THE ROUNDUP is an unofficial newspaper published under exclusive written agreement with the 64th Flying Training Wing Commander in the interest of personnel of Reese AFB, Texas, of Air Training Command. It is published by Barron Publications, Inc., a private firm, in no way connected with the Department of the Air Force. Opinions expressed by the publisher and writers in this publication are their own and are not to be considered an official expression of the Department of the Air Force. The appearance of advertisements, including inserts, in this publication does not constitute an endorsement by the Department of the Air Force of products or services advertised.

Careline

The CARE Line is prepared by Col. Bob Hullender, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, on a weekly basis. All information provided to the CARE Line will be held in strict confidence. Callers are urged to give their name and duty telephone number so that a personal reply may be made; however, neither are mandatory. Callers should use the CARE Line only after all possible means to air their views or complaints through the chain of command have been exhausted. The CARE Line number is 885-(Ext.) 3273.

Earl Bush, chief mechanic at the Base Service Station, was noted by a caller for a job well done. He had apparently repaired the caller's car on two separate occassions with 'super' results. Mr. Bush is truly a Reese Professional.

Another caller reported outstanding professionalism on the part of the hospital's Emergency Room staff during a medical emergency that hit close to home. This is another example of a team effort by Reese Professionals.

A concerned caller wanted to begin a base drive to help the people of Ethiopia, and requested informatin on how to get it started. Fund raising campaigns are limited by Air Force Regulation to the Combined Federal Campaign and the Air Force Assistance Fund Campaign. Other on-going campaigns are prohibited.

However, one-time, off-the-job. fund raising events are permitted with base commander approval. A bake sale, car wash, or other similar events would be appropriate. If you are interested in sponsoring such an event, you should submit a proposal in writing to the base commander.

Lippers were the concerns of another caller. It seems the caller needed special zippers to sew onto a uniform, but couldn't get them at the Military Clothing Sales Store or the laundry. The zippers in question are not a regular stock item, but may be special ordered through the Main Exchange. Brenda Ellis, Sewing Department supervisor, can assist you.

A member of the Supply squadron was concerned with the fact that he had to buy his own boots from the Military Clothing Sales store, but maintenance personnel were issued replacement boots. He was also concerned about having to keep his fatigue shirt tucked in when leaving his building.

Current Air Force policy provides an annual clothing maintenance allowance for all enlisted personnel. This allowance includes $18.29 annually for replacing safety boots, allowing replacement every 17 months. However, personnel experiencing excessive deterioration because of assigned duties may be authorized to obtain replacement boots at government expense with the approval of their commanders.

Many duties in Supply qualify for such replacement, so check with your branch chief or Squadron Com-

Ext 3273 mander immediately to see if your duties qualify. Regarding the policy on the utility shirt, from April 1 to September 30, it may be worn on the outside of the trousers. Comfort of the individual takes precedence over military appearance when performing duties in the hotter weather. However, those individuals working in climate controlled areas are requested to maintain the most professional appearance commensurate with their Supervisors have been instructed to ensure personnel performing duties in hot weather outdoors are allowed to wear their utility shirts on the outside of their trousers.

A patron of the hospital called because he felt it took too long before he was seen during an appointment. The Primary Care Clinic operates under the team concept, which provides continuity of care for patients.

Everyone, including the caller, is assigned to one of these teams based upon his or her squadron. I and the hospital staff realize it is difficult for people to wait when they are not feeling well, and the medical providers are sympathetic to this and try to expedite patient treatment to decrease the waiting time. However, some patients take longer to see than others when providing care.

In this case the caller had to be seen by a doctor specially qualified to check his progress rather than to be referred to another physician. Any questions may be referred to the Patient Affairs Representative, Robert Gregorio, who will be available upon request.

Another caller addressed the subject of Readiness Day. He was concerned with the fact that some individuals were wearing their blues during a designated Readiness Day. Readiness Day is held during the last Tuesday of each month and in addition to other requirements, all personnel must be in their utility uniform on that day. The attached article on page 10 of this issue explains the reasons behind Readiness Day further.

