Plainview classes moved to action to aid Pointeaus

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Two seventh grade classes in Plainview—reading of the plight of the Jack Pointeau family in a nationally-distributed AP wire feature story—have joined the family's effort to stay in the U.S. The classes, comprised of gifted and talented students at Plainview's Coronado Junior High, have written letters to Texas' two U.S. Senators and President George Bush in support of the family. In addition, the two classes have issued a challenge to other students across Texas to join the fight. The Plainview students are taking Texas History under instructor Bobby Feaster, who commented to his community newspaper, the Plainview Daily Herald, "Our primary goal is to prove to these students that government is run by the people and that our voice in government can be heard. "We have a definite kinship (with the Pointeaus). They have their own personal Alamo and we want to help them." Comments from the students' letters: "Considering what I know about democracy and immigration laws, I have decided that it is almost illegal for the INS to 'kick (the Pointeaus) out. I can't see what they're hurting here."—Ty Flippin, the son of Ricky and Susan Flippin. —"We all feel that the rule is very unfair. They (the Pointeaus) are model citizens and their children are very gifted. See CLASS, page 15A

Court to discuss naming treasurer

Scurry County commissioners Monday will hold a closed-door session on the prospective appointment of a new county treasurer.

County Judge Bobby Goodwin said the court might make the appointment following the session, which is allowed closed under state law for the discussion of personnel.

Longtime County Treasurer Billy Wayne Thompson is retiring at the end of this month, and the court has interviewed 10 applicants.

Other business in the 10 a.m. meeting will include the consideration of bids to renovate the front office area of the county coliseum to annex to house the Texas Department of Human Services.

The commissioners will discuss advertising for bids to re-

WTC exe leading bull riding event

Snyder native Adam Brewster warmed up to the familiar surroundings of Scurry County Coliseum by taking over the lead in the bull riding event of the Western Texas College NIRA Rodeo on Friday.

Brewster, a Western Texas ex-student who rodeos for Sul Ross State University now, scored an 82 Friday to delight the fans. Wesley Henderson, another WTC-ex and a current teammate of Brewster in Alpine, took over the top spot in the saddle bronc with a 68.

Both cowboys were members of last season's Western Texas team which placed seventh at the College National Finals Rodeo.

The long-go of the WTC NIRA Rodeo was to wrap up Saturday, with slack performances in the morning and an 8 p.m. show in the evening. The top 10 cowboys and cowgirls in each event will compete in Sunday's short-go, beginning at 2 p.m.

While Brewster and Henderson were lining up points for Sul Ross, Southwest Region men's leader Odessa College made its bid for another strong finish. The Wranglers have won five of the seven rodeos this season and came in with a whopping 1,942.5 points.

All-around leader Ty Murray continued his savy in the roughstock events. Murray scored a 70 to take over the lead in the bareback; a 78 to move into second in the bull riding; and a 67 to hold down second in the saddle bronc event. Odessa teammate Shawn McMullan roped his calf in 11.1 seconds to move into second place behind Western Texas' Bobby Moody, who clocked a 9.2 on Thursday.

Western Texas has won the rodeo with big points the past two years, but is finding the pickings tougher so far this year.

Denny McLanahan did score a 65 in the bareback to move into fifth place in that event and Michael Gaffney took over third place in the bulls with a 77.

Ray Brown's 8.1 in the steer wrestling tied with Chad Rameriz of Odessa for the third best time Friday but is locked for sixth and seven in the overall picture.

McLanahan had to settle for a no-score in the bull riding and Clyde Himes' 23.5 in the calf roping is not in the top 10.

Women's team member Krista Jeffries had some tough luck in

UP WITH THE NEW — Jehovah's Witnesses from throughout West Texas and Eastern New Mexico were working on a renovation-expansion of the church's Kingdom Hall Friday afternoon at 607 N. College Ave., with an estimated 175 men on the job and a total of 500 expected to take part in the weekend project. (SDN Staff Photos by Bob Campbell)

Church sanctuary 'goes up' within four-day time frame

In order to have their church sanctuary, Kingdom Hall, ready for an afternoon meeting this Sunday, the local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses started two days earlier than normal, on Thursday.

In all, an estimated 500 workers were to be involved in the project at various times, led by area Jehovah's Witnesses who specialize in the group's tradition of building churches in two days. The extended period was required since part of the work required the "gutting" of the existing Kingdom Hall to allow for its expansion and renovation.

The building itself will grow from 2,200 sq. ft. to 3,400 sq. ft. The four-day time frame has created a flurry of round-the-clock activity at the building site at 607 North College Ave.

Completing the work were the some 80 local members, aided by additional church members from New Mexico and Texas congregations.

Leading the effort was "Doc" Shropshire of Lubbock and the local elders of the Snyder church, which includes Bill Ward and Jack Bryant.

Shropshire said this is the 14th church he's completed in the last five years in West Texas.

The work here included the removal of the old building's brick so that the enlarged facility could be re-bricked in the same

Candidates in the school election are:

—For two at-large trustee seats: incumbents Ken Branam and Luann Burleson, Sam Robertson and Mark Zeck.

In each race, the candidates receiving the most votes will be elected. No runoffs are possible for at-large posts on either the city council or school board.

Wild Flower trail opens

The wild flower trail at the prairie area of Western Texas College opened this weekend in preparation for next Friday's fifth annual Wild Flower Day observance.

Dry conditions and unseasonably cool weather have stunted this year's crop somewhat, but 14 varieties of wild flowers have been identified.

These include White Aster, Dakota Verbena, Copper Mallow, Cut-leaf Daisy, False Honeysuckle, Parralena, Fluttermill (also called Buttercup), Penstemon, Huisache Daisy, Bluebonnets, Texas Squaw-weed. See FLOWER, page 15A

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Taxation without representation may have been tyranny, but it was a lot cheaper."

Don't rush to the doctor—this too shall pass. Those with a dull headache, slight upset stomach, eye fatigue and an empty feeling around the wallet know it happens about this time each year. It's the post income tax syndrome—otherwise known as the PITS.

Every year there are promises to make the calculation and payment of income taxes easier. Writing tax laws is a difficult dilemma.

If the laws are written in complex and technical language, the taxpayers can't understand them. If they're written in simple language, the lawyers, accountants and bureaucrats can't understand 'em.

Each year there are also self-help books for dealing with the April 15 deadline—which is April 17 this year because of the weekend. This year there were dozens of new books with information on how to fill out the income tax form. They all had one thing in common—an unhappy ending.

Somebody has observed that the Infernal Revenue Service is the nearest thing to a Chinese dinner. No matter how much you give them, they always come back hungry again.

There's another remarkable thing about an IRS agent. If one follows you through a revolving door, he always comes out ahead of you.

We've had the urge, but not the guts, to include this little note with our income tax form: "I wish you people were half as fussy about how you spend my money as you are about how I spend it."

TDC official to speak here

The regional director for TDC's Southern Region, whose authority the Price Daniel unit will come under, has agreed to speak Thursday at exercises for the second graduating class of TDC correctional officers trained at Western Texas College.

Appearing here will be Michael Moore of Rosharon. He will be accompanied by the newly named warden for the Daniel Unit, Leslie Woods, currently the assistant warden at the Coffield unit in Anderson County.

The two men will be the guests of honor at a college dinner preceding the graduation. See TDC, page 15A

Nine-year-old disc jockey on the air

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sam Rogoway has been in front of a mike since he was a tyke.

Now he puts it to you this way: "Hey, mamas and papas, brothers and sisters ... Are you ready to rock 'n' roll your souls and get down to the deepest hole in the bottom of the bowl? ... I'm Little Ricky Rocko, the world's youngest disc jockey."

Every Friday, 9-year-old Sam is excused from his fourth-grade classes to perform a one-hour live show with two grown-up DJs. In the studio, he stands on a box to reach a microphone half the size of his head. Lately he's grown tall enough to reach the headphone switch, something he couldn't do two years ago when he started.

Sam takes his music seriously. He likes heavy metal — Guns &

Roses, Def Leppard, Poison — and his favorite group is Bon Jovi.

"Little Ricky Rocko's Rockin' Report," a 15-minute weekly segment, tells the latest rock music news. Sam's father, Dave Rogoway, said the program is heading for syndication.

"Sam has always had good verbal skills," his father said. "He never did the goo-goo thing. He just got up in his crib and started talking."

He was still little when he began imitating his father, whose own brief career as a disc jockey started at age 14.

For hours, 5-year-old Sam would amuse himself with a toy disc jockey set and his father's records.

"He was absolutely obsessed," Rogoway recalled. "It got to the point that if I heard (The Beach Boys') 'Fun, Fun, Fun' again, I was going to take the thing back."

In 1987, Rogoway was making a commercial at a local radio station and he took Sam along to make a fun tape of the boy's disc jockey persona.

Rogoway was transferring the tape to a cassette when the station manager heard the juvenile voice of "Little Ricky Rocko."

It was the sound of a great radiogimmick.

In 1987, Sam recorded his first show for KAAR-AM in Vancouver, Wash. Last year he switched to KKRZ-FM in Portland.

His father said Little Ricky Rocko earns "more than the medium-income wage earner" for the two programs and several personal appearances a week.

In an interview, Sam said: "I lead like two lives. I go to school and go home and play basketball and I'm Sam Rogoway. Then I have to turn into a different person when I'm Little Ricky Rocko."

The "world's youngest disc jockey" has appeared on "Good Morning, America" and chatted with Dick Clark, who recently retired as "the world's oldest teen-ager."

It's OK with his parents if Sam wants to take voice and acting lessons come summer. But what Sam wants most is to have his own band by the time he's 13. But boys' plans — like boys' voices — have a way of changing.

His parents have tried to explain that program formats change and radio stations get sold, too.

Garza named new Jaycee rep

Rudy Garza was introduced as the new Jaycee representative to the Senior Citizens Center Advisory Council at the council's meeting Wednesday. Danny Engle, who has been serving as Jaycee representative, had asked that Garza replace him due to other responsibilities he has assumed.

Jerry Baird, Senior Center director, reminded council members that the center will be holding its major fund raiser, May Day, on May 6 in the Scurry County Coliseum. Activities will begin at 2 p.m. when booths open. Quilts made in the center and other items donated will be sold at auction following a barbecue from 4:30-6:30 p.m.

Delbert Downing, a member of the Silver Haired Legislature, reported on a meeting of the West Central Texas Council of Governments (WCTCOG) he had attended recently. Proposals relating to funding for senior centers could bring major changes, he pointed out. He and Gay Hickman, area representative to the COG Council on Aging, emphasized the need for senior citizens and council members to make an effort to follow funding proposals and to keep in touch with their legislatures regarding them.

Downing, who was elected to Texas' first Silver Haired Legislature in 1986, said he would not be a candidate for re-election next year.

Fiesta celebration opens in San Antonio on Friday

SAN ANTONIO — Rainy skies that had shrouded this city for days departed as thousands of people poured through the gates of the refurbished fairgrounds for the start of Fiesta.

The fairgrounds, located on the northeast edge of recently overhauled HemisFair Park, contained all the usual amenities of the San Antonio Jaycees' annual nine-day eat, drink and music fest.

La Semana Alegre (The Happy Week) 1989 is a city-wide celebration of San Antonio's heritage marked by parades and revelry.

On Friday, in the center of the festival grounds stood the beer booths — about 110 in all — encircled like a wagon train ready to take on an onslaught.

As bands and sound crews put the finishing touches on two large stages on the grounds, the aromas of brisket tacos, fajitas and turkey legs enticed people along a row of colorful booths.

For sisters Gloria Caldbeck and Linda Jimenez, it offered the perfect chance for a fun dinner before they went to a Spurs pro basketball game.

"We come here every year," Ms. Caldbeck said as she finished off a sausage wrapped in a flour tortilla. "We like it because they have good bands every year."

This year is no exception. Seven bands took to the two stages Friday night, including the top-name acts of the Fabulous Thunderbirds and the Gregg Allman Band.

Friday's slate of performers was just the first wave of eight more nights of music enhanced by laser light shows.

"Next to Christmas, if your going to visit family in San Antonio, Fiesta is the next best time," Ms. Jimenez said.

The Jaycees hold the annual La Semana to raise money for various charities.

"It's been real hectic so far this year," said La Semana organizer Bill Lee, who explained that rain and other delays hampered the Jaycees' efforts to get the event set up on time.

"Basically, we've done about a week's worth of work in about two days," he said.

But Lee was quick to admit that all the work is not for naught.

