Gideon claims 'no information' on Smith abuse

By ED TODD Staff Writer

Midland Police Chief Wayne Gideon has testified in a deposition that Party opponent, Joe Carr. he had "no information" that former Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith had beaten his former wife.

The relationship between Gideon and Smith had been strained since early 1977, when Smith first took of fice as sheriff

In casually talking with television newsman Conrad Coleman on election day, May 5, 1984, when then-Sheriff Smith and challenger Gary Painter were vying for the Republican Party nomination for sheriff. Gideon, in the deposition, said Coleman asked him: "How do you think it's going to come out?"

Gideon said he replied:

'I don't think the people of Midland County will elect a sheriff that beats his wife's ass' or something like

Smith, 43, is suing Gideon, 51, for $4-million in a slander suit in which Smith claims Gideon in November 1982 "commenced a concentrated and systematic effort" to malign Smith's character by repeating rumors that Smith had beaten his exwife, Gail Mabee Smith Commagere, and that the abuse led to her being hospitalized and suffering a miscarriage.

Smith and the former Gail Mabee were married in August 1973 and were divorced nine years later - in August 1982 — following court hearings on property settlements. Three children, a son and two daughters, were born of the union.

Smith is alleging that the proliferation of those rumors had led to his downfall as sheriff.

Smith, sheriff since 1977, lost his bid for the Republican Party nomination for sheriff in May 1984 to Gary Painter, 38. Painter won the primary by garnering 60.6 percent of the vote; Smith got 39.4 percent. In

In the deposition, Gideon responded to questions posed by Smith's attorney. Thomas Sims of Houston.

'As I recall," Gideon testified, "he (Coleman) was talking about the heated political races and the charges and the counter-charges... And he said something to the effect that Joe Carr (was) saying ... that the people of Midland County are not going to have a sheriff that beats his wife's ass or something like that."

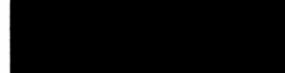

Gideon said he had encountered Coleman in Albertson's, a Midland grocery store, as Gideon and his wife. Pat, were about to shop

Libya will seek united Islamic support

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) - Libya, fearing an American military reprisal for the Rome and Vienna airport massacres, will seek a united Islamic stand against the United States at a meeting Monday of the Islamic Conference Orgaization, a newspaper reported.

In another development, Israel ra-dio in Tel Aviv reported that Libya went to a state of high alert, man-ning anti-aircraft guns and telling pi-lots to be ready to fly at any time. The radio quoted its monitor, Mickey Gurdus, who listens in on radio con-

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP) - Presidents Reagan and Miguel de la Madrid, meeting under a startlingly clear Baja California sky, called for greater efforts to resolve Mexico's troubling foreign debt burden.

'That's exactly why I said what I said," Gideon testified.

IN THE DEPOSITION, Gideon characterized Coleman as an "agitator" who "plays both ends against the middle" to get a news story. "I wouldn't talk to Conrad about it (Dallas Smith), anything, really. Gideon said he had talked to the mayor and City Council about a Nov. 6, 1982, incident involving Smith and his ex-wife and that he had described the incident to Tom Sloan, now a former city councilman, as a 'shoving contest" and that "fingers got mashed in the door" when Smith's ex-wife was trying to escape. In his lawsuit, Smith is accusing

Gideon of: · Telling Scott Henderson, then county attorney, on Nov. 8, 1982, that Smith "physically abused and beat" his former wife when they were married and that she was hospitalized as a result of the abuse and suffered a miscarriage. Telling a "local newsman" in November 1982 that Smith had "intentionally slammed his former wife's hand in a door" and that her hand was "badly mangled"; that she had bruises to her throat where Smith had grabbed her; that she had bruises on her arms where Smith had picked her up and shook her and that she was hospitalized.

· Telling a "local newsman" on May 5, 1984, "that the people of Midland County were not going to have a sheriff that beats his wife's ass." · Causing third parties "within his control" to spread "similar statements" of alleged wife beatings and

SMITH TOLD the Reporter-Telegram Saturday that he and his exwife had a "cuss fight" in November 1982 after they were divorced but that he did not beat her. His ex-wife, now re-married, said in a 1984 deposition that while they were married Smith did not hit her, physically abuse her, or cause her to have a miscarriage. However, she testified that on house. In leaving, she said Smith either slammed or kicked the door closed and that her fingers were smashed in the door slamming.

At that time, she said Smith was 'remorseful" about hurting her and did not intentionally slam the door on her hand.

In his deposition, Gideon denied telling Henderson that Smith had 'physically abused" his wife while they were married. However, Gideon said Smith's ex-wife had telephoned him after the Nov. 6, 1982, "cuss fight," was seeking advice, and was a "little bit hysterical.'

"She was afraid to stay at home," Gideon said. "She was afraid Dallas would return and create another scene or problems.'

IN THE DEPOSITION, Gideon said that after the incident he had talked with Henderson, then county attorney, about filing charges against Smith.

Gideon said Joe Mabee, a Midland rancher who is Mrs. Commagere's father, was considering filing charges against his former son-in-law.

'He (Mabee) said...that they just couldn't tolerate any further abuse of her (Gail) or the (three) grandchildren or anything else...

Charges never were filed. Further, Gideon said he had told the City Council that Smith had "ordered" the police chief "not to permit any more officers to respond to calls at his house."

Police had been summoned to the Smith house at least twice, including on the Nov. 6, 1982, incident, when Mrs. Commagere had summoned police via a "beeper" - an automatic dialing device.

Gideon, calling Smith "high tempered," said he had approached the City Council for advice and in hope that one of Smith's Republican sup porters on the City Council would tell Smith, "Hey, cool it."

Smith disagreed Saturday with Gideon's assessment of his temper. "Obviously, I don't think I am (high tempered)," Smith said. Gideon said he and Smith had a meeting in Gideon's office shortly after the Nov. 6, 1982, incident. Smith came into his office unannounced.

"He (Smith) was angry...at me, angry at policemen, and I think angry. period," Gideon said in his deposition. "He was upset, number one, begered" with her because he had just cause a burglar alarm had been installed in his home. He ordered that I and his grandchildren."

GIDEON, police chief since February 1976, said he and Smith had a disagreement on police matters about as soon as Smith took office, according to Gideon's deposition.

Gideon said Smith had talked to him about conducting "raids" on "a couple or three Negro night clubs" probably as "part of his campaign efforts" to close down "illegal establishments" and "after-hours" clubs. Smith, however, told the Reporter-

Telegram that he simply was doing his job - upholding the law - and didn't understand why Gideon had not moved in to close down the illegal operations, including RJ's real Pit Bar-B-Que, then operated by R.J. Morris.

Smith's attorney, Sims, asked Gideon "What was illegal about R.J.'s?" "Of course," Gideon replied, "you know, I think it was an after-hours place. It was a gambling place. It was place where people frequented that we had troubles and problems

Gideon said he was opposed to closing down the black night club, which was frequented by whites, because "Midland was undergoing a massive integration of school children" via busing. 'And I explained to him (Smith) that I thought his motives were good but his timing was bad," Gideon said source of information for law in the deposition. And I just felt at that particular time that wasn't the proper time to do that.'

Gideon said Smith "wanted to do it

Gideon in his deposition said R.J.'s opened back up. I don't think it ever missed a beat. If it did, I'm not aware of it.'

Smith disagreed.
"He (R.J. Morris) certainly did (miss a 'beat.') He was charged with a felony, and the open gambling changed drastically." Smith said the gambling at R.J.'s was open prior to his investigation and arrests; he said there was "no raid" of the nightspot.

Also early into his tenure as sheriff, Smith shut down what he described as a "circuit-girl operation" possibly linked to organized crime at Bel-Air Courts in west Midland. The ex-sheriff said he simply talked to Lawrence Clay, owner of the motel, and told him that the prostitution operation was "going to stop, and I was the new sheriff.

Gideon said he and Smith had a "philosophical-type discussion" on whether prostitution houses should be "totally shut" down or "if you allow two or three to operate (so) that you control them and you know where they are, and they are not in the residential area where it's almost impossible to do anything with them." Gideon testified that a prostitution house is "a heck of a good enforcement.

The closing of Bel-Air Courts' prostitution operation was not a cooperative effort. The sheriff and deputies told the motel operator to close the business and the police did likewise but at different times.

Volcanic ash causes Colombian evacuation

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - The Nevado del Ruiz volcano rained sulfuric ash Saturday for the first time since its catastrophic November eruption, prompting a dawn evacuation of about 15,000 farmers from six river valleys creasing its slopes, the govern-

Victor Ricardo, president of the government's National Emergency Committee, called it a "preventive measure" until the threat of a new eruption passes

The shower of sulfuric vapor and ash started falling at 3 a.m. Ricardo told a nationwide radio and television audience. It was the same activity, he said, that signaled the Nov. 13 eruption.

That eruption melted part of the volcano's cone of ice and snow, sending a 150-foot-high wall of mud down the Langunilla River. Mud and debris buried the

the U.S. Justice Department says it is supporting a Texas Department of Corrections proposal that would virtually abolish inmate to inmate mail.

In a brief filed in federal court, the Justice Department - which has intervened on behalf of inmates in prison reform - supports a TDC proposal limiting inmate mail.

"The use of inmate-to-inmate cor-respondence to foment violent illegal activities in prison systems elsewhere has been confirmed,' according to court papers filed Friday by the Justice Department.

State officials in seeking court approval for the restrictions said inmate gangs now are able to recruit and organize "planned assaults and murders through the mail."

A hearing is scheduled here Thursday, before U.S. District Judges John V. Singleton of Houston and William Wayne Justice of Tyler.

The proposal affects two long-running prison lawsuits. In one by Guadalupe Guajardo, Singleton upheld prisoners' rights to receive mail. Another suit by David Ruiz led to major prison reforms ordered by Justice. The Justice Department's support for the TDC proposal drew quick criticism from attorneys. "It's unusual, but not unheard of," said attorney William Bennett, who represents inmates in the Ruiz lawsuit. "It doesn't surprise me in the Reagan administration that the civil rights division is switching sides.'

Attorney Harry Reasoner, who represents inmates in the Guajardo case, said the Justice Department lawsuit in 1981.

HOUSTON (AP) — In a moved decried by critics as "switching sides," since the TDC proposal is patterned since the TDC proposal is patterned after a rule used in federal prisons.

"The Department of Justice is normally representing federal prisons as defendants," Reasoner said. "The position they're taking here is really position they think will help them (later) as defendants. The state is proposing that all correspondence between inmates be limited to immediate family members, parties or witnesses in some legal action and those with "exceptional circumstances."

The proposal is closely patterned after a rule used by the Federal Bureau of Prisons. Inmate mail is now screened by officials.

In its brief, the Justice Department urges the judges to approve the TDC proposal if sufficient evidence is presented at the hearing to show inmates are using the mail system to promote violence.

"TDC asserts...that inmate to inmate correspondence is being used to recruit prison gang members, to plan assaults, murders, and other illegal activity harmful to the security of TDC inmates and staff."

The Justice Department says the prisoners' First Amendment right to free speech is outweighed by the state's need for prison security.

Attorneys for inmates have called the TDC proposals "hysterical reaction" to prison violence and argue the plan would unfairly punish all prisoners for the actions of a few.

Milo Kirk, president of the Dallas County chapter of MADD, said Friday night that Seagoville city officials have been "embarrassed" by a police policy of letting some drunken drivers off with the lesser charge of public intoxication.

'They've been caught at a policy that should not have been in place," she said after meeting for two hours Friday with the city manager and police chief in which she reviewed police arrest reports.

Farm Aid funds help with farmers' hotline, TDA says

LUBBOCK (AP) - A toll-free hotline has been established and a meeting scheduled to assist farmers facing uncertain financial conditions, Texas Department of Agriculture officials said.

The hotline, 1-800-AGRI-AID, was funded in part from funds collected by the Farm Aid concert held last year in Champagne, Ill., Texas Department of Agriculture spokesman Bob Gibson said Friday in Lubbock.

Gibson said the number is based in Austin and is answered by "people who've dealt with the problems farmers now are facing. Some of them have gone out of farming themselves.

A team of attorneys and state agriculture department officials will conduct a day-long seminar Monday on options available to farmers, said Gibson. He said the meeting will begin at 8:30 a.m. at Lubbock Plaza on South Loop 289.

The seminar is a TDA-sponsored meeting. Gibson said one participant is a Lubbock attorney who has handled bankruptcy cases. Gibson said an agenda for the free seminar will be available upon registration. Other participants include a certified public accountant, an Austin attorney familiar with Farmers Home Administration regulations and a TDA official who will discuss the 1985 farm bill.

AVOID TITLE DEFECTS

Title to real estate refers to the ownership of the land. When a real estate deed is signed, notarized, and delivered, title – or ownership – passes to the buyer. It is very important to both the buyer and seller that there be no defects in the title. When buying land, you should always have the public land records checked to insure that title to the real estate you are buying is free from defects, such as for example, a 'missing heir" who has failed to sign a deed in the chain of title, or unpaid taxes. If there are any mortgages or other liens against the property, they will also be discovered. Normally unpaid taxes and liens pose no problem because they are withheld from the purchase price and paid - often through the Realtor's escrow account - to the creditor.

The seller wants to be sure there are no title defects because he generally guarantees good title in the deed. This is called a "general warranty". If any tile defects later surface - even if they are not the fault of the seller attorney's advise us that the general warranty makes the seller legally responsible for the problem.

Whooping cranes have 'best year ever'

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK

ARANSAS NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE (AP) — U.S. Fish and Wild-life Service officials are ecstatic over the growth and survival this year of the world's largest wild flock of whooping cranes, probably the most famous of all endangered species.

Ninety-four birds made the annual 2,500-mile trip this fall from the remote Northwest Territories of Canada to their winter grounds on the Texas Gulf Coast, up 10 from the number that left Texas for Canada

"They've had about the best year ever," says Melvin Maxwell, outdoor recreation planner at the Aransas refuge, about 180 miles southwest of Houston. "All 16 chicks banded in Canada made the journey down here this year. That's really good. Sixteen chicks is some kind of

The 94 birds may not seem like a large number. But it's more than six nes the low of 15 whooping cranes counted in 1941, when biologists feared the bird was on the verge of coming extinct. After rebounding slightly in the early 1950s, the number of captive and wild birds dipped to just 23 in 1954 due to hunting, collecting of their eggs and destruction of nesting grounds for farming and other development. Six chicks hatched in 1983. Only two were hatched in 1982.

The cranes probably never have been abundant, although they have managed to survive for thousands of years, says Aransas refuge biologist Tom Stehn.

There are fossil remains that have been found," Stehn says. The whooping crane is the tallest record. If we could do that every bird in North America, standing as year, we'd be doing good." bird in North America, standing as much as 5 feet tall. Its black-tipped wings over a white plumage can span 7 feet. Although the crane is majestic in flight, much of its time is spent on the ground, walking on feet the size of a human hand in search of a diet of crabs, clams, mudshrimp, > from a distinct whooping sound. Once a week, Stehn boards a small single-engine plane for a three-hour tour of the 55,000-acre refuge to count the cranes frogs and crayfish. Its name comes

Peering through binoculars, Stehn makes his count by looking for colorcoded plastic bands affixed to the cranes' legs by Canadian wildlife officials. In some previous studies, a couple of the birds - which fly in pairs or families and stake out exclusive territories once they reach their destinations - have been equipped with tiny radio transmitters to moni-

"Nobody knows why they always come back," he says.

The same birds stake out the same territory year after year, he says. If a particular area with a history as a crane nest is vacant, Stehn says he can only assume that something bad has happened to the bird.

The Canada-Texas crane flock is one of two remaining wild in North America. A smaller flock of about 40 birds, which migrates between Idaho n the summer and New Mexico in the winter, is part of a decade-old experiment in which biologists transfer whooping crane eggs to the nests of more numerous sandhill cranes for hatching.

The cranes are the chief source of interest for some 60,000 to 70,000 people who visit the Aransas refuge

Church moves boys, girls out of state to protest ruling

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) - People's Baptist Church officials say the boys and girls of the Rebekah Home for Girls and the Anchor Home for Boys are at Calvary Bible College in Liberty, Mo., the Rev. Lester Roloff's destination the day he died in a 1982 plane crash.

Children in the two religious homes, the focus of a lengthy church-versus-state fight over licensing, were moved out of state to protest a Texas Supreme Court ruling that the homes must obtain a state license to continue operating childcare facilities. Mrs. Richard Ayers of Eagle River, Alaska, told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times Friday she was informed by officials of People's Baptist Church that her daughter, a resident of the Rebekah Home in Corpus Christi, had arrived safely in Liber-

'I know my daughter is safe. I trust them," Mrs. Ayers said of her 16-year-old daughter's care by officials of the Rebekah Home. "She is safe and very well cared for. But it is a disgrace how the state of Texas treated them. Officials at Liberty's Calvary Bible College and Calvary Baptist Church also said the boys and girls were living at the Bible college in a suburb of Kansas City, Mo.

At a press conference in Corpus Christi Friday, the Rev. Wiley Cameron, pastor of People's Baptist Church, said the fight against state licensing will continue.

"We could have had a confrontation with our government officials' over the licensing deadline, he said. "It would have been right to do so because our cause is biblically and constitutionally right.

Cameron said school supporters would instead lobby legislators for a change in the state law requiring licensing. State Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, and Ted Roberts, R-Corpus Christi, have said they are drafting legislation to allow the homes to continue operation.

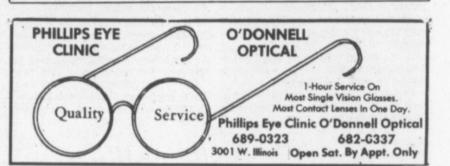

Candidates file for primaries

AUSTIN (AP) - The 1986 political season got its official start Saturday as the Democrats and Republicans began accepting candidate filings for the May 3 primaries

The big names were absent on opening day. Officials for both parties said they didn't expect the major candidates for statewide office to show up for at least a few more days. Filing ends Feb. 3. "None of them indicated they'd be in today," GOP assistant general counsel Wayne Massey said Saturday of the major candidates. Matthew Dowd, the Democrats' primary director, said he did not expect his party's major statewide candidates to file for "a week or so."

Democratic incumbents Gov. Mark White, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Attorney General Jim Mattox, Comptroller Bob Bullock, Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower and Treasurer Ann Richards are expected to seek renomination. Each is heavily favored in the primary.

Budget bill will cut federal retirees first

WASHINGTON (AP) - Retired federal workers will be the first to feel the bite of the newly enacted budget-balancing act, but within weeks drastic cuts will be ordered throughout the government — un-less the Supreme Court intervenes.

And many politicians and economists are now predicting that the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, which seeks to eliminate the federal deficit by 1991, may never fully take effect.

The act sets a series of increasingly stringent deficit-reduction targets until a balanced budget is achieved, setting the stage for expected major spending confrontations between the White House and Congress.

Under the act, if Congress is unable to meet the deficit targets either through spending cuts or tax increases - then automatic acrossthe-board cuts would be triggered.

A suit challenging the constitutionality of the legislation will likely end up in the Supreme Court before March 1, the date the first big round of cuts is due to take effect. A courtordered stay could result, according to government and private analysts.

However, barring such court action, President Reagan is poised to order a $11.7 billion governmentwide cut in federal spending to take effect March 1, say White House budget officials.

The cut will affect nearly every federal program except for Social Security and a few other selected exempted areas. The reductions will fall equally between defense and domestic spending

The result could be layoffs at some agencies, but a freeze on new hiring is more likely - especially at regulatory agencies and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, according to U.S. officials.

Federal Aviation Administrator

Donald D. Engen this week ordered a freeze on hiring new employees except for air traffic controllers, ing restraints are expected under Gramm-Rudman. Retired federal workers are the first to feel the impact of Gramm-Rudman: they won't be getting scheduled cost-of-livng increases in safety inspectors and airport security workers. FAA spoksman Stephen

Hayes said Congress cut the agency's 1986 budget request and more spend-their pensions this month. Another early casualty of the act is $75 million that Congress voted to be paid to the World Bank for increased loans to developing nations. The Office of Management of Budget is holding up the funds, pending a determination of the extent of the March 1 cutbacks.

Under the act, approved by Congress late last year, the first in a series of fiscal deadlines comes Jan. 15 - when both the OMB and the Congressional Budget Office make independent judgments on the extent of the current federal deficit, submitting their findings to the General Accounting Office.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit target for 1986 is $172 billion. Both the OMB and the CBO are expected to estimate a current deficit in the vicinity of $200 billion, roughly $30 billion over the target making automatic spending cuts this year a near certainty. However, for this year only, automatic cuts are limited by law to $11.7 billion. These cuts will be ordered by Reagan on Feb. 1 — and will take effect automatically on March 1 unless Congress in the meantime passes a separate package of $11.7 billion in cuts, action deemed unlikely by both congressional and administration

Inmates, guards losers after riots at state prison

MOUNDSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) - Inmates and guards alike are the losers at the riot-torn, decrepit West Virginia Penitentiary, where hostages were seized and three prisoners were murdered during a 43-hour up-rising, officials said Saturday.

The state regained control of the 120-year-old penitentiary Friday af-ter the last of 16 hostages seized on New Year's Day was released. Gov. Arch Moore said he believed the slain inmates were informers executed after mock trials by fellow prisoners acting as "judge, jury and executioner Corrections Commissioner A.V. Dodrill said all prisoners were locked in their cells Saturday and every inch" of the penitentiary was being searched for weapons and contraband.

Conditions in the prison have been the subject of numerous lawsuits, with inmates winning most of the cases but the state slow to respond. Some legislators have described raw sewage flowing across floors - "beyond anything you ought to do to human beings" — but legislative leaders said there is no money or support for improvements.

Everyone inside the aging prison suffers, and not just when violence attracts national attention, said Greg Denier of the Communications Workers of America, which represents 90 percent of the guards.

'If the prisoners have to put up with 30-degree temperatures inside, so do the officers," he said.

Denier said many corrections officers fear for their lives in the cellblocks. Only those guarding the perimeter of the prison carry weapons, to keep guns out of the hands of

"I don't think people have any idea that you have three unarmed guards - no sticks, no guns, no anything - to control 150 prisoners who aren't even locked in their cells," De-

Guards are prohibited by department policy from speaking with reporters, but several who requested anonymity said just 30 of the required 47 were on duty when the riot broke out.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Land mine kills two white South Africans near border

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A land-mine explosion killed a white man and his daughter-in law riding in a truck near the Botswana border Saturday and injured two other whites, the military said.

Thirteen whites have been killed in explosions since Dec. 13.

In another development, witnesses said police used tear gas against buses at the funerals of four riot victims in Soweto, and about 50 black mourners were hurt while struggling to escape through smashed

Police reported at least six blacks died in violence elsewhere, including two "armed men" killed by security personnel who seized an arms cache in the nominally independent tribal homeland of Bophuthatswana. Three others were burned to death, apparently by other blacks.

The sixth victim was a black shot to death after a police patrol was attacked with a gasoline bomb in the tribal area of Moutse, 100 miles northeast of Johannesburg, police said.

Protestants pelt police

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant rioters pelted police with bottles and stones Saturday, injuring 23 officers and burning two police cars, police said.

The fracas came at the end of a march across Northern Ireland by thousands of Protestants opposed to the Nov. 15 British-Irish accord that gives Dublin a formal consultative role in the running of British-ruled Northern Ireland.

Police spokesman Sgt. Cyril Davidson said that when the marchers reached their destination, "certain elements became riotous, and police came under heavy and sustained attack by stones, bottles, etc."

Police at first reported seven officers were hurt, but later raised the number to 23.

One officer suffered a broken leg and three demonstrators were arrested, Davidson said.

Militiamen seize magazine

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Militiamen of the Christian Lebanese Forces Saturday seized a magazine critical of a Syrian-sponsored peace pact their leaders negotiated with Moslem foes, further muzzling the news media in Beirut.

The militiamen stormed into a printing press in Christian east Beirut and confiscated all copies of the Al-Massira weekly as Syria warned it will not tolerate Christian opposition to the peace accord.

In west Beirut, gunmen ambushed George Alam, security chief of Lebanon's Damascus-backed Syrian Social Nationalist Party, seriously wounding him and two bodyguards, police said.

Three gunmen fired machine guns and two rocket-propelled grenades at Alam's convoy as he drove on Hamra Street, west Beirut's main commercial district, and fled on foot immediately after the attack, police Alam's party is a leftist Lebanese faction that advocates merging Syria, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, Kuwait, Cyprus and pre-Israel Palestine into a Greater Syria.

Fewer nuclear tests in 1985

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - The Soviet Union carried out seven nuclear arms tests in 1985 compared with 15 conducted by the United States, the Swedish Defense Research Institute reported.

Rifles linked to Sandinistas

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) - The government said Saturday that rifles used by guerrillas in November's bloody assault on the Palace of Justice belonged to the leftist Sandinista regime in Nicaragua.

Foreign Minister Augusto Ramirez Ocampo sent a letter to Miguel D'Escoto, Nicaragua's foreign minister, demanding a "prompt and satisfac-tory explanation" on how the arms fell into the hands of the leftist guerrillas of the April 19 Movement, known as M-19. Colombia disclosed this in an official statement released by the Foreign Ministry.

On Nov. 6, 35 M-19 guerrillas seized the Palace of Justice in downtown Bogota. During a 28-hour siege, 95 people were killed, including 11 Supreme Court justices and all the guerrillas. An army assault ended the occupation.

From Staff Reports

Partly cloudy skies will dominate the forecast for the next few days as the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal predicts the high today will reach 50 degrees.

Forcasters say today will be partly cloudy with winds from the south to southeast at 10 to 15 mph. Tonight will be partly cloudy and not so cold will be partly cloudy and not so cold. The low will be in the lower 30s. Monday will be partly cloudy with the high in the 30s.

Saturday's high of 55 was 15 degrees below the record set in 1948. The low of 23 was 21 degrees above the record set in 1971.

STATE
A dome of polar air glided into Texas Saturday bringing a dry north wind all the way to the coastal

By late afternoon the front was along a Houston-Victoria-Laredo line. It was sunny and windy north of the front, but cloudy and humid to its south, the National Weather Service said.

At 3 p.m., temperatures had risen to the 70s south of the front and readings fell back into the 60s from East Texas through the Hill Country, with 40s and 50s further north. Laredo recorded 77 degrees while it was 40 at Dalhart.

