Crude prices continuing their decline

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Most crude oil prices continued sliding Tuesday, as sellers glutted a market that has seen the cost of a barrel of crude fall 20 percent since Wednesday and 37 percent since November.

Some oil prices have hit their lowest levels since 1979 as oil producers attempt to sell more than the market wants to buy.

The price of Brent North Sea crude dropped to $19.70 a barrel in the cash market Tuesday, down from $20.75 for the same oil Monday. At the New York Mercantile Exchange, the major domestic grade of oil, West Texas Intermediate, closed at $20.60 for February delivery, down 67 cents for the day.

The price of gasoline, heating oil and other refined products recovered fractionally on the New York Mercantile Exchange, which reported its highest-ever trading volume Tuesday.

Also bucking the trend was the February futures contract for Brent North Sea, which is traded on the New York Merc. That price opened higher at $21 a barrel, fell to $19.50 and recovered to close at $20.20, up a nickel a barrel from Monday's close.

"I think we've got utter chaos in the oil business and there is no confidence in anybody stepping in to restore stability," said Rosario Ilacqua, an analyst at the New York brokerage house of L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin.

"The facts are, if the producing countries cannot get together to hold the price at $27, what is to hold it at $20 or $15?" said Ilacqua. While suggesting that more erosion is likely, however, he also joined other analysts in suggesting that price pressures would force an eventual turnaround.

The plunge that began Wednesday has pushed prices to levels not seen since 1979, when the shock following the Iranian revolution resulted in a tripling of oil prices, which brought economic activity to its knees around world.

Fears of shortages, the high cost of oil and concern over the double-digit inflation that was spawned by the price explosion led to conservation and fuel switching that undermined the demand for oil and helped produce the petroleum glut that now is causing prices to collapse.

The fallout also hit the stock market. Six of the most active issues on the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday were oil companies and all fell in value. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 14.68.

At the White House, the latest price report was greeted with caution.

"It is a complex phenomenon which will affect countries differently," presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, reading from a statement. "The effect of a drop in oil prices on the U.S. economy and particularly on U.S. consumers is favorable."

"In net terms, since we import more oil than we produce, it is also favorable on the world economy overall as a catalyst for continued growth. Of course, the fall in oil prices is obviously a problem for all oil-exporting countries and can aggravate the debt problem of oil-exporting debtor countries."

State keeping close eye on crude price, effect on budget

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock is closely monitoring the market to see if the latest drop in crude oil prices will affect the state's delicately balanced budget.

Meanwhile, independent producers say the lower spot-market price gives them the ammunition they need to fight for a tax on foreign imports.

"We're somewhere between pessimistic and everything's OK," said Bullock spokesman Tony Proffitt. Oil severance taxes, collected at 4.6

percent of the wellhead price, account for a major portion of Texas tax revenue.

Spot-market contracts for the February delivery of West Texas intermediate crude oil dropped $2.28 per barrel Monday to close at $21.25. The New York Mercantile Exchange reported another 75-cent drop Tuesday, with a closing price of $20.50.

The price oil companies and refiners contract for West Texas crude, however, continues to hover between $26 and $28 per barrel, Proffitt said. "The main thing that we're concerned about is whether those spot-market prices will spill over into the posted prices," he said.

The comptroller's office bases its collection of severance taxes on the posted price of oil, Proffitt said. With each $1 drop in the price of oil, Texas loses about $40 million in severance tax revenue, $30 million from sales taxes on oil field machinery and another $30 million in other taxes.

"There are some real fuzzy things on the horizon that don't give us that clear picture," Proffitt said. "If they stay firm, no problem."

Proffitt said the lower prices are largely the result of two factors: OPEC's decision to abandon attempts to control prices through production cuts and an unseasonably warm winter.

"The hotter it gets in the North east in the winter, the more Texas oil men sweat," Proffitt said.

The 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed last month to give up its defense of $28-per-barrel oil and instead try to protect a share of the world market by cutting its own prices.

Closer to home, members of the Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association say the drop in West Texas crude may help them convince the Reagan administration to tax imported oil.

Congress is expected to consider a variety of such measures this spring. Among them is an energy policy bill Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen has sponsored that would set a floor price for oil at $22-per-barrel. The bill would impose a tariff on imported oil that sells for less than that price, the tax would bring the selling price back to the $22 minimum.

TIPRO members said they will keep a close eye on Congress to make sure domestic oil is not taxed along with imports.

"We're hoping that this will only be a temporary drop," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association in Midland. "We're still optimistic that the price will stabilize."

TIPRO executive vice president Julian Martin said Congress should not try to balance the federal budget on the backs of independent producers.

"They don't need to be looking at the energy industry to help solve the problems of a national deficit and tax reform," Martin said.

Should the price of crude oil continue to drop, he added, "Texas would stand to lose several millions of dollars."

Hospital adds catheterization lab

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

For cardiologist Dr. P.V. Patel, Saturday's public viewing of the million-dollar cardiac catheterization laboratory at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital (formerly Parkview) means not only the introduction of new technology in Midland but also a few less trips to Odessa.

"I've been very frustrated," said Patel. "Before we had the cath lab, patients had to go to Medical Center Hospital for what I consider to be a relatively minor procedure."

Patel added that the drive to Odessa was inconvenient for both he and his patients.

"I would be doing an angiogram over there and my office would call to say that a patient had come in with a chest pain," he said. "It was just frustrating for everyone."

Although the official ribbon-cutting ceremonies have not been held yet, the cath lab is already in use, said Patel, who has treated two patients.

To the casual observer, the lab resembles a standard X-ray room with an assortment of gadgetry surrounding a flat, metal table. Upon closer inspection, however, the small room (a former storage area) is much more.

A selection of plastic-sealed catheters hang on one wall, ready to be inserted into the patient's groin and threaded into the heart's artery where it will spurt dye into the pre-determined area, disclosing necessary information to Patel.

"Once the dye has been put into the arteries, I take several pictures at different angles," he said. "This allows me to see if there is a blockage in the artery or if there is any damage to the heart from cardiac arrest and helps to determine if there is a need for by-pass or valve surgery."

The procedure, according to Patel, is conducted while the patient is "wide awake" and is not painful. Total cost to the patient generally runs "about $2,000," he added.

Three sentenced in Gandhi murder

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A judge today convicted a Sikh bodyguard of assassinating Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in October 1984 and found two co-defendants guilty of conspiracy to commit murder. He sentenced all three men to death.

Singh

"The present case is one of the rarest of the rare. The extreme penalty of death is called for," said Judge Mahesh Chandra of the Special Sessions Court, who heard the eight-month trial without a jury.

He said prosecutors had proved beyond a reasonable doubt that Satwant Singh, a bodyguard of Mrs. Gandhi, shot her to death as she walked in her compound garden on Oct. 31, 1984, and that Kehar Singh and Balbir Singh were involved with him in a conspiracy.

Besides the murder conviction, Satwant Singh was found guilty of conspiracy, illegal use of firearms and wounding a policeman at the scene.

All three are members of the Sikh religious minority, which makes up about 2 percent of India's population of 750 million. Their surname, Singh, means "lion" and is given to all male Sikh children.

But the chief defense lawyer, Pran Nath Lekhi, called the trial a farce with "no parallel in Indian judicial history" and said he would file an appeal within seven days.

"The judge is bent on raping the law. ... No neck is safe in India the way this trial was conducted," Lekhi told reporters. He demanded a copy of the judgment and walked out of the courtroom.

About 200 police were deployed outside the courtroom at Tihar jail to prevent demonstrations by angry Sikhs. The jail was cordoned off, with heavily armed riot police guarding access roads, and no trouble was reported.

About 50 people crowded the courtroom under tight security. Everyone was frisked and passed through three metal detectors. Reporters' pens were confiscated and they were given pencils.

City Council's first candidates file

From Staff Reports

The three candidates who already have announced their intentions to seek positions on the Midland City Council were the first to file Monday when the filing period began.

Stepping into the mayor's race are Steve Davidson and Carroll Thomas. Seeking the District 4 seat is Robert Rendall.

Mayor G. Thane Akins had indicated last year he wouldn't seek another two-year term but instead will enter the 21st District congressional race.

Davidson currently holds the District 4 council seat, this campaign treasurer is Doug Henson.

Thomas served on the City Council until three years ago. Serving as campaign treasurer is Robert Kaufman.

Rendall's campaign treasurer is Dale Strauss.

The other seat up for election this year is District 3 held by Bart Hotchkiss, who hasn't indicated if he will seek re-election.

Feb. 19 is the final day for filing. Applications may be picked up at the City Secretary's office on the fourth floor of City Hall. No filing fees or signatures of support are required.

Delegation suspects Vietnamese of 'warehousing' MIA remains

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. congressional delegation has returned from a whirlwind tour of Vietnam and Laos to plunge into preparations for hearings next week on the possibility that captured Americans still may be alive in Indochina.

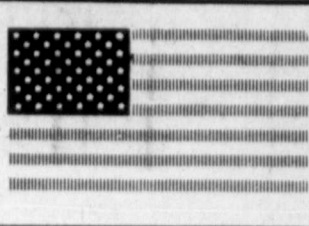

The first official Senate delegation to visit Hanoi since the war ended more than a decade ago arrived at Andrews Air Force Base Tuesday night following a nine-day visit to Hawaii, the Philippines, Thailand and the Laotian capital of Vientiane.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, said he will hold hearings Jan. 28 and Jan. 30 on the 2,441 Americans still missing in action in Indochina.

However, the committee's primary focus will be on the nearly 100 live sightings the government has been unable to dismiss as falsehoods or fabrications.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., who also serves on the veterans affairs committee, and Reps. Bob McEwen, R-Ohio, and Michael Bilirakis, R-Fla., accompanied Murkowski to Indochina and will participate in the hearings.

Murkowski said he hoped representatives of the Joint Casualty Resolution Center and the Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu will testify about the remains of American servicemen already turned over by the Vietnamese and on possible future exchanges.

NATION

During a visit to the center and the lab, its director, Lt. Col. Joe Harvey, told the lawmakers he believes Vietnam withholds information on remains for political purposes.

Harvey stopped short of charging the Vietnamese with stockpiling remains and artifacts of dead American servicemen in warehouses in Vietnam, but all members of the delegation said they believe that is happening.

"The issue of warehousing is so sensitive it could be counterproductive (to negotiations for future remains) but I can't help but find it ironic that the remains always appear at politically advantageous moments for the Vietnamese," said McEwen.

DeConcini said he has little doubt that remains previously turned over to the Americans were held by the Vietnamese before being released.

But he said the main issue was for the Vietnamese to continue releasing them so families could learn what happened to the men who never came back from the war. All four lawmakers said they based their belief that remains were in warehouses mostly on classified information.

Bilirakis said he examined seven military identification cards shown to the senators and congressmen during their tour of the Hawaiian lab last week.

"Those cards were in very good condition," an indication, he said, that they had not been deteriorating in the weather for at least 13 years. American involvement in the Vietnam war ended with the withdrawal of U.S. troops from Southeast Asia in 1973.

Murkowski said that during the hearings, information about 95 active "live sighting" reports of Americans in Southeast Asia would be pulled together.

He said specialists from the center and lab would not be publicly queried about classified information that might shed light on the suspected warehousing of MIA remains.

Budget face-off continues in Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has begun a new legislative year the way the last one ended — deadlocked with President Reagan over how best to stem the deluge of federal red ink.

The president, holding his second White House meeting in as many days today with congressional Republicans, is insisting that for now the goals of a strict budget-balancing law enacted late last year can be met with spending cuts alone. Reagan also insists he can maintain his military buildup.

On Capitol Hill, most Democrats and some Republicans say tax increases will be necessary.

"There's no way that you can fix the deficit with taxes," said Sen.

Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee. "Conversely, there's no way you can fix the deficit with just budget cuts. So you need some of both."

But the president again told Republican congressional leaders Tuesday that tax increases are out of the question.

"The president made it clear...at the leadership meeting he doesn't see any need for that," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Reagan invited all GOP senators to the White House for breakfast today as part of an administration effort to clear away hard feelings that may be lingering from last year and to smooth the way for the austere budget plan Reagan will send to Congress early next month.

That work will continue with a trip Reagan is planning to Capitol Hill on Jan. 31 to meet with House Republicans, who broke ranks with the president last year when he gave an approving nod to a tax overhaul proposal drafted by the Democratic-led House Ways and Means Committee.

Although Reagan is trying to soothe bruised feelings, he is showing no signs of a willingness to give ground on the new budget he is about to send to Congress. The new law aimed at achieving a balanced budget by 1991 sets a deficit ceiling of $144 billion for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

OIL

Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass., estimates that a one-year drop of $5 per barrel would reduce the U.S. inflation rate by one percentage point and boost the gross national product six-tenths.

However, the price slump may cause problems for domestic banks that have made extensive loans to energy companies and for oil-producing nations, as well as for oil and oil-service companies. Nations and U.S. states that depend on oil revenues would also face financial difficulties.

Three major oil companies, Atlantic Richfield Co., Mobil Corp. and Citgo Petroleum Corp., announced cuts in the prices they pay for oil. Citgo dropped its posted price for all grades of domestic crude by $1, and said it would pay $24.50 a barrel for West Texas Intermediate.

Mobil and Atlantic Richfield said they would pay $27 a barrel for West Texas Intermediate — amounting to 75 cents less by Mobil and $1 less by Atlantic Richfield. Mobil said it was cutting prices it would pay for other grades by 50 cents to $1.

Iacques said that while world demand for petroleum is "no more than 15 or 16 million barrels a day," the producers are now turning out "somewhere around 17.5 to 18 million barrels."

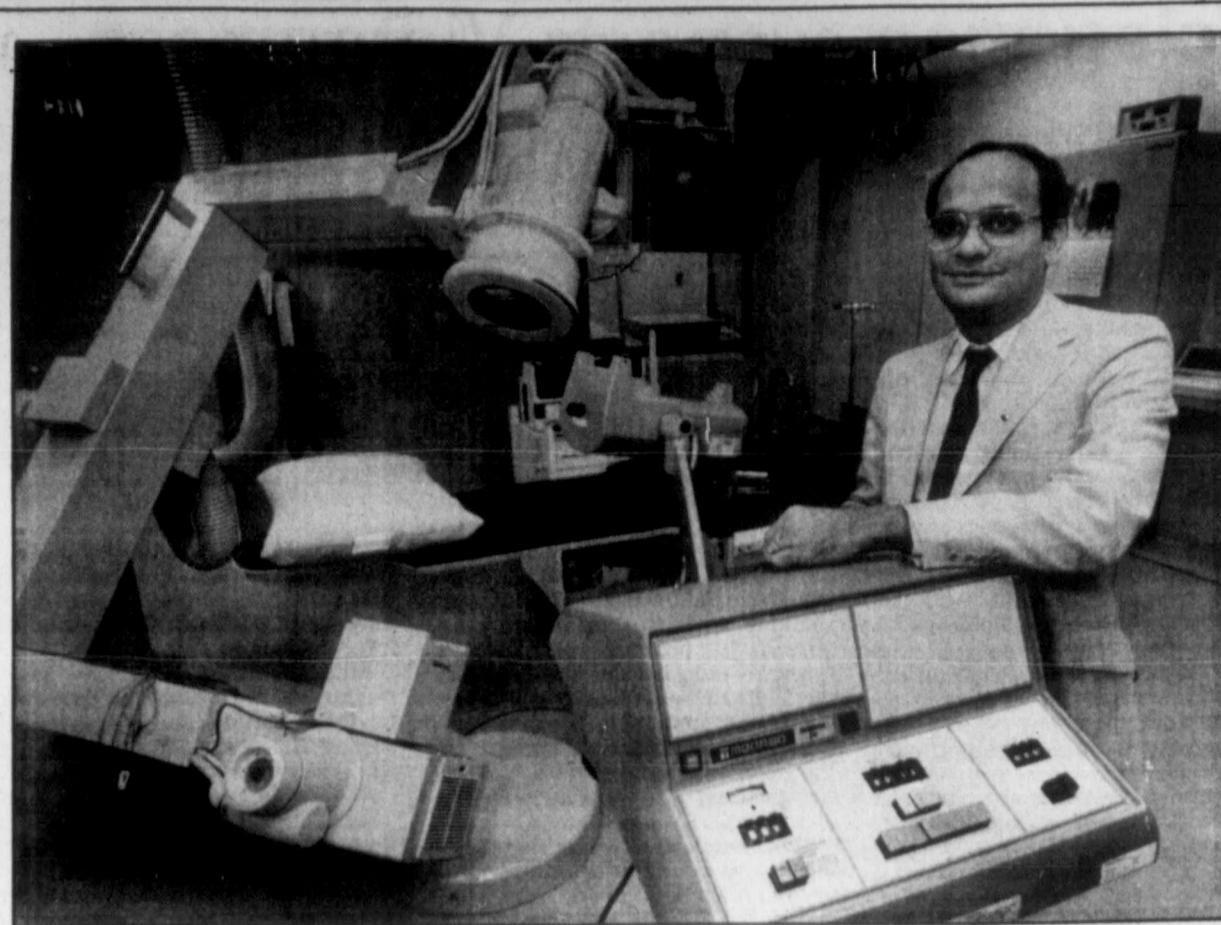

"The price has always been an administered price, and once it starts breaking down, nobody will stop producing until it gets to $10. It all depends on whether OPEC can pull itself together."

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced in December its members would seek a "fair market share" of the world oil market even if it meant cutting prices.

OPEC has announced that its oil ministers would meet in Vienna to discuss pricing and production strategies on Feb. 3.

Last Wednesday, before the latest price drop began, West Texas Intermediate cost $25.15 a barrel. In November, the price was $32. The spot price closed Tuesday at $20.10, down from Monday's $21.70 close.

Heating oil for February delivery closed at 59.92 cents a gallon, up slightly from Monday's 59.00 cents. On Monday, it had fallen 4.89 cents. February contracts for unleaded gasoline, which had dropped from 64 cents a gallon to 59.79 cents, closed at 60.75 cents, while regular gasoline stood at 60.22 cents, after having fallen to 58.90 cents from 63.28 cents.

Ron Jeap/Reporter-Telegram

Dr. P.V. Patel, a Midland cardiologist heads the newly-installed catheterization laboratory at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital (formerly Parkview.) The million-dollar lab will allow several innovative procedures including balloon angioplasty.

In a small room adjoining the lab, the cardiologist demonstrated how the catheter worked by re-examining a catheterization done earlier in the day. Appearing on a small television-type screen was a "film" of a patient's heart. A small, thin tube was visible in the right artery of the pumping heart. With a sudden squirt, the dye was injected into the artery, instantly highlighting a small, blocked-off area.

"This was not a serious blockage," said Patel, who considers only obstructions of 60 percent or larger dangerous.

The film (special catheterization film — Cinerex PFA) was shown on a "angiogram projection system," one of several features of the equipment-laden laboratory.

The catheterization procedure is a highly-coordinated effort by Patel and two other "team" members — an X-ray technician and a specially trained nurse.

Standing at the foot of the patient table, the technician works both foot pedals and hand controls to place the table into the position that Patel requires. A digital monitor overhead lets Patel, several feet away, know exactly what position and angle the table is at. A small cart directly behind the technician contains further controls.

The nurse sits in a small room in between the cath lab and the viewing room, in which she monitors the patient on a small video screen — a duplicate of one that hangs over the cath table itself. Through an audio system, Patel and nurse communicate any changes that may have gone unnoticed by the other.

Patel, himself, watches the catheterization process on another video screen hanging overhead next to the monitor screen. The entire procedure takes "from 1/2 hour to 45 minutes."

The dye (Renografin) is injected into the patient from a "MED-RAD" injection system. A small, orange machine on rollers, the injector warms up the dye to body temperature and allows Patel to pre-set the pressure, amount and flow rate of the iodine dye.

One other piece of equipment — a "crash" cart — sits ever-ready near the cath table.

"The cart is fully equipped with emergency supplies in case something should go wrong," said Patel.

The cardiologist, who attended Albert Einstein College and resided at Bronx Lebanon Hospital, both in New York, came to Midland three years ago.

"I worked in cath labs when I was in New York," said Patel, who estimates that he has more than 250 patients undergo the procedure each year.

The lab itself has future opportunities, he indicated.

"With the cath lab, we can also do balloon angioplasty (inserting balloons in to the arteries to clear them of blockages), but we have to have the proper surgical backup first," he said. "We have to have a cardiac surgeon present in case of any emergency." Currently, cardiac surgery is not done in Midland.

Patel expects balloon angioplasty to be available "in the near future."

Using the dye injector, still another procedure will be available in the future, said Patel.

"We'll be using it to open up arteries by injecting streptokinase," he added. "This will help especially in cases where a patient has had a heart attack. Hopefully, the opening up of the arteries will prevent further damage to the heart."

The system will also be useful for "electrophysiological studies."

"This just means that we can check the patient's heart to determine if there is a need for a pacemaker or different kinds of medication," said Patel.

The catheterization lab is the first step of a total renovation of Physicians and Surgeon's hospital.

The government said Sikhs conspired to kill Mrs. Gandhi to avenge the army's assault on the Golden Temple in Amritsar, the holiest Sikh shrine, in June 1984. Mrs. Gandhi ordered the raid, which killed up to 1,220 people, to drive out Sikh separatists using the shrine as a command post.

But Lekhi alleged Mrs. Gandhi was killed as a result of a plot that involved her son and successor, Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, because she was losing popularity. He offered no evidence to back his claim during the trial.

Chandra dismissed Lekhi's charges as "flights of imagination" and warned him the courtroom was no place for "political-personal vendetta or character assassination."

Before the sentencing today the judge denied a final application from Lekhi asking that several people, including Rajiv Gandhi, be called to testify. His previous attempts to call the younger Gandhi also were denied.

The bearded and turbaned defendants showed no emotion when the verdict was read. When asked by the judge if they had anything to say after the sentence was pronounced, each rose and said, "I am innocent."

Then they chatted among themselves, smiled and waved to relatives.

Satwant Singh, 22, told reporters later, "I have no regret, except that this has not been a fair judgment." He said the judgment was "predetermined."

"We want justice," said his father, Trilok Singh. "Satwant Singh will definitely be saved. No one can kill him."

Lekhi told The Associated Press that "Satwant Singh will not die a death accelerated by judicial murder."

Kehar Singh was an uncle of Beant Singh, a second bodyguard who police say also shot Mrs. Gandhi. Beant Singh was killed by Mrs. Gandhi's guards at the scene of the assassination.

The verdicts may hamper Gandhi's efforts to implement a peace accord he signed July with Sikh moderates in an effort to halt five years of separatist violence in Punjab state, the only place in mainly Hindu India where Sikhs form a majority.

Lekhi had said earlier that the judgment "will decide not merely a case, but also whether there will be peace in Punjab and the whole country."

Sikh moderates and radicals exchanged gunfire in the Golden Temple complex Sunday in an unsettled dispute over rights to rebuild a sacred building damaged in the army assault.

Lekhi maintains Satwant Singh never had a chance to fire at Mrs. Gandhi and was injured before she was killed. He said the defendants were made scapegoats because they are Sikhs.

He said the real murderers used more than two guns, fired nearly 100 bullets at Mrs. Gandhi from all sides and were allowed to escape by car.

White police officers killed as violence erupts near mine

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Black gold miners clubbed and stabbed to death a pair of white policemen, took their weapons and shot at pursuing officers as they fled into a black township, a news report said.

The independent South African Press Association reported that the violence broke out late Tuesday near the Western Areas Gold Mine, 24 miles west of Johannesburg.

It did not say what caused the violence, but sources among the miners accused police of opening fire during a meeting of the black National Union of Mineworkers.