The noon-hour playing of military music here was the concern of another caller. He felt that the music has become too familiar from repeated use, and suggested we play some different music.

In fact, the playing of military music during the noon hour has ben very well received. It is uplifting and adds a sense of pride. I want to keep this tradition alive, but the caller has a point. We are already procuring new tapes to be used.

Doing it alone

I am writing in response to your request for additional information. In block No. 3 of the accident reporting form, I put "trying to do the job alone" as the cause of my accident. You said in your letter that I should explain more fully. I trust that the following details will be sufficient.

I am a bricklayer by trade. On the day of the accident, I was working alone on the roof of a new six-story building. When I completed my work, I discovered that I had about 500 pounds of bricks left over. Rather than carry the bricks down by hand, I decided to lower them in a barrel using a pulley which, fortunately, was attached to the side of the building Securing the rope at ground level, I went up to the roof, swung the barrel out and loaded the bricks into it. Then I went back to the ground floor and untied the rope, holding it tightly to ensure a slow descent of the bricks. You will note in block No. 11 of the accident reporting form that I weigh 145 pounds.

Due to my surprise at being jerked off the ground so suddenly, I lost my presence of mind and forgot to let go of the rope. Needless to say, I proceeded at a rapid rate up the side of the building.

In the vicinity of the third floor, I met the barrel coming down. This explains the fractured skull and broken collarbone.

Slowed only slightly, I continued my rapid ascent not stopping until the fingers of my hand were two knuckles deep into the pully. Fortunately by this time, I had regained my presence of mind and was able to hold tightly to the rope in spite of my pain.

At approximately the same time, however, the barrel of bricks hit the ground, and the bottom fell out of the barrel. Devoid of the weight of the bricks, the barrel now weighed approximately 50 pounds.

I refer you again to my weight in block 11. As you might imagine, I began a rapid descent down the side of the building.

In the vacinity of the third floor, I met the barrel coming up. This accounts for the two fractured ankles and the lacerations on my legs and lower body

The encounter with the barrel slowed me enough to lessen my injuries when I fell onto the pile of bricks and, fortunately, only three vertebrae

I am sorry to repeat, however, that as I lay there on the bricks, in pain, unable to stand and watching the emply barrel six stories above me, I again lost my presence of mind and let go of the rope. The empty barrel weighed more than the rope so it came back down on me and broke both

I hope I have furnished the information you require as to how the accident occurred.

Sincerely Hospitalized

Follow to lead

By CMSgt. William H. Southwell Jr. 552nd Airborne Warning and Control Division Tinker AFB, Okla.

Someone once said, "To be a good leader, you must first be a good follower." Success depends on how well we follow the plans set forth by our leaders. It also depends on how well we support our leaders by words and actions.

A young noncommissioned officer stopped by several weeks ago to tell me about an incident in his office. His supervisor was discussing a new plan scheduled to be implemented. The audience ranged from very senior people to junior enlisted members.

The supervisor was critical of the plan and the person behind it. In fact, the supervisor didn't have one positive thing to say about the entire program, probably convincing some of his people the plan was not good.

By contrast, I visited a section undergoing reorganization and relocation during the same time frame. It looked like a spilled fruit basket; everything was a mess, as could be expected on the first day. The difference was in everyone's attitude.

The supervisor admitted things were hectic, but he also said things would work much better when the dust settled. He was excited because he knew the outcome would be better for the mission and his people.

The difference between the two supervisors is obvious. One is a good leader because he is a good follower. He has confidence in his leaders and has set out to make things work-and they already have.

How about you? Are things going well in your section, shop or office? If you're experiencing some problems, maybe it's because you don't follow as well as you think you lead.

Base commander lauds conservation efforts

By Col. Clark Griffith Commander 64th Air Base Group

I would like to take this opportunity to voice my special thanks and appreciation to the people of Reese Air Force Base for their efforts so far this year in the area of energy conservation.

