Soldiers Who Fight Fire

"The loss by fire of a factory or of materials in storage, whether finished or waiting manufacture, is a loss to the defense operations in which this country is engaged," said Robert P. Barbour, president of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, recently. "Even the burning of a home contributes to such a loss. Prevention of fire waste is always a defense of our national well-being, for it is a waste of resources of the nation, that it needless."

Those who are fighting fire today are enlisted in the nation's defense. And they have enlisted for the duration. They are working to make our navy yards and military posts safe from fire. They are ferreting out the arsonist and the saboteur. They are making plans for defending our industrial establishments, our cities and our homes against fire. And thus they are building America's defenses.

They deserve and must have the full cooperation of all. This is a work in which every man, woman and child can and should help in their own homes and places of business.

Time For Reading

Trying to keep in touch with what's going on in the world today is a full-time job. By quickly scanning a newspaper every day or listening to radio flashes, and reviewing the week's news in a news magazine, you can have a fairly good knowledge of what's what in national and international news. But to do that, even hastily, takes approximately 14 of the 168 hours a week.

In addition, we want to keep in touch with what is going on in our home town. To do that, most of us spend at least three hours reading our local newspaper.

Besides current news, most of us want to keep in touch with what's happened in the worlds of science, philosophy and social progress, which requires reading national magazines. Even if we confine that branch of our reading to skimming through the Readers Digest, that adds at least three more hours a week to our sessions with the printed page.

And of course we want to read some fiction and some current books, which can use us as much time as we want to spend on them, but which would take at least ten hours per week to cover any ground at all. Those of us who are farmers or are in a profession know that we should spend at least one evening a week reading about developments in our particular field.

So far, that's a total of 34 hours of reading a week—just to cover one infinitesimal part of the things which are written for our edification and entertainment.

When we add those 34 hours to the 55 we should spend sleeping, the 21 we should spend eating, and the 40 at least we must spend working, only 17 hours remain of a week for the hundred and one miscellaneous tasks and visits which make demands on our time.

Obviously, if we hope to be well-read, we must put our time on a very strict budget.

Phonetic Spelling

Phonetic spelling, which means spelling according to how a word sounds, has been under consideration by various educational groups in the United States ever since 1875. But so far it has made little progress in this country.

It seems strange, when even the most learned people have difficulty with English spelling because so many words are not spelled as they sound, that more hasn't been done to simplify it.

In 1906, President Theodore Roosevelt supported an effort for changes in spelling and Andrew Carnegie gave the movement considerable financial support, but when Mr. Carnegie died in 1919 the plan dropped out of public attention. There is still a Simplified Spelling board, with headquarters at Lake Placid, N. Y., but little seems to be heard about its activities.

The change to simplified spelling would be an easy one. All we would have to do would be to consider the old and new types of spelling as equally correct until everyone had been educated to the new system.

But there are a lot of people who would probably object to changes, even though the school children of the nation would be delighted with it. To some of us who have learned to like the appearance of words, the word "though", for example, would look almost indecent without that ugh on the end. Most of the romance and mystery of darkness would seem to disappear if we spelled "night" at it sounds—nite. And most of us would feel positively uneducated, if we had to change the letters "ed" to phonetic spelling and write such words as helpt, fixt, followd and robd.

It will probably be a long time before English teachers will agree to use phonetic spelling, but when they do begin, the first thing to do would be to spell the word "phonetic" the way it sounds, which is fonetic.

The best portion of a good man's life is his little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love.

Kindness in ourselves is the honey that blunts the sting of unkindness in another.

A pure affection, concentric, forgetting self, forgiving wrongs and forestalling them, should swell the lyre of human love.

It is one of the beautiful compensations of life that no man can sincerely try to help another without helping himself.

'Invitation to Happiness'

Burkburnett History

As revealed by the files of The Star, 10 Years Ago.

The Burkburnett band will present a program over KGKO at Wichita Falls Sunday, from 1 'til 2 p. m. This program is expected to be one of the most outstanding presentations of band music presented in several months. Three soloists will accompany the band. The Burk band, directed by E. L. Nichols, has broadcast extensively over such radio stations as Dallas, Fort Worth and Wichita Falls.

