Tylenol manufacturer offers $100,000 reward

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Potassium cyanide found in two bottles of Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules apparently came from the same source, authorities said Friday, and the manufacturer offered a $100,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the poisoner.

"This is an act of terrorism, pure and simple," said James E. Burke, chairman of Johnson & Johnson.

Scientists determined that a second bottle of Tylenol contained the same poison that had killed a 23-year-old woman last weekend — an indication, authorities said, that the same hands were involved in both tamperings.

"The reports we're getting that there was no tampering afterwards. So this would lend support to the theory that somewhere during the manufacturing process is when the cyanide was put into the capsule... in the plant," said Westchester County District Attorney Carl Vergari.

But he said tampering at the plant was "one avenue we are exploring, but not the only one."

The first bottle was produced in May in Fort Washington, Pa., Burke said, while the second was made in July at a plant in Puerto Rico. It was not known whether the two lots might have been stored together somewhere in the distribution chain.

Both bottles, however, were stored at different times at a plant in Montgomeryville, Pa., Burke said.

Although the manufacturer and the Food and Drug Administration warned consumers nationwide not to use Tylenol capsules for now and at least 10 states banned sales of the capsules, no poisoned Tylenol had been found outside Westchester County in the northern suburbs of New York City.

Burke said the company would give a refund, or a new bottle of Tylenol tablets or caplets, which are coated pills, to any consumer who wished to exchange Tylenol capsules.

He said those with information should call the FBI at 1-800-334-2344, and anyone with Tylenol from the two lot numbers involved in the New York cases should call 1-800-526-2433.

Police said they had no suspects and discounted a letter which claimed responsibility for the poisoning, demanded $2 million and threatened to poison other products. The man who admitted writing the note was charged only with an unrelated credit card fraud.

"I think it's just one of those trying to extort money and trying to get publicity," said Bronxville Police Chief Carl Steinhilber, who believed the letter was not related to the death of Diane Elstroth of Peekskill.

Meanwhile, at least 9 states and the District of Columbia joined New York in banning the sale of Tylenol capsules, and several others asked retailers to suspend sales voluntarily.

Miss Elstroth died after taking two capsules Saturday from a bottle of Extra-Strength Tylenol purchased at an A&P supermarket in Bronxville. Authorities say they believe those capsules contained potassium cyanide, three other poisoned capsules were found in the bottle.

On Thursday, officials of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration said they had found five more poisoned capsules in another bottle taken from a Woolworth's store about two blocks from the A&P.

Dr. Frank Young, FDA commissioner, said the department's Cincinnati laboratory had analyzed the contents of the second bottle and believed that the poison in both bottles came from the same source.

Chemists had obtained a "fingerprint" or detailed identification of the compound in the second bottle, he said, and "after analyzing this, the fingerprint of the second potassium cyanide is identical to the potassium cyanide that was found in the other bottle."

Mexico slashes oil prices second time in two weeks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico, which has been vying with Canada as the leading supplier of crude oil to the United States, slashed its prices Friday for the second time in two weeks.

A statement from Pemex, the government oil monopoly, said the reduction averaging $4.68 a barrel would cut the average cost of its oil to $15.09 a barrel. The new prices are retroactive to Feb. 1.

The decision also represented a change from Mexico's new policy of adopting prices retroactively at the end of each month.

"This measure forms part of the efforts that Mexico is carrying out to stay competitive, making adequate its mechanisms of foreign commerce for crude oil to the characteristics that the market demands," Pemex's statement said.

The move came on a day that saw

West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, selling for around $16.50 a barrel on the open market. Contracts for March delivery of the grade closed at $16.01 on the New York Mercantile Exchange, down 46 cents from Thursday's close.

A barrel is the equivalent of 42 gallons.

Several oil companies also announced cuts in the prices they would pay for various grades of crude.

Marathon Oil Co., in its fourth series of cuts this month, said it was reducing by $1 the price it would pay for 11 grades, including West Texas Intermediate, for which it would pay $18.50 a barrel.

Exxon Co. U.S.A., a unit of Exxon Corp., dropped its price for West Texas Intermediate by $1 to $22. It said it was lowering the prices it pays for other crudes by between 75 cents and $3.50 a barrel. Texaco Refining and Marketing Inc., a unit of Texaco Inc., said it lowered its price for West Texas Intermediate by $1 a barrel to $21.50 and prices for some other grades by $1 a barrel.

The decision to further cut Mexico's oil prices was made by the Committee of Foreign Commerce for Petroleum made up of key Cabinet departments, Pemex and the central Bank of Mexico.

Mexico and Canada have been seen as the leading supplier of crude oil and refined products to this country in recent months. Mexico had been the No. 1 supplier for some time.

In addition, other foreign producers have been increasing their sales to the United States in recent months as oil prices have slumped sharply around the world.

Investigators look for evidence to explain black smoke

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Presidential investigators examined Challenger's launch pad and wreckage Friday, looking for evidence to explain a puff of black smoke that indicated trouble as the shuttle lifted off on its fatal flight.

"With the exception of the orbiter, everything is being looked into," said panel chairman William P. Rogers after the commission ended two days of intensive closed-door discussions and hands-on inspections of the boosters and Launch Pad 39B.

As the commission completed its investigation at Kennedy Space Center, the space agency reported that Challenger was rocked violently as flame apparently burst through the right rocket booster about 11 seconds before it exploded in a fireball.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration released a time line, prepared from photographs and data radioed from the shuttle, that shows the plume of black smoke appeared on the right booster's lower segment only 445 of a second after liftoff and was visible for about 12 seconds before disappearing.

Smoke again appears on the side of the booster at 58 seconds. An intense flame then is visible in this area a little more than a second later. The chamber pressure in the rocket fell at that time, causing the left booster to begin tugging the shuttle slightly off course, according to the time line.

The shuttle's computers tried to compensate for the difference by moving the right wing flap at 62 seconds.

Shortly after that, the computers caused the engine nozzles to swivel, in efforts to compensate. This caused Challenger to move up and down, but NASA spokesman Jim Mizell said the crew may not have felt the motions because of tremendous wind and atmospheric pressure at that point.

Rogers, a former secretary of state named to head the presidential panel, said the investigators "collected so much information that we need some time to analyze that information."

"I'm not going to speculate (on the cause)," he said.

Commissioner Richard P. Feynman, a Nobel laureate in physics, told a news media pool reporter that O-ring seals at the right booster's lower segment appeared to be "the most likely cause" of the explosion that destroyed the shuttle and killed its seven crew members.

But he cautioned another cause might be discovered.

"Every time we think of a possibility, that doesn't mean that's it," Feynman said. "We write down all the things we can think about and scratch them off one by one until we isolate and conclude that this is it."

Judge denies restraining order for Catoico duchess

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A State District judge on Friday denied the request of a high school senior and her parents to issue a temporary restraining order that would prevent the Midland Independent School District from barring her from Catoico Court festivities.

Judge Bill McCoy of Odessa said MISD should not be forced to allow Midland High School senior Heidi Hewett to take part in the Catoico Court ceremonies tonight. He made the ruling following a hearing Friday in 142nd District Court in Midland.

Miss Hewett was elected Catoico Court duchess by her classmates last December. But school board officials ruled Wednesday that Miss Hewett is ineligible because she failed an elective course during the third six-weeks grading period and earned an unsatisfactory citizenship mark in another.

The board concurred with school administrators, who said Miss Hewett was ineligible because she failed to meet "general qualifications" documented in the MHS Constitution. Those qualifications state that students elected to office must earn "grades of 70 or above for all grading periods" during the first and second semester. Also, no student "shall receive a 'U' in citizenship during the present semester" nor shall a student receive "more than one 'U' during the previous semester."

McCoy reached the opinion that the MHS Constitution is specific in mandating that all elected candidates must maintain standards during their tenure of office.

The Hewetts' attorney, Mike Cunningham, argued the qualifications established in the MHS Constitution were "ambiguous" in that the Catoico Court "is not a tenure office" similar to Student Council President.

Cunningham described Ms. Hewett as a distinguished student by her grades (above average), her extracurricular activities and her representation of MHS for a three-year period.

"Now at the end of such a distinguished care, the school system, by using a set of vague rules and flawed policies supported by nothing but the arbitrary and capricious decision of school officials, are taking actions that will be painful and damaging to this student for the rest of her life," he said.

To prove his point, Cunningham called on Chicago resident Mary Malloy, who in 1996 was elected MHS Catoico Queen, but was prohibited from participating in the festivities because she received a "D" in a course.

Mrs. Malloy called her experience "damaging" and said it affected her whole life.

Cunningham also argued that "the school itself does not follow the Constitutional provisions."

Cunningham charged MISD "does not regularly check the records for each and every office."

There are cases where "Student Council representatives have had failing grades or other problems...but those persons have not been removed from office," he said. "Unless those persons are a student athlete or cheerleader their grades are not examined to ascertain that they are maintaining the qualifications" of the Constitution.

MHS principal Jimmie R. Kelly testified, however, that student grades are examined on a regular basis and that the district is able to secure the grades of students through high school counselors, the principal or the district's computer center.

In addition, "We have had three formal meetings with the teachers at which time they have been given very specific instructions on how they are to keep records of the eligibility requirements of students," he said.

The Catoico Court tradition dates back to the early 1980s and is designed to present the seven young women who most represent MHS and the community. The court is elected by the student body in the fall semester preceding the spring coronation.

The right booster. The magazine said NASA engineers are assessing whether the low temperatures might have been caused by cold liquid hydrogen fuel leaking from the external tank.

The commission searched for evidence that could be linked to newly released film showing the "unusual" smoke coming from between the right booster and the external tank as the shuttle lifted off.

The smoke appeared to be the first solid indication that Challenger was in trouble from the time it was launched into the clear, blue skies on the frosty morning of Jan. 28.

Videotape and still photos, which the commission reviewed Thursday, show the mysterious black smoke curling around the right booster, from the back, at the area of the bottom seam. Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the smoke appeared about 0.44 seconds after the twin rockets began powering Challenger off the pad.

The seam, one of four on the 140-foot-long booster, contains an O-ring synthetic rubber seal suspected of leaking, possibly due to several hours of sub-freezing launch day temperatures.

According to this theory, the leaky seal was responsible for a plume of flame shooting out of the side of the booster less than a minute into the flight. This flame is said to have caused the half-million gallons in the external tank to explode 73 seconds after launch, destroying the shuttle and killing the crew.

The commission released the film and photos but did not comment directly on the smoke.

Rogers said "no possibilities have been excluded," adding that the commission members spent nine hours Thursday and about six hours Friday in "frank discussions" with officials from the space agency and Morton Thiokol, the company that manufactured the boosters.

He said the major areas of study were the right booster, the external tank and how sub-freezing weather may have affected the seals on the booster.

Aviation Week said an infrared sensor used by an inspection team 1 1/2 hours before launch recorded temperatures of 7 and 9 degrees Fahrenheit at two points on the right booster. These temperatures are below NASA's flight safety limits.

Aviation Week said the inspection team did not report the low readings to primary launch personnel. It said investigators are checking the infrared sensor to determine if its readings were valid.

Lawyers: Bell illegally contacted PUC

By GARY RASP
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State consumer lawyers Friday said Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has illegally communicated with members of the Public Utility Commission staff and have asked the commission to investigate the matter.

Telephone company officials flatly denied any wrongdoing and accused attorneys opposing Bell's $323.9 million rate increase request of trying to stall the case.

"There is no question that this is not a violation" of the Public Utility Regulatory Act, said Jon Loehman, assistant vice president of rates and revenues for Bell. "Any other party could have done the same thing."

PUC Executive Director Dick Galligan said the commission will consider whether or not to conduct a formal inquiry at an open meeting Tuesday morning.

Jim Boyle, a state-paid attorney who represents residential and small commercial ratepayers at the PUC, said Loehman might have violated the act by requesting work papers associated with an administrative law judge's decision in the case. Loehman said he only wanted the work information to verify calculations that led to the examiner's recommendation.

On Jan. 31, Administrative Law Judges Deborah Miller and Sheila Bailey recommended the commission give Bell $144 million of the $323.9 million the company requested.

On Feb. 3, Loehman asked staff members within the PUC's accounting division for work papers used in calculating the recommendation. Loehman said he then called Bailey and she told him to put his request in writing.

"There was no indication (from Bailey) that there was any objection whatsoever," Loehman said.

State law states that parties to a rate case "may not communicate with an Administrative Law Judge concerning any issue of fact or law in a contested case that has not been finally decided by the commission."

Loehman said his conversation with Bailey "was about a procedural matter, not a finding of fact or law."

Bell's written exceptions to the Jan. 31 order contained references to the work papers, which the company did not give to consumer lawyers.

Austin attorney Don Butler, who represents a number of Texas cities opposing Bell's rate increase, said Bell "has had unfair advantage in responding to the Examiner's report as a result of its possession of the ALJ's supporting work papers which were not provided to other parties."

"Since (Bell) is unable to prove a need for a rate increase in open hearing, it is understandable why it must engage in such activity in order to gain an unfair advantage outside the public hearing," Butler said.

Butler has asked the PUC for more time to file exceptions to the administrative law judge's recommendation.

"For starters, we'd like to have as much time as the company has had to examine the material," Butler said, adding that he supports Boyle's request for an inquiry into the matter.

"The danger here is that the company has information that the people representing ratepayers don't have," Butler said.

Mauzy won't accept group's endorsement

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Supreme Court candidate Oscar Mauzy said Friday that he will not seek or accept the endorsement of a pro-plaintiff group working to oust liberal justices.

Supreme Court candidates who answer specific questions about pending litigation from the Texas Supreme Court Justice Committee violate the Code of Judicial Conduct, said Mauzy, a Dallas state senator.

"I'm not going to fill out a questionnaire, I'm not going to appear before them, I'm going to reject their endorsement if it's offered, I'm not going to accept their money if it's offered because it's tainted money," Mauzy said.

"They're asking me to do something that under the law I cannot do and I shall not do."

But Larry Thompson, a committee organizer, said "nothing could be further from the truth."

"We're looking to people who will be independent and will stand up to the special interest," Thompson said. "We're helping to elect judges on something besides name ID."

Mauzy is running against incumbent Democrat Sears McGee, San Antonio Court of Appeals Justice Shirley Butts and Houston District Judge Hugo Touchy for the Supreme Court Place 1 seat.

"I know the two other (Democrats) candidates in this race are running around the state pandering to them," Mauzy said, excluding

McGee. "I call upon my other two opponents in the Democratic primary to abide by the law like I'm doing."

Mauzy said he received an invitation to appear before the Supreme Court Justice Committee next week to answer questions from committee members. "I rejected that invitation because I cannot and do not condone their stated purpose of requiring candidates for the Supreme Court to announce in advance how they will vote on a given case."

Thompson said Mauzy probably declined the committee's invitation because he felt he would not receive their endorsement. Observers describe Mauzy as a liberal. The committee, being a pro-defendant group, supports more conservative candidates.

The committee will interview candidates at the Capitol, and Mauzy said if they use the Capitol, the meetings should be open to the public. The committee scheduled interviews with candidates for Feb. 21 and 28.

