancing inflation, population increases, needs in new and existing programs and "automatic spending increases," such as teacher pay raises in their upcoming session, said Bullock. The comptroller's office has estimated the state would take in $36 billion over the next two years, but still fall short of offsetting expected expenses.

He suggested Texans have gotten "somewhat of a bargain" in the past and insisted new residents deserved the same services as native Texans.

Bullock closed by declaring that the legislature would solve this dilemma "as long as the people of this state have faith in your public officials."

Computer makes it easier to find eye problems, doctor says

RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

Two lights move across a black background as the man focuses on a round image of the city of Rome. Seated next to him, another man punches buttons to an antiphony of mechanized hums and clicking noises. "All done," announces the button-puncher, as he tears off a silver tape of numbers being emitted from the machine.

No, it's not a 21st century travel agent. The machine is an eye computer in the office of Dr. J. Ralph Berry, a Midland ophthalmologist, and is used in pinpointing problems with the eye. The picture of Rome is simply something for the patient to focus on while the computer looks into the eye.

"The eye-refractor was an offshoot of the NASA space program," said George Robinette, Berry's optician. "NASA was worried about what effects that space might have on vision and they had to develop a better system of checking the astronaut's vision."

The $30,000 computer, a large tan "box" mounted on a pedestal, looks out of place in Berry's office. A mixture of the old and the new confronts the eye. An old time, green-enamel examination chair with matching paraphernalia attached to it, clashes with various computerized equipment arranged in different corners of the room. Even Berry, a white-haired, homestead-looking physician, looks out of step with the technology represented in the room.

But Berry, framed by a wall full of certificates, degrees and acknowledgements, talks about the tools of the trade as though they were so many eye charts.

"This machine gives me an indication of whether the patient will be able to see a normal line of vision," he said, pointing to the eye refractor. "It can tell me if I need to look for glaucoma and other diseases."

Berry explains in rapid-fire jargon how the laser computer shoots a light beam into the eye, providing an internal measurement of the eye. The eye refractor is the only one of its kind in Midland. "There's one in Odessa and an older version in Big Spring, but it's just too expensive for most doctors," he said.

Picking up a pair of eyeglasses, Berry demonstrates a piece of equipment next to the eye refractor. Placing the glasses over a part of the machine, he pushes some buttons which result in a measurement of the strength of the glasses.

"You used to have to do all sorts of figuring to get this," he said.

Walking over to an electronic box with a green screen, he proudly shows it. "This can calculate things I can't calculate myself," he explains. The machine is used in the steps leading up to intraocular implants, an area that Berry has studied extensively.

"Intraocular implants help the people who used to have to wear those 'coke bottle' glasses. They had a very narrow field of vision and would often get hurt from tripping and accidents," he said.

In another room was still another useful computer.

"This one helps calculate what kind of contact lenses to use. It only costs $3,000," he said wryly.

Despite all the modern equipment, Berry still relies on the familiar eye chart. Well, maybe not so familiar.

Pushing a button, Berry activates a camera-like device mounted on the far wall. It swings into position and displays an "eye chart" on the opposite wall. The act of simply covering one eye and announcing the letters has been altered as well. A patient sits in the examining chair and looks through a phoropter at the chart. He reads the lines on the chart while lenses within the phoropter are adjusted to help decide the most accurate reading.

Despite all the money that Berry has poured into modern technology, the doctor is adamant about one thing.

"Anyone can go out and buy these machines," he said. "But without the proper training and education, they are useless."

Widow of oilfield worker files suit in husband's shotgun death

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The widow of a 25-year-old Odessa oilfield pumper has filed a $3 million lawsuit in federal court in Midland against the manufacturer, importer and retailer of a 12-gauge shotgun which she claims discharged after her husband's pick-up truck ran off the road and struck a concrete culvert.

The widow, Betty Nan Lee Taylor, alleges that her husband, Randy Ray

Lee, died on Nov. 9, 1982, of massive internal hemorrhaging five to 10 minutes after the shell's pellets and was struck his chest and torso. He was driving to work for Gulf Oil Exploration and Production Co. when the mishap occurred on U.S. Highway 385 approximately 15 miles north of Crane, according to court records.

The plaintiff is alleging the death was accidental and that the defendants were negligent.

The suit's petition claims that the firearm was defective, had no safety device and that a pamphlet accompanying the gun at time of sale said the shotgun "will not fire unless one or both of the hammers are cocked and then one or both of the triggers are pulled."

The widow is claiming the shotgun's hammers were not cocked when the firearm discharged upon the pick-up's impact with the culvert.

She re-married on Sept. 18, 1984, and is now living in Roswell, N.M., with her husband, Dan Taylor.

Defendants in the suit are Armadeo Rossi, a Brazilian company which designs and manufactures firearms; Interarms Ltd., the Alexandria, Va., company which imported the shotgun, and Odessa's Gibson Distributing Co., which sold the 12-gauge Armadeo Rossi Overland shotgun to Lee in October 1978.

In its defense, Gibson claims that a proximate cause of Lee's death was his failure to "use ordinary care"

The firearm's manufacturer and importer apparently have not yet been served notice of the suit.

Gibson's attorney, Jack Tidwell of Odessa, said he has not yet started an investigation into the case.

