Gorbachev anticipates 'frank' talks

BY ALISON SMALE Associated Press Writer

LONDON - Senior Soviet leader Mikhail S Gorbachev, in his first comment on the upcoming superpower nuclear arms talks, stressed today that they should aim to ban weapons in space

I would like to stress that during the meeting we stated the position of the Soviet Union on such questions as the prevention of the threat of nuclear war, restraining the arms race. Gorbachev said

In this connection we empha sized the significance of the forthcoming talks with the USA on the whole complex of space and nuclear weapons, prevention of militarization of outer space

Gorbachev's repeated mention of the space weapons issue indicated this is the Kremlin's main concern at talks between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko in Geneva Jan. 7-8.

Gorbachev, considered the No. 2 man in the Soviet leadership hierarchy, said more than four hours of talks with Mrs. Thatcher at her weekend residence Chequers were business-like and constructive" and called for improved British-Soviet relations

In the prevailing international situation, the need to establish mutual understanding between our two countries is especially great,' Gorbachev said.

Both Gorbachev and Mrs. Thatcher realized "that what the other wants is security at a much lower level of armaments," a British source said.

Briefing reporters on condition he not be further identified, the source added that the Soviets "quite clearly were concerned as we are to prevent an arms race in space.

Mrs. Thatcher to 'sound out' world leaders

By EDITH M. LEDERER Associated Press Writer

LONDON - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher leaves today on an around-the-world trip giving her a chance to sound out top leaders in the West and East on arms control and other issues three weeks before U.S.-Soviet talks begin.

On Sunday, she met in London with the man regarded as the second most powerful figure in the Soviet Union, Mikhail S. Gorbachev. Her trip calls for meetings with President Reagan in Washington and major Communist Party figures in China, including Deng Xiaoping.

The centerpiece of her trip comes Wednesday, when she will sign an accord turning over control of the colony of Hong Kong to China after the British lease on nearly all of the capitalist enclave expires in 1997.

When Mrs. Thatcher goes to Washington, she will have the chance to brief Reagan on the Gorbachev meeting. The Reagan administration says it is formulating its position on disarmament and other aspects of arms control to present when Secretary of State George P. Shultz meets his Soviet counterpart, Andrei A. Gromyko, in Geneva, Switzerland, British officials, speaking on condition they not be identified, said the prime minister is expected to ask the Chinese for their assessment of Chinese-Soviet relations and their expectations about the visit of Ivan Arkhipov, the Soviet first deputy prime minister, who arrives in China the day after Mrs. Thatcher's departure. He will be the highest-ranking Kremlin official to visit China in 15 vears.

She has said: "We live on the same planet and we have to go on sharing

Mrs. Thatcher is scheduled to arrive in China late Tuesday. Her schedule on Wednesday includes talks with Premier Zhao Ziyang and with the general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party, Hu Yaobang, and with Deng. She will then travel to Hong Kong for meetings Thursday with government leaders. On Friday she flies to Washington after stops in Guam and Another shipment of methyl isocyanate, rejected last week in France, will be shipped either to the Institute plant, about 10 miles west of Charleston, or to Carbide's Woodbine, Ga., pesticide plant, said spokesman Ed Van Den Ameele.

The company has worked to dispose of stocks of the gas by converting it into pesticide, and has said no more methyl isocyanate would be produced until the cause of the Dec. 3 leak in Bhopal was determined.

Meanwhile, Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., on Sunday linked emissions from the Institute plant with a high cancer rate in the Kanawha Valley.

Waxman cited a 1981 Union Carbide report that estimated that 280 pounds of methyl isocyanate was leaked into the air per year, and noted that cancer rates in the Institute area are 25 percent higher than the national average.

"I don't want to scare people unnecessarily but I think there's good reason to be frightened," Waxman, chairman of the House subcommittee on health and the environment, said on the ABC's This Week with David Brinkley.'

Van Den Ameele denied in a telephone interview from the company's Danbury, Conn., headquarters that the plant regularly released methyl isocyanate.

Union Carbide Chairman Warren Anderson said during a congressional hearing in Institute last week that the company had no idea what kinds or quantities of chemicals the plant sends into the air. At the hearing, federal Occupa-tional Safety and Health Administration scientist Peter Infante said the plant emits about 11,000 tons of 60 chemicals, including known cancer causers, each year. On Sunday, Waxman blamed the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for much of the problem. He said the EPA fails to regulate emissions of hundreds of hazardous chemicals.

EPA Deputy Assistant Administrator Jack McGraw said earlier on the program that the agency plans "another look at a lot of the laws that we have." But he added, "You just can't legislate a risk-free, failsafe system.

In another development, Union Carbide was fined $55,000 on Friday for nine environmental violations at its South Charleston Technical Center, state hazardous waste coordinator Ron Shipley said Sunday. The fine was levied after the company voluntarily reported that it stored hazardous waste at the research center longer than 90 days without a permit and failed to report some dangerous chemicals it generated, Shipley said.

In admitting the violations, reported before the Bhopal incident, the Carbide officials said there was a pattern of problems involving environmental procedures at the center that they were taking steps to correct, he said.

Union Carbide spokesman Dick Henderson said the violations were uncovered during an internal audit in October after a new manager was brought in to oversee health, safety and environmental law enforce-

Gorbachev arrived in the black Rolls-Royce - adorned with the red Soviet hammer-and-sickle flag that has conveved him everywhere in Britain so far. In Moscow, the Soviet Communist

Pravda reported "a growing conviction" in West European capitals that the arms race is senseless and that there was awareness in Britain of the hopelessness and danger of the intensifying military and political confrontation between East and

The agreeable tone struck by Gorbachev with his smiling public appearances was well received by British media today. Most newspapers placed reports of the Chequers meeting on their front pages. His conduct seem designed to project a friendlier Soviet image after months of chilly East-West relations.

'There's not the slightest doubt that the Soviet Union wants better relations with the West," opposition Labor Party foreign affairs spokesman Denis Healey said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

Gorbachev brought Mrs. Thatcher message from Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko. Mrs. Thatcher will brief President Reagan on her discussion with Gorbachev when she goes to Washington later this week

The Reagan administration says it is formulating its position on arms control to present when Shultz meets Gromyko.

One source said the message brought by Gorbachev conveyed Chernenko's "positive attitude" to the talks between Shultz and Gro-

British sources refused to say if Mrs. Thatcher gleaned any insights from Gorbachev into the positions the Soviets will bring to the Shultz-Gromyko meeting.

But Mrs. Thatcher did stress the sincerity of the U.S., British and NATO approach to arms control talks, a source said.

Tass quoted Gorbachev as saying the Soviet Union, Britain and other European nations bear responsibility for friendly relations in Europe and calling for "continuation and deepening of the European process of detente.

This suggested Moscow wants to improve ties with Western Europe, a drive that could focus on Britain and France — which Chernenko reportedly plans to visit next year. Both countries have refused to include their nuclear missile forces in negotiations to reduce nuclear arms in Europe.

Mrs. Thatcher raised human rights issues with Gorbachev, mentioning Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, imprisoned Jewish dissident Anatoly Shcharansky and conditions for Soviet Jews, whose emigration rate has dropped.

Devotional thread woven through nation

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

The approach of the birth of Jesus had a curiously political ring to it, a note that is echoed today in the sharpening reappraisal going on in the country about the relation of religion to government.

When Mary felt her unborn child's first movement, she exulted:

"My soul magnifies the Lord.... He has shown strength with his arm, he has scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts, he has put down the mighty from their thrones and exalted those of low degree.

"He has filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he has sent empty away. He has helped his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy.

That "Magnificat," quoting from Judaism's book of Samuel, reflects an age-old interreligious insistence that public policy pursue justice, measured by how the weakest in Their interaction always has been an underlying force in America. Although religion at times has seemed quiescent, it lately has generated strong, often cacophonous voices in the nation's politics, foreshadowing strenuous tests ahead.

It was a crosscurrent that has churned through the centuries ever since the Christ event and the prophets before him.

Elements of it reverberated through the fall presidential campaign, permeated conflicts over various social issues and presaged future struggles in courts, schools, conferences and legislative halls.

"This is one debate that won't go away soon - nor should it," says University of Massachusetts political scientist Jean Bethke Elshtain, citing a rash of misapprehensions

From the first, presidents have proclaimed an annual day of prayer. Chaplains, paid by government, serve in the armed forces. Oaths, taken in courts and elsewhere, close with the words, 'So help me God."

Each day's session of the House and Senate opens with prayer, as do state legislatures. Both the national anthem and the patriotic song America" proclaim faith in God. Official signs and symbols of religion mark the documents and architecture of the country's attack.

But such religious hallmarks lately have come under attack. Only about two decades ago, the push began for "separation from our public life of God, of prayer, of Judeo-Christian moral values," says Yale lawyer-the-ologian and television evangelist Pat Robertson.

Although the country originated the pattern of religious liberty in the world, the founders based their formative cause on allegiance to a deity higher than any earthly power or

People are "endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights," says the 1776 Declaration of Independence, which four times invokes God in justifying the revolution against infringements on those

IT WAS, IN ITS rationale, a theological treatise, "appealing to the Supreme Judge of the World for the Rectitude of our intentions," challenging the prevailing theory that royalty inherited Lordly rule. Instead, that prerogative was seen as bestowed on the citizenry by God, not to be usurped by any monarch or despotic regime.

"These liberties are the gift of God," said Thomas Jefferson, chief author of the declaration, which he said was intended to "reflect the AP Laserphoto mind of Americans."

It was a radical, new concept in the world, the seedbed of democracy, rooted in faith. George Washington, commander-in-chief of American forces in that struggle and the nation's first president, said in his farewell address to Congress:

Of all the dispositions and habits They had shaken off the shackles of which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispens-able supports. Reason and experisaw themselves as like the ancient ence both forbid us to expect national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle. mised land.

That fundamental relationship, in which religion is regarded a main source and buttress to political and national integrity, was stoutly affirmed by early U.S. presidents and most of them since.

"Religion and virtue are the only foundations not only of republicanism and of all free government but of social felicity under all governments and in all combinations of society," declared the second president, John Adams.

IN A DARK PERIOD of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln urged both sides to their knees in repentance for "sins and transgressions" that had brought on the war, saying: "We have forgotten God. We have forgotten the gracious hand which preserved us in peace, and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us."

Franklin D. Roosevelt, eyeing the rise of Nazism in Europe, told Congress: "Storms from abroad directly challenge three institutions indispensable to Americans, now as always. The first is religion. It is the source of the other two - democracy and international good faith."

John F. Kennedy, who had to fight off anti-Catholic suspicions in his campaign, said in his inaugural: The same revolutionary beliefs for which our forbears fought are still at issue around the globe - the belief that the rights of man come not from the generosity of the state, but from the hand of God."

The U.S. Constitution makes no mention of God other than in its dating at the close "in the Year of our Lord," 1787, and it prohibits any religious tests for office. The First Amendment bars Congress from legislating "an establishment of religion," but guarantees its "free exercise" - clauses subject since to shifting, now keenly controversial, interpretations.

Although the Constitution avoids ny religious favoritism, indications of the religious impulse interwove the country's formative acts and deliberations, beginning with the compacts of its early settlements.

We shall find that the God of Israel is among us," wrote the governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, John Winthrop, at its outset in 1630. "For we must consider that we shall be as a 'City upon a Hill'," he added, alluding to the biblical image of ancient Israel. "The eyes of all people are upon us."

THAT SENSE OF divinely appointed destiny characterized the early settlers in the "new world."

Israelites who had broken free of bondage in Egypt to enter the pro-

When Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin were assigned to design an official seal for the new nation, they considered the image of the exodus from Egypt as the best representation of the American struggle for a new land of religious Franklin proposed a portrayal of Moses lifting his hand over the Red Sea as its water engulfed Pharaoh's troops and chariot, with the motto, 'Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God." Jefferson suggested a representation of the children of Israel in the wilderness, led by a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, as in the biblical account. The official U.S. seal, adopted in 1782 and appearing on every dollar bill, shows the "eye of God" above an Egyptian pyramid with the Latin "Annuit Coeptis," meaning,

"He has favored our undertaking."
Washington, as commander of the Continental Army, was likened to Moses, Gideon or Joshua, leaders of the Israelites in their-struggle. Jefferson, in his second presidential inaugural, referred to the biblical image of America, saying:

"I shall need...the favor of that Being who led our fathers, as Israel of old, from their native land and planted them in a country flowing with all the necessaries and comforts of life."

THE DEVOTIONAL NOTE ran through the planning of the new nation. Records of meetings of the Continental Congress are laden with references to God, to Jesus Christ, to the "Christian religion," to public worship, prayer, morality and thanksgiving.

At its first meeting in 1774 in Philadelphia's Carpenters' Hall, the Continental Congress initiated the practice of opening its session with prayer. That practice continued for the next 14 years as a new nation took shape, and became a standing rule. Prayer still opens each day's business of Congress.

Four times, the Continental Congress set days for public prayers, fasting and repentance for sins. Washington ordered chaplains attached to military regiments, as authorized by the Congress, a chaplaincy continued ever since in the armed forces. In his initial order for it, Washington said:

The blessings and protection of Heaven are at all times necessary, but especially in times of public distress and danger.

As president at the direction of Congress, he set the first national Thanksgiving Day on Nov. 26, 1789, an official holiday observed annually since then. In initiating it,

Washington said: "It is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of Almighty God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits and humbly to implore his protection and favor.