"When you see the charities raising money in these booths, and you see everyone having a good time," he said, "I think it's worth it."

"I think it all falls in with the Fiesta spirit."

Scholarships go to two locals

The Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation, Inc. was established in 1976 to provide scholarships for area high school and college students in order for them to remain in the Permian Basin to continue their education.

This year, four-year scholarships worth $2,400 each, have been awarded to two outstanding Snyder students.

Matthew W. Haynes, whose major is mass communications, will attend Odessa College for two years and then compete his degree at UT Permian Basin.

Stacey R. Logston, a computer science major, will attend Western Texas College in Snyder for two years and then complete degree requirements at UT Permian Basin.

1989 sponsors include the Carl B. & Florence E. King Foundation in Dallas and Texas Electric Service Company in Snyder.

Jurors take 'breather' before final arguments, deliberations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jurors neared the deliberations stage in the trial of former White House aide Oliver North, after a final week of testimony in which prosecutors tried to show North had a personal financial stake in aiding the Nicaraguan rebels.

The charges against North should be in the hands of the U.S. District Court jury toward the end of next week. The last of 48 witnesses gave their testimony on Friday in a trial that has lasted 11 weeks.

After prosecutor John Keke and defense attorney Brendan Sullivan rested their cases, U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell announced that "all the evidence is in, ladies and gentlemen," told the jury "you're great" and sent them home after saying that they will be isolated during deliberations.

The jurors will return Tuesday for final arguments expected to take most of two days.

In the past week, the prosecution tried to undermine North's credibility and depict him as vengeful by emphasizing his relationship with Iran-Contra co-defendant Richard Secord, who will be tried separately.

Keker brought a used car salesman into the courtroom Friday who had sold North an $8,000 station wagon in 1985. North had said four days earlier he had paid for the 1982 Chevrolet Suburban out of $15,000 kept in a metal box in his closet at home.

The salesman, William Howell, said North told him he would pay the final $3,000 on the vehicle out of the White House credit union. Howell also disputed North's contention that he had come to the car lot intending to buy a $5,000 station wagon and then moved up to the $8,000 vehicle. North testified he only had $5,000 with him and had to return to the metal box at home to get the remainder four days later.

Keker pointedly asked North whether he had gotten $3,000 from Secord, whose office is a mile or two from the car dealership, the same day North paid off the car purchase. North said he couldn't remember, but insisted he got the money for the car from his metal box.

North enlisted Secord in 1984 to secretly run arms to the Nicaraguan Contras and as a result, $48 million flowed through the enterprise he set up with business partner Albert Hakim.

The prosecution also brought in Willard Zucker, a Swiss-based lawyer who moved money for Hakim and Secord for the Contra operation and the Iran arms initiative.

Zucker testified that he met with North's wife, Betsy, in March 1986 to discuss the North children's education.

North explained that Hakim had wanted to provide for his family if something happened to him on his dangerous, clandestine mission to Tehran in 1986 and had told him only that Mrs. North was to meet Hakim's lawyer.

Oil spill didn't up gas prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gasoline price increases that followed last month's Alaskan oil spill were prompted by customer worries rather than real threats to the nation's fuel supply, Energy Secretary James D. Watkins says.

Watkins predicted Friday that prices are likely to return soon to "normal seasonal levels."

Retail gasoline prices in recent days have jumped to their highest levels in three years. Watkins took the unusual step of issuing the public statement in an effort to ease the customer concerns.

"The interruption of Alaskan crude created serious concern for future supply curtailments in product markets," he said. "This concern, more than actual supply curtailments, triggered price increases."

Analysts mostly attribute the price increases to higher crude oil prices and widespread anticipation that gasoline supplies will be squeezed by an increase in summer auto travel.

Watkins said an additional key factor has been the imposition of state and federal rules that reduce gasoline vapor emissions but increase refining costs.

On Monday, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, is to open hearings on whether the oil companies' increases in gasoline prices are justified by economic conditions. He suggested the companies were using the Alaska spill as an excuse to raise prices.

Watkins said that the loss of crude oil as a result of the March 24 tanker spill was 13 million barrels, or about 17 hours of national consumption.

"Supplies are not threatened," Watkins said. "Shortages have not occurred."

Briton charged in Thailand

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A British man faces up 15 years in prison on charges he insulted two members of Thailand's royal family, an official in the British Embassy said Saturday.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the man was arrested earlier this month at the seaside resort of Hua Hin, 94 miles southwest of Bangkok, and has been released on bail.

The Thai newspaper The Nation on Friday identified the suspect as Mark Davis, and quoted police sources as saying he was arrested March 4 for allegedly making insulting remarks about two Thai princesses during a restaurant conversation with a Swedish friend.

Two Thais overheard the conversation and demanded police arrest Davis, the newspaper said.

The embassy official said the Briton, a longtime resident of Thailand, was accused of making insulting remarks about Princess Maha Sirindhorn, a daughter of King Bhumibol Adulyadej, and Princess Saomsawali, wife of Crown Prince Maha Vajiralongkorn.

The monarch is widely revered in Thailand. The charge of lese majesty, or insulting the monarchy, carries a maximum penalty of 15 years imprisonment. Foreigners have rarely been charged with the offense.

Budget accord still has gaps, such as capital gains issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic congressional leaders say they'll subscribe to President Bush's no-new-taxes pledge in order to pass a $1.2 trillion budget for the next fiscal year, but beyond that all bets are off.

"When we get into the negotiations (for 1991), everything is going to be on the table, and frankly I don't see how you get from point A to point B without having revenues," Senate Budget Committee Chairman James Sasser, D-Tenn., said Friday, when a budget agreement for 1990 was announced.

"Next time, we're going to have to start looking for some revenues," Sasser said. Congressional leaders joined Bush in unveiling the bipartisan budget agreement, which would reduce the federal deficit to $99.4 billion — just under the $100 billion limit set by the Gramm-Rudman budget-balancing law — without new taxes.

But the accord, thrashed out in more than a month of high-level negotiations, puts off most hard decisions on spending details until later. The budget agreement itself lacks the force of law, but it does provide a framework for actual spending bills to be passed later.

"Very hard choices lie ahead," Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said Friday at a Rose Garden ceremony. What the agreement aims to do is prevent the kinds of partisan disputes that push negotiations to the wire when the new fiscal year changes in the fall.

Missing from the agreement is any suggestion of where the funds would come from to pay for Bush's proposals for increased spending for educational programs, the homeless or more environmental protection.

Also left unresolved was Bush's proposal for a reduction in the capital-gains tax from the current 28 percent to 15 percent, his 1988 campaign pledge.

Democrats say they are firmly opposed, with Sasser calling the chances of passage "slim and none."

Under the budget accord, Bush agreed to back a smaller defense budget for 1990 than in the budget he submitted on Feb. 9 — $299.2 billion for all defense-related programs, including nuclear-weapons programs in the Energy Department, compared with the original $300.6 billion request.

It also calls for discretionary domestic spending of $181.3 billion, up from the $175.9 billion proposed by Bush. It raises spending in so-called entitlement social programs, where benefits to individuals are mandated by law, to $556.4 billion, up from Bush's proposal for $531.4 billion.

Overall, the plan calls for total deficit reductions of about $28 billion for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1. The projected 1990 deficit of $99.4 billion compares with a 1989 deficit estimated by the administration as $163.3 billion.

At the Rose Garden ceremony, Bush called the pact "the first such agreement reached ahead of schedule and not framed in the context of a crisis" and said it was a "first manageable step."

President Bush is right on target in proposing a comprehensive plan to solve this nation's savings and loan crisis. The Congressional response has been positive. Legislation to restore depositor confidence and to protect the deposit insurance system is advancing.

But protection and fairness must go hand in hand. Community banks don't want a special deal. Just a fair one.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE 3 CENTS MAKES

The nation's banks pay FDIC to insure domestic deposits. Large American banks don't pay premiums on foreign deposits, even though those deposits are liabilities of the FDIC. Fairness dictates that ALL liabilities of the FDIC be assessed.

Community banks reluctantly accept that their FDIC premiums will be increased by 44 percent, to $.12 per $100 in deposits. Assessing foreign deposits and other liabilities of banks would allow holding the line at $.12, rather than at $.15 as proposed, without costing the U.S. government any revenue.

What a difference $.03 makes.

After a decade of deregulation and increased financial concentration, remember that community banks still support our nation's small businesses, farmers, and consumers. We make mortgage loans, too. Our local customers are our future, and it is vital that we keep U.S. government mandated costs down.

The S&L bailout is costing billions. Let's not forget to count every penny.

IBAA President O. Jay Tomson before the Senate Banking Committee, March 8, 1989

And a few pennies more...

- Keep FDIC and FSLIC insurance funds separate; protect existing depositor coverage
- Require bank-like levels of regulation and supervision for savings and loans and credit unions
- Continue Chairman Volcker's policies separating banking and commerce
- Preserve inter-regulatory agency checks and balances

Voting slated for Tuesday

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A stockholder of United Telecommunications Inc. wants the firm's directors to put more of their money at stake when they make decisions.

Joseph Geary, a Texas lawyer, has proposed that directors of the Kansas City company be required to own at least 2,500 shares of company stock, an investment of about $132,500 at recent prices. Only three of the 14 current directors own that much, according to figures released by United Telecom.

Shareholders will vote on the proposal at the company's annual meeting Tuesday in Kansas City.

The board of directors has recommended that shareholders reject the proposal, saying it would severely limit the number of eligible candidates.

Geary said he expects his proposal to lose. But he's pushing for it anyway because he thinks directors with large personal investments keep a tighter rein on management and make better decisions, he said. He also questioned the $931,067 salary that president William T. Esrey made last year.

United Telecom owns 80 percent of long-distance telephone carrier US Sprint. Its stock is currently trading at nearly twice the level of a year ago.

SECOND IN ABILENE — Snyder High School's meats judging team, Joe Gordy, James Henderson, Mark Stansell and Jason Cooper, placed second in the recent annual Gooch Packing meats judging contest in Abilene, with Stansell finishing as fourth-high individual and Henderson tying for fifth-high individual. Bank executive is missing

GRAHAM, Texas (AP) — Friends and family members of a bank president have alerted law enforcement authorities to his disappearance but officers said a visit by auditors at the institution was only a coincidence.

Patrick Morton, 46, was last seen by his wife leaving his home in Graham about 6:45 a.m. Wednesday in a van. The former Roby resident is president of the First National Bank of Graham, 100 E. Main St., Graham, Texas.

"We don't know what happened," said Paul. "Right now, anything is possible. He left a little earlier than normal to get some stuff out for auditors who were coming to the bank that day."

"But no one ever saw him show up at the bank," he told the Abilene Reporter-News.

The police chief said the appearance of the auditors at the bank appears to be a coincidence. "Nothing was missing from the bank as far we know," said Paul. "They gave it a clean bill of health."

Authorities have found no sign of the van or any clues to what happened, said the police chief.

David Collier, bank chairman and chief executive officer, said the disappearance doesn't appear to be bank related.

"We've had a complete audit of the bank and there are no discrepancies or irregularities," he said.

Paul said Morton's two-tone, blue and tan 1987 Ford van had Texas license plates.

"We were kind of hoping it might show up in a parking lot or something, but up to this point, we've got nothing to go on," said Paul. "Anything is a possibility, right now — we can't rule out anything."

Morton, a graduate of McMurry College in Abilene, has family members in Roby. Police said he is 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighs about 170 pounds with black hair and brown eyes.

"We asking people in their daily prayers to ask God to reunite him with his family and with the bank," said Collier.

Graham is about 50 miles west of Fort Worth.

Charles Allen labeled scapegoat

AUSTIN (AP) — Fired Texas Parks and Wildlife Department Director Charles Allen was libeled and slandered by members of the department, Allen and a state legislator allege in a proposed House resolution.

"They were out to get him, and an opportunity arose" with the charges against Allen, Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, said Friday.

"I don't think he did anything he didn't think he was supposed to be doing, and what his superiors would have wanted him to do," she added.

Exhibiting suspects common

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Americans watching television may have been surprised to see police exhibiting suspects in a cult of satanic killings, but displaying prisoners is a common practice in Latin America.

"Basically it's to show the news media they weren't beaten up, they are healthy and in the same condition they were when they were arrested," said

Maurilio Mendoza, chief prosecuting supervisor for drug cases at the federal attorney general's office.