Through the first eight months of FT85, Reese has not only met, but also exceeded the established savings goals for all forms of energy use. As of the end of May, with a goal of zero growth from FY80 in all fuels areas, Reese had used 10.2% less JP-4 Jet Fuel, and 11.4% less MOGAS/Diesel than we used in FY80. In the area of facility energy usage, with a goal of 20% less consumption than Command by using 27.6% less facility energy than the baseline year of FY75.

Our success in these areas of energy conservation has not been accidental. It has been the result of a great group of people who are not only committed to daily excellence, but who also genuinely care. Thus far, in FY85, we have been able to see the results of good weather, energy saving projects, work orders, and technical advances that helped us to use less energy. However, the key to any program, and especially the energy conservation program is the attitude and efforts of the people. The Reese attitude towards energy conservation has never been better FY75, Reese led the entire and the results certainly reflect the all-out effort by everyone.

Again, let me express my heartfelt thanks for this excellent effort by each individual to help us conserve our valuable energy resources. Let me encourage each and every individual who lives or works on Reese to continue an all out effort to conserve as much as possible each day.

The months of June through September are some of the toughest months to control our energy usage. Your individual involvement is critical if we are to continue to meet and exceed our savings goals.

Don't forget! The key to energy conservation is you. No one else can do your part.

Lightning deserves respect

top weather killers are tornadoes, or flash floods or hur-

They're wrong! Every year lightning kills 55 percent more people than tornadoes and some 40 percent more than hurricanes and flash floods combined.

There are still some things about lightning we don't understand-such as ball lightning-but we have progressed beyond the "Zeus is angry" mentality of the ancients.

The idea behind all safety measures is to avoid becoming a lightning rod. This means avoiding things that attract lightning as well as keeping from attracting it yourself.

In open areas, stay away from tall, isolated trees or telephone poles. Do not project above the landscape by standing on a hill or in a field.

Most people would say, "I'd never do that." But how many golfers have played in the rain or on an open fairway? Golfers aren't alone either.

Many people believe that A lot of joggers say a little rain is no problem, except that a little rain can turn into a little storm with a little lightning. A lot of good jogging trails are on the edge of a city or base, making a jogger one of the tallest things around.

A fairly safe place to be in a storm, except a tornado, is inside a car. It will provide a good measure of insulation against lightning. Unless, of course, it's a convertible.

Some people think they are safe in their homes so they can call the folks back home and tell them about the weather. Wrong!

Telephone lines conduct electricity, and every year about 1 percent of the deaths caused by lightning involve people talking on the telephone.

Mother Nature is usually pretty fair about giving warning, and if people pay attention, they can feel the charge strikes - like hair standing on. end from static electricity.

They should immediately drop to their knees and bend forward. They should be as low and as small as possible, but not flat on the ground. Lying flat on the ground puts too much of the body in contact with an electrical conductor - the ground.

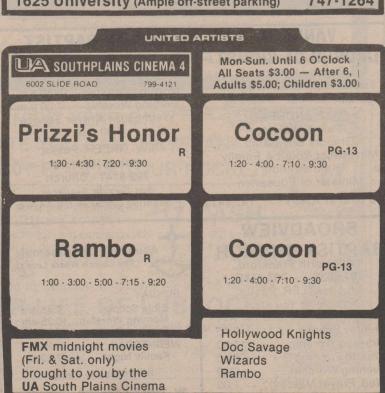

If a group of people is hit by lightning, give first aid to the "dead" first. Many of these people can be revived if quick action is taken.

Even if a person only appears stunned, he still needs to be checked by medical personnel for hidden effects. More than half the people struck by lightning recover fully.

Our language is full of reference to the power and speed of lightning, such as "lightning fast reflexes," and things coming "like a bolt out of the blue," or "in a flash of inspiration."

Lightning can be one of nature's most spectacular displays, but we need to building up before lightning respect it. Any other way is courting disaster. (AFNS-Courtesy Border Eagle, Laughlin AFB)

-A very bad year for ticks

By Capt. (Dr.) Charles Sinclair Bioenvironmental Officer

This is a very bad year for ticks. Actually, its a bad year for the people and animals who have to put up with them.