In a companion case, Mrs. Taylor is suing Connecticut General Life Insurance Co. for the $100,000 in accidental death coverage. She is claiming the company refuses to pay the beneficiary, her 2½-year-old son, Jeremy Paul Lee, who was born on April 7, 1982.

The petition does not say why the insurance company has not paid off the $100,000. The policy, however, carries a standard exemption clause which denies payment in cases in which death is caused by suicide, intentional self-inflicted injury, infection except pyrogenic (caused by heat infection, war, and in certain instances of aircraft crashes).

REVIEWS

REO delivers music without '80s frills

For the first part of Monday night's REO Speedwagon concert in the Ector County Coliseum, I felt like a guest at somebody else's high school reunion.

Mark Lewis

The audience greeted the band's older songs with delighted recognition, but they meant little or nothing to me. REO's mid-'70s albums were popular in Texas and the Midwest, but I didn't become familiar with the band until they broke nationwide with "Roll With the Changes" in 1978.

This gave me the detached critical perspective I needed to produce a truly objective review. But rock concerts don't lend themselves to critical detachment, so I decided to have fun instead.

And it wasn't hard, because REO performs with an enthusiasm which is hard to resist. These guys don't just tour to sell records, they tour because they enjoy it. And they deliver their music without the usual '80s frills: no weird make-up, no macho heavy-metal posturing, no souped-up techno-pop electronic rhythms, no plastic new-wave outfits. Just basic, hard-working, blue-collar rock 'n roll. Of course, basic rock can also be boring rock, and many of the songs from REO's new album were pretty dull. Whether "Wheels Are Turnin'" can duplicate the success of 1981's "Hi Infidelity" remains to be seen, but if the new album contains any prospective hits, the band didn't play them Monday night.

The new material did cause the audience's attention to wander a bit during the middle of the show, but then lead singer Kevin Cronin re-established the band's momentum by launching into "Roll With the Changes." REO specializes in uplifting bumper-sticker philosophy — "Keep Pushin'," "Ridin' the Storm Out," etc. — but when delivered with enough energy and the right guitar riff, the approach works, and "Roll With the Changes" is probably the band's best.

Then, after "Keep On Lovin' You" and two encores, REO called it a night. As the crowd of 4,800 filed out of the coliseum, the only complaint I heard was that they hadn't played "Son of a Poor Man." But even if the new songs didn't quite measure up to the old favorites, at least the band performed them with gusto. In a rock concert, you can't ask for more than that.

Lee students not responsible for vandalism, principal says

From Staff Reports

Midland Lee students were not responsible for vandalism Saturday at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium, Lee Principal Stan Cobb said this morning.

Investigation at the scene indicated that girls, aged 10 to 13, rubbed white shoe polish on restroom walls and mirrors and ramps to the stands, said Cobb, adding that the height of the marks in the restroom supported this information from witnesses.

No report was filed with Odessa police. Cobb indicated the vandalism "had been blown out of proportion" and noted he had no power to punish anyone 10 to 13 years old.

"We're very sorry Lee High School students have to take the blame," said Cobb. The vandalism occurred in the women's bathroom of the section used by Lee students at the Saturday afternoon game, according to reports.

Ex-teller pleads guilty to embezzling

From Staff Reports

Joanne Alice Gibson, a 24-year-old ex-teller for United Bank of Midland, pleaded guilty in federal court on Tuesday of embezzling $16,000 from the bank in 1984.

Ms. Gibson, who lives in Odessa, is to be sentenced by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton at 12:30 p.m. on Dec. 17. She could be sentenced to five years in prison and fined $5,000.

Autopsy: Man died of asphyxiation

EL PASO (AP) — El Paso police say a man whose skeletal remains were found last month in a restaurant chimney died of asphyxiation.

Lt. John Lanahan said the cause of death was determined in an autopsy performed on the skeleton Tuesday.

The identification of the man still is unknown and police are continuing to try to positively name the man, Lanahan said.

Police said a worker at the Farmer's Market and Restaurant found the body Nov. 23 as he was tearing down a brick chimney, which was connected to a barbecue pit.

Lanahan said the body may have been lodged in the chimney for as long as two or three years before being discovered.

He said police believe the man got stuck in the chimney while trying to burglarize the business.

"I don't think there's any foul play," Lanahan said.

He said the man was Mexican and about 20 years old.

Officials said it is possible the remains were those of a man named Tony, who did odd jobs around the restaurant two years ago.

Herlinda Hernandez, who owned the restaurant with her husband, Juventino, said one of the waiters gave "Tony" some clothes, and other employees gave him food for doing cleaning jobs.

"He wasn't here for more than two months," she said. "When he disappeared, we didn't think anything about it. We thought he was a Mexican national and had just made a little stop here and gone on to California."

Couple adopts sisters from former Tent City

HOUSTON (AP) — Irene and Daryl Post thought they couldn't have children, but this week they gained four daughters.

The girls, who are sisters, became the couple's foster children two years ago. But on Tuesday, they became the Posts' legally adopted children.

"We're really excited. We've been waiting for this for a long time," said Tamara, 14, one of the sisters.

Tamara and her sisters — Julie, 15, Shannon, 7, and Sarah, 3 — had moved with their mother from Crosby to Tent City, a camp of homeless people on the San Jacinto river bank.