Thompson said "my first reaction is yes" the meeting will be open, but he will check with other committee members before saying for sure if the meeting is public.

Mauzy released committee memos showing the group will remain "neutral" in Supreme Court Justices Jim Wallace and Robert Campbell's races and will support Justice Raul Gonzales. However, the memos say the committee "would probably seek another candidate for Sears McGee's seat."

College trustee announces candidacy for re-election

From Staff Reports

John W. Cooper, a member of the Midland College Board of Trustees since 1979, has announced his candidacy for re-election in the April 5 elections.

Cooper

Cooper, a 48-year-old insurance agent, was appointed to the post in 1979 following the death of a trustee, the Rev. Horace Doyle, and was elected to a six-year term on the nine-member board in 1980.

"During the past six years," he said, "I feel I have learned a great deal about how Midland College functions and its great value in this community. The college now is entering a critical phase due to economic slow-downs and a reduction in state funding. I would like to continue using the experience gained as a trustee to represent all segments of the community, as we carry on toward the goal of making Midland College the best community college in the nation."

Cooper said Midland College offers a "unique educational opportunity for our young people just out of high school" and for those in the community "who wish to pursue knowledge for career advancement, training for new jobs, or simply for their own enrichment."

Cooper is a native of Caldwell in East Central Texas, attended Prairie View A&M University and Odessa College. He and his wife, Lizzie, live at 1409 E. Chestnut St.

He has been a Midland resident for 27 years and has been associated with Bankers Life and Casualty Co. 23 years.

Cooper is a member of Macedonia Baptist Church, past president of the Tall City Lions Club and a past member of the Human Relations Council.

Cooper has completed the Life Underwriter Training Course, and is a member of the Midland Life Underwriters Association and the President's Honor Circle, the highest agent recognition from Bankers Life.

He could not say how the poison was introduced into the box. The seals and wrapping appeared to be unbroken.

A third bottle, taken from an A&P in Shrub Oak, 27 miles north of Bronxville, also contained a contaminant. William Grigg, a spokesman for the FDA, said "it is such a small trace, they're having a hard time finding out what it is."

Johnson and Johnson and the FDA had called on all consumers nationwide to stop using the capsules for now, although Burke said he opposed a nationwide recall.

A recall "remind that terrorist out there that he has won," said Burke, who also blasted local broadcasters for what he thought was sensational reporting.

"The local broadcast media have turned this thing into a circus," Burke said, objecting to words and phrases such as "horrors" and "terrified discovery."

Forty-five health inspectors fanned out across New York City, concentrating on small "mom and pop" stores, to make sure the capsules were not for sale, said Health Department spokesman Marvin Bogner.

The FDA's Young said the cyanide found in Bronxville did not match the cyanide found in Tylenol in 1982, when seven people died in the Chicago area. He said 80,000 capsules had been tested, and the investigation was widening.

"We're starting at the original location and surrounding areas, and then we'll go broader from that, and most importantly, today we'll be checking it with other types of potassium cyanide that we have in our banks," he said.

Testing "will continue non-stop over the weekend," Grigg said Friday afternoon.

The two 24-capsule bottles containing the poison came from separate batch numbers — ADF916, expiring in May 1987 and manufactured in Fort Washington, Pa., and AHA090, expiring in April 1987, and manufactured in Puerto Rico.

How poison could be introduced into both packages was a mystery. Johnson & Johnson spokesman James Gutman said it was not known whether the two bottles were ever stored in the same place, before being shipped to retailers.

Young said someone may have added the cyanide after the bottles left the factory and then replaced the seals.

As for the extortion letter, Vergari said, "We have no reason to believe it is connected with our homicide investigation."

A copy of the letter was found during the arrests of Dewitt Gilmore, 21, of Mount Vernon, and two other people on credit card fraud charges Thursday. Gilmore admitted during his arraignment that he wrote the letter.

Chief Steinmuller said he had received the letter Thursday. While he has not ruled out any connection between the tampering and the letter, he said he did not believe there was a connection.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Annmarie Levins said the letter would be cited as a reason not to release Gilmore, who was scheduled for a bail hearing Tuesday.

Railroad Commissioner Temple resigns as of March 2

AUSTIN (AP) — Buddy Temple resigned Friday as a Texas railroad commissioner, effective March 2, and Gov. Mark White appointed Temple's assistant, Clark Jobe, to replace him.

Jobe, 31, will serve the remainder of Temple's unexpired term, which extends to Jan. 1, 1987.

Temple, a former state legislator, said he was resigning because acquisitions by a company he has interests in pose an "irreconcilable" conflict of interest with his commissioner's job. He already had decided not to seek re-election.

"Last week, Temple-Inland Inc., a company in which I have an interest, announced that it has signed an agreement to purchase assets of Owens-Illinois, Inc., including a short-line railroad which primarily serves the Owens-Illinois paper mill in Orange," Temple said.

"The acquisition of this railroad presents a conflict of interest for me as a member of the Texas Railroad Commission that cannot be reconciled. The law is clear that a member of the commission cannot have any interest whatsoever in a railroad," he said.

Jobe has served as an assistant to Temple since 1977.

White said, "In view of Buddy's decision to resign, I feel the best person to step in and fulfill his responsibilities for the next 10 months is the man who has served as his key assistant for the last nine years."

Eight candidates, four Democrats and four Republicans, are seeking Temple's seat on the three-member commission.

Teacher: White doesn't seem popular

FORT WORTH (AP) — Gov. Mark White's silent representative said the governor did not seem popular with teachers who packed a banquet room Friday to hear White's challengers.

The challengers drew applause from Texas Classroom Teachers Association members by taking jabs at White's work on education.

Fort Worth teacher Luis Mendez, recruited Thursday to sit in for White, said "according to the response," White is not popular with many of the 400 TCTA members at the convention.

"I think quite a few individuals took pot shots at him," said Mendez, noting that many of the pot shots drew applause.

TCTA President Thomasine Sparks of Kingsville said she was "disappointed" that White did not attend. She also said she is "disappointed" in White's performance on education matters.

"From the way he's talked it's evident he doesn't think teachers are important," she told reporters.

Mendez is a White appointee to the Juvenile Justice Advisory Board and president of a Fort Worth teachers group affiliated with the Texas State Teachers Association.

Ms. Sparks announced that Mendez would not be making comments

West Texas teachers create group to work for White's defeat

AUSTIN (AP) — A group of West Texas teachers has created a statewide organization to work for the defeat of Gov. Mark White in the governor's race this year.

Doug Ward, a football and basketball coach and English and speech teacher at Monahans, is chairman of Texas Teachers for Respect and Responsibility.

Ward said the organization has not endorsed a gubernatorial candidate but is ready to discuss education with White's opponents.

He said in a statement that teachers are tired of being "verbally attacked, belittled and degraded by our present governor."

Ward also said the organization opposes the teacher competency test scheduled for March and the no pass, no play rule adopted by the State Board of Education.

The test and rule were part of a package of education reforms enacted by the Legislature in 1984 with White's support.

because he was serving only as a representative of the governor.

White campaign spokesman Mark McKinnon said the governor had a previous commitment to meet Friday in Austin with county officials from around the state.

"The governor would like to have participated," McKinnon said of the TCTA convention.

After the luncheon, Mendez declined to answer reporters' questions about education issues.

"It could open up a whole can of worms," he said.

GOP contenders Kent Hance, Bill Clements and Tom Loeffler and Democratic candidates Don Crowder and Andy Briscoe all said changes are needed in the schools.

Briscoe drew the first anti-White applause by saying, "The present administration can be beat on May 3 if you want him to be beat."

Crowder drew applause by saying, "I don't think this state or my party can survive four more years of Mark White."

Some of the teachers clapped when Loeffler said, "Why is it important that we get rid of Mark White? Because he's only interested in the next election, not the next generation."

"He owes it to you to meet with you face-to-face," Loeffler said, again drawing applause.

Clements got good response by saying White's education reforms have left teachers with "deplorable" paperwork. The teacher competency test that will be given next month is "not in the spirit of fairness," said Clements.

The teachers applauded when Hance said the school changes pushed by White have left teacher morale at "the lowest I've ever seen it."

After the luncheon, TCTA legislative chairman Susan Crocker of Grand Prairie said TCTA members seem to have "concerns about (White's) level of interest in teachers."

The 25,000-member TCTA does not endorse candidates.

Asked if she was upset that White did not attend, Ms. Crocker said, "Mr. Mendez is delightful, but..."

Bank agrees to pay $1.9 million civil fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texas Commerce Bancshares, a large Houston bank holding company, has agreed to pay a $1.9 million civil fine in the third largest penalty imposed in a crackdown on failures to report large currency transactions, officials said Friday.

The Treasury Department said the fine covered more than 7,000 violations of the Bank Secrecy Act, which requires banks to report any cash transactions involving more than $10,000. The law is aimed at giving law enforcement authorities a way to track money laundering activities by organized crime.

Government officials said there was no evidence Texas Commerce had engaged in criminal activity in connection with the violations, which were uncovered during an internal review conducted in mid-1985 by the bank.

The fine was topped only by a $4.75 million penalty levied against Bank of America in San Francisco last month and a $2.25 million fine paid by Crocker National Bank, also of San Francisco, last year.

Texas Commerce, which owns 70 banks, said many of the violations involved cash flows between its banks along the Mexican border and banks in Mexico.

"Prior to 1980, these transactions were exempt from the reporting requirements," the bank said in a statement. "The inadvertent failures to report appeared to have resulted from the mistaken belief that these routine inter-bank transfers continued to be exempt."

The bank said the remaining errors involved transactions with the bank's domestic customers, including established businesses "that routinely engage in cash transactions."

Failure to report currency transactions under the Bank Currency Act carries a maximum penalty of $10,000 per violation, which means Texas Commerce could have faced a maximum fine of more than $70 million.

However, Francis A. Keating II, assistant Treasury secretary for enforcement, said the government had taken into account the bank's "commitment to full future compliance and record of past cooperation with federal law enforcement officials."

Ben F. Love, chairman and chief executive officer of Texas Commerce, said the firm's 1986 earnings would not be affected because it had established a reserve fund in the fourth quarter of 1985 to handle the $1.9 million settlement.

Treasury Department officials said the violations came to light when Texas Commerce reviewed its reporting operations after a $500,000 fine imposed on the Bank of Boston in February 1985 for failing to report $1.22 billion in cash transactions.

Since June, 12 other banks have been penalized from $121,000 to the $4.75 million fine imposed against Bank of America. They were among 60 banks that have come forward to discuss past non-compliance with the currency reporting law, officials said.

Officials said cases involving the other banks are still under review.

"We believe that Treasury's imposition of civil penalties has contributed substantially to recent increased attention to compliance," Keating said. "Full compliance with the Bank Secrecy Act is essential to effective law enforcement."

STATE IN BRIEF

Court orders new trial for ex-Pasadena mayor

HOUSTON (AP) — The 14th Court of Appeals ordered a new trial for former Pasadena Mayor Sam Hoover, who was convicted of theft in June 1984 and sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Hoover, 77, mayor of Pasadena from 1947 to 1951, was convicted of theft by receiving on June 15, 1984. But the appellate court said Thursday the original indictment failed to provide enough information to allow Hoover adequate preparation for defense.

His attorney, Windi Akins, said the state was negligent in defining the charges thoroughly. She said she will work on having Hoover released on bond as a new trial is being prepared.

The original case arose when Hoover allegedly recovered a stolen sable coat, valued at $65,000, for a private investigator in exchange for a $7,500 reward.

Hoover, once a successful criminal lawyer, was convicted in 1985 and served 17 years of a 60-year term for masterminding the torture-robbery of a wealthy Houston couple.

Union members charged

TEXAS CITY (AP) — The arrests of 59 union members and their supporters early Friday brought to 148 the number arrested during protests over the use of non-union labor for the construction of a co-generation power plant.

Charges of obstructing a passage-way were being prepared against those arrested, police said. The demonstrations Friday and Thursday were peaceful and the protesters did not resist arrest, police said.

Some of those arrested Friday also were arrested Thursday, Police Chief J.D. Purdon said. They were trying to block entrance of non-union workers at the power plant on Union Carbide property.

"They just blocked the gate and wouldn't let anyone in or out of this construction area," Purdon said.

One woman and 24 men of the 89 arrested Thursday remain in the Galveston County Jail. They were being held in lieu of $250 bond each.

Teen on probation arrested

DALLAS (AP) — A 19-year-old man was arrested on investigative charges of robbery and car theft hours after receiving a probated sentence for auto theft, police said.

Byron Keith Holloway was accused of stealing a Mercedes-Benz minutes after he left a Dallas County courtroom Wednesday, police said. He was arrested eight hours after getting probation through a plea agreement.

Holloway was held Friday in lieu of $100,000 bond on investigative charges of auto theft, felony theft and two counts of aggravated robbery, jail officials said.

Authorities say the investigative charges stem from a purse-snatching at Valley View Mall and the gunpoint robbery of a man at the Galleria shopping mall Wednesday.

Holloway was driving a Mercedes when he was arrested, and a .38-caliber pistol was found in the car, police said. Another man ran away, police said.

Mattox: Officials may help

AUSTIN (AP) — An 8-year-old girl who is scheduled to undergo a liver transplant may accept $25,000 for unpaid medical expenses from the Montague County Commissioners Court, Attorney General Jim Mattox held Friday.

The commissioners court expressed its willingness to pay all unpaid expenses up to a total of $25,000 but a legal question was posed to Mattox by Sen. Ray Farabee, chairman of the State Affairs Committee.

The question was whether the commissioners court could pay for medical services for an indigent who is a county resident but who does not live within an area served by a public hospital or a hospital district.

IRS has 1,148,000 returns

AUSTIN (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service center at Austin had received 1,148,000 federal income tax returns as of a week ago and had processed 196,000, up 90 percent over the same time last year.

Nationally, the average refund has been $511, compared with $668 at this time last year, the IRS said.

Robert Branson, public affairs officer, said the average refund from the Austin center had not been figured.

The Austin center serves Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Kansas and Louisiana.

Man sentenced 44 years in death of karate expert

FORT WORTH (AP) — A self-described survivalist convicted of murder in a shooting spree that left karate expert Jimmy Glen Wilson dead has been sentenced to 44 years in prison.

Jurors also assessed Barry Wayne Shaw a 15-year sentence for the attempted murder of the karate studio's owner, Rudy Smedley, and a 5-year sentence for criminal mischief for spraying gunfire through a foyer of Richland High School four days later.

The jury conferred about 90 minutes Thursday before finding Shaw guilty on all three counts. Prosecutors had sought the maximum life sentence for the killing.

Wilson, manager of a Dallas restaurant, had attended a karate competition at Smedley's studio and was preparing to change clothes when the shooting occurred on Sept. 24, 1984.

Shaw, 22, admitted during testimony Wednesday that after spending a 2-day survival weekend in a wilderness park, he drove to Fort Worth and sprayed the karate studio with gunfire, blasting out the windows of the building.

But Shaw also testified he hadn't meant to injure anyone.