Additionally, presidents regularly set annual prayer days, and sometimes other devotional occasions. President Reagan designated 1983 the "Year of the Bible," citing its contributions to moral standards, law and Western civilization - an act unsuccessfully challenged in

THE NORTHWEST Ordinance of 1787, considered a fundamental document both of freedom of religion and concern for it, set the governing patterns of territory that came to include a half dozen states — Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and much of Minnesota.

While it provides that no "peaceful and orderly" person "shall ever be molested on account of his mode of worship or religious sentiment," the statute also specifies: "Religion, morality and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education, shall be forever encouraged."

Expression of those combined concerns continue in numerous state constitutions, most of which acknowledge God.

Although this is not explicitly done by the U.S. Constitution, scholars say its separation of powers derives from a fundamental biblical concept - that any human instrumentality is subject to sin, misuse and corruption.

That was a key departure from governments of the "old world" in which authority was centralized in kings. But with a religiously drawn insight into the fallibility of any human domination, the framers of the Constitution fixed its "checks and balances.

Neither the President, the Congress nor the Supreme Court had ull authority, but each had a lever on the other to keep each branch from going astray

Traveling the United States to analyze its new system of government in the early 19th century, a noted French political philosopher. Alexis de Tocqueville, wrote:

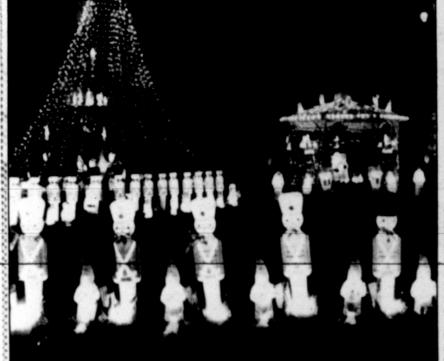

'Religion in America takes no direct part in the government, but it must, nevertheless, be regarded as the foremost of political institutions of that country.

He said it "powerfully contributes to the maintenance of a democratic republic among the Americans."

Amarillo bishop 'peacemaker, not troublemaker'

By RENAY SAN MIGUEL

SAN ANGELO (AP) — During his anti-nuclear speeches, the Most Rev. Leroy Matthiesen, bishop of the Diocese of Amarillo, has often called for increased dialogue between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Some of the people who object to his controversial views wish he would start that dialogue by becoming a permanent Russian resident.

"I've been invited several times to go there and stay there," Matthiesen told a crowd of about 100 people recently at the Knights of Columbus Hall. He was at a Catholic symposium on the 1983 bishop's pastoral letter on war and peace.

"I'm glad I was introduced as a peacemaker and not a trouble-

Several people had much nicer words for the 63-year-old Matthiesen, who was born in Olfen east of San Angelo and attended school

"This is a homecoming of sorts for me," he said before the symposium as friends lined up to greet him.

Those friends may have seen Matthiesen describe the Catholic Church's moral perspective on the nuclear issue during interviews on "60 Minutes," "The Phil Donahue Show" and "The MacNeil-Lehrer

Most of the controversy Matthiesen has generated centered on his speeches at three anti-nuclear rallies at the Pantex nuclear missile assembly plant near Amarillo.

Yet he does so with the approval of the Vatican and his fellow bishops, he said. He has never been censured for his views.

With expansion of that plant under way, and plans to bury radioactive waste in the Panhandle recently proposed by the government, it appears that Matthiesen will have more material with which to

"They've proposed two high-level nuclear waste dumps: one at Tulia, near prime farmland, and the other near Hereford, also prime farmland. And we're supposed to be patriotic enough to say, 'Okay, put it here,' with the threat of polluting the Ogallala Aquifer from Lubbock to Montana.

The Pantex plant and waste dumps were not Matthiesen's reason for coming to San Angelo. Matthiesen and the Most Rev. Joseph Fiorenza, bishop of the Diocese of San Angelo, were here to explain the finer points of last year's pastoral letter, "The Challenge of Peace."

The bishop's letter generated intense reactions when it was released last year for its call to a halt of production of nuclear weapons, bilateral cuts in superpower arsenals and a comprehensive test ban

It also condemned nuclear war fare as morally wrong, since it violated what the bishops defined as two universally binding principles; discrimination (the killing of innocent people) and proportionality answering conventional warfare with nuclear weapons).

The letter did state that "just war," for the defense of a country from a "real and certain danger," is acceptable as long as nuclear weapons are not used.

No other pastoral letter has created this kind of reaction, Matth-iesen said. None did. We've had intense reaction from both ends of the spectrum. This one was drafted in public. The public was invited to com-sort of come from on high. "It's a teaching document. It does not intend to give the last word on nuclear policy. It's primarily for Catholic people in order that they can reach a conscientious decision for themselves. And it's also intended to be a contribution to the public discussion on nuclear policy. It merely repeats moral teachings that have always been held sacred in Judeo-Christian tradition: that no one may directly take the life of an

to speak up.
"If we don't arm ourselves to the teeth...we're facing a conflict of ideologies, and they (the Soviets) are the bad guys, and I will not be subjugated to them," he said as the audience began to applaud.

This is typical of the kind of reaction Matthiesen has heard at the six symposiums he has spoke at this

"We've had excellent response. It's a reflection of the very serious problem in which we're involved. We're living in a very dangerous time.

'Most of the negative reaction is from people who say, 'Are you saying we don't have the right to defend ourselves?' We're saying that's not only a right, but a duty. The question is the means."

AUSTIN (AP) - There will be twice as much wastewater in the Colorado River within two years if current population growth and sewage plant construction continue, the

Dallas-area stores join blue law revolution

DALLAS (AP) - Perhaps heeding tionally has upheld the law. Houston stores' examples, increasing numbers of retailers scattered across the Dallas-Fort Worth area are opening their doors in violation of the Texas blue law.

But the major retailers — including Sears, Roebuck & Co., J.C. Penney Co., Joske's, Dillard Department Stores Inc. and Neiman-Marcus Co. remained closed Sunday, The Dallas Morning News said today. Although the major department stores were closed, officials have said privately that if one of their competitors were to open on Sunday, they would follow suit. Several told the newspaper they have con-tingency plans and advertisements

"I've always loved a good, clean fight," said Ms. Addison, a lawyer with the Houston law firm of Fulbright & Jaworski.

On the other side of the courtroom in the latest battle over the blue law are Robert MacIntyre and Tom Conner, representing the Retail Merchants Association.

MacIntyre and Conner are seeking temporary injunctions to stop the "renegade retailers" from violating the blue law.

Members of the group have 'shopped" at some of the 280 Houston-area stores open on Sunday to collect evidence, MacIntyre said.

While Conner does most of the talking in the courtroom, MacIntyre, 37, puts together most of the team's legal strategy. 'My work on the blue law has been the most fun of all. I feel honored and privileged to serve the retail merchants," he said.

The 23-year-old blue law bars the 'Hill' crawling with activity

7 ASHINGTON — Capitol Hill is overrun with pests - and they're not all lobbyists, nosy reporters or demanding constituents.

Cockroaches infest the Capitol and the House and Senate office buildings = even the newer ones

It's not that Congress has ignored the problem. It has con tracted with exterminators for years. But in the peculiar, penny pinching way of peoole with billions to spend, the honorable members are too cheap to pay for a proper job.

The current contract, with Entech Inc., pays $2,000 a month for supposedly keeping roaches out of the hundreds of offices, suites and hideaways in the nine buildings and the steadily growing Capitol com-

Gene Budowski, president of Entech, told my reporter Scott Barrett that a more realistic figure would be $5,000 to $6,250 a month, and other exterminators familiar with the job agree. Like Abe Lincoln's legendary hero being ridden out of town on a rail. Budowski indicated that if it weren't for the honor of the thing, he'd just as soon skip it. Though acknowledging that the Capitol job was a "prestige account," he said he wouldn't bid on it again - not at Congress's prices, anyway

There are other problems besides congressional stinginess that are peculiar to the job. For one thing, temporarily in the 51-year-old Long-Budowki's crews are only allowed to spray for vermin by request—roaches in the Texas Capitol," he instead of doing so on a more effective, regular basis.

For another thing, Budowski, like his predecessors, has found that many members of Congress and their staffs are uncooperative. Maybe they realize how little Entech is being paid, and figure that any company that gets only about $15 a hour can't have much clout.

At any rate, few congressional employees are willing or able to authorize the exterminators to move books and papers so they can spray the cracks and crannies where the little six-legged rascals lurk. "It's very frustrating because it's so simple," Budowksi said. Furthermore, Budowski claims -

Another headache ste fact that the buildings' cafeterias and kitchens are in the jurisdiction of another exterminating firm, and there's no coordination between the two assault teams. As one former contractor explained, food carts being wheeled through the corridors to catered events pick up roaches in the kitchens, and the nervy little hitchhikers peel off along the way in search of new fields to conquer.

It's barely possible that help will arrive with the new Congress next month. Rep.-elect Tom DeLay, R-Texas, is an exterminator by trade, and was understandably appalled at the number of roaches he saw slithering around the office he's using

Before he learned the financial realities of life as a congressional exterminator, DeLay cracked to a reporter, "I could make a fortune here if it wasn't a conflict of interest." But when told what the job pays, he hedged: "I'd have to survey the situation before I would do it for $2,000 (a month)

Will he, then, try to remedy the roach problem by raising the ante? No doubt remembering the conservative constituents who sent him to Washington, DeLay said, "I can't say I'm going to work for more (appropriations) money." That, he explained, is "a typical government solution: Throw money at the probreat Britain has now made it official that it intends to withdraw from UNESCO at the end of 1985 unless the world body makes significant changes in its programs and policies. The British followed up their unofficial announcement of pulling out with an official memorandum to UNESCO's Paris headquarters.

Opposition to the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization is snowballing.

First it was the United States that said it would get out by the end of 1984. Great Britain followed suit with its announced plans for departure a year later. Now these two Atlantic nations have been joined by six other key members which have stated their desire for reform. Much of the unhappiness of all of these nations stems from the knowledge that UNESCO spends 80 percent of its budget on its administration in Paris, and only 20 percent in needy countries.

What these opponents would like to see is less money spent. and less politics played. A recent study by the United States General Accounting Office discovered many instances of gross mismanagement such as the budgeting of $54,000 for a conference eventually costing $600,000. UNESCO also is spending $15,000 a month on public relations, or image improve-

London's Daily Telegraph summed up the situation succinctly in an editorial, stating that "UNESCO is an inefficient, politicized, mismanaged and partly corrupt organization which even its friends find difficult to defend.

Little wonder so many of its onetime friends are abandoning the UNESCO ship.

Preventing disasters

ew names have entered precision instruments and airthe vocabulary of disaster. Some are unfamiliar: a gas called methyl isocyanate, a city in India called Bhopal. One name is familiar: Union Carbide. As the toll of dead and injured rises in Bhopal, it is natural and perhaps it will ultimately prove correct to blame the well-known manufacturer. For now, though, the right response is to give the victims all possible aid, to avoid fault-finding until the evidence is in and to ensure quickly that similar tragedies will not recur.

Experts on such matters say that such an accident in the United States is unlikely; that technicians are better trained, government industrial regulation tighter, gas-storage tanks farther from population centers. But anyone who dismisses India as a technologically backward country knows nothing of India. A country that manufactures planes, that has built a nuclear bomb, may be poor, but it is not backward.

A country as advanced as the United States could be assumed to have government regulations on storage of hazardous chemicals like methyl isocyanate. It doesn't - although recent legislation requires such controls next year. Nor is there case for smugness about American handling of other toxic material. An industrialized society generates a lot of them, but only in recent years has the United States begun grappling with such threats as that of hazardous waste. Blame for the Bhopal tragedy may rest with Americans, Indians or, more likely, both. Finding fault will be important, but less so than finding how to make industry safer.

Liberals like tax reform plan

ASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, under fire from conservative businessmen for his tax reform plan, was jolted when he received a letter of congratulations from none other than George McGovern. In his disastrous campaign as the 1972 Democratic presidential nominee McGovern advocated some reforms contained in the Treasury Rowland Evans plan. After watching Regan fend off hostile interviewers on television, McGovern dashed off a note to the secretary congratulating him. He also expressed hope that his support would not

But that's exactly what worried Regan. He promptly telephoned James Baker, White House chief of staff, to inform him of the McGovern letter. Baker responded wryly that Regan need not worry, because lots of liberals like the idea.

LANCE ON THE PHONE Bert Lance, on the political shelf since his short-lived tenure as "general chairman" of the Mondale campaign, has returned to the national political wars, trying to round up votes for former North Carolina governor Terry Sanford to become Democratic national chairman.

Lance, Democratic state chairman of Georgia, wants a Southerner as party chairman just as he wanted one for vice president last summer. Consequently, he has been on the telephone trying to drum up a solid Southern vote on the Democratic National Committee for Sanford, about to retire as president of Duke University.

But many of Lance's fellow state chairmen, including some key Southerners, prefer a Boston-Washington lawyer: Democratic National Treasurer Paul Kirk, front-runner in the race for the chairmanship. Lance argues Kirk's background as political adviser and former administrative assistant of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy provides the wrong image for the party

SENATE MISCONCEPTIONS Senate insiders believe a main reason the highly- regarded Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida launched his ill-fated and self-destructive drive to be Senate Democratic leader was that he actually believed cloakroom grumbling about Sen. Robert-Byrd. Democratic senators have been complaining for years about Byrd's schoolmarm manner in running the Senate and the drab image he projects nationally for the party. But Chiles soon found rock-hard commitments, covering the full ideological spectrum, to give Byrd another term as minority leader.