A 15 to 25 mph north wind gusted in excess of 35 mph across much of North and Central Texas. An area of rain with embedded thunderstorms roamed the coastal waters from 75 to 125 miles southeast of Galveston.

The forecast called for increasing clouds from the west, although fair skies should prevail over North Texas until Sunday night and Monday. Highs should range from the mid 40s in the Panhandle into the 50s and 60s in South Texas, with lows from the mid teens to the 40s.

NATION

Winter storm watches were posted into Sunday from the Midwest to New England as a windy snowstorm that snarled traffic in Iowa sped northeastward.

Travelers' advisories warning of blowing and drifting snow during the afternoon were posted across southern Minnesota, and across eastern lowa, northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin. Overnight advisories were issued for northern Ohio and much of Lower Michigan.

Wind gusted to 35 mph across southern Minnesota and northern Iowa during the morning, and drifted the 3 to 6 inches of overnight snowfall. Iowa police reported numerous cars off roads and many people stopped at truck stops to wait out the weather.

New facility to enhance 'wilderness' lab

Staff Writer

The 49-acre outdoor "wilderness" laboratory in northeast Midland soon will be complemented by a 5,280-square-foot building for indoor studies, group meetings and classes tocusing on soil-and-water conservation.

"We've got big plans out here," said Midland County farmer Vernon Chandler, a member of the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District's board of director.

The site is the 49-acre Midland Outdoor Learning Center for Environmental Conservation off Wadley Avenue at Hogan Park. The project, which was launched in 1979, is designed to expose students to nature, to how plants and animals interwork, and what man can do to conserve his natural resources. The "wilderness" aspect of the project consists of a winding trail in undeveloped grassland. A pond, a playa lake, enhances the acreage and attracts more life.

The project is a joint effort of the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District, the city of Midland and the Midland Independent School District. Last schoolyear, 5,300 students studied vegetation and animal life, such as birds and insects, along the

Among the "big plans" Chandler envisions are a frontier farm and petting zoo.

'They (many school children) don't know where milk comes from. except momma gets it at the store in a bottle," said Dick Hagelstein, district conservationist for the U.S. Soil Midland has been "very cooperative" in the conservation project and land County

The center is "to teach kids who don't have any farm background what environmental conservation is all about," he said.

The headquarters for the outdoor learning center is the under-construction Sibley Learning Center, a 5,280-square-foot brick-and-steel building. Cost of the building -139,000 - is being borne by donations, such as gifts from the Sibley Foundation, Midland rancher Murray Fasken and other sources.

'There's no government money involved," said Hagelstein. "When there is, they (politicians and bureaucrats) begin telling you what to do. We don't want anybody telling us

The building will include a stairstepped auditorium; two classrooms incorporating a laboratory and a library on conservation and related subjects; foyer for displaying exhibits: and an office for a coordinator.

The conservation district has set up a trust fund to manage money for the project. The district's five board members who govern the center are raising funds to buy furniture and equipment for the building and to hire a coordinator, who also would be the "wilderness" caretaker.

Serving on the board are Alvey Bryant, chairman, farmer; J.D. Crawford, vice chairman, farmer, rancher and insurance agent; John Braun, rancher; Vernon Chandler, farmer, and Matt Faudree, rancher.

Hagelstein noted that the city of in the conservation project and would maintain the landscape. The city has granted the conservation district a 25-year lease to the 49 acres and would extend an option on subsequent leases

"They have been very good to us," said Bryant, "and we appreciate it." Crawford said that the center will afford "a lot of community use" not restricted to students.

He said the conservation district started organizing the Environmen-tal Conservation Center in 1979 "to teach conservation of the soil and water" to young people.

"The greatest impact would be on young children to appreciate and understand the environment rather than work against it.'

Braun said that the soil within the 49-acre center "has never been broken, and the mesquite has never been treated.'

'We're not for everything," he said. "We not against everything. "Just because there are harmful plants doesn't mean we're going to pull them up." He cited the educational value of harmful and beneficial plants in the center.

Hagelstein noted that the building, constructed by Midland builder Jerry Henley, would be modest in its furnishings.

"We're a pretty conservative group," he said, "and we're not going to spend in a lavish manner. It's going to be nice, but it's not going to be extravagant by any means.'

New cry: 'Let's get the flag back!'

By DAVID MARANISS Los Angeles Times-

Washington Post News Service

SAN ANTONIO - "Let's get the golldamn flag back!" A Texan - who else? - issued that vainglorious battle cry.

It was in the winter of 1984, down at oilman Claude D'Unger's place in Corpus Christi. He and an old buddy, Navy pilot Clay Umbach, were shooting the breeze, two Sons of the Republic reliving great moments in upon the battle of the Alamo and a book called "A Time to Stand," in which the author revealed that the flag captured by Santa Anna here on the morning of March 6, 1836, was still stored in a brown filing cabinet in the basement of Chapultapec Castle in Mexico City.

For D'Unger, the vision was painful: Imagine the battle flag of the Alamo, symbol of Texas' victory-ordeath tradition, filed away in a dank museum chamber in that inscrutable southern land. It seemed a hostage, Texas history. Inevitably they hit not a spoil of war, and it needed to be recaptured and carried over the foreign mountains, deserts and traditions to its rightful place at the little mission in downtown San Antonio. What better gift, said D'Unger, than to bring it home for the Texas Sesquicentennial, the 150th anniversary of freedom from Mexico. That celebration is at hand, the flag is not, and therein lies a lesson of sorts for modern Texas: Even in this place of mythic optimism, you back." can't always get what you want. When D'Unger and Umbach sought to get their "golldamn flag" back, they did not organize an armed brigade and head across the Rio Grande on a liberation march. They petitioned Congress.

We wanted the flag so bad we knew we had to play it straight and not offend anyone," said D'Unger, an aggressive fellow by nature. "From the get-go, we damn near walked a path of appeasement with the Mexicans. Anything to get it

Mall no longer coping with holiday crowds

By MARK LEWIS Staff Writer

Shoppers at the Midland Park Mall Saturday found an abundance of something which had been scarce in recent weeks: parking places. The pre-Christmas shopping season was over. The post-Christmas gift-exchanging season was over.

The mall seemed almost peaceful. 'It's the quiet after the storm, said Anita Strange of Coach House

For months, Midland's largest retail center had been choked with holiday traffic. Going to the mall on a Saturday in late December was like riding the New York subway system during rush hour. Shoppers prowled the parking lot for parking spaces, then prowled the aisles for gifts, and the roar of the crowd almost drowned out the taped Christmas

"The rush starts in mid-October The biggest day is the Friday after Thanksgiving," said Precious Coleman, who works the customer pick up desk at O.G. Wilson. "That's called Black Friday.'

"It was extremely busy" before Christmas, said Florence Erdmann, who works the Sears customer-service desk. "They were lined up two or three deep" along the counter.

Before Christmas, crowds of shoppers converged on sales people; Saturday it was the other way around, with sales people outnumbering the customers in many stores. Gift shops were particularly underpopulated. "It's more of a clean-up period," said Ms. Strange as she cleaned a ceramic bowl at Coach House Gifts.

Post-Christmas consumers take a more casual approach - they browse, whereas pre-Christmas shoppers "are bound and determined to buy something," according to Russ Turner of VideoConcepts. "Now, they're just looking."

trek from Sulpher Springs.

The Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train, which left Sulpher Springs late last week on six-month trek through Texas, should be rolling through Midland on May 2.

The wagon train journey is part of the Texas Sesquicentennial activities, marking the state's 150th birthday during 1986. "The wagon train is by far the biggest event planned," said Robin

Jackson, who is heading up the local activities. "There will be 150 wagons and 300 horseback riders representing several nations, including Germany, France and Spain, and several states. It will come to Midland from Odessa along State Highway 191, follow Loop 250 and circle up in the vicinity of the ClayDesta Plaza, Ms. Jackson "One of the requirements is that they must have a 50-acre area to camp in," she said. "ClayDesta was the only place near town where we could put them." The train will stay overnight and then head north to Patricia at a pace of four miles per hour.

The wagon train's overnight stay at ClayDesta will be the focal celebration of the Sesquicentennial year locally, with a "Six Flags" type festival, entertainment, possibly a street dance and a variety of food.

GARY OTT

It's past time to interrupt those holiday disruptions

I hate to sound like a scrooge but I for one am glad the holidays are

As the old saying goes, "I've had all the fun I can stand." It is time to get back to the norm. I'm tired of Thursdays feeling like Mondays and Fridays feeling like

Call me boring, but I want Mon-days to be Mondays and Tuesdays to esdays. When Christmas and lew Year's Day fall on Wednesday, that doesn't happen. Two weeks are shot. You might as well write them off because nothing positive is going to get done. You, in effect, have four two-day weeks and everyone knows you can't accomplish anything worthwhile in two working days. It takes at least that long to get ready for a project. After all, you need significant lead-in time so you can whine to your co-workers, chainsmoke, drink coffee and inform the boss as to why it simply can't be done. Let's face it, these things take time. They can't be rushed.

This is not to say that I don't appreciate the holiday season. I do. It is a time to visit with friends and family, buy gifts for loved ones, feed your face and, if you are lucky, receive a bonus check at the office. Still, there are things about it that bother me. For example:

— The singing of Christmas carols.

For the most part, I accept this ritual, provided, of course, it is done by the right people. Small children, for example, usually can pull it off nicely. So can large church choirs. And, of course, there's always Bing Crosby. Where I draw the line is when country-western singers, especially my honky-tonk favorites, cross over and try their hand at those tradition-al holiday songs. The worst known case is Willie Nelson singing "Frosty the Snowman." Country-western singers should stick to songs about good booze, bad women and painful heartbreaks and leave the Christmas carols to people like Andy Williams and Perry Como. Willie Nelson, of all people, should be aware of that simple fact.

The big family meal. For reasons that escape me, we continue to feast, more times than not, on turkey and all the trimmings. This tradition should be halted immediately. The family meal, in itself, is fine but it is absolutely essential that we come up with a new main course. Turkey, at best, is edible once a year and in that case it should be on Thanksgiving Day, not Christmas. Turkey and Thanksgiving are a natural match, a tradition of sorts. They go together like grits and melted cheese. Nowhere, however, is it written that a perfectly enjoyable Christmas after-noon should be destroyed by facing a plate of dry, white turkey meat that requires two bowls of giblet gravy to make moist enough to endure. We simply must come up with al-ternatives. Some possibilities might include: several greasy slabs of mesquite-smoked barbecued ribs with potato salad, sweet and sour pork, a bowl of Frosted Flakes, pork chops with brown rice and, of course, that all-time favorite, chicken fried steak smothered in cream gravy. Any, I submit, would be better than turkey.

The football overkill. Simply put, there are too many bowl games. Believe it or not, there was once a time when a bowl game invitation was a reward for a truly outstanding season. It meant something. Now, be cause of the avalanche of new impos ters, any team with fewer than six losses and a reasonably big name can get a bid. But who cares? Does anyone really watch the Cherry, Citrus, Holiday, California, Freedom, All-American or Independence bowl games, anyway? Of course not. Do away with them. That way the real bowls will have more significance, Another thing, someone needs to find out what the Blue-Gray, East-West and Hula bowl games are and get rid of them.

Two House members from south Texas, Democrats Solomon P. Ortiz and Henry B. Gonzalez, gave their blessing to the venture, and D'Unger went on to recruit the rest of the Texas delegation and nearly 100 members from 19 other states. He appealed directly to patriotism and local pride. Most of the heroes of the Alamo, after all, were from elsewhere: David Crockett from Tennessee, William Travis and James Bonham from South Carolina, James Bowie from what is now part of Kentucky. Texan James C. Wright Jr., the House majority leader, suggested that it would be more appropriate to ask Mexico to return the flag on loan, rather than give it back permanently. Republican Sen. Phil Gramm took the hard line, saying the flag represented, in the words of press secretary Larry Neal, "what Texas is, what it was, and what it always shall remain." Gramm and other Texas politicians broached the subject with Mexico's ambassador to the United States, Jorge Espinosa de los Reyes, and diplomatic approaches were made to President de la Madrid.

Mexico, as it turned out, had heard this before. It seemed that every generation of American patriots had rediscovered the Alamo flag and sought its return. Twenty-five years igo, the Texas Legislature directed Texas to enter into negotiations with Mexico on the flag. Gov. John B. Connally vetoed the measure, citing a fact that Texans often need to be reminded of: Texas is a state, no ment hit Congress. D'Unger's role was played by a wealthy real estate man from Amarillo who persuaded Senators John G. Tower, R-Tex., and Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., to sponsor S.R. 112, in which the State Department was asked to obtain the flag's return so that it could "rest in honored glory." It was noted then that Mexico had a moral obligation because the United States, under the Truman administration, had returned the Mexican flags captured by its troops during the Mexican Orleans flag, or something resembling it, is said to be flying over the Alamo. But if his rendition is trusted, then it follows that its account of fighter extraordinaire - is said to have killed 50 to 200 Mexican troops during the 90-minute battle. No one knows for sure because the only surviving combatants were Mexicans, and to them all the coonskinned Teneans looked alike. Still, the legend persists. In Walt Disney's version, Fess Parker stands tall to the end, the last of the 188 heroes to fall. In several historical versions, authors state that someone "who could have been Crockett," was seen fighting off 18 Mexicans at a time.

De la Pena tells it differently. He says that "a David Crockett, wellknown naturalist from Tennessee,' was among a small group of defenders who hid during the final stage of the battle and eventually surrendered, only to be executed by the enraged, despotic Santa Anna.

But the Alamo must be more myth than reality. It evokes the image of valor, not the oversized souvenir shop that dominates the modern-day shrine. And so it is with the flag, regardless of its history.

The last American to examine the flag was curator Long, who traveled to Mexico City in 1979. He noticed that it was no longer on display and asked its whereabouts and whether he could photograph it. "They took me down to the basement of that musty castle," Long recalled, "and floor and then laid the flag over it. I shot down at the flag and got several pictures. It seemed tattered, but they were doing a beautiful job of resto-ration. It was odd-sized, with gold fringe, faded light blue-gray in Long did not seek the flag's return to his museum. "My standard saying is, it is theirs, not ours," Long said. 'It was captured in war. Those are the rules of war.'

Lest Texans get too riled over Mex-ico's possession of the Alamo flag on the sesquicentennial, perhaps they should consider life from the other side of the river. The Mexicans want their cork leg

They lost it during a skirmish in the Mexican War. It was the cork leg of none other than the ubiquitous Santa Anna, who had lost his real leg during the French Pastry War of 1838, an odd little military action against France that began when some Mexicans invaded a French pastry shop in Veracruz, locked up the proprietor and ate his goods. Santa Anna lost a leg then, gave it a Springfield. full burial and got an artificial one made of cork.

Around noon on April 18, 1847, Santa Anna was with his troops near Cerro Gordo. He was sitting in his carriage; the horses were untied. The battle, or so the general presumed, was being carried out some distance away, so he settled down for a picnic lunch of roast chicken He took his cork leg off, for it was uncomfortable to have it on in the

Then, suddenly from the brush appeared a regiment of men from the Illinois Third. The volunteers rushed toward the carriage. One of Santa Anna's aides carried him off on horseback before he could be captured. The carriage was left behind. The fighting Illini wolfed down the roast chicken, pocketed some gold doubloons they found on the carriage floor and sped off with the cork leg. It remained in the posses sion of three soldiers from Pekin, Ill, who took it home after the war and used it to make money.

They traveled from town to town in the land of Lincoln, charging folks 10 cents a peek at the artificial leg of the famed Mexican general Eventually the cork leg was placed in the trust of the state, and for century it rested unseen in a vault in one of the executive buildings in

All efforts by Mexico to get their cork leg back were rebuffed. The IIlinois General Assembly almost handed it back during a special session in 1942, but the Democraticbacked resolution was ridiculed by Republicans.

Which left Turner with less to do. While some sales people were relieved the rush had ended - "Thank God it's over!" was Ms. Coleman's comment — Turner preferred the pre-Christmas excitement.

"I think we were doing a lot better when it was busy," he said, noting that the store makes about 30 percent of its annual sales during the Christmas rush.

Turner had few customers to wait on, but the Sears customer-service desk had attracted several people with problems to straighten out. Nothing like the Christmas rush, but enough to keep Ms. Erdmann and her co-workers busier than the employees of most other mall stores

America drowning in sea of lawsuits

Americans are now suing one another that the legal burden is disrupting productivity and diminishing the quality of life in this country.

billion-dollar legal fees, liability insurance and court judgments are simply added to the cost of doing business and passed on to the public. Thus, every American helps to pay the legal bills and insurance costs in the form of higher prices, higher medical fees and unnecessary extras to make goods and services lawsuit-

Liability insurance has soared out of the reach of many people, and litigation has become so costly that they can't afford to defend themselves. So to avoid lawsuits, they are giving up their livelihoods, closing down their businesses and changing their ways.

The United States has more than 653,000 practicing attorneys who filed an estimated 13 million civil lawsuits last year. Only a fraction of the plaintiffs will win their cases; yet winners and losers alike must pay their legal bills. Increasingly, only the lawyers will win. The lawsuits have cost insurance companies more than they had anticipated and have wiped out some of their profits. In 1984, they earned only a 3 percent rate of return on their net worth instead of the 13 percent they had anticipated. To recoup the shortfall, insurance companies simply gouged their customers. The cost of malpractice insurance premiums shot up 300 percent to 900 percent for architects. 200 percent to 500 percent for daycare centers, 300 percent to 1,000 percent for public transit authori- our study of insurance statistics that ties. For a host of businessmen, professional people and social workers, liability insurance has become either unaffordable or unavailable.

Should the American people sit still while the lawyers and insurance companies pluck them like chickens? We think not. With the columnists' presumption, we offer two simple proposals that we think would stop the gouging and restore some sanity to the system.

PROPOSAL NO. 1: Congress should require plaintiffs who lose their lawsuits to pay the legal ex-penses of the defendants. Lawyers who drum up fees by encouraging people to sue should be required, if the courts rule against them, to pay for the trouble they have caused the defendants. Safeguards should be established, of course, to give the exploited their day in court.

PROPOSAL NO. 2: Congress should offer federal liability insurance at reasonable rates to those who can't obtain or afford private insurance. We are convinced from a federal insurance agency could offer cheap policies and still earn a profit for the taxpayers. Meanwhile the gouging, and the desperation it causes, goes on. Here are the troubling facts:

- Many doctors have abandoned medicine because they can no longer afford malpractice insurance. A disturbing 12 percent of the nation's obstetricians, for example, have stopped delivering babies. The remaining doctors have been forced to raise their fees to offset higher insurance premiums. Some doctors prescribe tests and procedures that are not only costly but unnecessary "defensive medicine," they call it to protect themselves against lawsuits. Others have cut back their practices; they won't treat patients who seem likely to sue.

— The explosion of lawsuits has driven many private entrepreneurs out of business. High-risk sports facilities such as ski resorts and skating rinks have trouble getting insurance to protect themselves from customers who get hurt and sue. Several businesses that serve the public are either shutting their doors or raising their prices. Bars and restaurants, for example, are upping prices to pay for increased premiums. And architects are "overdesigning" buildings — at considerable additional cost - to safeguard against litigation.

- Local governments have been plagued with so many damage suits that it's hampering police protection, public education and other services. For hundreds of cities, liability-insurance rates have soared out of sight. Some city officials and police officers are quitting because they can't get insurance. The taxpayers, of course, are stuck with the in-surance costs and multimillion-dollar judgments. Social workers, day-care operators and even ministers are taking new precautions to limit their exposure to lawsuits. Many ministers, for example, will no longer visit the homes of parishioners who are in trouble; too many have walked into situations that ended up in court. And many teachers in day-care centers are afraid of lawsuits if they show affection for the children.

Space telescope to help unravel mysteries

ALTIMORE - From near the edge of the universe and the beginning of time, a dazzling stream of data will soon flow to the Johns Hopkins campus. It will transform astronomy and, perhaps, mankind's view of itself.

This August, a space telescope will be put in orbit. It weighs 12 tons, is the size of a bus and is more precise than the finest watch. Its optical mirror is eight feet in diameter and the average deviation of its surface from a perfect curve is less than 11 nanometers (billionths of a meter). It will be a "clean window" on the universe, astronomy unfiltered by Earth's atmosphere.

Astronomy looking through the atmosphere has been likened to "birdwatching from the bottom of a lake." A small "window" was opened in 1983 with an infrared astronomical satellite. The new telescope will see therefore seven times deeper in

Just to use the space telescope to aim it - will require astronomy never done before. In a room insulated from vibration, shockproof machines make 7,000 passes up and down photographic plates - 1,500 of them — mapping the universe. That is complicated, because our galaxy is composed of bodies in motion, the galaxy is in motion and the universe, which has uncounted galaxies, is expanding.

Earth-based telescopes can observe entities eight-billion light years away. The space telescope will see at least 12-billion light years away. It is a time machine for studying light (the evidence of processes) perhaps 85 percent of the way to the "edge" (whatever that might mean) of the universe - light from events 85 percent of the way back to the Big Bang, the beginning of time 15 billion or so years ago.

Astronomy has exerted a powerful pull on mankind's imagination, and hence on philosophy and theology. For centuries, and until recently, science was considered a subverter of religion. But if a sense of awe about the mysteries and astonishingness of life is the wellspring of the religious impulse, contemporary astronomy could nourish that impulse.

Galileo's discovery, 375 years ago, of satellites orbiting Jupiter was dispiriting to people who thought: If things orbit things other than Earth, then Earth probably is not the center of the universe and mankind, too, may be a somehow marginal phenomenon. But consider what we are about to see.

The space telescope will peer into space that is dustier and more violent than mankind has thought when speaking of the clear and peaceful heavens. Yet a strange serenity can come from contemplating

Early in this century, analysis of light revealed that many galaxies are racing away from us. This fact, and the 1965 discovery that the universe is bathed in radiation, suggested that the universe is still expanding from an explosion - the Big Bang - that created it. And there is a wonderful literally, a cause for wonder balance in the aftermath of the explosion, a balance illustrated by the timely arrival of Halley's comet. Perhaps the space telescope, by focusing on the most distant (fastest moving) galaxies, can determine whether the universe's expansion is slowing. If it is, this question is posed: Might expansion stop, and there be a collapse. Had the Big Bang been smaller, and the expansion less vigorous, it might have collapsed back upon itself in a few minutes or in a few million years. (Were this mass to re-explode, it would confirm the Oscillating Theory of the universe. The Steady State Theory holds that the universe constantly creates matter as fast as it consumes it, and is eternal.)

Had the Bang been more violent, it might have dispersed the dust of Creation so chaotically that there could have been no organization of matter conducive to life. (Think how closely calibrated Earth's orbit around the sun must be: how Earth's atmosphere must shield some rays and admit others)

The continuing consequences of the Big Bang is theologically suggestive because the consequences are staggeringly improbable. Contemporary astronomy strengthens the impulse to believe that, say, Dante's idea of God is at least slightly more plausible than the idea that an accidental explosion caused the dust of Creation to evolve into Dante.

Or Cal Ripken, who plays for the Orioles down the street from Johns Hopkins. Think of it. The state-ofthe art shortstop and state-of-the art science, both in Baltimore. Was Renaissance Florence in its glory more glorious?

Inaccurate airport label stirs questions

t is bad enough that some citizens of Midland try to give away our school lands to neighboring school districts. But now Ron Gilmore, staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram, is trying to give away our airport. In his article on page 1, section C, Dec. 27, Gilmore refers to the Midland-Odessa Air Terminal." The MID-LAND REGIONAL AIRPORT (its correct title) is owned in total by the city of Midland, is part of the city of Midland and was so named by the Midland City Council.

Such blatant carelessness with facts raises questions about the obectivity and reportorial accuracy of the rest of the newspaper's contents.

You refer to Ms. Davis' letter as junk mail. It was in fact only a simple informative letter expressing concerns over finding junk mail is something you don't read. You throw it away. But it is obvious that you read the letter thoroughly enough to be angered.

If Ms. Davis' letter had not been published, then we wouldn't have heard from you and you wouldn't have heard from me. This is called freedom of speech.

Terri, believe it or not, but Christmas is a religious holiday to which many millions of people hold very dear. For other people to capitalize on this holy occassion by demeaning the spirit brings out the ire of religious people. This is one of the rights of freedom of religion.

Finally, Terri, Ms. Davis was not "forcing" her point of view. She was merely voicing her disgust which in turn has allowed you and me to form our own point of view.

Thank you Ms. Davis. I will buy my cards elsewhere.

> I often wondered how one would feel in a situation like that. Two days before Christmas I believe I experienced this feeling in a small way, when a letter reached me that had been on the way for three months.

> I am not a Scrooge - the Postal Services move mountains of mail, especially in December, which everyone appreciates.

> I do, however, have a criticism: On the last leg of its journey my letter was sent from Chicago Nov. 25. The next postmark is Midland Dec. 11. Slow, but you could live with it.

> My letter (not yet 'my letter') was then returned to sender in Chicago for 10 cents more postage, finally reaching me Dec. 23. Chicago to Midland in 29 days. Like most people I would gladly have paid a C.O.D. charge to avoid delay.

over U.S. foreign aid is waged between two extremes. Some say we should cut government-togovernment aid and increase private investment. Others insist that more government-to-government aid rather tnan more private investment is the answer. In fact, neither will work without the other.

Government-to-government aid should be used as fertilizer to prepare the ground for private investment and thus for economic growth. Aid must be conditioned on the recipient country's willingness to adopt policies which will attract more private investment, because private investment brings with it something government aid does not: the technical expertise and training programs which will produce real progress for the recipient country's

Private investment also has an additional advantage. It is not limited by budget restraints in the donor country. Its only limitation is the investment climate of the recipient country. We must base our policy on the recognition of the fact that our strength, both at home and abroad, is not what we do through government, but what we do through the private sector.

We should also explore how we can do more, through modification of personal and corporate income taxes, import and export tariffs, and other devices to encourage American companies to do more business

Part of the intellectual flotsam of the 1960s and 1970s was the notion that the multinational corporation was an international outlaw, sucking cheap labor and natural resources out of the Third World and giving. nothing in return. In fact, big business has already done a great deal to spur economic development in the Third World. It should be encouraged to do more.

Fear of foreign competition and loss of jobs is contributing to rising support for protectionism. While this is admittedly a painful immediate problem, in the long run we gain by having more prosperous countries in the Third World. Our two best customers in the world are Japan and Canada - both highly-developed countries.