Shaw testified that after blasting away at the karate studio, he returned to a wilderness park near Decatur, 40 miles northwest of Fort Worth. He hitchhiked four days later to Fort Worth, where he spent a sleepless night atop a high school, he said.

He surrendered to police the following day after spraying a corridor of the school with gunfire. No one was injured at the school.

Shaw testified that he didn't know until after his arrest at the school that anyone had been injured in the shooting at the karate studio.

Adlai Stevenson likens opponent to whale

CHICAGO (AP) — Reviving the kind of rhetoric that marked their bitter 1962 election fight, Adlai E. Stevenson on Friday likened Gov. James R. Thompson to a "big, blubbering, harpooned whale," while characterizing himself as a "lean, mean, fighting machine."

"The best word to describe him (Thompson) is pathetic," Stevenson said.

Thompson, seeking an unprecedented fourth term, is unopposed in the March 18 Republican primary. Stevenson, a Democrat who also challenged the governor in 1962, faces token opposition.

Stevenson made his latest remarks when he was asked for a response to Thompson's statement Wednesday that the Democrat was running a "Chicken Little campaign" for governor.

"He reminds me of a big, blubbering, harpooned whale. He'll be thrashing around from now until Election Day," Stevenson said.

"He's read his polls and realizes he can't win, so he has two choices. He can go down with honor or go down with the public's contempt," he said.

"I was introduced the other day as a lean, mean fighting machine," Stevenson added. Terry Stephan, Stevenson's deputy press secretary, said the candidate has lost 25 pounds since 1962 and works out regularly on a rowing machine.

"I really don't think anything is worth a comment there," said Susan Mogerman, assistant press secretary to Thompson. "It serves absolutely no purpose."

Stevenson's comments, made during a taping for WMAQ-AM's "Chicago News Conference" program, are to be broadcast Sunday.

In 1962, Thompson defeated Stevenson, a former U.S. senator and son of a two-time presidential candidate, by 5,074 votes out of 3.6 million cast — the narrowest margin in state history.

During that campaign, Stevenson complained Thompson portrayed him as a "wimp."

This year the insults seem to be escalating.

Asked last August if he would be a candidate, Stevenson said "the sap is rising," signaling his readiness to challenge Thompson again.

Infuriated by Stevenson's criticism on another matter, Thompson said: "The sap's not rising. It's leaking. He's got holes in his head."

On Wednesday, Thompson said: "Anyone can run a Chicken Little campaign and pretend every day that the sky is falling and that the Earth is flat and that everything is wrong — and that everything will be all right if we just change it from an 'R' to a 'D' after the governor's name."

An aide to Stevenson responded, "Stevenson is not saying the sky's falling, but maybe Jim Thompson can manage that, too."

During Friday's taping, Stevenson also criticized Thompson's reports on the Illinois economy.

"The state of the state is not good," the Democrat said. "The economic foundation is strong, but the government is weak."

And Stevenson said that despite Thompson's numerous visits to Japan and China, the state does not have an aggressive trade policy with the Far East.

"Do you know where Thompson established the state's trade offices in China?" said Stevenson. "They are in Shenyang, which is practically in Inner Mongolia."

Principals want warning about films depicting drug use

NEW YORK (AP) — A national organization of high school principals said Friday it plans to press Congress to require moviemakers to publish warning labels on any film depicting drug use in a favorable light.

Officials of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, at an annual meeting in Orlando, Fla., said they are working with several senators to draft legislation that would require warning labels on movie advertisements. The group also favors adding the letter "D" to current movie ratings for any film that depicts drug use in a "non-harmful light."

Censorship is "not our intent," Richard Kruse, the group's assistant director for federal relations said in a telephone interview.

"But we think parents need to have a better idea of the content of movies. We think the depiction of marijuana in movies is really quite widespread," he said.

Asked which movies might require such warnings, Kruse named "Fast Times At Ridgemont High," "Cheech and Chong," "Animal House" and "Nine to Five." He said the principals' group had had contacts with the motion picture industry to press the idea, but he said "they are not particularly receptive. They view this as an attempt to censor, or impinge on free speech."

"I would hazard a guess that 95 percent of principals...would back the idea..." Kruse said.

John Block serves last day as secretary of agriculture

WASHINGTON (AP) — John R. Block wrapped up work as secretary of agriculture Friday and prepared to go to work next week for the National-American Wholesale Grocers' Association.

Block

Block said he will begin work on Monday, Washington's Birthday, which is a federal holiday. "The first mistake I made was starting Monday," he told a news conference.

Officially, Block will take over as president of the trade association at its annual meeting next month. He will succeed Gerald E. Peck, who is retiring.

With his wife Sue at his side, Block said he was pleased to remain in the Washington area and continue many of the personal associations that he has made since he joined the Reagan cabinet five years ago.

Asked if he would register as a lobbyist, Block said, "Whatever I'm required to do, I'll do it." He added he would not be able to lobby the Agriculture Department.

Block said the 80-year-old association, which has its headquarters in suburban Falls Church, Va., will be interested in legislation as it develops in Congress, including tax overhaul and transportation bills.

Block said he was not returning to the family farm in Illinois because he son is doing a good job without him. But Block said his new career will allow him to take a larger hand in farm management decisions, and he plans to visit the farm more often.

He said he believes "we're scraping the bottom of the trough right now" in the depressed farm economy and that an upturn is close at hand. He predicted that U.S. farm exports, which have been depressed since 1981, will make a turnaround by the end of this year.

Farmhand prices, which have skidded sharply in recent years, also will stabilize in most parts of the country in 1986, he said.

Block's successor will be Richard E. Lyng, 67, who served as deputy secretary of agriculture during the first term of the Reagan administration. Lyng still faces Senate confirmation.

"We're two peas in a pod. He said that, and I concur," Block said. "I feel very comfortable with Mr. Lyng there, because we think alike."

In a farewell speech to USDA employees earlier Friday, Block argued that any attempts in Congress to solve farm financial problems by raising government price supports and taking huge amounts of crop-land from production could be disastrous.

"While it may provide the quick fix of higher prices — and reduce government outlays — supply management ultimately will destroy our basic American values of freedom and efficiency," he said.

Block added that if farmers do not use the more flexible approach of the 1985 farm bill "to break the shackles of government intervention in farming, American agriculture will sign its own death warrant."

The Food and Security Act passed by Congress in December includes authority to lower many commodity price supports, thus putting more emphasis on the market-oriented policies favored by the administration.

Block listed a number of challenges during his five years in Reagan's Cabinet, including the lifting of the partial embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union, imposed by then-President Carter in January 1980, and continued by Reagan until April 1981.

The National-American Wholesale Grocers' Association is made up of wholesale distribution companies that primarily supply and service independent grocers in the United States and Canada. It has some 400 members, who have a combined annual sales volume of about $50 billion.

Respiratory diseases leading cause of infants' deaths, association says

NEW YORK (AP) — Respiratory diseases have become the leading cause of death for infants in their first year of life, the American Lung Association said Friday.

In its 1984-1985 annual report, the association said the disorders account for 38.9 percent of infant deaths. The figure is from 1982, the latest year for which statistics are available, said association spokeswoman Michelle Kling.

Part of the reason for the increase in percentage is that deaths from other causes have declined, Kling said.

One disease, respiratory distress syndrome, is the leading cause of death in the first 28 days after birth, claiming about 5,000 infants last year, the association said.

Also known as hyaline membrane disease, the syndrome strikes premature babies. It results from deficiency of a bodily chemical that normally coats tiny sacs within the lung where blood picks up oxygen. The sacs are supposed to expand and contract with the lung, retaining a little air between expansions. But without the chemical, called surfactant, the sacs collapse when the baby exhales, and the infant must struggle to open them up again.

Respiratory distress syndrome entered the news last year when it struck the Frustaci septuplets in Riverside, Calif. Three of them survive. The disease also killed John F. Kennedy's son, Patrick, in 1963.

Doctors can save most victims with mechanical ventilators, and they are experimenting with ways to supply surfactant.

Other respiratory diseases contributing to the infant deaths include influenza, pneumonia, sudden infant death syndrome, whooping cough, cystic fibrosis, a lower respiratory tract infection called bronchiolitis and a chronic condition called bronchopulmonary dysplasia, Kling said.

Sudden infant death syndrome, also called crib death, claims 7,000 to 10,000 American infants a year and accounts for one-third of infant deaths from lung-related diseases, the association said. Its cause is not completely understood.

The association also said that in the general population, death rates for chronic obstructive pulmonary diseases, chiefly emphysema and chronic bronchitis, rose 25 percent from 1970 to 1982, while the rate for lung cancer jumped 33 percent.

Smoking was the major reason for the increases, Kling said. The association blames cigarettes for 80 percent of deaths from the obstructive pulmonary diseases and 85 percent of deaths from lung cancer.

The 1982 mortality rate for emphysema was 3.6 deaths per 100,000 population, and for chronic bronchitis, 0.9 deaths per 100,000 population, Kling said. In chronic bronchitis, glands excrete too much mucus into the airways because of repeated exposure to inhaled irritants such as cigarette smoke.

The lung cancer death rate was 37.9 deaths per 100,000 population, Kling said. The disease killed about 126,000 people last year, the association said.

NATION IN BRIEF

Authorities investigating shooting of suspects by narcotics agents

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Lawmen on Friday were looking into the shooting of a drug suspect by agents of the Caddo-Bossier Narcotics Task Force, but police spokesmen said they believe the officers were justified.

Donald E. Free, 43 of Shreveport, was seriously hurt with as many as four 9mm gunshot wounds in an exchange with two officers during a raid on Tuesday, said Maj. Robert Merolla, head of the narcotics and vice division of Shreveport police.

Without warning, police broke into the home and Free allegedly opened fire with a 20-gauge shotgun, just missing the two agents, said Merolla.

He said that when agents Mark Macaulay and Joe Morris arrived at Free's house, they saw two men coming out. When they saw the agents, who were wearing jackets with police insignias, they went back inside, Merolla said, and the officers had to consider that the men would alert others in the house and might destroy evidence.

Free was booked on two counts of attempted second-degree murder and other charges are still pending, police said.

About two pounds of marijuana were seized in the raid, in addition to a bomb made of two sticks of dynamite and two blasting caps, according to the official report.

Cadet sentenced to hard labor

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — An Air Force Academy cadet has been sentenced to three years at hard labor after being found guilty of withdrawing money from a fellow cadet's account and lying about his age.

Cadet 2nd Class Patrick K. Williams, 20, of Kansas City, Mo., was found guilty by U.S. 4th Judicial Circuit

Judge (Lt. Col.) Jack Morgan on 12 violations of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Williams, who waived a jury trial, will serve his sentence at the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. He was sentenced Thursday to forfeit all Air Force pay and allowances and was dismissed from the service. Williams originally faced up to 46 years on the 12 charges.

One of the witnesses to testify at the trial was former cadet David Shannon, 23, of Colorado Springs, who had accused Williams of charging $1,000 on Shannon's bank credit card. Another cadet, 2nd Class Manuel Payne, 22, testified that Williams wrongfully used $400 of his money and took several months to repay it.

The two counts of falsifying an official statement stemmed from two separate incidents in which Williams lied about his date of birth on an application for a military identification card. Williams said he was born Sept. 8, 1964, when he was actually born Sept. 8, 1965. Williams said he lied about his age so he could enter establishments that sell liquor and allow entry to those 21 or older.

Man found guilty in mother's death

MARTINEZ, Calif. (AP) — A man who killed his mother by shooting her with an arrow has been found guilty of involuntary manslaughter.

Terry Page, 30, had been charged with murder but Superior Court Judge Gary Strankman decided Thursday that Page lacked the malice necessary for a murder conviction.

Page, who has had a history of mental problems since age 15, picked up a bow and arrow and fired the arrow at his mother, Bernice E. Page, 63, at her home in Concord in October 1984, according to police.

He then called officers who found him standing in the driveway waiting for them.

Three die in ambulance accident

TUNICA, Miss. (AP) — An ambulance carrying a heart patient collided head-on with a tractor-trailer rig Friday, killing all three people in the emergency vehicle, authorities said.

The driver of the 18-wheel truck was injured in the 11 a.m. accident on U.S. highway 61 about 1 1/2 miles south of Tunica and taken by ambulance to a Memphis, Tenn., hospital, state troopers said.

Killed in the accident were ambulance driver John K. Oswalt, 23; emergency medical technician Clarence D. Medders, 22; and heart patient Elmer Franklin, 66, all of Cleveland, Miss., said a spokesman for the Mississippi Highway Patrol's Batesville office.

Storytelling gives former pilot new life

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Dennis R. Freeman, 38, tells tales for a living. Although storytelling in Arizona still is in its infancy, he says that nationally, in the last 10 years, the ancient art of storytelling has experienced a renaissance.

Freeman was here recently with stories of peace and reconciliation, stories "about the various ways, ingenious ways, that people and groups are able to resolve seemingly irresolvable conflicts...stories to make people feel good about themselves as human beings."

Freeman did not start work as a storyteller until two years ago. He flew helicopters during the Vietnam War, and then he worked for 10 years as a private pilot. A helicopter crash ended his flying career in 1981 and left him with a broken back and two broken arms shattered.

But, he says, he knew his life wasn't over.

During his 2½-month hospitalization, Freeman remembered an intriguing article about the National Association for the Preservation and Perpetuation of Storytelling, an organization based in Jonesboro, Tenn., with about 2,500 members nationwide, he says.

He sold a typewriter and a chain saw to raise money for a flight to the organization's annual conference, where five professional storytellers performed.

"It was love at first hearing," he says. "I became very immersed in it (since) then..."

Some of Freeman's stories are about his experiences; others are pure fantasy. Freeman also tells folk tales from different countries.