Chiles also ran into reluctance to give him a leg up for majority leader should Democrats recapture the Senate in 1986. The early favorite to finally end Byrd's tenure: Sen. Dan Inouye of Hawaii, currently chairman of the Senate Democratic Con-

BUSH'S UNCLE SAM Although Vice President George Bush buried the hatchet with Rep. Geraldine Ferraro over lunch, he occasionally takes visitors in his official residence to his upstairs study to see a gift from Secretary of State George Shultz commemorating Bush's most memorable comment about his Democratic opponent. Soon after the vice president's offhand remark that he was trying to 'kick a little ass" in his debate with Ferraro, Shultz gave him a large poster depicting an angry and stern Uncle Sam with the bold caption: Uncle Sam Wants to Kick Ass.

The poster was made in 1980 at the height of American anger over the Iranian hostage crisis. Bush will not say whether he told Ferraro about the poster at their peacemaking PERCY IN DELHI?

Despite lame-duck Sen. Charles H. Percy's desire for a Cabinet-level job at home, President Reagan's assistants feel in the end the defeated Foreign Relations Committee chairman will take the only job offered him so far: ambassador to India.

Percy first wanted to be ambassador to the United Nations. When that got nowhere, he made an equally futile pitch to White House deputy chief of staff Michael Deaver to be secretary of education. Although he first turned down the India post, saying he wants to stay close to his children, he recently has been asking friends what they think of his going to New Delhi.

A footnote: Despite Percy's lack of cooperation with Reagan policies as Foreign Relations chairman, he has been treated with exceptional courtesy by the administration since his defeat. Secretary of State George Shultz even called Percy, offering his help to find government posts for his Foreign Relations Committee

Don't forget who pays the bill

The key to understanding one reason for the high cost of living is to look at what it could cost to have your grass cut and your sidewalks edged if the government intervened.

Let's suppose that vou pay someone $20 to cut your grass and edge your sidewalks once month. Now let's suppose that the government the Outdoor Aesthetics Protection

Charley Reese

Agency - passes a new rule which requires you to have your lawn cut and your sidewalks edged once a week. By simply issuing a new rule, the government has added $60 a month to your yard maintenance costs. Note that the government does not provide you with the $60 nor does it provide you with any compensating reduction in your other costs Finally, note that the only way you can pay this additional $60 is to take the money out of your present income, whatever it is

With this far-fetched example, I hope to convince you that because of sloppy use of the language we frequently forget that there is, indeed no such thing as a free lunch. Some members of Congress want to impose new emission standards on the Midwest industries to combat acid rain. When you say, as they do, that this will "cost the industries' $10 to $40 billion over a period of time it sounds as if the only people who will be affected are the indus-

Unfortunately, industry has no source of income except the money it collects from its customers. So what these Congressmen are really proposing is that the people in the Midwest who are customers of these industries shall be forced to pay an additional $10 billion to $40 billion for higher emission standards.

Corporations do not pay taxes and do not pay for whatever the government requires them to buy. Their customers pay for these things. This is not so because of some defect in the law or because of the arbitrary decision of corporate officers. It is so because it is a necessary reality. To make this clearer let's return to our example of the lawn cutting. Suppose that your only source of income is a fruit and vegetable stand. The government has imposed an additional $60 a month cost on you. Where are you going to get the money? Obviously from the only source of income you have - your customers. You will simply have to raise the price of your fruits and vegetables to cover the new cost the government has imposed on you. And if tomorrow the government imposes new costs on you in the form of taxes or in the form of requiring you to build, say, an additional parking lot, those costs, too, will have to be passes along to your customers.

A corporation works the same way. Its only income is the sale of its products. If this income does not equal or exceed its costs, then it goes out of business. Therefore, every additional cost no matter what its source has to be incorporated into the price of its products.

One study in New York, for example, attributed as much as 25 percent of hospital costs to governmentimposed requirements. The cost of houses are affected by requirements imposed on developers. Minimum wage laws, regulations, and requirements imposed by government have added tremendously to the costs of everything we buy.

Now, I am not arguing in this column against any tax, regulation or pollution control device. I am only arguing that if we realize that we ourselves will end up paying for these things then we are in a better position to evaluate the situation and make a more rational decision.

Political demagogues, by making it seem that only rich ogres will have to pay for something, mislead us. It's a variation of divide and conquer politics which attempts to pit one group of people against another.

It is one thing to say that power companies in the Midwest should be forced to pay $20 billion to stop acid rain. It is another to ask, should the families in the Midwest be forced to add $20 billion to their power bills to do something which may, or may not, have an effect on acid rain in the Northeast which may or may not be causing problems in some lakes?

In this particular case, the Reagan Administration postion is that there is not yet enough valid evidence on either the cause or the effects of acid rain to justify imposing such a sever financial burden on the people who live in the Midwest.

We can debate that position, but let no one in the debate pretend that only industry will pay the bill.

Chicago teachers, students return to class, ending strike

CHICAGO (AP) - Tentative approval of one-year contracts for 35,000 teachers and other workers in the nation's third-largest school district paved the way for classes to resume today for 430,000 students idled by a two-week strike.

'We are pleased to tell the parents and citizens of Chicago that the strike is suspended and classes can start," Chicago Teachers Union President Jacqueline Vaughn said Sunday after the union's House of Delegates voted 605-59 to accept the agreement worked out during an allnight bargaining session.

"I am pleased we will have our employees back on the job," school Superintendent Ruth Love said in a statement.

The agreement calls for an immediate 4.5-percent salary increase and a one-time 2.5-percent bonus to be paid March 1 to the teachers and members of 17 non-teaching unions that walked out together Dec. 3. Teachers salaries now range from $15,471 to $30,759.

We got the most we could get under the circumstances," Ms. Vaughn said. "We feel we deserve much, much more," but pushing for more would be like pushing "on a stone wall," she said in a news conference.

Timothy Bresnahan, co-chairman of the union coalition, said Sunday night he was relieved the strike was over, but "was disappointed because it was a strike that should never

"The coalition is satisfied," Bresnahan said. "We didn't get everything that we wanted, but that is the nature of negotiations.

The coalition of non-teaching unions, with the exception of the engineers' union, did not have to formally ratify the new contract, said Bresnahan, because it got the seal of approval when he agreed to members, who have 10 days to vote. Local 143 of the International Union of Operating Engineers, the last holdout in the negotiations, unanimously ratified the contract agreement Sunday afternoon, said union president Carl DeStefano.

DeStefano said members were pleased with the board's decision to administer examinations to allow engineers to be promoted by merit rather than by affirmative action.

The engineers were back on the job Sunday night getting the schools ready for class today, he said.

Delegate Bruce LaForce complained that the increase was "totally inadequate...30 to 50 percent lower" than what teachers are paid in many areas near Chicago.

LaForce also complained about a union concession that forces teachers to pay the first $200 of any medical bill and 10 percent of the remainder, unless they are treated by a low-cost hospital or doctor. "If I were facing a catastrophic illness, I would want the best help possible,'

The strike, the seventh by Chicago teachers in the past 16 years, was sparked by payroll deductions for medical insurance premiums previously paid by the school system. A strike in October 1983 lasted three

The obstacle was thrown up by Washington when it imposed a series of economic sanctions against Poland in retaliation for the 1981 crackdown on the Polish trade union Solidarity.

In addition to gleaning information about Gorbachev, Reagan was expected to gain Mrs. Thatcher's public support for the upcoming meeting in Geneva of Secretary of myko. Reagan already has discussed the subject with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and won endorsement of his arms control strategy last week from the NATO foreign ministers.

The White House source said there is no doubt among Reagan's advisers that he will order the pullout from the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, a step Britain already has taken and one the United States threatened a year ago if the U.N. organization failed to make a number of demanded reforms.

Reagan may decide to temper his decision, the official said, with an announcement that the United States will set up a special group to monitor implementation of bureaucratic reforms the administration has insisted would be necessary for continued U.S. participation in UNE-

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan appears unwilling to scale back the nation's military buildup to help reduce the budget deficit - a decision that would force deeper cuts in domestic programs, a tax hike or the abandoning of his defi-

Schroeder psychologically withdrawn

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart recipient William Schroeder has apparently recovered physically from a paralyzing stroke, but the experience has left him psy-chologically withdrawn and his doc-tors say they hope he can regain his enthusiasm for life.

Schroeder, 52, sat up in a chair Sunday for the first time since the stroke on Thursday and talked with family members, said Humana Heart Institute spokesman George Atkins.

But doctors remain concerned about the Jasper, Ind., man's mental withdrawal, said Dr. Allan M. Lansing, director of the institute.

Schroeder may be reacting to the realization of "the box sitting beside him, the mechanical heart, the uncertainties about the future, the feeling of the heart beating inside his chest, and then you add a stroke on top of it," Lansing said.

"He is not weeping. He doesn't act remain intact," he said. that way at all. But he seems like an But he was not eating ostrich. He is withdrawn in a way, he said, adding a psychiatrist would visit Schroeder today.

By Sunday, Schroeder had no apparent difficulty speaking and no remaining weakness on his right side, which had been paralyzed, Lansing said, adding that doctors would urge Schroeder to sit up and walk

Before the stroke, Schroeder was frequently on his feet and walked around the hospital with the portable Heimes Heart Driver attached to the air hoses from the mechanical heart. Since the stroke he has not used the 11-pound portable unit; remaining attached to a 323-pound Utahdrive unit.

Schroeder has been listed in serious but stable condition since the stroke, when he was returned to the intensive care unit room he occupied after the surgery Nov. 25. He is being tube-fed and getting intravenous protein to help him regain strength. A nurse stayed with the motor power part of the brain him in the room Sunday, and family members visited periodically, Lansing said.

Schroeder had to be helped into the chair Sunday but was alert and responsive for about an hour before he tired

The withdrawal probably is temporary, Lansing said. "I believe he will recover all of those things with a little prodding, with a little help and with a little support from his

The psychological ability of patients to handle the implant is a key factor in selecting candidates for the operation, he said.

"It will be very fascinating over the next few days to see how he does, how he responds and whether this is a temporary thing, which I believe it is, or whether this is a permanent withdrawal, which would be very discouraging," Lansing said.

Democratic governors, leaders to let party chairman 'evolve'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) - Democratic governors and state party leaders trying to name a candidate for national party chairman decided to wait for the race "to evolve," but proposed formation of a committee to direct the party's efforts to put a Democrat in the White House.

"The governors came to this meeting ready to make a choice, but it's clear we don't have a consensus at this point," Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic Governors Association, said

The seven governors and 40 leaders from 30 states announced after meeting behind closed doors that they could not agree on who to support as successor to Charles T. Manatt when the Democratic National Committee votes Feb. 1.

There was an agreement that we had a number of good candidates and that what was really needed was for that race to evolve," said Gov. John Carlin of Kansas, one of 34 Democratic governors.

"We'll support the chairperson, whoever he or she may be," Carlin

Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who led the search with Robb and Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona, declined to say whether there was strong support for any of the six declared candidates for the post. However, Carlin and California Democratic Party Chairman Peter Kelly said there was considerable support for former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford.

"But it was clear there wouldn't be a consensus," said Kelly, who is supporting former California party chairman Nancy Pelosi. "Someone is going to have to go out and fight for

Cowboys save last shot for NFL playoff berth

MIAMI (AP) — A couple of weekend developments transformed what could have been a humdrum National Football League game between the Dallas Cowboys and the Miami Dolphins into a matchup full of drama.

First, the San Francisco 49ers tripped the Los Angeles Rams 19-16 on Friday night, giving the 9-6 Cowboys a chance to slip into the final NFC wild-card playoff

THEN, DENVER ripped Seattle 31-14 Saturday, granting the Broncos a 13-3 record and forcing the 13-2 Dolphins to win their final game to earn the home-field advantage throughout the AFC playoffs.

Obviously, both teams have plenty of incentive in tonight's game at the Orange Bowl - the NFL regular season finale. A Dallas loss, however, will leave the Cowboys out of the playoffs for the first time since 1974 and only the second time in 18 years.

"It's been one of those years with a lot of ups and down," said

Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett. "We are still determined to make the playoffs. We are going to fight like the devil not to be on the first (Dallas) team in this decade not to make the playoffs."

Dorsett, who has gained 1,131 yards on 283 carries in what he considers a "down year," may hold the key to that quest. Opposing teams have been bludgeoning the Dolphins defense in the past few weeks, keeping the ball on the ground and thereby out of the hands of Marino and Co.

The Dolphins know what to expect.
"Tony Dorsett is one of the greatest running backs ever," said Miami nose tackle Bob Baumhower. "He cuts back well and all he needs is a little room and he's gone. We are looking at this as a big test for us."

trailed the Indianapolis Colts 17-7 at halftime last week before rebounding behind Marino's four second-half touchdown passes.

THAT IMPROVED the secondyear pro's NFL record for TD passes to 44. Marino, who was voted to the AFC Pro Bowl team for the second time last week, also increased his passing yardage total to 4,744 to move within 59 of Dan Fouts' league mark of

The Cowboys counter with Danny White, who will start at quarterback ahead of Gary Hogeboom. White has thrown for 1,334 yards and 10 touchdowns.

The injury-depleted Cowboys offense hasn't scored more than 28 points in regulation time in any game this year. The Dolphins average 32.3 per game. But Coach Tom Landry's Dallas teams haven't won 249 regularseason encounters in 25 years by giving up before the game. This year's squad, despite the lackluster record, is one of the best when it come to never quitting, Landry said.