"Of course, they always look a little sad because of the crime they are accused of and the consequences that await them," he added. Presumption of innocence frequently is ignored as publications carry pictures of suspected drug dealers, car thieves, bank robbers and murderers being shown to reporters. Confiscated bags of drugs or other stolen items often are arrayed on a table in front of the prisoners.

Suspects in the killings of 13 people in a Matamoros drug cult were paraded before television cameras last week and answered questions from journalists. Reporters and cameramen were allowed at a site Friday as one suspect pointed out a grave and was forced to dig up the victim.

Former petroleum union leader Joaquin Galicia Hernandez, who was arrested on corruption charges in January, always uses the public displays to declare that his arrest was all because of politics.

But when drug kingpin Miguel Angel Felix Gallardo was shown to journalists this week, he refused to say a word.

Criminal defense attorney Fernando Villanueva said the exhibition of suspects probably reflects a desire by authorities to comply with requirements "on press freedom and freedom of expression. Police do not have to present or not present a person to the media."

Family urges court to limit rancher's holdings

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The son and estranged wife of a former Denton rancher are urging a state district court to heavily restrict the rancher's attempts to recapture a portion of the family's $60 million empire, attorneys say.

In state district court Friday, attorneys for Josephine Cauble and Lewis Cauble filed a motion seeking an injunction against Rex Cauble. The former rancher convicted in 1982 of racketeering and bank fraud.

County in February 1988," said Hayes. "Then he tries to raise the same issues in the divorce suit in Dallas County, and then he intervenes in a different lawsuit in Denton County and made the same claims. That's three lawsuits in the last 14 months."

Mrs. Cauble and her son, while admitting that asking for restrictions on Rex Cauble's "free, unfettered access" to the courts is unusual, argue that his actions merit extraordinary relief.

The motion urges that Cauble be forbidden from contacting, threatening, suing or interfering in any way with them or their companies, J&L Partners or L&J Management Corp.

The pair have filed 19 sets of exhibits that exhaustively detail Rex Cauble's life, including records of six marriages and allegations of violence. "Records have not been found" of six divorces, the motion read.

"What we're saying is let's have one forum, and let's litigate all the issues in that forum, rather than having this multiplicity of lawsuits," Denton lawyer Richard Hayes, local counsel for Mrs. Cauble and her son, told The Dallas Morning News.

The injunction request filed Friday is in response to a petition Rex Cauble filed March 21 accusing his wife, son, sister and others of conspiring to defraud him of an interest in the companies.

Cauble, since his release from federal prison in 1987, has filed suit in Denton County, trying to regain a share in his former Cauble Enterprises Inc., now J&L Partners.

In the legal battle, each side also accused the other of mismanaging the multimillion-dollar empire.

The former rancher did not immediately return telephone calls from The Associated Press late Friday.

Rex Cauble, in the suit filed in February 1988, alleged that J&L Partners and L&J Management were jeopardized by "gross mismanagement."

In papers filed with the suit, Cauble claimed he had an oral agreement that his wife and son would return to him a 31 percent interest in the company "when he could resume ownership without further involvement of the government."

Mrs. Cauble and her son, in their motion filed Friday, accuse Rex Cauble of mismanaging the fortune they inherited and losing "staggering sums" — $2.9 million from 1957 through 1972 as shown on tax returns.

Jurors who convicted Rex Cauble ordered his interest in Cauble Enterprises forfeited to the government. In an agreement to settle the government's claim, the property was divided between the government and Mrs. Cauble and her son.

Mosley picked

The former rancher also staked a claim to a share of the family fortune after Josephine Cauble filed for divorce in Dallas County.

Western Texas 4th in golf tourney but Coach Foster remains optimistic

HOBBS, N.M. - Western Texas College struggled over the final nine at Ocotillo Park Golf Course here Friday to slip out of first place and land in the fourth spot at the 4th WJCAC Golf Tournament.

Despite winding up fourth, it was hard for Coach Dave Foster to find much fault with his Westerners, who shot 437 over the 27-hole event, including a 287 over the first 18.

"Overall as a team we played very well. We were the only team to break par after 18 holes," said Foster. "Our last nine, we couldn't get anything going. We shot par or two over and on this course you have to keep it two or three under on the back nine to stay in contention."

New Mexico Junior College won the single-day event with a 425, followed by Midland at 429, Odessa at 435, Western Texas, and New Mexico Military Institute at 438.

4th tournament Ocotillo Park.

Western was led by Darrell Cofer, whose 107 included a three-under par 69 over the first 18 holes. Jerry Whitten turned in a 110, Lance Jones a 112, David Turrentine a 114, Jeff Baker a 117 and Mark Burgen a 118.

Burgen is in the top five in the conference individual standings, but the Andrews golfer, who recently signed with Sam Houston State University, struggled here Friday.

"Mark just didn't have a good tournament. It's really the first time he hasn't come through," said Foster. "We've got to have him playing well for us to win. He just signed with Sam Houston and I think that might have had something to do with his concentration."

Next action is the fifth and final conference tournament, set for Friday, April 21, at Greentree Country Club in Midland. The teams will then play in the Region V Golf Tournament April 24-25 at Grayson County, with the top two winners advancing to the NJCAA National Golf Tournament.

"We've got a lot of momentum going into Midland," noted Foster. "We came within four holes of winning our last two tournaments. It just shows how strong our conference is. If you make one or two mistakes you are going to get passed by one of the other teams."

At Hilton Head Island...

Stewart, Perry lead Heritage

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) - Payne Stewart, who stayed away from the Harbour Town Golf Links because he felt the course didn't suit his game, may be forced to change his mind if he doesn't change the way he's playing in the 21st Heritage Classic.

Stewart fired a second-round 4-under-par 67 Friday to claim a share of the lead with Kenny Perry. The two, who shared the lead after the opening round Thursday, were at 10-under-par 132 going into Saturday's third round.

"I'm very pleased with the way I'm playing and the way I'm handling my game," said Stewart, who is playing in only his third Heritage and first since 1984. "I'm looking forward to the next two days."

The third-year pro had missed five of nine cuts this year coming into the tournament and had been playing poorly of late. So, he took off last week and talked with his pro, who made some suggestions that have helped.

"I'm really driving it good," he said. "I'm not having to think about my golf swing. I'm just setting it up and swinging at it, and the ball is going straight down the middle."

And that's exactly what Perry has been doing. He had four birdies and no bogeys Friday on the 6,657-yard course.

"Really, overall I probably hit the ball better today than I hit it yesterday," said Perry, who called his first round the best competitive round since joining the tour. "I really had the ball in good shape."

The same could not be said for several more established pros. Masters champion Nick Faldo shot a 77 and just made the cut.

Defending champion Greg Norman wasn't even that lucky. Norman shot a 72 for a two-round total of 149 and won't be around for the weekend.

Norman was not alone, however.

PGA champ Jeff Sluman improved 12 strokes from an opening 79 to 67 but failed to qualify at 146. Sandy Lyle of Scotland, a former British Open and Masters champion, and U.S. Open titleholder Curtis Strange also missed. Lyle shot a 71 for 146, and Strange shot 73 for 147.

Mark McCumber will be around - and is one of just three golfers within six strokes of the lead. McCumber birdied seven of the last 12 holes for a 64, the best round of the tournament.

Golf events scheduled

Swingers golf at Snyder Country Club will start April 21 at 5:30 p.m.

Play on that date will be a flighted two-person scramble.

On April 28 at 5:30 p.m. play will be low net of twosome on Blind Holes.

Several other WTC students who are not designated team members are having a good outing. Texas Tech University ladies stood out in the breakaway roping where Karen Cochran timed a 2.6 and hometown cowgirl Leslie Ward flashed a 2.7. The steer wrestling is led by David Lacey of Vernon Region JC, with a 5.1 second run.

Among those scheduled out Saturday night was Southwestern Region steer riding leader Russell Merchant. The Western Texas College freshman from Madisonville has finished second in the average four times this season.

Satanic cult slayings...

Authorities identify 7 of 13 victims

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Authorities have identified seven of the 13 bodies found this week at a ranch where a cult of drug smugglers conducted human sacrifices, and Mexican officials say at least three of the victims were involved in marijuana trafficking.

U.S. federal charges were filed Friday against eight suspects, including the man and woman alleged to be the sect's masterminds.

Four men in custody in Matamoros will be charged formally under Mexican law Monday, an official said Friday night.

Scores of people have traveled to Matamoros from various parts of Mexico to find out whether their missing relatives were among the cult's unidentified victims: Twelve bodies were exhumed Tuesday and a 13th Thursday at the Santa Elena Ranch 20 miles west of this border city, following confessions from the four suspects to be charged here.

"They are confessing because they are conscious that they did it and that we know it," said Jose Piedad Silva Arroyo, Mexico's federal supervisor for narcotics

TDC guard class set to graduate

They are scheduled to be here for two days and will receive tours of the community as well as the prison site.

Next Thursday night, 37 class members are to graduate after completing their 120 hours of training.

The ceremony will begin at 7 p.m. in the Fine Arts Theatre on campus.

A reception for the graduates will be held in the WTC Student Center following the ceremonies. Friends and family members are invited.

The list of graduates includes: James Daniel Bass, Harold David Crane, Fred Lawrence Dillard, Daniel Holman Jones, Jesse Carl Kruger, James Michael Levens, Alfredo Lopez Morales, John Wesley Hardin Nichols, Antonio Perez, Timothy Ray Peterson, Jon Drew Price, Raymond Martinez Rodriguez, Bobby Jim Smith, Herman Lee Smith, Royce Key Summers and Rickey Lynn Thompson, all of Snyder.

Also from Scurry County are Joyce Winona Goswick of Ira and John Young Stewart of Dunn.

Others include Larry Dale Anderson, Edgar Allan Clary, Armandena Sanchez Garza, Samuel Espaisa Olivias and Dan Wesley Smith of Colorado City; David Williams Arp and Jackie D. Glover of Sweetwater; Ben Martinez Mancha of Big Spring; Jerry Mack Deen, Larry Airon McClain and Jeffery N. Perales of Rotan; Roger Clad Bradford Jr. and Travis Ray Henderson of Spur; Christopher Shawn Donham of Roby; Isiah Rolando Guerra of San Angelo; David LeeRoy McGhee of Haskell; Raymond Lee Rich Jr. of Winters; James Arthur Lee Striblin of Post; and Langly Thomas Rister of Hamlin.

investigations in Matamoros.

The four were brought in Friday night to sign statements with the Mexican Federal Public Ministry in preparation of formal charges that Silva Arroyo said would include drug offenses, murder, kidnapping and weapons possession.

A fifth man, the ranch's caretaker, was being held by Mexican federal authorities as a witness.

Police said most of the cult's victims died either from blows dealt with a machete or a hammer. Some suffered horrible mutilations, including the removal of brains, hearts and other organs that were boiled with blood in what suspects have described as sacrificial rites of a cult seeking magical protection for their drug-smuggling activities.

Authorities said the gang smuggled a ton of marijuana weekly into the United States. The four suspects in custody, the two alleged masterminds and two newly identified suspects were charged by the U.S. federal government Friday with conspiracy and drug smuggling and possession.

The location of these flowers is listed on a map which may be obtained at the museum. Also, the map is reproduced at right.

The Wild Flower Day activities at WTC will begin Friday with a morning symposium. Guided tours of the wild flower trail will be held during the afternoon.

In addition, a reception is slated Friday at 7 p.m. in the Scurry County Museum for winners of the wild flower photography contest and public school teachers who had 100 percent participation in wild flower projects.

The morning symposium is scheduled from 9 until 11:50 a.m. in the WTC Fine Arts Theatre. Guest speakers and slide presentations are planned.

Britt Canada, chairman of the Wild Flower Day committee, will open the session and Dr. Harry Krenek, college president, will extend the welcome.

pattern. When completed sometime Sunday, the new facility's interior will be paneled and wall papered and new carpet installed.

Control heating and air conditioning will be in place as well. The existing Kingdom Hall was to be converted into a library area. It will also house restroom facilities.

The majority of the new construction will consist of the expanding meeting area.

After starting the work Thursday, the framing of the structure was completed around noon Friday. Sheet-rocking was to be finished by Saturday morning.

All meals for the workers were prepared on-site so the work flow would not be interrupted, and outdoor lighting was set up for outdoor work after dark.

Hunt plan would leave them plenty

DALLAS (AP) — William Herbert Hunt and Nelson Bunker Hunt would emerge from bankruptcy still multi-millionaires under a plan the former billionaire brothers proposed to pay off debts built up through failed business dealings and questionable silver speculation.

