1958th Comm best in command

By TSgt. Curtis Farnsworth
Unit Public Affairs Representative

The 1958th Communications Squadron was recently awarded the Air Force Communications Command Small Unit Communications Electronics Maintenance Effectiveness Award for fiscal 1984.

The squadron is assigned here as a tenant unit.

The commander of AFCC, Maj. Gen. Gerald Prather, had some good words for Squadron Commander Capt. Jon Gardner in a congratulatory message. "Competition for this award was extremely keen. Winning this highly competitive award represents a significant accomplishment, and carries with it the distinction of being the best in AFCC," he said.

Squadron Chief of Maintenance CMSgt. Gerald A. Zoebisch said, "It was the workers; the airmen and NCOs who spent long hours at the generally thankless task of ensuring that high quality communications and reliable weather data are always available to our customers, who won this award. I'm happy for them and proud of their accomplishments."

The squadron won the award after winning the Continental Communications Division level award. Their package now goes to Air Force level.

The squadron provides communications-electronics and meteorological equipment support to the mission here. They maintain over 150 equipment items including radios, wind speed and directional indicators in eight runway surveillance units, navigational aids in the form of instrument landing systems, weather radar, radio communications and a remote microwave link, providing information for the Air Traffic control tower.

The squadron's maintenance branch is divided into six work centers. They include Maintenance Support, NAVAIDS, Radio, Land Mobile Radios, Communications Systems, and Weather Maintenance.

The maintenance support section provides quality control, Communications Focal Point, Tech Order Distribution Office, Maintenance Training Management, Material Control, and monitors base digging permits.

The Navigational Aids workcenter maintains two instrument landing systems. These systems provide a radio signal that is used by suitable equipped aircraft when reduced visibility or adverse weather conditions impair the pilot's ability to visually reach an airfield. The NAVAIDS workcenter also maintains the Very High Frequency Omni-Range Tactical Air Navigation (VORTAC) which provides a homing beacon and distance measurement for all aircraft flying into Reese.

The Radio workcenter maintains the ground-to-air radio transceivers used by the control tower, RSUs, Base Operations, Supervisors of Flying, and the Contingency Support Network.

In addition, they maintain and set up the public address system for all events that go on around Reese.

They successfully designed and built new consoles for the RSUs. These consoles allow training observers to override instructions provided to aircrews by student controllers if those instructions are in error or would cause a hazard to aircraft. This innovation has improved the flight safety environment for student and instructor pilots. It has been adopted at all Air Training Command Pilot training bases.

Leaving Air Force difficult decision

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS)—"It was one of the most difficult decisions I ever had to make."

That is how Capt. Gregg D. Hess described his decision to leave the Air Force after seven years of active duty.

Captain Hess is a rare commodity. He is one of a small group of officers who got out and later returned to the Air Force. His life changed dramatically when he hung up his blue suit.

As a civilian, his life lacked what he and his wife, Jane, wanted most of all—stability. They watched his career take a roller coaster ride from high-to low-paying jobs.

For a while he was bringing home a very good salary flying jet aircraft for the airlines. Later, he worked for an hourly wage cleaning those very same aircraft.

In four years, the young couple packed up their little boys, Erik and Cory, and moved more times than many Air Force families do in 20 years.

They lived in cities throughout the United States and, for a while, found themselves in Saudi Arabia.

Captain Hess describes this period of his life as one of a "furlough-recall" cycle that gave him lots of experience in many different aircraft with little hope for a steady, reliable income.

Why would a young officer with a promising career ahead of him decide to leave? The answer is complicated and can only be explained by looking at the factors controlling his family's life at the time of his decision.

If there was an overriding factor, it had to be timing. Captain Hess graduated from Iowa State University in June of 1971, as the Air Force was beginning its wind-down from Vietnam. He was a distinguished graduate of Iowa State's ROTC program and was elected to attend pilot training at Laughlin AFB, Texas. His instructors immediately identified his talent for teaching others flying skills. He began a succession of jobs which kept him in a training environment.

His first assignment was as a T-38 instructor pilot at Laughlin AFB, Texas. While there, he also served as an academic instructor. After four years at Laughlin, he was sent to Randolph AFB, Texas, where he became a squadron check pilot for the 560th Flying Training Squadron.

It was during this period

Supply competes for AF award

The 64th Supply Squadron is one of six finalists for the 1984 Daedalian Supply and Aircraft Maintenance Effectiveness Awards at Air Force level.

In addition to the Reese supply squadron, Luke AFB, Ariz. and Pope AFB, N.C. were named finalists in the supply competition.

Aircraft maintenance finalists are England AFB, La.; Williams AFB, Ariz.; and RAF Lakenheath, England.

An evaluation team will begin visiting the bases this month.

Careline

Ext 3273

The Care Line is prepared by Col. Bob Hullender, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, on a weekly basis. All information provided to the Care Line will be held in strict confidence. Callers are urged to give their name and duty telephone number so that a personal reply may be made; however, neither are mandatory. Callers should use the Care Line only after all possible means to air their views or complaints through the chain of command have been exhausted. The Care Line number is 885-(Ext.) 3273.