There have been reports that the miners are taking an increasingly militant stance against apartheid, the legal system of racial segregation under which 5 million white South Africans deny the vote and other rights to 24 million blacks.

The South African Press Association quoted a police spokesman as saying the miners seized the slain officers' pistols and shotguns, mutilated the bodies and then fled into a nearby black township, shooting at police units sent to the scene.

Johannesburg is built above a wide deposit of gold, and the mines employ thousands of migrant workers from distant black communities.

Mine operators house the workers in male-only hostels, often long distances from their wives and children. There have been frequent outbreaks of violence at the mines, some of it based on tribal differences.

More than 1,000 people, virtually all of them black, have been killed in 16 months of violence, most of it related to apartheid.

Most of the deaths were the hands of security forces, but about one-third were cases of blacks killing other blacks in mob and tribal violence and in attacks on people considered to be collaborators with the government.

On the economic front, the Central Statistical Services, a government information agency, said the annual inflation rate for 1985 reached 18.4 percent, a 64-year high.

The rate for December had risen 1.4 percent above the previous month, and was almost double the rate of two years ago.

The inflation rate was the highest since the 22 percent rate of 1922, when white gold miners waged an armed revolt. The army put down the revolt, but inflation remained high through the world's Depression until World War II.

Meanwhile, representatives of the new ruling military council in Lesotho flew to South Africa to seek a relaxation of border restrictions.

On Monday, Maj. Gen. Justin Lekhanya and his 1,500-member paramilitary organization, the mountain kingdom's defense force, overthrew Prime Minister Leabua Jonathan in an apparently bloodless coup.

The office of South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said the Lesotho military council dispatched Evaristus Sekhonyana, once a Cabinet minister under Jonathan, to Cape Town for talks with Botha.

Botha's statement said the two nations had vowed to work toward "good neighborliness."

Jonathan, a hard-line critic of apartheid, has not been seen Monday, and he was believed to be under house arrest. Lekhanya and Sekhonyana are both considered moderates.

The South African government has accused Lesotho of harboring guerrillas of the African National Congress, the main black insurgent group fighting South Africa's white-led government.

Cruise missile tested over Canada

COLD LAKE, Alberta (AP) — A B-52 bomber took off early today from a U.S. Air Force base in Michigan to launch an unarmed cruise missile on a 1,500-mile test flight over Canada that has drawn promises of protest, officials said.

The bomber left Wurtsmith Air Force Base, Mich., at 1:31 a.m. EST and was scheduled to launch the 21-foot-long missile on a free-flight route about 9:30 a.m., said Canadian Forces Maj. Luigi Rossetto.

The missile will take about 4 1/2 to five hours to fly up the Mackenzie River Valley, over the northeast corner of British Columbia and northern Alberta to the Primrose Lake Air Weapons Range near Canadian Forces Base Cold Lake about 175 miles northeast of Edmonton, Rossetto said.

Anti-nuclear protesters had gathered in Cold Lake to voice their disapproval of the test, which was delayed 24 hours after fuel pump problems developed in one of the chase aircraft. A demonstration is also scheduled today at the steps of the provincial legislature in Edmonton.

The test is the fifth over Canada under a five-year agreement signed in 1983 allowing up to six tests a year. There were three tests last year and four are planned for 1986.

Two Canadian Forces CF-18 jet fighters from Cold Lake will attempt to intercept the missile late in its flight to test its ability to evade enemies, said U.S. Air Force Maj. Fred Harrop.

Two others will join the cruise as it nears the air weapons range, Rossetto said. "They will accompany the missile for the last half hour or so to allow the cameramen at the range to acquire the cruise missile on their cameras."

An instrument-crammed Advance Range Instrumental Aircraft "will be flying along with the cruise missile during the entire flight," said Harrop. "It will be monitoring all functions of the missile."

Greenpeace protesters, carrying a large anti-cruise banner, formed a human chain across the road leading into the Cold Lake base Tuesday. Police re-routed traffic and Rossetto said the demonstration had little effect on operations.

The seven demonstrators also refused to talk military personnel into trying to work during the testing, said Greenpeace spokesman Beverly Pinnegar.

Elizabeth Bouvia talks with reporters Tuesday at the High Desert Hospital in Lancaster, Calif., explaining why she wants the hospital to stop force feeding her.

Bouvia asks doctors to remove feeding tube

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A quadriplegic cerebral palsy victim who asked a court to let her starve herself 2½ years ago now wants a county hospital to remove a feeding tube from her stomach, but officials contend her action is just another attempt to commit suicide.

In a Superior Court lawsuit filed Tuesday, Elizabeth Bouvia, 28, said the tube is causing her pain. Superior Court Judge Warren Deering heard arguments from the American Civil Liberties Union on Ms. Bouvia's request and said he would rule today on whether to grant a temporary restraining order blocking the force-feeding.

Ms. Bouvia received national attention 2½ years ago when she sought a court order permitting her to commit suicide by starvation in a Riverside County-run hospital. The request was denied.

"I have not changed my mind on...the way I felt as far as, you know, wanting to end my life. I feel the same way," she said Tuesday in a telephone interview from High Desert Hospital in Lancaster, her first interview in two years. "However, I know the legal means are not there, and I am taking nutrition."

Ms. Bouvia claims the hospital, operated by Los Angeles County, has been force-feeding her since Thursday through an uncomfortable tube that leads from her nostril to her stomach. She said doctors have threatened to cease morphine treatments she has been receiving for pain.

"All I want to do is, if I'm going to stay alive, is I just want to be comfortable," she said, speaking with the feeding tube in her throat. She said she hasn't been eating solid food since April because it makes her vomit, but is taking liquid nutrition as much as possible.

ACLU attorney Jackie Scheck said Ms. Bouvia has done her best to cooperate with hospital officials to prevent her from losing weight. She currently weighs 70 pounds, a 4-pound drop since August, Ms. Scheck said.

Troops stand guard as Hormel plant reopens

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — National Guard troops cordoned off one entrance for workers to use and Hormel's flagship plant reopened today in relative calm following a one-day interruption forced when guardsmen formed a human barricade to avert violence.

In ads today on local radio stations, the company told workers which entrance to use to get into the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. plant. About 25 National Guardsmen blocked off each side of the street leading to the entrance and allowed only returning workers and three union pickets to enter.

Austin patrolman Bradley Bednar reported some "incidents" involving protesting strikers on nearby Interstate 90 this morning, but would not give details. No arrests were made, he said.

About 100 guardsmen were at the plant, with more on the interstate and on city roads leading to the plant.

"They're lined up I don't know how far back; you can't get close,"

Newsman die in copter crash

ELLENDALE, Minn. (AP) — A chartered helicopter carrying an ABC News crew to cover a meatpackers' strike in Austin crashed into a field in dense fog before dawn Tuesday and burned, killing the reporter, producer and pilot aboard, officials said.

"There were no survivors," said Roger Ledding, chief of the State Patrol.

Aboard the aircraft, which had departed a Minneapolis-St. Paul suburb, were correspondent Joe Spencer, 31, and producer Mark McDonough, 30, said Tom Goodman, an ABC News spokesman in New York.

The victims, both based in Chicago, were on their way to cover the strike at the Geo. A. Hormel & Co. plant in Austin, about 25 miles southeast of this southern Minnesota community.

The pilot was Curtis Mark Hagen, 35, said Lon Wojtowicz, president of Odyssey Helicopter Service Inc., of White Bear Lake, Minn., from which ABC had chartered the helicopter.

The Bell Jet Ranger was found just off Interstate 35 about two miles southeast of Ellendale, authorities said.

"The helicopter crashed in an open field," Ledding said.

armed with billy clubs, blocked off the plant.

"I'm not going to have people enter when there's a good chance of people being injured," said police Chief Donald Hoffman, who ordered the plant closed after discussions with Guard commanders and sheriff's officers.

His decision was cheered by strikers, who earlier lined the street and taunted guardsmen.

The plant reopened Jan. 13 for the first time in the five-month walkout. Gov. Rudy Perpich called out the Guard on Monday after strikers circled the plant with cars and pickup trucks and formed a bumper-to-bumper barricade. They rocked cars carrying replacement workers and screamed epithets.

"Today's activities represent nothing more than an interruption in our plans to continue operation," plant manager Deryl Arnold said. "The company has not made any commitment to keep the plant closed."

said retired Hormel employee Walt Chilson, 70, in explaining today's quiet at the plant today.

Some 300 extra troops had been called in today in addition to the 500 on duty Tuesday.

The plant was closed Tuesday as guardsmen, wearing riot gear and

Israel to repay millions in aid cut by Gramm-Rudman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel said it will refund $51.6 million in U.S. economic assistance to help the United States meet deficit-reduction targets, heading off the possibility other U.S. aid recipients will have to pay more than their fair share.

In what one State Department official described as "good public relations," Israeli Embassy economics minister Dan Halpern said Tuesday his government was making the refund in order to be helpful, even though it felt no legal obligation to do so.

Prime Minister Shimon Peres agreed to a voluntary refund after U.S. ambassador to Israel, Thomas Pickering, made a personal appeal during a flight from Tel Aviv to the Hague, Netherlands, where Peres was holding a series of meetings, said the State Department official, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Under the new Gramm-Rudman budget cutting law, the Reagan administration is required to trim 4.3 percent from most non-military programs for fiscal year 1986, including the $3.7 billion foreign economic aid fund.

Because of a quirk in the law, however, Israel already has received its $1.2 billion slice of aid, while other countries are faced with cuts because their aid is still being disbursed.

If the United States had decided to take Israel's $51.6 million share from other nations in order to balance the books, those countries would be losing 8.3 percent rather than 4.3 percent of their aid allotments.

"Basically, the government of Israel said if we can be helpful, we will, even though we don't owe it legally," Halpern said.

Wagon train woes

Wagon trains weren't exactly hay rides when Texas was struggling for independence in the 1800s. And now, 150 years after Texas won its independence from Mexico, wagon trains aren't much better ways to get from here to there.

Organizers of the 3,000-mile Texas Sesquicentennial Wagon Train already have faced desertions, hostile local concessionaires, budgetary concerns and lukewarm state residents. Fortunately, they're undaunted and say they'll continue. We're glad.

The wagon train, which started its odyssey in Sulphur Springs two weeks ago, is adding a nice touch to the state's sesquicentennial observance — along with giving native Texans and newcomers an opportunity to participate in a bit of the state's heritage.

But problems persist and what started out as a parade of 200 riders and 82 wagons has dwindled to fewer than 100 riders and 45 wagons. Still Charles Oliver of Dallas, president of the Irving-based nonprofit organization staging the trail ride, says, "Hopefully, we'll be matching our expenses as sales pile up." Oliver says the journey will cost about $2 million to be raised through private and corporate donations and by royalties from sales of concessions and official wagon train souvenirs.

We honestly hope they're successful. Texas' Sesquicentennial observance should not be remembered for its failures but for its rekindling of the spirit that helped to tame an unknown and harsh land and to give millions of residents the opportunity to pursue their lives and their ambitions in a land of freedom and rugged independence.

Think back to the days when the state's pioneers faced not only long, cold winters and hot, dry summers but also rattlesnakes, bandits and drought. Surely those wagon trains had tough going — but they made it and modern-day Texans are here today to attest to that fact by carrying Texas into the future.

C'mon Texans. Support this endeavor. It's part of the Texas of yesteryear making the Texas Sesquicentennial celebration of today a little more enjoyable. Don't encourage the organizers to circle the wagons.

JACK ANDERSON

Guerrilla sets record straight

WASHINGTON — A self-described "assiduous reader" of our columns has written to tell us more about himself and to correct what he says were errors in a story we wrote about him last July.

Jack Anderson

He is Eden Pastora, the famous "Commander Zero" of the Nicaraguan revolution and now the fiercely independent leader of anti-Sandinista guerrillas operating along the Costa Rican border. Because Pastora could conceivably succeed someday in his quixotic mission to drive out his Marxist ex-colleagues in Managua, his letter deserves careful attention.

Pastora erroneously attributed to us "a desire to hurt me" because we reported the doubts of our intelligence sources concerning what he would do if he ever gained power in Managua.

"I am a democrat, a revolutionary and a nationalist," Pastora wrote. "I have fought in armed combat against both extremes, against those who perhaps have led you to denigrate me."

"In response to your statement that no one can be sure where I would lead my country were I to come to power, I point to my fight against the Somoza dictatorship, often risking my life; and to my current war against the dictatorship of the nine communist commanders of Nicaragua, again risking my life and clearly demonstrating in what direction I want my homeland to go."

"I do not want for Nicaragua either the dictatorship of the right or the dictatorship of the left, nor do I want primitive capitalist exploiters or communist totalitarians. I want neither the exploitation of man by man nor the exploitation of man by the state."

"I want for my people a free society, with peaceful development, with authentic participation by the people in national decisions, with an effective political pluralism, under the banners of national dignity and nationalism — the true banners of Gen. Sandino, who today is falsified and reviled by the communists of Managua."

In his letter, Pastora addressed what he said were some factual errors in our report. His mother, he said, was Nicaraguan, not Costa Rican, and it was she, "with much sacrifice," who sent him to study outside the country, not the Sandinista underground. And he studied in Mexico, not in Cuba or the Soviet Union.

As for our report on "a curious incident" involving the young Pastora and $80,000 intended for Cuban President Fidel Castro in 1963, Pastora denied any relationship with Castro before 1978. He also said he never got training from Castro, "since I already had — and I say this with justified and patriotic pride — magnificent training in the school of guerrilla life as practiced in the Sevillian jungles of northern Nicaragua."

Pastora closes with this appeal: "Finally, I wish to beg you to help us spread the truth about the thousands of our guerrillas who are fighting barefoot and hungry. We fight in the south and east of Nicaragua, and if necessary we will die to see our homeland free of all dictatorship, of all repression, and where wave only the banners of dignity, liberty and national independence."

A FIGHT AVOIDED: Congressional supporters of the feminist movement are heaving a collective sigh of relief: They have won a reprieve from the call to arms for the Equal Rights Amendment this year.

Without making a big public to-do, feminist groups are backing away from another bruising fight on ERA, which failed to win ratification by the necessary number of state legislatures a few years ago. They'll make some pro forma pitches for the constitutional amendment, but will save their strength for more attainable goals: comparable-pay legislation, easing restrictions on abortions for poor women, and an end to sexual discrimination in the insurance and credit industries.

Many of these issues are being pursued not only on Capitol Hill, but in state legislatures and the courts, where slow but steady progress already has been made against stubborn opposition.

CONFIDENTIAL FILE: Libyan dictator Moammar Khadafy, who has boasted that he'll strike within the United States if we don't leave him alone, is already creeping quietly toward our shores, according to State Department sources. They have detected a growing Libyan interest in the Caribbean island of Guadeloupe. He is thought to be eyeing this tropical paradise as a future site for subversion. The Cubans and their Soviet puppeteers are also thought to be planning infiltration of Guadeloupe.

JUNGLE GUIDEBOOK: As the nation rushes headlong into the computer age, author David Rothman has written a thoughtful book, "Sillcon Jungle," that raises several questions worth pondering. One is the health hazard posed by the radiation emitted by personal computers. Rothman suggests that the government help the industry develop a technology to replace the cathode ray tubes that may cause health problems. He also recommends that government agencies at least consider letting employees "telecommute" by working at home on computers hooked up to a mainframe at the office. This system could save vast amounts of office space, he points out.

FISHEYE IN THE SKY: Fish and Wildlife Service officials don't deny that they use 11 surveillance technologies to oversee their 90-million-acre empire, as we reported, but they insist they need them all to crack down on poachers and dealers in illegal species. Closed-circuit television, for example, is used in "sting" operations in which federal agents pose as buyers of pets of endangered wildlife. Satellites will be used to track smugglers bringing in illegal birds, monkeys and other forbidden pets. And high-tech sensors are used to detect rifle shots in areas where hunting is prohibited.

FLORA LEWIS 'Chunnel' won't end prejudices

PARIS — They've been talking about it for nearly 200 years, and now they say they're really going to do it. Work on the "chunnel" (a tunnel under the English Channel) is supposed to start next year, and sometime in 1993 people should be able to go by land between London and Paris in three-and-a-half hours.

Flora Lewis

The idea has always been wrapped in high symbolism, the solid attachment of defiantly singular English with its once-global preoccupations, to the Continent. But they were more immediate and mundane concerns that pushed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and President Francois Mitterrand to their agreement on the tunnel Monday.

Both are deeply concerned with the stubborn persistence of high unemployment even as the recession ebbs. Building the tunnel is expected to create 30,000 jobs between France and Britain. Mitterrand's party remains the underdog in legislative elections due in March, and Thatcher will probably face elections in the fall of 1987, when work is expected to start.

Further, the project is to be financed privately, in anticipation of earnings on future tolls, so it doesn't provoke national budget headaches. It does evoke the aura of grandiose enterprise, like the Suez Canal in the 19th century, when Europe was the source of great engineering projects that changed the look and the ways of the world.

There have been hints that somehow a land link will reinvigorate the Common Market and make Britain more willingly and more cooperatively "European." But that is recognized as part of the obligatory fanfare, not a serious prediction at this stage.

For the curious fact is that the French and the British still see each other as the 18th- and 19th-century archivals they were, not as the close partners of a late 20th-century effort to revive Europe's vitality that they ought to be. In the British press the French are still "frogs," a disdainful reference to French willingness to eat frogs' legs. To the French, the British are still "rosbifs" (the phonetic Gallic spelling of roast beef), which is somewhat kinder but nonetheless implies traditional English incapacity to appreciate the art of cuisine.

The Germans aren't called "krauts" or "boches" any longer. The Franco-German relation is seen as the central axis of West European order, security and prosperity. Nobody in any part of the French political spectrum thinks of challenging the accepted need for getting along very well with West Germany in every imaginable field.

The former enemy is now the first and foremost ally. And Britain and France, intimate allies in two world wars, still grate on each other, Britain arousing suspicion in France, France hostile contempt in England. The reflex has nothing to do with politics among the leaders. Thatcher and Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany are both conservatives, and both get on rather better with Mitterrand, a Socialist, than they do with each other. But ordinary people see things differently.

Nor does much remain of the Gaullist suspicion that Britain represents America's "Trojan horse" in Europe. All the Europeans cultivate their own direct relations with the United States, and there is little worry that Britain's once-vaunted "special relationship" earns it American favoritism and preferential treatment.

Napoleon was the first to propose a tunnel, in 1803 before he became emperor. The British refused then lest the passage serve as a surprise invasion route. Now the security concern about the "chunnel" is how to protect it from possible terrorist attacks, a measure of the change in perceived menace.

Over the centuries the idea was renewed and rejected 26 times, including two abortive starts at digging in 1875 and 1975. The holes are still there. The new plan is for a two-bore railway with terminals at Folkestone and Calais, though the under-water segment will be a straight 30-mile line between Dover and the town of Sangatte, near Calais. Britain's preference for a roadway has been set aside for now, with a promise of looking at the possibility again after the rail tunnel is built.

Projections of traffic, profitability and economic impact on surrounding areas as well as on trade between Britain and the Continent are uncertain. In 1980, boats carried 18 million passengers and 15.9 million tons of freight across the channel, and both figures are expected to double.

But there is no longer much likelihood that realization of the historic dream will affect the way the French and British think about each other. The world changes dramatically. Old prejudice and attitudes linger.

LETTERS

Name deception unfair

On Sunday, Jan. 12, the Midland Reporter-Telegram ran its usual report of the disposition of criminal cases on page 2B. Among the names listed under "Misdemeanor Convictions" was the name of Barbara Snow, who pleaded guilty to a charge of DWI on Jan. 7, 1986, and was sentenced to six months probation and a $250 fine.

This surprised me a great deal because my name is Barbara Snow and that is not a very common name. Apparently a great number of my friends also read this portion of the paper, as several of them called me to offer their condolences and support. I had to tell them that I had not been convicted of anything and apparently there was another Barbara Snow in Midland.

My husband and I thought we knew every Snow family in town and we knew that I was the only Barbara Snow as of the date of the last phone directory. So my curiosity was aroused. After some investigation in the records of the Midland County clerk, I discovered that the person who had been arrested and charged under another name (her married name) but had, for some untold reason, been allowed to plead guilty and have sentence entered against her under her maiden name.

In doing so, this person was not only able to escape the public notoriety and dishonor of her criminal act but she also managed to shift that notoriety and dishonor to me, thereby blemishing my good name, the good name of my family and causing me a great deal of personal hurt and embarrassment.

This is wrong, desperately wrong, and there is something just as desperately wrong with a prosecutor, judge or judicial system that would tolerate, condone, or allow such deceptive and potentially harmful procedures. Not only is the criminal allowed to escape the public disdain they have so richly earned, but innocent people such as myself (whose only crime is that they coincidentally have the same name as the alias used by the criminal) are forced to endure public scrutiny and disdain as well as personal embarrassment for a criminal act they did not commit.

In this regard, I do not know why the MRT runs these weekly lists of convictions. I have been told that the MRT only listed felony convictions until the last year or so, when they began listing the misdemeanors, especially the DWIs, because of pressure from MADD. If this is true, I am sure MADD would not want a criminal to escape public scrutiny by being allowed to plead guilty under an alias. Something should be done to correct this unfair practice.

Incidentally, my thanks to the MRT for printing a prompt correction and clarification on page 2A of the Tuesday, Jan. 14, 1986, paper.

Lunn's charity overlooked

A few days ago I read a letter to the editor concerning New Year's Eve. I didn't copy her name. Her main gripe was about J. Gordon Lunn.

My wife and I moved to Midland in 1976. We had the privilege of meeting J. Gordon at the Dellwood Bowling Lanes during Bowling for Big Brothers. Since that time we have noticed that he has given his time to so many charitable causes that we know there is no one who does more.

He may not be another Elvis Presley, however we challenge that lady to prove she has done as much.

Reagan's presidency 'thumbs up'

WASHINGTON — As he enters the sixth year of his presidency and the 76th year of his life, Ronald Reagan is undoubtedly the happiest politician in Washington. And no wonder.

George Gallup, who measures happiness, among other things, tells him that 63 percent of the American people think he's doing a good job, and that not even President Eisenhower was as popular after five years in the Oval Office.

The doctors tell him not to worry about last year's cancer scare, and the Russians, on the eve of his birthday, have suggested that maybe the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. could work out a deal to rid the world of atomic weapons by the end of the century.

The president's reaction was interesting. Some of his advisers thought it was a trap, but the president took a different view. "It's just about the first time," he said, not quite accurately, "that anyone has proposed actually eliminating nuclear weapons. We're very grateful for this offer. We're studying it with great care."

His use of the word "grateful" troubled his colleagues in the Cabinet, but it's clear that Ronald Reagan is no longer the prisoner of his militant rhetoric of the past or of his advisers, but is being very cautious and beginning to think about his role in the last act of his administration.
Of course you can never tell from month to month where he's going, but lately he has been emerging not as "the Great Communicator" of domestic and military policies, but as the reluctant compromiser with the Congress, the allies and even, hoping he can do so, with the Russians.

There is a difference between what the president says and what he does. He condemned Col. Moammar Khadafy of Libya as "flaky" and as a terrorist who had in effect declared war on the United States. But when Secretary of State Shultz, usually the moderate in his Cabinet, recommended military action against Libya, and Secretary of Defense Weinberger opposed it, the president sided with Weinberger, imposed economic sanctions against Libya, condemned the allies for not going along, and sent his aircraft carriers into the Mediterranean but held their fire.

The question now is whether he can come to terms with General Secretary Gorbachev in Moscow on the control and elimination of nuclear weapons. How he handles this, even more than how he handles his budget and trade deficits, is likely to determine the record of his presidency.