The plan, unsealed Friday by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Harold Abramson, would remove certain assets — including their Dallas homes, and Herbert Hunt's half interest in a house in Vail, Colo. — from a proposed liquidation pool.

Three major creditors, led by the Internal Revenue Service, filed their own liquidation plan last week.

In previous filings, Bunker and Caroline Hunt said they had debts of $1.2 billion and property worth $249 million. Herbert and Nancy Hunt list debts of $887 million and property worth $40 million. Bunker Hunt sat through much of the hearing in Dallas' federal courthouse, but did not participate and left quickly after its conclusion.

While all sides contemplate liquidation of most of the brothers' holdings, the creditors would do so under a court-appointed trustee, while the brothers' plans would give them varying degrees of control.

Each brothers' plan is different in detail, but both would leave the brothers with 10 percent of the proceeds from sale of the assets in the liquidation.

Half of the liquidation proceeds would go to the IRS, which claims Bunker Hunt and his wife Caroline owe $600 million in back taxes while Herbert and Nancy Hunt owe $300 million.

The remaining 40 percent of the assets would be split among the other creditors.

Financial Focus

A stockholder owns part of the corporation in which he or she invests. With this ownership comes the rewards of success and the risks of failure. Owners of common stock accept this risk, along with less or no income, in hopes of lucrative future gains.

Bond owners, on the other hand, are lenders. They choose to invest where income is safe and all their principal will be returned at a specified future date.

Because of these two diverse investment philosophies, owning vs. loaning, some investors view stocks as risky and bonds as safe. As with most generalities, this is only partially correct as both offer some risk. In practice, however, there is a relation between stock and bond prices. A lot can be learned about stocks by watching bonds.

To appreciate this, first understand what makes bond prices move. Bond prices reflect interest rates. When interest rates rise, bond prices drop. Conversely, when interest rates drop, bond prices rise. For example, if you own a $1,000 bond paying 9 percent, you receive $90 interest each year. If rates rise to 12 percent, new bonds would pay $120 interest each year. As a result, to sell your bond with $30 less income, you must discount it and lose some of your original investment.

On the other hand, if rates fall to 6 percent, your $90 income is very attractive compared to the new $60 rate. Your bond becomes more valuable, and the market price increases.

Although bonds are guaranteed to return principal at maturity, until then the market value changes with interest rates. That means if you decide to sell your bond before it matures, you may receive more, less, or the same amount you paid for your bond. Your original investment, or fact value, is not guaranteed before maturity.

Because bonds are bought primarily for income, the market value reflects changing interest rates more quickly than stocks. Stock prices, however, are also sensitive to interest rates and follow bond prices—only a bit slower.

Watch the relationship. When interest rates rise, bond prices fall. Generally, high interest rates hurt business and slow economic expansion. This causes corporate earnings to drop and eventually brings stock prices down.

When interest rates drop, bond prices rise. Low interest rates usually stimulate business, and stock prices react upward following the bond market.

Although this is an oversimplification, a close study of the stock/bond market price activity bears it out. The latest example showed that six months prior to the October 1987 crash, the average municipal-bond mutual fund lost about 6.5 percent in value. Corporate-bond funds lost about 5.5 percent. The bond market was suggesting that in the near future, we might expect a corresponding drop in stock prices. An overly severe drop in the stock market did occur. Although it adjusted to a more reasonable correction, it was, in fact, a drop in stock prices.

This is not to encourage investment decisions based solely on the bond market's movement. Analysts who foster the bond/stock relation temper their decisions with an understanding of bond prices and yields in relation to the inflation rate and yield gaps between bonds and stocks.

The point is simply that there's a relation between bond and stock prices. If you're an investor who's sometimes confused as to where the economy is heading, keep an eye on the bond market. You could get a good tip on the stock market.

Lifeguard course to start April 22

Western Texas College will offer a lifeguard course for students 15 and over starting April 20 and ending May 7.

Mike Harrison, WTC physical education instructor, will teach the course. It is actually three separate courses, he points out. Persons wishing to become lifeguards must complete all three. Students may take CPR or First Aid as separate courses for separate certifications.

The American Red Cross has made changes in prerequisites and improved upon the material necessary for lifeguard training, Harrison noted. To obtain a Lifeguard Certificate, the students must possess an American Red Cross Standard First Aid Certificate and a CPR certificate and must be 15 or more years old.

Students must be able to swim 25 yards in 18 seconds; swim 25 yards and retrieve a 10-pound weight in 1:40; swim 50 yards continuously using crawl, back, breast and side strokes; swim 15 yards underwater at a minimum depth of five feet; tread water for one minute holding a 10-pound weight; and, in nine seconds, dive and bring a 10-pound weight to the surface from 10 yards out and eight feet deep.

Swimmers will be able to pre-test swimming skills before registering.

Students who register for the Lifeguard course will pay fees of $50 and purchase materials costing $8. Persons who wish only the CPR or standard First Aid course will pay $20 for each course and purchase a textbook costing $7.50 for each course.

To reserve space in the class, call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

C.D. "Pat" Jones, 89, who lives on a ranch near Fluvanna with his wife, the former Odyne Beaver, 86, says he just plain doesn't feel good if he isn't working. "I don't sleep good at night or eat good if I'm not working," he said.

Since Jones continues to raise cattle on their ranch, he still pays his Social Security tax. From time to time, SS representatives come out and check on him. At such times, Mrs. Jones said, they have to convince them that her husband really is working on the ranch.

The Joneses still raise cattle and sorghum wheat.

Jones was born in Light on March 21, 1900.

Mrs. Jones was born near Temple in Coryell County and came to what was then known as Light (later named Fluvanna) when she was two years old. Her father bought land in the county with a house already constructed on it.

She said she remembers Snyder as the "windmill town" and she graduated from high school here in 1921. She attended Texas Christian University where she obtained a teaching certificate.

She obtained a teaching position in Brady, thinking at the time it would be her profession. She changed her mind, however, and came home to marry Pat, whom she had known all her life. She was 20 and he was 23 when they married on May 23, 1923. The couple celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary last year.

The Jones' brand, the 7J, was first used when Jones' father came to Scurry County in 1892.

The couple's grandson has the original 7J brand.

The Joneses decided to cut back on some of the work on their ranch when their only daughter, Patsy Fee, died in 1984. A memorial scholarship has been established at Western Texas

College in her name for any qualified girl who wants to study agriculture.

Mrs. Jones said that her daughter started to ride with her father at the age of three and that she knew all about cows. She later graduated from Tech in 1948 with a degree in animal husbandry.

Jones said that the land his father settled on is still in the family and will soon be 100 years old. Jones' father was raised in Alabama and came to Scurry County in 1892. He raised 13 children of which 12 married after they were grown.

Of those early days, Jones remembers that the mail hack delivered mail from Snyder to Light. It was also possible to purchase a seat on a hack.

Jones said that mail often came early in the day and people had time to write a reply and get it mailed in time for the return journey.

Phones were scarce and sometimes messages were sent over barbed wire. Once word reached them that a man was coming driving a herd of cattle. Another time they were told that a man was coming in an automobile. That was in 1912 when cars were first introduced to the county.

The Jones family got their first car three years later. At that time, the trip to Snyder took 1 1/2 hours and they had to follow wagon tracks since no roads existed.

In earlier memories, Jones recalled that Joe Merritt Sr., a singing teacher in 1908, would take out contracts for 20 days at a time to teach children how to sing gospel music.

Merritt often stayed with the Jones family, and it was "Pat" Jones' job to feed the teacher's horse everyday.

One day the teacher was plowing land with a team of horses when they were spooked by a rattlesnake. His hip was injured and he laid in bed for six months. Even though he had been injured, he still managed to fulfill his contract.

Singing was a popular pastime in those days, Jones said, and everyone liked Merritt so well that they called him "Uncle Joe."

During his family's first years in Scurry County, he said they lived in a dugout. His older brother was born there. In later years, the family bought a large home and moved it onto their ranch.

Jones said he always remembers people traveling through the county and stopping at his family's home. The Joneses agreed that in those days neighbors stayed in closer contact. See COUPLE, Page 2B

REMEMBER LIGHT—C. D. "Pat" Jones and his wife, Odyne, have lived in the Fluvanna area for many years. Jones' family came to Scurry County in 1892 and he was born in Light in 1900. Light later became Fluvanna. Mrs. Jones moved two Scurry County when she was two years old. Her grandfather, Dr. J. T. Jones, served as the doctor for Fluvanna for many years. He was not related to her husband. They are holding a picture of a 1908 singing school which appears elsewhere in this section. (SDN Staff Photo)

Couple shares memories of Light, Fluvanna

Jones attended two terms at the Light school. At first, the teacher taught classes in her home and Jones said all the students got to play with her baby. In 1908, the railroad came to the area, but missed Light, so the schoolhouse was moved to what is now called Fluvanna.

Since Fluvanna only had 10 grades in all, Jones graduated after his 15th birthday and immediately signed up to attend Trinity University in Waxahachie. He said he was homesick since that was his first time away from home and because of the school faculty and officials expected him to be just like his brother, Wallace, who had played football there.

"I wanted no part of it, so I went home. My dad and older brother met me at the train station and asked me if I wanted to go to a stock sale in Midland. I said 'yes,'" Jones said.

Jones continued to work on his family's stock farm for one year. When Fluvanna added the 11th grade, he went back to school, but he never received a diploma at graduation because he refused to study things like algebra.

He said his father put him back to work herding sheep, and from that time until now he has always worked on a ranch.

"My father told the three of us boys that if we stayed with the family ranch then we would all have it one day," Jones explained.

"The 1930s were hard on everyone but we all made it somehow," he said.

In 1939, Jones' father made good on his word. He took all the land in the family and placed it "in one pot" except for the 36 acres that Pat and Odnye had acquired and the 100 acres which belonged to Wallace Jones. The indebtedness was also divided among the three boys. The elder Jones kept three sections of land and some cattle for himself and the rest was split between his three sons. Wallace also operated a mercantile in Fluvanna.

Jones said he and his wife were diversified in that they not only raised cattle but they also farmed as well. Mrs. Jones often took a team of horses through the fields cultivating the land for

Mrs. Jones said they worked very hard to pay off their land's debt and in the long run "it was worth it."

Since cattle always have to be fed, Mrs. Jones remembers bagging cottonseed for them and sometimes burning prickly pears so they would have something to eat.

As a boy, Jones remembers that cattle had to be driven to Colorado City in order to sell them. The family always bought supplies after the sale and then returned home. When Fluvanna was founded and acquired a railroad station and stock pens, he said they took their cattle there.

The early day 50-mile trip to Colorado City for each cattle sale took three days in all, and along the way they camped out on the road, Jones said. On one return trip when he was seven, Jones said his father sent him and Wallace (who was 12) home alone and they rode the distance in one day.

As a boy growing up on the family's ranch, Jones remembers that lightning caused a lot of grass fires. To combat it, they would kill a large animal, split it open and then two cowboys would take an end and drag it through the fire.

Jones also recalled how his father told him stories of how a mountain lion was capable of jumping on the back of a horse and "biting a big chunk" out of it. He said that due to the water situation in Scurry County, the early settlers had to settle near water wells. He said he remembers lots of windmills.

In 1951, a road was built near the Jones' ranch and that made it easier for him and his wife to get around. Herds of deer can be seen on their ranch, Mrs. Jones said.

She said she is working on establishing a genealogical record of her husband's family. He said that his father was a friend of J. Wright Moar, who shot the white buffalo on Deep Creek.

Jones said he and his wife were diversified in that they not only raised cattle but they also farmed as well. Mrs. Jones often took a team of horses through the fields cultivating the land for SINGING SCHOOL—This singing school was conducted in Light (now called Fluvanna) in 1908. Joe Merritt Sr., teacher, often came to Light and other towns in the area, each time signing a 20 day contract to teach children how to sing. planting. In later years, after tractors were introduced, they purchased one. They raised wheat and oats in addition to cattle.

Jones said that before electricity they kept things cool with a cooler with water on top. They fed hogs and milked Jersey cows and took the cream to Fluvanna in containers. He said they went to market twice a week. In Fluvanna the cream was tested to determine its butterfat content which determined the amount of money they could get for their product. The cream was then shipped to Parsons, Kan.

Jones said he rode a horse on his ranch every day until "he couldn't ride anymore." Now when they want to inspect their land, they use a pickup. Recently, they wanted to herd some cattle so one drove while the other sprinkled seed from the pickup bed.