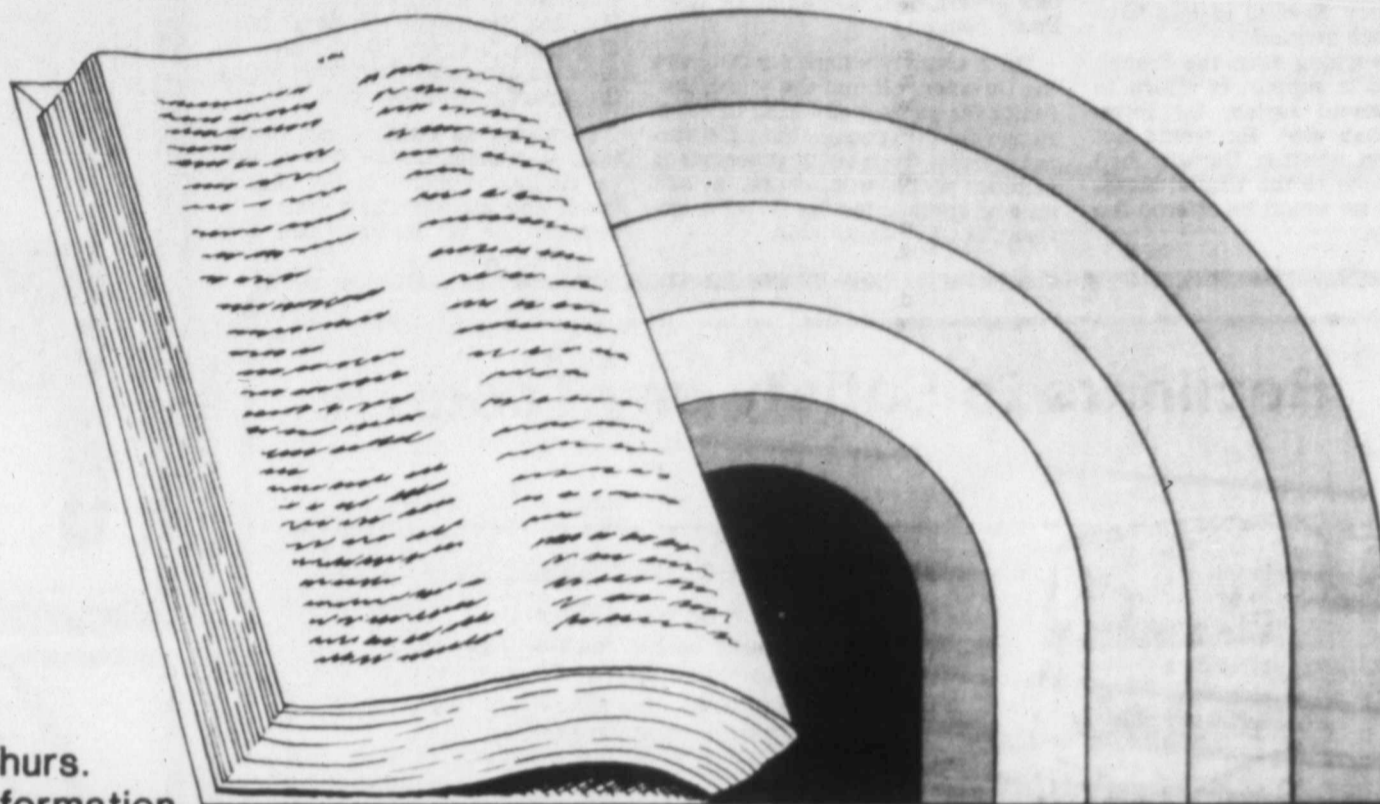

Some of his stories are for children. The stories can last anywhere from one minute to 25. And they are about a variety of subjects, he says, "as many themes as there are human experiences."

Storytelling is important, Freeman says. "It's a means (for) the human race (to) pass on its acquired wisdom. It's important for us to learn our grandfather's grandfather's grandfather's lessons about life.

"It's important because it can touch places in people's emotions that they have forgotten about," he says. "It can wake up memories of childhood. It can wake up memories of friends they once had."

Government lifts recommendation against travel to Haiti

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department on Friday lifted its recommendation against travel to Haiti and resumed emergency food aid shipments halted during the fighting that led to the fall of Haitian President Jean-Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier.

Department spokesman Charles E. Redman also said the United States was helping find a permanent home for Duvalier, who is living in France. The French government has welcomed Duvalier only for a limited time and has been trying to arrange permanent residence for him in another country. Several nations have rejected such requests.

"We're working with the French government in support of efforts to find permanent asylum for Duvalier," Redman said. He would not comment on whether Duvalier had asked to come to the United States or whether he would be offered the opportunity.

After rioting against Duvalier's government broke out in late January, the United States advised Americans to stay out of the country and cut off shipments of emergency food aid because it saw evidence that distribution channels had collapsed.

Though it lifted the anti-travel advisory Friday, the department said Americans still should exercise caution while in Haiti and respect curfews set by the new government.

There have been some demonstrations in the country by groups opposing inclusion of Duvalier aides in the new government headed by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

"In a country where for 30 years the Duvaliers offered the sole opportunity for gaining any kind of experience in government it's not surprising that the interim government includes people who worked at one time or another for the Duvalier government," Redman said.

"The real test concerns the right of the Haitian people to choose their own government and the interim government has made commitment to respect the right," he said.

Redman said the food aid — part of a $25.7 million package for fiscal year 1986 that includes lunches for school children — were being shipped from U.S. ports in the Gulf of Mexico.

He said no decision had been made on whether economic assistance should be resumed. In the U.S. foreign aid budget for the current year, Haiti was to have received $26 million, but the money has never been dispensed because Haiti failed to meet human rights standards set by the Reagan administration.

Duvalier had satisfied two conditions — controlling the flow of illegal Haitian migrants to the United States and establishing a system to dispense the aid, Redman said. But he failed two other standards, establishing democracy and respecting human rights.

"We would expect the current government will continue to meet the first two standards," Redman said. "As of this moment it's too early to make a judgment on the other conditions."

Home where Lincoln died yields treasured trash

WASHINGTON (AP) — As tourists and schoolchildren troop through the house where Abraham Lincoln died, archaeologists are excitedly digging up the basement for long-buried trash that may yield valuable clues about how ordinary city dwellers lived in Lincoln's day.

The rare urban excavation is taking place at the Petersen House, a national historical site that stands in the shadows of steel-and-glass office buildings in downtown Washington.

The archaeologists are working directly beneath the first-floor bedroom where then-President Lincoln died on April 15, 1865, the morning after he was fatally shot by actor John Wilkes Booth while attending a play across the street at Ford's Theater.

The search, which began in late

January, has uncovered more than 5,000 well-preserved articles of trash buried in layers for as long as 135 years under the rotting floorboards of the basement.

"Except for the tragic events that plunged this home into the pages of history, these artifacts might have been lost forever, destroyed along with the rest of the neighborhood to make room for new construction," said Dr. Stephen R. Potter, chief National Park Service archaeologist for the national capital region.

"As it is, we've found... neat little time capsules buried in the basement which could tell us a lot about the lives of ordinary Americans of the mid-19th century," Potter said.

The refuse includes fragments of ceramic dishes, jugs and vases, tiny wine goblets, perfume bottles and medicine jars, machine-cut nails, shoes, painted horsehair-covered plaster, mica sheets possibly used for window panes, children's ceramic marbles and broken pencil stubs, a bone domino, tobacco pipe bowls and stems, straight pins, needles and buttons, and a lady's haircomb.

There also are the remains of meals served in the Petersen boarding house — bones of cows, pigs, chickens and turkeys, some still bearing the marks of a butcher's knife.

Three or four damaged glass microscope slides have been traced through other documents to Julius and Henry Ulke, two amateur entomologists who worked at the Smithsonian Institution and were boarders at the Petersen House when Lincoln died there.

The refuse was tossed casually into the backyard by the family of William Petersen, an immigrant German tailor and father of seven children, who built the house in 1850 and took in boarders to supplement his modest income.

A few years later, Petersen built a rear addition to the house, probably a kitchen wing with rooms above. After it was gutted by fire, trash and ashes from coal-burning heat stoves were used for the new foundation of a rebuilt addition completed shortly before Lincoln's death.

The Petersens' refuse was preserved by successive wood flooring supported by five layers of trash, burnt debris and a sealant of asphalt poured in the late 1950s as a buffer against high ground water, Potter said.

Study: 30 percent of immigrants fail naturalization

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Almost 30 percent of all immigrants who apply for citizenship fail on their first try, according to a report released this week by National Association of Latino Elected Officials.

The report, entitled "The Long Grey Welcome," painted an unflattering picture of the U.S. naturalization program. It said court backlogs, overly complicated procedures, inefficiency and "needlessly cold" naturalization forms contribute to the high rate of failure.

The 106-page study contained a series of recommendations, including lessening the courts' role in naturalization proceedings, reducing the number of disqualifying conditions and reducing the cost of becoming a citizen.

The study, which covered several years, drew upon naturalization law, naturalization case studies and interviews with officials at the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Harry Pachon, executive director of the Latino group, called the high failure rate "a definite problem" because it adds to the "negative perception" Latinos already have of the INS.

The naturalization process, Pachon said in an interview, is "a leap of faith." He said that the INS places too much emphasis on immigration and not enough on naturalization, which, he said, "falls through the cracks."

INS spokesman Duke Austin replied, "We certainly encourage naturalization." He asserted that there is a "lack of motivation to naturalize" among Latinos and that those who come forward have a small failure rate — only about 2 percent of all immigrants.

But the study, disputing the INS method of computing failures, said that people who do not make it all the way through the process should be counted. The INS rate "ignores the pool of applicants who are neither granted nor denied citizenship but are told to try again," the study said.

The study found that in the first half of fiscal 1985, "only the 2.8 percent who pressed their cases to a court decision were formally denied citizenship." But another 25 percent, it says, failed early in the process — 13 percent because they were persuaded to drop their applications after the INS deemed them unqualified and another 12 percent because their applications were incomplete.

The INS "should commission studies of the naturalization caseload to determine what happens to that quarter of the naturalization caseload that is turned away from INS offices each year," the study said.

It also urged U.S. officials to use Canada, whose approach to naturalization it called "more positive and less neutral" than this country's, as a model for change. The report said that Canada's residency requirement is three, not five years, and that its fees for citizenship are about $30 U.S. dollars, compared with $50 for U.S. citizenship.

Libyan aircraft continues scrutiny of U.S. Navy ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. 6th Fleet continued to attract intense scrutiny by Libyan aircraft Friday, but Pentagon officials said the carriers Coral Sea and Saratoga had completed a third day of maneuvers without incident.

The officials, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified, disclosed that 131 Libyan planes had been dispatched toward the fleet since the latest American exercise began Tuesday night.

That total appeared to indicate yet another increase in Libyan air activity on Friday. Previously, the sources had said roughly 70 Libyan jets were dispatched Wednesday and Thursday, or about 35 a day.

The sources also said the current exercise by the carriers would not end until Saturday evening.

Earlier this week, when the maneuvers were first announced, Pentagon officials had said the exercise would extend to 7 p.m. EST Friday. In fact, the officials said Friday, the actual orders to the carriers had always specified a stop at midnight local time — or 7 p.m. today — and had simply been misinterpreted by reporters.

The sources said those orders remained in effect and that the carriers would cease their flight operations today. At that point, they will probably loiter for a time farther northward of Libya in the central Mediterranean, the sources said.

The carriers followed the same procedure last month, when they first conducted a week of flight operations off Libya's coast following the Dec. 27 terrorist attacks on the Rome and Vienna airports. After completing those maneuvers, the carriers moved northward for a couple of days and then steamed to Italy for port calls.

There was no indication Friday that any additional port calls had been scheduled for the ships.

As was the case Wednesday and Thursday, the officials said the Libyan planes flying toward the carriers and their supporting warships made no threatening gestures. While there were some instances of U.S. planes moving close enough to observe the Libyans visually, most of the Libyan aircraft turned back toward home before the American fighters arrived nearby, the sources added.

The American exercises, which Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy has previously branded an "aggressive provocation," are being conducted within the so-called Tripoli Flight Information Region. That is a large area off Libya's coast — more than 700 miles long — within which civilian airliners transiting the Mediterranean are guided by flight controllers in Libya's capital.

The sources stressed that the American planes and ships had not moved into the Gulf of Sidra, a U-shaped body of water at the bottom of the flight-control region that dips into the central Libyan coast. Khadafy has claimed the gulf as territorial waters, a contention dismissed by the United States.

One source said there were no plans for operations in the gulf during this exercise.

The sources also said Friday the Soviet Union was maintaining 26 ships in the Mediterranean — seven of them warships — and still providing reconnaissance information to the Libyans on the U.S. fleet's location.

The United States currently has 33 ships in the Mediterranean — 21 of them combat ships. Of the 21 combat ships, roughly 15 are now off Libya's coast, including the two carriers, the sources said.

The sources added there was still no evidence of any attempt by Libyan fighters to intercept civilian Israeli jets flying across the Mediterranean. Khadafy ordered his air force to attempt such interceptions Feb. 7 in retaliation for an Israeli decision to force a private jet flying from Libya to an Israeli base Feb. 4 in an abortive search for terrorists.

Practicing policemen

A police marksman from a special squad fires baton rounds during a dummy "street disturbance" in West London recently. He is backed up by fellow officers with riot shields while two other policemen display a banner calling on "rioters" to disperse. The officers were at a training center where a high street complex has been built to add realism to the exercises.

Soviet defects in rubber raft

TOKYO (AP) — A man rowed a rubber raft into Japanese waters Friday from a Soviet vessel that could be a spy ship and was picked up by a fishing boat, officials reported. NHK television said he wanted to defect.

A Maritime Safety Agency spokesman said the Soviet ship was operating off northern Japan and the man, identified as Valery Polianin, 33, was taken to the city of Aomori. The spokesman said he had been arrested for illegal entry and was being questioned to determine whether he wanted to defect to a third country.

The Japan Broadcasting Corporation (NHK) reported that Polianin said "yes" when one of its reporters asked whether he wanted to defect. It gave no details.

Polianin came from the Mys Babuschikina, a "trawler-like ship" of about 2,300 tons, the maritime agency spokesman said.

"Soviet trawlers are known as intelligence-gathering ships all over the world," he said, but added that he spoke in "general terms" and not specifically about the Mys Babuschikina.

Polianin apparently left his ship in the early morning, and was picked up by the fishing boat Yuko-maru at about 8:40 a.m. Friday about seven miles off Kodomari Point in the Aomori district.

He was transferred to the maritime agency vessel Yukigumo, which took him to Aomori, about 300 miles north of Tokyo, the spokesman said.

Congressional task force visiting Hanoi

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A nine-member congressional delegation left Friday for Hanoi to urge Vietnamese officials to provide the fullest possible accounting of Americans still missing from the Indochina War.

The congressmen, members of the Task Force on American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, will return to Bangkok today and tour the Thai-Cambodian border Sunday, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

Before leaving Washington, a spokesman for the group's chairman, Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said the congressmen would urge Vietnamese officials to "accelerate their pledge to resolve the MIA issue within the next two years."

Rep. Christopher H. Smith, R-N.C., said there was "absolutely compelling" evidence that some U.S. servicemen were still held in captivity in Indochina.

He said he and fellow task force members have been increasingly swayed by reports that Americans were alive. The Defense Department lists some 2,400 MIAs in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos and most government officials believe it is unlikely that any have survived.

Before their departure Friday, the delegation met with Thai Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Siddhi Savetsila.

The Solomon delegation is the latest of a number of U.S. government and private groups to travel to Vietnam, which says it wants to normalize ties with Washington. The United States has said that such relations will not be forthcoming until Hanoi pulls its forces out of Cambodia.

Japanese student new 'hot dog'

NEW YORK (AP) — The reigning hot dog-eating champ was dethroned by a visiting Japanese student who wolfed down 10 1/2 franks and buns in 10 minutes, and then declared he was going out for some sushi.

While about a dozen fellow university students cheered him on, Hiroaki Tominaga, 21, of Tokyo, out-ate hometown favorite Oscar Rodriguez by a single dog at Nathan's Coney Island restaurant, said spokesman Tom Zumbo.

The record set several years ago is 13 1/2 hot dogs.

The Japanese students had heard about the annual hot dog-eating contest, which is usually held July 4, and issued a challenge to Rodriguez after learning they would be visiting New York this winter.