Rev. Glen Clark will preach his farewell sermon at the Central Christian church Sunday night and a large crowd is expected to attend.

Drs. Ruel Slaughter and Philip Carpenter will be in charge of the Burkburnett Clinic during Dr. Bain Leake's five or six months absence from Burkburnett.

B. H. Preston of Burkburnett seems likely to rank as Wichita county's premier alfalfa raiser this season. He recently completed his second cutting of his 17-acre patch, getting 1,142 bales of 60 pounds each, totalling nearly 36 tons; or slightly better than two tons to the acre.

The flag of the Greek republic will be presented to Ross Sterling by Legion State Commander Hal Brennan and a large committee of citizens of Greek descent of our state. One hundred years ago the Greeks declared their independence from Turkey and a war which lasted years ensued resulting in the independence of Greece in 1830.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Gilbert, accompanied by Mrs. Lennie Gilbert and niece, Mrs. T. B. Parrish, of Holliday, visited friends and relatives in Oklahoma City and Apache last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Love and daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank Love and two little daughters, arrived Tuesday from Vaughn, New Mexico, for several days' visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brumley.

E. L. Browning of Long Beach is visiting in Burkburnett as the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Browning, and brothers.

In looking through the files of The Star two articles appeared in the issue of March 5, 1920, that show a contrast with the present time: "Fort Worth pipe line companies announced another increase in the price of crude oil Monday. The Sinclair Company boosted the figure 25c, making the new price $3.50 a barrel.

Another article from the March 5, 1920 paper read thus: "The Weekly average pipe line runs for the week show Burkburnett leading with a figure of 81,630 barrels, Stephens county produced 35,075 barrels; Ranger-Eastland, 29,640; Desdemonia, 14,000; Electra, 9,360; Iowa Park, 720; Perolia, 370; Holliday, 60; Brown 140; Coleman, 100, and Moran, 100 barrels.

Development Of An Idea

The summer of 1903 was unusually hot and moist. Hot, sticky days. Day after day the newspapers had headlines about the unusual weather. Business firms closed during the afternoons and let their employees go home.

A business firm particularly affected by this unusual condition was a lithographing company in Brooklyn. And the reason that it was affected was that the paper it used in printing became warped and wrinkled and would not lie flat. As a result, the color impressions were not right. Looked bad. The color processes were what is called "off register."

The firm became so distressed about the situation that it called in a company to see of the air couldn't be cooled so the paper wouldn't warp and the color printing would improve. A representative of the company examined the plant. Said nothing could be done. Two other companies were appealed to. Same answer.

Finally an appeal was made to a company in Buffalo, N. Y. The Buffalo Forge company. They sent a young man 27 years old to see what he could do. The color printing company was discouraged when he came in. Too young.

He spent two days walking around examining the plant, testing the air. Finally he worked out a way of sending refrigerated brine through pipes and of blowing the hot air over the pipes. That cooled the air, but was expensive.

One day he stood looking at some drops of water on these cold pipes. The result of what he saw and did will make a difference in your life. He asked himself, "Why does the water collect on these pipes?" Millions of people had noticed that water collected on jugs and pitchers which were colder than the air. This man was the first man in history to go to the bottom of it and made it useful. That young man's name was William H. Carrier.

He figured out that the drops were there because the warm air was brought into contact with cold; the pipes had nothing to do with it. He worked out a new system for the lithograph company. He sprayed the hot air with cold water and blew the cooled air into the shop with a fan. Result, better job of color printing.

He had hit upon a new idea. He lived it; ate it, developed it. Nineteen years later, he built the first machine to cool the air of theatres and restaurants. In 1930 he installed the system in the first railroad car. The next year it was installed in the palace of the King of Siam.