All his predecessors in the White House since the last world war have puzzled over this presiding nuclear question of world politics, and all have failed. Now it is Reagan's turn. Without the control of military expenditures, now costing more than $700 billion a year in the world, there's little chance of dealing with the budget problems of the industrial nations or the hunger of the poor nations.

Gorbachev has made a spectacular but ambiguous proposal to eliminate all nuclear weapons by the end of the century. There are some promising aspects to it, but also some hoo-ers. The Soviet leader seemed to be dropping his original demand that the U.S. abandon its research into outer-space defensive weapons. He used a vague Russian word suggesting that while testing and deployment of these weapons was out of the question, "research" might go on.

But the nuclear experts and the Russian-language experts in Washington are warning the president that this is really no change, that Gorbachev is still insisting that there can be no compromise on the reduction of nuclear weapons unless Reagan abandons his research on defensive weapons in outer space.

In his usual way, the president rejected both the most optimistic and pessimistic views of Gorbachev's proposal. Maybe it was genuine or maybe it was a fraud, the president seemed to be saying, but let's toss it to the negotiators in Geneva, and see what happens.

Maybe that's why Ronald Reagan, going into the last years of his second term, retains his popularity. He deals with problems one day at a time. When he came out of the hospital from his latest physical examination, thumbs-up as usual, he flew off to Camp David and gave his weekly optimistic report on the state of our affairs.

He keeps proclaiming his anti-government, anti-Soviet, anti-welfare state and anti-Democratic Party policies, but he knows when to pull up, and tends to compromise in the end.

This infuriates his most conservative supporters and baffles his liberal opponents, and they don't know quite what to do about it other than to wish him good health and a happy birthday.

NATION IN BRIEF

Marcos, wife, allegedly buying U.S. real estate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New York congressman says he has evidence that Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos and his wife, Imelda, have secretly bought hundreds of millions of dollars of American real estate as a hedge against possible defeat in the country's upcoming election.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of an Asian and Pacific affairs subcommittee, presented documents Tuesday stating that a personal secretary of Mrs. Marcos paid at least $36,621 in taxes on a $19 million Long Island estate during the last two years.

One Republican, Rep. Toby Roth of Wisconsin, accused Solarz at a subcommittee hearing of backing his case with flimsy "circumstantial evidence" and of trying to unfairly influence the outcome of the Feb. 7 election.

Roth, who was outvoted in attempts to postpone or block the hearings, called them variously a "wild goose chase," a "kangaroo court," and an attempt by Solarz to influence the Philippine election by giving Marcos' opponents "a chance to throw a few mud balls."

Japanese suit reinstated

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the spring of 1942, the U.S. government forcibly removed about 120,000 Japanese-Americans from their homes and placed them in internment camps, where some remained for three or four years.

Since that time, U.S. courts have ruled against legal challenges to the massive resettlement, which the government justified on the grounds of "military necessity."

But on Tuesday, the U.S. Court of Appeals, in a 2-1 decision, reinstated a lawsuit seeking $24 billion on behalf of those interned.

Abortion foes march

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the 13th anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion, critics and supporters of that decision were taking to the streets of America to sway public opinion and government officials.

Opponents of the court's decision gathered from around the nation to hear a message today from President Reagan, then march to the steps of the Supreme Court. They also planned to distribute red roses — symbols of their "pro-life" cause — to members of Congress.

Meanwhile, the National Organization for Women scheduled events in 97 cities, from candlelight vigils in alleys "in memory of women who died from illegal abortion" to delivering coat hangers, another symbol of backroom illegal abortions, to anti-abortion legislators across the country.

For the second year, Reagan was scheduled to speak on a telephone hookup to demonstrators on the Ellipse, a park near the White House. Reagan, who opposes abortion except to save the mother's life, planned to meet later with leaders of the anti-abortion movement.

Voyager nears Uranus

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Excitement built among scientists as the Voyager 2 began its historic near-encounter with Uranus, searching the planet's rings for hidden new moons.

Voyager's duties today included snapping 151 pictures of Uranus, its nine known rings and five of its 12 known moons; studying the planet's atmosphere; checking for the existence of a magnetic field; and maneuvering into better position. Its closest encounter with the planet is Friday, but the encounter technically began late Tuesday.

College-aid files to reveal names of potential draftees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Education will give the Selective Service System computer tapes with the names of 5 million student aid applicants in a move aimed at uncovering young men who have failed to register as potential draftees, officials said today.

William J. Bennett, the secretary of education, and Maj. Gen. Thomas K. Turnage, director of selective service, announced the agreement at a news conference.

It is the latest step in government efforts to carry out a 1962 law called the Solomon Amendment, which bars student aid from males who fail to register with the Selective Service System.

The draft was abolished in 1973, but following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979, the Carter administration and Congress began requiring young men to register at age 18. While their names are kept in a central file, they cannot be conscripted unless Congress passes new legislation reinstating the draft.

The Education Department will share the computer tapes from its Pell Grant program each year with Selective Service. More than 2 million students receive Pell Grants each year and 5 million apply for them through the College Scholarship Service and the American College Testing program.

The Solomon Amendment — named for its sponsor, Rep. Gerald B. Solomon, R-N.Y. — requires male students to register or be denied federal grants and loans. Students must sign a statement that they have complied with the registration law.

Permian names Gaines coach

ODESSA — Monahans' Gary Gaines was named as the new head football coach at Odessa Permian Tuesday by the Ector County Independent School District school board, ending a short search to replace John Wilkins, who recently accepted the position of ECISD's athletic director.

"It's a pressure football job at Permian, but it's a great job. I know a lot of coaches who would love to have this position. I feel fortunate to be chosen over some outstanding coaches.

Gaines, an ex-Mojo assistant, has been a head coach and assistant, coaching the Lobos posting a 24-7-4 record in three seasons at Monahans.

At Amarillo Tascosa he had a 10-2-1 record and was 6-2-2 last season at Monahans.

Prior to that, Gaines headed the program at Denver City after serving a stint under Wilkins. Gaines has also worked at Fort Stockton and Monahans as an assistant coach.

Herring, the other finalist for the job, was a Permian assistant coach for 13 years under Wilkins.

Lee loses Tayrien to Tech

After two years, two playoffs

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Jack Tayrien has resigned his position as head football coach at Midland Lee to accept the secondary coaching job at Texas Tech University. Tayrien made the announcement today.

Tayrien, who led Lee to two playoff appearances in his only two years as head coach while posting the best consecutive two-year record (22-5) in the school's history, was offered the job Sunday by new Texas Tech head football coach David McWilliams, the former assistant at the University of Texas.

Tayrien was to be in Lubbock today for the official announcement.

"This is an opportunity to coach at a major college and a step up in my profession. You don't get this kind of opportunity very often. I feel like it is best for myself and my family that I make this move," Tayrien told the Reporter-Telegram.

Tayrien will replace Carlos Maynard, who recently took a defensive job at Miami, as Tech's secondary coach.

It marks the second time in two years that Tech has chosen to hire a Lee head coach. Spike Dykes left Lee after the 1983 season to become the defensive coordinator at Tech, a position he still holds.

This will be the third time Dykes and Tayrien have coached with each other. The two coached together at Big Spring, Lee and now Tech.

"I guess I know Spike as well as anyone and I'll enjoy being with him again," said Tayrien. "I've also known McWilliams for many years. I was an assistant coach at Big Spring when David was head coach at Abilene. I feel very honored to have this opportunity."

Jack Tayrien
...leaves Rebels

This isn't the first time that Tayrien has been considered for a coaching move this year. Tayrien recently applied for the Odessa High vacancy where he graduated from high school. He took himself out of that competition after interviewing for the OHS job.

"I want to emphasize that I am not upset about anything with my situation in Midland," said Tayrien. "I know a lot of people feel that I really didn't want to be here, but that isn't the case at all.

"I had a lot of friends in Odessa who wanted me to check out the Odessa High job and I did. I didn't know if I wanted the job or not until I talked with them about it.

"I've talked this matter over with my coaching staff and they are all behind the move I'm making. They all felt I would be crazy not to take this opportunity."

The move to Tech gives Tayrien a chance to fulfill a career goal of coaching at a major college.

"I started out as a seventh grade assistant coach in Big Spring and I set some goals for myself then. I wanted to become a head football coach, then I wanted to be a head coach in Class 5A in this district. I've done those things, but the other goal was to coach at the college level and I now have that opportunity.

"I think Tech now has a stable program with some good talent and a fantastic coaching staff."

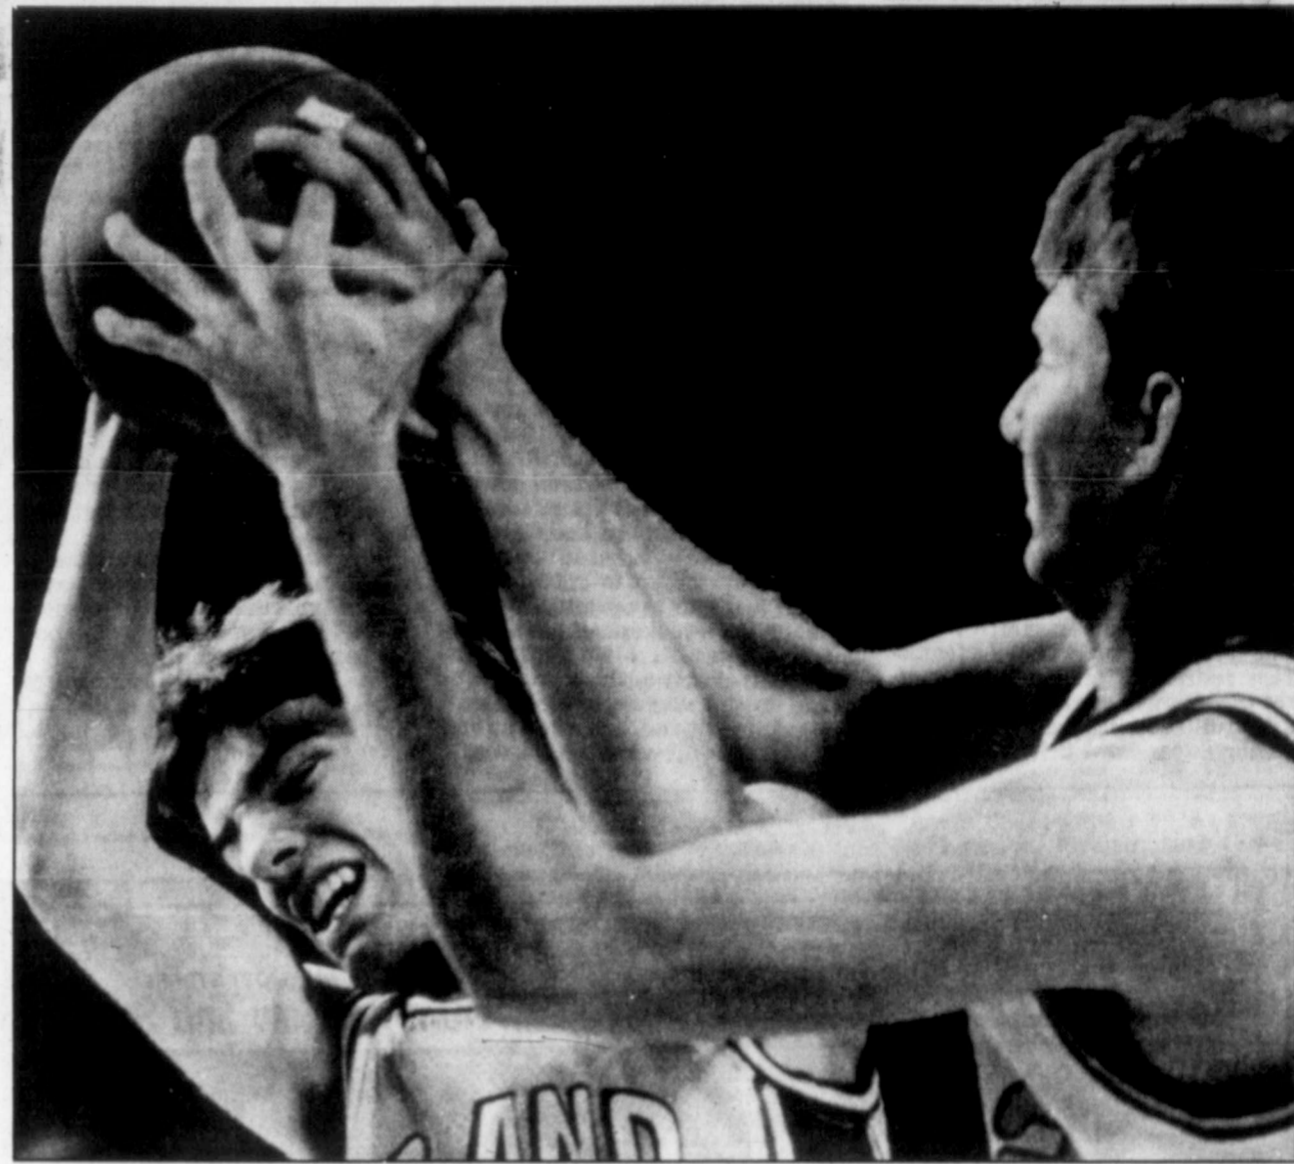

Tayrien said his resignation is "for all practical purposes immediate. I plan on being in Lubbock this weekend. We have some recruits coming in and I need to be there. It will probably be sometime in February before we make a move."

Tayrien, who was elevated from Lee's defensive secondary slot to Lee's head position following Dykes' departure, posted a 12-2 record in 1984, losing twice to Permian, including a 15-14 loss in the quarterfinals.

The Rebels were 10-3 in 1985, losing only to Temple, Permian and MacArthur.

Tayrien leaves the high school ranks with an overall head coaching record of 94-50-2. His head coaching jobs have been at Lockney, Frenship, Bishop and Lee.

Tayrien, and wife Ann, have two daughters, Shawn, 26 and Elsa, 23.

Lee upsets Midland

Rebs pull into tie for first

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Two minutes into Tuesday night's District 4-5A battle between Tall City cross-town rivals, Midland Lee held a four point edge. Thirty seconds later it was back to two points, but that was as close as Midland High would get as the Rebels took off for a 70-65 victory at Chaparral Center.

The game was all-important in the 4-5A title race. The Bulldogs were 6-0 going in while Lee was 5-1. Both are now tied for the lead at 6-1 as the first half of the season comes to a close.

While five players had strong double-figure outings, Tuesday night's star was shining on Rebel Anthony Dickens. The 6-foot-5 post played like a whirlwind, scoring, blocking shots and rebounding.

In the first quarter alone, Dickens ruled the lane, scoring six of his game-high 25 points and blocking three Elvin Mackey shots out of his six rejections in the game. Statistically, Dickens was 11-of-16 from the field and 3-of-5 from the line.

After a cool second quarter, with only a 1-of-3 effort, Dickens again went crazy in the third and fourth frames, scoring seven straight field goals to keep the Bulldogs' furious attacks at bay.

"I thought we did a good job getting to the backboard," said Lee coach Paul Stueckler. "I thought Anthony did a great job on the boards."

Dickens was a big key in Stueckler's three-part game plan. "First, we had to try and close the basket, take away the cheap baskets, get back quick on defense. Second, we had to keep the pressure on their good shooters, (Matt) Sears and (Anthony) Deande. Third, we had to keep pressure on their big guy, (Elvin) Mackey."

"I tried to keep him (Mackey) off the boards and we all kind of drifted down on him so he couldn't shoot the ball," said Dickens. "We knew Mackey and Deande were good shooters and had to contain them. We knew Sears could also hit his shot."

Dickens minimized Mackey's effectiveness in the first half, largely due to the blocked shots, and Deande, after hitting his first two field goal attempts, followed with an 0-for-11 skid.

Sears remained the most effective Bulldog scorer with 23 points, hitting 11-of-22 shots and 1-of-2 free throws. Mackey managed to claim a rough 21 points, 7-of-22 from the field and 7-of-10 from the line.

"I think we played real good defense to keep them from the ball," said Dickens. "We really wanted to get this one."

"We knew (Damon) Thorpe could shoot. We knew Sugar Bear (Earnest Jordan) could shoot and Thomas Wilson," said Stueckler. "But, that's not in their game plan."

While Dickens was scoring his 25 points, teammates Lee Dixon and Eddie Riley were busy adding 20 and 18 points of their own.

THREE TIMES in the first three quarters, Midland High was able to make runs at the Rebels, only to see the rallies fall five points short each time.

The Bulldogs mounted their first comeback in the first frame after falling behind 15-6. Sears and Deande hit buckets a minute apart to make it 15-10, but Dixon followed with a close-in two-pointer to stop the run and Deande and Dickens exchanged buckets in the final minute for a 19-12 Rebel lead.

Early in the second frame, the Bulldogs charged from nine down, 23-14 to 25-20 before Dickens, Dixon and Greg Johnson hit buckets for a 31-20 lead. MHS closed the half by scoring six of the next eight points to trail by eight at intermission.

After Mackey scored the opening bucket of the third quarter, the Rebels answered with three field goals from Riley, Dixon and Dickens — all from within three feet of the hoop — for their first 12-point lead of the night, 39-27.

Again, the Bulldogs fought back to five with Mackey hitting two, Thorpe one and Wilson cutting the margin to 41-36 when he converted a three-point play. Riley and Dickens punched it back to 11 with five points and Midland High didn't get back to the five-point margin again until 10 seconds were left on the clock.

"It was frustrating to see us get to five, have the ball on the floor and nothing would happen," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson, whose Bulldogs had to rely on a strong defensive effort to offset their 35 percent shooting.

"We had good shots, too, most of them," said Stephenson. "Paul's defense had a lot to do with it. They played good defense. It was a typical Lee, Midland High game."

While the Rebel defense was just as tough, their offense was working at a much better percentage, 28-of-58 (48 percent).

THE LOSS snapped Midland High's winning streak at nine games while the Rebels increased their string to six.

Bartosh begins search for coach

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

In the wake of the resignation of Midland Lee head football coach Jack Tayrien, the job of finding his replacement is already underway by Gil Bartosh, Midland athletic director.

And Bartosh says that search won't go beyond the city limits.

"I feel we have outstanding coaches in the MISD program, therefore, we do not intend to go outside the system to seek a replacement," said Bartosh. "We are not trying to meet any particular deadline at this time."

"We're not going to open up the job outside of Midland because we feel like we've got the coaches in Midland who deserve the promotion," said Bartosh. "We will not take any applications except within the Midland system."

"I feel like we've established a solid program at Lee and we could go outside and probably get 150 applications for the job, but we have fine coaches already here," said Bartosh.

Bartosh also noted that the only place the opening would be posted is at Midland High, Midland Lee and the administration building. He also said that the interviewing process would begin immediately.

Logically, the search will start with the current coaching staff at Midland Lee.

Miller, Whatley, Wolski and Stephens all have head coaching experience. Johnson is the only head baseball coach the school has ever had and isn't interested in the head football job. He isn't even required to coach football, but he came back after spending a couple of years away.

Wolski was named head track coach last spring after Sam Volpe retired after 24 years at the job.

Miller, Whatley, Wolski and Browning all came to Lee when Bartosh took the Lee job in 1978 and head the tenure list, if there is such a thing.

It isn't known if there is any interest for the Lee job among coaches at Midland High or other coaches in the MISD system. However, the interview door is open — if you live in Midland.

Tayrien, Gaines shake up WT

Mark down Tuesday, Jan. 21, 1986, on your calendar and keep it. You might say it wasn't your average day.

Jack Tayrien resigned his position as head football coach at Midland Lee to become a Red Raider. (Haven't we heard that story somewhere before?)

Monahans' Gary Gaines upset defensive coordinator Ken Herring to become John Wilkins' replacement as head football coach at Odessa Permian. (Wasn't it Herring who was Wilkins' long-time defensive gem?)

Midland Lee's Jake Young was robbed of $2,000 by the NCAA while on a recruiting trip to Texas Tech.

And District 4-5A's league leading Midland High Bulldogs were beaten by cross-town rival Midland Lee in basketball at Chaparral Center before an estimated 3,000 fans. (And yes, Virginia, there is a basketball race.)

WELL, JUST WHAT did you expect for an average Tuesday that happened to fall on Jan. 21, 1986?

It's just a good thing that Monday was Martin Luther King's day. Now Washington can make Jan. 21 an official holiday. We could call it "Let's Be Weirder Day." You can expect the worse, expect excitement, expect frustration, expect exhilaration, but expect something.

The lure of college football must be a stunning event for a coach — especially Lee coaches. Remember, Tayrien replaced Spike Dykes at Lee to go to Texas Tech. Now Tayrien follows and maybe on some future Jan. 21 another Lee coach will head for Tech.

The college lure is even bigger than returning to your roots. Remember, Tayrien, an Odessa High graduate, recently withdrew himself from consideration for the Odessa High job after making an application.

AT ANY RATE, Lee has lost the most successful two-year coach in the history of the school. And you really can't blame him for moving on. Tayrien has been first class about both situations. He isn't burning bridges behind him and commends all the associations he has had in Midland.

But go take a look at the facilities he works out of at Lee. His office won't hold him and a sports writer, much less a news conference. His kids have to dress in shifts and he has to shower after everyone has already left. One stall, eight coaches. And his 60 or so varsity players share three urinals.

He won't say these things, so I will. There were problems and it doesn't take much of a lure under those conditions. Still, it must be noted that Tayrien gave himself to the Lee job and the program is better off because of it. You can throw stones at Tayrien for seeking an exit if you want, but he doesn't deserve it. No one was more dedicated than he.

Wilkins will undoubtedly be second guessed on his choice of Gaines over Herring, but you have to believe that this was an excruciating decision for him to make. You have to believe he made the choice he had to make.

Wilkins will withstand the second guessing. You don't coach Odessa Permian for 13 years without learning something about second guessing. Now Gaines will learn that lesson under fire and he had better win quick. If Gaines wins at Permian, Jan. 21 will be forgotten in Odessa forever, but in retrospect, Herring may end up as the lucky one to come out of Jan. 21.

YOUNG WON the $2,000 last Saturday when he hit a mid-court shot in a halftime promotion at the Tech-A&M basketball game. He bought his own program that had the lucky number in it. The NCAA says he can't keep the money because he was on a recruiting trip to Tech. How ridiculous. Young quit basketball when he was a junior because he couldn't hit 15-foot jumpers with consistency. This was a football recruiting trip. Young should at least be reimbursed for the price of the program.

And that brings us to "real" sports. Midland Lee vs. Midland High. The annual war. Lee won this one to keep the Bulldogs from running off and hiding with the 4-5A title. Now all of Midland is at the top of the standings, leading the league, leading our world — both at 6-1 with seven games to play.

And on Jan. 21, Midland seemed to discover this worthwhile battle. The fans were the real winners — all 3,000 of them. Chaparral Center wasn't full, but the hint is the fever is beginning to spread. At least for this one, don't call a doctor. Just mark Jan. 21 on the calendar and note that we all got sick in one way or another. It just proves that all sickness isn't bad.

On Friday, Lee takes a road trip to San Angelo, 4-3, where the Rebels will face the only team to mar their 45A record. The Bobcats won the district opener 81-66 and it's a score the Lee players would like to vindicate.

"We'd like to get a little revenge but San Angelo has a good team," said Dickens. "This time, we'll play them a little harder on the boards."

The Bulldogs stay at Chap Spring where they will host 2-5 Big Spring Friday.

"Like I told the kids, Lee High (the second district meeting) is a long way down the road," said Stephenson, meaning a lot of basketball is still to be played. "What one has got to do is remember we've got Big Spring on Friday."