We could have been out of (the playoff race) very easily," the veteran Cowboys coach said. "Credit this team that they've been able to pull themselves up when they were down.

"I think we're fortunate that we still have a chance. As long as the chance is there, we're going to take a shot at it

Miami Coach Don Shula said he is worried about the Cowboys' pass rush. Three sacks and constant pressure on Marino had a lot to do with the Dolphins' 45-34 loss to the L.A. Raiders two weeks

THOUGH THE Cowboys have sputtered on offense, Shula noted last week that "defensively, they're playing real good. They give you that big pass rush with that big front four. They can do a lot of things that can hurt you."

And Shula noted that the Cowboys showed some new wrinkles on defense in last week's 30-28 loss to the Redskins.

"They were using five defensive backs on first down and sometimes coming with more," Shula said. "We have to prepare for their regular defense plus be prepared for the five, six, seven

Redskins earn rest; Giants pull for Miami

Associated Press

The Washington Redskins will take a one-week vacation, the Pittsburgh Steelers and Los Angeles Rams will play in the National Football League playoffs and the New York Giants will be rooting for the Miami Dolphins tonight.

With the Dallas Cowboys at Miami in the regular-season finale, one playoff berth and several matchups are on the line

On Sunday, the Redskins, already assured of post-season action; linched the NFC East. They elimin ated St. Louis by edging the Cardinals 29-27. That gave the Los Angeles Rams a playoff berth.

"I hurt so bad I can't cry," said St. Louis fullback Ottis Anderson, who caught 12 passes for 124 yards and rushed 12 times for 24. "I think this game just wasn't meant to be.

Washington's victory also kept the Giants in the chase. A Miami victory over Dallas tonight would put the Giants in the playoffs and eliminate the Cowboys. But if Dallas wins, the Cowboys gain the wild-card berth.

THE STEELERS captured the AFC Central by downing the Los Angeles Raiders 13-7 in a game they had to win, and it cost the Raiders the home-field advantage in the AFC wild-card game. Earlier in the day, the Cincinnati Bengals crushed the Buffalo Bills 52-21 and could have won the Division title with a Pittsburgh loss.

Like the Giants' fortunes, next week's wild-card playoff games depend on the outcome of tonight's Miami-Dallas confrontation.

If Miami wins, the Raiders will travel to Seattle on Saturday and the Giants will meet the Rams in Los Angeles on Sunday. But if the Cowboys win, both games will be held on Sunday, with the Rams playing at Dallas and the Raiders at Seattle.

"I didn't even know when he was going to snap it," O'Donoghue said of the game's final play. "I heard the crowd counting down, 'two, one.' I think I kicked it on 'one.' I got a good lick on it, but it was wide left. You wish you had it over, but that's Permian coach John Wilkins said as his team prepared to take the field against Highland Park, "I told them what I've been telling them since the first week of the season - it's important to hang onto the football and go for that extra yard."

The Panthers got the message. They didn't lose a turnover and controlled the clock with a conservative running attack. Highland Park took an early 7-0 lead, but never mounted another serious threat. Watson scored on a 7-yard pass from quarterback Alton Holloway and on fourth-quarter runs of 6 and 8 yards.

Jones got Beaumont French's first touchdown on a one-yard plunge in the second quarter, then added scoring runs of 11 and 3 yards in the fourth quarter.

Cagers lose game, survive plane crash

JASPER, Ala. (AP) - East Tennessee State University basketball Coach Barry Dowd says it was "a miracle" everyone survived a fiery plane wreck that left 12 players with minor injuries and destroyed the team's equipment.

Dowd said he and the players who were on the twin-engine plane when it crash landed and burned at a Jasper airport planned to return to Johnson City, Tenn., today

"We're going to get on a bus — a bus — and go back to Johnson City," the coach said. All of the players were taken to Walker County Medical Center after the crash Sunday. Officials said 12 were treated for cuts, bruises or burns and none required hospitaliza-"We are very fortunate people. I don't know how it kept from killing all of us. It was a miracle," said Dowd. The coach said the injured players included Mike Dent, who had a bad cut on his head; Steve Shirley, minor cuts: Mark Watkins, a badly bruised

The Tennessee Airlines Convair 440 notified air traffic controllers in Birmingham about 12:30 p.m. CST that its right engine was on fire and a crash landing would be necessary.

The plane, carrying 33 players, coaches, reporters and alumni, made two passes over the Bevill Field in Jasper and then landed. Airport manager Bill Starnes said the tires blew out when the plane touched down and it skidded off the runway.

Passengers, who scrambled out the rear exit of the plane and through broken windows, escaped about three minutes before the aircraft was gutted by flames.

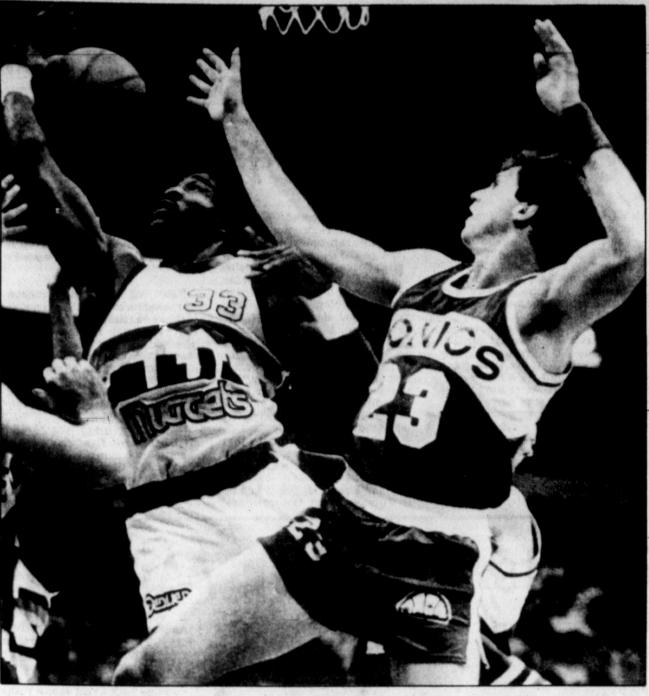

The team had lost to the University of Alabama at Birmingham, 72-57. Saturday night and was flying from Birmingham to Oxford, Miss., to play the University of Mississippi was just gliding. The propellers were off and on. I could smell the smoke. I looked out the window and one of the engines was on fire," he said. Dowd said all of the team's equip-

When Washington's Gene Shue won his 699th game as a coach Dec. 8, little did he know that he would reach the 700 mark as a loser instead of a winner.

The Bullets lost their fourth straight game, 109-101 to the Los Angeles Lakers on Sunday night, leaving Shue with 699 National Basketball Association coaching victories and making him the first coach to lose 700 times.

Mexican select team slugs Tarleton State

MEXICO CITY (AP) - A Mexican selection football team beat the Texans of Tarleton State University Saturday 22-15, in this city's first Aztec Bowl game in 14 years.

The Texans' coach, Bobby Fox, told reporters after the game that football in Mexico has improved "a thousand percent" since Tarleton trounced Mexico 42-8 in 1966. Fox blamed Tarleton's sluggish

Sweden has grip on big brother

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) - Sweden, after losing all five previous Davis Cup tennis matches with the United States, has a huge jump on overcoming the big brother jinx.

"Things aren't looking too bright. We could lose 0-5," said John McEnroe after he and Jimmy Connors failed to win a set in Sunday's two opening singles of the best-offive match series.

The doubles is set for tonight. McEnroe and Peter Fleming must win it to stay alive in the final. The Yanks are 140 in Davis Cup doubles, but lost their only previous match the U.S. Open semis - to Swedes Anders Jarryd and Stefan Edberg.

"If we win the doubles and I beat (Mats) Wilander on Tuesday it might give Jimmy some momentum and confidence in the last match," said McEnroe after his 13-11, 6-4, 6-3 loss dinavium Arena's indoor clay-court.

IT WAS only the third defeat of the year for the Wimbledon and U.S. Open champ, who came here after a seven-week layoff.

Wilander, who defended his Australian Open title a week ago, adjusted quickly from grass to clay and whipped Connors 6-1, 6-3, 6-3 in Sunday's first match.

And, Connors got himself into trouble with the officials during his match. His was penalized for three counts of misbehavior - equipment abuse, verbal abuse and audible obscenity.

He could be fined or defaulted or both, though Alan Mills of Britain, the referee conceded that the chance of default was "not very Connors problems aside, the outlook for the Americans was not very "We're in a very difficult situation. We could very well lose our three remaining matches," said McEnroe, who has led the U.S. to victory in the Davis Cup four times in the past six years.

The New Yorker, who was banned three weeks after pushing his fines past the $7,500 limit this year in Stockholm Nov. 5 and then sidelined with a wrist injury when getting ready to play the Australian Open, was praised by Mills for his behavior

"Considering the stress and the fact that the USA was down 0-1, I think he behaved very well," said Mills, the Wimbledon referee.

McEnroe complained about the clay surface in practice before the final and did it again after his be better," he said. McEnroe blew four set points in the first set, a marathon stanza that lasted more than two hours.

"I should have won two of the set points," McEnroe said. "But I didn't. My concentration wasn't as good as it usually is.

But this was easily the finest victory of his career.

You got to give him credit, because he hung in there. He played real well," said McEnroe.

"I just played a poor match. My timing was off, I didn't serve well and did not play the big points well. 'I didn't feel that tired, but maybe

I did get a little tired in the end. And my concentration wasn't as good as it could have been, maybe because I haven't played in a while.

"But I felt it was a rest that I needed in order to get ready for next year and in order to continue to play in the next few years." Fleming says it's a 50-50 doubles.

Vols to waste no time in 'Sun'

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Wasting no time after their arrival, the Tennessee Volunteers were to take to the field today to began practicing for Saturday's Sun Bowl date with No. 12 Maryland.

And while Coach Johnny Majors says he will give his players time to enjoy the Southwest, business this week generally will be as usual for the 7-3-1 Volunteers.

"We'll have some flexibility for the team, giving them a chance to see the sites. But we're planning on regular practices," Majors said at an airport news conference Sunday shortly after the Volunteers' arrival.

'We're starting tomorrow and having daily practices," Majors said. "We'll go light on Fri-

Maryland was to arrive in El Paso tonight.

Saturday's game will mark Majors' third Sun Bowl appearance, although each time he has coached a different team. In 1971, the former Tennessee player coached Iowa State, and in 1975, he brought Pittsburgh to the game.

This year, he said, "our entire entourage ... is excited to be here. Majors said the Volunteers had six "excellent days of practice in Nashville and we're excited to face our formidable opponent.'

The game will be a rematch of last year's Citrus Bowl, which Tennessee won 30-23. That victory probably gives the 8-3 Terrapins a "psychological edge" over Tennessee, Majors said. "They'll want to avenge the loss. Psychologically, they've got the upper hand."

Senior linebacker Carl Zander said Saturday's game will be a "challenge for us defensively because Maryland is very balanced. We'll probably have to play our best game."

At 6-foot-2 and 235 pounds, Zander led the Southeastern Conference in tackles this year. Majors reiterated that he believed the Tennessee-Maryland bowl pairing was "as exciting a match as possible in the country" this year. 'It's possibly the most exciting in the country, going into the game," he said. "On paper, it looks good. But ... the game is won on the

The Volunteers were greeted with mariachi musicians and Miss El Paso contestants upon their arrival in the Sun City.

Zander said he is hoping to spend some of his time this week shopping for Christmas presents in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from El Paso.

Refinance' key halts Eagles' move

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle's agreement to refinance the Philadelphia Eagles "on an ongoing basis" was the missing piece needed to keep the team in Philadelphia, according to Susan Fletcher, vice president of the Eagles and daughter of team owner Leonard Tose. The NFL, which filed a lawsuit Friday to stop Tose from moving the Eagles to Phoenix, refused to comment on the team's financial situation Sunday. But Fletcher was quoted by the Philadelphia Inquirer as saying Rozelle, in the last of several conversations with Tose on Saturday, promised to develop a package to "refinance the club on an ongoing basis so that there would be no need for constant refinancing."

After a week of intense negotiations with Philadelphia officials, Tose announced Saturday night that the team would remain in Philadel-

After the impending sale was reported Tuesday, Philadelphia offi-cials began five days of frantic nego-

During the late news conference Saturday night, the city's end of the deal was clear. Mayor W. Wilson Goode promised to make improvements in Veterans Stadium and to give Tose a larger cut of the concession profits, agreements that Goode said would increase the team's profits by $4 million a year.

Goode also agreed to defer the stadium rent for up to 10 years and to provide a practice field for the

It would have been a quiet move," similar to the one in which owner Robert Irsay took the Colts from Maryland to Indiana under the cover of darkness earlier this year, Monaghan said.

Tose said he owed no explanation to the city of Phoenix. He insisted that he had not led them to expect the Eagles.

"They didn't hear it from me." Tose said. "I'm not saying we haven't talked to them; I'm saying it wasn't

Many of the Eagles expressed relief over Tose's announcement Sunday, after they closed out their season with a 26-10 loss to the Atlanta Falcons.

"I think it's great for the city of Philadelphia," Coach Marion Camp-bell said. "They deserve a football team and they deserve the Eagles."

Gold prices at lowest level in two years

LONDON (AP) - Gold prices sank early today to their lowest since July 1982. The dollar also lost ground.

Bullion dealers said gold dipped to $315 a troy ounce at one point in London's morning's trading, which was described as busy. A number of stop-loss sale orders were reported.