A tick is an arthropod—or a creepy-crawly with jointed legs. They belong in the same class as spiders-they are arachnids, not insects. They have eight legs and a mouth adapted for sucking. They accomplish this with their hypostome, a built-in hypodermic needle they insert into you and draw blood. They are so good at this that they even secrete a chemical that prevents the blood from clotting. They attach themselves so firmly to the skin that it is hard to pull them off.

There are two general types of ticks: hard ticks and soft ticks.

Soft types, especially the females, are able to hold huge blood meals because their abdomens can expand as they fill up. Both kinds are parasites of the human and animal body. Ticks live in the open, among the vegetation, but attach to the body when hungry. In fact, there is a "Lone Star Tick," which prefers cattle, but will attack nuisance, if not a threat, to people. They can do several things to make your life miserable:

They suck blood. Attached, ticks usually don't cause pain, so you may not even know they are present until you see

They carry disease. Certain species of ticks can transmit disease from animal to man or from man to man. Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, which is found in most parts of the continental United States is one such disease. It is treatable with appropriate antibiotics if diagnosed in time.

Lyme Disease, a bacterial disease, is also spread by means of tick bites. It is also treatable.

Left untreated, both diseases can result in serious illness and occassionally death.

If you become ill at any time, tell the doctor if you know you have been bitten by a tick in the past month. Volunteering this information may provide the doctor with useful information.

Pets may have many ticks on their bodies for a long time since they are powerless to remove them. Dogs especially that are used in hunting or allowed to go into fields or Ticks can be a real woods are frequent victims.

Check them over when they come home, especially on the ears, neck, legs, and back. Pets can bring diseasebearing ticks into people's homes too.

People who hunt, hike, or farm are at high risk of tick attack. When outdoors, wear long pants, socks, boots, and a long shirt with a collar to protect you from ticks. If it's covered with clothing, it won't be attacked. Some hunters prefer to tuck their pants in their boots - a wise idea. A spray insect repellent on bare skin and on the lower legs would also help.

Check yourself for ticks every night when involved in outdoor activities. Again, ticks usually don't hurt and visual inspection is the best way to check yourself.

Small pets usually benefit from a flea and tick collar. Larger dogs, over 30 pounds, should be sprayed with a flea and tick spray.

If you have a lot of ticks in your yard, off-base, a commercial pest control service may be able to spray your yard, but the protection is only temporary.

When it comes to removing a tick, I suppose every practitioner has his or her own removal of ticks. Applying alcohol, fingernail polish remover (acetone), or aftershaving lotion (primarily alcohol) to the tick is alright. Wait about 15 minutes and the tick may let you go. Gripping the head area of the tick with tweezers or forceps and lightly pulling with firm, continuous force should free the tick, especially after an alcohol treatment. A tugging motion will probably just break the tick apart with his headpiece still embedded in your skin.

I do not recommend the cigarette lighter routine!

A similar procedure can be used on animals if a simple tug won't free the tick.

After handling the tick, crush it in a piece of paper and flush it. Always wash the injured area of skin with soap and water. Wash your hands thoroughly after handling ticks. It may be your luck that the tick you removed contains disease organisms. So Wash!

Let's make it a very bad year for the ticks of Texas.

Union care enough about Readiness to give their children gas mask training during their summer camps. Clear indicators of their total commitment to readiness can be read in every issue of Soviet Press.

Although we should emphasize readiness every day through mini-exercises, briefings and posters according to Capt. Thomas Laurie, Wing Plans Officer, one day a month has been set aside for us to stress our primary role as defenders of our country.

The last Tuesday of each month is designated as Readiness Day, whereby units should be tuning up their skills in mobility, testing their security measures, and reviewing their disaster and attack response procedures.

Tuesday is the next scheduled Readiness Day.