But the mother was arrested for writing a bad check. Julie was left to raise her younger sisters until October 1982, when they arrived at the Post home.

Sarah had no hair and was severely burned on one of her hands when she arrived.

"The girls didn't trust me with Sarah," said Mrs. Post, 30. "She was their baby. We had a hard time getting them to accept us as parents."

But the sisters became more comfortable with the couple after Julie had a tonsillectomy and began hemorrhaging.

"We almost lost her," Mrs. Post said. "But as I was holding her in the hospital, she said, 'I can't really believe that you are here for me.'"

"Their mother was not a bad person, just in a desperate situation," said Mrs. Post. She said the mother gave up her parental rights in March and now lives in Illinois.

"She came and saw the girls in our home and sensed how comfortable they were," Mrs. Post said. "She knew they were happy and had a home."

Harris County Children's Protective Services has helped the Posts with some expenses in raising the girls.

Post, 32, is a technician with General Electric.

Two sanctuary movement workers indicted

Jack Elder walks with his wife, Diane, and son, Elder, who runs a halfway house for refugees in San Benito, was indicted Tuesday on charges of transporting aliens.

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A routine transportation search on a bus bound for Houston led to the indictment of two sanctuary movement workers accused of transporting two Salvadoran aliens from the Mexican border, authorities said.

Jack Elder, 49, and Stacy Lynn Merkt, 29, were indicted Tuesday following a complaint filed by the U.S. Border Patrol that alleged the two transported the aliens from Mexico to a Rio Grande Valley bus station, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Guerra said.

Elder runs the Roman Catholic-sponsored Casa Oscar Romero refugee halfway house in San Benito, about 15 miles north of the Rio Grande. Ms. Merkt is a worker at the house, believed to be the first stop of the nation's "underground railroad" movement.

Ms. Merkt was convicted in May of conspiracy to transport two Salvadoran aliens and was given two years' probation by U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela of Brownsville.

When he sentenced Ms. Merkt, Vela threatened to imprison her if she did not stop stop helping illegal aliens enter the United States.

Elder is awaiting a pre-trial hearing before U.S. District Judge Hayden Head Jr. of Corpus Christi.

Elder, also charged with three counts of transporting illegal aliens to a bus station in Harlingen, faces 15 years in prison if convicted.

Ms. Merkt and Elder are members of a national movement to assist Salvadorans and other Central Americans fleeing their war-torn countries.

Sanctuary movement workers maintain that the aliens are political refugees and are entitled to protection under U.S. and international law.

But the U.S. government contends the Central Americans enter the country illegally for economic reasons.

"We contend that we don't recognize any special group, such as the sanctuary movement. We try to stay out of the political aspects of our cases," Border Patrol agent Sylvestre Reyes said.

"No one is above the law, regardless of their intentions. We handled this case routinely and paid no more attention to Jack Elder than we would pay to John Doe for smuggling (aliens)," he said.

Crowd cheers when rapist sentenced to life in prison

AUSTIN (AP) — When admitted rapist Gary Polson was sentenced to life in prison, cheers and applause broke out from a packed courtroom that included many women who claimed to have been among his victims.

Polson, 30, was arrested June 30 by police who had staked out a neighborhood in north Austin in hopes of stopping the string of rapes. Many of the victims were bound, raped, and photographed.

With his sentence Tuesday, visiting Judge E. James Kazen granted the maximum sentence possible.

Polson pleaded guilty to the June

3 rape of a woman in her home in north Austin. The victim testified about her five-hour ordeal during the punishment hearing last week. He is suspected in as many as 25 Austin rapes since he was paroled from prison in 1981.

Defense attorney Pat Ganne had asked for a lesser sentence, saying that Polson's victims had not been physically injured, a comment that drew a groan from a female spectator who said, "I can't believe it."

Asked as he was being led away by deputies if he had anything to say to his victims, Polson said he apologized.

UT-Austin president to retire

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas officials are voicing sadness that UT-Austin President Peter T. Flawn will retire next year.

Jon Newton, chairman of the UT regents, said Flawn has been one of the nation's top college administrators.

"The board of regents is saddened that Dr. Flawn has elected to retire from the university at the end of this academic year," Newton said after Flawn's announcement Tuesday.

"We regard him as the finest university president in the United States, and his leadership will be cited as crucial in the development of that institution to international academic and research standing," Newton said.

Flawn, 58, UT-Austin president since August 1979, said he will step down effective Aug. 31, 1985.

"The position of president is very demanding. It consumes all the time and energy that the occupant has," Flawn said. "After five years as president...I want to pursue other interests while I have the years to do so."

Newton praised Flawn's tenure, saying, "Personally, I feel that Peter Flawn is the best thing that has figured to UT since Santa Rita No. 1 (the oil well that was the foundation of UT's oil and gas wealth). Santa Rita gave us the fuel for greatness, but Dr. Flawn has given us the flame and the light and the courage."

Peter T. Flawn

Hans Mark, who became University of Texas chancellor this summer, said he knew about Flawn and the job he had been doing before he decided to come to Texas.

"I was well aware of Pete's reputation as perhaps the best university president anywhere before I came to the University of Texas system. My experience in working with him has confirmed that reality for me," Mark said.