The dealers cited a combination of factors in explaining gold's weakness. In just over a month, the metal has lost nearly 10 percent of its value.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $316.60 an ounce, more than $5 lower than Friday's late rate of $322.25. After dipping at mid-morning to $315, the metal's lowest since July 8, 1982, gold was fixed by the city's five major bullion dealers at a recommended price of $316.85 an ounce.

In Zurich, Europe's largest gold market, the bid price was $316.20, down from $322.25 late Friday. Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $3.89 to close at a bid $318.79.

Silver was quoted in London at a bid price of $6.54 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $6.715.

The dollar, meanwhile, was edging down. Investors in Frankfurt reported nervousness about further central bank sales. Dealers reckon the West German Bundesbank still must sell more than $100 million to square its books for the year.

Bank deregulation complicates prime rate picture

By SKIP WOLLENBERG AP Business Writer

Banks seldom explain why they do it when they do it, and they are reluctant to say how they do it. But raising and lowering the prime rate is one of the most widely publicized things they do. Setting a prime lending rate isn't as simple as it used to be, bankers and banking analysts say.

The main reason is that banks have been forced over the past decade to compete more vigorously than ever before for depositors and borrowers.

Deregulation of the interest rates that banks can pay on consumer deposits has made it more expensive for banks to attract funds.

And when lending those funds, banks are finding they are no longer the primary source of money for some big borrowers.

"It's a very different environment," said Gerald Fischer, a professor of business administration at Temple University in Philadelphia. There are a lot of other players in the markets."

James Wooden, who follows the banking business for the investment firm of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, added, "A lot has happened to commercial lending in the past few years, and it has been mostly negative for big banks." But not all bank watchers are sym-

Robert K. Heady, publisher of the Bank Rate Monitor, a Miami-based newsletter that regularly surveys the interest rates banks are offering consumers, said rates that banks are paying for funds are falling faster than those they are charging for loans.

"The banks are not passing on the lower costs of renting their customers' money," he said.

The banks themselves seldom provide any explanation for changes in their prime rates, and are reticent about discussing publicly how they do it. "It is the rate we feel is appropriate," one banker offered in explaining a recent rate adjustment. Even at that, he spoke only on condition he not be identified.

The American Bankers Association describes the prime rate as a benchmark "used to compute an appropriate rate of interest for a particular loan contract." The rate that a customer must pay for a loan from a bank may be above or below the prime rate.

Among the things banks consider in setting the prime, the association said, are its cost of funds, its administrative costs and competition from

In setting a rate for a particular oan, the banks must consider the creditworthiness of the borrower. the nature of collateral the borrower may be prepared to put up for the loan, the length and size of the loan itself and the bank's overall relation with the borrower.

Decisions on the prime rate are one of the most widely publicized things a bank does, and at most banks, the decisions are made at the highest levels.

The prime rate has inched down over the past 2½ months from the year's peak of 13 percent, which was in effect from late June through late September. It has fallen in amounts of one-quarter or one-half percentage point to the present 11.25 percent at most of the major money center banks.

The latest adjustments occurred in late November, a few days after the Federal Reserve Board reduced its discount rate to 8.5 percent from 9 percent.

But analysts and bankers say there is little correlation between banks' prime rates and the discount rate, the interest the Fed charges on loans to member banks and other financial institutions. The Fed changed the discount rate not at all in 1983 and only twice this year, while banks shifted the prime rate

Banks generally borrow sparingly from the central bank, treating it as a last resort when looking for funds. The Fed encourages that view.

On a day-to-day basis, banks get their funds elsewhere, and the rates they must pay to do so have the biggest impact on where prime rates

Banks' costs of funds vary from bank to bank and frequently depend on whether a particular bank gets its money chiefly from consumer deposits or from selling securities in the marketplace. Wooden of Merrill Lynch estimated that some big New York banks get as much as 80 percent of their funds by selling securities on the open market and only 20 percent from consumer deposits. Smallregional banks may get up to 80 percent from deposits and 20 percent in the open market, he said. Over the past seven years, federal regulators have removed limits on the interest rates that banks may offer on consumer accounts.

One such account is the money market account. The Bank Rate Monitor said its survey of 50 leading commercial banks, savings and loan assocations and savings banks showed the effective annual yield available on such accounts had fallen to 9.01 percent in early December from 9.80 percent in midSeptember. Only a few years ago, however, banks were limited by regulation to pay no more than 5.5 percent for consumer accounts.

Banks also get funds by selling securities such as certificates of deposit in denominations of $100,000 and more domestically and overseas. Rates on three-month certificates of deposit traded at 8.95 percent in early December, compared with 11.29 percent on average in Septem-

Banks also get funds by borrowing from other banks, paying an interest charge known as the federal funds rate. The fed funds rate has been trading slightly below 9 percent recently, down from 11.30 percent in September.

But bankers say declining interest rates alone do not necessarily mean that banks' costs of funds have declined significantly.

"It's awfully hard to tell what banks' cost of funds is doing," said Temple's Fischer, who wrote the 1982 book "The Prime: Myth and Reality. He noted that while the rates banks pay for money may fall, their costs decline only when they add to their borrowings.

Banks must also be sensitive to loan demand, and they have more competition as lenders.

Large corporations have increasingly lent money to each other in what is known as the commercial paper market. Fischer said the commercial paper market has grown to half the size of all outstanding commercial bank loans to business.

Rates on three-month commercial paper were 8.61 percent at the end of November, lower than rates banks must pay to obtain lendable funds. The lower rate has siphoned some business from banks, the analysts say, leaving banks to rely on riskier borrowers too small to participate in the commercial paper mar-

In addition, banks must set interest charges high enough to enable them to meet reserve requirements that commercial paper lenders do not have. "Banks are under enormous pressures to build capital," Fischer said. "If they started dropping their lending rates too much, they would run into trouble."

New technology tested in North Sea

LONDON (AP) - The turbulent North Sea has become the testing ground for a new generation of oil and gas technology designed to open up deep-water fields and bring in reservoirs that have been written off as uneconomical.

The British government, eager to prolong the life of its North Sea fields, is encouraging oil companies to move into largely unexplored "frontier zones" in waters as deep as two miles - 10,560 feet.

Seismic tests, using advanced computerized techniques, show geological structures there similar to those in the rich North Sea fields.

Jan Memelink, technical director of Shell UK Exploration, said in an interview with The Associated Press that the new technology is "a revolution in underwater techniques and an important landmark not only in North Sea history but in world produc-

"The only comparable challenge is space explora-tion," he said. "The deep sea, just as much as deep space, is an environment where man is alien and where technology will be stretched to the maximum. More and more oil must come from the deep sea.'

Oilmen have stuck to shallow waters around Britain. While they have the hardware to drill in deep water, until now they haven't been able to build production platforms in waters deeper than 600 feet. The hardware they're developing now will be used to produce new zones around the Shetland Islands off northern Scotland, the eastern Atlantic - and beyond.

Many countries, including the Soviet Union, China and India, are launching offshore exploration, and the technological advances made in the North Sea will have a far-reaching impact on the world's energy

Analysts believe that oil the equivalent of 7 billion barrels, about half the total found in the North Sea, lie in Britain's frontier zones.

Worldwide, seabed zones in 1,000 feet of water comprise an area twice the size of Africa and they are still largely unexplored. Exploration of new areas is vital ... to take over from the declining output in the future from existing oil fields," said Britain's energy secretary, Alick Buchanan-Smith.

The French, Norwegians and Americans are also pushing to move into deeper waters for the next major phase in offshore production.

Conoco, the U.S. oil company, has built a 51,000-ton semisubmersible known as a Tension Leg Platform, or TLP, designed for deep-water operations. The TLP has been deployed in the relatively shallow waters of the Hutton field for testing.

The TLP tethers itself to the seabed with tubular steel mooring cables, unlike fixed conventional platforms that stand on concrete and steel legs.

The $1-billion TLP can be moved from one field to another and will be able to operate at depths of up to 1.400 feet in the worst storms and eliminate the need for more costly fixed platforms.

Shell operates a floating production system using a tanker permanently moored to a single 29-story-high anchor leg in its Fulmar field. Shuttle tankers load from the moored vessel, saving the money spent on underwater pipelines. British Petroleum has developed the Single Well Oil Production System, or SWOPS, and touts it as several times cheaper than conventional offshore systems.

Oil is collected in a 43,000 ton tanker that plugs into a seabed tap through jointed "risers," or flexible pipes. The vessel is held in position by computer-controlled thrusters and even has an on-board mini-refinery producing gas to run the ship's turbines.

The companies say both systems will be able to operate in deep waters, even in storms with waves of Oilmen believe they could be drilling in waters as deep as 5,000 feet by the end of the decade and double that by the year 2000.

The TLP is just one of a plethora of technological advances signalling a new phase of offshore production using cost-cutting techniques to squeeze even the smallest deposits from under the sea.

The most immediate focus is on small "marginal" North Sea fields — those with reserves of 40 million to 50 million barrels - once passed over as uncommer-

There are 200 such pockets in the British sector of the North Sea and 800 worldwide. Oil strikes get smaller all the time, with half estimated at 50 million barrels or less Oilmen say conventional methods extract only a world-wide average of 30 percent. In the North Sea, it's more than 40 percent. Industry experts claim that Enhanced Oil Recovery, or EOR, could boost production from known fields by as much as 15 percent and stretch out Britain's oil reserves into the 21st century.

Oil company signs pact with Crow Tribe

CROW AGENCY, Mont. (AP) -The Crow Tribe's proposed oil and gas agreement, covering thousands of acres of the southeastern Montana reservation, has been approved by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

For the first time a tribe successfully negotiated an agreement that received BIA approval under the Indian Mineral Development Act of 1982, said Raul Tapia of Washington, D.C., a lawyer for Raven Oil.

Raven Oil is a joint venture between the Crow Tribe and Buffalo Exploration.

More than 200,000 acres of the Crow reservation can be designated for oil exploration. Under the agreement, the Crow Tribe will receive a 16 percent royalty fee, plus 51 per-cent of all profits from the venture. Buffalo Exploration will receive 49 percent of the profits. The management committee consists of four Crow Tribe representatives and three from Buffalo,

Only 250 wells have been drilled on the reservation's 3,000 square miles since the mid-1920s.

Texas firm sued for luring investors

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) - A layer of limestone that nine years ago produced huge amounts of oil in a previously non-commercial Giddings, Texas, has turned out less promising than thought by a group of Mississippi investors.

Its lack of productivity has spawned a massive lawsuit by the group which includes members of the McMullan banking family, U.S. District Judges Walter Nixon and Tom Lee, Lowndes County Chancellor Woodrow Brand and state Insurance Commissioner George Dale.

They invested a total of $1.5 million in 16 exploratory wells. They have sued officials of GeoSouthern Energy Corp., an exploration company that worked in the Austin chalk. Forest bank executive Thomas W. Colbert and former Hattiesburg banker Paul W. McMullan, along with other bankers and investors, claim in a lawsuit that the Texas company wrongfully lured them into investing in the oil and gas venture.

The Colbert-McMullan group is seeking return of its investment in the case now pending in U.S. District Court before Judge Charles Clark, chief of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The case has been recessed the case until early next year. GeoSouthern and its principals are countersuing Colbert and McMullan, claiming the two bankers improperly promoted the drilling venture.

Colbert, chairman of Farmers and Merchants Bank in Forest and Peoples Bank of Indianola, became interested in the chalk in 1981. He invested more than $486,000 in a venture. McMullan was board chairman of both Farmers and Merchants Bank and First Mississippi National Bank. He resigned as chairman of both boards earlier this year. He invested more than $282,440 in six drilling

NEW YORK — Treasury proposals for sweeping tax changes have had two immediate results, only one of which was sought by the Reagan administration.

The desired effect is that the proposals have Some electronics and opened up discussion of tax reform, a subject telephone issues were that for years was avoided as too hot to handle higher, while mining even by those who felt the system was distorted, and precious metals exploited and riddled by inequities.

Now, every big accounting firm, university economics department and 1,001 special interest groups are declaiming on the subject — making speeches, sending instant analyses to clients, preparing criticisms, offering improvements. The other impact is a decidedly unwelcome one: It has created further uncertainty at the very time the economy is going through a troubling period. Experience has shown that uncertainty inevitably postpones decisions. The most significant of such decisions involve other areas where taxes might be changed and consequences cannot yet be measured. Investments in some of these areas were expected to help the economy regain strength in 1985 after its late-year fainting spell, but now the likelihood exists that delays will take place, at least until matters become more clear. Even some of the discussions that were sought by the administration are rife with questions rather than answers, as indicated by a recent let ter to members of the National Small Business Association, which calls itself "The voice of small

"Is the plan equitable for incorporated business?" the NSBA asked members.

It noted that all corporations would be asked to pay a flat rate of 33 percent on taxable income, thus negating a 20-year fight by the organization to obtain a graduated tax-rate structure, which it achieved just a decade ago.

"Should we now abandon this position in favor of the 33 percent rate?" it asks. It seems unlikely that small businesses will support such a move, in view of a quick analysis of the proposal made by the NSBA. That analyses found that small companies those with taxable income of less than $100,000 would have their taxes increased by 120 percent in the lowest bracket to 28 percent in the $100,000

But the largest businesses, it states, would realize a 28 percent decrease in their tax rate.