A non-smoker asked if anything could be done about the poor air circulation in her office. She and a co-worker are out-numbered by smokers, she said.

Technicians from Civil Engineers' Heat Shop and Controls Shop are in the process of reconnecting the fan control in the caller's office. We hope this will help alleviate the problem. Guidelines for problems of this nature can be found in AFR 30-27, Smoking in Air Force Facilities.

"Excellent service...friendly and courteous." That is a description of many Reese service organizations, but the call I received recently gave those words of praise to the people at the hospital laboratory. It's always a pleasure to hear about Reese people doing the best job possible. Our lab personnel do their best to provide the quality care our patients deserve.

An Honor Guard member was concerned because he had not been given a receipt for a uniform left at the base laundry.

Honor Guard members' uniform dry cleaning and laundering is paid for by the wing to ensure that they look as sharp as possible at all times. There is a reason the caller was not given a receipt, and it has to do with the bookkeeping. The duplicate ticket must stay with the garment so the cleaners know who it belongs to, and the original goes to Accounting and Finance so they can pay for the service.

Should the case arise that the uniform is misplaced and the owner has no receipt to help track down the lost item, there is a solution. Each laundry ticket is numbered and must be accounted for. If an item is lost, and the original ticket with it, the matter could be pursued based on the ticket number from the duplicate.

The recent freezing weather brought a frequently asked question—Are we authorized to put our hands in the pockets of the parka? The answer is no, and that includes putting your hands in the pockets of any uniform. You won't find that in Air Force Regulation 35-10, Dress and Personal Appearance, as you might expect. The answer is found in AFR 30-1, Air Force Standards, which says that we must present a professional image. So, if the weather is a bit chilly, wear your gloves.

A caller, concerned about a mix up in his Join Spouse assignment application, asked us to check into the procedure for handling the applications. He thought he and his wife had applied when he first received orders in July, but in later he found out that they had not completed all of the paperwork.

Apparently, the problem was caused by a miscommunication between the individual and the CBPO Customer Service Unit. From now on, personnel in the Enlisted Assignments Section will double-check to ensure all paperwork is completed. The couple's complete Join Spouse application has been forwarded to the manpower and personnel center for approval.

Energy saving everyone's responsibility

By Sam Lanham
Wing Energy Conservation Manager

It has now been ten years since the Air Force implemented its energy conservation policies and guidelines in 1975. Our goal for fiscal 1985 is to use 20 percent less facility energy than we did in fiscal 1975.

In order to reach our goals through the years, we have placed added emphasis on energy controls, energy projects, no heat/no cool periods, energy management systems, and user awareness. Together, these programs have allowed us to reduce our energy consumption from the fiscal 1975 level each year.

Even though we have reduced our consumption here the past two years, we have failed to reach Air Force goal both years. The failure to reach our goal has been primarily a lack on the part of the individual energy user to do his/her part in conserving energy each day.

At their last meeting in December, the Reese Energy Conservation Task Group voted to set up an Energy Conservation Survey Team that would periodically survey all buildings on base and look for energy misuse or abuse in two major areas—thermostat settings and controls and proper use and control of lighting. These survey teams were selected from each major organization on base and performed the first survey earlier this month.

The teams surveyed 49 of the major energy using facilities on base and found that overall, our energy awareness and control had taken a turn for the worse.

Of the 49 buildings surveyed, 30 had thermostat or temperature violations, and 26 had lighting violations. One building surveyed had 27 rooms that were unoccupied with lights left on. This does not speak well of our efforts as individuals to help conserve energy here at Reese. It is imperative that we, the individual energy users, do our part to help the facility managers keep their facilities in compliance with the current energy standards.

Thermostats should be set at 65 degrees F for office areas during the heating season and all lights should be turned off when you leave the room no matter how short the time period.

We, the individual energy user, must take it upon ourselves to report and correct energy abuse or misuses. The Commander's Care Line, Ext. 3273, has been designated as the Energy "Hotline" for the base.

If you see energy being wasted, please report it so the problem can be fixed.

We need your help. Let's make it a matter of pride in the accomplishment of our daily tasks to make sure we are doing our part in our own work areas to do all we can to help conserve.

Remember, no one else can do your part in the battle against energy waste.

Little errors sometimes harmful

By Chaplain (Capt.) Carl Sykes
Keesler AFB, Miss.

I have seen many people, young and old, who at one point in their lives look forward to the challenge of each new day. With each new challenge, there was a new vigor in their voice, new sparkle in their eyes and a thrill in their souls. They anticipated victory rather than defeat.