The chancellor also said he was sorry to see Flawn leave the university.

Flawn, Mark said, "not only had led UT-Austin to significant heights during these past six years, he was the builder of UT-San Antonio during that institution's first five operating years."

Flawn served as president of UT-San Antonio from 1973 to 1977. Flawn was acting director of the UT-Austin Marine Science Institute and was acting chairman of the Department of Marine Studies at the time he was selected president of UT-Austin.

Flawn also served as director of the Division of Natural Resources and Environment and professor of geological sciences and public affairs at UT-Austin. He was vice president for academic affairs and executive vice president at UT-Austin from 1970 to 1973.

He received his bachelor's degree from Oberlin College in Ohio, and took his graduate degrees at Yale.

Flawn is known in academic circles for his scholarly work in natural sciences and geology. He is the author of five books and more than 50 articles.

He has received national and international awards, and has been a visiting professor at Northwestern University and the Universidad Nacional Autonoma in Mexico.

Mauro: Land ownership along Canadian River being disputed

PAMPA (AP) — State Land Commissioner Garry Mauro says he plans to meet soon with land owners along a section of the Canadian River where property ownership is being disputed.

"The Canadian River has always been a headache to Texas because we don't know what we own, but the river bed is open to the public and that is the real question," Mauro said Tuesday at a luncheon here.

Mauro said because of nearby Lake Meredith and what he termed "obscure laws," it is hard to determine which parts of the river bed are owned by private individuals and which parts are publicly owned.

He said lack of a definitive boundary is causing numerous problems.

"It is illegal for land owners to fence off public land, and without a very expensive survey, we do not know what the state owns and we don't know what the landowners own," he said. "A lot of people are affected because land owners can't have access to the river to water cattle and the sportsmen want access for public hunting."

An 18-mile section of the Canadian River was surveyed before Mauro took over the land office, and he said an additional 66 miles of the river bed is to be surveyed where it has been cut off from Lake Meredith by a dam.

There are several ways to define navigable streams for river bed lines, he said — the key is determining the gradient boundary, which he termed "a very complicated technical issue."

Two other problems in finding a workable solution exist. One is how to survey the area in question, the other is how to determine the river bed course, which has been changed by the damming of Lake Meredith.

Mauro said State Rep. Foster Whaley of Pampa and State Sen. Bill Sarpalius of Canyon are working to resolve the problem.

Mauro said the two are working with Gov. Mark White to get money appropriated in the state budget to help solve the problem.

He said lawyers and surveyors are studying data already collected trying to find a solution. He added he has tentatively set a meeting in Amarillo with land owners, and the meeting will be either before Christmas or after New Year's.

Couple pursues whatever catches their fancy

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Dennis Votaw of Fannett is quite frank when he says he and his wife, Elizabeth, do not live by the world's drummer.

The Votaws bypass automobiles in favor of motorcycles, but you won't find them in black leather and chains.

And while both husband and wife work a full 40-hour week at a major company, they clock more hours in pursuit of their hobbies.

In the morning, they don helmets, gloves and boots to travel by cycle to their jobs at Southwestern Bell. Dennis works as a switch equipment technician in Port Arthur. Elizabeth is a service technician in Nederland.

After 5 p.m., the Votaws are semi-professional photographers or ceramic artists or computer technicians or tournament archers or motorcycle instructors.

"We're just busy people," Dennis Votaw says. "It's whatever seems to catch our fancy..."

"Like photography... One day I asked my wife if she ever developed a roll of film and we just started from there."

Their house, designed by Votaw, is not your typical family dwelling, either. Resembling a barn, the dwelling was first intended as an extension of a geodesic dome, Elizabeth says.

Oh yes, the Votaws are building the house themselves, whenever they can find time away from their other hobbies.

When the house is finished, the downstairs area will be a partial photographic darkroom and studio. Already, the couple has room upstairs for their computer set-up, complete with a viewing screen and printer. Votaw recently created a computer program to teach them Morse code in preparation for their ham radio licenses.

The Votaws married eight years ago and Elizabeth Votaw says she never did anything unusual until she met her husband. But her husband isn't the only one who suggests hobby topics, she says. For example, she proved the catalyst in their motorcycle purchases.

"My son needed transportation for work, and he needed something more than a bicycle," she says of buying her son a small cycle three years ago. "I started riding his to work. It was getting over a hundred miles to a gallon, so we got us one."

Eventually, the small cycle became two Honda 500 Silverwings, midsize cycles used for highway driving. The couple decided to trade in their Thunderbird, but they decided to keep their truck around the driveway as a "pet."

The Votaws decided if they were going to log so much highway time on the cycles, they would learn how to ride them correctly.

Through an extensive training course given by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation at Lamar University, the Votaws obtained certification to teach motorcycle safety — a course required by the state before anyone under the age of 18 can receive a motorcycle operator's license.

Study: Blacks, girls do more homework

WASHINGTON (AP) — Private school students, blacks and girls tend to spend the most time on homework, a new government study shows, with the typical student putting in just over an hour a day on these after-school chores.

Private high school students put in the most time on after-class studies, at 142 hours per week, or more than 2 hours 48 minutes each school day, the study by the Census Bureau showed.