"Lee lost their first district game they played and then won six in a row. We won our first six and lost," said Stephenson. "I'd like to see both of us win our next six and go into the last game at 12-1."

In junior varsity action Tuesday, Lee made it a clean sweep with a 60-56 victory. Danny Allen led the Rebel attack with 18 points while Wes Watson followed with 10. Michael Ball led MHS with 15 while Eric Freeman added 13 and Varrick McDonald 10.

Super tickets scalped for $2,000

CHICAGO (AP) — Acting on reports that Super Bowl tickets are selling for as much as $2,000 each, the state attorney general's office said Tuesday it will seek a permanent ban on ticket scalping by Chicago-area businesses.

Judge Benjamin Mackoff of Cook County Circuit Court issued a temporary restraining order last week after the attorney general's office filed a lawsuit accusing the businesses of selling Super Bowl tickets for more than their official price of $75.

The lawsuit was filed after an investigation found that tickets for the Sunday game between the Chicago Bears and New England Patriots were selling for up to $2,000 each.

"This is meant as a warning," said Al Manning, a spokesman for the attorney general's office. "Ticket scalping is clearly against state law." The lawsuit names six businesses, five individuals and "other unknown individuals or corporations," according to the attorney general's office.

A hearing on the request for a permanent injunction was set for Wednesday.

Under state law, a ticket to any event can't be sold above its stated price without the consent of its sponsor — in this case the National Football League, Manning said.

State law does allow a company to charge a service fee, he said. Companies can be fined up to $5,000 for each offense.

NCAA rules no goal on Young's lucky shot

LUBBOCK (AP)—NCAA officials notified Texas Tech that a football recruit cannot accept more than $2,000 he won last weekend for making a shot from midcourt during the Texas A&M-Texas Tech basketball game.

Jake Young, a senior at Midland Lee High School, and several other football prospects took in the basketball game as part of the day's activities Saturday.

At halftime, Young discovered that the game program he had bought contained a lucky number, entitling him to compete in a half-time shooting contest sponsored by a local bank.

So he went out on the court and took three shots — winning $25 for making a free throw, missing a shot from the top of the circle, then made the shot from midcourt that was worth a week's interest on a million dollars.

Joe Hornaday, sports information director at Texas Tech, said Tech faculty representative Dr. Bob Sweazy was notified today that "under no circumstances can a prospect, or any athlete on campus, accept money."

Young and his high school coach, Jack Tayrien, had said they felt he should be allowed to keep the money.

"The money didn't come from Tech — it came from that bank. And I figure since I bought the program with my own money, I should be able to keep it. I don't think Tech had anything to do with it," Young said.

Young, a lineman, has visits set up to Nebraska, Texas Christian, Texas and Texas A&M in addition to Tech. He said he quit playing basketball "in the middle of my junior year" and had never made a midcourt shot except while fooling around in practice.

Bufs edge Wall in OT

By ERIC SCURJER Sports Writer

STANTON — After the Wall Hawks jumped on Stanton for 21 unanswered third quarter points, Stanton coach Eric Looney looked at his team and liked what he didn't see.

What Looney didn't see was panic. And it was the first-place Bufs' composure under fire that helped erase a 12-point third quarter deficit and lead Stanton to a 66-64 overtime win over Wall.

Stanton, ranked No. 10 in the state Class 2A poll, is alone at the top of the District 8-2A race at 40-19. Wall is in second at 3-2.

"Our composure was the main thing in the comeback — and our determination," Looney said. "Our kids knew they could win the game."

For a while, most of the game in fact, things didn't look that simple.

FOOTBALL—Virginia Trotter, University of Georgia vice president for academic affairs, testified in federal court that she once "academically exited" nine varsity football players who were failing a remedial program, allowing them to play in the 1982 Sugar Bowl. "I felt they needed an opportunity to prove themselves as students. They had made great progress. I would give them that consideration again," Trotter is one of two defendants in a suit filed by Jan Kemp, a former English instructor in the remedial Developmental Students Program who claims she was fired for protesting preferential treatment for athletes and other students.

— In the district race. But after Wall burst into the lead with steals off a full court press, they relaxed and settled into a slow down offense.

The Hawks may have slowed the game down a little too much however, as Wall's offense came screeching to a halt. The Hawks did not score a point in the final six minutes of the fourth quarter.

Meanwhile, the Bufs inched back, pulling within eight, 60-52, when Looney used a time out with 4:30 remaining. The Bufs came back with a press of their own, surprising the Hawks and forcing some turnovers of their own.

A pair of free throws by Derek Sorley, 16 points on the night, tied the game at 60 with 1:48 to go. Neither team scored the rest of the way, though both had chances to win in the final minute of regulation.

Kansas, Georgia Tech claim big victories

Associated Press

The score should have been more lopsided, but Kansas Coach Larry Brown was satisfied that his seventh-ranked Jayhawks had affixed the first blemish of the season to Oklahoma's record.

Sophomore Danny Manning spearheaded an early second-half run as Kansas built a 15-point lead that soon evaporated under Oklahoma pressure. Then, Mark Turgeon and Cedric Hunter combined on a quick four points that boosted Kansas to a 98-92 victory over the fifth-ranked Sooners in a Big Eight Conference game in Lawrence, Kan. on Tuesday night.

That left only top-ranked North Carolina and No. 3 Memphis State unbeaten among the nation's Division I schools.

"When we have a 15-point lead, we should win by 25," Brown said. "We wanted to use the clock with about four minutes to go, but they took advantage of our inexperienced kids."

"We played some great ball to get the leads, though," Brown said.

In other Top Twenty games, it was No. 4 Georgia Tech 87, No. 2 Duke 80, and No. 18 Alabama-Birmingham 76, Jacksonville 67.

Manning scored eight points in an 11-2 run that gave Kansas a 65-51 lead with 12:30 left in the game, capping the burst with a fastbreak dunk, and the Jayhawks built the margin to 70-55 with about 10 minutes to play. Darryl Kennedy's basket for Oklahoma with 44 seconds left cut the lead to 94-92 before two free throws by Turgeon and a slam

Permian, San Angelo win

From Staff Reports

Odessa Permian remained within shouting distance of the District 4-5A leaders Midland Lee and Midland High on Tuesday by virtue of a 58-52 squeaker over cross-town rival Odessa High.

The Panthers, now one game behind Lee and MHS at 5-2, got 13 points from Jimmie Davis, 12 from Lance Watkins and 11 from Parker Hager to nip the still winless Bronchos, 0-7.

In other 4-5A action Tuesday, San Angelo moved to 4-4 on the year with an 88-69 thrashing on the road at Big Spring, 2-5, and Abilene High edged Abilene Cooper, 80-55.

Chris Lowery continued to have the hot hand with a 22-point outing for the Bobcats to remain 4-5A's leading scorer. But it was the Steers' Brian Mayfield who lit up the scoreboard individually as the first half of the district season came to a close. Mayfield hit on 15 field goals on the way to a 36-point night, a high this year in the district. The Big Spring sophomore continues to lead the district in scoring with a 24.6 average. The Eagles, 3-4, rallied in the fourth quarter to overcome the fiery Cougars from Cooper.

TED BATTLES

What's a little place like Foxboro...

Anaheim, Azusa and Cucamonga. Wasn't that the line Jack Benny used when he wanted to illustrate small town, as small as you can get?

Anaheim, Azusa and Cucamonga...the West Texas equivalent would be Goldsmith, No Trees and Mentone.

Maybe West Texans are cozily familiar with Goldsmith, No Trees and Mentone, but can you imagine the perplexed look the mention those towns would bring to the face of someone from Pennsylvania, Illinois or North Dakota?

The guy from Illinois might grudgingly admit, "I've heard of Eden, Texas. Everybody in Chicago has. They've got a bar there. I think it's called Billy Bob's. But who ever heard of those other places. Did some one make them up?"

SO ANAHEIM has grown up a little bit since Benny's days and is making believe it's a grown up city.

Same with Irving, the Dallas suburb that not so long ago was the last chance for gas before Denton.

Regardless of inflated opinions of themselves, Anaheim and Irving still aren't that big and they have no business playing a big city like Chicago.

True, all are professional teams and dip from the same talent pool, but if you don't believe size makes a difference, as C. Dillon Stengel might have suggested, "You can look it up."

The Chicago Bears proved that when they beat the Irving Cowboys 44-0 and the Anaheim Rams 24-0. Let's not even talk about the fate of the East Rutherford, N.J., Giants. At least when Foxboro Patriots from Massachusetts played the other East Rutherford team in the first round of the playoffs, it was tackling someone more in its population classification.

But Anaheim and Irving are big towns compared to Foxboro, and Foxboro is the team they are bringing into the Super Bowl Sunday to play the Bears.

FOXBORO. It's fudging if it claims 15,000 souls. Foxboro is so small that when their football team came back from Miami, it had to land in another state.

Foxboro. If it were in Texas and had a team in the UIL, it would be Class AAA, AAAA at the outside. It wouldn't even qualify for the same league as Big Spring, yet it is going to play the big, bad Bears.

Foxboro. It's not even as big as the biggest town in Vermont and everybody knows there aren't any big towns in Vermont.

Foxboro is so small the Patriots' offices aren't even located there. Well, that's not really all that bad, I guess. The Cowboys' offices aren't in Irving either.

NO WONDER this year's Super Bowl looms as the greatest mismatch in the sordid annals of the contest.

The enormity of that claim is frightening when one considers the classic mismatches that have occurred under the guise of professional football championships.

This is Joe Louis-Billy Conn all over again, the full-sized heavyweight champion against the middleweight, who claimed he weighed 169.

We all know what happened in that one. Conn danced circles around Joe and had the fight won until he decided to trade punches with Louis, like a real heavyweight should.

Come to think of it, even though the bigger man won, it's a fight they still talk about. That's the way it is, sometimes, with mismatches.

Crescent City far from tenements

By HAL BOCK

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Cajun cuisine and jubilant jazz. Bourbon Street and the French Quarter. Pass the pralines and which way, please, to the streetcar named Desire?

The glamour and excitement of Sunday's Super Bowl is a long way from the teeming tenements of Newark, N.J., and Brooklyn, N.Y., which produced two of the key actors in the drama — New England's Andre Tippett and Chicago's Otis Wilson.

In Newark and Brooklyn, excitement often is concentrated in a street fight or a drug bust. It was this troubled environment that produced these two inner city linebackers, street smart and tough, a pair of All-Pro's who likely will play key roles Sunday in a setting far from the one where they first learned football.

Wilson was asked to talk a little about his old Brooklyn neighborhood. He chuckled.

"I could talk a lot about it," he said. "You don't live there. You survive there."

"It was project living, a lot of different ethnic groups. I got into trouble now and then. I had a few fights here and there."

Fights? Well, now, Tippett would know a little something about that. Fights have been known to happen occasionally in Newark. When Tippett was 22, he began taking karate lessons for self-defense.

"I was the oldest in my family," he said. "I didn't have somebody I could go to if I got in a fight, somebody who could straighten it out for me."

So he went about learning how to straighten them out for himself. He eventually became a second-degree black belt. "After I got proficient, I didn't need it," he said. "All the damage had been done. It was like a college degree. I had it, now what do I do with it?"

There was one moment when Tippett applied his karate skill on a football field. "It was out of fear and reaction," he said. "It was against Cleveland. I got hit from the back and something automatic happened."

Tippett recalled the sequence, his rush of the quarterback, the pass, and his pursuit of the play. And most of all, he recalled what Browns' guard Joe DeLamielleure did.

"I turned to the ball," Tippett said. "I was five or six yards away from him. He ran up and hit me. I just reacted, turned and swept him off his feet with my feet, kicked his heels out."

DeLamielleure was flabbergasted by the karate, something he had not encountered before on a football field. "He was running around, trying to figure out who did it," Tippett said, laughing. "He found out. It was the only time I ever used it. I could hurt somebody with it, but I try to restrain myself."

This was not necessary in Newark, where restraint was rarely practiced in Tippett's old neighborhood.

"It was a black neighborhood and there were some areas you had to leave before the sun went down," he said.

"I saw a lot of things I didn't want to become. You've heard it all — the drug scene, muggings, guys who didn't go to school, guys who taught me how to cut classes. I just decided I didn't want to be that."

Tippett used football to escape, first to the University of Iowa, then to New England, where he led the AFC in sacks this season with 16½. Wilson's route took him to Syracuse for one year and then on to Louisville before the Bears drafted him in the first round in 1980.

Now they are leaders of their respective defenses, Wilson barking across the line like a junkyard dog, Tippett on permanent sack patrol for the Patriots.

Wilson's barking routine started in Chicago's 44-0 devastation of Dallas. "We were dogging them," he explained. "Our defense, there are so many personalities, we're like a zoo."

Tech ready to get back to miracle finishes

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Tech is 3-1 in miracle finishes.

The Red Raiders just hope tonight's game against Southern Methodist can help the defending Southwest Conference basketball champions forget the one that got away.

The Red Raiders had specialized in winning last-second thrillers until the fates turned against them Saturday in friendly Municipal Coliseum. They were 4-0 thanks to three, last-second, game-winning shots from Tony (the Buzzer Beater) Benford.

It appeared the Texas Aggies were on the verge of falling victim to the Red Raider magic.

Leading by two points, Dewayne Chism stole a pass and drove uncontested for a slam dunk. However, he missed and the Aggies converted the error into a three-point play that won the game 58-57.

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers slammed his fist into the floor but later recovered his poise.

Myers said "People have to remember that Chism didn't miss the shot on purpose. Nobody feels worse than he does.

"There were other circumstances that led to the loss. We'll have to forget about it."

Myers added "We've had some miraculous wins and this is one that was miraculous the other way. I guess everything evens out." Aggie Coach Shelby Metcalf said

"It was the greatest comeback I've ever seen and I've been coaching quite awhile."

In other games tonight, Rice is at Baylor, Texas A&M is at Houston, and TCU is at Texas.

Against this backdrop, the Red Raiders visit Moody Coliseum alone in second place behind the Aggies.

They'll face a revived Southern Methodist team that may have found itself in a 63-56 upset of the Texas Longhorns on Saturday night.

Osbourne defends 'Suicide Solution' as life-affirming, not pro-suicide, song

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Ozzy Osbourne defended his song "Suicide Solution" as a life-affirming song after parents of a teen-ager who killed himself filed a lawsuit against the heavy-metal rocker.

"The song wasn't written for suicide. It was anti-suicide," Osbourne, 37, said at a news conference Tuesday. "It was about a friend of mine who killed himself on alcohol and drugs. 'Suicide Solution,' meaning solution as a liquid, not as a solution to the way out."

He said the friend was Bon Scott of the Australian heavy metal group AC/DC, who died in London of acute alcohol poisoning in February 1980.

Osbourne's lawyer, Howard Weitzman, attacked the lawsuit filed last October by the parents of John Daniel McCollum, 19, of Indio, who shot himself in October 1984 while listening to the song.

The parents' suit did not state how much money it sought, saying its goal was to attack music lyrics about sex, death, suicide and drugs. Chickie Kleiner, a spokeswoman for the family, was not in her office when called for comment Tuesday.

The British performer said the parents had misinterpreted several lines from his songs. One such line says "I tell you to enjoy life," not "I tell you to end your life," Osbourne said.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Allison Brown, a 17-year-old from Edmond, Okla., was crowned Miss Teen USA Tuesday night, winning $150,000 in cash and prizes.

The blonde, green-eyed Miss Brown, who said her mother was a feminist and had once picketed beauty pageants, was selected over first runner-up Miss Texas, Becky Pestana, also 17, of San Antonio.

The second runner-up was Miss New York, Claudia Liem, 15, of Glendale; third runner-up was Miss Virginia, Angela Thigpen of Portsmouth, 15, and fourth runner-up was Miss South Dakota, Valerie Marsden, 17, of Rapid City.

Contestants from all 50 states and the District of Columbia were judged in swimsuit and evening gown competitions in the nationally televised pageant at the Ocean Center.

Other semifinalists were Miss West Virginia, Jody Caldwell, 15; Miss Louisiana, Shasta St. Angelo, 16; Miss New Mexico, Kerall Hansen, 17; Miss Florida, Stefanie Smith, 16; Miss New Jersey, Rosalie Cecilia Cuzzo, 17.

During the show, Miss Brown said her mother, Suzanne Brown, an author of historical books, had once picketed beauty pageants.

"But she supports me now," said Miss Brown, a student at Edmond Memorial High School.

Hosts for the fourth-annual pageant for girls ages 15 to 18 were television personality Michael Young and actress Morgan Brittany. They also were hosts of the first pageant.

Also featured in the show were celebrities Bobby Rydell, Fabian, Frankie Avalon, the Commodores and the Solid Gold Dancers.

Demonstrators marched peacefully outside the hall, carrying placards such as "For This We Pay Taxes" and "Taxes Should Not Fund Sexist Events."

Bonnie Berns of the Volusia-Flagler chapter of the National Organization for Women, which organized the protest, said her group has asked the state attorney's office to investigate if $100,000 of the $250,000 the Volusia County Council spent to promote and help produce the contest was a legal contribution.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Princess Stephanie of Monaco topped Mr. Blackwell's list of the worst-dressed women of 1985, but her older sister, Caroline, was named one of the year's best-dressed.

Stephanie's "unisex wardrobe entitles her to use either bathroom," sniffed the fashion designer, who has been composing the lists for 26 years.

Others on the international worst-dressed list, in order, were: actress Joan Collins, rock singers Madonna and Tina Turner; and actresses Michele Lee, Whoopi Goldberg, Cybill Shepherd, Lisa Hartman, Apollonia and Heather Thomas.

Blackwell, whose first name is Richard, also chose actress Lauren Hutton as "Fabulous Woman of the Year" Tuesday.

He named 10 women to his list of "Fabulous Fashion Independence of 1985": first lady Nancy Reagan; Soviet first lady Raisa Gorbachev; Princess Caroline; Princess Diana; and actresses Jaclyn Smith, Meryl Streep, Mary Tyler Moore, Priscilla Presley, Jane Wyman, and Jane Seymour.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass. (AP) — When a $10,000 check arrived from actor Paul Newman as a donation to a hospice, executive director Laura Aiello thought twice about cashing it.

But she quickly conceded a photocopy would do as a memento.

"I was going to frame the check," Mrs. Aiello said. "It was sort of a joke around the office."

Newman donated the money earlier this month from his company, Salad King Inc., after an application was filed on behalf of Hospice of Northern Berkshire last year by a Hospice board member.

The Westport, Conn.-based company, which makes salad dressing, spaghetti sauce and popcorn, has donated more than $7 million to charity in the past three years.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bruce Weitz, the scruffy undercover cop Belker on "Hill Street Blues," joined with first lady Nancy Reagan to promote an anti-drug documentary.

Mrs. Reagan, who is to appear in the May 7 public television broadcast of "Chemical People II," said at the White House reception Tuesday that she hoped the effort would help those who have become "slaves to drugs."

The program follows one televised in 1983 that helped inspire 8,000 anti-drug groups around the country. Both Weitz and Mrs. Reagan appeared in the initial broadcast.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Steve Allen will finish up radiation treatment this week after an operation on his colon that "was nearly identical to the surgery President Reagan had," his publicist said.

Fourteen inches of Allen's intestine were removed in the surgery last November. "He recovered fine from the surgery, and the polyps were benign, but the doctor recommended radiation therapy as insurance," Allen's spokesman, Sam Honigsberg, said Tuesday.

ing habitat for the Upper Big Bend white-winged dove, a large distinct subspecies of whitewing.

TPWD biologists are investigating reports of a suspected occurrence of a blood disease among the white-tailed deer in four northeast Texas counties.

Horace Gore of the TPWD said hunters reported deer harvested had spongy or lost hooves or tiny hemorrhages in their flesh and internal organs.

"These are symptoms of Epizootic hemorrhagic disease," Gore said. "This is an infectious and fatal disease which is fairly rare in Texas, but has caused serious losses of both mule and whitetail deer and pronghorn antelope in other parts of North America."

The disease is spread by vectors such as biting gnats and ordinarily occurs in summer and early fall...

Dogs may be man's best friend, but over the centuries they also have been used as bed-warmers, worn as items of women's fashion, and worshiped as religious symbols.

The many aspects that make up a dog's life are detailed in an article in the February issue of Sports Afield which reveals these odd and unusual facts about dogs.

In cold climates, dogs such as the Chihuahua were used regularly as heating pads, while ladies of fashion once "wore" dogs as important parts of their total look. Toy poodles, Pekingese and other small breeds were especially popular as fashion accessories.

On the Solomon Islands, dogs had special value until the 20th century — the natives used their teeth as money.

DOGS HAVE been important as religious symbols in some cultures and as political mascots in others.

On the religious side, for instance, there was the dog Anubis, who was a god of the Egyptians 25 centuries ago, and Tien Ken, the heavenly dog of the Chinese.

While the donkey and the elephant are the animal mascots of the Democratic and Republican parties in the United States, in 18th-century Holland it was a dog called a keeshound that symbolized the Patriots Party.

Among the odd facts about dogs is that the Canary Islands were named for a large canine breed, not a small yellow songbird. The present name comes the Latin name, Insularia Canaria — "island of dogs."

DOGS also have had their diplomatic uses — for centuries it was traditional for the Dalai Lama of Tibet to honor members of the Manchu Dynasty by giving them gifts of Lhasa apso terriers.

The rarest dog in the world may be the lowchen, or lion dog. As of several years ago, only 52 were known to exist. The lowchen was a famous lapdog of the nobility in southern Europe during the Renaissance.

In the United States, two dogs came over with the Pilgrims on the Mayflower — a mastiff and a spaniel.

Feeding a dog can be expensive — particularly a big one. A Great Dane or Irish wolfhound eats about $800 in dog food each year. Herm Albright wrote in Sports Afield, while toy poodles consume about $120.

Hypothermia, precautions save lives

ATLANTA (AP) — Being aware of the danger of hypothermia, taking a few precautions and letting someone know where you're going, are the keys to avoiding a quiet death in the cold.

"Preparation is the key word for a couple of reasons," said Lee Sanderson of the national Centers for Disease Control. "People need to understand that hypothermia is a risk and need to be prepared, in terms of having some blankets and extra pieces of equipment and clothing, and just letting people know about their schedules."

Every year about 700 people die of hypothermia — or loss of body heat — the overwhelming majority of them men and boys. Older men have higher hypothermia death rates than younger men and boys.

Although the Atlanta-based CDC does not keep statistics on circumstances of death due to hypothermia, "I would guess (the higher death rate for males) is due to outdoor recreational activities that males do by themselves," Sanderson said in an interview.

He repeatedly stressed the importance of leaving schedules.

"People don't know where they (the victims) are going or what they're doing and they succumb to hypothermia," he said of people who wander off without leaving word with someone.

Although most people think about cold as a threat to only Northern outdoorsmen, the hiker and fisherman in the South also are potential hypothermia victims. You don't have to freeze.

Medically, hypothermia is defined as lowering the core body temperature to 96 degrees Fahrenheit or below, or a drop of 3.6 degrees from one's normal temperature, Sanderson said.

Drop in oil prices could hurt Texas banks

By BRAD KROHN

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas banking system could face further problems if contract prices between oil producers and refiners follow the recent sharp decline of price quotes on the spot market, an energy banking specialist says.

"As the crude prices drop — and if they drop very severely, very quickly — probably the banks that have deep problems now will have very deep problems in the future," said Gene Fiedorek, manager of the energy group for RepublicBank Corp. and an executive vice president of RepublicBank-Dallas.