"This is a good time to review your contingency checklists, conduct mass training and generally discuss your overall war mission." said Captain Laurie. "Special emphasis should be placed on any new procedures and especially those changed as a result of deficiencies identified during BEET exercises."

To emphasize Readiness Day, all personnel are required to wear their utility uniforms. "No matter what your job, we all play a part in readiness!" he said.

"Natural disasters are a real possibility in the South Plains. One such area to look at is what your office, or unit, or your personnaly would do if a tornado cut a path across the base," he said.

"One day a month is not nearly enough time to practice and drill for every possible disaster, but if observed it will enhance our readiness, and maybe save some lives,'

Sergeant drowns while fishing

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (ATCNS)-A Keesler AFB, Miss., sergeant drowned June 5 while fishing on a farm pond about 80 miles north of the Gulf Coast base.

SSgt. Harley E. Tucker, while on leave before traveling to his next assignment in Korea, was night fishing with a civilian friend. Sergeant Tucker reached over the side of their 12-foot, flat-bottom boat causing it to capsize about 9 p.m. Both individuals went into the water, but when Sergeant Tucker didn't surface his friend called police. The body was recovered about 21/2 hours later.

The pair, fishing in about seven feet of water, were not using life preservers and Sergeant Tucker didn't know how to swim.

Drownings account for about 7 percent of the accidental deaths each year in the United States and follow motor vehicle accidents and falls as the nation's third leading

During the years 1982 through 1984, drownings in ATC accounted for about 7 percent of the ground fatalities. During that period, of 73 deaths in the command, five were drownings. Through June 10 of this year, two of the four ground accident deaths have been water mishaps.

seven days-a-week, the Command Post acts as the eyes and ears of the wing com-

Aggresively responding to all types of emergencies (actual or exercise), the Command Post can instantly notify the wing commander and his staff, higher headquarters, or any base agency.

In addition, the Command Post is resonsible for speaking directly with the base population, should the need arise. The sirens on base and the Emergency Broadcast System running though the base cable is controlled by the Command Post.

MSgt. Ron McChord, NCOIC of the Command Post, heads a small group of dedicated controllers.

"The Command Post is a vital link to headquarters, Air Training Command," said Chief Controller SSgt. Sarah Mundwiller. "We get the information and get it to the people who need it."

Recent renovations in the Command Post will help Ext. 3754.

Twenty-four hours-a-day, serve those who work closely with the unit during contengencies. A conference room for people to work on classified documents was built, and a word processor for working on unclassified checklists installed.

Facing an Air Force Command Post Controller shortage, Chief of Readiness Lt. Col. James Scott cited the volunteers who help keep it all running.

"We have people coming here for 120-day TDYs who are sharp," he said. "I know we've given them a broader outlook on the Air Force, but they've also taught us a lot about individual units that we don't often see."

The Command Post Controller career field is voluntary, requires the applicant to have a top secret clearance, and attend six weeks of technical training at Keesler AFB, Miss. As Dr. Fitts' psychology branch did then, the Human Engineering Division of the Aerospace Medical Research Laboratory seeks to learn more about man's physical and mental performance in today's highly technical and complex Air Force Charles Bates Jr., division director, credits the work of the early experimenters as the basis for its current programs.

"Many of Dr. Fitts' early experiments dealt with the design of aircrew stations," Mr. Bates explained. "The controls and displays in World War II airplanes were similar in shape, design and location, and if a flight crewmember accidently grabbed the wrong control, an aircraft accident or bombing error happened."

One fighter, for example, had its flaps and landing gear controls shaped exactly the same and located in the same area. "The pilot threw the wrong control, which led to some thrilling moments for him and his crew," Mr. Bates recalled.

The dawning of the space age found AML researching techniques to protect and preserve man's performance in this new environment including high-altitude and supersonic rocket flights.

Performance, eating and environmental protection during weightlessness all had to be resolved before space could be conquered. Astronaut survival was paramount.

Soon AML human engineering researchers began examining the effects of weightlessness and other physiological and psychological problems peculiar to spacecraft.