By contrast, youngsters in public high schools put in 1 hour, 18 minutes a day, or 6.5 hours a week, according to the report.

"Of course, private high schools in general promote a academic, or pre-college curricula, while public schools tend to be more diverse, including some schools and curricula that are principally remedial or vocational," the report pointed out.

Actually, many public schools offer courses just as advanced as at private institutions, the report said.

It explained that the "greater diversity of public institutions and the implicit selectivity of private schools is a major reason why the median levels of homework in public and private high schools differ so greatly."

Students in private elementary schools also had more homework than their public school counterparts, although the difference was less sharp, at 5.5 hours to 4.9 hours per week.

For all American elementary and high school students, the median time spent on homework was 5.4 hours per week.

But girls topped that, doing 5.7 hours typically, while boys reported spending 5.2 hours weekly on homework. That's an extra half-hour for the females.

Blacks in general reported 5.6 hours week of homework, compared to 5.4 hours for whites and 5.3 hours for Hispanics.

The homework statistics were compiled from the bureau's annual survey of school enrollment, conducted last October. The survey found a total of 57,745,000 people aged 3 to 34 enrolled in classes ranging from nursery school to college.

The survey found 12.8 percent of students reported having no homework at all.

And it also noted that 58 percent said they received at least some help with their homework from an adult in their household. Students attending private schools were more likely to seek adult help, 61.8 percent to 57.4 percent for public school students.

The report also disclosed that nearly one-fourth of students aged 13 to 21 had changed schools in the previous year.

Of 43.4 million elementary and high school students in those ages, 10.6 million changed schools between October 1982 and October 1983, or 24.4 percent, the study found.

Of those changing, 9 million made the shift during the summer when school was not in session, and the biggest reason was that they had completed all grades in their former school. That was the reason given for 4.8 million school changes. Some 2.6 million said they changed schools because of a family move.

Of the 9 million changing schools between school years, the vast majority, 7.3 million, moved from one public school to another. But the flow from private schools to public ones was more than those going from public to private schools, 460,000 to 380,000.

Other findings of the study included:

—Nursery school enrollment is rising, with 31 percent of 3-to-4-year-olds enrolled last fall, compared to 18 percent in 1973. More than 70 percent of white nursery school children were in private schools compared to one-third of blacks.

—Enrollment in elementary schools is down 4.2 million over the past decade, with some increases expected in a few years as the newly arriving children of the Baby Boom generation reach school age.

—High school enrollment is down to 14 million and is expected to fall another million by 1990. It peaked at 15.8 million in 1977.

Senate sculpture resurrected from budget-cutter's graveyard

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $400,000 steel sculpture, designed by the late Alexander Calder for the Hart Senate Office Building, is finally headed toward its long-intended site, two years after the building opened without it.

The sculpture has been resurrected from a budget cutters' graveyard.

Called "Mountains and Clouds," it will consist of a 55-foot high black jagged steel "mountain" rising from the floor and a motor-driven mobile of "clouds" suspended over it from the ceiling. It will be put in place in late December and early January in the building's cavernous atrium.

The sculpture is not being purchased from tax dollars — as originally planned — but will be a gift from a former senator who claims the building looks empty without it.

The benefactor, former Sen. Nicolas Brady of New Jersey, teamed up with art collector-philanthropist Paul Mellon and former Treasury Secretary C. Douglas Dillon in raising the funds for the art work.

Brady has long made acquisition of the sculpture a major personal project. A wealthy Republican, he was appointed in 1982 to serve out the remaining nine-month term of Harrison Williams, convicted of Abscam-related offenses.

The work was designed by the famed sculptor specifically for the Hart Building but cut from the plans as an austerity move in a time of belt-tightening in the early 1980s.

The Hart Building, one of three Senate office buildings, opened in early 1983.

Tom Griscum, press secretary to retiring Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., was a fount of information to reporters covering the Senate, constantly briefing journalists on Senate leadership moves and plans. But, in his last official duty, he offered only silence.

Griscum, who is leaving the congressional payroll to become a newspaper executive, was designated by Senate Republicans to brief a hoard of reporters on the progress of votes to name a new majority leader to replace Baker.

On the first three ballots, Griscum diligently appeared and told reporters the outcome — until the fourth ballot, a runoff between Bob Dole of Kansas and Ted Stevens of Alaska.

An hour went by. Two hours. Griscum was mute — apparently heeding wishes of senators not to announce the results until their caucus was over and other, lesser leadership jobs were filled. However, the word never got through to Griscum's office, which told callers by phone that Dole had won the election — even as Griscum was refusing to comment.

"You know, there are some people who have never learned when to keep their mouths shut," Griscum said, grinning.

This year's Capitol Christmas tree is a 70-year-old, 60-foot-tall white spruce from Minnesota. Its 3,000 lights will be turned on at a ceremony on the building's West Front lawn Dec. 12.

Former Indiana Democratic Rep. Floyd Fithian, defeated in his 1982 attempt to unseat Sen. Richard Lugar, is finally making it to the Senate — as chief staff aide to newly elected Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Big Apple Circus wants to be little, loveable

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — It doesn't want to be the Greatest Show on Earth. The Big Apple Circus wants to be little and loveable.