No matter how much aid the West provides, it undercuts itself by establishing trade policies that hurt Third World countries. Some nations, including the United States, discourage economic development by imposing tariffs on finished or partially-finished goods from a country but not on the raw materials from the same country that go into those goods. The West also hurts the Third World, in which 70 percent of the poorest people depend on agriculture to live, by price supports for domestic crops that otherwise might well be imported.

Eliminating policies such as these will cause short-term hardship at home. They will enhance the prospects for economic growth in the Third World, however, and in doing so will make all of us more prosperous and secure in the long term.

Tone of joint New Year's speeches good omen for nations

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

The conciliaory message Soleader Mikball Gorbachev delivered on television to the American people indicated he may really want to avoid a war-threatening confrontation with us over arms control or other dan-

The warmly appealing address people should convince those who watched and listened that he is a man of peace and not the Hitler-like warmonger he has been called by the Soviet propaganda media.

Nothing said by the Soviet ruler or the president implied any substantive change in their respective posi-tions on major issues. The importance of the event was in the tone of what was said and the opportunity it gave President Reagan for the first time to speak personally to the peo-ple of the Soviet Union on television. It was also an unprecedented ex-change of a New Year's message on TV by the Soviet and American lead-

The State Department had sought President Reagan made simulta- for nearly a year without success to neously on Soviet TV to the Russian obtain Soviet permission for the obtain Soviet permission for the president to address the Soviet people on Russian televison. It was not until Dec. 20 that the Soviet Ambassador in Washington informed Secretary of State George Shultz that Mr. Gorbachev was agreeable to an exchange of New Year's messages. It was also agreed that nothing would be deleted from what the other leader said in his message.

The Soviet leader's message was welcomed by President Reagan and generally considered restrained, although both took the opportunity to make their opposing cases on devel-opment of a space defense system ers to the people of the other against nuclear missiles.

The president was allowed for the first time to tell the Soviet people that we believe every individual is "a unique creation of God" and our Democratic system "is founded on belief in the rights of the individual, including the rights of freedom of speech, of assembly, of movement and worship."

For the Soviet totalitarian, atheist regime to let the president of the United States talk that way directly to the Russian people must mean something encouraging

What prevents me from being carried away by a sense of utopia is the continued gap between Soviet words and deeds. While the Soviet leader is assuring us that "it is essential to in his expressed willingness to coop-start mending the deficit of trust in erate with President Reagan in Soviet-American relations," we learn the Soviets are reportedly sending SAM anti-aircraft missiles to Libya which could threaten our Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

Mr. Gorbachev also tells us it is 'senseless" to seek security for oneself through new types of weapons and we must keep outer space peaceful. He does not tell us that the Soviets have the only anti-satellite system orbiting in space. Or that the Soviets have been engaged in reseach on space weapons for the past 15 years. Or that the reason we have a nuclear arms race is because of the Soviet military buildup, not the

that will assure "a safe prospect for peace," we can be thankful to our president for it. There can be no question in any reasonable person's mind that it was the restoration of our military strength and the president's strategic defense program that brought the Soviets back to the Geneva conference table and that makes Mr. Gorbachev appear so con-

However, as the Soviet leader said, it will not be easy to bridge the gap dividing the two countries on the arms control issue.

Let us hope the exchange of New Year's messages betweeen the two leaders in whose hands rests the destiny of the world will prove a good

LETTER FROM COLLEGE Spring semester to begin soon

By H.A. TUCK

This is the final week of pre-registration and early counseling for persons planning to attend Midland College's Spring Semester. Both returning and new students should pre-register in the Office of Student Services, Administration Building.

Hours this week are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Official registration days are Jan. 14 and 15. Those who received time permits when the pre-registered will be registered first.

Both daytime and evening classes will begin Jan. 20.

Chaparral Center has booked two concerts in the near future. "Loverboy" is scheduled for a Midland appearance Jan. 12 and Ray Charles is coming for his first Midland show on

And we just received word that Canadian singer Anne Murray has booked Chaparral Center for a concert on Feb. 25. Tickets will go on sale within a week or two.

There's a strong possibility that John McEnroe will return to Midland for a "Tennis Over America" exhibition match in early February. His opponent is expected to be Mats Wilander.

Back from a tournament in Mesa, Ariz., the Chaparrals now begin trek--king to Big Spring. They'll be there Friday and Saturday nights for the annual Howard College Doubleheader. Then it's back to Big Spring on Monday, Jan. 13 for a conference game with the Howard College Hawks.

We received a nice Christmas note from Jill Himmelman, who played on MC's only women's golf national championship team in 1982. Jill graduated last May from the University of South Florida and plans to return to Florida this month to try the women's professional mini-tour circuit. Jill is from Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada.

TROMPE L'OEIL

There are some tricks that decorators and designers use to achieve a "trompe l'oeil" (French for fool the eye). Select furniture with legs. Sofas and chairs that are solid to the floor prevent the eye from going beyond them. Because of this, do not cover chair legs with skirts. Choose chairs with slatted instead of solid backs. Look for objects d'art in glass or see-through plastic. Even a large coffee table, if it is glass, will not take any visual space. Keep fabrics on furniture in tone with the walls of the room. Use mirrors. Even one well-placed mirror can make room look bigger and brighter. Position furniture to work against a room's limitations. For example, a sofa placed at a 45-degree angle across a corner will eliminate boxiness in a small, square room.

For "tricks of the trade" come by and see our talented staff at WINDOW DECOR, 30 West Industrial Loop, 685-0875. We can help you achieve the look you want for your home with wall and window coverings. Call for a free inhome consultation. Hours: 8am-4:30pm Mon. thru Fri. and by appointment.

> HINT: Use double-duty furniture as a way a creating space.

Jury selection set in murder solicitation trial

By FRANK TROMBLEY Staff Writer

ODESSA - The trial of an Odessa couple on charges of solicitation of capital murder is slated to get under way with jury selection in 161st District Court Tuesday morning. Leonard Garcia, 42, and his 43year-old wife, Andrea, already serving prison terms for the 1983 fatal shooting of 36-year-old William T. Dowd at an Odessa motel, are specifically accused on two counts each of hiring Charlie Garrett to kill two witnesses against them in the murder of Dowd. The Garcias were indicted by an Ector County grand jury of the murder-for-hire charges shortly after their conviction for the murder of Dowd.

Garrett purportedly was to be paid a sum of money and a quantity of

In Minneapolis, Minn., with the two women in 1983, Garrett faked the murder of the two women, sent the Garcias a picture portraying their "dead bodies," and Garcia is alleged to have sent him $3,000, according to a probable cause statement. Garrett also allegedly received a quantity of heroin from Garcia during a later visit to Odessa.

Garrett was sentenced to 40 years in prison in November 1983 for the April 1982 murder of 29-year-old Michael Rheams of Odessa. However, the state court of criminal appeals in 1985 overturned Garrett's conviction on the grounds prosecutors had violated his right to a speedy trial and ordered him released from prison. The Garcias were scheduled for drugs for killing Dowd's widow, To-macene Dowd, and Brandy Williams. several times during 1985, but their several times during 1985, but their attorney, State Sen. Craig Washing-ton of Houston, successfully sought delays because of his legislative involvement.

Pretrial motions filed by Washington on behalf of the Garcias have contended charges against them should be dismissed because their rights to a speedy trial have been violated.

Judge Tryon Lewis, in whose 161st District Court the cases will be heard, rejected Washington's motions, holding court records showed Washington, not prosecutors, had sought trial-delays.

Construction to begin soon on Odessa postal facility

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Construction of the new northeast postal facility, with an estimated final cost ranging from $10.5 to $11.5 million, is scheduled to get under way in the next couple of weeks.

The $1.6 million contract to build the 34,240 square foot facility was awarded to J.W. Cooper Construction Co. Dec. 30 by the U.S. Postal Service. Cooper Construction is the firm that handled the recently completed expansion and remodeling of the Ector County Courthouse

The new postal facility will be located immediately north of the Permian Plaza on about four acres of land at the northeast corner of the intersection of east 52nd and 53rd street. The location was chosen on the basis of economic and population studies done by U.S. Postal Service offi-cials in Dallas. About 10 other sites were considered during the selection process.

When completed in about 11 months the facility will handle about 42 of the 100 routes that now operate out of the downtown main post office. The new facility will offer the same services as the main post office, with four manned windows and self-service postal vending machines.

Director of UTPB's technology center to address business group

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Area business people attending the January 9 luncheon meeting of the West Texas International Trade Forum at Mission Country Club will hear the director of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's new Center for Energy, Technology and Economic Diversification speak on the area's potential for export of technologies and Troyt B. York will explain how Permian Basin businesses can expand marketing prospects by keying in on existing federal export

Those attending the trade forum luncheon will also hear a discussion concerning the organization's participation in the World Trade Center NETWORK, a new computerized global communication and data base

In addition to providing a special link between buyers and sellers worldwide, NETWORK makes it possible for business firms of every size to take advantage of the convenience and flexibility of electronic message systems which, heretofore, have been primarily available to multinational corporations.

Reservations need to be made by Monday by calling the Greater Odessa Chamber of Commerce Economic Development Division. All area business people are invited to attend.

The Midland High Bulldogs slopped their way to a high scoring 87-82 District 4-5A basketball victory over the Abilene High Eagles at Chaparral Center Saturday night, but you can bet that MHS coach Jack Stephenson is putting the game in the win column.

"We were horrible," was the way Stephenson described his team's play, but quickly added, "a win is a win is a win. I'm just glad to get out of there with a win. It counts and no one will know the difference when the season is over.

"If we had played as well as we did Thursday against Big Spring, we may have won the game by 20 points. We were so sloppy that it was unbelieveable. We scored 87 points

From Staff Reports
ABILENE — Midland Lee's defending District 4-5A basketball champion Rebels climbed right back into the thick of the 1985 loop race here Saturday night with a surprisingly easy 54-33 victory over Abilene Cooper.

Cooper, one of the district teams favored to make a strong title run, didn't have a player in double figures as Lee's stingy defense made a mockery of the Cou-

On the other hand, Lee's Anthony Dickens pumped in a season high 22 points and Eddie Riley added 12 as the Rebels coasted.

Lee did get off to a horrible start, scoring only five points in the first period. However, Cooper scored only nine in the first period and lost the lead for good in the second period when the Rebels outscored Cooper by a 147 margin. Lee then put the game

Super Eric dons cape in time to set playoff record

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) - Eric Dickerson, just an ordinary running back for most of this holdout-plagued season, donned Superman's cape again Saturday just in time to propel the Los Angeles Rams to within a game of their second Super Bowl.

With a mighty assist from a defense that shut out the Dallas Cowboys for the first time in 36 postsea son contests, Dickerson rushed for a National Football League playoff NFC carries were a 55-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage of the second half and a 40-yard TD sweep 56 seconds into the fourth quarter. The first run opened up a dreary game after a first half in which the Rams held a 3-0 lead. A little more than a minute later, Mike Lansford kicked a 34-yard field goal following

"Not too shabby was it," said Dickerson, who ran for 1,234 yards this year and failed to make the NFC Pro Bowl squad after setting an NFL rea fumble by Kenny Duckett on the cord with 2,105 yards in 1984. "I know some people have been saying I wasn't playing hard. But I love to play football. Every time I go out, I give my best because it might be my last game," Dickerson said.

"He played as great a game as I've Robinson said of Dickerson, who broke the playoff record of 206 yards set by Keith Lincoln of the San Diego Chargers in the 1963 AFL champi-

"We're just something, there's no great mystery. We say here we come, stop us," said Jeter, who plays primarily in passing situations after missing most of last season with a back problem. "It's left up to the individual players to want it more. That's our scheme."

"Gary Jeter was absolutely outstanding, he has been all year since we've been able to give him a rest," said Robinson, who coached Jeter in college at Southern California and acquired him for the Rams in 1983

from the Giants.

While Robinson was effusive about Jeter and Dickerson, he said: 'It was a total team victory - offense, defense and special teams." It was the defense that impressed Cowboys quarterback Danny White. 'I'm more impressed with the Rams than I was going in," said White, who besides being sacked five times was harried on numerous other attempts. "I haven't faced a better defense this year, and I played against the Bears. It was a very helpless feeling out there."

That helpless feeling suited Dickerson.

UTEP senior Larry Linne

By TED BATTLES Sports Editor

The University of Texas at El Paso may be a perennial candidate for Worst 10 recognition, but how many of the Top 20 regulars get to take a trip to Honolulu every other year and how many teams, outside of Wyoming, get to go to Australia for their bowl game?

Admittedly UTEP has had a forgettable football past over the last two decades, but Larry Linne, the wide receiver from Midland, sees better days ahead.

"We've had good recruiting the last three years. I think the talent is there. Bill Yung turned the program around. He did all he could do," says the departing senior, "It will be up to the new coach to finish the job."

The Miners' win over defending national champion BYU offers evidence that there indeed is talent on the El Paso campus. UTEP inflicted one of only two regular season defeats suffered by the Cougars. The other was to Rose Bowl champion

But an equally high point of the season was the final game trip to Australia to play Wyoming in the first Australian Bowl.

DESPITE THE fact that the sponsors ran out of money and the game failed to fill the 105,000-seat stadium, Linne reports that the fans "Really want to continue the game with a new sponsor. They feel they could really pack the stadium."

The first sign of trouble came on the final leg of the 74-hour trip from El Paso, to Hawaii, to Auckland, to Sydney. "The sponsors ran short of money so we had to bus from Sydney to Melbourne, it's about the same distance as Dallas to El Paso and took about 12 hours."

Dolphins rally past Browns, 24-21

MIAMI (AP) - With Miami dangling perilously close to elimination from the National Football League playoffs Saturday, Dan Marino and the Dolphins did what they do best find a way to win games in the Orange Bowl that seem like hopeless

Marino brought the Dolphins' high-powered offense to life midway through the third quarter and Miami's defense turned stingy after Cleveland built an 18-point lead to key a 24-21 come-from-behind victory.

The triumph on Coach Don Shula's 56th birthday sends the Dolphins into the AFC title game for the third time in four years. Mi-

York Jets for the AFC AFC crown three years ago and downed the Pittsburgh Steelers last season but went on to lose to the Washington Redskins and San Francisco 49ers, respectively, in Super Bowls XVII and XIX.

"That was a gut check if there ever was one," Shula said after Ron Davenport scored touchdowns on runs of 1 and 31 yards to pace the comeback. "I told them at halftime that we were going to find out what kind of team we had.

"To their credit, they were able to come back and win the game," Shula added. "Now we just want to win two more."

Marino, who completed 25 of 45 sses 238 yards, lit a fire under the Dolphins with a 74-yard drive he capped with a 6-yard touchdown pass to Nat Moore that cut Miami's huge deficit to 21-10 with 5:13 left in the third quarter.

Davenport scored on his 31-yard run 3:42 later and the reserve fullback plowed into the end zone from 1-yard out to complete a nine-play, 73-yard march that provided the winning touchdown with 1:57 to go

Miami's Rod Davenport (30) pushes his way through the Cleveland defense as he scores the winning TD Saturday in the Orange Bowl.

The comeback spoiled a 161-yard, a loser of Browns rookie quarter-two touchdown rushing effort by back Bernie Kosar in his return to Cleveland's Earnest Byner and made the stadium where he led the University of Miami to a national championship two years ago. Byner, one of two Cleveland runners who gained more than 1,000 yards this season, scored on a 21-yard that gave Cleveland a 14-3 lead just before halftime. The second-year running back burst 66 yards for another score 3:38 into the third period as the AFC Central Division champions built a commanding 21-3 advantage.

"We expected them to be tough," Shula said. "They hadn't played good defense the past three weeks, but we could see from watching film that they had a good team.'

PATIENCE WAS the key to Miami's turnaround, both offensively and defensively. Marino never hit the panic button and defensively, the Dolphins kept fighting to wrest control from a Cleveland offense that rolled up 251 yards rushing.

Veeck helped change the face of baseball

(First of two parts) Bill Veeck jarred baseball to its very foundations, or so it seemed, when he sprung a midget on the national game. But what if it had been

When Veeck, who made the Sport Shirt famous, died the other day, baseball lost one of its most colorful and innovative figures.

Veeck was someone who came before his time as a baseball owner, and died well beyond his time.

Veeck lost a leg as a marine, smoked excessively, and suffered pain for years. That he reached 70 years defied Harrah's line on his survival expectations.

He'll forever be remembered as the man who sent a midget to bat in a major league baseball game. It shocked the world, but was typically Veeck showmanship.

MIDLAND'S PAUL Rea, who had an insider's view of the Eddie Gaedel incident, feels it would be a shame if that was all Veeck was remembered for.

"Veeck should be credited with altering the face of baseball," Rea says, "Many of the changes he attempted to institute and were opposed by other owners, have come

But Rea, president of Spectrum 7, was in on the Gaedel episode from the start.

Rea grew up as part of the Sportsman's Park scene. His mother and father were ticket directors for both the Cardinals and Browns. His memories date back to the days when he watched the Gas House Gang and the Gehrig-Ruth Yankees as a kid.

"Later, I worked for Bill DeWitt, Sr., then owner of the Browns, as an usher, at the turnstiles and in concessions.

After getting his business degree,

Rea went to work in the Browns minor league system with Hank Peters as his boss

And when the club was sold to Veeck, "I was 23 and a bachelor. Veeck had a wooden leg and it was tough to drive, so I drove him to his off-season speaking engagements. He'd go to little towns five or six times a week to make speeches. I spent a lot of time during that offseason of 1950-51 with Veeck.

It was on one of the speaking trips that Rea suggested the Browns hire nine midgets. "The idea was to bring them into the game in the last of the ninth as pinch hitters, no matter what the score.

"It wasn't an original idea. Bill had already read about a midget batting in a Thurber story and had been thinking about the possiblities. But perhaps the conversation planted the seed in his mind."

VEECK THOUGHT of the midget as a promotional stunt for the 50th anniversary of Falstaff. "He wanted a big celebration.

"Actually, Veeck had "No. 1/8 Gaedel' listed on the scorecard for two weeks, but no one noticed.

"Finding a uniform was a problem. All of the bat boys' uniforms were too big. Bill DeWitt, Jr., was 10 at the time and wore a uniform as a mascot. Bill's uniform was used, but if you remember the photos, it was

AUG. 19, 1951 arrived. Detroit was the opponent. A big paper birthday cake was wheeled out to the plate before the game and Gaedel* emerged from the cake carrying one of those miniature bats to which team pennants were attached.

"Frank Saucier, with whom I played ball in college, was playing off his cleats, just like the major lea-right field for the Browns. He hit .446 once at Wichita Falls, but had a bad arm." Rea sets the stage.

Frank was scheduled to lead off the bottom of the first, which is when Gaedel made his pinch-hitting appearance. Bob Cain was pitching and Bill Swift was the catcher. "The Tiger manager (Red Rolfe) came out of the dugout to protest and plate umpire Jim Hurley had some doubts about the legality of a midget batting, but Zach Taylor, the Browns manager, emerged from the dugout waving a contract, signed and sealed."

"Gaedel offered such a small target that Swift sat down with his legs under him. Gaedel still walked on four pitches," Rea remembers.

"Eddie was quite a showman. He tipped his cap on the way to first and kicked the bag to knock the dirt guers do. Some versions claim that Eddie walked with the bases loaded. to force in a run, but that isn't true. There was no one on and the runner for Gaedel reached third base, but didn't score. It would have been nice if he had." Veeck planned it as a one-time stunt, but American League President Will Harridge ruled on it the next day, making sure it didn't happen again by declaring it detrimental to the image of the game, or

As for the uniform, it's a conversation piece in the Bill DeWitt, Jr., den. "It's hanging in a frame and Bill will give it to the Hall of Fame eventually.

> Georgetown 110, Providence 79 LANDOVER, Md. - Reggie Williams scored 23 points as 11th-ranked Georgetown ripped Providence. The 110 points marked the first time the Hoyas have gone over 100 since beating Seton Hall 113-73 in 1982. The victory evened Georgetown's record in the Big East to 1-1. The Hoyas, 10-2 overall, had come into the game with a twogame losing streak. Providence, 8-4 overall including three straight losses, fell to 0-2 in conference play under its new head coach, Rick Pitino.

Kentucky 80, Vanderbilt 71 NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Kentucky forward Kenny Walker scored 25 points as the 12th-ranked Wildcats held off a frantic second-half rally by Vanderbilt to post a SEC victory. The win in their SEC opener al-appeared to have the game put away in the first half behind the inside power of Walker and the outside shooting eye of guard Ed Davender. Iowa 60, Illinois 59 CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Iowa freshlowed the Wildcats to improve to 10-

1 for the season. Vanderbilt is now 7-

4 overall and 1-1 in the conference. Kentucky

man Roy Marble hit a free throw with 30 seconds remaining to give the Hawkeyes a Big Ten victory over No. 14 Illinois, ending a 31-game home-court winning streak for the Illinois missed a chance to win when a 15-foot corner jump shot by Anthony Welch fell short with five seconds remaining and Iowa grabbed the rebound.

The winning streak at Champaign was one short of the record set at the school in 1953. Illinois fell to 10-3 on the season and 1-1 in Big Ten play. Iowa improved its record to 11-4 overall and 1-1 in the conference.

UA-Birmingham 66, Old Dominion

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) - Guard James Ponder scored 21 points to lead 16th-ranked Alabama-Birmingham to a Sun Belt Conference victory over Old Dominion.

The victory lifted Alabama-Birmingham to 13-2 on the season, 1-0 in the conference, while Old Dominion dropped to 5-4, 1-1. Alabama-Birmigham held Gattison to 11 points, while Charles had only two. Two of Old Dominion's chief threats, starting center Sylvester

Charles and Kenny Gattison, didn't finish the game. Texas-El Paso 62, Utah 52 EL PASO — Dave Feitl sank 17 points to lead No. 19 Texas-El Paso to a victory over Utah in a WAC game.

It was the 13th straight win for the Miners, now 13-1 overall this season and 2-0 in conference play. Utah fell to 8-5 and 0-2 in the WAC. Juden Smith was the only other . Miner in double figures with 14 points. Jerry Stroman contributed 25 points and Manuel Hendrix added 13.

The game was tied seven times in the first half as Texas-El Paso barely managed to keep up with aggressive inside play of Utah, which built up a 5-point margin twice. But the Miners soon warmed up and had a 27-24 lead at halftime.

Va. Tech 85, W. Kentucky 71 BLACKSBURG, Va. - Dell Curry scored 26 points, including 12 in the first 71/2 minutes of the second half, as Virginia Tech's 20th-ranked Hokies ripped Western Kentucky's Hilltoppers.

Curry, who had missed one game and a week of practice after spraining both ankles, was only 2-of-10 from the field in the first half but hit 8-of-13 shots after intermission when the Hokies blew the game open. Tech, 11-2, raced to a 13-6 lead with 12:41 left in the first half, but the Hilltoppers battled back to tie it at 14-14 on Bryan Asberry's jumper with 8:35 to go.

Patient Buffaloes take time in beating Tulsa, 52-48

LINNE-

Please see LININE, Page 3C

And the day of the game, the Australian Rules football field, with the four goal posts at each end, hadn't been marked off, another matter of money

"Over there, every thing is union and they demand their money up front...and since there was none. the one-time Midland Lee wide receiver relates. "...but then the government stepped in."

Despite the first-bowl snafus, as far as Linne was concerned, it was an upbeat nine-day trip.

The Miners' timing was perfect, arriving in Australia with the first day of summer, Dec. 1. "We ran around in shorts and saw the 'topless' girls on the beaches."

The country impressed the young American, "It's beautiful, some of it's like Tennessee and other parts like the area around San Antonio," Linne said. "But what really impressed me was the people, so friendly and they really like Texans."

AUSTRALIA IS not a stranger to American football, "Although it's called 'Gridiron' there. They call soccer 'football' and also have rugby and Australian Rules Football, Linne explains. "But they are familiar with the game. They get ABC Monday Night football and have even started teams in New South Wales, Sydney and Melbourne. In fact, New South Wales and Melbourne played right before our

The American teams were accorded "visiting royalty" treatment. The Aussies staged a parade, featuring the UTEP and Wyoming squads. And Linne and a Wyoming player appeared on Good Morning, Australia, the Down Under equivalent to Good Morning, America, for a five to eight minute spot. "They picked right away on my Texas accent.

As for the game, "Luther Johnson who also played at Lee, returned a kick off 100 yards, which put him No. 2 in the nation in kickoff returns for the season. Players like Luther are among the reasons I think UTEP has the talent."

It was also a good game for Linne, who wound up as the leading receiver with seven catches. "That means they are all records, since it was the first game." His statistics would have been even better if a 65-yard TD catch hadn't been called back. On the way back, as a bonus, the team spent one day in Hawaii.

AND WHILE he won't be back to participate, he gets his marketing degree in May, Linne expects life to get better for UTEP football.

'Among the improvements Yung did manage to get were a $500,000 turf for the Sun Bowl, weight rooms and they've just about finished the new dorms. The big need now is a training table. I actually lost weight eating in the school cafeteria during the season, although they did take us down to Luby's cafeteria a couple of nights a week this year....that While Linne won't be around to contribute to UTEP's football revival, there still may be some football in his future and maybe marriage in the fall. He'll be going to Dallas next week to pick up the Fellowship of Christian Athletes' Athlete-of-the-Year award and then go to Purgatory for some play-it-safe skiing.

'I can't take too many chances on the slopes," he confides, "Several profootball teams (USFL, CFL and NFL) have been in contact with me. In fact, I've been getting letters since my sophomore year, so I'm working out regularly and working on speed work.

Then, maybe, after the pros, he'll return for a longer look at Australia "and some skiing.

It also broke Willie Ellison's singlegame rushing mark of 247 and represented 78 percent of the Rams' 316 total yards. Brock completed just six of 22 passes for 50 yards and was minus-4 in the second half.

Cowboys quarterback Danny White, meanwhile, was 24 of 43 for 217 with three interceptions. Tony Dorsett was limited to 58 yards in 17 carries as the Cowboys never got beyond the Rams 20.

Lansford's first-period field goal that gave the Rams a lead they held for the rest of the half was largely due to the work of Henry Ellard. First Ellard returned Saxon's 53yard punt 21 yards to the Cowboys 38. Then, on first down, he caught a short sideline pass from Brock at the 31, spun away from Everson Walls, and continued down to the Dailas 17 as neither team's conservative offense could take it much beyond midfield.