Tominaga said Wednesday he practiced for several months. But the franks he downed were just an appetizer for the 6-foot-6, 264-pound student, who told officials "he hoped to go out later and eat some sushi," Zumbo said.

Bulldogs force do-or-die game

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

Batten down the hatches, bolt the doors, but whatever you do, don't leave the women and children in the house — Midland High and Midland Lee will meet in a playoff-elimination bout Tuesday night at the Chaparral Center and no one would want to miss this.

If that battle is anything like Friday's 49-47 hand-wringing win for the Bulldogs, no one should be left out of the fun. It's a winner-take-all, free-for-all for the second and final playoff spot in District 4-5A. You make it, you take it, winner's outs and loser go home. The whole ball of wax and all that jazz.

It should be a pretty good basketball game, too.

"A game like that, anybody can win it," MHS coach Jack Stephenson said. "We were lucky, but I told our kids that I wasn't going to let them lose this one — and they didn't."

NO, THE Bulldogs didn't lose this one, thanks to a drive to the basket by Elvin Mackey around a double-post defense of Mike Courtney and Anthony Dickens with 10 seconds left on the clock.

Mackey's basket pulled the plug on a Rebel rally that had erased a seemingly-safe seven point margin at 3:54, to a 47-47 tie with 2:06 left to play. But neither side could score again until Mackey added the finishing touch. A last-second attempt by Lee bounced off the rim.

"They were playing good defense, I kind of got away with a foul, but I know that late in the game, they're not likely to call you on that," Mackey said of his final jaunt to the basket. "They came down in a man-to-man, I just wanted to take the ball straight to the basket. Take it straight to the big men."

MACKEY'S TWO-pointer gave the 6-5 post just 11 points on the night, well below his district average of 20.6.

But the bally-hooed showdown between the district's two best big men ended in a virtual draw as Dickens also put in 11 points. Mackey pulled down 13 boards while Dickens grabbed 14. Neither was

None of the big guns on these two teams fighting for a playoff berth sounded a mighty bang, however, as defense was the name of this game. Midland High's Matt Sears was the high-scorer with 17 points, while Anthony Deande could only toss in 10. For Lee, Greg Johnson scored a district-high 14 points, well above his average, to lead the Rebs. Lee Dixon, the Rebels' leading scorer with a 20.5 average in district play, was held to nine points.

"It's like that in these cross-town rivalries," Mackey said. "Everybody is playing that good defense and helping out with an extra man on the good scorers. I felt comfortable all night, I just wasn't able to get on a real hot streak ever."

THE BULLDOGS, known for their unrelenting pressure defense from the opening tip, switched up and pulled a box-and-one on the Rebels. The defense was designed to stop Dixon, the hot-shooting Rebel wing. It did, as Dixon managed to hit just three of 15 from the floor.

"That's the first time in 10 years that I've been a head coach that I've opened the ball game with anything but a press," Stephenson said. "We had to change. After looking at all the videotape of the last game, Lee did a good job of going through our press in the transition game. After seeing all those layups, I wasn't going to watch them do it again."

Rebel coach Paul Stueckler said his team was ready for the new Bulldog defense.

"Midland High didn't do anything we hadn't worked on. We worked on that defense yesterday, we just didn't execute very well against it," Stueckler said. "Midland High did a real good job to win the game. We've just got to learn to keep our poise a little better."

THE REBELS led only once, on the game's opening basket by Eddie Riley. The Bulldogs took the lead in the first period, thanks mainly to some free throw shooting by Sears and Deande, 14-12.

The Dogs ran their lead to 19-12 when the Rebels missed their first seven shots of the second quarter. MHS, going occasionally inside to Mackey but more often relying on some sharp-shooting by Sears, kept Lee running on a six-to-eight point treadmill until the final four minutes.

With MHS leading, 47-40, and 3:54 to play, the Rebs showed why they had put together an eight-game district winning streak earlier this season. A three-point play by Dixon, single free throws by Henry Brewer and Dickens, and finally a 20-foot jumper by Johnson brought the Bulldogs back to earth.

Both sides missed some chances in the final minutes, however, before Mackey settled the issue with his lay up.

SETTLED, THAT is, until Tuesday night, when these two will knock heads one more time.

"It's just a shame that one of these two teams won't be going to the playoffs after Tuesday," Stephenson said. "I hate to see that Permian win this district because there's no way that they're a better team than either of the two clubs on the floor tonight."

Lee will bring into Tuesday's battle a 23-8 season record while MHS is 21-9. But both are 11-3 in 4-5A play and that's why they're playing it again Tuesday.

Tuesday's winner will play Amarillo High later next week in bi-district. The Lee junior varsity won the battle preceding the varsity thriller, 59-50, completing an unblemished 14-0 district season. The Rebs' overall record was 27-3. The Bullpups finished 10-4, 20-8.

Varrick McDonald led the Rebels with 14 points, while teammate Michael Ball tossed in 10. David Weiss led MHS with 14.

Mojo gains last second 4-5A crown

From Staff Reports

Odessa Permian put the clamps on the District 4-5A basketball title Friday night with a heart thumping 58-57 win over Odessa High in a game that wasn't decided until the last two seconds of play.

Danny Servance inbounded a full court pass to Jimmie Davis, who scored on a layup with two seconds left to hand Permian the victory and the title. Had Permian lost that game, 4-5A the district would have been saddled with a three-team district playoff for two berths.

Instead, Permian won the title by virtue of Midland High's 49-47 win over Midland Lee, who was tied with Permian for the league lead.

Permian now enters bi-district play against Plainview, who lost to Amarillo Tascosa Friday, but kept the second place playoff berth of District 3-5A by virtue of Amarillo High's victory over Lubbock Monterey.

Amarillo High, the 3-5A champion, will face the winner of the Tuesday second place district playoff game between MHS and Lee.

Permian win the 4-5A title with an 12-2 loop mark and it marks the second year in a row the Panthers have gained playoff advancement. Last year, Permian lost in bi-district play to Lubbock Monterey. Monterey went on to the Region I finals in Midland before falling out of the state run.

Davis led Permian with 21 points while Curly Alford and Greg Anderson had 10 each. Odessa High's Paul Chavez with 19 points and Tracy Blaylock with 16 tried to lead the upset.

In other 4-5A action Friday, San Angelo drubbed Big Spring, 101-67, but Big Spring sophomore Brian Mayfield put the finishing touches on his league scoring title with 30 points. Chris Lowry scored 38 for San Angelo while Skip Bartek had 25. It was the biggest night of the 4-5A campaign for the high scoring Lowry.

Ablene High won a 54-46 decision over Abilene Cooper in the other 4-5A finale as Roy Kiser and Jeff Jones split 28 points.

Cooper's Terrance Bell went out on a big note with 21 points in the losing effort. Cooper lost the game at the free throw line, connecting on only eight of 24 charity efforts.

In El Paso's two districts, Andrews won the 1-5A title with a 13-1 record while El Paso High was second at 11-3. Eastwood, on a 19-game winning streak, is the 2-5A champ at 12-0 and 9-3 Bel Air is second.

Andrews meets Bel Air and Eastwood tangles with El Paso in a 6 and 8 p.m. bi-district doubleheader on the UTEP campus Friday.

Bubka disappointed with Millrose Games

NEW YORK (AP) — Sergei Bubka, world record holder in the pole vault from the Soviet Union, came to the United States this week predicting that he would break the 20-foot barrier. Friday night, he sat out along the sidelines, out of the competition and disappointed by what he considered cheating at the Wanamaker

Millrose Games. "My impressions of these competitions leave much to be desired," Bubka said. "I never expected the situation to be like this — very unpleasant." Bubka had been expected to engage in a head-to-head duel with Americans Billy Olson and Joe Dial here Friday night. But after a controversy that almost saw Bubka pull out of the competition, only Olson was left. Both Olson and Dial were given additional jumps after referees ruled they had been interfered with. Bubka, who had already missed three times and was out of the competition, protested. "The American sportsmen got additional attempts, which is against international rules," Bubka said through an interpreter. "I didn't find the reason that the officials gave for the additional jumps very convincing. The reasons given by the referees sounded more like subterfuge than reasons." Dial missed on his additional jump and was eliminated. Olson cleared 19 feet and continued. Bubka, after protesting, was given two additional jumps at 18-9 1/4, but missed them both. "The spirit of the competition was not sporting at all," said Bubka.

TERRY WILLIAMSON Rebs, 'Dogs will do it again

Well, just what did you expect? Something easy, tied in a bow with pink wrapping? Maybe a verse from Elizabeth Barrett Browning with an "I love you" written among the words of flowers and trees? It may have been Valentine's Day. They said it was Feb. 14, but it was also the Midland High-Midland Lee finale — or it was supposed to be the finale. But we'll do it again Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center just so there are no hurt feelings when we send one of these two teams to the state basketball playoffs. Midland High won the game 49-47 to force what will be a District 4-5A playoff for second place. To Tuesday's winner goes a chance at further glory. To the loser goes the season and a well deserved rest. Lee's Rebels could have made things easy for themselves by winning Friday night, but that's not the way you build excitement. Let's slug and bruise each other one more time. Let's carry on this Valentine party into next week. It may be heresy to say, but it really doesn't make any difference who wins Tuesday. These two teams have given us a basketball love affair. Admittedly, this isn't a kissing arrangement, but love has many faces. Of course, if you are an MHS fan or a Lee fan, you will take exception to that. And there were 3,100 that fit one of those categories at the Chap Friday night. What we saw Friday may entice some 5,000 to show up and see what's going on when we do it again Tuesday. After the game, there were a lot of words thrown around about how Midland High won the game. But all this box-and-ones, non-press, three-for-15 shooting is past history. They'll play again Tuesday and chances are it will be close again with different words being used. Just pucker up and love it while we have it. After all, we're seeing history here. Never before has Midland High and Midland Lee met four times in a single season. And the last meeting will send one to the playoffs. It couldn't be more meaningful. And in the midst of all this is Midland High coach Jack Stephenson and Lee coach Paul Stueckler. Stephenson coached with Stueckler back in the '70s before leaving for his first head job at Snyder. He came back wearing purple, but the two remain close friends. The two coaches scout together and are still talking to each other and then they go out and give us playoff battles. Remember, love has many faces. "It's a shame Paul and I have to do this to each other," said Stephenson. "We know each other's team so well that Paul could coach my team and I could coach his. And it comes down to this. That's basketball, I guess." It will be no surprise to anyone when a winner is announced Tuesday. It could be either one. It could have been both. While Lee and Midland High were giving up a love affair, Odessa Permian was writing fiction stranger than truth. Only on Valentine's Day could this happen. The scene was this in Odessa. Last place Odessa High was leading by a 57-56 margin with just seconds to play. Permian's Danny Servance inbounded a pass the length of the floor to Jimmie Davis, who in turn twirls and scores a layup with two seconds left to give the Panthers the District 4-5A title. Had Permian lost that game, and everyone but St. Valentine thought they were beat, there would have been a three-way playoff for two playoff berths Monday and Tuesday. That would have given both Lee and MHS a chance to make the playoffs. Instead, we have a battle for second and one playoff berth left to be decided. That's basketball — District 4-5A style. Meanwhile, Amarillo High, winner of District 3-5A and the team Tuesday's winner will face next week at a date and site to be determined, will have its coaches here Tuesday to watch the show. They should have a lot of company. Terry Williamson is the Assistant Sports Editor of the Reporter-Telegram.

Hogeboom still wants out

Dallas changes make no difference

DALLAS (AP) — Quarterback Gary Hogeboom said he remains more determined than ever to be traded from the Dallas Cowboys, despite the hiring of a new quarterback coach and the club's announced plans to restructure the offense.

"Hiring a new coach has not changed my mind one bit," Hogeboom told the Dallas Times Herald Thursday in a telephone conversation from a relative's home in Michigan.

"I doubt that anything in Dallas would ever change my mind. I absolutely, positively want to get out of there. I've just got to do what I've got to do," Hogeboom said.

The Cowboys last week announced the hiring of Paul Hackett, a former San Francisco assistant coach, who will coordinate the passing game along with coaching quarterbacks and wide receivers.

However, Hogeboom, a backup quarterback last season to starter Danny White, said he will return to Dallas on Monday to press the issue with Cowboys Coach Tom Landry. Landry's offense is too conservative and is tailored for White, not him, Hogeboom said. He said when Landry went with a "feel" and named Hogeboom the starter over White at the beginning of the 1984 season, Landry failed to carry out a promise to change the offense predicated on Hogeboom's abilities.

Then, in the off-season between the 1984 and 1985 seasons, Hogeboom said, Landry promised to develop one passing system for him and another for White. That never happened either, Hogeboom said.

White is considered more of a finesse passer. Hogeboom is considered by some to have the strongest arm in the National Football League and prefers to throw the ball downfield.

"I feel I've done what coach Landry wants me to do. But let's face it. He's got me running Danny's offense. Danny had been the starter for four years before I got my chance. But we never did anything differently," Hogeboom said.

To make room for Hackett, the Cowboys moved the previous quarterbacks coach, Jim Shofner, into a research job, a move that Hogeboom said disturbed him.

"I was very shocked and saddened by the release of Jim Shofner. He is a very respected coach by the players. He did a great job," Hogeboom said.

Shofner had tried to convince Landry to change the offense to make it more suitable for Hogeboom's passing style, Hogeboom said.

"He didn't have any freedom with his job. He had to do what Landry told him to do. How can you fire the passing coach after the kind of year we had last season? I don't understand it."

Cowboys assistant Gene Stallings was named St. Louis Cardinals head coach on Monday and hired Shofner as quarterback coach.

Hogeboom asked Landry three weeks ago to trade him, and Landry said he would try to accommodate him.

Since then, the Cowboys say, only one NFL team — the Indianapolis Colts — have made an official inquiry about Hogeboom.

"I would go any place if I could get a fair shot to start. I wouldn't have any objections to going some place where they don't have an established starter," Hogeboom said.

Mets, Gooden agree on $$$

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden, the National League's 1985 Cy Young award winner, agreed Friday to a $1.32 million contract with the New York Mets for the upcoming season.

The 21-year-old pitcher was scheduled to go to salary arbitration next Tuesday. He had asked for $1.5 million in filing for arbitration, while the Mets offered to pay him $1.1 million. Gooden received $400,000 last season.

"I think it means a great deal to both parties not to go that far (to arbitration)," Gooden said Friday during a conference call from his home in Tampa, Fla. "I never thought it would go that far."

Coincidentally, Gooden agreed to terms the same day the 1985 American League Cy Young winner, Bret Saberhagen, won his arbitration case. Saberhagen, who made $160,000 last season, was awarded a salary of $925,000. The Kansas City Royals had offered $625,000.

Gooden, who had a 24-4 record last season, his second in the major leagues, led the majors in strikeouts with 268, and posted an earned run average of 1.53, also the best in the big leagues, as was his number of victories.

Gooden's contract, which includes no incentive or drug-testing clauses, gives him a more than $1 million raise in base salary. His 1985 contract called for $275,000 in base salary and guaranteed endorsements worth $60,000, along with several incentives, including $50,000 for winning the Cy Young.