The only one-ring circus left in the United States, according to its founder, it also is thrilling and death-defying and laugh-provoking right over the audience members' heads and at times practically in their laps. The farthest of 1,583 bleacher seats, set in a circle, are no more than 35 feet away from ringside. The circus will run through New Year's Day in a midnight-blue tent pitched in Damrosch Park right next to the Metropolitan Opera. This is its fourth season at Lincoln Center.

"There's no question that the excitement is heightened because of the intimacy," says Paul Binder, the Big Apple's founder, artistic director and ringmaster. "You see how difficult and dangerous it is because it's not a quarter-mile away, like those big circus extravaganzas, and your attention isn't divided among three rings. You see the sweat and the straining muscles. You see the performers in all their power and beauty and frailness."

And their comic genius. For sheer hilarity, even the human clowns take a back seat to two animal stars, among the new acts at the Big Apple this season. A pair of sea lions, Adolph and Taxi, brings down the house from the instant that Adolph waddles in, balancing a flaming torch on a tall pole on his bewhiskered snout. Once in the ring, with an air of insouciance, he tosses the torch away to his trainer, Roby Gasser.

Bidden by their brilliant Swiss master, Adolph and his smaller female partner will stoop to anything for a guffaw and a gulp of raw fish. They play dead; do flipper-stands, head down and tail up; roll over and over; fan themselves with a flipper; lounge languorously with one flipper under their heads; put another coyly over an eye; balance a bottle and full wineglasses on a tray; bounce balls and shamelessly applaud themselves at every turn.

The animal acts are nothing if not original at the Big Apple Circus. One elephant is a customer in a restaurant scene. Another plays a cop.

The humans specialize in derring-do. Marie Benac, an acrobat-ballerina who is among the performers introduced to New York this season, does a hair-raising swan dive into the arms of her two partners from the bandstand, perched almost 20 feet above the red-curtained entrance to the ring.

Dolly Jacobs, daughter of Lou Jacobs, Ringling Brothers' celebrated clown, joins the Big Apple Circus this year, swinging on the rings high overhead.

Featured among the dozen acts are the Flying Gaonas, Mexico's trapeze artists, and James Zoppe, "America's own," and his troupe, with gymnastics and ballet routines and human pyramids riding bareback atop lumbering Percherons. There is Denmark's Katja Schumann, whispering sweet nothings into the ears of her "Liberty Horses." Without benefit of lines or reins, solely with low-toned commands and by occasionally waving a whip, Miss Schumann makes her chargers wheel and canter, abruptly change direction, stand on their hind legs and prance to the center of the ring.

Louisiana parish council sues family

POINTE A LA HACHE, La. (AP) — The Perez family once ruled oil-rich Plaquemines Parish as though the Louisiana county were an Arab sheikdom.

But then the two sons of Leander Perez, the founder of the political dynasty downriver from New Orleans, fumbled away their political inheritance.

Today the Perezes face a marathon court fight instigated by the Plaquemines Parish Commission Council they once virtually owned.

The suit accuses the late Leander Perez of having diverted what should have been millions of dollars of parish, or county, money to his own pockets.

The legal battle is bogged down in two sideline skirmishes.

In one, a state appeals court decided the family could keep secret the payments it got over the past 50 years from oil and natural gas leases handled by their Delta Development Inc.

The council has decided to appeal that ruling to the Louisiana Supreme Court.

"I think we are compelled to appeal, since we represent the taxpayers," said Luke Petrovich, a councilman who once was Leander Perez's right-hand man but now leads the forces that brought down the dynasty.

This aspect of the case dealt only with a Perez bid for a protective order forbidding public disclosure of information which the family-owned company might have to disclose to the opposition during "discovery" prior to trial.

Meanwhile, a state district judge is pondering the Perez claim that the recovery suit filed by the council came too late and should be dismissed.

Council attorney John Schupp said nothing was done earlier because the Perezes controlled the legal machinery. Any move to investigate was crippled and killed by court injunctions or indictments, he said.

Judge G. William Swift of Lake Charles, the retired jurist appointed to referee this fight, said he expects to rule some time this month.

If it survives, the suit remains a long way from trial. It is a bonanza for lawyers, since odds are it could drag on for decades.

Though the suit to recover millions upon millions of dollars may not succeed, the mere fact that it was filed would have seemed ridiculous a few years ago.

Leander Perez, one of the founders of the old Dixiecrat Party and a fervent racist, died in 1969. His acute political instincts enabled him to run Plaquemines Parish for a half-century.

Plaquemines lies downriver from New Orleans. It's flat country. Parts of it are green with orange groves, but it's mainly marsh, barely above sea level. The only dry ground is near the Mississippi River and that peters out at Venice, population 27,000, the last town reachable by road.

While Leander Perez was district attorney, an abundance of oil, natural gas and sulphur was discovered in the marsh.

From 1936 to 1938, the two levee boards in the parish granted mineral leases to Delta Development, secretly owned by Perez, on thousands of acres that later became oil and gas fields.

When Perez died 14 years ago at 77, he left Plaquemines Parish to his two sons, Chalin and Leander Jr.

Between them, they held the reins of power. In 1979, for reasons known only to themselves, they began fighting each other. Before it was over they had lost their total control over Plaquemines.