Years ago, Jones said they received "some oil money" and they invested in more cattle and land since a "cowboy never has enough cattle or land." They even purchased some land in Mexico, which they now lease.

"In the cattle business," Jones said, "you just try to take care of things as best as you can because the unexpected can always happen."

When the family land was split three ways, Jones said he and his wife started using the Lazy J brand. At one time, Jones remembers Fluvanna as consisting of a post office, about five churches, lumber yards, garages, gins and black smith shops, just to name a few.

Fluvanna once had a four-room, two-story schoolhouse which lasted until 1917. Then the first brick schoolhouse was built there.

From 1930-31, Fluvanna boasted some 300 students in its school. In 1942, Jones said the railroad left Fluvanna and the land was given back to its original owners, of which one was his father. Fluvanna had become a "boom" town when the railroad came in 1918.

Electricity was introduced in 1945.

Mrs. Jones said she grew up attending "snap parties" which involved playing a piano and singing, but no refreshments were served.

The Presbyterian Church also sponsored singing sessions once a week, but no dancing was allowed.

After Fluvanna was founded, it was decided to move the schoolhouse at Light to the new town. It took several teams of horses and a block and tackle which had to be refitted every few feet, he said. Later the building was added on to and it later became the Presbyterian Church.

Pocket cameras no match for the big bellows

MARION, Mass. (AP) — With their brass knobs and mahogany cases the cameras look like a display from a 19th century industrial show. And the simple shop where they are made could be the basement of a woodworking enthusiast.

But Ron Wisner considers his company a cutting-edge outfit which supplies equipment to commercial and landscape photographers.

Wisner spends his days with a dozen employees turning out the Wisner Technical Field camera, which folds to fit into a wooden briefcase and unfolds into a machine used to capture the finest of photographic details.

From Big Macs to Big Sur, Wisner cameras provide the clarity needed by advertisers and demanded by landscape photographers. Unlike standard 35mm cameras, a field camera with flexible accordion-like bellows can focus simultaneously on objects near and far. And the negatives produced by the big cameras are up to 50 times larger.

According to Wisner, an increasing number of photographers are turning to large-format bellows cameras.

"The amateur photographer looking for a good fine-arts image is becoming disenchanted with the 35mm because no matter what kinds of bells and whistles you put on there, your negative is still the size of a postage stamp," says Wisner, president of Wisner Classic Manufacturing Co. in this southeastern Massachusetts town.

Even so, the large format camera is a small part of the American market — only about 5,000 cameras sold per year. Wisner says he has one American competitor and about a half-dozen foreign makers, and only he knows his share of the market.

Wisner, 33, started making cameras in 1983, and reviews indicate he won't go out of business for a lack of reputation.

Writes View Camera Magazine: "... The only criticism leveled at this camera is that it is so beautifully made and the finish work is so well done that it might better be placed on the fireplace mantel as a piece of sculpture."

From A. J. Buhl, a photographer in St. Cloud, Minn.: "The Technical Field deserves a gold medal ... Every part fits precisely ... Every movement is smooth and precise."

Wisner made a run at manufacturing pipe organs before the recession of the early 1980s dried up business. He maintains the keen interest in precision and aesthetics customary among builders of fine musical instruments.

The materials are a pleasure to the eye and hand: Fine mahogany, brass knobs turned and polished on the premises and bellows made of ultra-thin kid leather lined with black silk.

Each camera, with lenses made abroad, undergoes a lengthy inspection. On a recent afternoon Wisner's inspectors routinely rejected several parts with seemingly minute flaws.

Quality doesn't come cheap. Wisner's smallest field camera goes for $1,395. There's a six-month wait.

One recent month, a single mega-project dominated production: A $14,000 jumbo camera commissioned by the University of Nevada-Las Vegas for a save-the-desert project. The camera is to take dramatic landscape photographs that university officials hope will convince the public that fragile environments such as Death Valley and the Mojave Desert must be protected from developers.

The camera is the size of a large television set. Its focus knobs are the size of golf balls. Wisner insists it remains "portable," able to be folded into a package of under 50 pounds.

A 35mm turns out a negative about 1½ inches square. Wisner's smallest field camera produces a 4-by-5 inch negative or 20 square inches. The University of Nevada camera will have a negative 20 by 24 inches, or 480 square inches.

"As far as we know it is the largest portable camera currently in production," Wisner says.

Today's hand tells a sad story. The players who held today's cards thought they were bidding in perfect harmony until the dummy came down. West led a club, and seven hearts was quickly down two. So what went wrong?

North and South were using key-card Blackwood, in which the king of trumps is counted as an ace. So there are five important cards to show rather than four. South thought he was showing two key cards, the A-K of hearts, when he bid five hearts. The partnership misunderstanding came about because North did not think that key-card Blackwood applied after this particular sequence. North continued with five no-trump, and South showed his one outside king. (He had already "shown" his heart king.) North decided that six no-trump was best and bid it. In the meantime South thought that partner had promised all the aces with his five no-trump call. So he bid seven hearts because he had a seven-card suit and felt lucky.

The moral is simple. Don't use super-scientific methods unless both you and your partner can handle the ramifications. West was the lucky one here. If he had not led a club, South could have made seven hearts by taking a spade finesse and then squeezing West in spades and diamonds.

WORKAHOLICS & JOB BURNOUT

Personal insecurity and fear of failure push rank and file workers, as well as housewives and executives, into becoming workaholics. Working too hard may eventually lead to job burnout. This involves the gradual depletion of energy, coping mechanisms, motivation, attitude, and behavior.

Workaholics have a neurotic relationship with their job. They always appear to be busy, but aren't always productive. This type of worker never goes into detail about their job to the supervisor or co-workers, making the workaholic feel indispensable.

Other traits common to workaholics include taking work home at night and on weekends, refusing to take a vacation, asking others to do extra work with them, taking most of the jobs out of fear that others might not meet their standards and writing memos compulsively.

Self-imposed demands made by workaholics or externally imposed ones made by family, employees and friends can, in excess, bring on an exhaustion which leads to job burnout.

The job-burnout victim is characterized by being cranky, critical, angry, resistant to change, or given to negative behavior.

Burnout is not a condition that gets better by being ignored, nor is it a disgrace. It is a condition borne from good intentions — goal achieving, maintaining busy schedules, demanding quality, implementing new projects and doing more than one's share.

Job burnout is reversible, but victims must monitor themselves and their behavior patterns. Workers should accept themselves for what they have accomplished, forgiving themselves for their mistakes. When life is taken too seriously, you reduce your chances of getting out of it alive.

Coupon clippers

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Many Americans clip coupons, and more than 180 billion coupons are expected to be offered to consumers this year by packaged-good companies.

One company, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., says it expects to redeem millions of coupons, using a highly sophisticated computer system to process the coupons. It says the system also checks for fraudulently redeemed coupons.

Plant right kind of bulbs
NEW YORK (AP) — Many a home gardener has planted bulbs in early spring, only to be disappointed by a lack of blooms in the summer.
That's because many novice gardeners don't know the difference between spring and summer-flowering bulbs, say horticultural experts at the Netherlands Flowerbulb Information Center here. Summer bloomers include certain lilies, anemone and gladioli. Begonias, calla lilies and tiger lilies will flower during July in most parts of the United States. Freesia, dahlias and summer hyacinths will flower from August until a hard frost.

DEVELOP LANDSCAPE TO CONSERVE WATER

With hot, dry weather looming ahead, homeowners and others involved in landscape development should focus on water conservation.

Water conservation can be practiced in all areas of landscape development and maintenance, including plant selection, irrigation practices and equipment, and soil preparations. These practices can be aesthetic as well as practical.

Homeowners can lower their landscape water usage in several ways.

—Using native and adapted plants. Native plants often thrive on existing growth conditions and reduce the need for extra irrigation. Many plants have been introduced that show adaptability to soil, rainfall and temperature conditions.

—Taking advantage of innovations in irrigation practices and equipment. The landscape irrigation business is experiencing a revolution with new timing devices, low pressure systems, drip irrigation and other highly specialized water devices focusing on more efficient water usage. Irrigation systems and small ponds and fountains also can effectively use water as an aesthetic addition to a landscape.

—Using mulches for insulation. By providing an insulating layer between the sun and soil, mulches prevent rapid drying and lower soil temperature in hot weather, which keeps the top soil from crusting or hardening. Low-cost materials such as hay, grass clippings, bark and pine needles are excellent for mulching and can add appeal with texture and color.

—Properly preparing the soil. When soil has been loosened and improved with plenty of organic material such as peat, pine bark or compost, it will hold significantly more moisture and release it over a longer period of time. However, organic materials break down over time and need to be supplemented. A compost pile can be a good source of these materials, allowing the homeowner to recycle leaves, grass clippings and other waste to improve the soil.

These are just a few practices that homeowners can use to significantly reduce water usage in their outdoor environment.

Revlon gives sterile samples

NEW YORK (AP) — Revlon has introduced sealed, individual samples to replace traditional tester units at its department-store cosmetics counters across the country.

The Color Try-ons are pats of color on paper topped with peel-off transparencies. Revlon says not only are they more hygienic than the counter testers, they may be sampled at home as well as at the store.

Available are a variety of powders, creme makeup, eyeshadows and blushers "in colors proven to be successful in the past," according to a company spokesman, adding that the line will be expanded later in the year.

Opposites don't always attract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Women are more likely to choose a man just like dear old dad than men are to select a mate like their moms.

The findings are part of a University of Southern California research study on romance.

"What people said about their opposite-sex parent closely paralleled their romantic partner's style," says Stephen Read, assistant professor of psychology at USC's College of Letters.

"If women described their dads as warm and responsive," Read reports, "their male partner was usually comfortable being close to others and depending on other people."

A man's relationship with his mother predicts slightly different characteristics in the mate of his choosing, Read says. For example, men who describe their mothers as warm and responsive are no more likely than other men to pick warm, responsive women. But they are less likely than other men to choose anxious, clingy women who are afraid of being abandoned.

The study, funded by a grant from the National Science Foundation, included 71 couples between the ages of 18 and 44 who had been dating an average of 18 months.

Polygamist led double life with his families

DALLAS (AP) — As a millionaire wholesaler and retailer, Harold E. "Jack" McCollum had a yen for travel but it wasn't always to manage his far-flung enterprises, according to authorities who claim he headed households in different cities.

More than two years after McCollum was slain on the banks of the Navasota River in East Texas, investigators are no closer to solving the crime. But they say the businessman had been married to at least four women at the same time.

Before his 1986 death, McCollum was leading a double life with marriages to Angeline McCollum of Dallas and Marguerite McCollum of Waco, and neither family knew about the other for 29 years, said Leon County Sheriff Royce Wilson.

"You would think, over those years, that there would be some medical problems — maybe the flu or a heart attack — that would cause somebody to suspect something, but there was none," Wilson said. "He just was marrying and getting divorces."

Investigators found evidence that McCollum had been married at least 10 times over a half-century, the sheriff said.

"We finally stopped counting then," said Wilson.

He said the 68-year-old businessman apparently juggled the different marriages by telling his families his enterprises forced him to travel constantly.

Robert McCollum, the businessman's brother and former partner who now runs his own Waco tire company, said he did not want to revive the controversy over the slaying.

"He was a great man, very intelligent, with high standards, outwardly," he said. "But he was a sick man — mentally sick. He had a quirk about him. Outside of that, he was normal."

Wilson said that until recently, investigators were still pursuing leads in the slaying.

"It came to a dead end," he said. "We worked on a little lead about three weeks ago. It's turned out to be nothing so far."

Wilson said Jack McCollum's slaying was unrelated to the June 1988 slayings of four people in Houston and Irving, including former members of a polygamist cult. Those killings prompted police to investigate the late Ervil LeBaron's sect.

"Back when this first happened, we got some information that there could be some connection with this (McCollum slaying) and this cult out of Utah," the sheriff said. "We talked to the district attorney and two or three deputies out there and determined there was not a connection."

"Then, when the LeBaron (sect) surfaced about six or eight months ago, Houston police talked to the same people we had talked to. And it got blown out of proportion. But there is no connection."

McCollum was last seen alive in Dallas shortly after noon on Oct. 16, 1986, when he parked his Lincoln and got into a pickup truck with two men.

About 5½ hours later, two passers-by who had stopped at a bridge 18 miles southwest of Centerville on U.S. Highway 79 spotted McCollum lying face down near the river.