Gooden said his agent, Jim Neader, talked with the Mets about a multi-year contract, something that the right-handed pitcher had wanted. But team policy is not to give more than one-year contract to players with little experience in the major leagues, and the Mets stuck by that position.

"We talked specifically about one-, two- and three-year deals, and generally about five- and six-year deals," Neader said in a statement. "Naturally, we're pleased with the results. We felt a negotiated settlement was the most beneficial way."

Gooden said that next year, he would seek a multi-year deal. "I want to stay in New York for a long time," he said.

Al Harazin, the Mets senior vice president, said he felt the team could have won its arbitration case against Gooden, but "it would have been difficult."

"It's hard to say whether I would have won or lost," Gooden said. "But there would've been a conflict. Both parties keep it in their mind."

Harazin said the team had shied away from including incentive clauses because "you end up paying for them twice. You pay for them this season and then next season, too, in base salary."

"When we first started, we tried to get them in," Gooden said of incentives.

Gooden, who said he didn't participate in the negotiations, said the first thing he would do with his big money was "turn some over to my mom and pop."

"It's a nice feeling to have. It's guaranteed," he said about his contract. "There are nice things you can do for your family."

Gooden said that when he told his parents earlier in the day about agreeing to a $1 million-plus salary, they told him "don't let it change you."

"I'm going to just take it in stride," he said.

Neader predicted that Gooden could earn between $2 million and $3 million during 1986, including his pay from the Mets and outside endorsements.

Pro rips PGA commissioner

HONOLULU (AP) — Mac O'Grady, who has refused to be interviewed on the golf course, blasted PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman in a story in Friday's edition of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

The newspaper quoted O'Grady, now in his fourth season on the Tour, as saying:

"Beman intimidates and toilet-trains PGA Tour players in front of the American public with his ticky-tac fines."

"Deane Beman is a thief with a capital T. He tried to fine me $1,000, then dropped it to $500 and tried to cover it up."

"This little man, Mr. Thief, feels he's the one responsible for the tour shaking hands with corporate America; that he's responsible for all the big money the golfers play for today.

That's a big fabrication."

Beman was on vacation and was not available for comment. At his office in Ponte Vedra, Fla., his assistant, Steve Rankin, said:

"Mac has been quoted in the same context at least once before. I think it was last year in Florida. We didn't comment on that then and we won't now."

O'Grady, 34, joined the Tour in 1983 after making 17 attempts to gain his playing rights in the Tour's qualifying school.

Although he has yet to win, he has been in contention in several tournaments but has refused on those occasions to speak with reporters.

O'Grady told the Star-Bulletin he is unsure what he can and can't say at tournaments. "So, at tournament sites, I won't comment to the press. I want to embarrass Beman. ... I won't go to a press room, but I'll talk off the course grounds if I'm approached in the right way. And every time I do talk, I'll blast Deane Beman."

O'Grady was fined $500 by the Tour for conduct unbecoming a professional golfer for comments he allegedly made to a courtesy car driver at a tournament in New Orleans in 1984.

O'Grady refused to pay the fine, and the money was withheld from his winnings at a subsequent tournament.

"The issue isn't the $500, it's the principle of the thing. The President of the United States doesn't have the right to go into my account," the newspaper quoted O'Grady as saying.

Lamar, Louisiana Tech locked in battle for first

MONROE, La. (AP) — Lamar, pursuing its seventh consecutive title, and Louisiana Tech were tied with 28 points Friday after finals in the first four men's events in the seventh annual Southland Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Lamar and Tech also 10 individuals for Saturday's finals in the remaining undecided events.

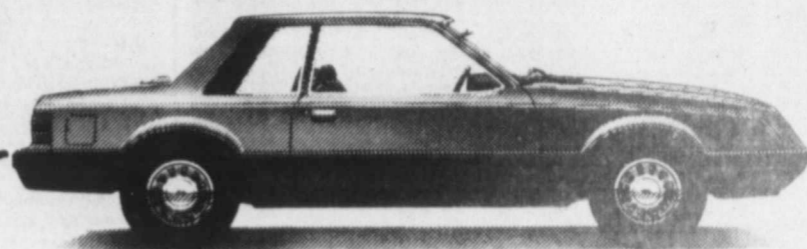

Following Tech and Lamar in the team standings were Northeast Louisiana with 24, McNeese State 18, North Texas State 16, Texas-Arlington 6 and Arkansas State 4.

Two meet records were set Friday when McNeese State's Brian Cooper broke the mark he set last season with a long jump 25-11 and Lamar's two-mile relay unit of Stan Wilson, Victor McGlothlin, Geryl House and Carlos Ward was clocked at 7:45.87.

Pistons' bench hurts Mavericks

Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — The Detroit Pistons got a little careless late in the game, but their early hot hand was enough as they cruised to a 119-110 victory over the Dallas Mavericks Friday night in NBA action.

The Pistons connected on 70 percent of their field goal attempts until the first minute of the fourth quarter, and ended the game shooting 50 percent from the floor.

"I guess it was one of those fortunate nights. We made everything we threw up," Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said. "We played well through three and a half quarters and then got a little careless late in the game."

Detroit led by 29 points with 9:27 left before the Mavericks outscored the Pistons 30-10 to make the final score respectable.

"They hit shots that were incredible," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said. "We couldn't stop (Bill) Laimbeer, and Isiah (Thomas) didn't even have to go into his act."

Thomas, who scored 17 points against Dallas in a five-minute stretch earlier this season, spent most of the game passing to his hot-hitting teammates. He finished with 12 points and 12 assists.

The Pistons put seven players in double figures and were led by two players off the bench.

Backup guard Vinnie Johnson scored 22 points for the Pistons, while center-forward Earl Cureton added 18 points and a game-high nine rebounds.

"We shot 50 percent and had eight turnovers in the first half and we're still down 15," lamented Mark Aguirre, who led Dallas with a game-high 27 points. "I just can't believe it. If a team is going to beat us, they have to do that, shoot 70 percent. I don't mind having to lose this way."

The Pistons opened the game with an 18-6 scoring spurt and coasted to a 65-50 halftime lead.

Detroit led 99-76 at the end of three quarters and a Johnson layup gave the Pistons their largest lead at 109-80.

But the Mavericks outscored the Pistons 21-4 in the final 6½ minutes and outbounded Detroit 17-4 in the fourth quarter to account for the final margin. Rookie Detlef Schrempf scored nine points in the Mavericks' closing rally.

Sam Perkins added 19 for the Mavericks, who lost for only the second time in 10 outings.

Kelly Tripucka and Laimbeer scored 16 points each and Joe Dumars 15 for the Pistons.

Pacers 104, Bulls 88

CHICAGO — Herb Williams scored a career-high 39 points, six of them in the final 3½ minutes, to lead the Indiana Pacers to a win over the Chicago Bulls.

The win ended a seven-game losing streak on the road for the Pacers, now 3-20 away from home. It was the Bulls' fifth straight loss and 13th in their last 15 tries.

Williams, who scored 31 points in the first three quarters, sat out the first 5:41 of the final quarter. He hit two straight baskets to put his team up 96-83 with just 2:58 left.

Chicago's Charles Oakley led the Bulls with 17 points before fouling out with 3:26 remaining. Orlando Woolridge added 14 for the Bulls and Vern Fleming had 15 for Indiana.

Williams had led the Pacers to a 53-49 halftime edge. He scored six baskets in the first 8:43 of the third quarter.

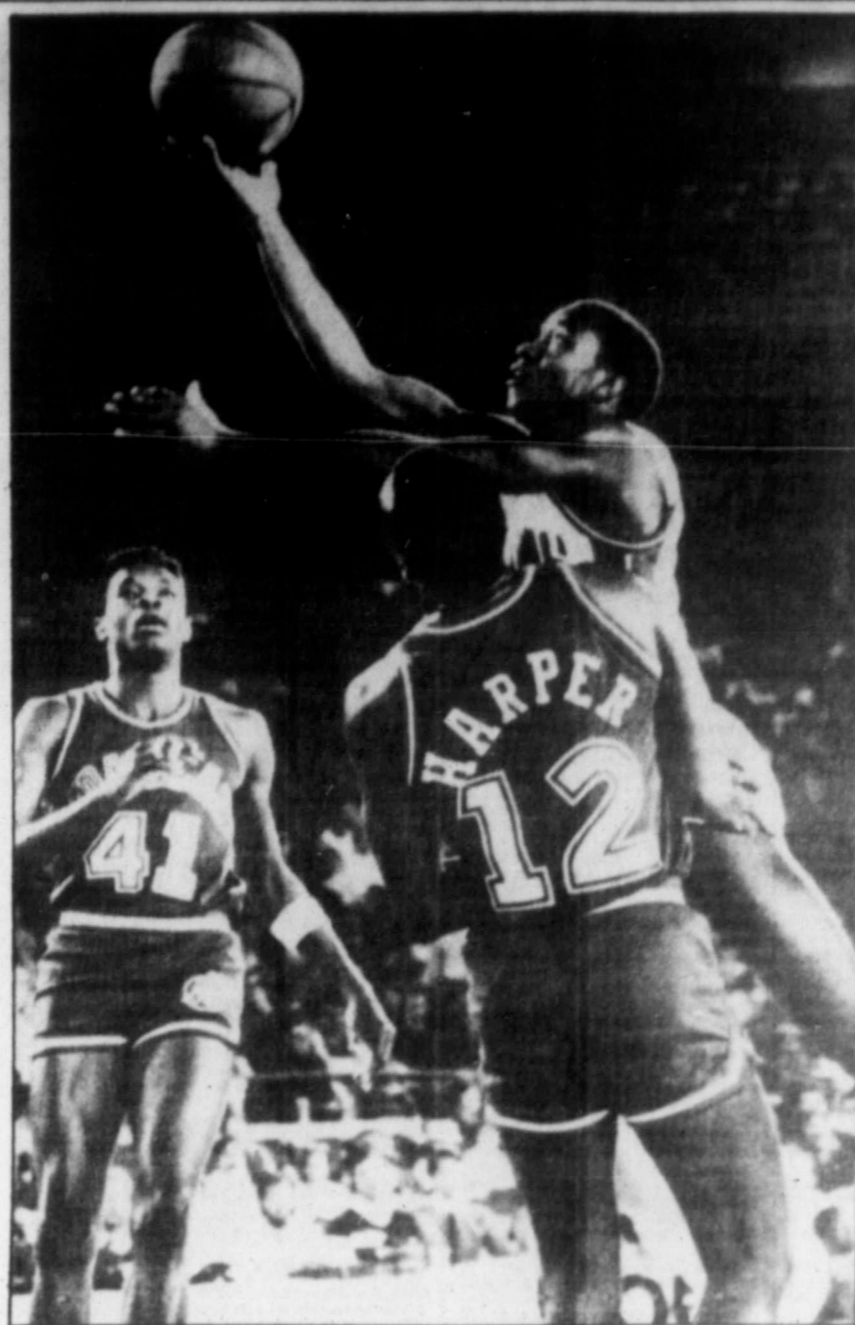

Indiana center Steve Stipanovich, scoreless in the first half, added eight third-quarter points to help Indiana grab an 82-69 advantage with 12 minutes left.

Williams' previous high mark of 38 was set last Dec. 30 against Washington.

Suns 112, Nuggets 95

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Walter Davis scored 21 of his 25 points in the second half, including 12 in the fourth period, as the Phoenix Suns beat the Denver Nuggets.

Davis then sank a layup with 50 seconds remaining and a jumper with 13 seconds left to put Phoenix ahead 78-72 entering the fourth quarter.

The Nuggets closed the deficit to 97-92 on Bill Hanzlik's layup with 3:35 left, but James Edwards and Mike Sanders scored four points each and Davis' three-point play with 1:11 to go made it 110-95 and sealed the Suns' victory.

Edwards finished with 18 points while Charles Pittman had 17 and Larry Nance 16 for Phoenix, which won for the sixth time in its last nine games.

English, the NBA's leading scorer with a 29.1 average, paced Denver with 29 points.

Calvin Natt and Mike Evans added 14 apiece for the Nuggets.

Rangers down troubled Wings

Associated Press

DETROIT — Pierre Larouche, Tomas Sandstrom and Don Maloney each scored two goals Friday night to lead the New York Rangers to their third straight NHL victory, a 7-5 triumph over the Detroit Red Wings.

Larouche, exiled to Hershey of the American Hockey League at the start of the season and recalled just eight games ago, scored the first of two New York power-play goals at 14:33 of the opening period to give the Rangers a 1-0 lead.

Sandstrom's slapshot from the blue line bounced through a host of players in front of the Detroit net and onto the stick of Larouche, who slid the puck behind Detroit goaltender Mark Laforest.

Sandstrom increased the lead to 2-0 just 1:50 later, picking up a loose puck near the Detroit blue line, outskating the defense and flipping a wrist shot past Laforest.

Larouche netted his second goal of the game, sixth since his recall and 350th of his 12-year NHL career with one minute remaining in the opening period.

The Red Wings cut the lead to 3-2 on second-period goals 4:13 apart by Dwight Foster and Gerard Gallant but the Rangers' James Patrick halted the comeback bid with his sixth goal of the season on a 55-foot slapshot with 5:10 remaining in the period.

The first of Maloney's two third-period goals gave the Rangers a 5-2 lead but Detroit cut it to 5-4 with 9:28 remaining on goals by Joey Kocur and Reed Larson's. However, Sandstrom netted his second goal of the game and 20th of the season 55 seconds later to clinch the victory. Kocur and Maloney traded goals in the final two minutes.

The victory lifted the Rangers into a tie for fourth place in the Patrick Division with the idle Pittsburgh Penguins, who have played one game less than New York.

NHL Roundup

Jets 5, Whalers 4

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Paul MacLean, playing with strained stomach muscles, scored twice to lead the Winnipeg Jets to a victory over the Hartford Whalers.

MacLean fought off a check from former Jets' defenseman Dave Babych and pushed the puck inside the post on the short side for the winning goal with 28 seconds left in the third period.

The triumph lifted Winnipeg two points ahead of last-place Los Angeles in the Smythe Division. The Kings have two games in hand.

Hartford left winger Stewart Gavin scored two goals but the slumping Whalers remained five points behind Buffalo and Boston, who are tied for third-place in the Adams Division.

Also scoring for Winnipeg were Doug Small, Mario Marois and Bill Derlago. Torrie Robertson and Sylvain Turgeon got the other Hartford goals.

Oilers 8, Nordiques 2

EDMONTON, Alberta — Wayne Gretzky tied an NHL record with seven assists for the third time and defenseman Kevin Lowe scored his first goal in more than a year as Edmonton breezed to a victory over Quebec.

Lowe's goal at 5:45 of the first period on a hard, rising slapshot ended a 107-game scoreless drought for the Oilers' first-ever draft selection. The last time he scored was Jan. 21, 1985.

Paul Coffey, with two short-handed goals. Jari Kurri with his 43rd, Ken Solheim, Mark Napier, Craig MacTavish and Dave Semenko scored the other Edmonton goals.