Then something happened! It was not noticeable at first except to their close friends. Then everyone began to notice it. There was a lack of interest and coolness toward those new challenges. Gradually, the fire that raged within their hearts became only charred embers. The joy and experience of achievement was now a thing of the past. Their lives seemed to void of power and aimless. They now give in to depression and the attitude of defeat; instead of succeeding, they were failing. What was wrong? What had made such a radical change as this? Has this been your experience?

On January 26, 1947, a Dakota took off from the Copenhagen airport. Everyone was gay and happy. It was a special event. The passengers included Prince Gustav of Sweden, and Grace Moore, the famous opera singer. Into the air the plane roared—it was a normal, routine flight—when suddenly something happened. The nose shot up, the motor stalled, and, to the horror and amazement of hundreds of spectators, the plane plunged earthward.

An explosion, a flash, and the flight that had started a few moments before ended in tragic horror and death. The world was shocked.

Investigation later proved that a small block on the tail had not been removed. A ground attendant had been careless. One little wood block had caused the death of a prince, a world-renowned singer, and 19 other passengers.

One small, tiny, insignificant error may be the cause of all your difficulties. Acknowledge and correct the error. Don't let those small, tiny insignificant things rob you of the joy of living.

tower. The Brite II system is a closed circuit TV system displaying radar information on a display screen in the control tower. The radar information is remoted from an FAS radar at Lubbock International Air Port to the Reese Tower VIA the RML.

The RML installed at Reese was a test-bed program withing AFCC. It was designed to replace existing USAF radars with micro-wave links between nearby FAA radars and USAF Air Traffic Control Towers, thus saving both manpower and money. Upon successful completion of the test period, this program has been cleared for implementation Air Force wide.

The RML/LMR workcenter also provides service for the base land mobile radio system, and the base paging system.

The Communications System maintenance workcenter maintains the teletypes in the base telecommunications center and the teleautowriters which provide weather information from the Air Weather Service to different agencies located throughout base. They also maintain cryptographic equipment with the base telecommunications center and provide customer education on the USAF TEMPEST program.

The Weather maintenance workcenter maintains the weather radar which provides storm tracking capability to the Air Weather Service Forecasters for formulation of critical weather briefings provided to assigned and transit aircrews. They also maintain nine wind systems which provides wind speed and direction to all RSUs and the Air Weather Service. They maintain a cloud height set, a temperature/humidity set, barometric equipment and a runway visibility unit. All these units provide necessary weather information to the forecasters.

Although a tenant unit, the 1985th Communication Squadron expresses pride in being a part of the 'Reese Team.'

Leaving difficult

that he and his wife began weighing what sort of opportunities were available. They saw the Air Force's gradual drawdown in rated positions and began hearing rumors and reading of changes in flight pay, the retirement system and medical care.

They put off their decision to look into career opportunities with the airlines when Captain Hess was selected for a "mini" ASTRA (Air Staff Training Program) tour at the Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center at Randolph AFB.

The ASTRA tour was followed by an assignment to the 12th Flying Training Wing's Standardization and Evaluation Shop where he flew as a T-38 flight examiner.

Captain Hess explains that "I really enjoyed the Air Force, but I also was looking at the higher pay and job stability I anticipated getting from the airlines." He adds, "I was at a transition point in my career where I would have been moving to a different aircraft."

After long discussions with his wife, he decided it was the right time to take a change on a civilian career. What the young couple didn't know and could not have anticipated was the dramatic change that was about to hit the airline industry.

The economy took a downward turn, fuel prices went way up and passenger air travel went into a severe slump. If that weren't enough, the effects of deregulation pushed a score of air carriers into bankruptcy.

Hired by a regional airline immediately following separation, Capt. Hess and his family packed their bags to begin civilian life with his new employer. They were setting out on an odyssey that would take them to Las Vegas, Nev., Phoenix, Ariz., Jidda, Saudi Arabia, back to Phoenix, and Minneapolis.

Adding to their laundry list of "permanent" homes were intermediate aircraft training stops in Phoenix, Vancouver, British Columbia, Pittsburg, and Dallas.

They quickly learned the meaning of the phrase "last hired, first fired." With the onset of reduced passenger loads and increased expenses, the newest aircrew members were the first employees to be furloughed.

Captain Hess was furloughed 16 months after joining the airline. To try and give his family a guarantee of a stable income, he volunteered to transition from Boeing 727 aircraft to an F-27 contract service in Saudi Arabia.

Four months after arriving at this new job overseas, he was furloughed again when a fire destroyed the company's hangar and support equipment. He looked for another flying job in the country and was hired by a private corporation in Saudi Arabia to fly their corporate 727 as a flight engineer.

"That job was short-lived and three months later we took a chance on returning to the states because the airline had grown in size and my seniority position with the airline had improved," Captain Hess explains.

Unfortunately, he wasn't recalled right away and had to take odd jobs to support his family. He became a night auditor for a resort in Scottsdale, Ariz., and also flew part time for a local public utility.

Later, still waiting for a recall notice, he found work on an aircraft clean-up crew at the airport in Phoenix.