Today, he is "the father of air-conditioning." He has seen it spread over the world. He is only 64 years old. The thing that made William H. Carrier different from other people was going to the bottom of what he saw. Millions of people had seen drops of water on surfaces; he was the first one to do anything about it. Analyzed it. Developed it. Made himself rich and famous.

Generally speaking, it's the moisture supply that determines the success of the summer garden. All plants trees and shrubs must have water whether naturally or artificially provided. If you have to water, do it thoroughly. Light sprinkling does actual harm because it brings the roots toward the surface in their effort to get moisture.

When trees are watered it's essential that the water goes deep into the ground in order to form long strong roots.

If watering is done during the day it should not be allowed to touch the foliage but applied directly at the roots. A slow constant stream will seep into the ground where the water will do the most good.

WEATHER . . . predictable

I have always felt very sorry for the weather man.

He probably can put up with the name-calling letters which he receives from irate picnickers when he predicts sun and they get rain, but it's among his own family and friends that I've pictured him being in constant hot water and the butt of unceasing ridicule.

My sympathy for the weatherman however was based on the belief that he is wrong a large percentage of the time. A review of the accuracy of his reports shows quite the contrary to be true. During the last year he was right in his predictions between 85 and 90 per cent of the time.

So, instead of being an unhappy fellow, actually he is probably quite proud of himself. For each day that he opens himself to heckling by his friends, there are nine days in which he can say, "I told you so!" And most of us consider anyone an expert on any subject if he can be right 90 per cent of the time.

WARNINGS . . . invaluable

The weather man is really a national hero, judging by the service he performs for millions of people in this country. He has saved hundreds of farmers from bankruptcy by his frost warnings and farm crop weather service. He has saved thousands of lives by tracing the movements of floods and blizzards, and he has prevented the destruction of untold millions in property by preparing people for quick and violent shifts in climatic conditions.

It is estimated that weather predictions can be credited for savings to agriculture, commerce and people in general amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars each year. Cautious farmers, as well as ship owners, aviators, fishermen, and even power company managers, have learned that it pays to give the weather man an important role in guiding their daily activities.

In cities, as well as country areas, the weather is closely related to our pocketbooks. The weather man is probably of most vital importance to the farmers, but he has many times been responsible for city people getting uninterrupted supplies of water, gas and electricity.

TEMPERATURE . . . variations

Weather extremes are always a favorite topic of conversation.

Most of us get the feeling that there are drastic weather changes taking place in this country. We think the summers are warmer or colder than they used to be, or there is more rain or less rain than in the past.

Actually, according to the statistics recorded by the weather bureau, which seem to contradict most any weather argument we may thing up, there has been very little variation in either precipitation or temperature, over a period of a year, during this century. In the New York vicinity for instance, the average annual temperature has ranged from a low of 49.8 in 1917 to a high of 54.6 in 1921.

As for precipitation, the range has been a little greater, but it doesn't stay away from the average for long. For 40 years the average precipitation has been 42.76 inches and in 1938 it was slightly above and in 1939 slightly below the average.

There is, of course, a great difference between average temperature and average rainfall in different sections of this country.

In summer, temperatures don't vary as greatly between different states, the warmest state for July being Arizona with an average temperature of 90, and the coolest being the San Francisco section of California with an average temperature of 58. In San Francisco the average January temperature is only eight degrees lower than the average July temperature.

RAIN . . . records

There are still plenty of old-timers in the East who talk about the blizzard of '38 as a snowstorm the like of which has never been seen before or since. They'll argue until they're blue in the face that that snowstorm holds all the records, although for 48 years the U. S. weather bureau has calmly reported more snow fell in 24 hours only five years later, in February, 1893.

In all sections of the country we hear stories of record snowfalls but less about record rainfalls. Rain records are usually based on the number of days it rained in a row—that figure having been interesting to many people ever since the 40 days of rain reported in the Noah's Ark story in the Bible.

There is one rain record which stands out, however. That's the one which took place in the San Gabriel mountains in California on April 5, 1926, when 1.03 inches of rain, equivalent to 116 tons of water per acre, fell in a period of one minute. That's more rain than we bet in many states in an average month and it all fell in 60 seconds. If it had been snow instead of rain it would have equalled over 10 inches in that minute, for in water content 10 inches of snow equals one of rain. There is little chance that any rain record ever will equal that one.