Brothers envision river network in South America

They journeyed from South America's rivers to Quebec

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Two adventurous brothers who steered their riverboat up and down the backwaters of South America say the continent's river network could transform the wild interior into a land of plenty.

"We showed that river communication in South America is a possibility, for the first time," says one of the Romanian-born visionaries, Constantin Georgescu.

A 62-year-old economist, he and his brother Paul, 57, an engineer, traveled 24,000 miles by river in 1979-81, from Venezuela to Argentina and back, and will launch another 13,000-mile journey from Argentina to Canada on Dec. 17.

That trip, in the same 32-foot boat, will take them through South America's tropical rivers again, across the Caribbean, up the Mississippi, into the Great Lakes and on to Quebec.

"We are mainly interested in South America, with its huge reserves and potential for growth, which could be accelerated many years if there were good, efficient means of transportation," Paul Georgescu, a professor at Simon Bolivar University in Caracas, said in an interview.

HIS BROTHER said the continent has an estimated 3 million square miles of uninhabited land. It also has 30 percent of the world's reserves of fresh water, and a third of its forest lands. Economists and geographers have long said the interior has great potential for fishing, cattle raising and agricultural development, and holds untold resources of minerals and energy.

"But most of these riches are untapped, just because nobody could get them out," said Constantin Georgescu, pointing on a wall map to the wide Amazon region bordering several South American countries.

Aboard their boat Niculina, piloted by Constantin, they steamed from Margarita Island in Venezuela to Buenos Aires.

First they crossed a part of the Caribbean Sea, then went up Venezuela's Orinoco River, to the Casiquiare and the Rio Negro and on to the Amazon in the heart of Brazil. They next traveled up the Madeira, which empties into the Amazon from the south, and on to the Mamore and Guapore rivers along the eastern Bolivian border, southeast into the Paraguay and Parana rivers and on into the Rio de la Plata at Buenos Aires.

FOR THE RELATIVELY short overland trips between unconnected rivers, the 48-ton Niculina was carried by truck.

Paul Georgescu hesitates to make an estimate, but believes that linking all of South America through its rivers would cost at least $50 billion.

The toughest — and most expensive — jobs would be to build canals in the Atures region of Venezuela and Colombia, and in Brazil's Porto Velho and Mato Grosso regions to connect South America's three major river basins — the Amazon, Orinoco and La Plata.

With South American governments mired in a debt crisis, the brothers know the financing is not on the immediate horizon.

But, Constantin said, "with present-day technology, it wouldn't be half as hard as building the Panama Canal was."

Even without the connecting channels, only 450 miles would call for land transportation.

SOUTH AMERICAN rivers make such major European waterways as the Rhine and the Thames look like small brooks by comparison, said Constantin, a talkative, energetic man, a contrast to his quieter younger brother.

"The total flow of the Thames in one year is the same as that of the Amazon in one day, and the latter alone has 11 tributaries that are longer than the Rhine," Constantin said. But, while the Amazon's potential lies largely untapped, the Rhine carries 250 million tons of cargo very year, making its banks one of the most economically active areas in the world.

Said Paul: "We are in the midst of a vicious circle. Since there are no ways of communication, the lands remain unproductive and there is nothing to ship from them, and this in turn makes governments reluctant to make the big investments that would be needed."

As an example of the neglect of river transport, the Georgescu brothers point to the cattlemen of Bolivia's Beni Province, who use old-time DC-3 airplanes to send beef to La Paz and other cities, even though a river reaches to within 100 miles of the capital.

They also said Venezuelan steel exporters could save money by using the Orinoco and Meta rivers to ship steel to neighboring Colombia, instead of shipping via the longer Caribbean route to Barranquilla, where the steel is then reshipped by train or truck to final destinations across Colombia.

One of the staunchest supporters of a river network is Peru's President Fernando Belaunde Terry, who commissioned the brothers to study the feasibility of linking Peruvian and Bolivian rivers to facilitate commerce between the two neighbors.

LAST YEAR, when he and other South American presidents were invited to Bolivar bicentennial ceremonies in Venezuela, the Peruvian leader made part of the trip by river aboard the Peruvian navy's vessel Amazonia to show his support of continental integration through waterways.

President Jaime Lusinchi of Venezuela also has praised the Georgescu brothers' efforts.

"The total flow of the Thames in one year is the same as that of the Amazon in one day, and the latter alone has 11 tributaries that are longer than the Rhine."

— Constantin Georgescu

They say they are preparing a computerized study on the political, socio-economic and cultural consequences of a South American river network.

small villages of Indians or peasants who have long remained outside the mainstream of modern society. Such projects could alter their lives.

"We still don't know what all the consequences might be, but there is no doubt that there is a whole new world lying dormant in South America's rivers, big and small," Constantin Georgescu said.

The newly-married Teitelbaums are seated in an auto after their wedding under the stars outside Uniondale, N.Y., Tuesday. About 10,000 guests attended a sit-down dinner after the ceremony.

Thousands of guests wish couple 'mazel tov'

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Joyous shouts of "mazel tov" rang out from 25,000 Hasidic Jews who cheered the marriage of two grandchildren of their religious leader, then danced into the early morning hours sustained by more than four tons of food.

"I don't think anyone has ever seen anything like this before and I don't think we will ever see anything like it again," said Isaac Rosenberg of Brooklyn, where the bulk of the members of the Satmar sect in the United States live.