Finally, in July of 1981, he was recalled as a 727 flight engineer and assigned to the airline's eastern region. He packed up his family and moved to Minneapolis.

Shortly afterward, he was reassigned to Phoenix and commuted to and from Minneapolis to be with his family. He points out, "My wife and I worked hard to keep our family from being hurt by our frequent separations, and we succeeded."

The crowning blow occurred when seven months after being recalled, he was again notified that another furlough was imminent.

"I had received a letter from the Air Force back in 1981 asking if I wanted to return. At the time I ignored it, but after the last furlough notice, I'd had enough. I sent a letter to the Air Force asking if their offer was still open," he explains.

Births

A son, Kenneth Kyle, born to Sgt. Gene and Carol Peterson on Jan. 18 at 10:18 a.m. He weighed in at 7 pounds, 10 ounces.

A son, James Hideo, born to Capt. Brent and Jacqueline Yamauchi, Jan. 14. The newest addition to the Yamauchi family was born at 9:30 a.m. at the USAF Hospital Reese, weighing 9 pounds, 7 ounces.

He was informed that he was indeed needed and could return to Air Training Command to fly T-38s.

Captain Hess is currently stationed at Randolph AFB and is on the ATC Standardization and Evaluation Staff.

In assessing his time out of the Air Force, he says he has no regrets about his decision. However, as a civilian pilot, the most important item missing was career stability.

His advice to young officers thinking about leaving the Air Force is straightforward; "Appreciate what you have. If you're looking for a change in your career, the change you're looking for is not necessarily the change to get out of the service. Everybody has career frustrations and anxieties. A better solution may be a new job or new assignment in the Air Force."

Enrichment for good marriages, not bad

By Chaplain (Capt.) Rick Oberheide
Installation Staff Chaplain

The whole concept of marriage enrichment is largely misunderstood. Many believe marriage enrichment is for troubled and broken relationships. Others think of marriage enrichment as a place of help and healing for weak, incompetent people.

Such misconceptions result in a stigma being attached to participating in marriage enrichment programs.

Marriage enrichment programs are, in fact, designed solely for good marriages. Those suffering from habitual conflict need individual counseling—not enrichment.

The goal of marriage enrichment is thus twofold—making good relationships even better, and keeping good marriages from going bad.

The Chapel Marriage Enrichment Program began several months ago. The program is built around three essential parts to a happy marriage—commitment to growth sincerely entered into by husband and wife; an effective communications system and the necessary skills to use it; and the ability to accept marital conflict positively and to resolve it creatively.

We're looking for positive, creative, committed people to participate in our marriage enrichment program, which meets on the last Thursday of each month at 7 p.m.

At each gathering we cover three basic areas—Ways to continually enrich and enliven our relationships; the basics of clear, open channels of communication; and reducing conflict in married life. By so structuring our evening, we touch base each month with the three essentials of a happy marriage.

We are excited about coming events in our Marriage and Family Program. We are currently organizing a couples' club which will meet monthly for fellowship and recreation. In the spring we will conduct a Marriage Retreat, which will end with the renewal of marriage vows. Also on the horizon is the Minnesota Couple's Communication Seminar, a six-week program which intensely explores communication dynamics.

Nothing is more beautiful, nothing more important than marriage and family. That's why marriage enrichment began—to maintain and nourish the foundations of our lives.

Dental disease misunderstood

Dr. (Capt.) Lisa D. Jones
Preventive Dentistry Officer
Reese Dental Clinic

Do you think of your dentist as a person who fills and pulls teeth? They do, but dentists do many other things besides these traditional tasks.

Today's dentists spend as much time and effort preventing dental disease as they do treating the effects. This emphasis on prevention has increased since the turn of the century, as the causes of dental disease have become better understood.

Prevention is especially important for military personnel since they must be prepared to go anywhere in the world at a moment's notice, and often to places where dental care isn't available.

The major cause of dental disease is plaque, a thin film of bacteria and by-products that is constantly forming on the teeth. Eating foods containing sugar or starch cause plaque to make acid which attacks tooth enamel. After many such attacks, decay can result.

Because dentists are aware of the destruction plaque can cause, they take the time to teach their patients how important removing plaque daily is and just how to do it.

At regular intervals, patients' teeth are given a professional cleaning to remove hard, mineralized deposits made up of unremoved plaque, called calculus. Calculus contributes to the development of dental disease because it builds up around the teeth making it difficult to remove the plaque that forms daily. Calculus cannot be removed by brushing and flossing, but must be removed by professional cleaning.

Another approach to preventing tooth decay is strengthening tooth enamel. Fluoride is perhaps the best known way of doing this.

Fluoride is a nutrient that makes teeth more resistant to decay. Children benefit most since it is incorporated into the enamel as the tooth is being formed.

The best way to get fluoride is by drinking water that contains the right amount of it. Dentists may prescribe a fluoride supplement to children living in areas without enough fluoride in the water. For some children, especially those who have considerable tooth decay, dentists may also apply fluoride gels or solutions to teeth.