BankAmerica fined $4.75 million for currency violations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The same day BankAmerica Corp. was hit with a record $4.75 million fine for currency transaction violations, the holding company for the nation's largest bank reported a huge loss and suspended dividends for the first time in 50 years.

"Nobody expected things to be this bad," said Donald Crowley, an analyst with Keefe, Bruyette and Woods in San Francisco.

Even Samuel H. Armacost, BankAmerica's president and chief executive, was forced to admit that "1985 was a year of wrenching change."

The U.S. Treasury Department ordered the fine Tuesday against Bank of America, the nation's largest bank in deposits, for failing to report 17,000 currency transactions, each exceeding $10,000, between 1980 and early 1985.

It was the largest penalty yet in a crackdown on those transactions that has resulted in fines against 11 other banks since June 1985.

While the government did not indicate any criminal activity on BankAmerica's part, it did say the bank's failure to report the transactions could have impeded investigations into "money-laundering" by drug dealers and tax evaders.

The fine, which exceeded the $2.25 million penalty levied against San Francisco-based Crocker Bank last year, was reflected in the parent corporation's 1985 financial results.

BankAmerica, also based here and the nation's second largest bank holding company behind Citicorp of New York, reported a net loss of $337 million, or $2.68 a share, for 1985, compared with earnings of $346 million, or $1.77 a share the year before. The loss was largely the result of loan problems.

It was the company's worst performance ever and the first annual loss since the Depression. It ranks third among the biggest losses in U.S. banking history behind the $1.1 billion by Continental Illinois in 1984 and the $456 million by Seafirst of Seattle in 1983. BankAmerica now owns Seafirst.

group for RepublicBank Corp. and an executive vice president of RepublicBank-Dallas.

He added, however, that banks that are relatively free of problem energy loans "will have the least problems, although our problems will grow to some extent."

On Tuesday, First City Bancorporation of Texas reported a 53.2 percent drop in its 1985 fourth quarter net income from the same period during the previous year.

Senior First City Chairman J.A. Elkins Jr. said sour energy loans contributed to the decreased earnings. Frank Anderson, a banking analyst in Dallas with Weber, Hall, Sale & Associates, Inc., agreed that financial institutions would have to begin setting aside more money to cover loan losses. But he didn't think falling oil prices would lead to the failure of a major bank-holding company.

Those companies would feel the most pressure, Anderson said, if oil prices "were to blow down and stay there."

Texas banks won't immediately be affected by the drop in spot crude oil prices because most of the banks' customers in the energy sector use the "posted" or contract price, Fiedorek said.

Those quotes generally follow the trends in the spot market — where surplus oil is sold on demand — but don't drop as far or as fast, he said.

"People are talking about spot headed for $15 or $20, but that doesn't mean the posted prices will drop that far."

Spot prices tend to be "an emotional number," Fiedorek said, adding that speculators can account for some of the wide fluctuations in the quotes.

The spot price closed Tuesday at $20.10, down from $32 in November.

But Fiedorek noted Permian Corp.'s posted price late Tuesday was still at $26.75 — more than $6 per barrel higher — though he expected the posted price would also fall somewhat.

Dampening of drilling, exploration expected

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil industry experts are keeping a wary eye on the plummeting prices of oil futures, saying the declines do not affect companies immediately, but could dampen already depressed exploration and drilling.

Most companies expected prices to fall in the first half of this year, analysts and company officials say.

"Fundamentally, there's been weakness since the early 1980s," said Richard Adkerson, Houston-based director of oil and gas services for Arthur Anderson & Co. "This is just a continuation."

A decision in December by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to keep what it considered its fair share of the world oil market ensured the continuing price slide, Adkerson said.

"We knew there would be pressure on prices," he said.

On Tuesday, oil futures prices continued falling, driven downward by an overabundance of supply, weak demand and, some analysts said, the market's own momentum.

A barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude, the benchmark U.S. grade, dropped to at least $20.80 for delivery in February, down 67 cents from Monday's close. A week ago, the price was $25.15 per barrel.

On the spot market, U.S. oil, which brought $32 a barrel in November, closed Tuesday at $20.10, down from Monday's $21.70 close.

Officials at major oil companies in Houston, however, insisted they did not pay that much attention to the futures market.

"I don't think we get involved in futures trading," said spokesman Joe Tucker of Exxon Co. USA.

Officials at Shell Oil Co. had a similar response, saying they did not consider themselves "a significant player" in the futures market.

But at a major independent producer, a spokesman who requested anonymity cautioned that the market decline was "a bad omen for us. It's an omen that prices are softening."

At National Supply Co. of Houston, the world's largest manufacturer and supplier of machinery and equipment to the oil patch, a spokesman said that while the decline was expected, "I guess everybody was shocked at the degree of fall in the past week."

"We watch them, but we'd rather watch the posted price of West Texas Intermediate and the posted price on a monthly and yearly basis," said George Mitchell, whose Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. is among the nation's largest independents.

"But this drop could be very harmful in the activity of exploration. Just the perception of it does create pessimism among the independents," Mitchell said.

Plunging prices seen as bad to some; others as good

LONDON (AP) — Plunging world oil prices this week have brought forecasts of bad times for heavily indebted oil-exporting countries such as Mexico and sent stocks tumbling in New York and London where investors fear repercussions on Western banks and interest rates.

But the 20-percent drop in crude oil prices since last Wednesday is good news for oil importers such as Japan, South Korea and the European Economic Community, according to a sample survey of nations by The Associated Press.

The latest development came Tuesday, when the secretary-general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, Ali Attiga of Libya, said the 13-nation oil producers' cartel should have a market share of about 18 million barrels a day — 2 million barrels a day above its current output ceiling.

Britain's main North Sea oil product, Brent crude, promptly fell below $20 for the first time since 1979. Brent crude, which had been selling for $30 a barrel two months ago and $20.80 on Monday, was quoted Tuesday as low as $19.70 a barrel.

Oil prices have been pushed downward in recent years due to low demand caused by world recession, which in turn was triggered partly by big OPEC price increases in the 1970s.

Attiga's statement was in keeping with OPEC's decision last month to abandon its strategy of restricting production in an effort to prop up prices. Instead, the organization resolved to secure and defend "a fair share" of the world market, even if that meant lower prices.

The decision was aimed at winning back customers who had been buying oil more cheaply from non-OPEC suppliers such as Britain and Norway.

"The Saudis, whose production restraints have effectively underpinned the world price, are now making up for lost time and pumping far more oil than their agreed rate of production," the Financial Times, Britain's leading business daily, wrote last Saturday.

"As a result, the oil price is indeed falling out of bed. ... This is partly, then, a struggle for power."

Tuesday's drop in the price of Brent crude is widely expected to prompt the British government to hike base interest rates later this week in order to bolster the value of the pound. Stock prices have tumbled in anticipation because higher interest rates mean increased borrowing costs for industrial investment.

Shudders also ran through the New York Stock Exchange on Tuesday over fears that plunging oil prices could mean big trouble for banks and oil businesses.

A major worry is that one or more Third World oil-producing nations could default on loan repayments to Western banks because of the fall in oil revenues. This could in turn spark a major banking crisis. Oil-producing nations such as Mexico, Venezuela and Nigeria collectively owe many billions of dollars in international loans.

Officials in non-OPEC Mexico, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Tuesday if that its oil also fell below $20 a barrel, the country would be in dire trouble. Mexico, the world's fourth largest oil producer and exporter, already is in its fourth year of economic crisis, with a foreign debt of $6.4 billion.

Officials in Malaysia and Indonesia, both oil producers, said they had anticipated a fall in prices this year.

GNP grows a sluggish 2.3 percent

Consumer Price Index increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy grew a sluggish 2.3 percent last year due to a high estimate of the country's trade deficit and a big jump in inflation. In a separate report, the Consumer Price Index increased at an annual rate of just 2.4 percent in the fourth quarter.

This sluggish national growth marked the slowest pace for the economy since a 2.1 percent decline in growth during the recession year of 1982.

The Commerce Department's lower estimate stemmed from a sharp downward revision for economic activity in the final three months of the year.

The revision shaved growth for the year to 2.3 percent instead of the 2.4 percent rate estimated last month.

The economy grew 3.4 percent in 1983 and 6.6 percent in 1984.

As measured by a GNP-tied inflation measure, prices were rising at an annual rate of 4.5 percent in the final three months of the year, the highest rate since the first quarter of 1984.

The big jump in the GNP fixed-weight price index came from widespread increases in a variety of prices, including the first increase in the price of imported goods since the second quarter of 1984.

This gain undoubtedly reflected declines in the value of the dollar which have been occurring since March. In addition, consumer prices edged up 3.8 percent in 1985, the fourth consecutive year that inflation at the retail level has been held to 4 percent or less.

The Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was down slightly from the 4 percent gain of 1984 and would have been down even more if not for last fall's gains in fuel and food costs.

And, while coffee prices began rising this month because of a drought in Brazil, economists predicted continued low overall inflation for months — and perhaps years — to come.

"Inflation is not a problem these days," said Michael Evans, president of an economic consulting firm based in Washington. He predicted that inflation would stay below 4 percent at least through 1988.

For all of last year, food and beverage prices rose 2.8 percent while the cost of transportation-related items, including gasoline, increased 2.6 percent.

Most of the hike in food and fuel prices came in November, when consumer prices increased 0.6 percent over October — the highest one-month increase in two years.

But that bulge abated in December, when the Labor Department said retail prices rose just 0.4 percent.

In other areas, housing costs for the year increased 4.3 percent, apparel prices went up 2.9 percent, medical care costs gained 6.7 percent and entertainment expenses were up 3.2 percent.

Retail prices in 1983 climbed 3.8 percent, while in 1982 they had increased 3.9 percent. Price gains had reached a peak of 13.3 percent in 1979.

In all, the CPI stood at 327.4 in December, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967, the base year, would have cost $32.74 last month.

Prices for most commodities had inched up only slightly and evenly through the year, until the November bulge in meat and gasoline prices.

By year's end, however, the price gains for both gasoline and food had moderated slightly.

As for 1986, the anticipated steep gains in coffee prices should be easily offset by predicted slumps in energy prices and only moderate gains for other foods. Coffee prices are not compiled separately in the Labor Department report.

Moreover, declining energy prices should cause the CPI to grow at an even slower rate of 3.3 percent this year, predicted forecaster Donald Ratajczak of the University of Georgia.

Burger King finds Herb, but will he earn his keep?

Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Burger King's two-month search for Herb, the focus of a $40 million advertising campaign, has ended, but the question of the campaign's effectiveness lingers.

The nation's second-largest fast-food chain will formally introduce Herb to the public in two 30-second commercials during the Super Bowl game Sunday. In advance of those spots, Herb appeared Tuesday on NBC's "Today" show, and was to meet the press Wednesday at a Manhattan Burger King.

But has the country already seen enough of Herb, portrayed by a professional actor as a somewhat dim-witted fellow from a small town in Wisconsin? Some analysts who follow the fast-food industry suggest that the campaign has failed to arouse enough consumer interest to warrant the large budget. Compared with the hard-hitting comparison advertising of the "burger wars" era, they argue, Herb is uninspiring.

Tom Sawyer, Burger King's vice president for marketing, acknowledged that Herb was overwhelmed in the first weeks by an advertising blitz launched by industry leader McDonald's Corp. which brought out its newest product, the McDLT, at the same time. The McDLT is sold in a package that keeps the hamburger hot and separate from the cool lettuce and tomato topping. Although McDonald's isn't saying, Sawyer estimated it spent $80 million on the campaign.

Officials at J. Walter Thompson Co., the New York advertising agency that created the Herb campaign, defended it Tuesday. Tim Arnold, a JWT senior vice president, said the Herb concept created "a vehicle to talk about our products. It was done with tongue planted firmly in cheek."

The Super Bowl spots begin what Sawyer termed the campaign's third phase. Herb will embark Jan. 30 on a promotional tour that will take him to at least one Burger King in each of the 50 states and in each Canadian province. He will hand out $5,000 to the first person that recognizes him at each stop, buy lunches for everyone in the restaurant, and register all in a $1 million sweepstakes — the final phase of the ad campaign.

"We'll keep Herb busy for five or six weeks on the tour," Sawyer said.

In the past three weeks, he said, Burger King sales have registered gains of 8 to 10 percent across the country. Just as important, Sawyer said, the campaign has increased awareness of Burger King among consumers, helped by media attention paid to the search for Herb.

The Herb campaign was so important to Burger King that president Jay Darling took a direct hand in developing it. The previous campaign touting a larger Whopper and starring Mr. T and other celebrities failed to regain the double-digit sales increases that Burger King had enjoyed for two years until 1985.

Coastal reports natural gas discovery

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. has reported that its Coastal 1985 Drilling Program, Ltd. has recorded a significant natural gas discovery in Colusa County, California.

The well, Coastal 1985 JV Abel Road No. 1, flowed dry gas on a drillstem test at the rate of 2.5 million cubic feet a day through a 16/64 inch choke. Bottom hole flowing pressure was 2,000 pounds and final shut-in pressure was 2,284 pounds. The test interval was 4,788 feet to 4,817 feet in the Forbes sand of the Cretaceous Age.

Unleaded gasoline deliveries up in 1985

WASHINGTON — Deliveries of unleaded gasoline from primary storage rose 10.2 percent during 1985 when compared to the previous year, the American Petroleum Institute reports.

The API's Monthly Statistical Report said the daily average for deliveries of unleaded was 4,363,000 barrels while deliveries of leaded gasoline were 2,400,000 barrels per day. The figure for leaded represented a drop of 10.9 percent from 1984.

Rising sales of new cars, using unleaded gasolines, continued to change the overall mix of the U.S. vehicle fleet, pushing unleaded gasoline sales to a 68 percent share of the U.S. gasoline market by the end of 1985. This is about five percentage points greater than at the end of the previous year.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE Dividends, interest do not reduce Social Security

By BILL DOYLE Q. I started investing for my eventual retirement shortly after I received my Navy discharge in 1945. As a result, I have what I consider a good investment portfolio of stocks, bonds and mutual fund shares. I was in business for myself and set up a Keogh self-employed retirement plan in 1962, when Keoghs became available. And I've been putting money into an individual retirement account since 1962, when IRA rules were liberalized.

American Exchange

NEW YORK (AP) - Midday national averages for American Exchange issues. Table with columns: Symbol, Price, Change.

I will be well-fixed financially when I retire in a few months at age 65. Besides sizable dividends and interest, I will collect Social Security. Will my dividend and interest income reduce my SS benefits? Also, when I start taking money out of my Keogh and IRA, will those withdrawals cut my SS benefits?

A. No, on both counts. Only wages, salary, commissions, tips, fees and such, which the government calls "earned income," reduces SS benefits.

But you can have unlimited amounts of so-called "unearned income" from dividends, interest, rents and various other things, including Keogh plans, IRAs and pensions, and there will be no impact on your SS benefits.

The mailbag indicates there's a fair amount of confusion on this. Some people are mixing up the SS benefit reduction rules with the requirement that some SS recipients must pay federal income tax on part of their benefits.

Since 1964, every SS recipient has had to pay tax on up to half of his or her benefits if his or her adjusted gross income, plus otherwise tax-free interest from municipal bonds and half of his or her SS benefits exceeds a threshold — $25,000 for individuals, $32,000 for married couples filing joint returns and zero for married people filing separate returns.

Granted, all income — earned and unearned — is included in the threshold calculation. So, unearned income does result in many people paying income tax on part of their SS benefits. However, that's a tax on SS benefits — not a direct reduction of the size of benefit checks.

From your letter, it's obvious you will pass the threshold and have to pay tax on as much as half of your SS benefits. Nonetheless, I can't help thinking how glad it would be if all my old shipmates invested as wisely as you have. We could have a bang-up reunion — even charter a luxury liner and call on the liberty ports we hit more than four decades ago.

Q. Suppose I take a part-time job after I retire. How much will my Social Security benefits be reduced?

A. That depends on your age and the total amount of your earned income. Until you reach age 70, your SS benefits will be reduced by $1 for every $2 of earned income you receive past an "exempt amount."

This year, that exempt amount is $7,800 for SS recipients between 65 and 70; $5,760 for those under 65. These numbers are up from $7,320 and $5,400 in 1965.

Once you turn 70, there will be no reduction in SS benefits because of earned income. At that point in your golden years you'll collect full SS benefits, no matter how much earned income you have.

Q. I will be eligible to retire, at 62, on a pension in a few months. The pension won't be much. But, thanks to investment income, my wife and I will be able to live very comfortably. How soon before my birthday date should I apply for Social Security? Also, where should I apply?

A. You can put in your application for SS benefits anytime within the three months before your retirement date. It's wise to do it as early as possible. If, by a "few" months, you mean three, you should apply right now.

Put in your application at the nearest Social Security Administration office, which you'll find listed in your telephone directory.

Q. I retire at 62, how much lower will my Social Security benefits be, than if I retire at 65? A. Your SS benefits will be reduced by exactly 20 percent, by retiring on your 62nd birthday.

HOW TO WIN COOKING CONTESTS

Americans have become obsessed with food—gourmet food, ethnic food, fast food, American food. Logically, it follows that the latest rage among food aficionados is to enter and win increasingly popular cooking contests.

Just about everyone can find a cooking contest they are eligible to enter. Some contests are limited to professional cooks, but many of them, like those sponsored by commodity groups, food and appliance companies and newspapers and magazines, are often open to anyone who loves to cook and create recipes.

Why all this interest in cooking contests? Many food-loving contestants simply enjoy the opportunity to meet and compete with others who share their interest in good food. For others it has become a profitable sideline. For example, Sally Vog of Springfield, Oregon, has won over $30,000 in prizes and trips in at least a half dozen contests in the last 12 months. Potential fame, whether it's on a local, state or national level, is another incentive for many contestants.

Of course, the ultimate goal for anyone participating in cooking contests is to win one of the top national contests, like the National Beef Cook-Off. This contest, which was first held in 1974, is sponsored by the American National CowBelles in cooperation with the Beef Industry Council of the Meat Board. The Maytag Company also participates in the event.

Each year, the Beef Cook-Off generates thousands of recipes from men and women of all age, economic and educational levels. A winning beef recipe is selected yearly from each state. These state winners then compete against one another on the national level for prizes totaling $10,000. To ensure that all contestants compete equally, each is required to prepare the dish on a Maytag electric range.

What's the secret to creating a prize-winning recipe? According to both judges and past National Beef Cook-Off winners—a simple, great-tasting recipe.

1ST PLACE 1983 WINNER
Emile Ferrara, Bristol, Rhode Island

"I think the judges selected my recipe because it was simple to prepare and it enhanced the main ingredient—beef—without covering it up." Ferrara's recipe, "Top Round Aromatic," uses top round steak which is quickly panfried and served with a cream, wine and cognac sauce. "After the event it was exciting to see my recipe prepared on television and appear in several national magazines and newspapers. The 1983 Beef Cook-Off was my first contest. Since then I've entered two other contests and was a finalist in one of them. I plan to continue entering cooking contests."

2ND PLACE 1985 WINNER
Sally Vog, Springfield, Oregon

"I try to do something original in all of my recipes." Vog substituted lime for the more common lemon, in her recipe for "Lime-Thyme Beef." Vog surrounded her entry with an upscale, rice-shaped pasta side-dish, "Orzo with Peas and Pine Nuts." "Keeping up on food trends is important, so I read newspaper and magazine food pages to spot new trends." While Vog has won over $30,000 in prizes, she says she has submitted almost as many entries that didn't place.

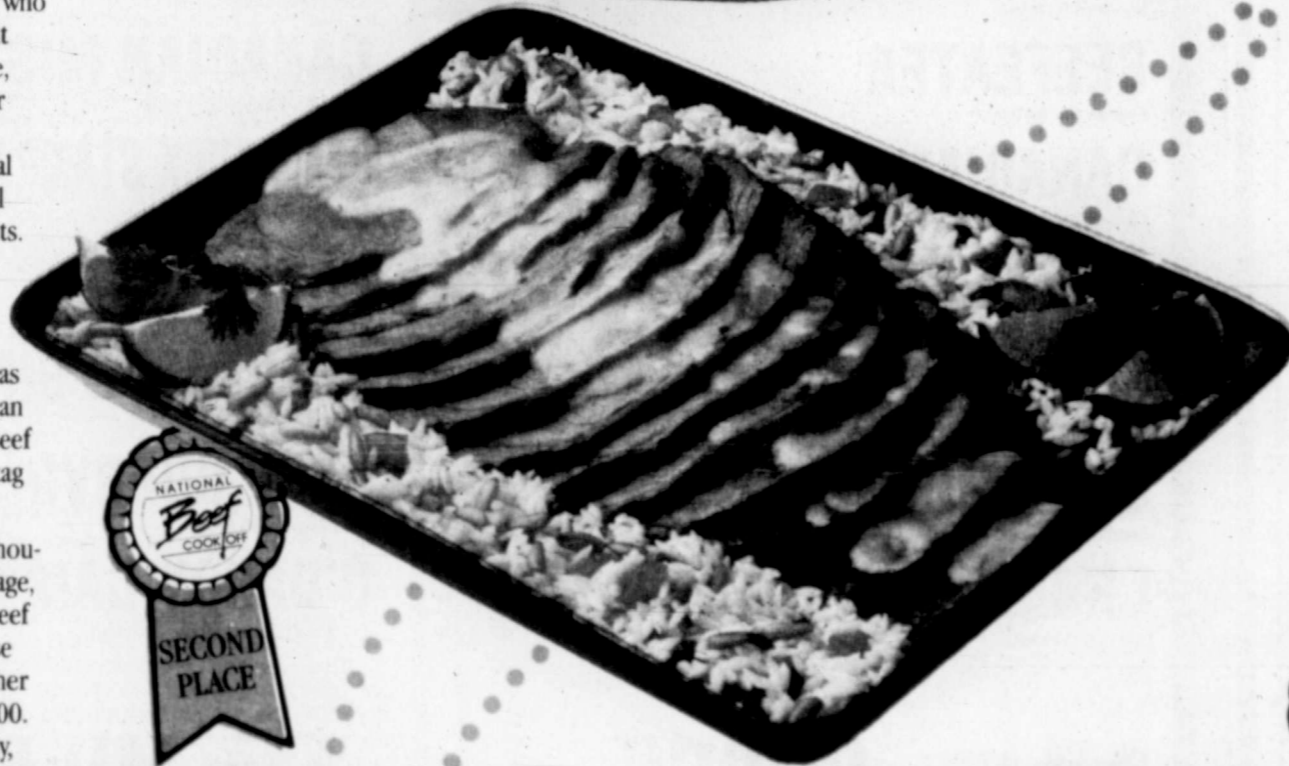

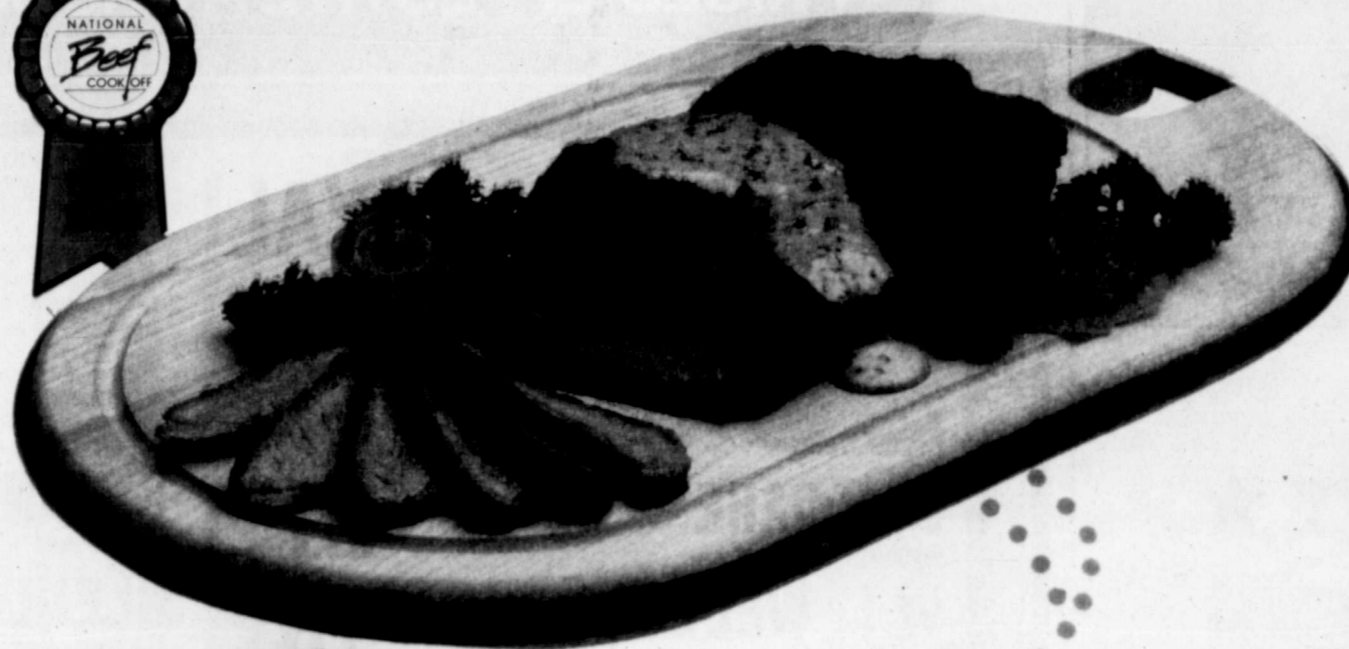

3RD PLACE 1978 WINNER
Kim Landhuis, Fort Dodge, Iowa

Landhuis, a native of Saigon, South Viet Nam, prepared "Zesty Beef Salad" as a first-time entrant in 1978. Her tasty and colorful main dish reflects public interest in eating more healthy, natural meals. "My husband encouraged me to enter my first contest in 1978." Since then she has been successful in several other contests.