Side Glances On Texas History

By Charles O. Hucker, University of Texas Library

HOW THE COMANCHES GOT THEIR REVENGE

Early in August, 1840, began one of the most terrifying and most memorably dramatic episodes in the history of early Texas—when, after five months of preparation, the Comanche Indians swept down from the northwestern plains to wreak their vengeance on the white man for the "peace conference" at San Antonio's Council House, which cost them the lives of several high-ranking chiefs.

Dramatic as was the bloody conference, its aftermath was equally long-remembered, and for a better reason. For the story of the aftermath, culled from the Texas Collection of the University of Texas Library, is the story of a terror unknown in Texas since Santa Anna's doomed march to San Jacinto.

In 1840, when the heart of the Republic was still somewhere in the east, South Texas was a wilderness. There were growing settlements at San Antonio and Gonzales, but few more. It was enough of a wilderness so that, early in August, an army of one thousand Comanche braves could beat a war path through it undiscovered.

They Sack Two Towns

On the afternoon of August 6 the Comanches fell unheralded on Victoria. Two days later, so early in the morning as to catch half of the inhabitants still in bed, they struck at Linnville, to the south. And each town—unwarned, unprepared and completely paralyzed by surprise—fell in a few confused terrifying moments. At each place the death toll, unrecorded in history, must have been tremendous; and the thriving coastal town of Linnville was burned to the ground.

Yet, gratifying as all that must have been, the Comanches satiated their revenge even further with the loot from two towns—between three and four thousand head of horses and mules and a fortune in merchandise from Linnville, which had been unusually well stocked. And with some of the goods taken—top hats and tail coats, for instance—they bedecked themselves and their horses gleefully for a triumphant return to the north.

Meanwhile, expressmen were spreading the terror northward and eastward; a thousand Comanche warriors, two sacked towns smouldering in their wake, were loose in the south. And men like Felix Houston, Ed Burlison and Ben McCullough rose up to urge and begin preparations for a counter-attack, so that early in the morning of August 12, six days after the tragedy at Victoria, two hundred Texans met the invaders for a last-ditch fight at Plum Creek some 27 miles below Austin.

The Battle of Plum Creek

The Battle of Plum Creek, remembered chiefly as a display of savage and wonderful daring on the part of several Comanche chiefs who tried to hold off the better-armed Texans until their long baggage train could be got to safety, lasted for only a few minutes and then turned into a running fight which continued for fifteen miles, ending at last in the escape of the greater part of the dispersed Comanche force.

During the entire morning's fighting the Texans failed to lose a man and had only a few men wounded, whereas the Indians paid for their uprising with the lives of eighty braves and with the loss of several hundred pack horses loaded with loot from Linnville. The battle was one of the most successful pitched battles with Indians ever fought by the Texans, and the menace had been shattered. But the Comanches had got their revenge.

This Week IN WASHINGTON

policies, they show through their statements and votes that they want a more or less permanent policy and object to constant remodeling which always draws us closer to war.

In response to the administration request for the passage of resolutions to keep selectees in training for more than a year, Senator George, chairman of the foreign relations committee, thus suggested that they law be left alone and that the men in camps be asked to volunteer for longer service instead of making it compulsory. He indicated his belief that enough would stay in the army through that method to make the passage of a compulsory law unnecessary.

The greatest opposition, however, is to the resolution which would give the President the right to use the services of selectees anywhere in the world. Senator Reynolds, chairman of the senate military affairs committee, said passage of such legislation would virtually give the President the right to declare war and because of this he called for full public hearings and complete investigation on the floor of the senate.

Congress continues strongly divided in the stand of its members on our involvement in the war but is almost unanimous in its willingness to take every step possible for our defense. Thus, while legislation regarding the service of selectees in foreign lands is bitterly debated, the President's request for an additional $4,770,055,588 for the army and $3,323,000,000 for the navy is expected to be granted without discussion. The President's request indicates that during the new fiscal year, which began on July 1, requests for funds will be on a larger scale than in 1940 and that there is no limit yet in view on the cost of our defense program.