Fluoride can eliminate most decay affecting the smooth surfaces of the teeth, and the surfaces where the teeth meet, however, it is less effective on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth.

These surfaces often contain tiny depressions (pits) and grooves (fissures) where plaque accumulates. To combat decay in these areas, dentists are now using sealants that can be painted onto the teeth forming a thin covering over the pits and fissures. The sealants keep plaque and food out of these crevices, thus reducing the risk of decay.

Prevention of dental disease is one of the most important goals of dentists today, prompting the age-old dentistry motto, "A clean tooth does not decay."

21 declared dead in C-130 crash

WASHINGTON(AFN)— Defense department officials announced that 21 service-members died in the crash Jan. 22 of a C-130 off the northern coast of Honduras. Ten bodies had been recovered as of Monday.

Officials said searches for the plane and other service-members are continuing. The plane, assigned to the 440th Tactical Airlift Wing, Billy Mitchell Field, Wis., was on a routine flight from Howard AB, Panama, to Trujillo AB, Honduras, said officials.

Listed as dead are five Air Force Reserve crew members: Maj. Michael J. Durante, Maj. Gary E. Schei, 2nd Lt. Paul Cocks, MSgt. David E. Guile and TSgt. John A. Oettinger. All were attached to the 440th TAW.

There were six active duty Air Force passengers: Lt. Col. Robert E. Dalton, 317 TAW, Pope AFB, N.C.; Capt. Michael F. Kelly, Military Airlift Command Headquarters, Scott AFB, Ill.; SMSgt. David B. Reid, USAF Hospital, Shaw AFB, S.C.; MSgt. Leslie A. Burch, also from MAC; TSgt. Frederick J. Francis, and Sgt. William R. Rollinson, both from the 437th Security Police Squadron, Charleston AFB, S.C.

Two Air Force Reserve passengers who died were SMSgt. Harry T. Keyes and SSgt. Ronald A. Wachter, both of the 927th Tactical Airlift Group, Selfridge ANGB, Mich. There were also eight Army passengers.

Sections of the fuselage, wing and landing gear have been found along with other equipment, including unused life rafts, wood chocks, a tire and a mail bag. Air and ground searches are continuing near the Gulf of Honduras, at the country's northernmost point.

American and Honduran helicopters, several Navy vessels, and Navy and Army diving teams have assisted.

The Airlift mission in Central and South America has been flown by the Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard since 1977. It was previously flown by Military Airlift Command, officials said.

A board of officials has been appointed to investigate the cause of the mishap. (AFNS)

Reservists make ultimate sacrifice

By SrA. Barry F. Dillon
Air Force News Service

"Weekend Warriors?"

Think about the nickname we have given to members of the Air National Guard. It implies a lot of things that are simply not true.

Not as committed as full-time blue-suiters? Part-timers who don't face the same hardships or make the same sacrifices?

Tell that to the families of Paul Cocks, Michael J. Durante, David E. Guile, John A. Oettinger, Gary E. Schei, Harry T. Keyes and Ronald A. Wachter. These men, all members of the Air Force Reserve, are dead following the Jan. 22 crash of a C-130 off the northern coast of Honduras.

Five of the men made up the crew of the C-130 that has routinely supported the U.S. Joint Task Force Headquarters in Honduras. The tragic incident offers us a time to re-focus our thinking. In the words of one reservist in the Pentagon, "Although we are, for the most part, part-timers on duty, we are full-time partners in the total force."

The Guard and Reserve are not always recognized for the vital missions they support. For example, the airlift mission in Central and South America has been shared by the Guard and Reserve since 1977. They took over the mission that previously was flown by active duty personnel.

At any given time, reservists fly about one-third of the global airlift missions, according to Maj. Gen. James E. McAdoo, Vice Commander of the Air Force Reserve. In a speech given last year, he said, "Literally every day, everywhere, we have reservists performing their duties. It's a long way from the days of flying around the flag-pole on weekends."

These duties are not limited to bases near their civilian offices. They are in Japan, South Korea, West Germany, the Middle East and Central America. During the rescue mission in Grenada, reservists flew alongside the active duty and helped return with the rescued students.

Whether on their one week-end a month or the two-week annual active duty requirement, these airmen have to meet the same exacting standards as their full-time counterparts.

Gen. Charles A. Gabriel, Air Force chief of staff, made this point clear last year when responding to congressional inquiries about activity in Honduras.

"Why is there not much said about it?" asked a congressman, referring to guard and reserve involvement.

"I think it is probably the fact that, at least in my service, it has become so routine that the reserves are right there beside us," General Gabriel responded. "I am not talking about just the flying forces. There are a lot of support forces—medics, engineers, aerial port people.

"It has become so routine with us that maybe we do not advertise it each time as being exceptional," he said.

Weekend Warriors? Not so. Reservists are equally committed and make many of the same sacrifices as active duty members.