Such evidence would seem to dictate a negative response from small-business people, but so many other factors conceivably could have an impact on taxes the association refrained from issuing a verdict. Instead, it asked for opinions. While some uncertainty is bound to give way within weeks as the proposals are assessed, some uncertainty is bound to survive throughout what is expected to be a prolonged congressional debate But there is one near-certainty already. Developers of tax-shelter schemes, especially those involved with real estate, already know that whatever tax bill is passed will give top priority to taking the shelter out of tax shelters.

IRAs can be rolled over, put Over the weekend, a group of private economists said it expects the in new account for safety

By BILL DOYLE

Q. After receiving a lump sum distribution from a retirement plan, I put it in a rollover individual retirement account at a savings and loan association. The money is in a savings certificate, compounding at a good rate of interest and soon will exceed $100,000.

When the certificate matures, I think I would be smart to transfer half of the money to another S&L, in order to have the whole amount insured. Does the Internal Revenue Service allow this?

A. Sure. You can move all or part of your IRA to a different S&L. bank or other IRA sooner. By keeping no more than $100,000 in an individual S&L or bank with federal deposit insurance, you'll have absolutely no worries about your nest egg.

There have been proposals to increase federal deposit insurance on IRAs above the $100,000 limit that now applies. To date, however, Congress hasn't voted approval.

You will be smart to move some of your money only after your IRA certificate at the S&L matures. If you do it before that certificate's maturity, you could be hit with an early withdrawal penalty.

Q. On Dec. 31, 1983, I opened a Keogh selfemployed retirement plan with a large brokerage firm. I put only $100 in the account at that time and made the balance of my 1983 Keogh contribution in April, 1984. So far, so I was charged an $80 "custodial fee" for 1983 even though the brokerage firm had only $100 of my money for only one day. Needless to say, I was upset and have complained - to no avail. Is there anything I can do about this? A. You can complain some more, but you're not going to get your $80 back. By this time, you probably have been charged another fee for 1984. Sponsors of Keogh plans and IRSs are allowed to charge start-up fees and annual fees. Some do: some don't.

If you read the Keogh plan agreement you have with that brokerage firm, you'll find those fees mentioned someplace - most likely in the small print. Many of those agreements give Keogh plan and IRA sponsors authority to raise or lower the fees from one year to the next. As a result, some do hike the fees.

Q. The brokerage firm with which I had my IRA refuses to transfer my money to a no-load mutual fund run by a different investment organization, until I pay a "termination fee." Can they get away with this?

A. Yes, if there's a provision in your IRA agreement allowing the imposition of such a fee.

Q. I am self-employed and have a Keogh retirement plan with an aggressive mutual fund - one that invests in growth stocks and aims for maximum appreciation in value. Although it had some down years, the fund has accomplished that aim over the period I have In three years, I will reach age 7012, at which time I will be required to start making withdrawals from my Keogh plan. Between now and then, I would like to transfer my investment to a fixed-rate, insured retirement plan. would like to make that transfer when mutual fund share prices are relatively high.

When would you anticipate that to be. within the next three years? In other words, when would you expect high stock prices, prior

A. That very loud crashing noise in the background is my crystal ball shattering - as it does every time a question similar to yours is posed.

I can't tell you when stock prices are going to be high or when they are going to be low. Neither can anyone else, even though some lay claim to that omnipotence.

I do know that this nation is in better economic shape than it has been for a long time. Unless the unexpected happens, business should prosper. corporations should have higher profits and the prices of stocks should move upward. However, there's no assurance this scenario will unfold. And, even in the best of times, the prices of stocks and of mutual funds holding stocks occasionally drop.

If you are going to depend on your Keogh plan to make ends meet, you should consider getting your money into a safer place, pretty quick. As retirement time approaches, investments should be moved from volatile situations into fixedincome investments.

asthma or an allergy have told me that their condition appears to be aggravated by Christmas trees. You may want to consider getting an artificial tree this year. Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine had a spontaneous abortion, and she says that her doctor told her that it was all to the good - that it was nature's way of ending something that would not have turned out well anyway. Do you know what he meant by that? - Jayne, Tulsa, Okla. Dear Jayne: There is evidence that a spontaneous abortion may occur when the fetus is markedly abnormal. In this sense, one might say that it is nature's way of preventing the birth of seriously impaired infants. Dear Dr. Solomon: You and others have writ-

But it is a well known fact that women live longer than men, and what I would like to know is what, if anything, this has to do with the kind of cholesterol a person has. - Milton, Dearborn, Mich.

Dear Milton: The ratio of low-density lipoprotein (LDL) cholesterol (the "bad" cholesterol) to high-density lopoprotein (HDL) cholesterol (the 'good" cholesterol) is always higher in men than in women. This might account for the difference in longevity between the sexes.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has diabetes and he has been accustomed to checking his urine every day. Now he says that his doctor has told him that it would be better if he checked the sugar in his blood. What I would like to know is why the same thing could not be accomplished by checking the urine. - Cal, Santa Fe, New Dear Cal: Urine testing as a means of deter-

Ginning along

"guessing game just how much cotton will be coming off the stalks and converted into bales by a screaming mass of sucking, blowing, cleaning and high-pressure machinery called a cotton gin.

"It's down, way down," said Hoot Leonard, general manager of the Midland Farmers Co-operative Gin.

Cotton production is on the downswing because of the spring and summer drought and, ironically, due to the recent rainy and misty weather which farmers ache and pray for - except at harvest time.

They're harvesting now.

"We cuss it when it's too dry, and cuss it when it's too wet," said Herb Sorley, county executive director of the Midland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

It's not that farmers are never satisfied; they are reasonably content on those occasions when the spring planting fains come, when the harvest is full, the cotton grades out high and the prices are profitable.

Those coincidences are rare, and they certainly haven't meshed this year.

Midland farmers planted 36,000 acres in cotton this vear but about 30 percent -11,000 acres - won't be harvested; it's either too meager and scraggly or too wet and rotting.

Though the drought their perseverance and ties to appeared on the verge of being broken at mid-summer, the rainfall was spotted in some areas. Much of the Greenwood area went without rain or had very little.

"Dryland (cotton) in the Greenwood community is terrible." said farmer Alvey Bryant.

"A lot of them (farmers) east of town didn't get rain to plant on," lamented Ben Golladay, a retired farmer.

Scraggly cotton not worth stripping will be plowed under. Other cotton matured just fine and has been harvested; still more cotton is waiting for the mechanized cotton-strippers to come in once the fields and cotton again are dry.

"It's hurting the grade of cotton which in turn is going to affect the price of it," Sorley said of the weather.

If it's too wet and too cool, the bolls won't open, and they'll rot. The farmer's next step is to return the crop to the soil.

Most are hauling cotton to the gin, which has processed 3,650 bales in five weeks of

"I'm hoping we'll be through in January, the way the weather is slowing us down," Leonard said. He is projecting a 7,500-bale yield from the 1984 season. "Surprisingly enough, most of our cotton is grading pretty good.

Farmers keep going due to the land. But their options and whether or not they'll go broke are linked to the weather ... the economy, their bankers, and governmental involvement in their affairs.

And humor often is their salvation.

Tim Traweek, for example, focused on the rain and all but discounted the U.S. National Weather Service's rainfall report. But he jokingly uses the government's report to determine rainfall on his crops: "Split it by half and divide by two.'

Bryant, who's semi-retired from farming, suggested farmers might try out computers to enhance the business-end of their life's work.

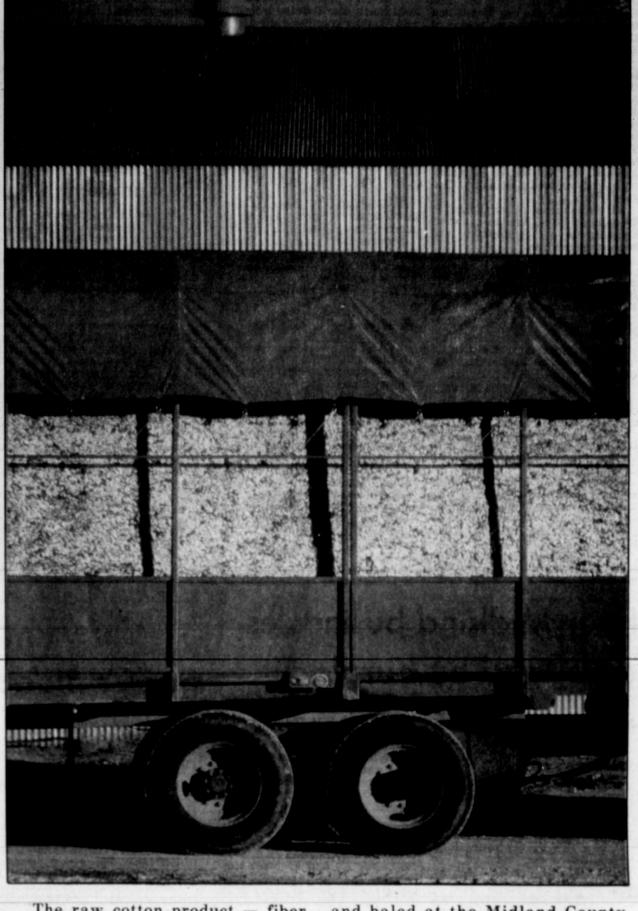

"We're in a computer age," said Bryant, "and an old country boy like me ain't smart enough to use computers. We'll need to let the young ones take over."

Countered another farmer: "I'll tell you what. You need the rain more than you need a computer. I compute my business with a little ol' pencil."

Farmers want the ideal. If not now, they'll settle for next

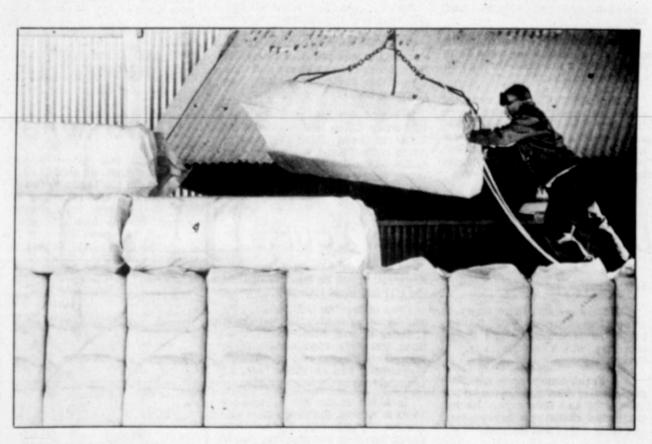

"We'd like to have 4 inches (of rain) in March and 6 in April, and we'd get ready to plant by the 10th of May,' said Sorley. Without the underground seasoning we're getting this year, you don't make next year's crop.

"I think West Texas is the best next-year country."

Four Midland businesses damaged by burglars

From Staff Reports

More than $16,000 worth of damage reportedly was done between Saturday night and Sunday morning at four businesses and a hallway connecting the offices at 2209 N. Big Spring St.

According to police reports, the burglars entered the B&E Bonding Co. and the Dictaphone Corp. offices, where they obtained a .44caliber magnum revolver which was used to shoot at the walls.

About $2,000 worth of damage was reported to the bonding company's woman's wallet and a man's $300 office, $3,700 to the Dictaphone gold watch. Total loss was placed at office, $1,000 to the Diet Center, $355. $7,000 to the American Diabetes Association, Inc. and $2,500 to a hall-

Reports indicate items stolen from some of the businesses were recovered. Entry was gained through an unlocked back door.

Diane Paiz, 2107 Benton, reported $1,000 worth of items were stolen from her house between 9 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Sunday. Entry was gained through a kitchen window, reports said. Furniture, appliances and women's clothing were taken.

Odessa officers find dope hidden in gas tank

From Staff Reports

ODESSA - A marijuana shipment with an estimated value of $170,000 was confiscated Saturday afternoon by narcotics officers in west Ector County.

Reports indicate 150 pounds of high-grade marijuana was found in a 1982 Chevrolet pickup truck in a hidden compartment of the gas tank. The arrest resulted from information from the U.S. Customs Service in Presidio that the marijuana was being transported across the border from Mexico.

Three men were arrested about 1:20 p.m. Saturday one-half mile west of I-20 and F.M. 1936 and have been charged with aggravated possession of marijuana, a first-degree felony. Jessie Sanchez Ramos Jr., 32, Odessa, and Armando Calderon Ramos, 25, Kermit, were denied bond by Justice of the Peace Jimmie Harris. Also in jail was Antonio Franco Loera, 38, with bond set at $40,000.

According to reports from the Ector County Sheriff's Department, their office, the Odessa police and the customs service combined to make the arrest. Using a search warrant, the officers searched the truck and found the marijuana in the bottom portion of the truck's gas tank

SAN DIEGO — Let others seek endless summers and perfect waves. Brian Berlau and John Gaughen are engaged in a loftier quest, the pursuit of endless studies and perfect semesters.

Titans of the midterm, kings of the course catalog, senior statesmen of the student body, Berlau and Gaughen have amassed between them 30 years of seminars and blue books at San Diego State University.

And, to paraphrase John Paul Jones, they have just begun to "I consider learning a lifelong experience," said Berlau, who declined to give his age but admitted to being "a child of the '50s." 'There's so much to learn out there and so little time," said Gaughen, 35. "What frustrates me is how little I can do."

Berlau, an SDSU fixture since 1970, currently is working on a bachelor's degree in public administration/urban studies.

He coyly ducks several questions on his schooling - "I don't want the university to draw up any new regulations to limit your time here," he said — but claims to have at least six bachelor's and one master's degree. BERLAU refused to say where

Two years later, Gaughen had a master's from SDSU and was enrolled in the University of California at Berkeley's political science Ph.D program.