While Jeter and Irvin were controlling the Cowboys. Dallas was being equally stingy. The defense deflected three Brock passes at the line of scrimmage, two by Ed "Too Tail" Jones. Walls tipped a Brock pass into the air, then dove to pick it off and halt another Los Angeles possession.

Walls had another interception nullified by an offsides call against teammate Randy White.

Dallas' biggest threat came in the third quarter, when it moved 62 yards to the Rams 20.

But Irvin knocked down a pass for Doug Coshie in the end zone, Jeter stopped Dorsett for a 2-yard loss; Kevin Greene sacked White for a 2yard loss, then Irvin knocked down a fourth-down pass. The Cowboys went for the first down instead of the field goal because Septien had to set up the kick three plays later.

Eventually we knew things would turn around," said linebacker Hugh Green, who led Miami with eight tackles and one assist. "We were saying, 'be patient,' be patient.' After the offense scored that first touchdown, we knew we could do

Cleveland, whose 8-8 regular-season record was the worst of any division titlist in NFL history, entered the game 10%-point underdogs. But Coach Marty Schottenheimer said giving Miami a scare only to lose was little consolation.

"I've always been a strong believer that nothing good ever comes out of losing," he said.

"I told the team - and I really believe this - that the only thing we did was run out of time," Schottenheimer added. "We didn't run out of effort.

Miami moves into the conference championship game against the winner of Sunday's AFC semifinal between the New England Patriots and Los Angeles Raiders. If the Raiders win, the game will be in Los Angeles: if the Patriots win, the champion-

Panthers, Bobcats keep up with Bulldogs, 2-0

From Staff Reports

Odessa Permian and San Angelo kept pace with Midland High in the District 4-5A basketball race Saturday night with victories at home.

Permian raised its loop mark to 2-0 with an 86-64 win over 0-2 Big Spring while 2-0 San Angelo routed 0-2 Odessa High by an 89-68 margin.

Permian got 25 points from Todd

Evans and 10 from both Parker

Hager and Lance Watkins. The Panthers outscored the Steers in every quarter even though Big Spring got a 24-point outing from sophomore sensation Brian Mayfield, who had 30 points against Midland High Chris Lowry bombed in a district best of 37 points to lead the San Angelo Bobcats while Ricky Ryan had 14 and Scott Bartek 18. David Hulse completed the four-pronged attack with 11. Paul Chavez had a good outing from Paul Chavez with 27 points and Ed Lewis had 12.

San Angelo took control early and held a 44-26 lead at the half and only outscored the Bronchos by three in the second half.

Despite the loss, AHS coach Gerald bound well."

Coppedge wasn't disappointed in the loss. "If we had played as well field, hitting against Permian as we did against Midland, we would have won Thursday. I think we saw one of the best teams in the league tonight," said

Coppedge.
While Stephenson was unimpressed with his troops, the game see some improvement. could be classified as exciting if you like close games. MHS led 10 different times in the game and the Eagles Odessa High and San Angelo next also led 10 times and there were 11 ties thrown in to boot. Both teams could be 40 with Cooper coming to had high leads of six points.

The Bulldogs didn't take control of the action until the fourth period when a Mackey layup busted a 61-61 tie. Later, Sears slopped in a funky hook shot for a 69-63 lead and the Bulldogs protected that margin down the stretch.

The taller and sky crane looking Eagles, who led by a narrow 47-46 margin at the half, got to within 77-75, but Mackey answered with a three-point play to squash the rally.

Mackey scored 21 of his points in the first half when none of the Bulldogs were clicking. Fortunately, that kept the Bulldogs close and Sears began to get hot in the second half after only eight points in the first

Lee girls rip Cooper, up record to 4-0

By ERIC SCHURER Sports Writer

Things are beginning to look very familiar for Midland Lee girls coach Shirley Stephenson, and at this point of the season, that's good news for Rebel fans.

After upping its District 4-5A record to 40 with a 76-43 pasting of winless Abilene Cooper, Lee inched one step closer to matching last season's opening 8-0 mark. Saturday afternoon's cakewalk was even easier than the score would indicate.

The Cougars, 0-4, 0-15 on the year, never had a chance. Not after Lee's Louise Brown hit on six of the Rebels' first eight points enroute to a 12-2 lead. From there, Lee's pressure defense had Cooper running up the down staircase.

"We had one of those days when everybody seemed to be playing well," Stephenson said. "But maybe down the line, we'll have a day where everybody isn't playing well. That's when you just have to try harder and hope to outhustle 'em.

Lee stretched to leads of 13 at the end of the first quarter, 26 points at the half and up to the final margin of 33 in the final period.

And the Rebels did it without leadtending a family funeral, and junior Regina Callicutt, a 25-point contributor in Thursday's win over Odessa High. Callicutt went down early in the first half with an ankle sprain, but should be ready when the Rebs

But according to Cooper coach Bobby Pierson, the Rebels will be a tough team to beat in the upcoming district wars.

"This is the most talented team I've seen," Pierson said, including Abilene High, the other previously unbeaten in district play. "AHS doesn't have the depth that Lee does, if it comes to that. I'm very impressed with Lee."

The Rebels were able to display a killer instinct in finishing off the Cougars. After getting out to the early lead, Lee continued rolling up points with its defense.

In the second half, Stephenson called off the hounding press, but the Rebels were still able to increase their lead. Stephenson credits that to a game eariler in the year at the Andrews tournament when Lee blew a big halftime lead and lost the

"I think maybe that helped us, we don't take a game for granted anymore," Stephenson said.

Irwin gains Bahamas tie with Hoch

(AP) - Hale Irwin rode a back nine of 29 and an unbroken finishing string of four consecutive birdies to a tie for the lead with Scott Hoch Saturday in the third round of the new Bahamas Classic.

"Just trying to stay up with the young fellows," said the 40-year-old Irwin after he'd tied the course record at the Paradise Island Golf Club with an 8-under-par 64.

"That's the good news. The bad news is that there's still one day to go," Irwin said after completing 54 holes in 202, 14 shots under par in the $300,000 tournament that serves as the unofficial kickoff event for the 1986 PGA Tour schedule.

Hoch, winner of three tour events, moved up with a third round 67 in warm, sunny, muggy weather. That was good enough to put him in the deadlock with Irwin going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

It was two shots back to Ed Fiori, at 204 after a 69.

The three young men who shared the second round lead — Bob Tway, rookie Davis Love III and Bob Lohr couldn't keep pace.

Tway matched par 72 and was at 205. Love had a 73 and was tied at 206 with Jeff Sluman, who had a 69. And Lohr took a 74 that left him tied at 207 with Mark McCumber, who had

He started the string with a 9-iron shot to within five feet on the 11th. On the par-5 13th, he lashed a 4-wood out of a fairway bunker then dropped a 35-foot eagle putt. Irwin holed an 8-foot putt on the 15th, hit a 7-iron to four feet for birdie on the 16th, set-up a 15-foot birdie putt with a fairway wood on the 17th and then finished with a 2-iron shot to within three feet on the 18th.

Norris holds Spalding Invite lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) -Tim Norris, playing in relatively calm weather 10 miles from the ocean, shot a 3-under-par 68 on Saturday and held a 2-stroke lead over Dan Forsman after three rounds of the $200,000 Spalding Invitational golf tournament.

Norris birdied the last three holes on the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club course for his third consecutive score under 70, giving him a 54-hole total of 201. Forsman had a 4-under 68 at Del Monte, another of under 68 at Del Monte, another of the three courses used in the non-tour event, and had a 203 total. Norris, the California native who has won $295,000 in five seasons on the PGA tour, birdied the closing holes by chipping in from 40 feet and sinking putts from 25 and 50 feet.

Sunday's final round will be played on Pebble Beach, the oceanside course blessed by unusually calm weather on Thursday and Friday. Rain and strong winds arrived

Norris spoke for those golfers lucky enough to be away from Pebble on Saturday when he said, "I figured we had the best of it, so the weather was easy to take." Forsman said, "The golf gods were upset about all those low scores at Pebble Beach the first two days."

Norris had a 64, matching the offi-cial course record at Pebble, on Friday. Don Pooley also carded a 64 there Friday and was the second-round leader, one stroke ahead of

"I was fortunate with the course I played today, but I didn't take advantage of it," Pooley said after shooting a 73 at Carmel Valley to drop back to third, with a 205 total.

Dan Halldorson was fourth at 207 after a 71 at Carmel Valley. Danny Edwards had a 70 on the same course and was fifth at 208, followed by England's Howard Clark at 209 after a par 72 at Pebble.

Only two players, defending cham-pion Peter Oosterhuis with a 70 and pion Peter Oosterhuis with a 70 and Australia's Greg Norman with a 71, broke par at Pebble on Saturday. Those dropping out of contention because of high scores on the famous course included Andy North and Patty Sheehan with 75s, Alice Miller with a 77, Craig Stadler and Jan Stephenson with 78s, and Juli Inkster with a 79.

"Pebble Beach wasn't the place to be," Pooley-said.

Tech's Benford hits OT winner to defeat Houston

LUBBOCK (AP) - Senior guard Tony Benford dropped in a turnaround jumper as the buzzer sounded in overtime Saturday afternoon to lift Texas Tech to a wild 69-68 victory over a stunned University of Houston in Southwest Conference basketball action. Benford, who led the Red Raiders with 20 points, hit his game-winner after Houston's Alvin Frank-Hin sank a pair of free throws to put the Cougars on top 68-67 with three seconds remaining in the extra period. Tech, the defending SWC champion which raised its record to 6-6 overall and 1-0 in SWC action, did not use its final time out to set up a play following Franklin's two points.

Instead, Tobin Doda rifled the inbounds pass to the top of the Tech key. The pass was tipped by a Houston player and Tech's Greg Crowe before Benford grabbed it, temporarily lost it, turned and fired. Television replays showed that Benford was in the air when the buzzer sounded.

The Raiders led by as many nine points in the first half before settling for a 32-27 lead at intermission.

The Cougars, now 6-6 overall and 0-2 in league play, came back behind junior center Greg Anderson to grab a 49-48 lead with 10:25 remaining in regulation.

Tors end Ponies' unbeaten string

By ERIC SCHURER

LAMESA - There was no room left in the gym, but they squished more people

There was no championship on the line, but they played like champions. And when there was no time left on the clock and when this early showdown of unbeaten District 2-4A basketball powers between Andrews and Lamesa was over, it was the Tornados who left standing, 64-63.

Jerry Mason, the Tors senior whirlwind, banked in a short 15-foot jumper with five ticks left on the clock to push Lamesa over the top and drop the Mustangs from the ranks of the unbeaten. Andrews fell to 18-1, 1-1 in district play. Lamesa sits on top of the 2-4A standings at 2-0, 14-4. "Our hope was to get the ball to Jer-Tors coach Wayne Roberts said of the last second game-winner. But it could have been said about the entire MASON'S BUZZER-beating bankshot capped an outstanding night for the All-State senior and further endeared him to the handfuls of college scouts on hand. The 6-3 guard/forward totaled 33 points, 25 in the second half, to bring the Tors back from a three-point deficit in the second half.

"I had the hot hand and we play to get the ball to the hot man - and it was me, ess," Mason said. There was no guessing about it for the standing room only crowd packed into the Lamesa Middle School Gym. Mason was hot. As in "clear the floor and don't get in my way no more."

Trailing 32-30 at intermission, Mason, the middle of three basketball playing brothers from Lamesa, hit for 12 of the Tors 14 third quarter points. It was enough to propel Lamesa to a 47-41 lead early in the final period.

MASON WAS gunning from all angles. The corner, the top of the key, just inside the paint, down low with patented "hang time" moves. And yes, some powerful slam dunks.

"I feel like my range is anywhere inside half court," Mason said, only half joking, "but I try to keep it within reason. Usually I'll wait until I get past the time line.' Despite Mason's heroics, the Mustangs would not call it quits. Any team with an 18-0 record doesn't get that way by calling it quits. Nor by letting a little hot shooting stop them. The Mustangs combated Lamesa blow-for-blow in hopes of keeping their unblemished record intact. And for much of the night, it looked like they would. Louis Clay and Bernard Williams nearly matched Mason in long-range bombs, and Doodle Woods was scoring with workmanlike hustle underneath. And for most of the first half, Andrews found itself clinging to a slim lead.

BUT IN the end it was a one-man show - Mason's. "That's the kind of player he is," Rob-erts said of Mason. "He's the best player I'll ever coach. He's the kind of player when the game is on the line, he's the one you go to." Andrews head coach Frank Bice was quick to agree.

"Mason is one of the best players in

the state, but the whole Lamesa team has got outstanding talent," Bice said. Andrews is hardly without its own stars, however. Williams finished the night with 21 points, Woods had 16 and Louis Clay added 14 as the Mustangs were living up to their billing as one of the state's ranked 4A schools. Coming back from that six-point deficit, 47-41, in the fourth quarter, Andrews pulled within one, 56-55, with under 2:00 to Lamesa's lead see-sawed between one and three points until, with 20 seconds remaining, a 15-foot jumper by Williams put the Mustangs ahead, 63-62. Just enough time for the Tors to call time out and set up Mason's game-winner.

"I'M GOING to tell our kids 'We're 18-1, we had a good effort and we've got Pecos on Tuesday night," Bice said. We're different than Lamesa, we can't show up on the floor and out-talent clubs in this league. We've got to really work hard to win."

Andrews hosts Pecos in an 8 p.m. district game on Tuesday, while Lamesa will travel to Sweetwater.

Just in case you're interested, the next Lamesa-Andrews showdown will come Jan. 31 in Andrews. Next time, there just might be a championship on the line, but don't count on much room in the gym.

Natural stone and wood enhance Southwest decor

> Text by Julie A. Wiseman Photos by Cody Bell

The inviting, oak-panelled study features built-in book shelves and large windows.

Situated on a lot of more than one acre at Number 13 Hawthorne in Saddle Club North is a three bedroom, three bath ranch home with a delightful Southwest flavor.

Lubbock architect Bill Cox designed this home with many unusual features. The Southwest decor blends the strength of stone, the warmth of wood and the delicacy of fine fabrics.

Establishing a strong foundation for the Southwest flavor and the architectural exploits is the use of three types of flooring. To make use of brick, hardwood and plush carpet, the slab of this refreshingly unique home was poured at three levels.

A red brick floor in the entry way sets the mood of the home. Rather than being set in mortar, the bricks are carefully packed by hand into a bed of sand. This exquisite floor is continued in other parts of the home.

Stout columns of Arizona brown chist rock separate the entry from the large living area which is enhanced by a hardwood floor.

Please see SOUTHWEST, Page 2D

The entire kitchen, which features beautiful brick flooring, is designed with functionality in mind.

The alluring master bath is carpeted with a neutral color. while counters and a sunken spa are of terra cotta tile.

Wood tones create a feeling of warmth throughout the home, espe-cially in this room. A vaulted ceiling nked with beautiful Arkan pine with tongue-and-graove joints. Pine baseboards provide a contrast for the white, heavily-textured walls in this room, as well as throughout the entire home. Rough-hewn cedar frames the picture windows which line the entire west side of the living area and overlook a deck, just per-

On the south wall of the room, built-in ouk cabinets provide space for a television and storage, while surrounding a fireplace of the Arizona brown chist rock.

Living space expands

The living space in new homes is expanding. According to the Census Bureau, the amount of living space in the average new single-family home rose to a record high of 1,790 square feet in 1984 from a low of 1,690 square feet in 1982

Board of Realtors elects new president

Bohannan named chairman TRERC Advisory Committee

The Texas Real Estate Research Center (TRERC) at Texas A&M University recently elected Patsy Bohannan, owner of Bohannan Realtors, as chairman of the Advisory Committee.

Since 1983, Bohannan has been a member of this committee which oversees TRERC activities. She is replacing the late Lawrence Miller, Jr. of Dallas. The advisory committee, which represents the real estate profession and the general public, is appointed by the governor.

Bohannan was named 1985 Realtor of the Year by TAR. She is currently serving a second term as Region VI vice-president. TRERC conducts real estate research and is funded by a portion of the Texas real estate license fees.

Now the holiday season is over. It's time to take a good hard look in the mirror and face reality. You ate more than just holiday turkey and your body needs help.

So you take a deep breath and make one more New Year's resolution: to become a Jane Fonda or Arnold Schwarzenegger look-a-like.

This may seem like an impossible task, but there are several fitness centers in Midland offering to help you improve your physique.

"First," said Gary Maxfield, one of the owners of the Body Shop for Women and the Fitness Connexxion, "a person must realize that we can't control what they eat or how often they come in to work out or how hard they work once they get here. A person's dedication to the program we give them is up to them.

"We can set up a program for whatever body conditioning a person wants. But to see results, they have to put in the work. We don't promise anything we can't deliver," Maxfield said.

The Body Shop for Women, 4400 Midland Dr., offers memberships at $299 per year or $150 for membership fee and first months dues.

The main floor features Camstar and Paramount weight equipment, Olympic free weights and manual exercycles.

"The cardiovascular room is an area in which I think the Body Shop really stands out from the rest," Maxfield said. "We have electronic exercycles with color TVs, and electronic treadmills and a rowing machine. Each is equipped with heart rate monitors and calorie counters."

THE BODY Shop also has an aerobics room with continuous classes either by a live instructor or on video tape and water-aerobics classes by instructor. The pool is open for free-style or lap swimming. There is also a whirlpool, dry sauna, Turkish steam sauna, eucalyptus inhalation room, private shower and dressing areas, nursery facilities and a vanity area complete with blow dryers and curling irons.

Additional services — at additional cost — are lockers, Wolfe II tanning sessions and professional massages.

In the same shopping center with the Body Shop is its male counterpart, the Fitness Connexxion. Memberships start at $110 initiation fee plus monthly dues. There also are special cash programs available.

The Fitness Connexxion has Camstar, Icarian and Paramount weight equipment, and Olympic free weights.

In the cardiovascular area there are manual rowing machines, a Nautilus cyclone and electronic treadmills, exercycles with color televisions and horizontal bikes. There are also electronic rowing machines which can be programmed for the user to race the machine. This area also has a Stairmaster, a machine with moveable steps that can be programmed for the number of flights of stairs desired. These machines are all equipped with heart rate monitors and calorie counters.

A UNIQUE feature at the Fitness Connexxion is the Computerized Training Programming. It is only the third club in the United Stated to have this program and the only one in Texas, according to Maxwell.

The computer programs were designed by Larry Scott, a former Mr. America, Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia; and Barry Jenkins, head strength coach of Brigham Young University.

The program works by entering the man's strength, weight, height, measurements and other vital statistics into the computer along with the physical goals desired, such as body building or toning. The computer analyzes this information and designs a exercise program for the individual according to recommendations by Scott and Jenkins.

The facility offers a dry sauna, Turkish sauna, eucalyptus inhalation room, whirlpool, private shower and dressing areas and a vanity area stocked with blow dryers and personal items.

The Fitness Connexxion also offers, at extra charge, lockers and Wolfe II tanning sessions.

The Body Shop and The Fitness Connexxion are members of the Association of Physical Fitness Centers and therefore any membership to one of these clubs entitles the member to a reciprocal membership in an affiliate club, which would be useful during a business trip, vacation or if you are relocated permanently.

"The nice thing about Courthouse and Spa is that we offer a little of everything," said Dawn Feola, who oversees the club's general operation.

To begin the new year, Courthouse and Spa, 1012 Andrews Hwy., is offering a special initiation fee of $15. With this special the new member will receive a racquetball racket and a can of balls. Monthly dues vary by membership packages, but Ms. Feola said the average monthly cost is around $30 for singles.

THE COURTHOUSE offers its members racquetball, full-scale aerobics classes and water-aerobics classes, Nautilus weight equipment, Karate classes and separate whirlpools and saunas for men and women. The Courthouse also has a physical therapist, David Windsor, to help people who need special workout routines because of an injury or special weakness, Ms. Feola said.

"It's (Courthouse and Spa) kind of tucked away behind Handy Dan, so people don't see us, but we have a nice facility," Ms. Feola said.

The club's activities include working with the Big Brothers/Big Sisters organizations, racquetball tournaments, exhibitions and clinics.

"We've gone the duration so we know we have a good club and plan to be around a long time," Ms. Feola said. "I think Courthouse is at its best right now and we plan to make it better."

Another fitness spa that has withstood "the duration" is the YMCA.

The main branch is the Central YMCA, 400 N. Big Spring, which offers co-ed, men's and women's facilities or separate health club arrangements, depending on the membership package selected. Judy Reuter, the YMCA's adult fitness program director, said she feels the "Y" has more variety and volume of classes to offer its members than other local health clubs.

Carrying out a tradition of longstanding, Mignon and Bruce Pearson entertained with their annual onion soup party of Christmas Day. Although the couple cannot pinpoint the exact beginning of the event, it started sometime in the late 1960s and has turned into a three-genera tion affair for family friends.

Guests were invited to the Pearson home on Humble Avenue after four o'clock for soup, a variety of cakes and champagne. The serving table was decorated in a whimsical manner with Santa Claus figures and red candles and

The Pearsons' daughter, Rechal, home for the holidays from TCU, and their son, Guy Hall, his wife, Terry, and children, Alan and Natalie, were among the party guests. Natalie, who was born on Christmas Day, celebrated her seventh birthday at the

Ms. Reuter said, "There is such a wide variety of classes. We have what we call our 'Low-impact' class es, which are non-jumping, all the way through very advanced classes."

The regular membership provides co-ed facilities for all fitness classes, Nautilus and Universal weight equipment and training, jogging track, lap and open swimming, open gymnasium facilities, handball and racquetball courts and dressing and locker rooms for men and women. This membership is a $50 one-time membership fee plus $24.15 monthly bank draft.

Individual memberships for the Health Club facilities are a $100 onetime membership fee plus $40.95 per month. In addition to regular membership facilities, Health Club membership provides separate total fitness workout areas for men and women, sauna, steam room, whirlpool, sun room, individual lockers, dressing rooms and showers, laundry/linen service, and massages. Other memberships are available.

For those interested in only fitness classes, the YMCA offers a Passport to Fitness, 12 classes for $31.50. The YMCA offers several programs with free orientation sessions. We have a weight management program, a smoking cessation program and a nutritionist on staff. In three to four months we will have a stress management program as well," said Ms. Reuter. The YMCA also has fitness evaluations.

"A facility we have, that I don't believe anyone else in town has, is a Hydrostatic Weight Tank. It gives the most accurate count of fat percentage in your body by weighing you under water."

THERE ARE several specialty classes at the YMCA including yoga, ski fitness and Aquactivity, a class combining aquaerobics, and activities such as water polo, volleyball and swimming.

At the Texas Fitness and Aerobics Center, 3200 Andrews Hwy., there have been many changes recently. Formerly Golden Life Physical Fitness Center, the club was bought out and the name changed. The new owners say they have been working to gradually upgrade the facility. "They are going about improvement slowly, but it should all be finished in about three or four months," said Michael Price, weekend manager for Texas Fitness and Aerobics Center.

Some of the renovation plans include remodeling men's and women's wet areas - including dry heat and steam saunas, showers and dressing areas - acquiring new weight equipment and enlarging the workout area, Price said.

The membership fee for Texas Fitness and Aerobics Center is $150 for

'When someone comes in, we will set up a program for them to achieve the physical goals they want. We go through the program with them as many times as they want us to. We work with the person one-on-one," Price said. "We teach them the prop er way to use the equipment and what each exercise does.

Brussels sprouts and Belgian endive are familiar words to Americans while Bruges and Ghent, two of Belgium's most fascinating tourist cities, are generally unknown in North America. Mention Antwerp or Waterloo and even a seasoned traveler is likely to say, "Isn't Antwerp a city in the Netherlands; didn't Napoleon meet his Waterloo in France?"

Why do Americans remain confused and unknowledgeable about this tiny principality that offers so many attractions? Perhaps the very diversity that makes Belgian art, architecture and products so comprehensively European is what makes travelers unsure about where Bruges lace, Browning shotguns or Antwerp diamonds come from.

Belgians are not a boastful people and are shy about pointing out that Bruges is the lacemaking capital of the world, that Belgians contracted with American John Browning to produce his automatic shotgun in 1902 and that one out of every four diamonds sold is cut and polished in Antwerp.

Another reason for our confusion about Belgium lies in its historically fluctuating boundaries. Strategically placed between France and Germany and just a short span across the North Sea from the United Kingdom, Belgian borders offered no natural barriers to invading armies of many nationalities. A convenient place for other countries' wars, this incidental prize was snatched by first one victor and then an other. They often saw fit to move Belgium's borders around.

Bruges, above, is among Belgium's picturesque cities. Damme, below, became Bruges' outer harbor in the midtwelfth century.

Belgian soil is a feverishly nationalistic country that, at the same time, offers visitors the best of all Europe an cultures.

Diversity reigns in this country, which once encompassed the Netherlands and is now divided into three regions, which are principally French, Flemish and Dutch with an official language in each.

Begin with Brussels, the capital city, and you may never see the rest of the country because the Grand Place, the museums, the flea markets, the antique bazaars and fine dining establishments can take all of the time that you may have reserved for seeing this THE RESULT of constant warfare on small country, which is only slightly larger than the state of Maryland.

Check into the Hyatt Regency Hotel and you will be just a short distance from the Grand Sablon, a district filled with antique shops, trendy boutiques and posh little cafes.

Streetcar 96 runs in front of the hotel and the driver is always happy to make change. Just riding past the botanical gardens, the theatre and the park is a treat.

If you arrive at the Sablon on Sunday morning, the green and red striped awnings are out and the open air antique bazaar is on.

Perhaps you want a Belgian or French military medal for heroism or one that was awarded for morality and diligence. The cost for the beautiful enamel work is around $20.

Lithographs of the Belgian fusiliers in startling red and blue with gilt sell for around $50 and sterling silver serving pieces are perhaps the best bargain at $15 to $30. A bolt of watered silk in royal purple costs only $10 at the gypsy booth.

If you get hungry, there is always an old woman with a wooden spoon stirring a steaming pot of mussels. Of course, no event in Belgium is really an event with out free beer. This country boasts over 300 beer brands. I am told that Maas beer will flood the American market soon.

If you become hooked on open air markets, there is one every day in Brussels at the Place du Jeu de Balle until 1 p.m. Walk down any side street off the Sablon and you will find everything from toy soldiers to giant ship's lanterns. The Sablon is a veritable browsers paradise.