Gretzky failed to score a goal for the ninth straight game but his seven assists tied the record he already shared with Billy Taylor of the Detroit Red Wings.

NC State wrestler goes from mat to silver screen

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina State University wrestler Tab Thacker never thought of becoming an actor, but the 390-pounder says that he enjoyed his role in the movie "Wildcats."

"I had to sit and pinch myself a couple of times. It's something you sit and dream about," said Thacker, who was a national champion wrestler at N.C. State.

Thacker's size — he once carried 447½ pounds on his 6-foot-5 frame — got the attention of Clint Eastwood, who saw his picture in Time magazine. That's how he got his first movie role, playing a bouncer in "City Heat" with Burt Reynolds and Eastwood.

When he got a call about that role, Thacker said that he "thought it was a joke."

After his first movie, Thacker acquired an agent, who set him up with the casting agent for "Wildcats." Thacker went to New York and read for him and a few days later he was asked if he wanted a part in the movie.

"Sure," Thacker said.

In "Wildcats," Thacker plays Finch, a student in a tough, inner-city high school in which the principal stalks the halls protected by a pair of Dobermans.

Goldie Hawn plays Molly McGrath, the school's newly hired football coach, who inherits a team that last won a game by default when their opponent's bus broke down.

Finch, Thacker said, is an egotistic, smart guy who wants to get paid for any effort he exerts. When he's asked to play football, he insists on getting paid. But when the coach finds he has been writing English papers and selling them to other players, she blackmails him into playing.

In the movie's climactic game, after being insulted by the other team's coach, Finch charges onto the field and blocks a field goal, saving the game for his team.

Filming took 14 weeks, seven in Chicago and seven in California,

Thacker said. Since finishing the movie, Thacker has spent some time promoting it, appearing at news conferences and signing autographs.

He also has been working on losing weight and getting his degree.

Thacker has lost 50 pounds from when he wrestled in 1984 and would like to get down to 320.

"I decided to come down," he said. "I knew as I got older, it would be pretty bad for my health."

Thacker said his size helps him get a foot in the acting door, but added,

"You still have to land the part. That's when I win them over."

Thacker, who will be 24 in March, still has a semester to go to earn his degree in criminal justice from N.C. State. Until the movies came along, he said he had planned to work with children, perhaps as a juvenile court counselor.

"What kids need now is somebody to really care about them, to tell them the right things to do. I still plan to do that," he said.

Basketball

DALLAS — A SWC committee Friday upheld the suspensions of two Houston basketball players, as well as a reprimand of a Texas Tech student group, after a fracas at the schools' Jan. 4 game.

The SWC compliance committee upheld a two-game suspension of Houston player Renaldo Thomas and a one-game suspension of teammate Rickie Winslow, SWC spokeswoman Jo Daniels said.

One of the players threw a ball at an official and hit him in the head, another ball was thrown into the stands and a Tech water cooler was kicked over at the Jan. 4 Houston-Texas Tech game, she said.

The Texas Tech Saddle Tramps, a student service organization, was reprimanded for using abusive language against Houston players after the game, Daniels said. Texas Tech won the contest 89-68.

SWC Commissioner Fred Jacoby ordered the suspensions and reprimand, and Houston appealed the suspensions to the compliance committee, which met in Dallas. The suspensions will be carried out over the next three games, Daniels said. Houston officials will be allowed to determine which games the players will miss...

DALLAS — Southern Methodist has signed a contract to use Texas Stadium in Irving for its home games over the next five years, SMU Director of Athletics Bob Hitch said Friday.

The hole-in-the-roof stadium has been the home of the Mustangs since 1979, when SMU played its first full home season there. Since then, SMU has compiled a 32-7-1 record for an 813 winning percentage.

The Mustangs first played in Texas Stadium in 1972, but didn't move their complete home schedule there until the 1979 season.

The Mustangs will play four home games at Texas Stadium during the 1986 season, starting on Oct. 4 with Boston College. Other games will be Oct. 18 with Houston, Nov. 1 with Texas A&M and Nov. 22 with Arkansas.

The Mustangs' Sept. 27 game with TCU will be played in the Cotton Bowl to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the State of Texas, the 100th anniversary of the Texas State Fair and the 75th anniversary of SMU...

HOUSTON — Gary Huff, quarterbacks coach for the USFL Memphis Showboats the past two seasons, has accepted a similar position with the NFL Houston Oilers, head coach Jerry Glanville announced Friday.

Huff, 34, played nine seasons in the NFL for Chicago, San Francisco and Tampa Bay and his playing experience was a factor in his selection, Glanville said.

"He's got a great football mind," Glanville said. "We wanted someone to teach the proper techniques to our quarterbacks and Gary Huff is that coach..."

Baseball

ARLINGTON — Outfielder Oddibe McDowell has agreed to terms on a 1-year contract for the 1986 Texas Rangers season, team officials said Friday.

No further terms of the contract with the AL team were disclosed, officials said. McDowell, 23, was Texas' rookie of the year in 1985, his first professional season. He started the year at Oklahoma City and batted .400 in 31 games before his promotion to the Rangers on May 18.

McDowell went on to lead all major-league rookies with 18 home runs and topped all AL first-year players with 25 stolen bases. He batted .239 and had 42 RBI in 111 games with Texas.

With Friday's agreement, the Rangers now have 26 of 39 players on their major-league roster under contract for 1986...

NEW YORK — Los Angeles Dodgers third baseman Bill Madlock, who was mentioned in testimony last year as having dispensed amphetamines, was cleared Friday by Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth of involvement with drugs.

The decision was the first Ueberroth was to make following interviews with players who testified or whose names came up in Pittsburgh drug trials last year.

Chuck Adams, director of information for major league baseball, said Ueberroth had concluded his interviews on Friday.

"While the commissioner is now reviewing the information gathered in the interviews," Adams said, reading a prepared statement, he has resolved one case and determined that Bill Madlock was not involved in any wrongdoing and would not be subject to any discipline."

A 12-year major leaguer, Madlock was traded to the Dodgers late last season after nearly six full seasons with the Pirates.

Crawley, Bramble to battle for WBA title

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Tyrone Crawley, who dropped out of college to see how far he could go in boxing, can reach the top Sunday when he challenges Livingstone Bramble for the World Boxing Association light-weight title.

The 27-year-old son of a retired Philadelphia policeman left Temple University, where he was studying criminal justice, in 1982 to devote his full attention to a pro boxing career.

"If I'd given up boxing, I'd have been crying to this day, saying how far I would have gone," said

Crawley. He found out he could not mix studying and boxing. But even if he becomes a world champion and makes a lot of money — his purse Sunday reportedly is $71,000 — he insists he will resume his education. He needs 2½ semesters to complete his degree at Temple.

"It's something no man can take away from you, a degree," said the WBA's No. 1 contender, who has a 19-1 record with six knockouts.

Bramble, 25, a native of the Virgin Islands who lives at Hampton, N.J., takes a 23-1-1 record, with 14 knockouts, into his second title defense. He won the title by stopping Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini in the 14th round on June 1, 1984, at Buffalo, N.Y.

The weigh-in for the scheduled 15-round fight at a 5,500-seat ballroom in the MGM Grand was set for 6 p.m. today.

The fight, which will be televised by NBC, is scheduled to begin about 12:15 p.m. PST.

It will be Bramble's first fight since he scored a 15-round unanimous decision over Mancini.

Hy-Bon Pro-Boost

(Casinghead Pressure Reduction System)

Improve production by relieving pressure on your oil & gas wells

- Increases revenue from increased production
- Works equally well on stripper wells or high production wells
- Helps prevent gas lock

How it works:
The Hy-Bon Pro-Boost unit - a control system for automatically regulating the desired pressure on a well - is connected directly to the casing.

By reducing annulus pressure the control system relieves back pressure on the perforations at the pay zone, allowing an increase in the incoming flow of oil and gas. The gas accumulated in the bottom of the hole is brought to the surface and compressed into the sales line.

Because the unit is pressure sensitive, and operates on pressure demand, it allows the well bore to stay clear and stable - resulting in a steady flow of hydrocarbons into the bore.

The stabilization of pressure in the bore has also proven effective in minimizing re-occurring gas lock problems.

Low cost - quick payback:
The Hy-Bon Pro-Boost Unit provides a sensible, dependable, and economical method of compressing gas at the wellhead. Increased oil and gas production quickly pays back your investment, often within 30 days. And the Hy-Bon Pro-Boost Unit can be rented, leased or purchased through Hy-Bon's flexible customer-oriented acquisition plan.

Proven Hy-Bon design
Each product manufactured by the Hy-Bon Corporation reflects 30 years experience in the industry with Hy-Bon manufactured components and design insuring long lasting, dependable performance. The proven Hy-Bon rotary compressor used in the Pro-Boost system is the industry standard for performance and reliability.

Sprinters close in on record times

NEW YORK (AP) — Canada's Ben Johnson matched the second fastest time in the men's 60-yard dash and Gwen Torrance scored a stunning upset over Evelyn Ashford in the women's 60 in the Wanamaker Millrose Games Friday night at Madison Square Garden.

Johnson, unbeaten on the indoor track and field Grand Prix circuit this season, streaked to victory in 6.04 seconds. The time matched the Garden record set by quadruple Olympic champion Carl Lewis in 1983 and was only two-hundredths of a second off the world indoor best of 6.02 established by Lewis two years ago at Dallas.

In posting his fifth triumph of the Grand Prix season, Johnson, the 1985 World Cup 100-meter champion and Olympic 100-meter bronze medalist, beat a standout field.

Sam Graddy, the Olympic silver medalist in the 100, finished second in 6.08, with University of Pittsburgh sophomore Lee McRae third in 6.10 and Emmitt King fourth in 6.11.

Only Lewis and Stanley Floyd, who has run 6.04 twice, have run the 60 as fast or faster than Johnson.

Millrose Games

In the women's 60, Torrance, of the University of Georgia, set a collegiate record of 6.57 in handing Ashford her first defeat in two starts this season — after a 17-month layoff to have her first child.

Torrance's time broke the collegiate mark of 6.59, set by Jeanette Bolden of UCLA in 1982.

The impressive victory also made Torrance the third-fastest performer indoors, behind Ashford, owner of the world indoor best at 6.54, and Alice Brown, who has run 6.56.

This time, Ashford, the 1984 Olympic 100-meter gold medalist, wound up second in 6.65, just ahead of Olympic bronze medalist Merlene Ottey-Page of Jamaica (6.69).

THERE ALSO were upsets in the men's and women's 60-yard high hurdles.

In the men's race, Canadian champion Mark McKoy became the No. 3 performer in indoor history, winning in 6.93 and beating Greg Foster. Foster, the Olympic silver medalist and 1983 world champion, was slow out of the blocks after false-starting once and never could seriously challenge McKoy, the British Commonwealth Games champion.

Only Renaldo Nehemiah, owner of the world indoor best at 6.82, and Foster have run faster in the event.

Foster, who finished second in 7.02, tripped over the finish line. After a few minutes, he limped off the track, apparently not seriously injured.

In the women's 60 hurdles, Patricia Davis of St. Augustine's College beat Stephanie Hightower, owner of the world indoor best, in 7.51.

Hightower, who got off to a slow start, closed fast but could not catch the high-stepping Davis and wound up second in 7.54, just ahead of high school standout Yolanda Johnson of Denver (7.55).

IN ANOTHER upset, Grace Jackson of Jamaica beat triple Olympic gold medalist Valerie Brisco-Hooks in the women's 200 meters in 23.45. Brisco-Hooks, holder of the world indoor best who has been bothered by a tendon injury this season, finished second in 23.53.

Chandra Cheeseborough, the former holder of the world indoor best and a double Olympic gold medalist in the relays, wound up third in 23.60.

Diane Dixon, owner of the world indoor best in the women's 400 meters, equalled the Garden record and set a meet record, winning in 52.20.

Another holder of the world indoor best, Johnny Gray, smashed the Garden and meet records in winning the men's 800 meters in 1:47.18.

American record holder Jackie Joyner took the women's long jump at 21 feet, 11 1/4 inches, another Garden record, in surprising Galina Chistyakova of the Soviet Union. Chistyakova, a former holder of the world indoor best, finished second at 21-2.

Veteran Larry Myricks, the 1979 World Cup champion, won the men's long jump at 27-5 1/4, with former collegiate standout Michael Conley second at 27-2 1/4.

O'Grady keeping mum about Hawaiian lead

HONOLULU (AP) — Mac O'Grady established a one-stroke lead and then maintained — sort of — his selective silence Friday in the second round of the $500,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

O'Grady, a frequent challenger but not yet a winner in fourth season on the PGA Tour, birdied the 18th hole to complete a wind-blown 69 and a 2-round total of 133, 11 under par.

As is his custom, O'Grady refused to be interviewed — at least on the course. And he refused to discuss his play with reporters — at least with American reporters.

After walking away from American newsmen with the comment "I don't talk to the press," O'Grady cheerfully reviewed his card — which contained five birdies and two bogeys — with a Japanese reporter.

"I trust the Japanese reporters," he said.

O'Grady, who also made himself unavailable to newsmen at tournaments in Las Vegas and Dallas last year, earlier was quoted by a reporter from the Honolulu Star-Bulletin as saying:

"I won't go into the pressroom. But I'll talk off the course grounds if I'm approached in the right way. And everytime I do, I'll blast (PGA Tour Commissioner) Deane Beman."

He followed with a long attack on Beman — whose office declined comment — apparently arising from an incident a year ago which resulted in O'Grady being fined for "conduct unbecoming" a professional golfer.

O'Grady, 34, who made 17 appearances at the tour's qualifying school before he gained his playing rights, played early in the day and got his 3-under-par score on the board before the winds reached maximum strength.

That occurred in the afternoon, and the palm-twisting, gusty blasts thwarted the attempts of the late starters to overtake his early lead.

Tyson taking aim at 17th straight heavyweight KO

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — Nineteen-year-old Mike Tyson, who has fought his way into the heavyweight spotlight by knocking out 17 straight opponents in a professional boxing career that spans but 11 months, will get some national television exposure when he goes against Jesse Ferguson Sunday in a bout broadcast by ABC.

"I look forward to it because of network television," said Tyson, whose perfect pro record includes 12 first-round knockouts. "I especially want to look good because I don't want my friends to see me lose."

The Tyson-Ferguson fight headlines an eight-bout card at RPT's 7600-seat Houston Field House that also includes a heavyweight match between two ranked fighters — 26-year-old Carl "The Truth" Williams and veteran Mike Weaver. Also featured on the card is 20-year-old Houston middleweight Frank Tate, the 1984 Olympic gold medal-winner in the 156-pound division, who goes against Jerry Williams of Philadelphia. All three fights are scheduled for 10 rounds.

Tyson, ranked 14th by the World Boxing Council, turned professional March 6, 1985, stopping Hector Mercedes in the first round. In a six-month span that ended Jan. 11, Tyson fought 10 times and registered nine first-round knockouts. Conroy Nelson was the only man to survive the first round — he fell in the second.