'Wimp' becomes endangered species

Copley News Service

"Wimp: a noun. (slang) a weak, ineffectual, or insipid person. - wimp'y, adj." - definition from Webster's New World Dictionary."

Former Vice President Walter Mondale might have lost the presidential election because, in the opinion of some of his critics, he was a wimp.

But now, wimp itself may become the loser. A Midwest college noted for annually banning ill-defined words from the English language is proposing to send the word to its list of overused labels.

Wimp has become to many Americans a-bona fide insult, a word so humiliafing it generates anger in those accused of being softies, pushovers, losers. Wimp has become a humorous way of insulting someone without having to use a stronger word that cannot be used in polite society," says Dr. Javad Emami, twice the president of the Academy of San Diego Psychologists.

It is a very hostile word used diplomatically to cuss someone out."

Name-calling is psychologically rooted in hostility, and though perceived as childish behavior, actually is sophisticated sarcasm often employed by witty critics and politicians, Emami said. Yet, whence cometh wimp?

Wimp may have come from of being labeled wimps. whimp and whimper (to cry and whine), both which can be traced back to the Middle Ages or Old English," said Leonard Frey, a San Diego State University linguistics

Wimp is the current generation'sequivalent of the previous generation's use of 'nerd.' Two generations ago, the word nerkel was similar to nerd, but it never caught on. Instead, it's offshoot, jerk, became popular. All these words are chance words. You never know which will catch on. Usually, they start because some celebrity was overheard using the word.

Some people believe wimp may have come from Wimpy, the name of the rotund, hamburger-eating cartoon character who is a friend of Popeye the sailor. Wimpy had a reputation for not paying his debts. "I'd gladly pay you on Tuesday for a hamburger today" is his famous

Wimpy may be seen as weak or passive in his obsession with burgers and never having any money to pay

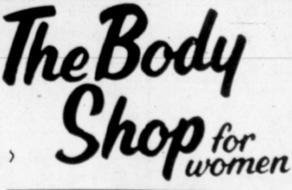

My students define wimp as a passive, complaining type who is too cowardly to do anything about what he's complaining about," Frey said. 'Also, they say wimp is used only to describe a man, never a woman. Truly, men have borne the brunt boobs.

Throughout this year's presidential campaign, some political columnists and critics of Mondale called the Democratic Party's nominee "a wimp" because of his position on such issues as national defense and public welfare. Political conserva-tive Patrick J. Buchanan, writing about the Democratic convention in "... This convention is not July, said: united behind its leader. Being labeled a wimp can result because of one's name. Two years igo, an edition of the British journal The Economist featured the teaser-'Glemp the Wimp" in its table of ontents. A column about Poland's Cardinal (then archbishop) Jozef Glemp discussed Glemp's and the Catholic Church's failure to resist pressures from Poland's military leaders, but the article did not ctually call the clergyman a wimp.

The same year as The Economist's wimpish lashing, an American known only as B. Sloane wrote Wimps," an illustrated official guidebook for wimps. Ivory Tower Publishing Co. DEAR ABBY

Family ties pull in two directions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a woman who was married before. She has two children, 8 and 11. My new wife and her children have always spent Christmas with her former in-laws. It's become a family tradition - one the kids enjoy and look forward to. So naturally they plan to spend Christmas with Grandma and Grandpa.

Now the problem: I would like to spend Christmas at home with my new family and create our own holiday tradition. I was not invited to Grandma and Grandpa's, but even if I had been, I wouldn't feel comfortable there. They live in another city and expect their guests to stay with

I don't want to spend Christmas alone. My own family lives on the East Coast, and I don't want to fish for invitations from my friends. My wife hates to break the tradition of Christmas with the grandparents because the kids enjoy it so much. Any recommendations? - HOLI-DAY BLUES IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR BLUES: I think it's imperative that you and your new wife be together on Christmas. If the kids would be heartbroken unless they went to Grandma and Grandpa's, why not send them there the day after Christmas for a short visit? If could spend some other holiday with their grandparents.

Ideally, the nuclear family should be together at Christmastime, providing it doesn't start a nuclear war.

DEAR ABBY: "Loves to Ski" froze his toes and now considers amputation as a way to keep his feet warm. I'm glad you said, "Don't do

I walked out of North Korea in 1950 on two frozen feet. I lost some toes, among them a large one at the first joint. Doctors smiled at my distress, saying, "Ladies love this operation - they can wear smaller

Well, the loss of one big toe throws me off balance, causing calluses on both feet. It's difficult finding shoes to fit because one foot is smaller than the other, and it's not true that amputating the offending digit will eliminate the pain.

My feet still freeze when it's cold, so I usually stay indoors. But if I'm determined to go out, I've learned to grin and bear it. - CAPTAIN, U.S. NAVY (RET)

DEAR CAPTAIN: Many readers wrote to say that toes once frozen will never again be free from pain when exposed to freezing weather. All emphasized that amputation

warm toes was battery-operated heated socks, sold where hunters buy their hunting togs. For the rich, there's Abercrombie & Fitch; bargain hunters can hunt up an Army-Navy store.

DEAR ABBY: I once read a poem that went like this: When I met him, I liked him. 'When I liked him, I loved him. When I loved him, I let him.

"When I let him, I lost him." Abby, when I DIDN'T let him, I lost him.

I know I can't live my life like a poem, but lots of my girlfriends have "let" guys so they wouldn't lose them, but they ended up losing them anyway.

So, how am I supposed to know if I'm gonna lose him or not if I let him? - 14 in RALEIGH, N.C.

Some 'high-tech talk' terminology defined

Hearst News Service

Here's a sample of today's popular 'high-tech talk:

Access: a verb, as in "Leonard, how do I access your heart?'

Debug: to work problems out, as in "Leonard, it's time we debugged our relationship.' Dialogue: a verb meaning to talk, as in "Let's dialogue." ECO: an engineering change order, much dreaded by hightech engineers. Can be used as a verb, as in "Leonard, stop kidding around. I really think it's time we ECOed our relationship." Glitch: originally, a computer error. These days, everybody from President Reagan to Joe Montana suffers glitches.

Input: a noun. People used to throw in their own two cents' worth. Now they "give input."

-Interface: originally meant circuitry allowing two otherwise incompatible computer parts to work together. Now a verb, meaning to talk to or deal with someone. Instead of saying "I deal with the personnel department," it's better to say "I interface with the human resources

Manual graphic generator: this is what some high-tech people actually call a pencil.

- Utilize: means exactly the same as "use," but has four more letters and two more syllables. Sounds more technical.

Jargon used for 'interfacing'

Hearst News Service

SAN JOSE, Calif. - People used to go out of their way to avoid sounding like the guys with 27-function digital watches, plastic shirt-pocket protectors and too-short trousers.

Not anymore. It seems like everybody these days is talking about "networking," "accessing databases" and "interfacing." Especially interfacing. These words may have begun with the clip-on ID-badge set in Silicon Valley, but they have spread to Main Street, USA, in what seems like only nanoseconds

Call it high-tech talk, Silicon-Valley-ese or technobabble, chances are that some computer buzzwords already are creeping into your vocabulary.

"In the 1970s everything had to be 'relevant,'" said Louis Rew, an English instructor at San Jose State University. "Today everything has to be 'state-of-the-art.'

Rew, who hears students describing class breaks as "downtime" and easy-to-understand textbooks as being "user friendly," is right in the thick of things, teaching technical writing to future high-tech engi-

"It used to be that you'd only hear those expressions right here in Silicon Valley," she said. "But now everybody seems to be using them."

Rew believes the flow of high-tech terms into the general public's vocabulary was inevitable as the sickly green glow of computer screens began spreading. It may take hold more stronger than linguistic fads like Valley Girltalk because it is based in technology that is becoming part of our lives, she said. Larry Engelman, a San Jose State history and journalism instructor, believes the practice of using technical words to describe simple things grew out of the Vietnam War, during which generals used terms like "B-52 interdiction" instead of bombing runs.

Technical talk allowed the military brass to disguise their actions from the public. The words carried a certain mystique without conveying the horrors of war, he said.

"You and I might not have understood what the generals were saying, but it seemed like they knew what they were talking about," Engelman

The practice was quickly picked up by leaders in government, business and education and then by lower-level people who wanted to sound like upper-level people.

'Computers suddenly have become chic, and everyone wants to talk like those people," Engleman said. "Using that language sets you off as part of the Brotherhood of High Tech.'

NEW YORK — With George C. Scott playing Ebenezer Scrooge as more misfit than meanie, tonight's remake of the old chestnut, "A Christmas Carol," can be placed under the holiday tree as an early gift from CBS.

Filmed in Shrewsbury, England, "A Christmas Carol" has a yellowish, old-photograph tint for a nostalgi-cally sentimental look. The softness of the coloring provides a stark contrast to the solemn, despairing quality of the 1951 Sim version.

Scott, the only American in the British cast, fills the TV screen with voice. The man who played a firebreathing Army general in "Dr. Strangelove" lends a strong comic sense to the role and manages to bring shading to one of literature's most crotchety cheapskates.

As soon as Scott cackles and then almost flippantly utters, "Humbug," viewers will sense that this Scrooge is being played as a cynical, grouchy trickle-down economist whose background helps explain his behavior, rather than as an angry, nasty

U2 injects 'commitment into pop scene'

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

U2 is an Irish rock band, its members still thinking of themselves as Irish even now that they make international tours. It's a traditional-instrument band, vocals, guitar, bass and drums, producing a modern sound without electronic keyboards and computerized drums. The third album on Island Records, "War," in 1982, was about the futility of war and dis-cussed strife in Northern Ireland and Poland and fear of nuclear bombs. The fifth, "The Unforgettable Fire," out this fall, has as its first single "Pride (in the Name of Love)," a celebration of Martin Luther King. The album's final track is a lament for him, "MLK.

An article in Trouser Press magazine said, "U2 admittedly hasn't revolutionized music through stylistic innovation. What they have done, though, is perhaps more daring: injected commitment into an escapist pop scene.

"Pride" was No. 38 and climbing on the U.S. best-selling chart of Dec. 15. The album was No. 5 on Dec. 1 and Dec. 8 best-selling charts.

32 chosen as Rhodes Scholars

CLAREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Thirty-two young Americans representing the best and the brightest none "merely bookworms" — were chosen during the weekend as Rhodes Scholars to study at Oxford

One had worked as a night watch-man, one as a commercial fisherman and a third at a center for battered women. Another was an amateur boxer. British explorer Cecil J. Rhodes had designed the 82-year-old scholarship that way.

'Although academic distinction and motivation are essential prerequisites, Rhodes did not mean to restrict the awards to intellectual achievement alone," the Rhodes Scholarship Trust said in a statement Sunday. "He specifically excluded from the competition those he called 'merely bookworms." vorms.'

The winners were chosen from 1,148 candidates nationwide and will be joined in England by Rhodes Scholars from 14 other nations, including India, Canada, Australia and Nigeria, the trust said.

Twenty-five men and seven women were chosen in the United States, including the third black female Rhodes Scholar. Women have been eligible for the competi-tion since 1976.

Harvard University boasts the most winners, with four, while two Rhodes Scholars were named at Yale University, and two at Michigan State University.

The scholarships are administered in the United States at Pomona Col-lege, 35 miles east of Los Angeles.

Jonathan Scott Shapiro was a Golden Gloves boxer as well as an actor in Harvard's Hasty Pudding productions. A research assistant in the California attorney general's office, Shapiro is now working on a master's degree at Harvard.

Singer, actor wed in California

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Grammy award-winning singer Olivia Newton-John and actor Matt Lattanzi were married at their seaside home in a civil ceremony that featured an English country theme, her publicist said Sunday.

Surrounded by family members at the private ceremony, Miss Newton-John, 36, and Lattanzi, 25, were married by Santa Monica Superior Court Judge Jerry Pacht on Saturday, said Paul Bloch. It is the first marriage for both.

Lattanzi and his British-born bride were introduced five years ago, when both appeared in the musical fantasy film "Xanadu." She has also starred in the movies "Grease" and "Two of Kind" with John Travolta.

Lattanzi's screen credits include "Rich and Famous" and "My Tutor."
The couple will reside in Malibu after their honeymoon, the location of which was not disclosed. Miss Newton-John has sold more than 100 million records and won five Grammy Awards, as well as honors from the Country Music Association, the Academy of Country Music, the American Music

Awards, and the People's Choice Awards. Her best-known singles include "Let Me Be There," "I Honestly Love You," and "You're the One that I Want."

LONDON (AP) — Stacy Keach, who plays a private eye in the television show "Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer," preached from his prison cell against trying cocaine, according to a letter that appeared in the Daily Express on Monday.

"If you want to, you can quit," read the letter from Keach. "Don't wait until it's too late, until you are forced to quit by virtue of getting busted, as I was," the letter in the tabloid said.

Keach, 43, was arrested at London's Heathrow Airport on April 4 when customs officers found 1.3 ounces of cocaine in a can of aerosol shaving cream and elsewhere in his luggage. He had come to Britain on a flight from France to do film work.

He pleaded guilty on Dec. 7 to importing the cocaine and was sentenced to nine months in prison. His secretary, Deborah Steele, who also pleaded guilty at their one-day trial, received a three-month sentence. Both have appealed the sentences and will have hearings in their case this week.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Garry Trudeau's Pulitzer prize-winning comic strip "Doonesbury" has been withdrawn from The Commercial Appeal in a dispute over the size of its display, the newspaper says. Universal Press Syndicate canceled the newspaper's subscription because it refused to run it at a width of 44 picas, about 7.3 inches, as required by Trudeau, The Commercial Appeal said Sunday. The newspaper has been running the strip at 37 picas, or about 6.1 inches.