There are modern day artisans here, too, and Marie Storms at 24 Rue de Rollebeek, who designs crystal and Venetian glass jewelry, is one of the best. Her creations are often made specifically to adorn designer suits and dresse

Spend the rest of the day walking the museums or shopping the Avenue Louise or the Galleries St. Hubert and you will be ready for the favorite nighttime pursuit in Belgium - gourmet dining.

Stepping into the Carlton Restaurant at Boulevard de Waterloo requires the proper bearing as you wend your way through the Rolls Royces being parked by gloved attendants.

CUISINIER ALAIN Passard will lead you across a footbridge to a table by the fountain that leaps up from the floor below. He asks if you have a large party and would like the center section with the curtain pulled around it. Or maybe the weather permits seating in the room by the wine cellar where the ceiling rolls back to reveal the stars. All the the seating is enhanced by soft lamplight and tinkling crystal. The walnut paneling looks vaguely familiar. I ask who made it. "Rolls Royce," M. Passard replies.

Whatever the table choice, the best is yet to come. Only a connoisseur could choose a wine from the 34,000 bottles artfully displayed in the all-glass cellar which is kept at a constant 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

M. Passard chooses for me and we begin with a Krug 1971 champagne with caviar, proceed through salmon and hare and then I lose track of the many wines and courses but I do remember the duck fondly. The dessert is so divine that I will remember the name forever: "Le 1000 feuilles chocolat tout chocolat." There is, of course, a Belgian chocolate as an extra dessert.

I take a taxi back to the Hyatt where the smiling staff with red carnations in their buttonholes greet me as if it isn't 1 a.m., but only the beginning of the evening. They stand ready to recommend the next night's dining. Perhaps Villa Lorraine at the edge of the forest or a restaurant in the Rue des Bouchers off the Grand Place or maybe Claude du Pont's? Reservations should be made now but I tell the concierge, "No, thank you. I am never going to eat again." He smiles.

He smiles again at breakfast as I am eating one of the Hyatt's famous Belgian waffles. Today, a day trip is in order. I am anxious to try a train from the oldest rail station in Europe which runs like the grand old institution it is. Ticket prices are amazing high so I am glad that I have my Eurail Pass entitling me to unlimited travel.

NO TRIP is complete without a visit to Bruges, Belgium's jewel of a medieval city which is connected by a network of canals and lakes that make it as light and airy as the lace for which it is famous.

To debark in Bruges is to wish for a white horse and medieval costume. It is a perfectly preserved city that urges the visitor to fit into the spirit of its spires, cobblestones, bas relief.

Church of Our Lady, roam the Rubens furnished his home for his streets and market places, which will lead you to the main square or Grote Market in time to hear the magnificent carillon and see the Town Hall. Go down Blind Donkey to the canal and take one of the little boats that glides through trailing vines, weeping willow and scattering geese to Damme which is only a few miles and rivals Bruges as a romantic setting.

If you have time, don't miss the Restaurant Bruegel, on the outskirts of Damme, where chef Pierre Fonteyne turns out French cuisine augmented by his own imaginative touch which has earned him the title of one of the best chefs in Belgium.

Your next stop should be Ghent, which again offers much the same atmosphere as Bruges. The castle of the Counts of Flanders rises from the center of the city where its protective walls were often assailed not only by foreign enemies but by Ghent's own citizens.

Also, not to be missed in Ghent, is the small church of Our Lady of Hooie. Unable to find out why she was so named, I decided that she must have had a fine sense of the nonsensical

OTHER SIDE trips must include Antwerp, where the Flemish painter new bride, aged 16, with objects d' art as a tribute to her beauty. Ruben's home is an architectural delight and contains not only his own work but a collection of works by other great artists.

A visit to Antwerp's Diamond Land at 33 Appelmansstraat displays diamond cutters at work behind heavy glass windows and a stockroom full of sparkling gems. Prices were disappointingly high but I understood from a local citizen that if a visitor takes the time to walk the side streets, where families have been dealing in diamonds for generations, that bargains can be found.

Nearby, in the city of Liege, there is a gunsmith school where young people train for many months in the hope that they will be hired by F.N. Browning, Leige's prime industry. The enormous F.N. group employs 9,700 people worldwide and manufactures not only the well-known Browning guns but industrial and aeronautical equipment as well.

The beautiful engraving on the guns is all done with chisel and hammer. One of the engravers was working on a shotgun, part of a set of six ordered by the Shah of Oman at more than $20,000 per gun, each adorned with native flowers of his

LEIGE AND the other cities of Belgium offer their delights but the Belgium countryside with its streams and forests and rolling hills is another kind of pleasure.

If you are able to tear yourself away from Brussels Grand Place, where the medieval guilds adorned their buildings with statues and ornamentation boasting their trades, buses leave the square frequently for the plain of Waterloo, site of Napoleon's last campaign.

After less than a half-hour ride, climb the Lion's Mound which is a monument of earth brought bucket by bucket to the battleground and you can look down and imagine Napoleon's cannon mired in mud as he was overrun by the Duke of Wellington aided by Marshall von Blucher's

Prussian troops. Next, take a car or a bus to the village of Durbuy, dubbed the smallest city in the world, and you will be amazed by the changing countryside that ends on a bend of the Ourthe River. Set high on a hill overlooking the tiny town is a castle that villagers say is inhabited by an insane nobleman. The moon, shrouded with mist and gleaming eerily on the grey stone, gives credence to their story. Do take time to dine at Le Sanglier des Ardennes, famous for its wild game such as wild pigeon mousse and red deer fillets. Travel on through the Ardennes Forest and to Bastogne and its citizens will greet you with open arms and tears of gratitude.

One woman says, "Though it has been over 40 years we do not forget that we fought and you fought with

More than 70,000 lives were lost during the Battle of the Bulge and the citizens of Bastogne have erected a museum and a vast memorial in their honor.

The museum offers life size replicas of the battle scenes of December, 1944, and the town bears a strong affection for General Anthony McAuliffe who replied, "Nuts"to the German command to surrender.

EVERY FIVE years the townspeople commemorate the siege with a parade and services honoring the heroes of Bastogne.

One middle-aged man leans over the railing, pensively looking at the rolling hills "Were you here?" I ask. "I'm still here," he answers. A part of him will never leave this place, where the sound of field artillery and grinding tanks violated Bastogne 41 years ago. The minister of external affairs in the Walloon region tells his story: "I was 7 years old and we had been under bombardment by the Germans for three days. I hid in the cellar all that time and when the first few American tanks rolled into our village a G.I. came down into the cellar, took me in his arms and up into the light. This was my first breath of liberty in my memory. We

Wife smothered in in-law's nest

by ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a wonderful man I'll call Joe. We get along fine, except for one major problem: We are living with Joe's parents, and he has no intentions of moving. He says they (his parents and he) bought this house for ME. It belongs to his parents, but Joe claims if we live there with his folks, eventually the house will be ours. We are presently paying rent.
Abby, I don't like this house, and I'm upset because I'm being forced to live here with them. His parents are nice people, but I don't want to live with them forever. We have no privacy. Joe says when we have children, his mother will look after them. Abby, I want to look after my own children.

This set-up wasn't discussed with me before we were married. I thought we would stay with Joe's folks until we found a place of our own. It doesn't have to be fancy. A hole in the wall would suit me fine as long as the two of us were alone. When I complain, Joe says if I don't like it, I can leave, but I know live with my in-laws indefinitely. We love each other very much, but this is tearing us apart. What should I do? - UNHAPPY

DEAR UNHAPPY: First I'll tell you what NOT to do. Don't get pregnant! Next, ask Joe to go with you for family counseling. If he won't go, go without him. If you don't resolve this unhappy situation now, your marriage won't stand a chance.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a tough one. I'm 26 and am getting married in the spring. My problem concerns a girlhood friend named "Nora." I want very much for her to attend my wedding and reception. Nora has been going with a creep for the last four years (I'll call him Scott), and my fiance and I do not want him at our

he doesn't mean it. I don't want to told Nora what kind of creep Scott was, hoping she'd catch on and dump him. (She never did.) Over the years our foursome kind of drifted, but I still consider Nora one of my closest friends.

How can I invite her to my wedding without letting her bring Scott? (I wouldn't want to go to a wedding without my fiance.) Would it be tacky to invite her and tell her not to bring Scott? She would wonder why, and I just couldn't tell her about what happened four years ago. Maybe he's changed, but my fiance and I still can't stand him. Help me, please. BAFFLED BRIDE-TO-BE

Spend the rest of the day walking the museums or shopping the Avenue Louise or the Galleries St. Hubert and you will be ready for the favorite nighttime pursuit in Belgium - gourmet dining.

Stepping into the Carlton Restaurant at Boulevard de Waterloo requires the proper bearing as you wend your way through the Rolls Royces being parked by gloved attendants.

CUISINIER ALAIN Passard will lead you across a footbridge to a table by the fountain that leaps up from the floor below. He asks if you have a large party and would like the center section with the curtain pulled around it. Or maybe the weather permits seating in the room by the wine cellar where the ceiling rolls back to reveal the stars. All the the seating is enhanced by soft lamplight and tinkling crystal. The walnut paneling looks vaguely familiar. I ask who made it. "Rolls Royce," M. Passard replies.

Whatever the table choice, the best is yet to come. Only a connoisseur could choose a wine from the 34,000 bottles artfully displayed in the all-glass cellar which is kept at a constant 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

M. Passard chooses for me and we begin with a Krug 1971 champagne with caviar, proceed through salmon and hare and then I lose track of the many wines and courses but I do remember the duck fondly. The dessert is so divine that I will remember the name forever: "Le 1000 feuilles chocolat tout chocolat." There is, of course, a Belgian chocolate as an extra dessert.

I take a taxi back to the Hyatt where the smiling staff with red carnations in their buttonholes greet me as if it isn't 1 a.m., but only the beginning of the evening. They stand ready to recommend the next night's dining. Perhaps Villa Lor-raine at the edge of the forest or a restaurant in the Rue des Bouchers off the Grand Place or maybe Claude du Pont's? Reservations should be made now but I tell the concierge, "No, thank you. I am never going to eat again." He smiles.

He smiles again at breakfast as I am eating one of the Hyatt's famous Belgian waffles. Today, a day trip is in order. I am anxious to try a train from the oldest rail station in Europe which runs like the grand old institution it is. Ticket prices are amazing high so I am glad that I have my Eurail Pass entitling me to unlimited travel.

NO TRIP is complete without a visit to Bruges, Belgium's jewel of a medieval city which is connected by network of canals and lakes that make it as light and airy as the lace for which it is famous. To debark in Bruges is to wish for a white horse and medieval costume. It is a perfectly preserved city that urges the visitor to fit into the spirit of its spires, cobblestones, bas relief, belfrys and fanciful brickwork.

After seeing Michelangelo's marble "Madonna and Child" at the

Go down Blind Donkey to the canal and take one of the little boats that glides through trailing vines, weeping willow and scattering geese to Damme which is only a few miles and rivals Bruges as a romantic

If you have time, don't miss the Restaurant Bruegel, on the outskirts of Damme, where chef Pierre Fonteyne turns out French cuisine augmented by his own imaginative touch which has earned him the title of one of the best chefs in Belgium.

Your next stop should be Ghent, which again offers much the same atmosphere as Bruges. The castle of the Counts of Flanders rises from the center of the city where its protective walls were often assailed not by foreign enemies but by Ghent's own citizens.

Also, not to be missed in Ghent, is the small church of Our Lady of Hooie. Unable to find out why she was so named, I decided that she must have had a fine sense of the nonsensical.

OTHER SIDE trips must include Antwerp, where the Flemish painter new bride, aged 16, with objects d' art as a tribute to her beauty. Ruben's home is an architectural delight and contains not only his own work but a collection of works by other great artists.

A visit to Antwerp's Diamond Land at 33 Appelmansstraat displays diamond cutters at work behind heavy glass windows and a stockroom full of sparkling gems. Prices were disappointingly high but I understood from a local citizen that if a visitor takes the time to walk the side streets, where families have been dealing in diamonds for generations, that bargains can be found.

Nearby, in the city of Liege, there is a gunsmith school where young people train for many months in the hope that they will be hired by F.N. Browning, Leige's prime industry. The enormous F.N. group employs 9,700 people worldwide and manunot only the well-known Browning guns but industrial and aeronautical equipment as well.

The beautiful engraving on the guns is all done with chisel and hammer. One of the engravers was working on a shotgun, part of a set of six ordered by the Shah of Oman at more than $20,000 per gun, each adorned with native flowers of his

is another kind of pleasure.

If you are able to tear yourself away from Brussels Grand Place, where the medieval guilds adorned their buildings with statues and ornamentation boasting their trades, buses leave the square frequently for the plain of Waterloo, site of Napoleon's last campaign.

After less than a half-hour ride, climb the Lion's Mound which is a monument of earth brought bucket by bucket to the battleground and you can look down and imagine Napoleon's cannon mired in mud as he was overrun by the Duke of Wellington aided by Marshall von Blucher's Prussian troops.

Next, take a car or a bus to the village of Durbuy, dubbed the smallest city in the world, and you will be amazed by the changing countryside that ends on a bend of the Ourthe River. Set high on a hill overlooking the tiny town is a castle that villagers say is inhabited by an insane nobleman. The moon, shrouded with mist and gleaming eerily on the grey stone, gives credence to their story.

Do take time to dine at Le Sanglier des Ardennes, famous for its wild game such as wild pigeon mousse and red deer fillets.

Travel on through the Ardennes Forest and to Bastogne and its citizens will greet you with open arms and tears of gratitude.

One woman says, "Though it has been over 40 years we do not forget that we fought and you fought with

Despite low activity, there's still oil to be found in 'em 'ere rocks

Plagued by uncertainty over TAX REFORM measures that would have severely penalized exploration and soft OIL PRICES, exploration activity in the Permian Basin stalled at lower levels in

For the first time in many years the year finished with a lower rig count (305) than at the beginning of the year (358), as the normal upturn in year-end drilling failed to materialize. As the troubles in OPEC pointed to a possible collapse of that price-setting cartel and possible lower oil prices, the rig count began to drop shortly after the first of the year, dropping below 300 in April and bottoming out at 264 in mid-July before starting a slow climb back to 300, which was hit again in early November.

Still, great strides were made in exploration with a number of significant discoveries and optimistic predictions. A giant stratigraphic play 15 miles wide and snaking through the entire length of Midiand County from Andrews to Upton county lines was reported as a possible play that could result in the development of a major field of 100 million barrels. That Atoka-Devonian play is still being developed, but discoveries and field extensions are confirming the

Significant field extensions of 200-400 barrels were still prevalent in Glasscock County in 1965, and numerous field wells throughout the Basin of 200-500 barrels were tapped in waterflood and tertiary projects to get at trapped oil.

Noted milestones mark the year

There were a number of milestones in 1985 as the guard was changed; flags were dropped; honors were extended and some enterprises said goodbye.

The most celebrated event was Midland's 100th birthday, which saw parades, pageants, entertainment and projects done in true Midland fashion, with the dedication of Centennial Plaza. Two firms, EX-XON and KCRS, both celebrated their golden anniversary in Midland with celebrations. Both firms came to Midland in 1935 when it was little more than a cowtown. GULF OIL CO., one of Midland's oldest firms, said goodbye as the orange ball and logo of the company flag were lowered in a tearful flag-changing ceremony at Clay-Desta Plaza. The firm offically became a part of Chevron and ceased to exist.

An old ARCO hand, CLAR-ENCE CARDWELL, who had been in charge of Arco's Permian Basin Division for as long as most can remember also said goodbye as he took retirement and went home to plan a second career. ED THOMPSON, who held the helm of the PERMIAN BASIN PETRO-LEUM ASSOCIATION through some of its toughest years and sailed the fledgling regional oil association to survival and prominence also said goodbye when he took retirement at the end of this year.

Death also claimed several prominent members of the oil community. Among them were JACK MAJORS, founder of MGF Oil Co., STANLEY MOORE, founder of Drilco and pioneer oilman WILBUR A. YEAGER.

Midland also said goodbye to a major department store GIBSON'S, an airline, MUSE, and announced the opening of two new shopping centers: DEAUVILLE MALL and MIDLAND PLAZA.

Diversification is serious business

A serious move was made in 1985 to bring a more diversified economy to Midland and the Permian Basin.

Oilman RUSS RAMSLAND

JR. announced the formation of a high-tech company that would utilize the space shuttle to grow electronic crystals in outer space. Entrepreneur, Clayton Williams Jr., brought CLAYDESTA COMMU-NICATIONS, a statewide telephone company and 200 employees to town. Another oilman Rodger Dameron started DAMERON MAN-UFACTURING, a venture that will manufacture and fabricate a variety of metal products.

At the same time two institutions were announced to speed up the diversification process. A BID RESOURCE CENTER spearheaded by the Midland Chamber of Commerce and designed to help local firms land government contracts was formulated. Plans for a Permian Basin research center that will study diversification options and be built midway between Midland and Odessa was also announced.

They broke up the old gang

Large companies like American Telephone and Telegraph were once considered lifetime employers. However, with increased overseas competition and an era of deregulation, many such large corporations drastically cut their work forces this year, including, or even emphasizing, management levels.

AT&T announced in August that it would eliminate 24,000 positions, including 20 percent of the jobs in one 117,000-employee division. The communications company, still retrenching after its court-ordered break-up in 1964, is eliminating the positions in its Information Systems Unit. The company claimed that 30 percent of the eliminated positions were in management. Also, the company is establishing a factory in Singapore to make residential telephones, which were once produced in Shreve-port, La.

Only a handful of jobs were lost in Midland-Odessa as result of the restructuring of the communications giant.

New coke won the taste test; classic coke won the fight.

Coke scores 'classic' knockout

There are few things as entrenched in American life as Coca-Cola. However, concerned about losing market share to Pepsi, Coca Cola Chairman Roberto C. Goizueta decided to drop its 99-year-old formula and go with a new formula that was less carbonated and

Despite marketing research that showed the new formula was preferred hands down, researchers did not count on the emotional hold the drink had on the public. After loud and long protests from Coke fans and bottlers, the company had to do an about-face and in July brought back the old formula as "Coca Cola Classic," which immediately began outselling the new drink. Coca-Cola, however, is still determined to keep the new formula as its flagship brand.

The soft drink industry is particularly cut-throat, and industry analysts disagreed among themselves about whether Coca-Cola had made a fatal mistake in attempting to change the formula. Many, especially in the public, believe the switch was merely a marketing move, which Coca-Cola his consistently denied.

Carbon dioxide will add many years to the Means field in Andrews County.

New fizz for fizzled reserves

Carbon dioxide and tertiary continued to be key words in the economic health of the Permian Basin as several major carbon dioxide floods, including SHELL'S DENVER UNIT in the giant WASSON FIELD, went on stream in 1985 and development in the MEANS FIELD, operated by Exacon, continued at full bore. Amoco also made ready floods in four of its units including the SLAUGHTER ESTATE, CENTRAL MALLET, FRAZIER and WASSON

ODC. Amoco has identified 14 other units as prospects for carbon dioxide floods.

Also pipelines across the Central Basin and to the Delaware Basin were completed to bring gas to fields in those regions of the Permian Basin. Five major producers are now engaged in tertiary projects in the Permian Basin, which are expected to produce and additional 25 percent of the oil in place in older reservoirs and extend production well past the year 2,000.

Jack, Cy, Boone go buy, buy

One of the most interesting news events of 1985 was the ventures of two Midlanders, Cy Wagner and Jack Brown, as in WAGNER & BROWN, and their adventures with and without T. Boone Pickens to buy major oil Following moves on Gulf, Unocal and Phillips, with Pickens, Wagner & Brown decided to go after MidCon Corp., a gas transm company, without America's premier corporate raider who announced his retirement from raiding earlier this year. With partner Freeport-McMoRan Inc. of New Orleans the oilmen survived a round of financing snags only to be outbid for MidCon by Occidental Petroleum Corp. Speaking about the merger, Dr. Armand Hammer, Occidental chairman, had this to say: "The chemistry was right. We liked each other." Wagner and Brown had no comment.

Texaco sees the judgement day

It was a historical judgement day, resulting from PENNZOIL'S lawsuit against TEXACO, filed after Texaco snatched GETTY OIL from Pennzoil's grasp in early 1984. A Texas jury's decision that Texaco should pay $18.5 BILLION in actual and punitive damages, the largest civil judgement in U.S. history, sent shockwaves through Wall Street and corporate offices.

Believing they had signed an agreement to purchase Getty Oil in late December, 1983, Pennzoil executives were surprised when Texaco announced in early January, 1984 that it had acquired Getty Oil and its one billion plus in oil reserves - for $10.1 billion, and promptly filed suit against Texaco. On Nov. 19, after four months of testimony and three days of deliberating, a Texas jury decreed that Texaco should pay $7.53 billion in actual damages, and $3 billion in punitive damages. On Dec. 10, Judge Solomon Casseb Jr. upheld the judgement and included interest, raising the award to $11.12 billion.

Texaco would have to file a $12 BILLION BOND in order to appeal the verdict, and Texaco officials claimed that would destroy the company, saying it was worth only $8 billion. The White Plains, N.Y.-based company filed suit in federal court in New York on Dec. 12, claiming that the bond requirement would render the nation's third largest oil company financially unable to defend itself.

U.S. Rig Count

Permian Basin rig count drops ten

The Permian Basin rig count slipped ten this week, falling below 300 for the first time since

Midland County gained a rig to record a total count of 13, while Ector County fell one to post a weekly tally of 16. The biggest loss was seen in Martin County, down by five to 12. Lea and Andrews counties led the Basin activity with 37 and 26, respectively.

Nationally, the count fell 97 rigs as several states, including Ohio and Pennsylvania, shut down for the holidays. Kansas activity dropped by a whopping 47 rigs, down from 95 to 54. Kansas recorded only 21 rigs this week, after a 50 rig total the previous week. The Canadian count fell 123 rigs, as that country shut down drilling activity for the holidays, also. The rig total in the Permian Basin is at 295 for the week, while the U.S. total is at 1,898. Year-ago totals were at 365 and 2,576.

Tidewater, Graham finalize oil transaction

Tidewater, Inc. and Graham Resources, Inc., New Orleans-based oil and gas services firms, have jointly announced finalization of a transaction in which several partnerships affiliated with Graham have acquired substantially all of the oil and gas reserves of Tidewater's wholly owned subsidiary, Hilliard Oil & Gas, Inc., and certain interests of Hilliard in the oil and gas production of several partnerships managed by Hilliard. The purchase price, which was subject to adjustment for oil and gas produced and operating costs incurred subsequent to June 30, 1985, was approximately $33.7 million

USPCI, Beard announce proposed sale of stock

USPCI, Inc. and Beard Oil Co. announced the proposed sale of between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 shares of USPCI common stock of which Beard Oil anticiaptes selling 750,000 to 1,000,000 shares.

Gerald J. Gagner, president of USPCI, stated that the present intention is to file a registration statement covering such shares witht he securities and exchange commission prior to year-end. The offering will be made only by a Prospectus. USPCI intends to apply the net proceeds received from the sale to working capital to be available for general corporate purposes and capital expenditures. Beard Oil intends to use its share of the net proceeds to retire debt. USPCI will not receive any of the proceeds from the sale by Beard Oil. Following the proposed sale Beard Oil's ownership of USPCI will be reduced below 50 percent.

Midland firm to write down value on rigs

Midland SouthWest Corp. will write down the value of four deep rigs by $10.8 million after determining that their value has been permanently impaired by the severe depression in the contract drilling market. As a result, Midland SouthWest's balance sheet is expected to more accurately reflect the true asset value of the company, which will also benefit from reduced depreciation expenses in the years ahead.

NEW YORK - Domestic oil and gas companies are substantially paring their 1986 exploration plans, particularly within the United States, industry executives and analysts say.

Beset by the continuing decline in energy prices, and worried about losing tax provisions they consider necessary to spur investment, most energy companies have trimmed plans to search for natural gas, become more selective in choosing and continuing oil exploration projects and increased their efforts to buy reserves from other companies.

Besides having ominous implications for the future survival of some smaller independent producers, the cutbacks in exploration could result in the "worst year yet" for the beleaguered drilling industry, according to James D. Crandell, an analyst for Salomon Brothers Inc.

Energy industry experts said the moves were part of a broad reaction to declining prices that have roiled energy companies since 1980, resulting in mergers, restructurings, debt repayments and stock buyback

In addition, disappointment over the results at numerous highly touted oilfields in offshore areas has sapped many American companies of the will or the cash to maintain current drilling levels.

"Anyone in exploration has to be apprehensive now," said Allen E. Murray, president of the Mobil Oil Corp.

Nonetheless, Murray said that although Mobil was reducing its exploration budget for 1986, it would not "rigidly adhere" to a cutback. He added, "If opportunities come, we'll move quickly. But we have to be cautious. That's just good business sen-se." Murray declined to disclose budgetary figures.

Mobil's strategy is shared by ap-plan to spend $22.71 billion on exploration and production in 1986, down from $24.18 billion in 1985, the survey found. The smaller producers say they will spend $5.41 billion in 1986, down from $5.80 billion. Though discounted by some analysts and industry officials, the threat by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to wage an oil price war has underscored the relationship between the price of crude oil and the willingness of proparently all the major oil companies. ducers to seek new energy supplies. 'What's happened to prices has really changed the industry's outlook on many of the glamour areas. like offshore Alaska and the Atlantic coast," Funkhouser remarked.

> would be economically viable under the old prices have been a considerable disappointment.' To be sure, large finds continue to be made, most recently in the Beaufort Sea, where Gulf Canada Ltd. said earlier this week that it had come up with a major oil discovery.

'Places we thought held very large reserves and which we thought

The industry's exploration cutbacks would continue trends of recent years in which major and independent companies have spent less than they had budgeted for domestic exploration and production, and shifted more funds to foreign and offshore projects.

The drop in domestic spending, however, will have a severe impact on the drilling industry, said Crandell. The number of rigs used in the United States, 3,970 in 1981, ago, is likely to fall to 1,675 in 1986, 15 percent lower than in 1985, he said. Drilling expenditures are expected to total $17.7 billion, compared with an estimated $21.9 billion in 1985 and $38.3 billion in 1981.