By the time sheriff's officers and an ambulance arrived at the Leon County site, McCollum was dead of wounds from .22-caliber and .25-caliber guns. No weapons were ever recovered, said Wilson.

McCollum had no identification when he was found but personal effects were later recovered from his car in Dallas.

The sheriff said he believed financial troubles that began plaguing McCollum and his Waco-based Allied Tire Co. led to his death. In the mid-1980s, his tire stores began to close or be sold.

"I am almost positive that it (the slaying) was business-related," said Wilson. "We have had a suspect since day No. 4, I guess. But we have never been able to prove anything."

After discussions with 12th District Attorney David Barron about the case, Wilson said his office decided not to present the case to a grand jury.

"We talked it over with the DA and we could see no benefit from it," the sheriff said.

Deteriorating health also contributed to McCollum's business woes. Evidence of Alzheimer's disease was revealed by his autopsy, said Wilson.

"He was pretty shrewd. He was doing real well until he got so forgetful at his business," he said. "I talked to people who said he would sometimes go to his car (to drive it) and get in the back seat. He had a lot of problems like that."

Described as a loner, McCollum married Marguerite Wallace in Corsicana in 1935, moved to Huntsville three years later when he acquired a tire company and later decided to move the business to Waco. The couple raised four daughters.

At the last move in 1968, the couple had been married 33 years. But, unknown to Marguerite McCollum, the businessman had also been married for 11 years to Angeline McCollum.

Powers Boothe honored by SWT

SAN MARCOS—Emmy award-winning actor Powers Boothe was honored April 8 as the 56th recipient of the Distinguished Alumnus Award by Southwest Texas State University.

Boothe, of Culver City, Calif., who received an Emmy for best actor in "Guyana Tragedy: The Story of Jim Jones" received the prestigious award. Boothe received his award during the 12th annual Alumni Gala which was held at Strahan Coliseum on the SWT campus.

Receiving his award, Boothe said, "I wish there was some way I could give to this school and my class the things they have given me—things like friendship, love, honor and a great satisfaction in being a Texan."

Those are the things I take with me wherever I go in the world." Boothe, a native of Snyder, received a bachelor's degrees in theatre arts in 1970 and was honored with the SWT President's Excellence Award in 1981. Named New Star of the Year in 1981 by the National Association of Theatre Owners, Boothe's motion picture credits include "The Emerald Forest," "Extreme Prejudice," "Red Dawn," "Southern Comfort," and "A Breed Apart."

Boothe's television credits, in addition to the Jones role, include "Philip Marlowe, P. I.," "A Cry For Love," "The Plutonium Incident," and "Into The Homeland."

Woman's Way With Words Reaps Unwanted Attention

DEAR ABBY: After much deliberation, I have decided to write to you for help.

I was born in Rhode Island and lived there until a few years ago when I moved to Maryland. The problem: I have a "New England" accent, and am constantly coming into contact with people who bring it up. It's one thing to comment on an accent and quite another to degrade it.

I work in a personnel office and must talk to many people. I cannot tell you what I go through! One person—an applicant from Guam—has called several times. The last time he asked to speak to the lady with the "foreign accent!"

One lady asked me where I was from because, she said, "It is obvious that you are not an American."

I have an accent. There is no doubt about that. I will go so far as to say that some people do not find a Midwestern accent very pleasant, but to call attention to it is rude.

One man asked me where I was from, and when I said, "Rhode Island," he said, "Too bad." Nothing else.

We now have another woman in our office who has an accent. She's from Alabama. Although she has not been called a foreigner, she has been told that she talks funny.

Please give me a snappy retort that will put these rude people in their place. Thank you.

A "FOREIGNER" FROM RHODE ISLAND

DEAR "FOREIGNER": You don't need a snappy retort. You need to change your attitude. When people comment about your accent, don't take it as a putdown. They are probably just being friendly and trying to engage you in conversation. However, if it really bothers you, enroll in a speech class.

Social Security tax and income tax on their earnings, if the parent who employs them chooses to claim a Child Care Credit on her tax return. Why? Because in order to claim the Child Care Credit, the parent must fill out a "Form W-10 Dependent Care Provider's Identification and Certification," which lists the baby sitter's name, address and Social Security number.

If the parent decides to claim the Child Care Credit, the baby sitter's pay should be increased enough to cover the resulting taxes (at least 32 percent) when federal, state and Social Security taxes are figured in.

When you consider that the Child Care Credit is only 20 percent to 30 percent (depending on your income) of the amount actually paid out for child care, wouldn't it be less expensive for everyone if the parent decided not to claim that credit?

A KENTUCKY TAXPAYER

DEAR TAXPAYER: Yes. And when many mothers on limited incomes realize that they will probably forgo the "credit." Thanks for pointing it out.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice about washing hands after going to the bathroom was all wrong. It's more important to scrub them BEFORE.

Better yet, both before and after, but especially before. Your genitals may be the cleanest part of your body bacteriologically; your hands are the dirtiest.

When I was a straphanger commuter in New York City, the first thing I did after arriving to my office was to scrub away other people's germs.

MILLER SWANEY, SPRING HILL, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and her husband have come to visit for two weeks. They live in a distant state and have been married for two years.

They have been here for five days. During this time, my daughter has gone out with a former boyfriend three evenings—once from 9 p.m. until 4 a.m., the next two times from about 3 p.m. until 1 a.m.

My son-in-law is aware of this and doesn't seem troubled by it, which leads me to believe that they have some kind of an arrangement. He has also gone out—I don't know where or with whom, but he always gets in early.

I recognize that they are adults, but it bothers me. I can't stop my daughter from "seeing" anyone, but this doesn't seem proper, and I wonder what my legitimate rights are. Is it reasonable to expect her not to spend most of her time with an old boyfriend?

Perhaps they are just friends, but even if that's the case, it seems that she came here for room and board, brought her husband along for the trip, and she's doing what she wants to do—which is seeing her old boyfriend.

Should I speak to her about it? I don't want to jeopardize our relationship. Am I being an old-fashioned mother? Should I just keep quiet and stay out of it? What do other mothers of adult children do in a case like this? Am I reacting normally?

UNEASY MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You are reacting normally. Since you resent your daughter's using your home for room and board while she's spending most of her time seeing her old boyfriend, you have every right to speak to her about it. You are not "old-fashioned"—your daughter's behavior is inappropriate for a married woman.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question I hope you can answer. Unfortunately, two of the people my husband worked with, and the spouse of another co-worker, suddenly died in the last six months.

I did not attend any of their funerals because although I knew who they were, none of them were personal friends of mine. Also, I have a job, and I would have to justify missing work to attend these funerals.

My husband thought I should have gone to those funerals with him. Abby, what is the proper procedure on this? I'm sure other people would also like to know, but if you use this in your column, please don't use my name or location. Sign me...

NEEDS TO KNOW

DEAR NEEDS: Did your husband leave the decision up to you at the time of the funerals? Or did he ask you to accompany him?

If he asked you to accompany him, I think you should have been by his side whether or not his co-workers were personal friends of yours.

Also, in my view, accompanying one's spouse to a funeral is legitimate justification for missing work.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote: "Confidential to all brides-to-be: Break in your wedding slippers before your wedding day. You'll be glad you did. Trust me!"

Abby, what kind of advice is that coming from a well-respected advice columnist? Premarital sex is done every day, but it should not be encouraged. Men still want a pure virgin when they marry for the first time.

You really shocked me. Where are you coming from, Abby?

CARL FROST, SACRAMENTO, CALIF.

DEAR CARL: My "confidential" message to all brides meant exactly what I intended it to mean: Brand-new shoes, when worn for the first time, tend to hurt the feet of the wearer, so I recommended that all brides "break in" (wear) their wedding slippers before their wedding day in order to avoid the pain and discomfort one could conceivably suffer from breaking in a brand-new pair of shoes.

Where are you coming from, Carl?

Occult religions muddled on drug scene in Mexico

NEW YORK (AP) — Violence and human sacrifice among believers in occult religions usually involve a mixture of pantheistic beliefs that often are distortions of ancient rituals. That kind of mingling and twisting of strange, heterodox ideas and practices seemed apparent in the gruesome killings of at least 13 people near Matamoros, Mexico, across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas.

There were hints of assorted primitive religions and superstitions, perhaps stemming from traditions such as these, or aberrations of them:

—Satanism is characterized by its antagonism toward the Christian deity and worship of the adversary, Satan. Devotees consider him a supreme being of evil, rivaling God.

Their rites consist of mockery or perversion of Christian ritual, sometimes called the Black Mass at which Satan is believed to preside. Ritual killings sometimes have been associated with the cult.

It also has been linked to assorted sexual, sado-masochistic and psychopathic activities, including grave robberies and blood-letting, both animal and human.

Experts discount Santeria and other religions in suspected cult slayings

MIAMI (AP) — A man suspected of leading a cult that performed human sacrifices on a Mexican ranch was exposed to secretive Afro-Caribbean religions that ritually slaughter animals and rely on magic.

But a Santeria priest and others familiar with the practices of Santeria, voodoo and other obscure religions likened the Mexican drug-smuggling cult more to the mass suicide in Jonestown led by Jim Jones.

At least 13 bodies have been found this week in shallow graves in Matamoros, Mexico. Suspects in the slayings have said they killed at the demand of Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, whom they called "godfather."

They said Constanzo, 26, and Sara Maria Aldrete, 24, called the "witch," believed human sacrifices gave the members of cult protection from harm and helped them in a drug-smuggling operation.

Constanzo, a Cuban-American who grew up in suburban Miami, is still being sought.

"He's had some sort of exposure to Santeria, I wouldn't deny that, but I wouldn't say he's a Santeria priest," said Willie Ramos of Miami, a Santeria high priest.

Santeria is a largely underground religion that melded the beliefs of slaves from present-day Nigeria with Hispanic culture in the Caribbean and parts of South America.

"Let's compare it to Jonestown in the sense that the guy in Jonestown was deranged and demented. He got all these people to follow him to the extent that he got these people killed," Ramos said.

Human sacrifice has never been practiced "in the approximately 400 years that the Afro-Caribbean cults have survived in the New World," he said.

Mercedes Sandoval, a professor at Miami-Dade Community College who has studied Santeria for nearly 40 years, said religious beliefs could not be blamed for the slayings.

"It was not the religion that got them into drugs. It was the drug dealing that led them to try to get protection through religion," Ms. Sandoval said.

Dr. Charles Wetli, Dade County deputy chief medical examiner who has studied the religions for a decade as part of his work, agreed with Ms. Sandoval.

"The drug-smuggling activities and the homicides are totally unrelated to the religion," Wetli said. "If you're a drug smuggler, you can pray to some of these gods to help you with your drug smuggling."

Blood from Santeria animal sacrifices can form an alliance with gods of nature and protect the believers, a reason offered by Mexican authorities as a motive for the killings at the ranch across the border from Brownsville, Texas, Ms. Sandoval said.

Constanzo "probably was seeking assistance from magical systems to get protection, and then he himself developed his own ritual."

Ms. Sandoval estimated as many as 25,000 people in south Florida are regular Santeria followers, and they also can be found in New York, New Jersey, California, Venezuela, Colombia and Spain.

Constanzo's family, which lived in a middle-class neighborhood west of Miami until 1984, left headless chickens, geese and goats — animals used in Santeria rituals — on doorsteps and street corners, said neighbors.

Journalists new to the "bidness" are often self-conscious about referring to someone by their last name only in the story's second reference.

Our tenure dates to the days when only men received the last name treatment. Women had to be referred to as "Miss" or "Mrs." once you'd introduced them into the copy.

As might be expected, this approach pre-dates the third appellation created for those of the female persuasion, the statement-making "Ms."

With this addition, you not only had to timidly inquire if this female stranger had ever mated, you also had to broach her gender politics. In truth, a bunch of reporters simply fudged, and used the catchall "Ms.," which by its definition covers all of the bases.

We suspect it was this third option which finally caused men and women to be grouped into the same word-boat when it came to the second reference.

Newspapers across the nation decided if equality was truly sought, it might as well begin on their pages. On second reference, it was your last name only and you'd better darn-well like it.

Suddenly, gray-haired grandmothers who had saved their grandchild from drowning in the city lake lost the "courtesy title" of Mrs. Jones. To the newly hard-boiled journalist of the mid-70s onward, they were strictly and succinctly "Jones."

The business of attribution has taken on other changes since we first tread the path of the inked-stained wretches. Used to, as we say in West Texas, you not only had to find out the correct spelling of their name and if they were a "Miss" or "Mrs.," you also had to interrogate them for their age.