Sometimes the price of freedom is high. In the case of the seven reservists, they made the ultimate sacrifice. (AFNS)

Credit union seeks nominees

Two positions on the Reese Federal Credit Union Board of Directors may not need to be settled through elections since only two people have been nominated for the three-year positions.

Credit union officials say that the board's Nominating Committee was not required to nominate more than one person for each position, and unless petitions are received for nomination it will not be necessary to conduct an election by ballot.

The two nominees are Elizabeth L. Montgomery and CMSgt. Max E. Lantz.

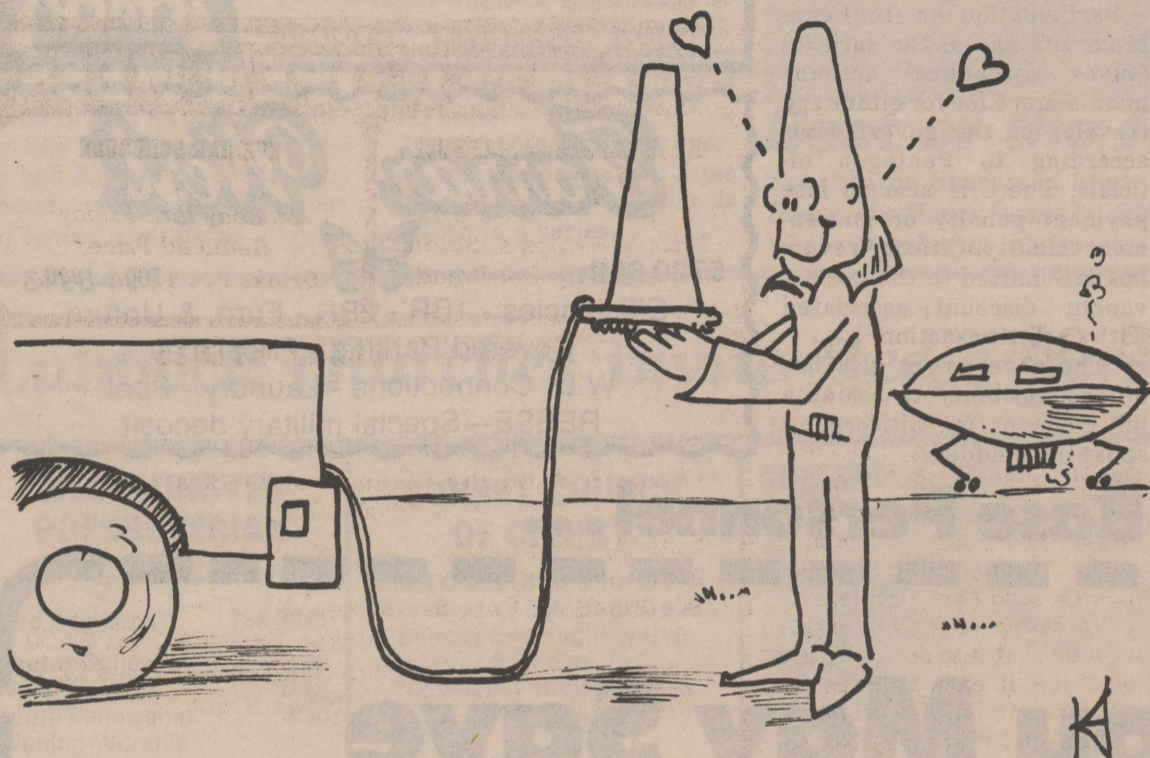

Montgomery, a retired chief accountant and deputy accounting and finance officer here, has been associated with the Reese credit union since 1954. She is currently serving as the chairperson on the Board of Directors.

Chief Lantz, the 64th Flying Training Wing senior enlisted advisor, is presently a member of the Board of Directors, serving on the Budget and Loan policy committees. He has been associated with credit unions throughout his military career.

Credit union officials say that any petitions for nominees to the Board of Directors must be in accordance with the National Credit Union Administration regulations, and need to be received very soon.

Army tests credit card use

By MSgt. Rudi Williams, USA
American Forces Information Service

After the Army's successful 8-month traveler's check test at 18 finance offices throughout the United States, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger has urged the service secretaries "to consider the program for early implementation throughout" the military services.

Weinberger also said the services should consider using charge cards for payment of expenses connected with official travel. The charge card is to be used for lodging, transportation, meals, and vehicle rentals; traveler's checks are issued for minor travel expenses, such as taxes, tolls, trips, and meals.

Once the services start using charge cards and traveler's checks, savings are expected to be approximately $200 million a year because of the reduced administrative costs and interest savings gained from improved cash management.

The programs would also:

- Reduce or eliminate the Government Transportation Request;

- Simplify travel voucher processing;

- Reduce the number of travel advance payments;

- Reduce cash balances held in vaults of disbursing officers.