John H. Lichtblau, president of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, said the falloff in domestic onshore activity was worrisome because those drilling activities provide two-thirds of the nation's crude oil and 72 percent of its natural gas, and because it is where the smaller independent oil companies concentrate their

Amoco: Methanol 'grossly uneconomic'

WASHINGTON - Amoco Oil Co. called methanol an uneconomic motor fuel that may never be a viable substitute for gasoline. In comments to Congressman Philip R. Sharp on H.R. 3355, the Methanol Policy Act of. 1985, Amoco said the technology to produce methanol and develop methanol-powered vehicles is well developed. However, the product cannot compete with gasoline.

"Even at 45 cents per gallon, methanol is not competitive with gasoline," said Keith W. McHenry, Amoco's vice president of Research and Development. Since its energy content is only half of that of gasoline, "about 1.8 gallons of a blend consisting of 90 percent methanol and 10 percent gasoline are needed to travel the distance attained with one gallon of McHenry said even this analysis assumes methanol can be produced in large volumes at 45 cents per gallon, which is not possible. Since world methanol production capacity over current demand represents only about 1 percent of U.S. gasoline consumption, new plants would be needed if significant demand developed.

Methanol from a new, U.S. plant that would provide normal return on invested capital would cost 70 to 75 cents per gallon and would be "grossly uneconomic," he explained. "Methanol at 75 cents results in an equivalent fuel cost for a 90/10 blend of $1.36 per gallon before taxes and transportation.

While making methanol from coal is possible, it is much more complicated and requires a larger capital investment, which would be "much more costly," said

"The cost of making methanol from coal would be $1.25 to $1.30 per gallon with conventional financing.

Economy moves forward at snail's pace

Following a robust 6.6 percent expansion in the national economy in 1984, the economy slowed to a sluggish pace, growing at a rate of 2.4 percent, according to the Commerce Department. Most economists predict a 2.5 to 3 percent EXPANSION for 1985, but the Reagan administration continues to predict a four percent growth for 1985. UNEMPLOYMENT, however, improved, falling to 6.7 percent by November, and the STOCK MARKET was also enthusiastic, jumping from around the 1100 mark to around 1550 at year's end. One reason for Wall Street's enthusiasm was falling INTEREST RATES, including a PRIME RATE that fell to 9.5 percent in

Amid predictions of a RECES-SION by late 1986 or early 1987, businesses concentrated on RE-STRUCTURING, the catchword for 1985. A number of billion dollar MERGERS restructured the corporate landscape, and many businesses - large and small - attempted to STREAMLINE their operations to boost profitability and enhance their ability to compete.

Oil and farm problems cause bank failures

The banking industry saw a record number of bank failures, with more 100 banks going under, a post-Depression record. The number of failures was blamed on the troubled farm and energy economies, although former Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. chairman William Isaac said "Half of the bank failures are the result of insider abuse and fraud, and the other half are the result of mismanagement."

Agricultural bank failures rose to 60 in 1985, up from 25 in 1984. FDIC director Irvine Sprague predicted that the number will increase over the next few years.

As many as 130 banks were expected to fail by year's end, up from 79 in 1984; 48 in 1983; and 42 in 1982. In fact, the number of banks that failed in the last five years more than equals the total number of banks that failed in the 35 years between the end of World War II and 1980.

The failed banks were generally small, with an average of $25 million in assets, said Steve Katsanos, a spokesman for the FDIC. Many of their problems were the result of a heavy concentration of loans in certain troubled areas, such as agriculture and energy, he said.

The year began with an admission from the Bank of Boston, the country's 16th largest with $22 billion in assets, that its officials had failed to report $1.2 billion in cash transactions with Swiss banks between 1980 and 1984. The transactions had been made by two companies owned by a reputed organized crime family.

The year ended with a December announcement by Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. that the "safety net" arranged in 1984 to bail out the huge institution had been dismantled. A December payment of $866 million to a consortium of banks completed the repayment of nearly $12 billion in loans from the consortium and the Federal Reserve. The near-collapse of Continental in June 1984 led to the biggest federal bailout in the nation's history.

All eyes were on oil prices

Midland's economy lives and dies by oil prices, and it is no wonder all eyes in the Permian Basin were on oil prices in 1985. Prices remained soft and lower than hoped for throughout the year, but much better than the predicted price disasters. Still, low oil prices and uncertainty over prices played a major role in lower levels of activity in the Basin.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which in the 1970s controlled the world oil market, continued to show signs of decline, as evidenced by the inability to control member countries, a loss of the world market and production, and non-member nations like Mexico, Norway and Britain continued to drop crude

Several times during the year, Saudi Arabia, the richest of the member nations, and OPEC's disciplinarian, threatened to drop its role as disciplinarian and quadruple its production. Iraq has continued to try to destroy Iran's oil exports, and Iran has threatened to destroy Gulf oilfields.

In December, OPEC announced that it would drop production quotas and fight a price war with non-member nations to preserve or recapture its share of the market. Following this announcement, the spot market price for West Texas Intermediate fell to $25.20, from a late November high of $31.70, in what was termed a disaster for oil traders. "It was just like the Crash of 1929," said one trader.

Oil, prices according to analysts, continued to decline during the year, ending 1985 about 13 percent lower than late 1984, despite attempts to shore up the spot market price, and a worldwide glut of crude oil persisted

The posted price of oil in the Permian Basin remained relatively stable throughout the year, averaging $27.50 for the year on West Texas Intermediate, with a high of $28.75 per barrel in December 1985 and a low of $26.60 in Janu-

By the end of 1985, terms like "POISON PILL," "WHITE KNIGHT" and "JUNK BONDS" were part of the business vocabulary. CHEVRON played the "white knight," rescuing GULF from a takeover attempt by T. BOONE PICKENS. Pickens then went after Bartlesville, Okla. based PHILLIPS PETROLEUM CO., who successfully fought off not only Pickens but New York investor CARL ICAHN. Pickens then tried to go after UNION OIL CO. OF CALIFORNIA in an attempt that had both Pickens and Unocal filing suits. The year ended with Pickens saying he was giving up corporate raiding and restructuring his MESA PETROLEUM into a limited partnership. Icahn had to be content with beating TEX-AS AIR in the battle for TWA U.S. STEEL announced in October that it was buying petroleum independent TXO OPERATING CO. to go with its Marathon Oil Co.

In the costliest non-oil merger in U.S. history, GENERAL ELEC-TRIC announced on December 11 that it was buying RCA CORP., parent company of the NBC television network for $6.28 billion. This followed CAPITAL CITIES CORP.'s announcement on March 18 that it and the ABC network had reached a $3.5 billion merger agreement. Only CBS remained inde pendent at the end of 1985, though it had to fight off a takeover attempt by TED TURNER, owner of TURNER BROADCASTING SYSTEMS. In other media purchases, Australian press baron RUPERT MURDOCH bought ME-TROMEDIA's seven television stations for $1.4 billion, and a half-interest in TWENTIETH CENTU-RY FOX FILM CO.

Other major multi-billion dollar mergers included GENERAL MOTOR'S purchase of HUGHES AIRCRAFT, the acquisition of GENERAL FOODS by PHILIP MORRIS INC., RICHARDSON-VICKS was taken over by PROCTER & GAMBLE CO., NA-BISCO BRANDS was bought by R.J. REYNOLDS INDUSTRIES

INC., and PANTRY PRIDE consumed REVLON after a bitter

The LEVERAGED BUYOUT, in which the acquired company's assets are used as collateral to borrow the funds to finance the takeover, also became a major force in 1985. The record buyout was the proposed $6.2 billion leveraged buyout of BEATRICE COS. Donald P. Kelly, former chairman of Esmark, the company bought by Beatrice in 1983, and the investment banking firm Kohlberg Kravis agreed to buy Beatrice for $50 a share. The amount overshadowed the prior largest buyout, a $3.58 billion takeover of R.H. MACY & CO. from stockholders by Macy management, taking the company back to private ownership.

Analysts say that when 1985's numbers are tallied, perhaps as many as 3,000 deals will be recorded with as many as 32 worth $1 billion or more. According to W.T. Grimm & Co., the Chicagobased firm that keeps records on deals in excess of $500,000, there were 2,543 mergers and acquisitions with a total value of $122.2 billion by the end of September, 1985. Eighteen of those mergers were valued at more than $1

Healthy dollar producing sick economies?

Here and abroad, the health of the dollar was the basis for more than a few economic stories in 1985, including the loss of thousands of jobs, trade imbalance and huge defecits.

"The most important thing that happens in viewing the way the economy behaves is the decline in the dollar," said Citicorp economist Ram Bhagavatula. "It has

This site near Georgetown, Ky. will be the site of Toyota Motor Corp.'s new U.S. plant. A site similar to this near Spring Hill, Tenn. was chosen as the home of the new Saturn plant by GM.

Search launched for GM plant

One of the most sought after prizes of 1985 was the factory for General Motors' new Saturn Corp., GM's first new nameplate since 1918, when it added Chevrolet.

Every town, city and hamlet in the U.S. courted GM because the plant is expected to create 6,000 obs directly, and as many as 20,000 in related industries.

After an eight month search in which GM was courted by cities in 36

states, officials decided on SPRING HILL, TENNESSEE, located 30 miles south of Nashville fallen almost 25 percent since the February highs and we expect it will fall another 10 percent.

Because the U.S. economy is so important, because the dollar serves as the global reserve currency. and because the bulk of developing countries' debt is denominated in dollars, the value of the dollar is crucial. The protectionist mood that exists in many quarters is buttressed by the argument that a strong dollar is the cause of declining U.S. competitiveness.

The dollar's decline was hastened by the GROUP OF FIVE pact. But the impact on prices and on the trade balance, which is likely to end the year in the neighborhood of $120 billion to $130 billion, will not be affected soon.

There was a steadying out of the merchandise trade balance through the year," said econo-mist Anne P. Mills of Shearson Lehman Bros., "primarily because of the slowdown in the economy, which grew at an estimated 2.4 percent in 1985, compared with 6.6 percent in 1984.

While the prices of some imports are already increasing, the impact of a falling dollar on exports and on the TRADE BALANCE won't begin show for several months, many economists say. The lag between the decline and its effects on the economy is 12 to 18 months, said Henry Kaufman, chief economist for Salomon Bros.

'Next year," Mills said, "given the dollar's depreciation, it will keep imports from going up further, but the trade deficit will remain. The gap between exports and imports is now so large that it is like the structural budget deficit.

total factory orders climbed to $197.4 billion in November, the first overall gain since a 1.5 percent increase in August. Orders had declined by 1 percent in October and 0.7 percent in September.

The November gain was concentrated in orders for nondurable goods, items not expected to last beyond three years. This category rose by a giant 2.5 percent, the biggest gain since a 2.7 percent increase in October 1980.

Orders for durable goods fell by 0.3 percent, the third consecutive decline. This represented a revision from a preliminary report that had durable orders rising in November by 0.9 percent.

The overall gain in orders, while encouraging, was tempered by the Commerce Department said construction spending, which has been strong all year, rose by 0.5 percent in November, following increases of 0.1 percent in October and 0.8 percent in September. Building activity is now at an annual rate of $348.2 billion, 11.2 percent higher than a year

The moderate gain in factory orders was attributed to the strength in nondurable goods, where orders for food and petroleum products showed big increases.

In the durable goods catrgory, orders for defense equipment posted a sharp 12.7 percent rise, following big declines of 23.8 percent in October and 21.1 percent in September.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - An easy-to-operate machine that turns ordinary dirt into inexpensive but durable earthen building blocks at the rate of 600 an hour is receiving worldwide attention, particularly in Third World nations.

Bob Gross of Orlando, Fla., who patented the diesel-powered Terra Block Duplex machine, said builders in several Third World nations have bought his invention.

In addition, the World Bank may finance one this year for a trial project in Botswana, a bank representa-

"All over the world, there are 2 billion people with little housing or no housing at all," Gross said recently. "Our machine is the only thing on the horizon that can fill the need for low-cost housing by taking a re-source that is readily available and instantaneously converting it from something that appears to have no value to something of great value."

The computerized machine, made by Hughes-Parker Industries of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., for Terra Block Worldwide of Orlando, uses 338,000 pounds of pressure per square foot to mold 30 pounds of dirt into a single building block.

Using just three-fourths of a gallon of diesel fuel, the machine can operate for an hour and produce 600 blocks, Gross said. "That is less than three-tenths of one penny in direct fuel costs per block ... or a 20 times greater energy savings than the best contemporary construction materials.

Gross, who started production of the $72,500 machines earlier this year, said they are already being used in Malaysia, Gabon in West Africa and Saudi Arabia, and there are orders from Burkina Faso, Cameroun and Egypt.

"I have been around the world twice with the machine, showing it and demonstrating it," said the 54year-old retired National Aeronautics and Space Administration

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) - About 35,000 state workers, most of them vomen, could get at least a 2.5 percent raise in a settlement between Washington and its largest employees' union of a 12-year comparable

George Masten, chief negotiator for the Washington Federation of State Employees, and Gov. Booth Gardner called the settlement an important victory for pay equity. The $482 million accord was signed this week, and still must approve it along with a federal court. It would give the workers salary increases of at least 2.5 percent through a complex distribution formula For workers like Helen Castrilli, a hospital secretary and plaintiff in the lawsuit against the state, the settlement would mean an extra $100 a month beginning April 1.

The settlement would end a legal battle that prompted debates in Congress and state legislatures nationwide.

At issue is whether to provide equal pay for different jobs of compara-ble value, measured in terms of skill, effort, training, education, responsibility and working conditions. In 1973, then-Gov. Dan Evans, now a senator, ordered a study of some state job classes to compare salaries paid to men and women. Claiming the study proved that women were paid less than men holding jobs of comparable worth, nine workers filed a multimilliondollar lawsuit against the state in 1982.

In 1983, U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner found the state guilty of systematic and purposeful wage discrimination against women, and ordered the state to pay adjusted salaries and back pay, which could have cost the state more than $500 million. In its appeal, the state attorney general's office argued the state was being penalized for being the first to study "the controversial concept of comparable worth Plaintiffs argued that the discrimination was overt and prohibited under the Civil Rights Act of 1964. In March, U.S. Civil Rights Commission Chairman Clarence Pendleton Jr. argued that comparable worth amounts to "middle-class, white women's reparations." Pendleton has also called comparable worth "the looniest idea since Looney Tunes. Later in 1985, Tanner was overturned by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The state's largest union accepted the settlement rather than appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Washington joins 15 other states with comparable worth plans, Masten

In Washington, D.C., Gerald McEntee, president of the parent union the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees called Washington workers "pioneers in the movement to eradicate discrimination in the wage scales of this nation's employers, a movement that has gained its own momentum this year.

The Dec. 31 deadline was set by the Legislature in the budget bill last year, which provided $41.4 million to begin implementing a comparable worth plan. The state is expected to spend $10 million a year through

But since the new money will be added to a higher wage base each year, the real effect is to add $482 million to paychecks over the next six years, said Gardner aide Becky Bogard.

OILFIELD SALES

First impressions may be developed before the first meeting

By RAYMOND BASS

The first impression a salesperson makes on a customer is often a stronmany cases, this initial impression is made before we even see the customer. It can be formed by the way you speak over the telephone to make the initial appointment and by receptionists and secretaries who, in

So remember, the first impression is being developed before you even walk into the building. And quite often the people you speak with before you see the customer can sometimes have a tremendous influence on the customer's decision about you.

When attempting to make a good first impression, let us consider the following items:

Dress — the general rule of thumb is to dress similar to the person on whom you are calling. If you are making city sales calls in downtown ger influence than we realize. And in Houston or Denver, a coat and tie is generally a prerequisite. However, if you are calling on drilling foremen at the well site, a hard hat, jeans and safety-toed boots are appropriate. On the other hand, some areas of the country are very informal, such as turn, relay their impression to their Lafayette, where you may dress as if you are going to play golf.

Hair — people of the oilpatch are typically very conservative; they vote conservative, think conservative and it would be a good idea to wear your hair in a conservative manner also. So if at all possible, keep your hair out of your eyes and off your collar. If not, you may automatically create a form of sales

Find out where it is located and be sure to check that your coat collar is turned down, your tie is centered, your shoes are clean and your hair is in place. This is one of the best ways to assure a good first impression will be

Manners - Even though many of us used to work on a rig, we do not have to act like we just spent a week offshore on one. Remember to say please and thank you, and stand up when a woman or customer enters the room. And above all, be aware of the way in which you address the secretaries. Be careful not to use the word honey and sweetheart and by all means, don't make the fatal mistake of sitting on the corner of their desk. Otherwise, we will never get

Be yourself - To the extent possible, it is best to come across as your natural self. It should exhibit sincerety and confidence and it should say that, "It is indeed a pleasure to meet you." In this industry, lots of sales are made on simply a handshake. So do not hand the customer a limp wrist, but on the other hand, don't make it a contest of who can squeeze the hardest.

Eye contact - When I surveyed people with buying authority in the petroleum industry, it was mentioned time after time that eye contact was an important factor in making a positive first impression with a

If you can't look the buyer in the eye, they may interpret that as you having something to hide from them or a lack of confidence in your company or in your product. Eye to eye contact will convey a genuine interest in our customer and also enables us to observe the customer's facial expressions.

Confidence - This is a quality which most buyers can sense. To the buyer, the word confidence means that the salesman knows his productservice, and believes in his company and himself. So, before we begin to sell, we have to be sold on ourselves.

Look the part - If you are ma city sales calls, look the part and carry a briefcase and calculator. Let your customers know that you are a professional and are going to look after their needs. On the other hand, if you are making a field call to the well site, don't be afraid to get your hands dirty and dipping a little tobacco may well be appropriate.

South Texas bank deposits soar despite battered border economy spite a battered border economy, bank deposits in the Rio Grande Valley have soared, a phenomenon South Texas officials attribute to nervous Mexican investors who continue to move their money into U.S.

Deposits in 40 Valley financial institutions rose to $5.9 billion by Nov. 30, compared with $5.2 billion a year earlier and $4.3 billion on Nov. 30, 1983, the Valley Chamber of Commerce said.

Mexican deposits make up between 25 and 75 percent of the deposits at various border banks, said

He was referring to the first major devaluation of the peso in February 1982, when the Banco de Mexico allowed the Mexican currency to float on the international market. The peso was selling that day for 27 to the U.S. dollar. A day later, it sold at 41 — a 52 percent devaluation.

Paradyne suspended from government contracts

LARGO, Fla. (AP) - Paradyne Corp., under indictment in an alleged fraud case involving a Social Security computer system, has been suspended from new contract work for the federal government, according to a company spokesman. We received a letter late last week from the Health and Human Services Department suspending us from further federal contracts as a result of the indictment, vice president and general counsel James L. Slattery said this week. The letter was dated Dec. 16.

On Dec. 12, a federal grand jury in Tampa returned a 14-count fraud indictment against the company, along with some present and former officials and one Social Security employee. The charges include conspiracy, bribery, perjury and obstruction of justice in winning the job to computerize Social Security field offices. Federal prosecutors claimed Paradyne used equipment that either wasn't owned or wasn't fully developed during a demonstration in the bidding process five years ago. But work under a maintenance contract renewed in 1984 has been satisfactory, they say.

The company had $290 million in gross revenue last

About 10 percent of Paradyne's current business involves federal contracts, but half of that is an ongoing agreement with Social Security, Slattery said. He said the company believes the Social Security contract will remain intact.

"To the best of our belief it applies to new business, not to existing contracts unless the agency decides to terminate," Slattery said. "There will be an effect on the company's business, although it's limited to a 5 percent figure. There is always a possibility that on an exception basis the company will be able to bid and supply products to the U.S. government."

Movement grows to protect Federal Deposit Insurance

Los Angeles Times -Washington Post News Service

CINCINNATI - The panic that gripped the privately insured savings and loan industry in this Ohio River town last spring has been largely forgotten in most of the country. But the residents here are reminded daily of the worst depositor crisis in the United States in more than 50 years.

Signs and banners proclaiming 'Federally Insured," or "Member, FSLIC," are still prominent at dozens of financial institutions throughout this city - a continuing reminder of how consumers here lost confidence in any savings and loan, no matter how healthy, if their savings were not backed by federal deposit insurance.

The federal insurance program played the role of savior during the Cincinnati crisis. Today, however, under close examination.

A swelling chorus of politicians, bankers, economists, academics and regulators are calling for broad reforms to protect the financial health of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. (FSLIC), which have guaranteed the savings of millions of Americans for more than five decades. The agencies in-sure accounts up to $100,000 should a financial institution fail.

The proposed reforms include a reduction in insurance protection and changing the way the deposit insurance pools are funded. Both the FDIC and FSLIC now raise their money by charging banks and savings and loans a flat fee based on the financial institution's size.

AN ESTIMATED 190 million people in the United States have money the federal system itself is coming in an insured savings or checking accounts. The insurance funds, with a maximum combined value of about $25 billion, back more than $2 trillion in deposits at the nation's 18,000 banks and savings and loan

> The funds, forged in the fires of the Depression, have become linchpins of depositor confidence in the nation's banking system. Fund managers and industry executives love to boast that no insured depositor has lost a penny in the funds' history.

> Today, though, these insurance funds are beset by a mid-life crisis. What has evolved, critics say, is an unfair, outmoded and underfunded system that encourages bankers to take excessive risk, allows hundreds of insolvent financial institutions that should be closed to remain open and cuts deeply into savings indus-

at the FSLIC, the savings and loan insurance fund that would surely be bankrupted if regulators closed all the S&Ls that are technically insolvent — that is, their debts exceed - but still open for

The FDIC, while its balance sheet seems stronger, backs deposits at more than 1,100 institutions classified by federal regulators as "problem banks" because of poor management and bad loans.

"Both funds are inadequate by tough accounting standards," said consultant William Ford, former president of First Nationwide Financial Corp. in San Francisco, one of the nation's largest thrifts.

Ford's point is that if all troubled banks and thrifts were required to put realistic market values on their loans, dozens of institutions would be forced to close. The result, he said, is that "the FDIC is broke, dead as a doornail, just like FSLIC would

No one really knows exactly what would happen if either fund were to fail. Though policy makers universally assume that Congress would come to the rescue, it has no legal obligation to do so.

CONTRARY TO widespread belief, no law places the credit of the U.S. Treasury behind the funds. A resolution passed by Congress in 1982, as the thrift industry was in the midst of turmoil caused by high interest rates, affirmed that insured savings are backed by the "full faith and credit of the United States." The resolution expired at the end of that session of Congress, however.

This year, about 120 banks have closed their doors, the highest total since the depths of the banking crisis of the 1930s. Most have been small agricultural banks in the Midwest.

In California, 10 savings and loans with assets exceeding a total of $12 billion have been taken over by federal regulators since April, largely because of imprudent real estate development and construction lending. However, the S&Ls remain open for business today largely because the FSLIC doesn't have the money or manpower to close them and pay off depositors.

When deposit insurance was established in the mid-1930s, the impact was dramatic. At a time when 10 banks a day were failing, federal guarantees of individual deposits put back into the banking system currency that had been buried in back yards, stuffed into mattresses or hid-

100 Church's Fried Chicken outlets to close

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Church's Fried Chicken Inc. officials announced Monday that about 100 of the company's restaurants will be closed because they are not profitable.

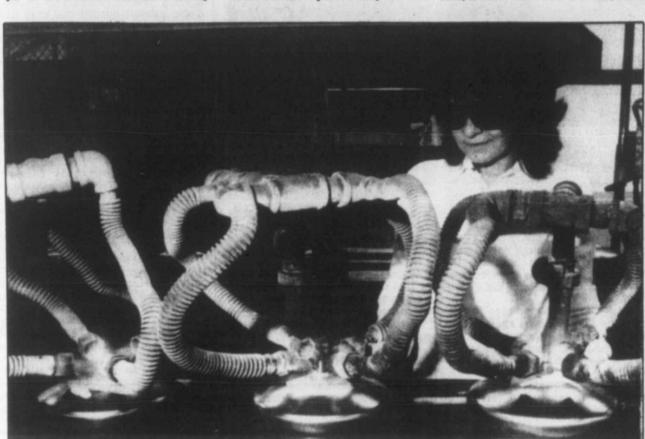

J. David Bamberger, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Church's Fried Chicken, said the company's write-down of assets associated with the closings would reduce after-tax earnings by 11 cents to 15 cents per share.

The store closing writeoffs would result in a fourth-quarter loss, company officials said.

Many of the fried chicken restaurants to be closed have not been contributing to profits, Bamberger said. Closing them would enchance the company's overall performance beginning in fiscal year 1986, he said.

Bamberger said Monday's decision and the announcement last month that the company intended to discontinue its hamburger operations are consistent with Church's policy of closing unprofitable stores and its objective of improving overall return on investment.

Church's sells fried chicken and other food through more than 1,500 company-operated and franchised restaurants in the United States and

Winter Texans make cafeterias big business

HARLINGEN, Texas (AP) - Cafeterias, the restaurants where customers stand in line and select their meals, have become big business in the Rio Grande Valley during the cold months and the Winter Texans are part of the reason.

Winter Texans, those elderly folks who flee their snow-covered northern states for sunny South Texas, add about $300 million to the local economy each year. They leave a great deal of their money in

There are a dozen cafeterias that are owned by either Luby's, Wyatt's or Furr's in the Valley. Restaurant officials say its a multimillion-dollar business, with each cafeteria bringing in about $1 million annually. Business from October to Easter increases dramatically in all our stores," said John Lahourcade, president of Luby's, which is based in San Antonio. "I think a lot of people are retired or semi-retired and have a lot of free time and eating is one of the bigger activities they have." Restaurant officials said Winter Texans, and others, like cafeterias because of the variety of foods.

that. They both can get what they want and they can get out of there pretty cheaply. It's inexpensive," Nutt said.

Nutt said the biggest complaint people have about cafeterias is about tanding in line, but he said it usually takes no more than 15 minutes to get past the food.

The selection is the key. Customers pick up their trays and silverware, are tempted by 20-plus kinds of salads, 15 entrees, 15 vegetables and more than 20 different kinds of desserts and numerous beverages.

An average meal costs a bit more thantle over $4.

"I think our operations and the variety of foods appeals to (customers) very much," said Lahourcade, a former certifified public accountant with Luby's. "Plus I think we serve a good product."

Luby's cafeterias average about bock, has approximately 130 cafete-$2.4 million each and last year the original Luby's in McAllen had the each. second highest volume of the chain's 80 stores nationwide, Lahourcade

"It surprises some people, but I think it's because of the number of people who have moved into the Valey and because of the influx of Winter Texans during the season; we've earned a good reputation in that part of the area," Lahourcade said.