To enter the National Beef Cook-Off, send a typed copy of your best recipe using chuck, round, fresh brisket, plate, shank or ground beef to your state CowBelles beef cook-off chairman or:

National Beef Cook-Off
444 North Michigan Avenue
Chicago, Illinois 60611

Include your name, address, phone number and a brief statement about the origin of your recipe. Entries must be postmarked no later than April 1, 1986.

WINNING CONTEST TIPS

Follow instructions to the letter or your entry could be disqualified.

Know the criteria and the time allowed. Most recipes are judged on taste, ease of preparation, originality and appearance. But different contests may emphasize different criteria.

Use fresh ingredients whenever possible. If you use frozen or canned ingredients, be sure to use them within their expiration date.

Write your recipe clearly and legibly.

To win the contest, be the original. A good date for a special year food festival contest would be the appropriate for the event's theme.

Some contests require you to use a certain type of meat or vegetable. Make sure you use the right one.

Use fresh ingredients whenever possible. If you use frozen or canned ingredients, be sure to use them within their expiration date.

Write your recipe clearly and legibly.

Chili cornbread 'hot'

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Back in the mid-1960s an Arizona cook's recipe for Mexican-style cornbread was published in a newspaper supplement. It included canned green chilies and cheddar cheese — and it caught on.

Ever since many versions of this cornbread have appeared. Some call for regular milk, some buttermilk and some sour cream. Some use butter, shortening or oil. One even includes chorizo.

Recently a friend of mine invented a new formula for the cornbread with diet-and-cholesterol-watchers in mind. She used skim milk and safflower oil and 3 egg whites instead of 2 large eggs. She also contributed new flavor by adding chili powder — a blend of chili pepper, cumin, garlic and oregano.

When we tried her version we found it tasted good with a wide variety of dishes, from a "vegetable plate" to chicken. It also reheated well in a microwave oven. Need I say that whatever its nature, cornbread should always be served extremely hot?

CHILI CORNBREAD

- 6 ounces shredded sharp cheddar cheese (1½ cups not packed down)
 - 1 tablespoon chili powder
 - 1 cup stone-ground yellow cornmeal
 - 2 teaspoons baking powder
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - 3 large egg whites
 - ¼ cup skim milk
 - ¼ cup safflower oil
 - 8½-ounce can cream-style corn
- Oil an 8-inch square cake pan. In a small bowl stir together cheese and chili powder. In a medium bowl stir together cornmeal, baking powder and salt. In a large bowl beat egg whites, skim milk and safflower oil only until blended. Add cornmeal mixture and corn; stir only until cornmeal mixture is moistened. Pour half of batter into the prepared pan. Sprinkle with half the cheese mixture; repeat layers.
- Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — about 40 minutes. Let stand at room temperature for 10 minutes. Cut into squares. Tightly cover and refrigerate any remaining squares. Reheat at serving time.

Chicken soup favorite food in many lands

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

Man has always been a hunter and among his earliest prey, more than 3,000 years ago, was a small jungle fowl, later domesticated — the chicken.

The Romans served chicken dishes at their banquets and, centuries later, the bird began appearing on dinner tables in France.

Chicken soup seems to be a universal favorite, and over the years immigrants from many parts of the world have brought their favorite recipes to the New World.

All chicken soups are based on one key ingredient: chicken stock. It can be made from meat taken from almost any part of the bird.

Legs and thighs have a full flavor. You can also use wing tips, backs and giblets. But if you want a clear broth, do not include liver, because it clouds the stock.

Simmer the stock over low to medium heat to develop the taste. Chicken bones give a full flavor and should be included in the pot until the stock is ready.

If you wish to freeze the stock for future use, place it in quart-size or larger containers. Well covered, it can keep for three or four months.

If you are making a chicken vegetable soup, make sure the greens are fresh, and do not freeze the mixture after they have been added.

Most soups do gain flavor, however, if stored in the non-freezer part of the refrigerator for a couple of days. To seal in the flavor, cover the soup well, leaving the fat on top until ready to serve.

Here is a recipe for chicken vegetable soup calling for fresh greens. Here the meat included is already cooked.

CHICKEN VEGETABLE SOUP
1 cup potatoes, cut into 1/2-inch strips
4 cups chicken stock or broth
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 cup onions, sliced thin
1 cup carrots in 1/4 by 2-inch sticks
1 cup celery in 1/4 by 2-inch sticks
1 cup fresh green beans in 2-inch pieces
2 cups cooked chicken in julienne strips
1 cup zucchini in 1/4 by 2-inch sticks

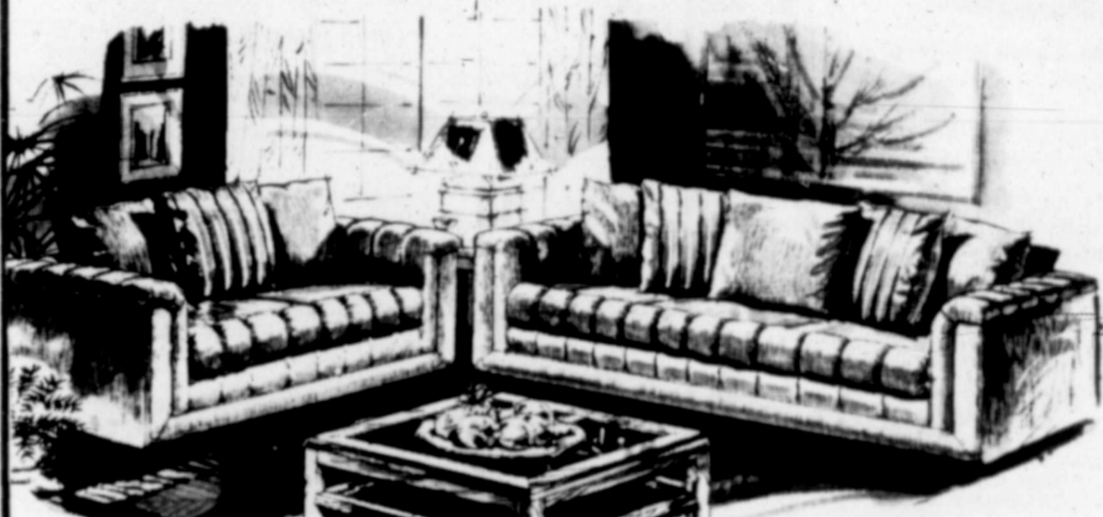

In medium saucepan over medium-high heat, bring potatoes to boiling point in enough salted water to cover. Cook potatoes five minutes, drain and set aside. In large saucepan, heat stock and sherry to boiling. Season with salt and pepper. Add onions, carrots and celery and simmer five minutes. Stir in green beans and chicken and heat soup to boiling. Add zucchini and potatoes and simmer one minute longer. Serve or keep in refrigerator until ready to eat.

DEAR ABBY

Interested man burned trying to fan sparks into flame

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: To get to the point, I blew it, but I have only myself to blame. I'm a 40-year-old man. In the three years since I've been divorced, I've dated many women, but none of them caused sparks to fly — until I met "Kathy" at a singles club. She's 35, great looking, a wonderful personality, intelligent and has two children. I have one.

Van Buren

It was love at first sight — for me, anyway. The next weekend we went shopping at a mall. Just being with Kathy thrilled me. We laughed and joked, and I felt like a teen-ager again. I know she liked me, too. She was very open and wasn't afraid to show affection. She spontaneously took my hand, and hugged me a couple of times. I wanted to be close to her, so on the way home we stopped (in broad daylight) and I kissed her just once and she didn't fight me. Then I made the mistake of my life. I said, "Your place or mine? Or should we stop at a motel?" She said, "I don't want to be rushed into anything. Please take me home." Then her attitude changed completely. She turned very cold. I apologized and asked her to forgive me, but she stayed cold. I'm sure she thought I acted that way with every woman I met, which isn't true. I called her the next day, apologized again for the way I acted and asked if I could see her again. She said, "No, I don't think so."

can't get her off my mind. — BLEW IT

DEAR BLEW IT: Wait a few days, then write a note to be delivered with flowers. Apologize again, assuring her that if she gives you another chance, your relationship will progress at the rate of her choosing. Then call her. If she's still cold, you'll know you really blew it, and call it a good learning experience.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is really a neat guy and we don't have any problems, but there is one thing that bothers me. He likes to drive out to the cemetery to make out. I'm not superstitious or anything like that, but it is kind of spooky parked up there with all the tombstones.

I love him a lot and don't want to say anything to spoil our relationship, but how can I tell him I wish he could find another place to park? — FREDDY'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: Tell Freddy you don't mean to put him down, but you don't dig the surroundings, so how about finding a place that's not so down to earth.

DEAR ABBY: This is for that Chicago woman who said she tipped her hairdresser and manicurist all during the year, and "come Christmas," instead of their giving her presents, she's on the giving end again.

Well, I have been a hairdresser for 28 years and have always given my customers a gift in appreciation of their patronage.

At Christmastime I am inundated with recycled candy, stale nuts, cheap cologne and wine I wouldn't give a wino on skid row.

During the year we hairdressers have to endure foul language, dirty jokes, bad breath, body odor, late arrivals and last-minute cancellations. We console people in their grief and listen to gripes about their husbands, children, grandchildren and neighbors, not to mention being exposed to colds, coughs and the flu. ("I got out of a sick bed to come here.")

In return we give sympathy, encouragement, understanding, advice and a shoulder to cry on. These women wouldn't get as much from a psychiatrist, and we're cheaper. In addition, we use our talent to the best of our abilities with what we have to work with — which in some cases is almost total baldness.

Abby, please tell that Chicago woman if she needs a present at Christmas to come here, and I will let her walk a mile in my shoes. — LOS ANGELES HAIRDRESSER

Your child will gain one full grade level in just 36 hours. Guaranteed.

In just a short time, your child will be reading at a full grade level better than he or she does now. Or solving math problems that right now seem incomprehensible. And, best of all, feeling a lot more confident at school.

Such striking progress involves no secret formula. Nothing mysterious. Just patience, some hard work—and two hours a week for 18 weeks, at a Sylvan Learning Center.

How Sylvan can guarantee success.

Our approach to learning is simple. Take away the competition, the stress, and the fear of failure, and something extraordinary happens. Children learn.

This simple approach to education has been tested and proven at Sylvan Learning Centers, time and again. We've helped thousands of children, from the early grades on up, to do better in school. That is why we offer this unique promise: your child's reading or math skills will improve by at least one full grade level after just 36 instruction hours. Or we will provide up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost. Improvement will be measured by a nationally-recognized achievement test, given before and after instruction at Sylvan.

The basics: the key to achievement.

We've found that all learning is built upon a few basic, vital skills. Missing a crucial lesson, or failing to grasp a concept while the rest of the class moves on, could hold your child back in many areas.

Perhaps your child was out with chicken pox when the class learned phonics: Or maybe you moved to a new town, just after the chapter on fractions. Even the smallest gap can leave him weeks behind.

By focusing on the basics at Sylvan, we can help your child master the skills he's missing—and conquer the problems holding him back.

A program designed specially for your child.

At Sylvan, your child learns at his own pace, in his own program. With the kind of intensive, personal attention that the classroom simply can't provide.

We begin by finding out just where your child's strengths and weaknesses lie. A full series of diagnostic tests, including tests of vision and hearing, tells us where the most help is needed. Then we develop your child's individual learning program to meet those needs.

We use all the varied resources at our disposal, from the most innovative equipment, including computers, to the most tried-and-true teaching methods. Plus one key ingredient: positive encouragement. With the constant guidance of a certified instructor, your child will learn the reading or math basics he needs to catch up, and move ahead. Even more important, he'll learn what it feels like to succeed.

Small victories lead to bigger ones.

The achievement we guarantee at Sylvan is only the beginning. Your child receives extra help that goes

The Sylvan Guarantee

Your child will improve at least one full grade equivalent score in math or reading skills after 36 hours of instruction, or we will continue up to 12 additional hours of instruction, at no further cost.

far beyond merely "getting through the semester." Even beyond better grades.

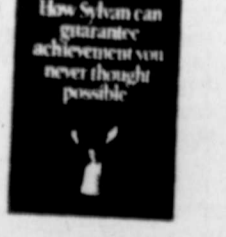

Many parents have found coming to Sylvan makes their children feel good about themselves—a whole new attitude that carries over into home and social life, as well. And that kind of self-confidence—the feeling, "Yes, I can do it!"—can last a lifetime.

Your child can begin to do better—today.

If you feel your child's report cards don't reflect his capabilities, if he seems to hate going to school, or hesitates to read aloud to you, the time to visit Sylvan is now. We offer a flexible schedule of after-school hours and require no contracts or long-term commitments.

There's a Sylvan Learning Center near you. Why not come in for a free consultation? The sooner your child begins, the sooner he'll be reading—or solving math problems—at a full grade level better than he does now. We guarantee it.

WHAT'S COOKING

Menu welcomes Year of the Tiger

By ELIZABETH EDWIN Lifestyle Writer

The American Association of University Women in Midland has several specialty "Gourmet Groups" within the organization. The original gourmet group, called the Couples Gourmet Group, began in 1969.

The group, limited to 15 couples, meets once a month in a member's home. Four members serve as hostesses and are responsible for planning, cooking and serving the meal for group members and their spouses, said Nita Ivy, this year's chairman. Usually, each meal is themed.

"When the group was started, it gave us a place to have a nice dinner when there weren't really any nice restaurants in town," Mrs. Ivy said.

She came to Midland in 1939 when she married Robert Ivy, who is retired and now does consulting work for Phillips Petroleum. They have four married children, who all have a boy and girl apiece.

When her husband was employed full-time by Phillips, Mrs. Ivy had the opportunity to travel and live overseas. She taught elementary school for 15 years in Midland and is currently a member of the Palette Club and enjoys oil and water color painting.

About her cooking talents she said, "Bob swears he taught me to cook. He loves to cook and he's a pretty good one."

The ladies of the Couples Gourmet Group give their spouses a chance to show off in the kitchen, or on the outdoor grill, by letting the husbands cook their June dinner each year.

"They're suppose to do it all by themselves, but they cheat a little and get us to help sometimes," Mrs. Ivy said.

In keeping with the theme aspect of the group, three ladies of the Couples Gourmet Group, Mrs. Ivy, Joan Henry and Colleen Scurry, prepared a Chinese menu in honor of the Feb. 9 celebration of Chinese New Year.

The Chinese horoscope follows birth years instead of the more familiar birth months, and this year is the Year of the Tiger, which happens once every 12 years. Tiger years are known as years of turbulent political unrest and coup d' etats and a time when catastrophes often strike, according to a Gourmet Group Tiger Year booklet.

The following is the appetizer, soup and one entree for a suggested menu from the Couples Gourmet Group. Next week, "What's Cooking" will conclude the menu with an alternate entree, a vegetable and dessert.

"When preparing our meals for the group, we try to make everything from scratch," Mrs. Ivy said.

APPETIZER:

CRISPY CASHEW CHICKEN
1/4 cup cornstarch
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 1/2 tablespoons dry sherry or shao hsing
2 cups vegetable or peanut oil
2 egg whites
1 1/4 cups finely grated cashew nuts
2 whole chicken breasts; boned and thinly sliced (HINT: freeze chicken for one hour for easy slicing)

1. In a small bowl combine cornstarch, salt, sugar and sherry.

2. In a small bowl, beat egg whites lightly (but NOT until frothy). Gradually and gently stir into sherry mixture.

3. Place cashews (grated in blender) on platter. Dip chicken into sherry-egg mixture and roll in cashews. Place on wax paper or plate.

4. Pour oil into Wok and preheat, UNCOVERED at 375 degrees until signal light on control goes off (about 4 minutes).

5. Drop four to eight dipped chicken strips into hot oil. Fry and turn until brown on all sides (about two minutes).

6. Remove with slotted spoon or strainer. Drain a few seconds and serve hot.

This recipe can be used as an appetizer or main dish. Makes about 32 finger size appetizers or six main dish servings.

SOUP:
BROCCOLI AND SCALLOP CHOWDER

1 Large package of chopped broccoli
1 pound scallops, small
2 1/2-ounce cans chicken broth
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
3 cups whole milk
1/2 pound cheddar cheese
1/2 chopped onion

Put broccoli in blender or processor and chop fine. Cook broccoli in one can of chicken broth until tender. Add all remaining ingredients. Heat to a simmer. Simmer for 15 minutes or until scallops are tender and all cheese is melted.

NOTE: Soup was pureed for the Couples Dinner Group in order to be served in a cup. It can be left whole.

MARINATED PORK TENDERLOIN

1 15-ounce can unsweetened sliced pineapple, undrained
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons minced fresh ginger-root
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
2 1/4-pound pork tenderloins
Vegetable cooking spray

Drain pineapple, reserving juice. Combine reserved juice with garlic, gingerroot, soy sauce and dry mustard; set aside.

Trim excess fat from tenderloins. Place tenderloins in a large, shallow baking dish; pour marinade over tenderloins. Cover and marinate 24 hours in refrigerator, turning occasionally.

Coat grill rack with cooking spray. Remove tenderloins from marinade; grill over medium coals 50 to 55 minutes, turning occasionally. Meat is done when meat thermometer inserted into the thickest part of the tenderloin registers 170 degrees. Grill pineapple slices until browned on both sides.

Slice tenderloin, and serve with pineapple slices. Makes 6 servings.

This is the first of a series about the Gourmet Groups of the American Association of University Women.

Chinese cuisine cooked quickly

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

"The Hong Sisters Microwave to the Orient" by Lucy Hong Mow and the late Mary Hong Saunders is a privately published spiral-bound cookbook that first appeared in 1976.

When I talked to Lily Hong Mow over the phone recently I discovered that she is a school of nursing educator. Cooking is one of her important side interests. Because she has cooked for her husband and their three children (now grown) she has had plenty of practice.

Her cookbook is the outcome of her interest in adapting Chinese recipes — many of them learned from her mother — to microwave cooking. These are dishes that "provide variety in taste and are commonly served in Chinese homes." Here is one we tried in our own kitchen with good results.

SHRIMP WITH BLACK BEAN SAUCE

1 pound fresh shrimp
1 tablespoon dried black beans, (dow see), rinsed
1/2 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
1/2 tablespoon minced garlic
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons oil
1/4 pound ground pork
1 tablespoon cornstarch mixed with 1 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon curry powder
1/2 cup water
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 green onions, cut into 1-inch lengths

Shell and devein shrimp. Mash together black beans, ginger and garlic; mix in soy sauce and sugar.

Put oil in a 2-quart casserole; add black bean mixture; cook in a microwave oven on high, uncovered, for 1 minute.

Blend pork with cornstarch mixture; add to casserole; stir and break up pork; cover, cook on high, for 3 minutes; stir once. Add shrimp, curry and water to casserole; toss to blend flavors; cover and cook on high for 6 minutes, stirring once.

Add egg and green onions; toss, cook 1 minute. Spoon sauce over shrimp before serving.

The timing in this recipe applies to a 600- to 850-watt microwave oven.

Teachers predicted to do 'very well' on test

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The minimum passing scores that educators must achieve on the reading and writing portions of the Texas Examination of Current Administrators and Teachers represent a "reasonable" expectation of teacher performance on the basic skills test, a member of the State Board of Education said today.

SBOE member Katherine Raines of Cleburne told the Reporter-Telegram in a telephone interview that she predicts "teachers and administrators will do very well" despite Texas Education Agency projections that nearly 15 percent of the state's teachers will fail the required competency test.

The SBOE established the minimum passing scores that educators must achieve on the reading and writing portions of the TECAT in order to retain their certifications and teach during or after the 1986-87 school year.

The board approved the test to be used for re-certification of teachers and set the passing scores at its meeting earlier this month.

The passing scores on the reading section of the test and on the multiple choice portion of the writing section were set at 75 percent.

Educators also must produce an acceptable written essay in order to pass the writing section of the TECAT. An essay judged marginally acceptable must be accompanied by a score of at least 75 percent on the multiple choice section for an individual to pass the writing test.

"I do think it's reasonable," Mrs. Raines said. "I believe teachers and administrators will do very well on this test."

According to Board Chairman Jon Brumley of Fort Worth, "The TECAT passing standards set by the board represent a reasonable expectation of teacher performance on this basic skills test."

"If we hope to reach our goal of education excellence in Texas, we must ensure that our children are taught by people who possess these basic reading and writing skills," he said.

More than 60,000 teachers preparing for skills test

From Staff Reports

More than 60,000 members of the Texas State Teachers Association have pre-registered for one of the 700 workshops to review skills to be tested by the Texas Examination for Current Administrators and Teachers. The test is scheduled to be given to all currently employed professional educators March 10.

TSTA's workshops are scheduled throughout the state on two dates: Saturday and Feb. 1. Morning and afternoon sessions at 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. will be held on each date.

TSTA President Charles Beard said the workshops and preparations for them have been a massive effort on the part of TSTA and NEA.

The workshops will feature a pretest to determine each individual's strengths and weaknesses, followed by test taking strategies and reading, writing and composition exercises. Following the review section, participants will take a post-test to assure that all materials have been sufficiently covered.

The workshops were designed by staff of TSTA, the National Education Association and the Center for the Study of Testing, Evaluation and Educational Policy at Boston College, a nationally acclaimed testing firm contracted by NEA and TSTA.

The Boston College Center was established in 1980 to meet measurement, research and evaluation needs of government agencies, private foundations and private corporations.