In a ceremony during which they never kissed or even touched, the bride and groom, both 18 and first cousins, embarked on their arranged marriage with the best wishes of sect members from all over North and South America and Europe.

The grand rabbi, Moses Teitelbaum, joined his grandson, Menachem Teitelbaum, and his granddaughter, Brucha Sima Meisels, in the traditional Hasidic service.

The bride's father, Aron Teitelbaum, is rabbi of the Monroe, N.Y., Satmar community, and the bride's father, David Meisels, is a rabbi in Brooklyn.

"This is a very sacred and important day for all of us," said Sol Keit of Los Angeles. "It's a one-of-a-kind thing."

The celebration that followed included feasting on more than four tons of food and dancing until dawn to the music of a 26-piece orchestra.

The young man's father, Aron Teitelbaum, is rabbi of the Monroe, N.Y., Satmar community, and the bride's father, David Meisels, is a rabbi in Brooklyn.

As cousins, the young couple have known each other since childhood. Hasidic spokesmen said that the marriage was arranged by a matchmaker but that the youngsters could have turned down the idea. New York state law has no provisions against the marriage of cousins.

The wedding guests began arriving at Nassau Coliseum in this New York City suburb hours before the ceremony, mostly in school buses or chartered buses.

Inside the arena, the Stanley Cup banners of the Islanders hockey team had been removed from the rafters and replaced by a giant hanging crown decorated with palm trees — because "Teitelbaum" means palm tree in Hebrew.

A blue banner behind the bride platform said in Hebrew: "It is our prayer that the Almighty will increase the days of our king."

Another Hasidic spokesman, Rabbi Efraim Stein, said the "king" was the 70-year-old grand rabbi. He said a 12-foot-long loaf of bread atop the three-tiered dais would be cut up so everyone could receive a piece "as a sign of good luck."

After the ceremony, 10,000 of the guests went into the coliseum for a sit-down dinner while the others sampled a huge buffet.

The men were served at long tables in the arena, where they appeared as a sea of black and white, their orthodox garb of black suits and hats — kept on throughout the meal — against white shirts and white tablecloths.

The women, who ate in a separate exhibition hall, presented the contrasts of youth and age. Many covered their heads with babushkas or hats and wore heavy black shoes, but the younger ones, many bare-headed, sported silk dresses, nylons, high heels and fur coats.

Two trailer trucks had brought in the food — including 5,000 pounds of roast chicken, 2,500 pounds of gefilte fish and 500 pounds of pate, said caterer George Lieberman.

The cost of the wedding was estimated by one coordinator, Joseph Weiss, at $500,000. He said the money came from the family, friends and the various Satmar congregations. Wine, meat, fish and bread were donated by vendors who are members of the sect.

HBO takes lion's share of cable's ACE awards

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HBO won 11 awards, far outdistancing the four won by rival Showtime. Among the individual winners were Carol Burnett, Sir Laurence Olivier, Lee Remick, Hal Holbrook and Billy Joel.

Burnett received the ACE for best performance by an actress in a dramatic or theatrical program. She won for her performance opposite Elizabeth Taylor in the HBO premiere film "Between Friends." Olivier won the top acting award for his appearance in another HBO special, "Mr. Johnson and Mr. Halpern."

The show was to mark the opening of unofficial cable-TV week in California.

Following the awards ceremony, the cable industry scheduled a dinner and dance at the nearby Beverly Wilshire hotel.

Today, the industry's movable fetes is scheduled to head for the Anaheim Convention Center in Anaheim, Calif., site of the 16th annual three-day Western Cable Show and trade exhibit.

This year's get-togethers come at the end of an especially tough year for cable TV, which saw even some of its strongest, most successful program networks stumble through 12 months of lackluster growth and growing consumer indifference.

Attendance figures tell much of the story. Only about 8,500 attendees are expected in Southern California this week, down from nearly 10,000 last year.

Catholic physician who helped develop birth control pill dies

Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

John Rock, a Roman Catholic physician who pursued the dictates of his conscience rather than the precepts of his church when he helped develop the first birth control pill, died Tuesday in Peterborough, N.H.

The author, scientist, lecturer and professor emeritus of gynecology at Harvard was 94.

He died in his sleep at a hospital here, not far from the 100-year-old home where he lived in recent years, surrounded by his three daughters and many grandchildren.

Rock's interest in both fertility and population control predated his research into Enovid, the original pill, which he developed with Drs. Gregory Pincus, M.C. Phang and Neizo Garcia.

He was a friend and confidant of Margaret Sanger, the country's leading proponent of planned parenthood, and an admirer of Drs. William H. Masters and Virginia Johnson, whose research into sexuality he considered one of the century's biggest breakthroughs.

His liberal attitude toward limiting human reproduction and continued sexual exploration came not from laboratory experiments but from a buggy ride he took in 1904.

A Roman Catholic priest had invited him to go along on a weekly visit to a local poor farm in Massachusetts.

As they were driving behind the priest's horse down a country road, the clergyman advised the then 14-year-old Rock to "always stick to your conscience. Never let anyone else keep it for you. And I mean anyone else."

It was an admonition Rock said he not only never forgot but that he applied to his work each day.