Fail to do so, and your editor might just drop your copy back onto your desk and tell you to get the information you were hired to get.

If you think asking some complete stranger to reveal their birthdate is embarrassing the first time you talk with them, try it on a call back for a real thrill.

Another word to the fledgling reporter of that day, it was best to find out this poop early in the conversation, because you might have to ask something later which would create a total break-down in communication.

Now it seems George Bush's call for a "kinder, gentler" nation is having a trickle down effect in news rooms.

Results were released this week of a poll taken by a newspaper group based in Richmond, Va., Media General Inc., which finds that 61 percent of those surveyed believe men and women should be given a "courtesy title" when referred to the second time in a news story.

Readers of the Dallas Morning News are seeing it already. In March, this statewide publication changed its policy and now includes "Mr."s and "Mrs."s and "Miss" and "Ms."s all over the place.

We would note it seems a news directive doomed to fail whenever approached in a black and white interpretation.

Along with the minefields we've noted already, consider this story.

"Renaldo (Shadetree) Philbin, local chapter president of Pedophiles Inc., was arrested by sheriffs deputies today and charged with multiple counts of cruelty to animals, violation of child pornography laws, driving while under the influence, delivery of a controlled substance to a minor and failing to stop and render aid, charges stemming from a hit and run incident involving a troop of Girl Scouts.

"He was discovered by officers hiding in a local day care center, attempting to disguise himself as a two-year-old by crawling on his hands and knees, wearing only a baby bonnet and an extra large Pampers diaper.

"At his arrest, Mr. Philbin commented..."

Columns-Cartoons-Look Back-Letters-Quotables

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

I don't know, is it me, or is everybody a little bit cranky and out of sorts these days? I think it's the time of year.

If you've ever taught school, been married to a teacher, or had school-age kids, then the word "year" ceases to mean "January through December," and comes to mean, "September through May." The end of the year, then, is April and May, not November and December. (That's the middle of the year. Hump months.)

Summer is an aberration that doesn't really fit into the "year." It's supposed to be a vacation, but that's only a myth. Most people work harder in the summer than any other time, especially country folks. It seems that every house, barn, fence, and pen needs some kind of repairs made. But that's another column.

By this time of the year, you've passed the last special kid-type holiday, Easter, which includes the last school break. After that, there's nothing left to look forward to but summer, which yawns at the end of this long, dark tunnel filled with school projects, papers, and exams.

Even worse, they go and change the stupid time on you. So you go to bed wide-eyed, staring at the clock and thinking about what time it REALLY is as opposed to what time it IS. Next morning it takes a winch and a tow truck to get you out of bed because it's REALLY too damn early to live.

And allergies. God spare us from allergies. The wind blows. The house is full of dust. You grope your way from Kleenex box to Kleenex box until EMERGENCY! You run out and have to resort to toilet paper. You feel dragged out and druggy and that's BEFORE you take your antihistamine.

It's the end of the year, I tell you.

I don't know about you guys, but for some reason, I'm always overscheduled during the spring. Last fall I didn't have a dingdang darn thing to do but research my new book and toy around with plot ideas and rent videos and feel guilty for being such a lazy butt.

Now I'm under deadline for revisions on the first book, am smack in the middle of writing the second, am taking two classes in criminal justice at the college (one of which involves a mock murder trial to be held at the courthouse with students playing all the parts, and guess who volunteered to be the prosecutor, like she didn't have anything better to do), am helping out with the annual Noah Project fundraiser, and am trying to keep all my kids' end-of-year school projects in mind. Or what's left of it.

Even more horrifying is the realization that, on account of all the aforementioned, I'm not going to finish "Spellbound" and am going to have to — HELP ME! — write it during the summer when the KIDS ARE AT HOME! (Remember the song, "Nineteenth Nervous Breakdown"? Yeah, Mick Jagger had me in mind for that one.)

We've gotta start thinking about getting those horses ready for showing this spring and summer. Ri-i-ight.

So around our house, what happens is, everybody gets tired and rushed and cranky, so what do we do about it? We sit around in front of the TV all weekend like pampered royalty, talking about all the things we should be doing. Trying to remember to use our Kleenexes twice. Eating too much and whining about getting fat. Picking fights with each other. Discussing all the things we're going to get accomplished...this summer.

THE GARBAGE DISPOSAL

It's the end of the year, I tell you.

SUNDAY

April 9

District Judge Gene Dulaney and the new county auditor he appointed this past Jan. 1, Linda Franklin, are defendants in a federal court suit filed by former County Auditor Bernhard Bartels and his former deputy, Ann Walton, it was reported Sunday.

The plaintiffs allege that the method by which Bartels and, as a result, Walton were replaced was in violation of their individual constitutional rights.

Snyder High School was declared the winner of the District 4-4A UIL Literary Meet by unanimous vote of the district executive committee, it was reported Sunday.

The committee, comprised of superintendents from the eight schools, agreed that points awarded at the meet in connection with the one-act play competition did not follow UIL rules.

Snyder High School's "Blood Wedding" and Levelland High School's "Threads" were chosen to advance from the area one-act play contest held in Worsham Auditorium, it was reported Sunday.

In addition, SHS students Robert Neblett and Kristi Mize were chosen best actor and best actress of the competition.

A total of 61 students from Snyder Junior High and local sixth grades placed at a UIL literary meet involving Snyder, Lamesa and Big Spring, it was reported Sunday.

This included 14 winning first; 16 winning second; 10 winning third; nine winning fourth; seven winning fifth; and five winning sixth.

MONDAY

April 10

Scurry County commissioners Monday agreed to pay another $7,286 for the county's share of two bridge renovation projects to be performed by the state.

The funds will help pay engineering costs which were higher than expected.

A Western Texas College trustee Monday told his fellow board members he believes the time has come to seriously consider a one-year phase out of the basketball and golf programs at the college.

In making his proposal, however, trustee Roy Baze met resistance from at least three other board members, to include trustee Bob Hargrove, who called the athletic programs the "vim and vitality" of the college.

Trustees gave a go-ahead Monday to an expanded facility for the Western Texas College art department, the erection of a "ceramic foundry structure" to be attached at the southeast corner of the Fine Arts Building.

WEDNESDAY

April 12

Combined bank deposits again surpassed the $200 million mark in Snyder, based on first-quarter figures reported by four of five financial institutions here, it was reported Wednesday.

Total deposits at three banks and one savings and loan association were $203.3 million compared to year-end totals of $199.3 — an increase of $4 million. Compared to the first quarter of 1988, deposits declined $3.2 million.

The Texas Department of Corrections Wednesday announced that Leslie Woods, 36, assistant warden at the Coffield unit in Anderson County, would be warden of the Price Daniel unit in Snyder.

Announcement of the promotion was made by Andy Collins, deputy director for operations. A 16-year veteran of the TDC, Woods has been assistant warden at Coffield since January of 1984.

Snyder High School choir students who attended last Thursday's UIL competition in Abilene were scheduled to line up Wednesday morning for measles shots.

No cases of measles have been reported among local high school students, but health officials say the choir may have been exposed at the contest due to two confirmed cases among Cooper High School students in Abilene.

THURSDAY

April 13

The monthly sales tax return for Snyder during February took a tumble when compared to last year, a drop in part credited to the extra day in February of 1988 due to leap year, it was reported Thursday.

The monthly comparison waned by 27.6 percent, but the year-to-date cumulative total still remained on the positive side.

With a total sales tax income through February of $245,159, Snyder is managing to stay 1.6 percent above last year's figure at this time.

After reporting unemployment estimates here at 8.9 percent for January, the Texas Employment Commission (TEC) downgraded this figure to 6 percent for the month of February, it was reported Thursday.

The primary change involved the number of persons said "actively seeking employment" through the TEC.

FRIDAY

April 14

Area supporters of reforming state workman's compensation laws are going to Austin Monday to prepare for a Tuesday rally in support of House reform legislation that appears to be in danger of being de-railed in the Texas Senate, it was reported Friday.

Chamber of Commerce executive director Bill Moss and Tri-State Construction Co. owner Dan Hicks are two of the leaders in organizing a local contingent, and Moss said a large group from the Snyder area is hoped for.

SDN Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

My heart goes out to the Pointeaus. The image that all people throughout the world have of the United States of America as the land of opportunity has, in their case, been shattered. After eight years of hard work establishing themselves as worthy people, they are now being told they are no longer desired here.

To say there can be no exception to INS rules is stupid, because many other cases, based on their merit, have been reversed. This case seems to have all that is necessary to do just that.

Let's give the Pointeau family the same opportunity as the millions of other hard-working, self-reliant aliens have been given over all the years. Are we Americans not aliens from other countries throughout the world?

Only the Indian can lay claim to being a native of this great country. What makes our beloved America so great is its diversity of races. Each has brought their customs, religions and hopes and dreams for a better life, free of dictatorships, oppression or hunger.

Come on INS, let's not deny this family's dreams of a better life here with us, but instead say to them, "In eight years you have proved yourself worthy of being an 'American'."

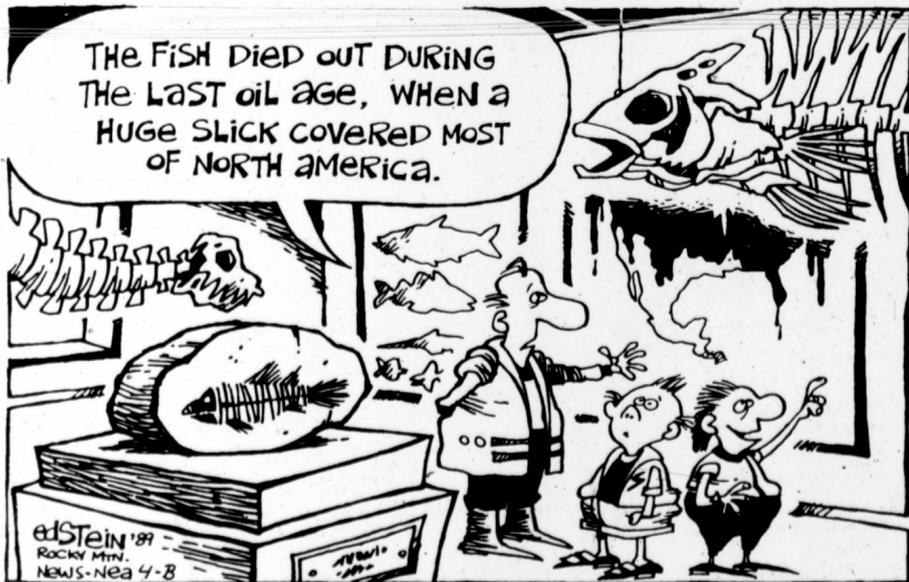

To the Pointeaus I say, "You're my kind of people, may God assist you in this battle."

To the INS I say, "Shame on you."

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband is 47. About a year ago he fell on the ice and hurt his ribs. About once a month since then, his vision starts to "pulse" and afterward he gets a terrible headache. These attacks are coming more frequently and I'm worried. What should we do?

DEAR READER: From your description, I assume that your husband did not injure his head during the accident. This distinction is important because concussion (brain bruising) can cause headache and visual difficulties lasting many months.

If your husband simply injured his ribs, he will have to find another explanation for his symptoms. Common possibilities include hypertension and migraine. He should be examined by a neurologist, a specialist in headaches, to establish a diagnosis so that treatment can be started.

DEAR DR. GOTT: The glands in my armpits and neck have been swollen for about 15 years and I'm always fighting anemia. I've always felt I had Hodgkinson's disease but the doctors just feel the glands and send me home.

DEAR READER: Hodgkinson's disease and other forms of lymphoma (cancer of the lymph glands) are often chronic and associated with anemia. The diagnosis can be established by blood tests and a biopsy of one of the glands. Also, a 15-year survival for untreated lymphoma would be exceedingly unusual.

Although lymphadenopathy (lymph gland swelling) does not ordinarily indicate a serious condition, you are correct in being concerned. I am sure you would feel more comfortable knowing the cause of your symptoms.

Therefore, I recommend that you ask your doctor to refer you to an internist for a second opinion. Such a specialist should be able to clear up the matter by examining and testing you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has all of a sudden expressed a desire to wear women's panties as a sexual gratification when making love. We are in our late 20s. What are your thoughts on this?

DEAR READER: I'd say that your husband has a problem but without more information I cannot judge how serious a problem. Fetishes (inanimate objects that arouse erotic feelings) can be trivial or may indicate deep-seated emotional disturbances.