Beard said the TSTA tests to be given at the workshops will very closely resemble the actual tests administered by the Texas Education Agency because the Boston College Center has extensive experience in analyzing the testing methods of IOX Assessments, the firm contracted to design the TECAT test.

The Boston College Center's contributions to the TSTA workshops were headed by Dr. George F. Madaus, director of the Center and author of ten books on testing.

"Our goal in these workshops is to make certain that every TSTA member passes the TECAT exam, provided the courts do not take action on our lawsuit to block the administration of the test," Beard said.

TSTA filed suit in District court in Austin to stop the test. Preliminary motions have been filed and a hearing date will be set soon.

TSTA is the only organization offering free workshops and workbooks to its members.

The TECAT will measure reading and writing skills of an estimated 210,000 teachers and school administrators who will take the exam

March 10. Midland Independent School District Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi said he is confident that Midland teachers and administrators also will perform well on the test. He added, however, that "one paper and pencil test does not determine how good or bad a particular teacher is."

Cisneros: Cities must meet change

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

FORT STOCKTON — The dominant feature of our times is change and those cities that refuse to deal with it will be swept away, said San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, speaking in Fort Stockton

Tuesday night. "Communities that are successful, will be communities that have a sense to plan for the future," Cisneros said at the 42nd Fort Stockton Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

Industry, government and population are changing in Texas, Cisneros said.

"All of these are changes that we are going to have to live with. Those of us who are smart will have to anticipate these changes," he said.

The state is undergoing a transformation where oil, gas and agriculture are no longer the dominant industry, said the mayor, who was one of the top contenders for the vice presidency on Walter Mondale's Democratic ticket.

"Those areas of the state that have allowed themselves to be tied to one economic base have been hurt."

Cisneros said communities like Midland-Odessa are "holding on," and not growing because of their reliance on oil, gas and commodities.

In contrast to other areas of the state, Cisneros said, Dallas and Fort Worth have broadened their economies to become one of the most prosperous centers of the nation.

"Not all of us can be what Dallas is. But the point is still valid. Those communities who have built their economies broadly have prospered."

Along with an industrial transformation, Cisneros said the state is becoming urban. Texas, with 28 major communities, has more cities than any other state, he said.

"Texas is becoming more and more a place where people live in cities and towns."

With decentralization of federal government programs, Cisneros said, "More of the responsibility for what we want to become will depend on us."

Along with planning for the future, Cisneros said, cities need to include all people in future developments.

Few cities can be run by one man, as was done in the past, he said.

"These days, there are few individuals anymore who can run a town that way."

"The real mission of leadership today is how to bring people together. Not to tell them how to do it." "There can be no resources to go to waste," he said.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros speaks on economic development at the 42nd Annual Fort Stockton Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

City leaders should also commit themselves to action — not talk, Cisneros said.

Woman: Ex-boyfriend hit her with machete

By MARK LEWIS
Staff Writer

A 24-year-old Midland man was expected to take the stand in his own defense today in 142nd District Court after an ex-girlfriend accused him Tuesday of attacking her with a machete after kicking in her door in the middle of the night.

Lenn Charles Lee was indicted for burglary of a habitation with intent to commit aggravated assault after the Sept. 25, 1984 incident at 110 E. Cedar St. If convicted of this first-degree-felony charge, he faces a penalty range of five to 99 years or life in prison and up to a $10,000 fine.

According to Brenda Alexander, Lee had lived with her briefly in an apartment in the Autumn Woods complex, 2439 Whitmore, but had moved out before the incident occurred in the early-morning hours of Sept. 25, 1984. She told the seven-woman, five-man jury the two had quarrelled the previous night when she got home from work and he accosted her in the parking lot.

"He was under the impression that I thought I was too good for him," she said. They argued, and Lee beat her, dragged her into her apartment and took her car keys.

"He said, 'You stay here, bitch — I'm coming back to kill you,'" she said.

After her cousin Kenneth Alexander heard the noise and ran over from the house next door, Lee chased after him with a machete, she said. Then he returned.

"I felt the machete cut my arm," she said. "The face of Lenn Lee was sadistic, cold, unemotional, rage and hate — and pride in what he did and was about to do."

Her doctor testified Ms. Alexander will never regain the full use of the last two fingers on her left hand, which were cut to the bone that night. Both she and Kenneth Alexander required surgery after being hacked with what Ms. Alexander described as a dull machete.

"How do you know it was dull?" asked court-appointed defense attorney Jeffrey Hinkley.

"Because I still have my fingers," she replied.

Kenneth Alexander testified he was hacked across the shoulder after tripping while running from the house. He didn't see the face of his assailant, who then returned to the house. But when the man came out again, Alexander recognized Lee.

Lee may later be tried on several lesser charges in Midland County, and is under indictment in Tarrant County for a murder allegedly committed in Fort Worth on Feb. 14, 1985, while he was being sought for the assault on Ms. Alexander.

Lee, who is being held in Midland County Jail on a bench warrant issued by Judge Pat Baskin, has a previous second-degree-murder conviction received in Los Angeles in 1979.

Assistant district attorneys David Rosado and Chuck Roades are prosecuting the trial, which began Tuesday and is expected to conclude today.

Mothers on the march to fight birth defects

From Staff Reports

Midland mothers are on the march this week to combat birth defects.

The Midland County Chapter of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation began its 1986 Mothers March fund raising push Tuesday night.

Mothers and families throughout the Permian Basin are going door-to-door through Sunday to help raise funds for research, medical services and public and professional education to help fight birth defects.

Local Midland programs supported by the March of Dimes in the past year have included funding of equipment in the newborn/nursery area of Midland Memorial Hospital, providing educational grants for qualifying MMH staff members to attend specialized courses to upgrade their skills, providing free educational materials and programs to Midland schools and clinics and initial funding a support group for parents of premature and high-risk infants.

The March of Dimes estimates that more than 250,000 infants are born with birth defects in the United States each year.

"The goal of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation is to see that all children have a healthy start in life," said Leann Wilson, executive director of the Midland County chapter. "Toward this goal, Mother Marchers are also distributing educational materials."

Among the chief points in avoiding birth defects that the March of Dimes stresses to pregnant women are:

- get regular prenatal care from a doctor or clinic,
- eat nourishing foods as part of a balanced diet,
- get plenty of rest and exercise,
- don't drink alcohol during pregnancy,
- don't take medication unless prescribed by a doctor who knows about the pregnancy, and
- don't smoke. Low birthweight, the nation's leading problem among newborns, is much more likely for the child of a smoking mother than the child of a non-smoker.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the March of Dimes who is not contacted by a volunteer this week can mail a check to the March of Dimes, P.O. Box 8337, Midland, Tex., 79708.

VIEWPOINT

Many Midlanders believe shuttle flights no longer exciting

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

Since Columbia's first liftoff in 1981 and Challenger's in 1983, the dazzle of shuttle flights seems to have diminished with each additional takeoff and landing.

Twelve randomly selected people were asked Tuesday whether or not they were still excited by shuttle liftoffs. Nine out of 12 people said that the flash and the excitement of the space program has dimmed.

"I think it's a waste of time and money. We can use that money to help the poor people in debt," said Rene Rayos, 204 E. Shandon Ave. Rayos, who is in the produce business, said, "We can use that money to stimulate the economy."

Jack Martin, 2609 Roosevelt Ave., said, "I guess it doesn't trip my trigger."

"The first time I thought it was kinda neat. Now it's getting to be an everyday deal," said Martin, who is an insurance agent.

Bookkeeper Ellen Fegett, 4407 Versailles, said the shuttle takeoffs and landings never excited her.

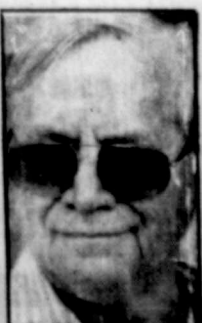

"I guess I just never paid any attention to it," she said.

Secretary Aileen Lands, 3309 Shandon, said, "I keep up with it, but it doesn't excite me like it used to. I liked to watch it on TV."

County commissioner and investor Durward Wright, 100 S. Eisenhower, said, "I'm interested, but not as excit-

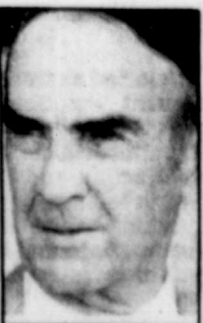

Rene Rayos

Jim Nelson

Scott Davis

ed as I once was because it happens so frequently now. But I still keep up with the program and I'm amazed every time I still see it take off and land."

Terri Edwards of Odessa said, "I don't get excited. It's like an everyday occurrence now."

"It's kinda getting to be old news anymore," said Maurice Wilder, 4729 Bowie.

Wilder, a mechanic, said, "Of course if something went wrong, it would be exciting."

Curtis Butler, 1318 E. Maple, said, "I remember when they first started doing it. Everybody would take TVs to work. Now it's just like commercials. It's just NASA trying to push something."

"Now it's a good deal. It's just not as exciting," said Butler, who is a map maker.

However others said they still get a thrill when a shuttle takes off and lands.

"I'm a former pilot and I love anything that flies," said Jim Nelson, 4402 Pleasant.

Nelson, who is in oil exploration, said, "I think it's great. I watch it when I can."

Engineer Scott Davis, 911 Bedford, said the shuttle program has always excited him.

"It tends to put us ahead in the space race and it's showing the American flag once in awhile," Davis said.

Jim Milburn, County Road 145 East, said, "I think it's a good deal."

"I think we're advancing in technology and hopefully in discovery," he said.

Baressi said more than 900 MISD teachers have participated in workshops to help prepare for the TECAT. Study guides and sample questions, prepared by the University of Texas, were distributed to teachers who attended the workshops.

After the exams are scored, an official report on each individual's performance will be sent to the Texas Education Agency for certification records.

Each person who passes the test will receive two labels, one to be placed on the individual's teaching certificate and the other to be placed on the teaching certificate on file in the individual's employing school district.

Individuals whose certificates do not carry the identifying label will not be eligible to teach after the current school year, unless the commissioner of education approves a one-year waiver.

Remedial help will be provided through regional education service centers for individuals who fail the test.

The TECAT must be taken by individuals who possess teaching certificates with an effective date prior to Feb. 1, 1986.

Individuals who passed the Houston Independent School District's basic skills exam, the Functional Academic Skills Test, prior to Dec. 1, 1985, are not required to take the TECAT.

All prospective teachers currently enrolled in college, or teachers entering the state for the first time, will be required to take an initial certification test called the Examination for the Certification of Educators in Texas if they wish to be certified after Feb. 1.

Under rules being considered by the board, teacher candidates who have completed all certification requirements except for passing the initial certification test may be granted one-year, non-renewable emergency permits that make them eligible to be assigned to teaching jobs in Texas public schools.

The rules, which received first-round approval from the Board, allow such permits to be granted to teacher candidates who fail the initial certification test or to those who have not yet had an opportunity to take the test.

Individuals who have valid teacher certificates but who were not employed in a Texas public school during the 1985-86 school year and who have not had an opportunity to take the TECAT also would be eligible to be hired under the emergency permit plan.

However, people who hold valid teacher certificates and who were employed in Texas public schools during the current school year but who did not pass the TECAT prior to June 30, 1986, would not be eligible to be assigned teaching jobs on any type of emergency teaching permit or temporary classroom assignment permit.

Odessa officer announces retirement, candidacy for JP

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 30-year veteran of the Odessa Police Department, Lt. Russell E. "Rusty" Baker, has announced he will retire, effective Feb. 28.

In addition to announcing his retirement, Baker, 56, who has been the police department's public information officer for the past four years, announced he will seek the Democratic nomination May 5 to run for Ector County Justice of the Peace, Precinct 3. The position is now held by Jimmy Harris who has indicated he won't seek another term.

Baker filed his formal declaration with Ector County Clerk Lucille Wolz, paying the required $300 filing fee, and named his wife of 35 years, Jo Baker, his treasurer. He did not name a campaign manager.

Baker, who serves as supervisor of the department's training division in addition to public information officer, said he "will not seek campaign contributions" and will produce his own signs.

Citing his long commitment to law enforcement as his reason for seeking the peace justice post, Baker said, "I want to continue giving assistance to residents of Odessa by providing fair, impartial and equal service to all."

As Precinct 3 Justice of the Peace, Baker said, "I would treat all persons appearing in my court the way I would want to be treated under similar circumstances."

Baker and his wife, who also works as a secretary in the police administrative offices, have lived in Odessa 30 years and raised three daughters, all of whom graduated from Odessa High School.

Baker, who spent more than 20 years as an investigator for the department, said he believes his investigative experience, coupled with more than 1,400 hours of specialized training, make him well-qualified to serve as peace justice.

A graduate of the FBI's National Academy, Baker attended the University of Virginia and Southern Methodist University.

Baker, an avid fisherman and member of the Permian Basin Bass Club, is also a member of the Masonic Lodge, the Odessa and El Paso Scottish Rite associations, Fellowship Lodge 1385, Woodmen of the World and the Central Baptist Church of Odessa.

Midland students raise $26,633 in MS READ-a-THON

From Staff Reports

Students in Midland schools stacked up the books in the Fall edition of the annual National Multiple Sclerosis Society READ-a-THON. They read a record 10,165 books and raised $26,633.77 to lead the fight against multiple sclerosis in West Texas.

Heather Huit from Bonham Elementary was the top fundraiser in Midland. She raised $405 and read 50 books.

A couple of months ago, local MS volunteers presented a challenge to grade school students: "Join the MS READ-a-THON and read for the need of others." With the support of area teachers and parents, the children responded by reading books and recruiting sponsors who contributed a quarter, half-dollar or more for each book read to the Permian Basin Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Dollars collected in the MS READa-THON are used to support the research and patient service programs of the MS Society. There are 500,000 persons afflicted with multiple sclerosis in the United States. Two hundred new cases are detected every day in persons in their 20's, 30's and 40's. Many MS persons are able to live normal lives, but others must use canes, crutches or wheelchairs. The cause of multiple sclerosis is unknown.

The MS READ-a-THON program was originated and developed by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society for its more than 150 chapters and branches throughout the United States and has gained the acceptance of the International Reading Association, U.S. Office of Education, American Association of School Librarians, National Council of Teachers of English, National Retired Teachers Association and many other educational and civic organizations.

Driver, passenger injured in accident

From Staff Reports

A 44-year-old Midland woman and her 22-year-old male passenger were transported to Midland Memorial Hospital Tuesday after a traffic accident in the 4600 block of North Midkiff Road.

Lavelya Baggerman and Jose Castillo, both of 5100 N. A St., were treated and released after the accident, according to an MMH spokeswoman.

Ms. Baggerman was driving south on Midkiff in a 1984 Chevrolet Camaro when she tried to turn into the parking lot of a store, lost control and hit a utility pole, according to reports from Midland police. The accident occurred about 7:55 p.m.

In other reports from local law-enforcement agencies, a 53-year-old Midland man remained in county jail in lieu of a $50,000 bond this morning after being charged with possession of a controlled substance with intent to distribute.

Alfred William Gray was arrested Sunday at 707 E. Wall by officers of the Midland County Sheriff's Office narcotics unit acting on a Crime Stoppers tip, according to Sheriff's Sgt. David Cobos.

Seized in the raid were 22 papers of heroin worth about $440, and about $1,200 in currency, Cobos said. Bond was set by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

In other reports, a 21-year-old Midland man injured Sunday in a motorcycle accident remained listed in serious condition this morning, according to a Midland Memorial Hospital spokeswoman.

Kyle Allen Harbour, 202 N. Dewberry, was injured on Farm to Market 1788 when his handlebars touched the handlebars of another motorcycle, according to Department of Public Safety reports. Harbour, who was not wearing a helmet, was dragged about 400 feet, reports said.

Expected to be released from MMH today was 28-year-old Raymond Kelly of rural Midland, the spokeswoman said. Kelly was injured in a Saturday night traffic accident on State Highway 349 about a mile south of Interstate 20, according to Department of Public Safety reports.

Jama Venters, Route 9, Box 9642, reported the loss of stereo equipment worth about $450 in a burglary of her home on Midkiff south of Interstate 20. The burglary occurred sometime between Monday and Tuesday, reports said.

About $600 in stereo equipment was reported stolen by Jimmy Romero, 504 E. Cowden, in a burglary which occurred Tuesday at 1603 Orchard Lane, reports said.

Aurora Armendarez, 1204 E. South, reported the loss of $215 in currency and other items for a total loss of about $255 in a Tuesday burglary of her home, reports said.

GISD to celebrate education during Parent Week

From Staff Reports

Greenwood Independent School District will have its annual Parent Week Jan. 27 to Jan. 31. Greenwood will celebrate Texas education by providing various day and evening activities for parents and their children.

One of the main activities that schools can promote is the involvement of parents in the educational process. With this as a goal the school will issue a special invitation to parents and the community to visit classrooms and watch education in action, according to Jean Schwisow, curriculum director.

In conjunction with the Texas Sesquicentennial, the school district will be utilizing the theme "Celebrate Texas Education."

"Taxpayers and parents are always welcome in our schools but this special week we're going all out to get them to come and see the exciting things happening in our district," said Ms. Schwisow. "There will be open houses, displays, parent awareness sessions, student productions and classroom activities at every level."

To avoid overcrowding the district has developed a schedule for the various grades. Students will provide parents with a schedule of activities. Those who have not received information may call the school.

Special activities scheduled include Monday, 7-8:30 p.m., Simulated Student Day Open House at the high school; Tuesday, 8:30-11 a.m., Kindergarten through third grade classroom activities at the elementary school, 7-8:30 p.m., Kindergarten Open House at the elementary school, and 4:30-9 p.m., Junior Varsity and Varsity basketball teams vs. Stanton at the high school; Thursday, 9-11 a.m., fourth-sixth grade classroom activities at the elementary school, and 7-8:30 p.m., fourth-sixth grade Open House at the elementary school; Friday, 4:30-9 p.m., Junior Varsity and Varsity Basketball teams vs. Wall at the high school and 7-10 p.m., Fun Night for Kindergarten-sixth grade students at the elementary school.

Lamaze classes slated

From Staff Reports

Midland Memorial Hospital will offer Lamaze/Prepared Childbirth classes beginning Feb. 17 for six weeks. Meeting each Monday, the classes will be taught from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the Nursing Auditorium at MMH.

The classes, taught by a registered nurse and childbirth educator with 10 years of experience and certified by the American Society for Psycho-propylaxis in Obstetrics, will include topics such as labor and delivery, caesarian section, breast feeding, bonding and communication. Class size is limited to allow for the greatest interaction between the instructor and the class members. To register for the classes, individuals should call 685-1660 and leave their name and address. Brochures with specific information about the classes will then be mailed.

Coalition continues fight against immigration bill

By STEVE LEVINE

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Four months ago, a coalition of Texas church, civil rights and labor groups promised to fight congressional approval of an immigration reform bill the U.S. Senate passed the day before.

Congress re-convened Tuesday in Washington with the Simpson-Rodino bill high on the House agenda, while coalition leaders in Austin say they have begun to make headway in developing a grass-roots opposition and encouraging Texas congressmen to join their fight.

"The congressional members are much more receptive to our arguments than they were last time," said James Harrington, legal director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union. "That means that they're hearing from their constituents."

Joining the TCLU in the Texans for Fair Immigration Reform coalition are the Texas Conference of Churches, Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund, United Farm Workers, Mexican-American Democrats, the Texas Catholic Conference and the Texas Alliance for Human Needs. The coalition still finds three major problems in the Simpson-Rodino bill and enlisted the help of San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros to propose an alternative solution.

The "substantial serious flaws" include:

- A provision that would allow fruit and vegetable growers to hire up to 350,000 foreign laborers to pick crops every year for the next three years. Harrington called that a "rent-a-slave program" that undercuts labor plans to organize farmworkers into unions.

- Legal sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens. Coalition leaders say such a plan has "surface appeal" but will only "increase employment discrimination against foreign-looking workers."

- Too stringent provisions to legalize undocumented workers, which will leave "only a fraction of those equitably entitled to remain here covered, and then only as third-class residents."

Richard Daly, spokesman for the Texas Catholic Conference, said U.S. lawmakers are making a mistake by trying to propose domestic solutions to an international problem. In a statement prepared for the coalition, Cisneros agreed.

"Illegal immigration is a serious problem for both the United States and Mexico, but Simpson-Rodino is not the answer," Cisneros said.

Bill Calderon, executive director of the Mexican American Democrats of Texas, said a 1983 federal analysis reveals that enforcing sanctions against employers would cost $1.5 billion to $2 billion per year.

District judge sets Lamb execution date

GREENVILLE (AP) — A state district judge Tuesday set a March 3 execution date for Texas inmate John Michael Lamb, whose two previous dates with the death chamber were blocked on appeals.

Lamb was convicted of capital murder in the No. 6, 1982 slaying of Jerry Harrison Chaffin during an attempted robbery at a Greenville motel.

Judge Paul Banner, who heard the case throughout the 1983 trial, ordered Tuesday that Lamb should die by injection before sunrise on March 3.

Austin waiter among Guatemala crash victims

AUSTIN (AP) — Paul Consolvo, a 24-year-old Austin man on a trip to visit Mayan Indian ruins, was among 94 persons killed when a jet crashed in Guatemala.

The office of Rep. Jake Pickle, D-Texas, received confirmation from State Department officials in Washington that Consolvo was aboard the flight. His driver's license and passport were found in the wreckage.

Aerovias, a private Guatemalan airline, said Monday that 94 people were killed in the crash of the twin-engine Caravelle jet about 150 miles north of the capital, Guatemala City.

Consolvo, a native of Virginia Beach, Va., moved to Austin about 2½ years ago. He was a waiter at a local restaurant, said Jeff Rozner, a friend and co-worker.

"It was going to be quite an adventure for him. He had taught English to some of the busboys, and one of them had taught him Spanish. He was looking forward to it."

Diehard thief not deterred

DALLAS (AP) — A blast of identifying dye didn't deter a gunman who robbed a savings and loan Tuesday. Minutes later the thief, covered in red, held up a grocery, police said.

"He had red dye all over him, but that didn't bother him a bit," said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

Shaw said a man armed with a pistol walked into a First Texas Savings and Loan in southeast Dallas shortly after 10 a.m. and took an undisclosed amount of money. Soon after he left, a dye pack hidden inside the money bag exploded, covering the man and the money with red.

About 40 minutes later, Shaw said, a man covered in red dye robbed a Mynyard grocery store about four miles from the savings and loan.

"That's the first time someone who robbed one place, got sprayed with red dye and went to another place and robbed it. Ordinarily they go someplace and hide," said Shaw, adding the suspect was still at large Tuesday night.

Man dies in car-train crash

ANGLETON (AP) — A car collided with a freight train Tuesday morning, killing a 40-year-old man who was on his way to a new job in Houston, authorities said.

Robert Thurston Tupper was declared dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Walter Mathews. He suffered massive head and internal injuries, Mathews said.

Investigators said the lights at the railroad crossing were flashing but Tupper apparently did not see the train as it traveled through town about 6:30 a.m.

Tupper's car windows may have been coated with morning dew, investigators said.

Broken gas main starts fire

AUSTIN (AP) — A 4¼-hour fire near a northwest Austin roadway sent flames about 100 feet into the sky and damaged at least $1 million in construction equipment when workers severed a natural gas pipeline, officials said.

No injuries were reported in the Tuesday afternoon fire, but city inspector Ben Martinka said the fire damaged at least $1 million of the construction company's equipment.

Garney Construction employees were digging a ditch to install a 16-inch watermain, across the roadway about 200 yards south of U.S. 183, when they struck an eight-inch natural gas main.