"We now have 44 finance offices signed up for the program in Korea, Japan, Okinawa, Hawaii and throughout the continental United States," said Capt. John Herko, project officer for the program at the U.S. Army Finance and Accounting Center, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind. "We expect, if everybody participates, to have about 170 finance officers issuing more than $500 million in traveler's checks a year.

"Most soldiers get a combination of traveler's checks and cash," said Herko. "During the first six months of the test, we issued more than 43,000 payments with traveler's checks, amounting to more than $21 million. About 75 percent were used for travel-related payments, 10 percent for separation payments, and the rest for such miscellaneous payments as reenlistment bonuses and per diem."

Herko emphasized that finance offices "are not allowed to sell traveler's checks." For example, he said customers cannot buy them from Army cashiers for a vacation.

More than 40,000 employees in 24 government agencies have used credit cards since the General Services Administration contracted with Citicorp, Inc., for Diners Club charge cards.

Participation in the program and use of the card involves no annual account maintenance fee for either the traveler or the government, according to Pentagon officials. There is also no late payment penalty or government liability. Citicorp revenues are limited to the normal vendor discount associated with each transaction.

"The government also has no responsibility to act as a bill collector for Citicorp," a spokesman added.

Services division to support exercise

A Reese services specialist will travel to the Republic of Korea to participate in an annual field training exercise involving over 200,000 people from the U.S. and Korean military.

A1C Kenneth L. Milner will leave the week of Feb. 11, and spend 45 days as a part of the Air Force's Prime Rib team during Team Spirit '85.

During the exercise, Airman Milner will work with field laundry and linen, Field mortuary, and field billeting.

Team Spirit begins Feb. 1 with ATC members participating at various times between March 10-31. The exercise will test the readiness of American and Korean forces in air, ground, naval, amphibious and special operations.

Training will also be provided for military forces that could be called to theater area of the world during a war.

Five ATC security policemen will act as referees for the joint forces exercise. Four cooks, three services specialists and three personnel specialists from within the command will support the exercise.

In addition, 12 survival instructors from the 3636th Combat Crew Training Wing, Fairchild AFB, Wash., will teach survival techniques to other exercise participants.

The 29 command members will represent 11 different ATC units.

The first Team Spirit exercise was conducted in June 1976. This year's exercise is the 10th in a series.

News Briefs

Oldies, but goodies needed

The Reese Reunion Committee is collecting old photographs of the base. Anyone who has photographs or slides should contact TSgt. Judy Bivens, Ext. 3236.

"Check your office storeroom, scrapbooks, and cabinets," urged Sergeant Bivens. "You'll be surprised at what you find, and it may be just the picture we need to represent Reese's past."

Individuals who may have photos in their private collections are also asked to loan them to the committee.

Look into recruiting Monday

An Air Force Recruiting Service team will be here Monday and Tuesday to interview all personnel interested in recruiting duty, regardless of AFSC.

A general briefing will be given in Building 920, Room 130, Monday at 8:30 a.m.

Spouses are encouraged to attend in order to fulfill the interview requirements for those who apply.

Scouts try increasing membership

Cub Scout Pack 548, which meets here, is looking for old and new members. The pack has undergone a major restructure and wants to increase their membership. Eight-to-ten-year-old boys are eligible to join. Parents wanting more information should contact Cubmaster Rick Burgard, at 885-2410.

There will be an important meeting of the cub pack committee at 7:30 p.m. today in Building 26. All committee members, den leaders, and interested adults should attend.

Solutions sought

Do you have a solution to an age-old problem but need a forum to present it? Air University Review may be the sounding board you're looking for.

The Air Force's professional journal is looking for articles which "present new ideas and stimulate innovative thinking."

Manuscripts should be submitted in two copies, double spaced and range in length from 2,500-5,000 words. Only original material is accepted.

You can discuss your article idea with the folks at Air University Review by calling Autovon 875-2773.

MWR conducts sealed bid sale

Morale, Welfare and Recreation Supply will conduct a sealed bid sale of turned in division equipment. The public will be able to view the items weekdays from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 12-20 in Building 37.

For more information, call Ext. 3815.

Chapel earns commendable rating

The Air Force Inspector General team which visited the chapel recently gave the staff high marks.

The team named seven areas inspected as commendable. That rating is the highest rating in the chapel inspection system. Several other areas inspected were rated very near commendable, according to chapel officials.

AFA to hold meeting

The local chapter of the Air Force Association, will hold their quarterly dinner meeting Thursday at the officers' club.

Dr. Johan van Dalen, currently the Director of Neuro-Ophthalmology at Texas Tech, will speak on Dutch and European support of NATO. He contends that the apparent lack of support is the result of press build up and is not the feeling of the majority of the public.

Members are encouraged to make their reservations by Tuesday to Lou Durkac, 885-3732. Since there will be no cash box at the door, the $8 fee must be pre-paid.

Pre-school offers part-day program

The Child Care Center pre-school has slots available and offers part-day programs for children ages three through five years, to help prepare them for school.