However, a little harmless kinky sex can add a lot of spice to a marriage. If your husband is showing no other compulsion to cross-dress and if he seems otherwise normal, I think it's OK to ignore his peculiarity. However, if the situation progresses to the point where his behavior turns more eccentric — if, for example, he demands sex that you find too rough or off-the-wall — you may need to get some professional help. Your doctor can advise you, or you may feel more comfortable seeking counseling to enable you to maintain an appropriate balance in your life.

To a large degree, what is "normal" or "abnormal" in sex is a matter of taste and preference. I draw the line when sexual behavior becomes unpleasant, uncomfortable or dangerous to the partner.

As sexual deviations go, this is mild — but it is a deviation nonetheless.

For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Help II — Mental/Substance Abuse." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

Some doctors are getting so uppity and paranoid that they are refusing to train residents. In Indiana, a few dermatologists, pediatricians and obstetricians won't share their skills with family-practice residents because the established practitioners are afraid the young M.D.s, after completing their residency program, will steal business from them. These specialists are not eager "to train their competition. But if you call them up and ask for an appointment, you can't get one for three or four weeks," said Dr. Dick Juergens, associate director of the Fort Wayne Medical Education Program.

According to an article in the magazine Medical World News, this turf war is not confined to Indiana. Dr. Jane Murray, director of Education for the American Academy of Family Physicians, noted that family practice residents "have had problems with dermatologists for years."

Although this attempted freeze-out is by no means universal, it has become a problem in communities where teaching specialists either are part-time, or supplement their academic incomes with fees from private patients. Spokesmen for the American Academy of Dermatology, the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists insist that their organizations support the medical education of doctors-in-training.

who will eventually practice in other specialties. However, the maverick M.D.s continue their lock-out, despite being labeled "anti-professional." Evidently, the threat of losing a buck or two effectively neutralizes the medical ethic of cooperation. These characters want an unregulated monopoly.

This phenomenon (and others like it) seems on the way to becoming almost respectable, as physicians and surgeons yearn to limit access to their own specialties and communities. I call this syndrome "Doctors on the Make": practitioners subordinate the orthodox ideals of healing and serving to the more pragmatic realities of attracting patients and making money. They strive to move into the Porsche proletariat and the BMW bourgeoisie.

On a much smaller scale, this attitude bears a striking resemblance to the feeding frenzy now taking place in the business world of corporate takeovers. Like leveraged buyouts that bring millions in profits to inside players and no foreseeable benefit to the community, medical monopolies eventually worsen patient care and erode doctors' images.

Public opinion polls suggest a growing consumer rebellion against corporate greed; legislators are looking at ways to plug tax loopholes favoring buyout binges that incur astronomical debt. The dealmakers may have finally exceeded the typically American maxim of "nothing in moderation."

Customarily, experienced healers have felt an obligation to pass along their talents to new, younger practitioners. To be a doctor is to teach; teaching provides the foundation for a healthy profession.

Issues of instruction aside, can we tolerate fat-cat doctors who are rapacious consumers of patients — and of each other? Are we hell-bent to sacrifice harmony for hegemony? Are doctors institutionalizing a lack of commitment to caring? Can we police ourselves or are we going to evade this responsibility? Will we continue abdicating control to government agencies?

These are questions that we, as a profession, have to answer. And answer fast, before our avarice invites more government intervention, on top of the intolerable regulatory burdens we are already experiencing.

Fraternity president says facts not an issue in ruling

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The president of a Trinity University fraternity said he is disappointed with the school's decision for probation because the decision was made before the facts were presented.

Peter Strudivant of the Triniteers fraternity said the atmosphere on campus may have forced Dean of Students-Coleen Grissom to react to the incident in a different way.

"I think the decision was not made in response to our specific incident, but the public outcry of racism on our campus," Strudivant said. "It became the kind of thing where she (Ms. Grissom) was put in a hard place as an administrator and she acted not so much to save Trinity, but to make it look better."

The Triniteers social fraternity was placed on a year's probation yesterday, ordered to sponsor a workshop on racism and required to have members each perform 25 hours community work for violating the school's hazing policy.

The 36-member fraternity, founded in 1936, is being punished for asking a Jewish pledge to dress in a Nazi uniform and parade through a campus cafeteria.

Ms. Grissom issued a list of sanctions against the fraternity, as well as a position statement on fraternities, sororities and racism.

"After careful reflection, I am convinced that the Triniteers, in the incident involving Andrew Ellenthal's wearing of a Nazi uniform, violated the Trinity University Hazing Policy," Ms. Grissom said in a prepared statement.

"While Mr. Ellenthal claims that he did not resist the wearing of the uniform, and, in fact, asserts that the selection of a Nazi uniform was partially his idea, my judgment is that, within the context of pledging, such claims and assertions are suspect."

Strudivant said that the wearing of any uniform or costume does not violate the hazing policy at Trinity. "Even after the state law was passed (in 1987), we continued to do it; and had it approved."

Ms. Grissom said she believed Ellenthal was pressured "to don a uniform which was demeaning, humiliating, that adversely affected his dignity."

About 150 students rallied at the campus yesterday in support of "anti-racism."

"If I ever wanted an excuse to stamp out fraternities and sororities at Trinity University, I have it now," Ms. Grissom wrote. "And, I don't even have to do it myself: I can simply ask any faculty colleague to bring the issue to a vote of the faculty and ask Ben Hughes (president of the student body) to conduct a referendum of the student body. I am not positive ... but I would wager that both votes would be: Greeks, Go."

Strudivant agreed: "The way things are right now, I couldn't disagree."

Ms. Grissom ordered the Triniteers on probation through May 15, 1990, restricting them recruiting or accepting new members, but allowing them to continue participating in the Inter-Fraternity Council, hold meetings, participate in intramurals and sponsor social events.

But the Triniteers also must work with Ms. Grissom to arrange "an intergroup training workshop" targeted at fraternities and sororities and scheduled for mid-November. Each member of the Triniteers must attend the workshop and the organization must pay for it, including publicizing and promoting the event.

Once again, the support from the Snyder area for the Girl Scout program has been overwhelming! We have just finished our 1989 cookie sale, and once again the community has helped us exceed our goal. Now, even more opportunities will be offered to girls.

Girl Scouting is the largest organization in this country for women. It represents a world of opportunity and a vast array of experience for each person involved. It's young women making choices. It's girls growing up — learning to be leaders as they enter the 21st century. It's little girls learning the importance of developing values and a sense of self-worth as they interact with their peers. Cookies help make these opportunities happen.

All proceeds from the Girl Scout cookies sold in our area stay in our area. Our Council uses the money to purchase equipment, maintain camp, and provide camperships and special program opportunities for our girls.

Individual Girl Scout troops keep a certain portion of the proceeds and decide themselves how to spend the money they have earned. The money will be spent on activities ranging from community service projects to visiting the Ramses exhibit in Dallas.

For Girl Scouts, the cookie sale is a very special learning experience. Participating in the sale teaches girls about business and how to meet the public. It builds their self-confidence. On behalf of the West Texas Girl Scout Council, I thank you — the community — who continually supports the Girl Scout program and makes it successful. You make Girl Scouting what it is today!

Commissioner says...

No special treatment allowed

AUSTIN (AP) — A state parks and wildlife commissioner, referring to recent reports of possible politics and favoritism in wild game stockings, told his members yesterday to follow rules on stocking.

"I think there have been some exceptions to those procedures that have caused us to get in the newspaper some," said Bob Armstrong, a member of the commission that oversees the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"And I would urge ... the staff to feel free to follow these procedures, and that you don't need to deviate from them, no matter who asks," Armstrong said during a commission meeting.

News reports have focused since February on wild game stockings on the property of public officials and their relatives, and on land owned by Wildlife Commission Chairman Chuck Nash.

The department has said Nash, whose ranch was stocked with quail, received no special treatment.

Since the reports began, Texas Wildlife Director Charles Allen, who had been involved in the stockings, was fired and faces criminal indictments in New Mexico involving the trapping of pronghorn antelope.

Allen has said he is innocent of illegally trapping the antelope and said he would "take the necessary steps to prove that."

Some of numerous stockings under question include:

- Six elk placed at state expense on the ranch of Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, despite objections by wildlife employees that the ranch lacked proper habitat. Lewis also had deer, fish and antelope stocked.

- Allen taking an all-expenses paid trip to Greece with the operators of the Lado Ranch in West Texas four months prior to the stocking there of 40 antelope.

- Allen guiding two Wildlife Commission members on turkey hunts at a private exotic game ranch near Austin, then later ordering that ranch stocked with 41 turkeys because it "didn't have but just a very few birds."

— University of Texas regent Louis Beercherl getting antelope stocked on his ranch, over objections that the habitat was not conducive. Six weeks later, 39 of the 40 antelope had died of starvation.

Nash said the commission would "take all due diligence and look at everything" involved. He also told department executive director Charles D. Travis, who approves stockings, to examine all future stocking proposals.

"What with all the attention this has been given, in the next 10 years I don't think anybody's going to deviate from anything," Nash said.

Nash told Matlock to investigate what would happen if the department stopped private stockings completely.

Cold fusion may be profitable

NEW YORK (AP) — Traditional academic openness is going by the boards in the race to understand cold nuclear fusion as scholars withhold findings that could make them big money.

A broad patent on cold nuclear fusion could be worth billions if the invention turns out to provide a new way of producing cheap, clean and abundant energy.

But money's lure is inhibiting exploration of cold fusion claims by making researchers withhold information to protect their patent positions, lawyers and scholars said Thursday.

"There is absolutely no doubt in my mind that once you dangle out that pot of gold called a patent it causes people to publish less and disclose less," said Donald Chisum, a patent expert at the University of Washington.

Scientists trying to test the cold fusion claims announced at a press conference last month have been stymied because the two researchers have withheld important details of their work.

The University of Utah applied for three patents even before the March 23 news conference featuring its own B. Stanley Pons and his co-investigator, Martin Fleischmann of the University of Southampton in England.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology said this week it has applied for patents on work done by researcher Peter Hagestein.

Brigham Young University plans to apply for patents as well, although mainly to establish the credibility of its researcher, Steven Jones, rather than to make money, school spokesman Paul Richards said.

Pons and Fleischmann announced they had achieved fusion using ordinary laboratory equipment at room temperature — so-called cold fusion. They said their device produced four watts of energy for every watt it used.

Previously, it was believed that fusion would have to take place at extremely high temperatures. The announcement stunned scientists worldwide who had worked for years to achieve fusion.

Widespread skepticism about their findings has continued despite partial confirmation by other researchers. Still, the stakes are so high that virtually every major chemical research laboratory is believed to be looking into it.

"It's almost unknowable, unthinkable how much it would be worth," said John Bockris, a chemistry professor at Texas A&M.

Bockris also said he was upset by the way the focus on patents had disrupted the normal scientific disclosure process.

Patent lawyers usually advise clients to file for patents before they disclose anything publicly. Secrecy helps even after a patent application is filed because it gives the inventors time to modify their application with new findings or to file for more patents.

President grateful for loan

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (AP) — President Carlos Salinas de Gortari said a $3.65 billion loan granted this week from the International Monetary Fund will help the country get back on track after years of economic crisis.
 "We are on the right road and there's no turning back," the president told about 2,000 members of the construction industry Thursday during a whirlwind tour of the western state of Jalisco.

"Mexico's agreement the International Monetary Fund is that of a sovereign country; it is a solution that gets at the bottom of a very damaging problem in our country."
 "It is a very important advancement and it also is morally right," Salinas added.

Mexican Treasury Secretary Pedro Aspe announced the agreement Tuesday.
 Top Mexican officials have said that U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady's Third World debt reduction plan speeded negotiation.

Brady's plan asks lenders to voluntarily forgive part of the debt owned by borrower nations in hopes of easing the Third World's $1.32 trillion foreign debt.

Salinas wants to reduce the burden of Mexico's $107.4 billion foreign debt and keep more money inside the country for economic investment.

Mexicans have seen their standard of living decline by 50 percent during the last seven years, and Salinas is under political and social pressure to reverse that course and renew growth.

The $3.65 billion loan will be used to bolster Mexico's foreign exchange reserves and spur economic development. About one-third of loan proceeds will be used to support Mexico's debt-reduction proposals to the banks, Mexican officials say.

Together with other short-term credits Mexico is seeking from the fund, the World Bank and other sources, Mexico will devote about $500 million annually to debt reduction, according to the officials.