Scientists traveled to Holloman AFB, N.M., and fired mice-laden rockets into the ionosphere. During these flights researchers monitored the rodents' blood pressure, heart rates and respiration. The test showed the mice were undisturbed by accelerations and sub-gravity states during the flights, thus opening the doors for manned space travel.

Experimenters began testing humans in a weightless atmosphere by flying to a specific altitude and then performing maneuvers that negated the earth's gravity for 15 to 30 seconds. Each mission lasted about two-and-a-half hours.

Taking full advantage of the "time in space," astronauts practiced with new space tools while wearing bulky space suits and 160-pound backpacks, testing ways of propelling astronauts through space.

Peter Van Schaik, an aerospace engineer with the aero propulsion laboratory at Wright-Patterson, is creditied with the concept and design of the astronaut maneuvering unit worn by early space adventurers.

"We were working on how to assemble a space station and how to repair and retrieve satellites while in orbit. To accomplish this part of the mission, the astronaut had to get out of his spacecraft and then be able to control his movement," Mr. Van Schaik said.

He added that the famous comic strip character Buck Rogers actually gave him the idea for the unit.

"Much of what we accomplished in the late 1950s and early 1960s is still being used by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration today," Mr. Bates said.

"For example, current astronauts practice weightlessness aboard a C-135 in much the same manner as earlier astronauts did.

"Also, a modified and updated version of Mr. Van Schaik's AMU was used last year when astronauts aboard the Columbia space shuttle traveled in space without umbilical cords."

During the 1960s, the laboratory got into the development of simulation techniques.

"Simulation puts a person in a certain scenario while still on the ground, said Mr. Bates. By using this concept, we establish a baseline for our research and reduce the need for flight tests.

"Man-in-the-loop simulation can systematically vary important job aspects and then measure the performance of both the person and equipment.

Nearly 40 years have passed since Dr. Fitts began research at Wright-Patterson. The goal in human engineering, however, continues much the same as 1945. Researchers in 1985 have computers to develop workplace layouts and equipment designs.

Visual and display criteria improve air crew capabilities by using highly technical ground-based experimental programs. Vision tests measure astronauts' visual performance while in Colonel Castiglione said the procedure involves making small incisions on the front surface of the eye. The cuts, made in a radial fashionlike spokes of a wheel, with the hub directly over the pupil-flatten the surface slightly, improving vision.

In 1980, the National Eye Institute began a controlled study of the safety and effectiveness of radial keratotomy. The results showed that while the majority of eyes operated on do decrease in nearsightedness, the final outcome cannot be predicted.

Colonel Castiglione explained that individuals with small amounts of nearsightedness seem to have the best chance of achieving 20/40 or better vision after the surgery.

At first, radial keratotomy may appear to be the cure that millions of nearsighted Americans have been seeking. However, the surgery is not without drawbacks.

Normal 20/20 vision cannot be glione.

guaranteed. Glasses or contact lenses may still be required. Persistent glare, caused by scar tissue at the sites of corneal incisions, especially with night driving or flying, has been reported.

Colonel Castiglione said fluctuating vision persists as one of the most variable results of radial keratotomy. Up to 60 percent of the patients who have had this surgery have vision that changes from 20/20 in the morning to as bad as 20/70 in the evening,

Since the procedure is relatively new, the long-term effects will not be known for another 15 to 20 years, said Col. Thomas J. Tredici, chief of the opthamology branch at Brooks AFB, Texas. He said, because of this, "Individuals who have had this surgery are not being accepted for aviation duties in the Air Force.'

Colonel Tredici added, "Not all flying positions necessitate 20/20 or better uncorrected vision. Therefore, small refractive errors do not 'automatically' eliminate one from flying

"A candidate should inquire into all the possibilities before taking as definitive a step as a surgical procedure on the hope of achieving 20/20 uncorrected visual acuity.'

This procedure is controversial and is reason for disqualification from enlistment, commissioning and flying training, said Colonel Casti-