Activities are planned to help children develop emotionally, socially, physically, and intellectually. Emphasis is on promoting children's language development and preparing them for their first school experiences.

Morning sessions are offered from 8:30 to 11 a.m., and an afternoon session from noon to 2:30 p.m.

For more information, call the center at Ext. 3541, or the pre-school at Ext. 3952.

Reese dependent is star

Nancy Cless will portray Annie Oakley in a First Methodist Church production of "Annie Get Your Gun" Feb. 15-16, at the Lubbock Civic Center.

Reese to observe black heritage

By 2nd Lt. Marilyn J. Rucker
Black History Week Project Liaison

The Reese community will celebrate the contributions and accomplishments of black Americans during next week's Black History Week celebration.

The national black history observance was initiated in 1926 by Carter G. Woodson, founder of the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History, Incorporated.

Traditionally, during the third week of February each year, we celebrate National Black History Week by recognizing the contributions made by black Americans in the founding of our country.

During the Bicentennial of America, the National celebration was expanded to include the entire month of February. Since we at Reese normally set the pace, this year our celebration will be held during the first week.

The base theme for this year's observance is "The Afro American Family, Climbing the Ladder to Success." The foundation of our American way of life depends on the stability of home and family. During the celebration, the community can take a moment to reflect upon and take pride in their ancestry and the numerous contributions our forefathers made to education, science and health. The entire base in invited to share in the celebration—enjoying good food, and entertainment. The committee is looking forward to a week filled with remembering, sharing and learning.

We are all a part of the American melting pot of multilingual, racial, and cultural differences, living, working and playing together in one strong nation.

Blacks historically rally to call

By Lt. Gen. Winston D. Powers
Director, Defense Communications Agency

February 1985 will mark the 59th annual national celebration of the role of black Americans, in all segments of life, in this country.

The Association for the Study of Afro-American life and History, INC. has adopted as its theme, "The Afro-American Family: Historical Strengths for the New Century," with special recognition of the contributions of blacks to American independence during the revolutionary war.

When I look back over my 34 years of active Air Force service, I find blacks have historically rallied to the trumpet call of defense, starting this tradition in the pre-revolutionary era.

For blacks the military has served as an opportunity for individual development, upward mobility and excellence. I echo the words of defense secretary Caspar W. Weinberger when he says, "Black men and women, military and civilian, have a proud history of outstanding contributions to our nation's history."

I believe one of the most important areas facing us today is that of educating our young for jobs in the 21st century. The Air Force and the country need more engineers, computer scientists, and other personnel trained in highly skilled technological areas.

The Air Force can lend assistance to these needs by:

- Continuing to provide the best possible technical training to our young airmen and officers.

- Getting involved in local community programs, such as President Reagan's "Adopt-A-School" program.

- Preparing our youngsters with the tools they need to compete, such as higher mathematics, science and computer technology.

During Black History Month and throughout the year, I encourage you to be an active participant in your organizational programs aimed at excellence in education for all our Air Force members, military and civilian.

To quote one of America's great patriots, Walter Elias Disney, "The way to get started is to quit talking and begin doing."

When it came time for me to make my decision on a goal in life, I already knew two things. First, I knew no one was going to give me anything. Second, I knew that whatever I accomplished in life would take hard work.

As I entered the military ranks, I had no idea if I would become a major, colonel or general. But I knew if I was to reach my full potential, I would have to work hard. And I would have to ensure everyone else knew I was working hard.

I have continued to work hard my entire 34 years in the Air Force. (Note—General Powers is the highest ranking black officer on active duty in the Air Force.) (AFNS)

Black history week Schedule of events

SUNDAY—Services will be held at the chapel beginning at 11 a.m., with a service featuring Rev. Larry Traylor as the guest speaker, and the Reese Gospel Choir. The service will include special observance of Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday, and his many contributions to the American Nation.

TUESDAY—A talent show will be held at the theater, beginning at 7 p.m. Many local area and base groups will perform.

WEDNESDAY—The USAF Hospital Reese will check blood pressure, and administer sickle cell anemia tests from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. The enlisted club will serve a soul food lunch.

THURSDAY—Soul food menus will be offered at the Caprock Cafe, officers' club, and hospital dining hall. The Child Care Center will sponsor a soul food luncheon for children and their parents.

FEB. 9—A banquet and dance will be held at the enlisted club beginning at 7 p.m. Tickets are $5.50 each, available from Novella Magwood, Ext. 3526, and members of the Black History Week Committee.

Golf costs up

A change in Defense Department funding requirements for golf course maintenance has golfers paying more these days to use the base greens.

At the beginning of fiscal 1985, Morale, Welfare and Recreation officials began paying 30 percent of the golf course maintenance costs from nonappropriated funds.

Previously, all such costs were met through appropriated funds.

MWR officials say they have worked funding alternatives to the price increase diligently, however to meet the 30 percent cost, a certain increase was necessary.

The percentage of nonappropriated funding that will be required, will rise to 40 percent Oct. 1.