Harry Luby started out in the cafeteria business in 1911 and in 1920 brought his idea to Waco. The chain has grown from nine cafeterias in 1959 to the current 80 cafeterias in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, years since the breakup of "Ma Bell," the quality of telephone service has remained steady, in the opinion of a majority of Americans responding to a Media General-Associated Press poll. There is also optimism that telephone service will improve soon.

Wyatt's, was started during the Depression by grocer Earl Wyatt, who built a snack bar in his store in East Dallas. Fifty-five years later, Wyatt's has 134 cafeterias in nine southern states.

Nevertheless, the poll found little public support for the breakup of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which created seven regional telephone companies and threw open the door to long-distance competition. Only one-quarter of the 1,462 respondents in the nationwide telephone poll thought the breakup was a good idea.

Six in 10 respondents said they felt they were paying more for telephone service now than they did before the AT&T breakup in January 1984. Three percent said they thought prices declined, and 28 percent said they thought prices re-mained the same. The rest were

But most people did not think the breakup of AT&T resulted in a great change in service, the poll found. About two-thirds of the respondents said the quality of local and longdistance service was the same as before the breakup.

Among those who reported a change in quality, most said service had declined. Local service was cited for declining quality more frequent-

The Bell System was broken up as part of the settlement of the Justice Department antitrust suit against AT&T. In that split, AT&T retained its long-distance operations and communications equipment business while spinning off its local Bell phone companies. To help foster long-distance com-

Only 34 percent of the respondents had chosen a long-distance company when the poll was conducted in November. Among those who had yet to choose, 35 percent said they intended to do so and 20 percent said they would take whatever company was assigned to them. -Two in 10 respondents said they had considered canceling their telephone service because of the cost.

-Fifty-three percent bought and 35 percent rented their telephones, while 11 percent owned some of their phones and rented others. Most people — 89 percent — said they were satisfied with the telephones. Respondents in the Media General-

Associated Press poll included a random, scientific sampling of 1,462 adults across the country Nov. 8-14. As with all sample surveys, the results of Media General-AP telephone polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample. For a poll based on about 1,400 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations in the sample. That is, if one could have questioned all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary from the results of polls such as this one by more than 3 percentage

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for several reasons. Differences in exact wording of questions, in the timing of interviews and in the interview methods could also cause variations.

Insured accounts have now achieved such a sacred status in American society that none of the dozens of experts interviewed by the Los Angeles Times believes that Congress would fail to act if either fund went broke.

"It's God, motherhood and country, then comes the savings account," said Ralph Rivet, retired spokesman for Great Western Financial Corp. in Beverly Hills, Calif. Even though they have no legal obligation to pay off depositors if the deposit funds were to collapse, lawmakers apparently believe that failure to do so could spark a financial panic and surely end political

"Any failure to meet that commitment (in protecting insured savings) and you have an instant run on all thrifts," said Richard Pratt, a former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. "It's safe because there are not any alternatives."

Despite the reassurances, the public is clearly concerned, particularly older depositors who remember how they or their parents lost their life savings during the thousands of bank failures during the Depression. "YOU AND I both know the deposit insurance is a drop in the bucket," said retiree Ken McComb of Glendale. "Suppose several large S&Ls failed at once. How on earth would FSLIC handle it?"

The concern shows up in opinion surveys. Although public confidence in the financial system remains relatively strong, recent studies indicate that it has been slipping.

In a study conducted in January by Cambridge Reports, based in Cambridge, Mass., 31 percent of the 1,430 respondents said they had less faith in the overall health and stability of the U.S. banking system than they had a few years ago. Only 21 percent said they were more,

A follow-up survey done three months later — after the Ohio crisis and a similar problem in Maryland revealed that the proportion of those expressing lowered confidence rose to 37 percent while those professing greater confidence fell to 18

"What has slipped is confidence in the entire banking system," said ABA spokesman Fritz Elmendorf. 'It's not a precipitous drop, but it's measurable

"The frightening question is: How much more bad news will the public stand?" R.G. Taylor, chairman of First Western Savings Association in Las Vegas asked a gathering of savings bankers in San Francisco

THE CASE IN Ohio is instructive because it vividly illustrates what can happen when customer confidence vanishes.

The chain reaction of events began in early March when the collapse of a Florida securities dealer led to the bankruptcy of Home State Savings Bank, the largest of 70 thrifts whose deposits were insured by the Ohio Deposit Guarantee Fund, a state-sanctioned private insurance agency Home State's closure set off a run at the other privately insured institutions, stemmed only by Ohio Gov. Richard F. Celeste's edict closing the 70 S&Ls in the nation's first major government-ordered bank holiday since the Depression.

Depositors who were only vaguely aware that some Ohio savings and loans were state insured and others were backed by the federal fund learned the difference overnight.

One suburban branch of the stateinsured Charter Oak Savings, for example, was besieged by 1,000 angry depositors seeking their money at the height of the Ohio panic. Two hundred yards away, at the federally insured Gateway Federal Savings & Loan Association, there were orderly ines of customers waiting to make deposits. Gateway grew with the accounts of those who fled Charter

Critics of the system contend that some of the problems arise because the FDIC and FSLIC are attempting to cope in an period of rapid finan-cial deregulation using supervisory methods that are outdated.

George G. Kaufman, professor of finance at Loyola University of Chicago, said deposit insurance today actually leads to the kind of risky lending it was designed to prevent.

INDEED, MANY experts argue that deposit insurance allows institutions in trouble to gamble on highly questionable investments at no risk to depositors. These financial institutions have typically attracted deposits by offering high interest rates, then invested the money in a host of ill-advised ventures, particularly real estate development loans.

If the investments pay off, the bank or thrift meets its obligations to depositors. If not, the FDIC or FSLIC gets stuck with the bill after the financial institutions fails.

The system is seen as unfair by executives of healthy banks and thrifts, who complain that they are being forced to pay for the sins of their high-flying colleagues because their FDIC or FSLIC are based only on size, not risk. Charges of discrimination also come from repres tives of small banks, who con that they are being treated unfairly by regulators who are quick to close a small insolvent bank in, say, Nebraska, but risk billions of government funds to keep Continental Illinois affoat.

One widely advocated solution is to set up a system in which financial institutions pay different insurance premiums depending on how risky their operations are. It is usually referred as risk-based deposit insurance. Another proposed reform would force banks and thrifts with unusually large problem loan portfolios to keep larger pools of capital on

In either case, the public would receive more information about the financial health of their bank or savings and loan, perhaps employing a rating system such as the Michelin Guide uses for hotels and restaurants. That in turn would supposedly encourage depositors to channel their money into better-run

UCCEL makes pact for acquisition of computing service

DALLAS (SWN) - UCCEL Corp. has announced it has reached an agreement with The Babcock & Wilcox Company for the sale to B&W of its Dallas-based domestic computing services operations, effective December 31, 1985.

While terms of the transaction were not disclosed, UCCEL said it did not expect to incur any gain or loss on the sale of assets related to its domestic services operations.

The agreement provides for immediate transfer of all UCCEL's remaining computing services business in the United States and Canada to B&W's Nuclear Power Division based in Lynchburg, VA. The transfer includes approximately 400 customers and 150 employees. The Nuclear Power Division intends to operate its new combined computing service business as a distinct business entity.

UCCEL's domestic computing services operations specialize in providing remote processing, software and professional services to the electric power and energy industries. B&W is a major operating unit of McDermott Inc., a subsidiary of McDermott International, Inc., a leading energy services company. B&W's Nuclear Power Division provides nuclear steam systems, special products and field services, engineering services, equipment and parts, and nuclear fuel and related technical services for the nuclear power industry worldwide. The division also provides computing services, software and professional services to the electric utility and energy industries.

According to Gregory J. Liemandt UCCEL's chairman, and Charles W. Pryor, Jr., vice president and general manager of the Nuclear Power Division, the transaction is a logical and important one for both companies. B&W, they pointed out, is acquiring a business whose strengths ideally complement its own strategic direction, while the divestiture now enables UCCEL to devote its full resources to its mainframe systems and applications software business.

Columbus paper closes New Year's Day

Wednesday's final editions of the morning paper ended months of optimism, despair and ultimately false hopes about the paper's chance for survival.

Until late last week, Nyles Reinfeld, a businessman from the Akron suburb of Bath, hoped to buy the C-J from Scripps Howard, the Cincinnati-based media group and keep publishing in 1986. But the paper's Monday edition reported that Reinfeld said he could not get commitments for $1.5 million to close the deal.

"At the time of our negotiations with the Reinfeld group, there was no indication that their financial support would not be sustained and we regret that, at the 11th hour, the group's plans have collapsed," said Scripps Howard president Lawrence A. Leser in a statement confirming the company would not publish the paper after today. Since 1959, the Citizen-Journal had been printed under a joint operating agreement with the Dispatch Printing Co., which publishes the rival Columbus Dispatch. The Dispatch provided newsroom space and handled advertising, distribution and production of the C-J. The Dispatch will switch from afternoon to morning publication Wednesday. About 70 editorial and 50 circulation jobs will be lost with the C-J's demise. Since the Dispatch announced two years ago it would not renew the operating agreement, which expires today, several potential buyers had emerged, but by mid-

September all negotiations had broken off and editor Richard Campbell said he had given up hope. On Nov. 15, Campbell made the surprise announce ment that Reinfeld planned to buy the paper. However, Reinfeld announced in mid-December that some of his unnamed investors were shying away. Reinfeld "blew into town with a hollow promise of salvation," CJ columnist Joe Dirck wrote in today's

We all knew what was coming. But he just put us on a stupid ... rollercoaster," said reporter Susan Prentice. Some reporters and editors reportedly turned down job offers from other publications after Reinfeld's purchase announcement. Scripps Howard said it will pay dismissal and other benefits to the employees.

Neither Reinfeld nor his attorney, Leland Cole, returned phone calls by The Associated Press to their

The final edition, with the banner headline, "Goodbye, Columbus," was a bittersweet souvenir edition recapping the paper's highlights and speculating what the capital city will be like without competing papers. 'Media critics say too much falls between the cracks and that reporters inevitably lose some of their competitive edge in a one-newspaper town," reporter Thomas Holden wrote. The C-J's demise leaves Cincinnati as the state's only city with separately owned daily newspapers. Cleveland has had only one daily paper since The Cleveland Press Although morning papers have generally gained circulation compared with their afternoon competitors in recent years, the Citizen-Journal's circulation in recent years stayed about 120,000, compared with the Dispatch's 202,000. The Columbus advertising community will not support two printing plants or two separate newspapers, the C-J quoted Scripps Howard board of directors executive committee chairman Edward Estiow as saying. Staff members who labored on the final paper were joined by sentimental visitors, including nationally syndicated columnist Bob Greene, who began his newspaper career at the CJ in 1964.

Laurie Anderson is the composer-/performer of the two-night, four-part multimedia pop opera, titled "United States: Parts I-IV."

Laurie Anderson: 'Performance artist'

By KATHY LARKIN King Features Syndicate

er waking hours are filled with strange, sometimes rich sounds; with a kaleidoscope of images; with high-tech machinery that moves to no distant drummer, only to her own relentless vision of what allencompassing art — her art — should be.

At age 38, controversial composer/performer Laurie Anderson with her porcupine-quilled hair, her white violin (equipped with a neon violin bow programmed by tape to squeal words while graphic montages and film clips and photographic Anderson impressions of life in these United States slide by above her head) has already divided critics like Moses parting the Red Sea.

Peter G. Davis of the New York Times labeled her creations and her vision of this country "second-hand and undistinguished...resulting in a work with little real substance beneath a flashy surface of deftly manipulated media paraphernalia."

A few compared her major work, her two-night, fourpart, multimedia pop "opera" "United States: Parts I-IV" to a high-tech show version of Las Vegas.

Others found new horizons in the work, parts of it tested at lower Manhattan's Kitchen in 1979 and premiered at the Brooklyn Academy of Music in early 1983, before leaving on an eight-city concert tour. It capped, for Laurie

Anderson, 11 years of sidewalk shows, concerts and recordings.

The mammoth venture, by curtain time, encompassed 1,200 cartoons, photos and films sprawling against a giant 30-by-40- foot screen. Stage center: composer/photographer/actress/sculptor/high-tech Laurie Anderson, who sang accompanied by synthesizers, drums, electric violins, saxophones, a jazz bagpiper, even a toy hammer.

She confided in the audience about her dreams. She quoted from Shakespeare, from Laurel and Hardy, told jokes, even wired her head so the sound of her chattering teeth enveloped the hall.

All of this to communicate her vision of today's American as a human being adrift in a new electronic landscape where endless freeways, bland suburban lifestyles and slabs of concrete co-ops lurk like high-rise tombstones around every corner.

The sounds and images of Anderson's America? Listen to the solitary bark of an electronic dog challenging the darkness crowding in on an isolated campfire, surrounded by modern-day cowboys, while a widening ring of wolves are hunkered down in the shadows...waiting.

Or hear Anderson describe the future, a never-ending highway winding through the new high-tech wilderness, as she envisions it in "Lighting Out for the Territories."

Onstage, Anderson is lost: "Hello, can you tell me where I am?" Then as she reassures herself and the audience, "You've been on this road before. You can read the signs. You can feel the way. You can do this in your sleep."

Last year Laurie Anderson and her vision of the United States (divided loosely into four themes and 78 episodes dealing with transportation, politics, money and love) did an encore at The Brooklyn Academy of Music, while Warner Brothers produced a five-disk album, "United States Live," shrinking her original marathon production to what one critic called a "well-edited 41/2-hour record of the original experience."

Anderson, who describes herself as a storyteller, says of the work, "I wanted to make a portrait of a country. I actually think that's what it turned out to be."

Laurie Anderson is the second of eight children born to an affluent paint-business owner — "He married the boss's daughter," she says — in Wayne, Ill., 50 miles outside Chicago. She picked up her first violin at age 5, joining the family ensemble, eventually performed with the Chicago Youth Symphony and stopped practicing eight hours daily at age 16. "It was too addictive," she said flatly. "I wanted to do other things."

So she did: moving to New York in 1966, earning a B.A. degree in art history from Barnard College three years later and an M.F.A. in sculpture from Columbia University in 1972. All of it leading to "United States Alive."

Q. I would like to know more about my favorite singer, John Cougar Mellencamp.

D. Poole Clovis, Calif. A. He's 34, from Seymour, Ind., the second child of five of an electrical engineer. (His ancestors had immigrated to the farmlands of Indiana from Germany.) John, as a teen-ager, was fairly rebellious, and rock 'n' roll figured in to the overall effect: By 14 he had taught himself guitar and was playing in a band called Crepe

At 23, after putting in two years at Vincennes University and playing in a glitter rock band called Trash, he put together a demo tape and set out for New York. Within a year, he was signed by David Bowie's then-manager, Tony DeFries, who renamed him Johnny Cougar and began to, as they say, make him a star.

His first album, "Chestnut Street Incident," didn't exactly do it, however: It sold only 12,000 copies, and his label, MCA, wouldn't even release his next album, "The Kid Inside" (it was finally released by his new record label in 1982).

The next album, "A Biography," was recorded in England and never released in this country, and the following year, 1979, he recorded the "John Cougar" album, which was. It contained the song "I Need a Lover" that was later recorded with great success by Pat Benatar, giving his career a boost.

For the next three years, he toured relentlessly as an opening act, recorded two more albums, and in 1982 released his break-through album, "American Fool." The hit albums "Uh Huh" and the current "Scarecrow" followed. Now, as you're probably aware, he's in the process of a 100-city tour that'll keep him on the road for at least four or five months.

He's married, has three daughters (the new baby is named Justice) and lives near where he grew up, in Bloomington, Ind.

Q. Please tell me about David Hartman's background

Elmer, N.J. A. He was born in 1935 in Paw tucket, R.I., the son of a Methodist minister who later became an advertising executive. He excelled in sports and music as a child, learning to play the violin at age 6 and six other instruments in the next eight years.
At the Mount Hermon (prep)

School in Massachusetts, he lettered in seven sports and was apparently a good enough baseball player to be drafted by two pro teams later on — the Phillies and the Braves.

He went on to Duke University where he studied economics, and to the Air Force for three years. In 1959, he enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York (he supported himself by working as an NBC page) and landed a job with the Harry Belafonte singers. When

Gene Ray Anthony and Connie Needham

Q. I'd like to know whatever happened to Gene Anthony Ray. Will "Fame" ever be a series again?

> Neda Adair Dothan, Ala.

A. "Fame" still is a series, airing in syndication around the country. Lately, Gene Anthony Ray has been playing a more prominent role in it as well. "Because Debbie Allen has been doing 'Sweet Charity' (the revival of Bob Fosse's Broadway musical), Gene's been taking over some of her scenes," according to his manager.

'Of course, he loves that, especially since some of the episodes are now being built around his character." He'll be tied up with the show until March or April, when it takes a hiatus. At that point, the cast will know if it's being picked up for another season. If so, they will resume shooting in June.

Even her first 1977 single, "It's Not the Bullet That Kills You - It's the Hole" (dedicated to performance artist Chris Bruden who staged his own shooting in the arm by an accomplice standing 15 feet away in the F-Space Gallery), pointed the way to the offbeat humor, the slightly askew angle of Anderson's American

In a way, Laurie Anderson has been on the road, packing a knapsack of her own distinctive ideas, for a long time.

"For a period, I thought I might become a classical violinist," she says now. "But like a lot of kids, I thought I might do a lot of things. At Barnard, I started out in pre-med and soon switched."

She seems a solitary traveler, living and working now in a huge white-painted loft overlooking the Hudson River. The loft is dominated by a studio with 16-track recording capabilities and shelf stacked upon shelf with evidence of her primary passion, the machines that help her create her images.

'My goal is to make images," she said once. "And it is very different from making ideas. The information comes at you differently.

"So it is more important to look at my work and accept or reject it in terms of sensual things than see how it adds up logically. I think it does add up logically. But it's an arrangement of things you get first through your senses and not through your brain.

To communicate her world, Anderson uses a Vocoder that can transform her voice into a chord, the Synclavier II which plays back sentences she records as a series of interchangeable pitches, and enough basic computer, tape equipment and electronic piano keyboards to stock a small high-tech store.

looked at the future, warned of a barren electronic landscape and devoted a lifetime to using its instruments to translate tomorrow.

Her "O Superman" recording. which reached the No. 2 spot on Engin a poll of New York jazz and pop critics, implies that Americans would rather idolize the new technology than take responsibility for "Some of this stuff (in her river loft) is 10 years old," she explains, nodding toward the packed shelves as she flicks on a taping system in the professional 16-track recording studio. "It's really kind of antique. All electronics made today are really built-in antiques anyway.

And she adds, "I love instruments that you can hold. I have the most rapport with stringed instruments. Now this one," she says as she runs her fingers lightly over an electronic keyboard, "this one you can't quite hold. It's almost like being with a dance partner; or maybe more like driving a car. I don't really play these well. I just compose on them.'

As she talks, the machines seem to have a life of their own. "I've found the only way to get work done," says Anderson, "is to try and understand them, so they don't end up forcing you to do things that you don't want to do. And they suggest things as well...You get involved, just as painters can get involved with the thickness of paint. Her voice is attractive, low. And she uses it like an instrument, speaking slowly, giving each syllable due, dropping words into the waiting silence. She is pleasant, occasionally smiling, but seems remote, detached, even when describing her own work.

How would she characterize the 'performance art" she and her instruments produce, a term, according to New Wave artists, so broad it can encompass even a man stepping on and off a chair for long hours at a time, an art which strives for audience participation?

Anderson, who staged her first 'performance piece" by orchestrating car horns at the Town Green in Rochester, Vt., won't be pinned It is intriguing that Anderson has down to any encyclopedic definition.

"The term itself is obscure. It's never really been defined well. That's fine by me. I'm happy to call it modern opera.

It is, she adds, "a voice. It's a narrative. It's pictures. It's music. The bigland's pop charts, winning first place gest difference between my work and traditional opera is that I don't thing. try to tell a narrative story or come to a conclusion. I try to avoid coming to a conclusion....I hope I don't force them (an audience) to come to conclusions. They can just come to no conclusion if they like."

"United States: Part I-IV" evolved gradually. And she was welding all the varied elements together until almost curtain time Says Anderson slowly, weighing each word as if it were a computer ized chord in a new score, "I always work up to the last minute no matter what. That's what the last minute is for, something to work to.

And I never really finish any work. I just stop working on it. Because by finishing, I suppose I mean that I think it's perfect. Mostly, I stop because I'm running out the door or running out of money or running out of ideas."

But she admits her pop opera "does have a certain kind of coherence, and I did put what seemed to be an end on it.

What triggered her exploration of America, says Anderson, was sheer, unacceptable irritation. "I did most of my work in Europe during the 1970s and I got entangled into all these political discussions that spring up in bistros and on street corners. Sooner or later, they always evolved into Europeans asking me, How can you live in the United

It was, she adds, a very complicated answer. "After the first 'what do you mean? You know nothing about living there,' I realized I wanted to describe it. For myself as much as anyone else."

She began with the transportation section of "U.S. etc." Why? "Because that just seemed to me the most obvious thing about this country people moving and moving around a lot. Then in 1980, when the elections were coming up, I thought, 'Hmmmm. Time to talk about politics.' And ultimately, that meant talking money.

Later she realized she was writing 'a lot of love songs," but all programmed for a computerized New World age. "There were ideas of Utopia that threaded through this whole

"My brothers and sisters were all obsessive about something or other. One now raises and trains horses. Another is a stockbroker. And there is an anthropologist in the family My parents were wonderful. Actualthey didn't care what any of us did as long as we did it well.

She was, says Anderson, her father Arthur's favorite child. "No matter what I did, it was wonderful. I think it's the best thing in the world to have unconditional support like that. The women in my life were the teachers and authority figures.

Anderson describes herself as a goody-goody child." She recalls, "I loved school. I read books a lot. I was pretty quiet. One of my three sisters was very, very social. And when you have a sister like that, it's kind of-...well, you feel that aspect of life is covered and you do something else.

For a brief time, Anderson was a teacher. While she was earning her own M.F.A. in sculpture from Columbia, she was explaining art history (including Egyptian architecture and Assyrian sculpture) to students at City College in New York. During those early New York years, when she taught and worked as a free-lance art critic, it was an informal scene. "Scattered," says Anderson. And artists often did more than one thing, working on music and sculpture both.

"A lot of my friends were sculp-tors and I worked on some of their projects and they helped me on mine. That was a very different situation from today. Now people are more professional. Artists come to New York just to paint or sculpt for themselves.

For Anderson, there was one crucial period during 1973. "I lay in bed most days for almost six months. staring at the ceiling or looking out the window. I just decided I wasn't going to get up until I wanted to." She laughs."Fortunately, I was teaching nights." A bad time, yes. It was also, Anderson insists, "the most valuable time of my whole life. Because I really thought about what mattered to me. What did I want to do? Not what I was forced to do.'

Without much help from Bror,

Kenya from 1913 to 1937. Karen eventually fell in love with another man, an English nobleman named Denys Finch Hatton, who led an unfettered life as a safari hunter in Africa.

Later, she moved back to Denmark and began writing as Isak Dinesen. Six years after leaving Africa, her memoirs about Kenya, Out of Africa," were published. Twice, in 1954 and 1957, she was nominated for the Nobel Prize in Literature, but lost the award to Ernest Hemingway the first time and to Albert Camus the second

The film, which is primarily based on Karen's own writings and on Judith Thurman's biography "Isak Dinesen: The Life of a Storyteller," never shows her scribbling away, but Meryl Streep gives such a deeply sensitive portrayal that her Karen almost smoulders with writing potential.

Robert Redford, on the other hand, just sort of comfortably ambles through his role as Finch Hatton, portraying him as a macho but sensitive Great White Hunter. In real life, the globe-trotting Finch Hatton was actually a fancier of Stravinsky, spoke Greek and was knowledgable

Also, he was British, although since Redford never uses an accent - even though every other actor around him does - it would be very easy to leave the theater thinking Finch Hatton was an American. Director Sidney Pollack has said that he thought Redford using an English accent would have been "off-putting for audiences.

Klaus Maria Brandauer is much better in his role as Blixen, although at many critical points in the film he and Streep are simply too civil for words to each another; one longs for them to start yelling.

Still, Streep gives such a strong performance that any deficiencies in her male counterparts are easily overlooked.

David Watkin's photography beautifully frames her in stunning panoramas of Kenya and the film's meticulous settings bring the turn-of-the-century colony back to life.

"Out of Africa" takes a very neutral stance on the evils of colonialism. Karen often annoys her British neighbors with her liberal reform ideals, but, at the same with vaguely patronizing pater-nalism and seems to see no wrong, at least in principle, with colonialism.

Redford is actually most believable as Finch Hatton when he voices his character's fondness for a free, unspoiled and un-European Africa. The actor projects more conviction on that topic than he does on his love for Nevertheless, the romance slowly builds to an effective, bittersweet resolution that easily makes "Out of Africa" the best two-hanky drama since "Terms of Endearment.'

The movie has caused publishers to release a half-dozen books by and about Karen, so perhaps this fine, deeply moving film will finally make Isak Dinesen more of a household word.

"Out of Africa," rated PG for some strong language, adult situations and nature documentary-type footage of animals eating other animals, is now showing at the Midland Park Mall

'Chorus Line' fizzy, fast-paced musical

"A Chorus Line: The Movie" has focused almost entirely on comparing the original Broadway play to the new film version, which is actually a pretty irrelevant comparison to make. The bulk of these reviews have unfavorably contrasted the film to the play. The New York Times called it "less a movie than an expensive souvenir program." The Washington Post said that the film is "not an adaptation so much as an assassination, a case study in how not to bring a play to the screen.

Perhaps because California is a lot farther away from the lights of Broadway, the Los Angeles Times was at least a little bit more charitable. That newspaper's worst comment was that, in being transferred from stage to celluloid, "A Chorus Line" had "gone from champagne to Champale."

However, for the vast majority of the movie-going public, all of these comparisons are utterly meaningless

Broadway plays are not as accessible as books or films. Provided a book is still in print, anyone can borrow, buy or at least order a copy to compare to a film based on that work. Also, it's often possible to catch a film on cable television or, more conveniently, rent a videocassette, to compare to a new remake of it.

But only the tiniest percentage of the American population ever makes the expensive pilgrimage to the East Coast to see the original production of a Broadway play, even such a long-running and heavily-attended play as "A Chorus Line." The best most of us can realistically hope for is that we may get to see a road show version or perhaps a community theater production.