Tyson's longest bout was his last one, a five-round knockout of Mike Jameson on Jan. 24 in Atlantic City, N.J. Nevertheless, Ferguson, a native of Knightdale, N.C., is not intimidated by the 5-11 1/2, 218-pound Tyson. After all, Ferguson has only one loss in 15 pro fights, and that was to Williams in 10 rounds after having knocked him to the canvas twice with stunning left hooks.

Integrity

Who knows how much is riding on this handshake? Only the two men who have just made a commitment. Later, documents will be drawn up, details noted, the formal contract signed. That's good business—and it's the law. But right now, at this very moment, men who believe in each other's integrity have an agreement both will honor.

Nowhere in high school or college have we heard of a course in Integrity. Does that mean that something so important to our economic system isn't taught? Not in formal curricula.

Rather, it is taught in the home by parents who are people of integrity. Its teaching is reinforced at Church where religious beliefs mold the character of the children and adults. And its practice is encouraged daily in the marketplace by the example of those whose fundamental convictions make their handshake a bond of truth.

Men's Spiritual Life Retreat set for Friday

LUBBOCK — A Men's Spiritual Life Retreat will be held Friday and Feb. 22 at the Koko Inn and Koko Palace, 5201 Avenue Q in Lubbock.

Theme for the retreat is "Cultivating Thoughtful Discipleship...Monday to Sunday." Lead speaker at the three general sessions of the 24-hour retreat is Dr. Joel B. Green, formerly of Lubbock, now from California.

Green is assistant professor of New Testament at New College for Advanced Christian Studies, Berkeley, California ("New College Berkeley") — a graduate school offering masters degrees for men and women wishing to explore the relationship between their Christian faith and values and the complex challenges of their vocational, intellectual and social world.

Green received his bachelor's of science degree in agricultural education from Texas Tech University; his master's of theology from Perkins School of Theology, Dallas; and his doctorate in New Testament studies from the University of Aberdeen Scotland, where his mentor was the noted evangelical New Testament scholar, I. Howard Marshall.

Green has published numerous articles and reviews for the church-at-large as well as for scholars, pastors, and seminarians. He is the author of one published book, "How to Read Prophecy" with "How to Read Gospels and Acts" forthcoming. He has presented scholarly papers on Biblical and Wesleyan studies at various professional meetings. He is a member of the Society of Biblical Literature, the Tyndale Fellowship, and the Wesleyan Theological Society.

Green is an ordained minister in the United Methodist Church who has served churches in Texas and in British Methodism. "He is committed to theological and church renewal in the United Methodist Church," said a church spokesman.

Since 1980, he has been the managing editor of Catalyst, an evangelical resource publication for United Methodist seminarians. He is a frequent preacher, teacher, and conference speaker in local churches and other groups of many denominations.

Green was born in Lubbock in 1966. While he was studying at Texas Tech in the School of Agriculture he worked at KCB-TV as the assistant farm director and served in churches in the West Texas area.

Since 1979 he has been married to the former Pamela Jane Kelley of Bridgeport. They are the parents of two children, Aaron and Allison.

Music and worship for the retreat will be led by the Rev. Millard Bucholz of the Bedford UMC, Bedford.

The public is invited to attend by pre-registration. Full registration includes a double room with three buffet meals, $36. Partial registration includes the Friday supper, Saturday lunch, retreat sessions, $20. To attend the retreat sessions only, registration is $10.

To register, call First UMC, La Mesa, for details. Room and meals deadline for registration was Feb. 7.

"Managing Stress," a four-week course taught by Jerry Kelly of the Samaritan Counseling Center is offered at 6:45 p.m. Wednesdays following the family night supper.

"Stress as a Positive Part of Our Life" was the theme of the Feb. 5 session and the Feb. 12 meeting was "Assessing Stress." Weeks three and four will deal with "Techniques in Managing Stress."

Also on Wednesday nights is "The Christian Life Study," a 15-week Bible study led by Joan and Richard Cramer. Porter Barrington's "The Christian Life Master Outlines and Notes" are the amplification for a ministry of over 35 years, both in the pastorate and in the field of teaching and evangelism.

"These lessons on the great doctrines of the Bible were produced to fill a need in the life of the average Christian and to provide an incentive to know more of God's holy word," said a church spokesman. "Diligently studied, they will help to establish faith and give spiritual confidence."

Participants are asked to bring their own Bibles.

"Presbyterian — What Does That Mean?" begins 9:30 a.m. Sunday in the Garden Room. The seven-week course taught by Dr. A.J. Moreau, pastor, will be held each Sunday through March 30.

For the in-depth course, each participant will need a copy of "The Book of Confessions," available at the class or in the church office.

For more information on these programs or to make reservations for the Wednesday Night Family Supper call the church office, 682-2514.

Trinity Presbyterian Church is located at 1800 W. Illinois. Church school starts at 9:30 a.m. and Sunday services at 11 a.m.

Church airing 'Marriage Enrichment Film Series'

The "Marriage Enrichment Film Series" is being shown at the First Christian Church at 7 p.m. Wednesdays.

These color films feature Dr. Carl Brecheen, a marriage counselor, and Dr. Paul Faulkner, a certified marriage and family therapist who supervises counseling or training for the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy. Both men are graduates of Southwestern Baptist Seminary and have 20 years experience in marriage enrichment.

Tens of thousands have attended Brecheen and Faulkner's live seminars across America. Their book, "What Every Family Needs," has more than 125,000 copies in print.

The eight films contain live presentations plus illustrative dramatic scenes. The titles of the films are: "Made for Each Other," "The Trouble with Us is Me," "What Husbands Need to Know," "What Wives Need to Know," "How to Kill Communication," "The Communication Lifeline," "Speaking Frankly about Sex," and "Renewing Romance in Marriage."

This series was produced by

Earl Miller, producer of James Dobson's "Focus on the Family" films and "The Prize." Miller says, "The films contain some of the best material I have seen anywhere. From the point of view of both content and production quality, they are excellent."

Popular author and Christian psychologist, Gary Collins, Ph.D., of Deerfield, Ill., observes, "...their humor is captivating — but not overdone — and their psychological understanding is sound. Best of all, they bring clear, Biblical perspective to their films."

Caine to star in 'The Fourth Protocol'

LONDON (AP) — Actor Michael Caine, currently winning acclaim in the New York milieu of Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters," is back in his native England to star in and co-produce an adaptation of the best-selling Frederick Forsyth novel "The Fourth Protocol."

Caine

"The English countryside is the only place where I am really happy," Caine said at a news conference to announce the movie, a thriller that casts the actor as a British intelligence agent out to stop the smuggling of a Soviet nuclear device into England.

Caine is a Los Angeles resident, but he said he hopes to return to Britain to live in a year or two. "The Fourth Protocol" is scheduled to start shooting in April on location in England and Finland. Caine said he has put up $706,000 of the new film's $11.3 million budget. Author Forsyth, whose book sold more than 7 million copies, has put up $1.4 million.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A group protesting war toys made a tactical withdrawal from Sylvester Stallone's home after being squirted with water while trying to deliver a 50-foot-high valentine to the actor.

Stallone

Jerry Rubin, leader of the L.A. War Toys Boycott, said about 25 members of his group had gathered outside the actor's Pacific Palisades home Thursday night to deliver the card protesting "Rambo" toys, which include an action figure doll set for distribution this month.

Someone squirted the group with water from over the fence of the estate, Rubin said. A voice through the front gate's intercom told them to go away. Stallone's publicist, Paul Bloch, said Friday that Stallone was "out of town on his honeymoon and didn't even know about the demonstrators."

Stallone recently married actress Brigitte Nielsen. The couple delayed their honeymoon while finishing their roles in Stallone's next movie, "Cobra." On the cover, the giant card says: "Name the weapon war toy protesters approve of." Inside, the card answers: "Cupid's arrow."

A cupid points a heart-tipped arrow at a drawing of Stallone in his movie-poster pose as Rambo, the Vietnam veteran who returns to free prisoners of war from the Vietnamese.

Rubin, who is not related to the 1990s radical leader of the same name, said after the water squirting incident, "the group just wasn't in the mood to leave the card behind."

Stallone is the star of "Rambo: First Blood, Part II," the second-highest grossing movie of 1985, and the series of "Rocky" films. In "Rocky IV," his opponent is a robot-like Soviet boxer.

Rubin's group also protested outside Stallone's house before Christmas.

SIoux Falls, S.D. (AP) — Dan Rather and a couple of dozen other TV news people will travel to farm country to give the nation's agriculture crisis an in-depth look, a CBS News official said.

"The CBS Evening News With Dan Rather" will originate from San Antonio, Texas, and Sioux Falls, S.D., the last week of February, Lane Venardos, executive producer of the program, said Thursday.

"I think the story of the American family farm is maybe the biggest ... or one of the biggest domestic issues that will confront this nation this year," he said.

Rather will start a five-day series of "CBS Evening News" broadcasts Feb. 24 and 25 at KENS-TV in San Antonio. Rather and a traveling crew of about 25 writers, technicians, producers and others then will move to Sioux Falls, where the program will be broadcast from the KELO-TV studios Feb. 26 to 28, said Judy Grant, KELO-TV news director.

"Taking the broadcast to the farm country is better than sitting in New York and saying, 'There's a problem out there,'" Venardos said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying he is "interested in exploring other opportunities," Edward M. Joyce has resigned from CBS, which has ousted him as news president two months ago.

Joyce, 53, had been senior vice president of CBS Worldwide Enterprises since his removal from the CBS News president post Dec. 5.

He had joined CBS in 1964 and became news president in 1983. The job in Worldwide Enterprises involved selling CBS-produced material to overseas markets.

In a letter to Gene Jankowski, president of the CBS Broadcast Group, Joyce said: "At this stage of my life, I am interested in exploring other opportunities in areas that offer new challenges since these could not be pursued while I am employed at CBS."

A CBS spokesman said the resignation was effective Friday.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Sixty-five years after he was left on Uncle Walt's doorstep on "Gasoline Alley," Skeezix quietly celebrated his birthday Friday in one of the few comic strips whose characters get older.

"There's been a lot of interest in it — more than there's ever been for a long time," said Dick Moores, who draws "Gasoline Alley" with fellow North Carolinian Jim Scancarelli. "I think the tendency is for people to take the aging thing more seriously."

Scancarelli said Skeezix entered the comic strip on Feb. 14, 1921, at the urging of Joseph Medill Patterson, head of the Chicago Tribune syndicate.

"He told (Gasoline Alley creator) Frank King he needed some human interest thing; told him to put a baby in the strip," said Scancarelli. "King said, 'A baby? How's that going to fit in?' He didn't know how he was going to get a baby in overnight. But around Valentine's Day he just dropped him on the doorstep and bingo — Skeezix was in the basket."

"Gasoline Alley," which King started in 1919, is the oldest story comic strip in daily papers; the older "Katzman Kids" now runs only in Sunday papers, said Scancarelli.

Readers grew up over the decades with Skeezix, whose name is a cowboy term for a maverick calf with no mother. He joined the Army in World War II, got married and raised children. At 65, he still sports the round head and lengthy forelock he had as a lad.

Meanwhile, Moores became King's assistant in 1956 and took over the strip in 1960. King died in 1969.

Scancarelli inks in the drawings after Moores has composed the story, drawn the faces in ink and pencil-sketches the action.

Moores, 78, has no plans to retire from "Gasoline Alley," which now runs in the funnies of about 180 daily newspapers and 125 Sunday papers.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Sen. J. James Exon was in good condition after eye surgery to repair a detached retina and should recover fully in a week, his surgeon said Friday.

Dr. John Pemberton said the Nebraska Democrat woke up at his home in Lincoln Saturday and had clouded vision in his left eye.

"When the retina tore, it tore across a blood vessel which caused a major hemorrhage into the eye," Pemberton said.

Bishops' committee to examine 'acceptance' of nuclear policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — U. S. Roman Catholic bishops have set up a committee to review their "conditional moral acceptance" of the U.S. policy of nuclear deterrence to determine if the conditions still are being met.

The bishops, in their 1983 condemnation of nuclear war and criticism of some U.S. nuclear strategy, had accepted deterrence as temporarily justifiable only if sincere steps were being taken to reduce nuclear arms. Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, announced formation of the six-bishop committee to assess whether the basis still continues for that qualified acceptance of deterrence.

Cardinal Joseph Bernardin of Chicago, who had headed the drafting committee for the original document, was named chairman of the review committee.

Nugent

And at 36, Nugent follows his own fun-loving philosophy as he tools about New York promoting "High Heels," the first single from his upcoming album, "Little Miss Dangerous." He takes the album on the road next month.

"I had a fun night last night," he said with a bright-eyed rush. "I usually come to New York just to work and eat in great restaurants. Two beautiful girls got my autograph at the Hard Rock Cafe...I took me on a tour of the city...I danced for the first time off stage."

"We went to the Lone Star. Levon Helm, drummer of the Band, who started playing country-edged rhythm 'n' blues, and Stevie Nicks were up there playing."

Then Nugent switched to the third person: "Ted found a guitar on the sidelines and...got up there and played an hour or so. Stevie and I go way back. The Amboy Dukes used to play with Traffic. We played with the Spencer Davis Group in 1967."

"That's my idea of fun and games. That's what I was weaned on. Every city after a show we'd find a club, disarm the local band, proceed to terrorize the area for the evening."

Nugent, who left audiences shell shocked with his high-voltage heavy metal concerts, exploded on the airwaves at the age of 18 when he and the Amboy Dukes put out a hit called "Journey to the Center of Your Mind."

Born and raised in the Detroit area, Nugent was given his first guitar when he was 9, began taking lessons at 11 and by 12 he was playing lead in a rock band that entertained at school dances.

Nugent's career has now turned to acting, and he appeared on a recent "Miami Vice" segment. "It was an interesting and exciting as I expected. I was a serious bad guy, a drug dealer, gun dealer, woman beater. I'm killed in the end; justice in action," he said.

"I did all my scenes real quickly but one scene I had to do over and over. I had to smack my wife really violently and every time I got close to her face I pulled back. I think it's a tribute to my chivalry."

Though he'd like to do more acting, Nugent has turned down TV offers to play a rocker. "They're constantly abusing the rock 'n' roll image on TV," he said. "They don't know how to depict the spirit of rock 'n' roll. It's not a look or sound. It's an attitude. Whenever they try to depict the flamboyant, uninhibited rock 'n' roller they come off depicting some dit."

His album, "Little Miss Dangerous," is out this month.

"The first two videos are 'High Heels' and 'Little Miss Dangerous,' which is probably the single best song I've written," he said.

FROM NISSAN—A TOTALLY NEW LINE OF TRUCKS introducing a full line of trucks so tough, so powerful, so bold in styling, they could only be called Hardbodies. A revolutionary concept in compact truck design from Nissan, the company that invented the compact truck.

BIGGER INSIDE Totally re-designed, Nissan created this new truck around its most important payload—you. With the biggest, broadest, roomiest cab in any Nissan.

BIGGER OUTSIDE Totally re-shaped. With hot-rolled steel wrapped around the longest, widest most aerodynamic truck Nissan's ever built. And the biggest cargo box of all leading standard compact trucks. The Hardbodies.