Flames engulfed three construction vehicles and damaged three trucks and a van.

Ernest Rodriguez, a worker, said he thought the gas main was 20 feet further away than its actual location.

FAA: Nelson plane near private strip

EULESS (AP) — Federal officials decline to be "Monday morning quarterbacks" about the significance of a rural airstrip just 10 miles from singer Rick Nelson's airplane before it crashed in a fiery heap on New Year's Eve.

James Howden, manager of the Air Route Control Center, located in this Fort Worth suburb, said Tuesday there was a ranch airstrip of undetermined condition about 10 miles closer than the two nearest airports, each 20 miles away.

But he said the airfield wasn't offered as a landing option.

He praised the air controllers, saying, "I think our controllers did everything they could do."

"We can sit here and Monday morning quarterback," he said, but added that the conversation with the cockpit of Nelson's DC-3 lasted only 3½ minutes.

Howden said he didn't know if air traffic controllers considered the ranch airstrip or if they had too little time to spot it on a map because "...it all happened so fast."

On Tuesday, FAA officials released the tape of the conversation between the control tower and the cockpit of Nelson's plane, which caught fire and crashed on New Year's Eve near DeKalb in northeast Texas.

The tape sheds no light on the exact cause of the crash and only mentions "smoke in the cockpit."

Federal investigators say it will be months before the probable cause of the crash is revealed. Much speculation on the cause of the fire aboard the plane centered at first on two gasoline heaters.

Last week, the Washington Post attributed to an unidentified federal investigator that one possibility being considered was that the fire was ignited by "free-basing" cocaine, which requires mixing the drug with flammable ether or ammonia.

The newspaper also said a source told it that preliminary reports showed a trace of cocaine in Nelson's body.

Justice of the Peace Alfred Welch of Bowie County, where the crash occurred, said Tuesday night that he had heard talk of such reports but he knew of nothing official.

"My report — unless something changes drastically — is that they died of smoke inhalation and thermal burns," Welch said. "And it was accidental in the sense that there was no sign that they were injured by any external force or anybody hurt them intentionally. Then my autopsy report stops there," Welch said.

Nelson's friends and manager denied that the singer was a cocaine user.

Killed in the Dec. 31 crash with the 45-year-old performer were his fiancée, Helen Blair, 27, and band members Bobby Neal, 38; Patrick Woodward, 35; Rick Intveld, 22; Andy Chapin, 20, and Clark Russell, 35, the sound man.

Pilot Brad Rank and co-pilot Keith Ferguson survived the crash.

The tape, which FAA officials said was unedited, records the voice of either Rank or Ferguson requesting help. FAA officials said they do not know which one was communicating on the radio at the time.

The tape recording indicates that the first sign of trouble aboard Nelson's plane is a statement from one of the crew members at 5:08 p.m. (CST): "I think I'd like to turn around, uh, head for Texarkana here. I've got a little problem."

The last communication comes a little more than three minutes later when the pilot says, "(Unintelligible) smoke in the cockpit, have smoke in the cockpit."

At 5:13 p.m., a helicopter pilot radios, "Uh, we have the aircraft in sight, looks like he's gone down. Uh, you need to call Texarkana for the Air Life helicopter."

Sixty-nine-year-old becoming socialized

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A 69-year-old San Antonio man, who stayed inside his home most of his life because of an overprotective mother, is finally learning the ways of the world these days, social workers said.

In the past month, William Leonard has gotten what may have been his first taste of television and radio. And he has been introduced to new foods to replace the Twinkies and milk he is believed to have lived on for years.

In June, social worker Linda Lamb found Leonard naked, encrusted in grime and living on a couch in a South Side home. His mother had died a few years ago, and relatives had been bringing him food since then.

Officials said they believe his mother kept him isolated from the world because she believed he was mentally retarded. But doctors say an evaluation of his mental condition shows no specific problem.

"He's getting socialized," said Dr. Stanley Culotta. "He's not as frightened as he was before."

Leonard was admitted to a hospital last month after Ms. Lamb battled red tape for six months to have him hospitalized and evaluated.

She was alerted to Leonard by a concerned neighbor who reported him to the Texas Department of Human Services. He since has been sent to a nursing home, where officials say the first order of business may be to get him a new set of teeth.

Most of Leonard's teeth are rotted or missing, Culotta said.

Doctors have already been successful in ridding Leonard of scabies, a skin disease caused by lice.

Leonard is not talkative. Nursing home workers say he speaks only a word or a phrase at a time, but he appears to understand what he is told.

A probate court judge has appointed Olivia Barrera as Leonard's guardian.

"Sometimes he looks very, very lonely in his eyes," she said.

TRC orders plugging two abandoned wells

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission said Tuesday it has authorized funds on an emergency basis to plug two abandoned wells that have leaked saltwater and threaten two freshwater sources in North Texas and West Texas.

An estimated $7,000 will be needed to plug a well in Palo Pinto County about 10 miles south of Mineral Wells. And an estimated $10,000 will be necessary to plug a well near Snyder in Scurry County, the commission said.

The commission said a staff investigation showed that the Palo Pinto well has been leaking five to 10 barrels of saltwater a day into a dry watercourse that flows into the Brazos River and the second well threatens a nearby freshwater stream.

The U.S. Postal Service will issue a 22-cent stamp to commemorate the sesquicentennial of the Republic of Texas.

Stamp will commemorate 150 years

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Chief Postal Inspector Charles R. Clauson and author James Michener will speak at the March 2 dedication of a 22-cent postage stamp commemorating the 150th anniversary of Texas' independence from Mexico, the Postal Service announced.

The stamp pictures a spur on a Texas flag backdrop, with the words, "San Jacinto 1836" and "Republic of Texas" beneath it. The colors are red, white and black.

The stamp, to be made available to the public March 3, was designed by Don Adair of Richardson. The spur is modeled after one believed to have belonged to Mexican General Santa Anna and given to Sam Houston, the first president of the Republic of Texas.

The Postal Service announced the new stamp Tuesday in Washington. The U.S. Post Office also commemorated the 1936 centennial of Texas with a three-cent stamp that featured portraits of Sam Houston and Stephen F. Austin flanking the Alamo.

Clauson and Michener, whose novel "Texas" was published last year, will speak at the dedication ceremony at San Antonio's downtown station on March 2.

The Postal Service issued the following instructions for collectors who want to order first-day cancellations:

Customers affixing stamps — Covers bearing customer-affixed stamps will be given preferential service. Customers are encouraged to purchase the stamps and affix them to their envelopes. All envelopes must be addressed on the right side at least ¼ of an inch up from the bottom, and peelable return address labels are recommended for this purpose. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right corner approximately ¼ inch from the top and from the right edge. Requests should be postmarked no later than April 1 and addressed to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Republic of Texas Stamp, Postmaster, San Antonio, Texas, 78284-9991. No remittance is required.

Postal Service affixing stamps — Except for affixing stamps and addressing orders, follow the procedures listed above. The cost is 22 cents for each envelope submitted, and personal checks will be accepted for orders up to the limit of 50 covers. Do not send cash. Postage stamps are unacceptable as payment. Orders should be postmarked no later than April 1 and addressed to: Republic of Texas Stamp, Postmaster, San Antonio, Texas, 78284-9992.

Chile's military against another Pinochet term

By RICHARD BOUDREAU

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Top leaders of the navy, air force and national police have reached a quiet consensus that Gen. Augusto Pinochet should not seek another term as president when this one ends in three years, according to well-informed sources.

For the first time since he ousted Marxist President Salvador Allende in 1973, these sources say, the 70-year-old army commander is hearing murmurs in his own service in favor of a retreat to the barracks.

Publicly, the armed forces are committed to a 1980 constitution that prolongs the Pinochet presidency until March 1989.

But what happens after that is suddenly a central topic of debate inside one of Latin America's few remaining dictatorships.

Under the constitution, the four service commanders are to meet in late 1988 and choose a president to govern until 1997, subject to voter ratification in a yes-or-no referendum. The commanders' choice must be unanimous.

During a visit this month, Rep. John McCain, R-Ariz., met with the navy commander, Adm. Jose Toribio Merino, and quoted him as saying he would vote against Pinochet's nomination to continue as president.

The air force and national police commanders share that position, according to several Chilean political leaders who have spoken with them.

Despite broad civilian opposition, Pinochet has refused to rule out another term. Through a major realignment of senior officers, he has moved to silence political discussion in the army, which has both constitutional and military power to block any civilian rival proposed by the other services.

The succession issue penetrated Pinochet's power base in the armed forces after the Roman Catholic archbishop of Santiago, Cardinal Juan Francisco Fresno, brought together the principal non-Marxist political parties in August to draft a "National Accord for a Transition to Complete Democracy."

The 11-party document, addressed largely to the military, calls for constitutional reform to restore Chile's democratic traditions through open presidential elections.

In October, eight of the army's 51 generals signed a memorandum asking for a meeting with Pinochet to discuss the accord. Three of the four members of the law-making military junta met with the accord's sponsors, and one of them, Lt. Gen. Cesar Raul Benavides of the army, called it "very sensible."

Details of these discreet initiatives were confirmed in interviews with 10 political leaders and defense analysts who have access to military officers. Some spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"There are a lot of conversations among officers," said Adolfo Ballas, a leader of the conservative National Party. "The main argument is that Pinochet is too unpopular and therefore would risk the prestige of the armed forces if he ran as their candidate."

"They are not formally deliberating and they are not conspiring," he added. "But some are saying that if Pinochet wants to stay in power after 1989, he should run as a private citizen in an open election."

After months of publicly belittling the accord's signers, Pinochet met on Christmas eve with Fresno, his chief sponsor, and formally rejected the document.

By that time, he had completed the biggest army shakeup in a decade.

First, he sacked four brigadier generals after rejecting their request to discuss the accord. Their early retirements were announced as a routine part of the year-end reshuffling by an army promotions board.

Two year-end promotions shattered army tradition.

The senior officer among the eight memo signers, Maj. Gen. Luis Danus, commander of the southernmost military region, was passed over for chief of staff, the third highest army post, by a man with a year less seniority.

Fierce fighting continues in suburbs around Aden

Associated Press

Troops loyal to South Yemen's president were believed to be holed up in the crater of an extinct volcano while rival Marxist factions that attempted a coup last week apparently controlled districts where the government offices are located, diplomats said.

A Hungarian who fled the fighting Tuesday on a Soviet cargo ship said in Djibouti that fighting was fierce until early Tuesday in Tawahi, Mualla and Hasweh, suburbs of South Yemen's capital of Aden. Government offices are in Tawahi.

Djibouti is located across the Gulf of Aden from South Yemen, a small Arab country on the southern end of the Arabian Peninsula.

"The rebels may be gaining over the government forces," said the Hungarian who refused to give his name. "We could see them everywhere."

Arab and Western diplomats in North Yemen's capital, Sana'a, who said they were in close touch with developments in neighboring South Yemen, said the rebels appeared to be gaining ground but conditions were too confused to make an accurate assessment.

"The situation in South Yemen is a mystery to many of us here, and there is no way of knowing who is winning or who is losing," an Arab ambassador said. "Army units with tribal affiliations have been changing allegiances almost every day. The vanquished of today could easily switch to victory tomorrow."

The diplomats in Sana'a, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they believed some of Mohammed's forces were encircled in a district of Aden located in the crater of an extinct volcano.

The crater's towering, rocky rim forms a natural fortress that can be approached by only two narrow roads, both easy to defend. One runs along the coast, hugging the southern rim, and the other winds in hairpin turns over the northern rim and into the crater.

The diplomats said rebels appeared to control districts at the foot of the volcano, including the government district of Tawahi, the residential district of Maala, Khormaksar, where the airport and foreign diplomatic missions are located, and Little Aden, site of the Aden refinery across the harbor.

Fighting broke out Jan. 13 in the Soviet-allied nation. The rebels are believed led by Abdul-Fatah Ismail, a hardline former president who opposed Marxist President Ali Nasser Mohammed's recent overtures to the West, and Ali Antar, vice chairman of the ruling presidium.

Before going off the air Jan. 13, South Yemen's official Aden Radio said Ismail and Antar, along with two other coup leaders, had been executed for trying to assassinate Mohammed. Rebel radio broadcasts since have said all four are alive.

The commander of the British royal yacht Britannia, which has been anchored off Aden waiting for fighting to abate so it can pick up fleeing foreigners, said Tuesday that he saw fighting around the Soviet Embassy near the beach at Khormaksar.

The commander, Rear Adm. John Garnier, reported the fighting in a ship-to-shore radio interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

A Russian woman evacuated from South Yemen steps off a Soviet cargo ship in Djibouti Tuesday as two crewmen help carry children down the stairs.

The Britannia and Soviet cargo ships have taken more than 3,000 foreigners from embattled Aden to Djibouti on the Horn of Africa.

The latest group came on the Soviet cargo ship Stakhanovets Yermolenko. Port officials said Tuesday it carried 589 Soviet, Hungarian, Czechoslovak and East German evacuees.

A Japanese freighter, the Sanko Daffodil, also arrived Tuesday and crewmen said it had not picked up refugees because "we had to run for our lives."

"We were unloading a shipment of Australian wheat when the fighting broke out," said 2nd Officer Rusty Ricablaza, a Filipino. "A navy gunboat with a 15mm gun moved close to the bow of our ship and opened fire on tanks on the beach. The tanks fired back and our ship was slightly damaged in the bow and stern sections."

Two crewmen suffered minor shrapnel wounds, he said.

The diplomats in Sana'a said Mohammed was directing his forces from his hometown in Abyan province east of Aden.

They said the province's governor, Mohammed Ali Ahmed, was loyal to Mohammed and held the allegiance of mountain tribes in Mukayris and Lawdar on the North Yemen frontier.

Gemayel's forces, pro-Syrian units clash

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian-backed militias clashed today with President Amin Gemayel's forces, and police said the casualty toll from a car bombing in Christian east Beirut had increased to 30 dead and 133 wounded.

Police said three of Gemayel's Christian loyalists were killed and seven wounded in fighting during the night with leftist and Moslem militias in the central mountains.

Both sides used artillery in the clashes on the eastern flank of the Christian heartland above the 43-year-old Gemayel's hometown of Bikfaya, 10 miles northeast of Beirut.

Casualties among the pro-Syrian militias were not known. Syrian army units were reported to be deploying in mountainous positions overlooking Bikfaya in order to back the militias against Christian units of the Lebanese army and Gemayel's right-wing Phalangist militia.

Police said Tuesday's car bomb in the Furn el-Shubbak district of east Beirut was packed with an estimated 500 pounds of explosives, gasoline and oxygen bottles. The force of the blast hurled parked cars into apartment buildings.

The bomb exploded 30 yards from a Phalange office, but authorities would not say whether that was the target. The only damage at the four-story party office was shattered windows.

The car bombing was the first this year in Lebanon, which was rocked by 12 major car bombings in 1985.

No one has claimed responsibility. But the Christian media charged it was retaliation for Gemayel's rejection of a Syrian-brokered peace pact signed Dec. 28 in an attempt to end Lebanon's 10-year-old civil war.

"This is a booby-trapped vengeance," said the Phalangist Voice of Lebanon. "They want to shore up the pact by mass assassinations."

The radio mentioned no names or countries. But the phrasing of the statement pointed to pro-Syrian backers of the Dec. 28 peace pact.

The Phalangist al-Amal daily branded the car-bombing "treacherous vengeance for the peace agreement."

Last Wednesday, Christian militias loyal to the Maronite Catholic president crushed Christian rivals who supported the pact. The crackdown touched off a week of artillery duels and hit-and-run forays between Gemayel loyalists and Syrian-backed militias in central and north Lebanon, threatening to kindle a new round of all-out fighting.

Police said the fighting has killed nearly 450 people and wounded more than 900 in the past 10 days.

Beirut's leftist As-Safir daily said in a dispatch from Damascus that Syrian leaders were bitter over Gemayel's opposition to the Dec. 28 agreement and quoted an unidentified authoritative Syrian source as saying, "We may have lost our bet on Amin Gemayel...but we are confident he will lose everything."

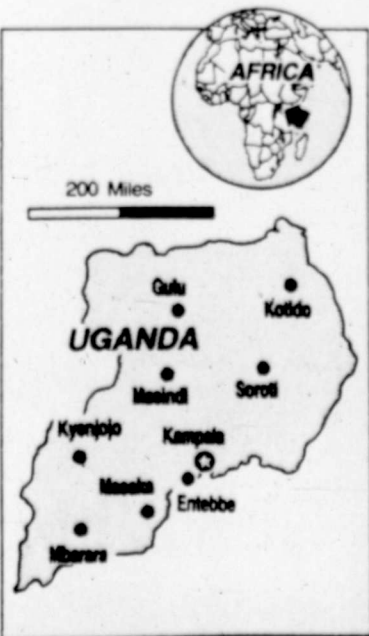

"We regret that our brothers in Lebanon will bear the devastating consequences of his foolish policy."

Los Angeles Times. Washington Post News Service

KAMPALA, Uganda — It was dinner time. A teenage soldier, an AK-47 strapped awkwardly over his shoulder, hungrily eyed some mangoes hanging from a tree above his guard post. Suddenly, he picked up a stick, tossed it at the tree and whacked loose a mango. Dinner was served.

The mango meal, eaten last week near the rear entrance of the heavily guarded Speke Hotel in downtown Kampala, is an apt symbol of how Uganda has been able to feed itself even as two generations of hungry young men with AK-47s have ripped much of this verdant East African nation apart. Most of the public works — roads, schools, hospitals, water systems — that in the 1960s made Uganda one of Africa's most livable countries have been wrecked by more than 15 years of violence.

In the current civil war, rebels of the National Resistance Army have seized and sealed off access to the southwest third of the country. The rebel-held territory is by far the richest, most fertile part of Uganda. Yet, like the soldier with the stick, the rest of Uganda has had little trouble finding dinner.

"If this violence had happened in Tanzania or Kenya or just about any other place in Africa, there would have been mass starvation," said David Mulira, acting director of the East African Development Bank. "Because we have food, we don't realize how bad off we are."

above the market, tall grass and rank garbage occupy the remains of shops demolished by the artillery of the Tanzanian invasion forces that in 1979 forced Idi Amin into exile.

On surrounding hills, all perpetually green and lush in the highland sun, there are a half dozen or so abandoned construction sites. A huge, modern construction crane has stood idle for nearly a decade above the proposed site of Uganda's social security building. The site is a large hole in the center of Kampala, slowly filling with trash.

Blackened, boarded-up shops, victims of last July's coup, border the market. Army soldiers, after toppling the government of president Milton Obote, looted most of Kampala. They were celebrating, Uganda-style, the fruits of power.

U.N. debate rooted in 4,000 years of history

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Accusations of "sacrilegious acts," "profanation" and "violation of the sanctity of holy places" filled a Security Council debate Tuesday that was rooted in 4,000 years of Jerusalem's history.

The 15-nation Security Council, created to deal with threats to world peace and security, became involved in an Arab-Israeli dispute with deep religious currents after recent disturbances on Jerusalem's Temple Mount, which is sacred to both Moslems and Jews.

Morocco and the United Arab Emirates, which requested the urgent council meeting, accused Israel's government of sanctioning what they called profanation of the Al-Aqsa Mosque by Israeli parliamentarians under police protection. The mosque is on the Temple Mount, where the Jews' Temple of Solomon once stood.

Moroccan Ambassador Moulay Mehdi Alaoui accused Israel of sacrilegious acts that "constitute an act of defiance against the hundreds of millions of Moslems."

Speaking for the 42-nation Organization of the Islamic Conference, of which Morocco is the current chairman, Alaoui said the disturbances created by visits of Israeli parliamentarians were "part of the Israeli plan to Judaize the occupied (Arab) territory and deny millions of Moslems and Christians faithful...the right to their holy places."

Emirates Ambassador Mohammad Hussain al-Shaali said Israel's "violation of the sanctity of holy places" was part of a campaign to destroy the Arab character of the Old City "in order to annex this territory forever."

In rebuttal, Israeli Ambassador Benjamin Netanyahu contended that a "courtesy visit" to the Temple Mount by Israeli legislators was used "as a pretext for a pre-arranged incitement by a small group of agitators."

Israeli police, who intervened to protect the Knesset members, "acted with the greatest restraint," he said.

"No shrine was desecrated. No one was hurt," said Netanyahu, adding that Israel had an "impeccable record" of protecting Moslem and Christian shrines in the Holy City. He invited council members to visit Jerusalem and "witness this reality first hand."

Jerusalem "has been the capital of the Jewish people since the time of David. It will remain so forever," the ambassador said.

Israel annexed Arab East Jerusalem including the Temple Mount after the 1967 Mideast war and, ignoring international protests, declared all Jerusalem to be Israel's official capital in 1980.

WORLD in brief

Daimler-Benz will consider restitution for forced labor

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — The manufacturer of Mercedes-Benz automobiles, Daimler-Benz company, says it will consider paying restitution to people used during the Nazi era as forced laborers.

Spokeswoman Ursula Mertzig had said Monday that based on a study of the history of Daimler-Benz commissioned by the company, there was no "actual cause" to make restitution.

However, in a telephone interview Tuesday with The Associated Press, Ms. Mertzig explained that the study by the Stuttgart-based company was continuing into the extent of forced labor during the war.

The laborers were Jews and foreigners brought into Germany to work for the company during the 1933-1945 Nazi era.

Historians say that during the Nazi era, at least 500,000 people were forced to work in armament and gunpowder factories run by German industry.

Poland to put Walesa on trial

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government said Tuesday it will try Solidarity founder Lech Walesa on charges of slandering state election officials but indicated he probably won't go to prison.

Opposition activists announced that more than 35,000 Poles had signed an appeal issued by Walesa and 78 prominent intellectuals in November urging the authorities to halt political repression and free all political prisoners.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said no trial date has been set for Walesa because it has not been decided which court should handle the case.

The maximum sentence for the charges Walesa faces is two years in prison or a stiff fine. But Urban indicated that the authorities were reluctant to imprison Walesa.

Iranians walk out of banquet

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Visiting Iranians said Tuesday they left a state banquet because wine was served and women did not wear veils, explaining their action at a news conference that female journalists were told to attend with their heads covered.

The Iranians, led by President Ali Khamenei, handed out a statement that said: "The delegation for the Islamic Republic of Iran had simply requested the relevant protocol authorities not to serve alcohol at this banquet. It was also requested that in such a banquet proper attention be paid to questions regarding lady participants as far as their attire matters of principle throughout the Islamic world."

Zimbabwe officials continued with the banquet Monday night, at which there also was an orchestra playing dance music, despite the walkout of the honored guests.

In the news conference that followed distribution of the statement, Khamenei would not say whether he blamed protocol officers from both Zimbabwe and Iran.

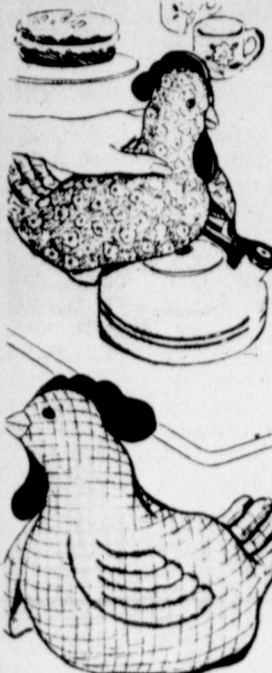

U.S. group formed to aid Africa

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Prominent businessmen have united in an effort to sustain U.S. interest in helping Africa recover from years of drought.

Former Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, now chairman of the Burroughs Corp., and former Chase Manhattan Bank Chairman David Rockefeller announced the formation of a "national support group for Africa" at a news conference before its first meeting here Tuesday.