So, given this, how does "A Chorus Line: The Movie" stand on its own?

It's a fizzy, fast-paced musical about a group of dancers gathered on a bare theater stage to audition for - what else? - the chorus line of a Broadway musical.

As the long and improbably detailed audition continues, bits and pieces of the individual dancers' backgrounds are revealed, usually in monologues punctuated by some very flashy song-and-dance numbers.

This is a nicely pristine concept for a musical, but it's complicated a bit unnecessarily by a subplot about a romance between the play's choreographer, played by Michael Douglas, and a dancer named Cassie, played by Alyson

The film, being essentially episodic, is weak on plot, but then, most musicals are. "A Chorus Line" partially makes up for this flaw with skillfully executed musical sequences.

The backstage musical that "A Chorus Line" seems most comparable to is Bob Fosse's 1979 "All That Jazz." Compared to "All That Jazz," this new film seems stagy and unfocused, but, to be fair, very few recent song-and-dance movies can stand comparison to Fosse's brilliant work.

'A Chorus Line: The Movie," while not a musical masterpiece, is a well-made film that will surely be entertaining people around the world long after the Broadway play's lengthy run has finally

"A Chorus Line," rated PG-13 for strong language and some sexual references, is now showing at the UA Cine IV.

Dallas art museum seeks applicants for artists' funds

DALLAS - The Dallas Museum of Art is currently accepting applications for the Clare Hart DeGolver Memorial Fund and the Anne Giles Kimbrough Fund.

The funds were created at the Dallas Museum of Art for the purpose of recognizing exceptional talent and promise in young visual artists. Both funds seek applicants who offer reasonable promise based on their abilities, intelligence, talents, convictions and industriousness of continuing their endeavors as artists.

Artists eligible for the Clare Hart have maintained their principal residence in the southwestern part of the United States (Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, and Colorado) for the past four years, and must currently live there. Awards will not generally exceed $1,200.

Artists eligible for the Anne Giles Kimbrough Fund must be under 30 years old, maintained their principal residence in Texas for the past three years, and must currently reside there. Awards will not generally exceed $3,500 each.

Applicants meeting residence and DeGolyer M norial Fund must be age specifications for one or both of between 15 and 25 years old, must the funds should send examples of their recent work in the form of five to 10 35mm slides labelled with artist's name, title of work, date, medium and dimensions; a current curriculum vitae, including birth date and full residency information for the past three years; two letters of recommendation; and a short statement accompanied by a project budget of the purpose to which the award would be applied, such as travel, independent study, special project, etc., to Awards to Artists, Curator of Contemporary Art, Dallas Museum of Art, 1717 North Harwood, Dallas, Texas 75201. Applications must be postmarked no later

Selection of awards are made by a special committee appointed by the board of Trustees of the Dallas Muse um of Art. Need, as such, of an applicant for an award shall be given appropriate weight but shall not be a determining factor in arriving at a decision as to the awards granted by the funds. Awards are to be utilized during the calendar year of 1986.

Awards will be announced at the Dallas Museum of Art Annual Meeting on May 15. If in the opinion of the special committee no award should be granted because of an absence of a qualified applicant, there is no obligation to grant an award.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Books of photographs

document Texas history

AUSTIN - In the spring of 1984, Gov. Mark White announced the launching of the Texas Photography Project, an ambitious undertaking by the Texas Historical Foundation to produce a two-volume set of historic and contemporary photographs of Texas in time for the state's Sesquicentennial.

Dec. 19. Governor White saw that project to its completion when William P. Wright Jr., of the Texas Historical Foundation, handed him the first copies of "Historic Texas: A Photographic Portrait" and "Contemporary Texas: A Photographic Portrait," to be published in January by Texas Monthly Press.

Texas now has a fine documentation of its past and present," remarked White on receipt of the two volumes. The foundation's project was made possible by a grant from Du Pont and its energy subsidiary, Conoco. The foundation's share of the proceeds from these book will go toward a special fund for the restoration of the state capitol and to future photography programs.

"Historic Texas: A Photographic Portrait" is an elegant visual record of Texas from the 1850s to 1980. Many of the 360 photographs are rare and previously unpublished images obtained from both pubic and private photographic collections throughout the state and the nation.

"Contemporary Texas: A Photographic Portrait" is a collective work of 16 photographers who were commissioned by the Texas Historical Foundation to record their impressions of the state on the eve of the Texas Sesquicentennial. Taken as a whole, the 150 prints reveal the patchwork of people, places, and buildings that make up contemporary Texas.

Texas Monthly Press was founded in 1975. Its sister publication is Texas

Bumper stickers can be clever, funny, dangerous

By PATRICIA KELLY King Features Syndicate

Bumper stickers fascinate me. For years I've taken note of every single one that I thought was funny or witty or both.

The first time I bumped into one, I was driving very slowly. I inched up close, but I still couldn't quite make it out. I had to find out what that driver's message was on his bumper sticker. I got so engrossed I forgot to stop. I hit him.

Ever since then, I watch bumper stickers from a safe distance, just like I would if I were watching an atom bomb drop.

The danger lies in wanting to know what each sticker says. But you need to be cautious or you can run into trouble...as well as the car in front of you.

Some are funny, some are sad. There are clever ones, and others that make you want to cry (tears of laughter or of deep depression, depending on the type of person you

For instance, you have probably seen this one many times: "Don't Laugh...Your Daughter Might Be in This Car!"

The first time I saw that one, I thought it was hilarious. A real knee-

Then I got to thinking. Just suppose you're driving along at peace with the world and you notice that bumper sticker on the car in front of you.

At first you'd have a chuckle...Until you recalled that your daughter did say she was going for a drive with that new boyfriend of hers. The guy has a beard and wears earrings. You would stop chuckling and drive right up that car's exhaust pipe to check who was in that auto.

And what if it was your daughter? And the car was a two-seater and only one seat was occupied? Do you see what I mean about bumper stickers being amusing, only not always?

I saw one recently that said "Concrete Is Better." I recalled that when I studied motivational research in an advertising course, my teacher stressed that I should always ask myself, "Better than what?"

"Watch out for commercials that say, 'Our Bread Is 10 Times Fresher,' my teacher told me. "When you see that, ask yourself, 'Fresher than what?' Last week's rice pudding? When they say, 'Our detergent washes clothes whiter,' ask yourself, 'Whiter than what?' A gray November day? Always ask, 'Than what?' Remember that."

I did remember that, so I asked myself, "Concrete is better than

I mentioned this to my husband, the fount of all knowledge. 'What does it mean?" I asked,"-Just to say concrete is better, makes dust, dirt and grime.

He had a long, deep think. When the five seconds had passed, he said, "I should think you'd be set for life. How he cackled at his joke! stayed silent as early dawn.

There's a plethora of common bumper stickers. Things like "Ban Leg Hold Traps," "Ban the Bomb" and "Ban Bumper Bans. A paradoxical one is "If You Can Read This You're Too Close!' Whenever I get behind that one, I wonder why the driver stuck it on in the first place. If you really don't want anyone tailgating you, then surely the best thing to do would be to have no bumper sticker at all. The whole thing doesn't make sense to Bumper stickers magnetize me, There I sit, waiting for the lights to change. I can't think of anything to think about, so my attention gets riv eted on to the car in front of me That's human nature, I guess.

"Where the Hell Is Ladysmith?" undoubtedly originated with a frustrated tourist.

I also like: "This Is a Miniature Rolls-Royce" on the back of a Volkswagen

"This Car Runs on Pineapples" is a good one, and over-confidence is obvious in "I Don't Think I Own This Road. I Know It!"

But the best one was told to me by a friend. I was giving him a lift, when he yelled, "For heaven's sake! Must you pass everything on the road?"

"If you mean that truck snapped, "I had the right of way! All he said was:

I don't want to sound bossy, but don't take your salmon for granted. It has quite a story to tell. For example, it's probably not American, was living on a farm four hours ago and has more in common with buffalo than you'd ever imagine. Ever-increasing numbers of fresh salmon are imported from Norway, which by itself is no big news. For centuries, Scandinavia has been a leading exporter of all kinds of seafood. The story gets more interesting when you realize most Norwegian salmon now comes from peaceful farms, never knowing the wild seas of the North Atlantic. The farming of fish, or aquaculture, has long been a Norwegian speciality. Thousands of sheltered fjords dot the coast, making perfect havens for cages filled with fat and happy, pampered fish. The rather fussy business of spoon-feeding fish began to make a lot of sense 10 years ago, when salmon was close to becoming an endangered species, the victim of gross overfishing and industrial pollution. Their story is similar to that of the American buffalo, which bison farmers have saved from near-certain extinction. The plight of the salmon wasn't always so dramatic; in fact its pink flesh was the "hamburger" of Colonial times. Indentured servants of the 17th and 18th centuries became so weary of salmon, contracts were written restricting the fish to one day a week. One of Lewis and Clark's expeditions in Canada's Northwest Territories was stalled until the explorers portaged around an enormous "salmon-jam." the first fish to be tinned, with New England and California taking pioneer roles beginning in 1840. Both business and competition was fierce, as fishstarved settlers in the Midwest and Rocky Mountain territories screamed for a taste of the sea.

By 1900, salmon salting and canning plants lined add ½ pound bay scallops, shrimp or lobster. river banks in the Pacific Northwest, but so did chemical and paper plants. Their plumes of pollution helped sound the death-knell for salmon. By the end of World War I, domestic production was beginning to decline, hitting the pits in 1950 when only 1,000 pounds (82 fish) were landed in all There are promising signs of a resurgence, especially in Alaskan salmon, but demand far outstrips domestic production, and most commercial quantities of salmon come from Canada or Norway. This American variation of the French classic 2 tablespoons vegetable oil seafood soup can be served hot or cold. What a 1/8 teaspoon garlic powder perfect way to have lunch or begin a serious

A Review

By JOAN BRUNSKILL Associated Press

Not even the author knew where this one was going, it seems. John Fowles' new novel, "The Maggot," winds its way through unexpected twists and turns, through puzzles within puzzles. It opens in a gothic mood, combines a detective story with elements of science fiction and elaborates the development of fervent religious dissent as illustrated by a woman's conversion.

In a brief prologue, Fowles ex-plains the title. The maggot as "the larval stage of a winged creature" is, he hopes, a metaphor for his story. He also explains the word's archaic sense of a whim or obsession, in which he uses it in several ways.

The original image that lodged in the writer's mind and became the seed of this slowly unfolding, beautifully written story was that of five travelers riding across a deserted landscape. The present-day narrator broadly outlines the story, carefully placing it in the early 18th century in southern England. There's a central mystery, the disappearance of one of the characters, and a suicide. which occasions a lengthy investigation involving evidence supplied by various witnesses and providing different interpretations of what really happened.

The novel's form is a collage of straight narrative, transcripts of dialogue, letters reporting the interrogation's findings, and some facsimile reproductions of contemporary chronicles. There's a great deal of information about the historical period and the tenor of the times.

The author's epilogue is a thoughtful personal statement, an essay about rather than a part of the story. The story itself has a beginning but not a conclusive explanation — its reward lies in the questions it poses at different levels for the patient reader who is left with the choice of finding his or her own answers both to a mystery and also to what Fowles suggests are basic moral questions for our own age.

Real estate can make dream come true

By NANCY SHINER King Features Syndicate

My husband plans to retire when he is 40, to paint pictures in the fields like Vincent Van Gogh.

Of course, he won't be collecting Social Security, certainly won't have a pension and doesn't expect to inherit a fortune. But still he figures on living well: sleeping indoors and eating regular meals.

He announced his plans soon after our first son was born. I wondered how he intended to finance such a grand design.

To say that we were a family of moderate means would have been a great understatement, for we were a family of no means whatsoever. Gary, a commercial artist who drew fighter bombers for a living, seemed to be working merely to keep obstetricians, pediatricians and supermarkets in business.

So Gary had a simple solution: to invest in real estate. "The thing to do," he said, "is to find a basically good house that needs work. A handyman's special, you know. We could fix it up and then sell it in a couple of years at a profit."

He sounded serious. Of course, we were living in tight quarters since Andy arrived and brought a juvenile furniture store with him. But for us, a house seemed to be pretty far in

"Then, with the profits from the first sale, we could buy another, and so on for a few times. Till we have enough money to retire on. Of course, by then, the original loan will have been paid off..."

I was surprised when the loan was granted. We put the money in the bank, packed up the baby and hit the real estate offices. We toured fancy split levels far beyond our economic reach and hovels that needed the Army Corps of Engineers to work overtime for five years just to become habitable.

called with a hot tip from the auntand-uncle grapevine. Cousin Frankie just bought a house - and what a house! — for $18,000. Well, it seemed, there was a place like Frankie's for sale right next door.

It was an unassuming little bungalow, 40 years old, pleasant but for the holes in the walls and the striking absence of a bathtub. It wasn't exactly cover material for Better Homes and Gardens, and I suspected my mother of being an undercover Seven months later, my mother agent for Multiple Listing. rearranged walls, we built floors, we painted and we plumbed, and by Christmas time we started living like normal people. But we were far from finished.

We carried on with second-hand fixtures, borrowed tools and bargain lumber. To keep the cost of our investment down, we were turning draw, and houses to renovate and into scavengers, becoming regulars plenty of other dreams to dream.

Our mission was accomplished in 14 months. But besides creating a cozy little house during that year, we had also created little Brian, and our starter house was starting to get a bit crowded. It was time, we decided, for Phase II.

Within a few weeks, we found a buyer who thought $31,000 was a steal for a house like ours. And our dazzling $8,000 profit led us on to an even greater challenge — a rambling turn-of-the century Dutch colonial.

The place was in a state of sublime decay, sorely in need of a paint job, sadly lacking in any of the modern niceties. But it was positively reeking with "potential" and the price, $23,500, was even lower than we had planned on. The location, too, was perfect: a dilapidated house standing oddly among its lovingly cared-for neighbors.

We are inching our way, now, through the alphabet of the Do-It-Yourself Encyclopedia. We are amateur carpet-layers, glaziers, paperhangers, plumbers. Slowly, slowly, the house is being restored to its former luster. The neighbors are

A friend of ours admonishes us to "live for the present" as she watches us flurrying toward our goal. But, I remind her, we are doing both. We have the enjoyment now of bringing our home to life. And we have Gary's little dream, which may or may not be realized.

Of course, there's always the possibility that, after all our wheelings and dealings, the world won't be prepared for yet another Van Gogh. But our experience should have given us a certain resiliency. There will probably always be fighter bombers to

Enjoyment of sports can be catching

By RUTH DANYS

King Features Syndicate

For years I took it for granted that I could never like spectator sports. As a child I didn't collect hockey cards. On Saturday nights, hearing a hockey announcer shriek, "He shoots! He scores!" and seeing my father pound his fists on the table, yelling, "Go, go, go!" I thought they shared some sort of fit.

Boxing wasn't a hit with me. Wrestling never won me over. Baseball

In high school I got no kick out of football. The principal gave us afternoons off, telling us it was our "duty" to attend games and support the eam. Naturally, my friends and I took off, instead, to a nearby shopping plaza to smoke.

On the rare occasions when I did time in the stands, I didn't know what those helmeted figures on the field were doing and often cheered for the wrong team.

It's amazing how, despite a daily deluge - through radio, TV and newspapers - of sports scores and statistics, one can remain untouched.

they, that it's pathetic to watch grown men chase around with sticks? That someone spending a weekend in an undershirt, watching televised football, beer in hand, represents a tragic waste?

However, this summer I was unexpectedly handed two complimentary tickets to a professional football game. What a dilemma! I can't resist anything free. I started to search for someone to accompany me to the game. You'd never guess I was offering an afternoon of "fun. "I don't like football," can sound like a moral condemnation when said through pursed lips, with an uplifting of the nose Some people came up with excuses. "I'd love to go," one friend assured me, "but I don't have one of those coats — you know — raccoon." Finally, some arm-twisting produced a reluctant companion, Linda. Entering the stadium, we were a bit intimidated by the hordes of fans assembling. "I hope there's no fighting," said Linda. Unfortunately, there was. Two burly fellows were sitting in our seats, and after a heated verbal exchange, we had to sit on top of them to induce them to leave. During most of the game, we tried

After all, non-fans agree, don't to work out the basics. What color out of nowhere, two assistants would was our team's uniforms? Which end of the field were they trying to get Linda asked some intelligent questions: Is the grass fake? Why don't they paint the football a bright, fluorescent hue? There were other fans like us in the stands. At one dramatic point, when spectators were out of their seats, wildly booing a player from the opposing team, Linda turned to the man on her right for enlightenment. Though he'd been booing, he admitted with a red face he didn't know why. I then turned to the woman on my left, who explained angrily, "It was clean. He's such a baby."

Some time after the second half had started, we found we were enjoying ourselves. At intermission a sprightly marching band enter-tained. It felt nice to be sitting out in the open air. A camaraderie had developed the length of our bench, as we passed hot dogs and Cokes down the line and then the money to the vendor and then the change back along the line.

On the field, players were being regularly ground into the turf. Sometimes a player couldn't get up right away and there would be a few worrisome moments, but then, appear and clear the body off the After that one game, I started to sneak peeks at the sports sections of the papers and tune in for a few minutes of play-by-play on the radio. I went to a second game. Before I really knew what was happening, I'd begun to watch games secretly on television and resent blackouts. Words like "downs," "punt," "interception" and "field goal" no longer sounded like Greek. One day heard a voice in an office elevator say to a group of virtual strangers, Anybody catch the game yesterday?" and realized the voice was

The situation's getting risky. Though the season is rarely of immoderate length, it's still too easy for a rookie fan to overdo it.

When you start to carry a radio to dinner parties and find that your new interest isn't contained by the CFL anymore but starts to spill over into the NFL - time out should probably be called.

Where would it end? Next, Maple Leaf hockey games. Then how much longer could it be before one is refusing to leave the apartment because celebrity bowling is on?

Red, black paints help bring out the sunshine

By NORMA JEAN OXLEY King Features Syndicate

Angle was completely absorbed in her work and did not see me. Jabbing the brush into the red paint, she attacked the easel with strong, quick strokes. Next came the black - slashing and splotching it here and there, then sweeping the brush around to encircle the the red near the center. Now she added more red until her paper was completely covered.

As I watched the painting develop, I felt a cold chill creep up my spine. Savagery and vehemence exploded from that abstract painting with such power, it communicated all her anger and turmoil. The stark contrast of red against black shouted Danger! Whatever was both ering Angie had released itself through the brush onto her painting.

I cringed as I remembered what 4-year-old Angle and downcast eyes I had gone through that morning. I wondered, "What will happen next? How am I going to deal with this child when I have 16 others who need my attention?' None of the rules fit. I had been running on instinct all morning and my stomach was in knots. I thought back to how the day had begun. When my Head Start class arrived, Angie was missing. 'I don't see Angie. Is she sick today?

"Na, she's coming. She went 'round to the other door!" Robert answered. "She's in trouble, isn't she, Mrs. Norma?"

"I hope not, but maybe we should remind everyone of our safety rules."

THE CHILDREN hung an assortment of sweaters and small raincoats on hooks in the kindergarten classroom of the inner-city elementary school. A cool, rainy day kept us inside with plans to help the children make their own play-dough.

Angie still had not appeared, so I sent Veronica, our teen-age helper, out to look for her. Probably she went to the other Head Start door as Robert said, but she could be wandering around outside. Veronica soon returned with a worried look, but no Angie. Now I was alarmed! Angie was an intelligent, sensitive child, but moody and unpredictable. She had not been able to adjust well to the classroom routine.

My assistant noticed my anxiety building and whispered, "I guess our social worker was right when she warned us we might have trouble with Angle this week.

"Yes," I answered, "her mother wants to take off with her boyfriend and leave the kids in a foster home. Angie is bright enough to catch on. I must find her! You and Veronica will have to take charge.

"I'll get our old friend, Mouse Puppet, to talk about making the play-dough. Good luck in your search!" The puppet got its nose stuck in the play-dough, and giggles and laughter covered my escape out the door to the Except for my class and the other Head Start class, the school was deserted. There were so many places a 4year-old could hide. I began to run. I passed a stairway leading to the second floor. "Oh God", I thought, "I hope I don't have to search the whole school.

SOMETHING MADE me stop. I back-tracked to take a quick glance up the stairs. Just the corner of a lavender dress and the scruffed toe of a saddle shoe stuck out from where the stairs turned.

'Angie, is that you?' The dress and shoe disappeared. She hurried up a few steps and stopped. Silence.

I sat on the bottom step and started talking about Mouse Puppet getting its nose caught in the play-dough. "You lie!" came the voice from above.

See for yourself, Angie. I'm going happening. I'll wait for you here. Maybe there's time for you to help make the dough if we hurry.

Silence. Finally, the sound of soft rubber-soled shoes coming one step at a time to the landing. The rumpled and soiled lavender dress, freshly washed and ironed at the beginning of the week, hung limp from her thin Her black hair was tightly braided away from her pale brown face. There was anger and defiance in those deep brown eyes and determined set of her jaw.

A CURIOUS QUESTIONING look made the frowns flow in and out across her wide forehead and turneddown pouting mouth. She had no coat. Her hair and dress were wet from the rain. Even from that distance there was a faint, stale urine smell. "Hi, Angie. We missed you this morning. Robert said you went to a different door. I was worried you might get lost in this big school. I'm glad you're OK. Let's go see if the play-dough is ready." I held out my hand.

"No! I hate play-dough!" She ran stiffly past me toward our classroom. The tight, tense muscles throughout her frail body made her running posture almost grotesque. A few doors down the hall she stopped, head hung low, and looked at me out of the corner of her

I held out my hand again. She turned her face to the wall and let me pass. I

I looked back and said, "Of course not, Angie, you know that. Come on, let's go play." Again I extended my

She moved listlessly and dragged her finger along the wall where the bricks stopped and the upper wall began. Occasionally, she looked at her finger which was getting torn form the rough bricks.

"Don't you dare hate!" she shouted, but more to the wall than to me. Quietly, as if to herself, "Everywhere I look there's black. Black. Everywhere!" She spit out the words like she was trying to get rid of a bad

WHEN WE arrived at our room, Angie darted in ahead of me and ran to the play-dough table. Before anyone could stop her, she dumped all the cookie cutters, rolling pins and toy dishes out on the table, spilling most onto the floor. She grabbed for the flour, but eronica caught her arm just in time. She pulled away and ran to the housekeeping corner. She opened and slammed cupboard doors, rattled dishes and banged the pots and pans. I needed to stay close. followed her, sat at the little table and tried to start a conversation. She glared at me and wandered off toward the puzzles and game table. "I can do the duck puzzle and the school bus all by myself," Violet announced proudly to Angie. 'I don't care. I can do any one I want to, but I don't like any of those dumb puzzles!" A frantic look came over her face as her eyes darted around the room. I groped for something to say that would distract her. All those puzzles could be on the floor in seconds. "You seem to be having trouble finding what you want to do today, Angie. Would you like to go into the other room and play on the piano for a while?" She shook her head, stared at the floor and fidgeted with the hem of her dress.

"HOW ABOUT painting? I don't have the paints out yet, but I can get the easel ready for you now. She looked up and said, "Yeah, I wanna paint."

"What colors do you want?" "Red and black.

"Ask Veronica to get some paper for the easel, and I'll mix up the paint." We had never used black. Luckily I found a jar in the storeroom.

"Here you are, red and black. I'l help you with your paint apron.

Robot-like. Angie held out her arms for the apron, then moved stiff-legged to the easel and began to paint. As I stood there, mesmerized by the violence exressed in those red and black brush strokes, my mind flashed back again to something she had said: "Everywhere I see black, black... AGAIN I FELT that cold chill. Was I reading things into it that wouldn't be there for a more objective viewer? I asked my assistant to look. Her reaction was a visible shudder and a whispered, "Wow!

"OK, Angie, Veronica will hang your picture to dry." Her painting moved me to such an extent that I felt any comment would be an intrusion and inappropriate. She took off her apron and I told her she had time to play before snack time. I watched with relief and amazement at the change in body language as she moved to the play-dough table where just a short time ago we barely avoided chaos. She sat down next to Violet. Her mouth turned up at the corners - a hint of a smile. "Can I use the rolling pin, Violet?" When clean-up time was announced, Angie put her dough into the plastic sack, piled the toy dishes into the dishpan and went into the bathroom to wash her hands. She joined the others at the snack table and eagerly ate the fresh orange, crackers and milk. By the time snack time was over, the sun had come out and we were ready to go outside. I waited while the children got their coats and as I was about to open the door, a small warm hand found its way into mine. Angie and I led the way out into the sunshine.

DEAR MR. GOREN Q. - What are you up to? In a recent column you stated that a player's pass was forcing! I have always been led to believe that a pass is the weakest bid you can make? Who's kidding who?-K.D., Scarsdale, N.Y. A.-Nobody's kidding; everyone's right. In most situations a pass is the weakest bid you can make: it says to partner you have nothing further, or sometimes nothing, to contribute to the auction.

There are situations where that position is reversed, however. In auctions where the hands are proved to belong to you, if the opponents intervene and the next player passes, he is leaving more options open to partner than if he bids. By implication, therefore, the pass becomes stronger than a bid.

Consider this sequence: South West North East Pass 3 ♡

North-South should have at least 25 points on this sequence, and East's jump to four spades is probably an advance sacrifice. If South were to double, he would be saying. "Partner, I don't think that we can make five hearts. I expect our best result is to double four spades and take what profit we can. Don't bid on without exceptional distribution or strength. Suppose that, instead of doubling,

South were to pass. Since he does not expect East to be able to make four spades and he could have doubled to prevent North from bidding on, his pass now shows extra strength. In effect, he is telling partner, "I think that we can make five hearts. However, if you feel that there is a greater profit to be had from four spades doubled, by all means go ahead and wield the ax. However, if you don't want to crack the opponents, please bid on!" Let's consider another sequence: West North East South 3 4 Pass Pass

Since South opened with a demand bid, clearly the hand belongs to North-South. If North has a fast heart loser, he must double the opponents to say that he doesn't think that his side can make seven spades. If he passes, he is making a stronger bid than if he were to double. He is saying that he has firstround heart control and that he is quite prepared to play in seven spades if South wants to bid it.

We have hardly touched on the subject here. There is an excellent booklet on the forcing pass written by Eddie Kantar.