HOUSTON (AP) — Joe "Dusty" Hill, a guitarist with the rock band ZZ Top, was in fair condition today after he was shot in the abdomen by azgun that fell from his boot and discharged accidentally, authorities say.

Hill, 35, was shot in the abdomen Sunday morning when his girlfriend was pulling off one of his boots and the .38-caliber derringer fell out, said police Sgt. Steve Clappart."It was strictly accidental," he said.

Hill was "stable, in fair condition" today in the intensive care unit of Memorial City Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Cindy Maddaux.

But its list included some surprises, such as John Henry, a 9-year-old race horse described as a "geriatric marvel" for winning $2.3 million in purses this year, and John Torrington, whose frozen body, discovered in the Canadian Arctic, may shed light on the fate of an 1845 expedition.

Other picks were Baby Fae, the infant who lived nearly three weeks with a baboon heart; singer Michael Jackson; Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko; Los Angeles Olympic Games coordinator Peter Ueberroth; and actor Clint Eastwood.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Flamboyant singer-actress Bette Midler and her husband are planning to leave for a Hawaiian honeymoon this week following a wedding her publicist said was low-key because "she didn't want a zoo.'

Miss Midler, 38, married Martin von Haselberg, a performance artist and commodities trader, Saturday in a private civil ceremony, Bob Gibson of The Group, her publicity representative, said Sunday.

In his stage persona of Harry Kipper, von Haselberg was one of the Kipper Kids, a duo whose stage act included throwing food on the audience and

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

New Senate majority whip ready to take on opposition

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON - For Alan Simpson, the incident on the Senate floor two years ago was a sign of troubles to come. It was a few days before Christmas and Jesse Helms had brought the Senate to a standstill.

Minutes to midnight, Simpson took the floor, looked at his Republican colleague from North Carolina and said, "Seldom have I seen a more obdurate and obnoxious performance. I guess it is called hardball. In my neck of the woods we call it stickball. Children play it.'

The issue was President Reagan's proposal to increase the federal gasoline tax by 5 cents a gallon. The votes were there to pass it, but Helms was using every available delaying tactic to block a final vote.

Simpson was just one of 100 senators, a Republican from Wyoming, a conservative respected by his colleagues, a freshman whose certain distinction was that at 6 foot 7, he was the tallest senator, an inch taller than Bill Bradley, the former professional basketball forward who was a Democratic senator from New Jer-

Times have changed. Simpson recently was elected majority whip, the No. 2 man in the Senate after majority leader Bob Dole of Kansas. Sitting at his desk on the seventh floor of the Hart Senate Office he is ready to tell the senator that Building, his office walls decorated with Western art and Indian artifacts, Simpson talked about the upcoming session of Congress.

It was clear that foremost in his mind was how to move forward with President Reagan's program and avoid distractions that could tie up the body for weeks at a time.

We are a legislature and that means you must legislate and that means you must pass bills," said the new GOP whip.

But that's not the way things always work in the chamber that likes to think of itself as "the world's greatest deliberative body." In fact, the Senate is a place where one member can obstruct deliberations for days or weeks.

The Senate most often grinds to a halt over the social issues - abortion, school prayer, busing.

In the forefront of obstruction often is Helms, the North Carolina conservative. But when Simpson was asked about Helms, he demurred. He didn't want to ask for trouble by singling out one of his colleagues.

Instead, he talked about "procedural gimmickry" and said he would sit down with "certain people who have an obsession with the certain piece of legislation and say, 'Are you going to do that one again? Do you want that legislation?' If the answer is yes, Simpson said

'we're going to help you get there. We're going to clear the underbrush

Fine so far, but then comes the

"And we will clear you a path through the underbrush and you will have a vote and when that vote is over, win, lose or draw, I don't want to see that issue come up again on an appropriations bill or a budget bill or anywhere along the line. That's the message he would give those who are willing to tie up the Senate to press a crusade against abortion or in favor of school

The odds are that the response will be negative.

In that case, said Simpson, "You just say, well, we've got a job to do here the people of the country put on us called legislating and I assume you brought some crap in here you want legislated. I assume somewhere around here is your stuff and if your stuff is in this stack and you want to see it legislated then you'd better get off your haunt.

The words of a man who hopes he can make the Senate run like a forum where reason rules.

"I realize that's naive," he said. 'Oh, hell, everything I've done in 20 years has been considered naive when I started it, but I notice I can usually get something done.

Federal workers spend their time counting trees

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - One group of federal employees assigned to take a census has an easier, but more dangerous task than its colleagues who count people.

Seven U.S. Forest Service teams spend their time in forests across the United States counting trees. And while trees don't move around as much as people, some of their neighbors - suspicious marijuana growers and rattlesnakes, for example - can make the timber surveys hazardous.,

The tree-counters also have faced poison ivy-laced brush, bees, dogs, hazardous roads and bad weather as they measure and tally trees on designated census plots.

Tree surveys are never taken in Northern California during mariuana harvesting season, said Dale Baer, part of the team that counts trees in Alaska, California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington.

When we go out in the field we try to let everybody know we are there for one thing and one thing only - tree surveys - and we are not interested in anything else,' added Don Gedney, who works with Baer and about 10 other people on the Portland-based team.

Aside from the dangers inherent in their job, the census-takers face skepticism from acquaintances.

"They say, 'Do you mean you count trees?' When I say yes, they can't believe it," said team member Janet Ohmann, returning to Portland after measuring Multnomah County trees.

The Forest Service teams don't count every tree, but select certain forest plots as samples and use these to extrapolate total figures.

Aerial photographs are used to pinpoint distinguishing landmarks on the selected plots.

After finding a plot, the foresters measure and count all the trees that were identified, numbered and measured 10 years earlier to determine how fast the trees have grown and how many have died or were har-

The information, along with data on vegetation, wildlife habitat and dead trees, is passed on to federal officials who make decisions affecting forest land, Gedney said.

The forestry surveys were authorized by the McSweeney-McNary Act of May 22, 1928, which was designed to assess timber land productivity and help balance the federal timber budget. Gedney said each team's office has a budget of about $1 million a year.

Battle of the Bulge anniversary commemorated in Belgium

Associated Press

BASTOGNE, Belgium - Several cities in the Belgian Ardennes observed the 40th anniversary of the Battle of the Bulge, the last attempt of Nazi-Germany to turn back the Allied forces on the Western front.

In Bastogne, several U.S. battle tanks and armored vehicles took the streets over the weekend in reconstruction scenes of the twomonth battle in the hilly southern part of Belgium in which reply, "Nuts."

Polish police break up protest

By MATTHEW C. VITA Associated Press Writer

GDANSK, Poland - In the most violent clash between Polish security forces and protesters this year, riot police used clubs and tear gas to disperse thousands of marchers commemorating workers slain during anti-government protests in

During the confrontation, which triggered running street battles Sun-day afternoon, Solidarity founder Lech Walesa laid a wreath at the feet of police officers when they blocked his way to a monument for the dead workers. Walesa was shoved by police but not injured.

Meanwhile, sccres of students who were protesting the removal of crucifixes from classrooms left the vocational school they had occupied for two weeks in a town south of Warsaw, the government-run PAP news agency reported.

PAP said the students ended their sit-in at the 700-pupil school in Wloszczowa on Sunday after talks with Auxiliary Bishop Mieczyslaw

Roman Catholic priests.

Reporters in Gdansk estimated that 500 riot police confronted at least 2,000 marchers trying to walk to the workers' monument. PAP said about 3,000 people engaged in "a street riot" after a Mass in memory of the slain workers ended at 12:30 p.m. "At 1:30 p.m. there was order in the streets of Gdansk," PAP added.

At least 15 people were reported arrested, including Solidarity leaders Andrzej Gwiazda of Gdansk and Grzegorz Palka of Lodz. Gwiazda's wife Joanna said in a telephone interview that her husband was still in custody hours after being detained.

Walesa, walking arm in arm with freed underground activist Bogdan Lis, pushed his way through two police lines with about 100 other demonstrators. Walesa was trying to place a floral wreath at the monument, outside the gates of the Lenin shipyard.

Walesa, whose Solidarity free trade union movement now is outlawed, stopped when faced with a and turned back. Most of the demonstrators were blocked from approaching the shipyard by columns of police wearing helmets and carrying shields and batons.

Police charged the crowd, beating several marchers on their back and legs, and fired tear gas.

The demonstrators taunted the police with shouts of "Gestapo!" and "Murderers!" and threw coins at the officers.Police called on the demonstrators to disperse, then chased them down streets leading from the

was held, and threw stones at riot police before being dispersed by water cannons.

Other Masses were said in Warsaw, Katowice and the Krakow suburb of Nowa Huta to honor the scores of workers slain in the December 1970 riots against foodprice increases. No violence was eported in those cities.

The fighting in Gdansk was the worst clash between police and demonstrators since last year. Thousands of Solidarity supporters fought with police in three cities on Sept. 1, 1983, the third anniversary of the union's

The Gdansk march, led by Walesa and Lis, began after a Mass attended by an estimated 7,000 worshipers.

The marchers planned to walk to the shipyard monument about 500 yards from the church, but after about 100 yards encountered the police, who had sealed off streets leading to the memorial.

Walesa retreated to the rectory of About 200 demonstrators St. Brygida's after the clash and retreated to the parking lot of St. said, "We marched as long as

Lebanese ministers says Israel 'stirs trouble'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Prime Minister Rashid Karami today accused Israel of stirring up trouble in occupied southern Lebanon whenever the United States dispatches a mediator to the Middle

Karami's statement was published by several Beirut newspapers as Lebanon-Israel troop withdrawal negotiations resumed in the south

Lebanese border town of Nagoura. U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard W. Murphy has been shut-tling between Middle Eastern capitals for the past 10 days, trying in part to break a logjam in the Naqoura talks.

Karami's statement said, "We have become apprehensive of increased Israeli pressures, attacks and blackmail whenever a U.S. emissary is sent to the Middle East. Now Mr. Murphy is in the area.

'Israel's blackmail is not limited to Lebanon, but extends to the United States itself to make it more aligned with Israel," said Karami. "So whenever an American emissary comes we are apprehensive of an Israeli reaction against us

Karami's statement mentioned no specific incidents.

There has been a sharp increase of hostilities among Lebanese civil war antagonists in the mountains east and south of Beirut in the past two weeks. Israel is often accused by the Lebanese of provoking such clashes, the latest a two-hour artillery battle this morning between Christian and Druse militiamen in the Kharroub region just north of Israel's occupation zone.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said an Israeli soldier was killed early today in a firefight with guerrillas trying to plant a roadside bomb in south Lebanon. This brought to 604 the number of Israelis killed in Lebanon since the 1982

Reports in the Arab press said Murphy was sounding out Middle Eastern governments on the prospects of an overall Arab-Israeli settlement.

The American envoy has already visited Saudi Arabia, Israel, Lebanon, Syria, Egypt and Jordan in his current tour.

U.S. Embassy officials would not disclose Murphy's destination.

Greek tanker attacked

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) - Marine salvage officials say Iraqi fighter planes attacked a crippled Greek supertanker that had been set ablaze by an earlier Iraqi raid in the Per-

Iraq, whose land war with Iran widened this year to include the strategic oil transport water route, claimed that its jet fighters attacked one tanker on Saturday and another on Sunday

But executives of marine salvage companies said the two strikes were actually against the same vessel, the 240,830-ton Ninemia. Two crew members were reported killed in Saturday's attack, which set off a "huge" blaze in the engine room, said an executive, who spoke with The. Associated Press on Sunday on condition of anonymity. Seven tugboats struggled to put out the fire, he said.

Japanese families sue KAL

TOKYO (AP) - Relatives of seven Japanese passengers killed when a South Korean airliner was shot down by Soviet jet fighters last year filed a $3.7 million lawsuit today against Korean Air, their attorney

Mitsuo Yoshinaga, a lawyer for the families, said the suit filed in Tokyo District Court was the first legal action taken in Japan by the families of any of the 28 Japanese passengers killed in the crash.

All 269 people aboard were killed when the Boeing 747 crashed Sept. 1, 1983, into the Sea of Japan after entering Soviet airspace near Sakha-

Officials at Korean Air's Japan regional office said they had no immediate comment on the suit.

Han figurines discovered

PEKING (NYT) - The official New China News Agency said Sunday that 1,100 terra cotta figurines from the Han dynasty had been unearthed in the ancient city of Xuzhou and compared the find to the discovery of an army of life-size terra cotta figures in Xian 10 years

The Xian discovery was regarded by many archeologists as the most remarkable in China this century. Of the Xuzhou find, which was said to consist of foot-high battle-clad figures and horses, the agency said, "Their value is viewed as second only to the Qin dynasty terra cotta warriors and horses found in Xian in

Death squads back on job

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) - The archbishop of San Salvador says death squads resumed their activities last week, ending a twomonth lull that began when government and leftist rebel leaders opened peace talks Oct. 15.

"In recent days, the evil crimes of the death squads have returned," Monsignor Arturo Rivera y Damas said Sunday

The archbishop said the Roman Catholic Church's legal aide office received reports of three suspected death squad killings last week. The victims had been mutilated, usually a sign they were killed by the right-ist gangs responsible for thousands of political murders in the past five