Following defeat by the house of legislation to give the President formal authority to use troops to take over defense plants defeated primarily because of a sharp decline in the number of strikes, new strikes immediately took place in a number of key plants. Claiming that the unions took defeat of strike-curbing legislation as their okey to go ahead with new strikes, supporters of the legislation are continuing to demand that strikes be halted by law.

Congressmen who have been demanding anti-strike legislation, are using the strike of the Sealed Power corporation of Muskegon, Mich., as an "I told you so" example of the need for legislation. They are pointing out that the national defense mediation board was unable to prevent that strike which affected other plants such as Allis-Chalmers and Willys-Overland, which have millions in defense contracts.

Discussion continues over Secretary Knox's revelation that an American naval vessel dropped a depth bomb as a warning to a submarine which was approaching a rescue operation. Although the isolationists have been bitter in their criticism of this action, the majority of officials here have philosophically accepted such action as not being an act of war but merely one of enforcing our right of freedom of the seas and our right to fight "piracy" on the high seas.

Informed circles point out that the President, in several speeches has referred to German actions on the seas as "piracy" and point out that this government, throughout its history, has fought pirates who have interfered with the activities of its merchant marine. They say that international law can rightfully be interpreted to make German raiders and submarines fit the definition of "pirate." This interpretation, although not expressed in so many words by the President, indicates his continued determination to justify all steps which he takes toward involvement in the war in the light of our not being a belligerent.

The national "Aluminum Show-er" of July 21, it is estimated will produce about 15,000,000 pounds of aluminum to ease the shortage of this product and thus aid defense.

Aluminum, however, will continue to be a major bottleneck in our defense production, for in addition to raw material, a tremendous amount of electrical power is needed to break the ore down into usable form. New dams to produce power are to be built in the Tennessee valley, but to supply the power needed while they are being built may be a severe tax on the power facilities of the nation.

Legislature Sets Record For Passing Of Game Laws

Austin, July 22—Not only did the 47th Texas legislature set a record for longevity by being in session 171 days, it established a record of introducing almost one wildlife bill per day. In all, 141 bills dealing directly or indirectly with wildlife in Texas were introduced, 118 in the house and 23 in the senate. Of those 141 bills, 105 were enacted into law, the largest number ever passed by any Texas legislature.

In comparison, the 46th legislature in 1939 considered 134 wildlife bills and enacted only 94 into law. Going a little further back into history, the three sessions of the legislature in 1937 sent to final passage only 74 wildlife bills.

Only eight of the 105 new wildlife measures are general in nature, applying to the entire state. All the rest are local laws, some applying to one county, some to several, some to only portions of one county. Many of the local laws extended the life of the old laws about to expire. All in all, most of them were protective as to purpose.

One of the outstanding local laws passed was one which could foreshadow legislative policy in the matter of game regulation. The law in question grants the Game, Fish and Oyster commission the power to fix open and closed seasons, determine bag limits, and in other ways husband the fish resources of the huge Possum Kingdom Lake in Palo Pinto, Stephens and Young counties. The commission, working in cooperation and with the approval of the Brazos River Conservation and Reclamation District directors, will have an opportunity, under the new statute, to demonstrate the feasibility of sound fish management of a large lake that will be closely supervised, so far as fish life is concerned, by the commission's aquatic biologist and his assistants.

Another general law forbids taking of muskrats on the land of another without the permission of the landowner or lessee, whether or not the land is enclosed or posted. The old law applied only to enclosed or posted land. Prairie chickens, so scarce a closed season was placed on them several years ago, were given added protection—until September 1, 1943—under terms of another law. Under another law, all deer, with the exception of cut up meat, must be removed from storage by June 5 of each year. A state-wide dove bill was passed, but final announcement of the when's and how's persons may shoot doves awaits word from the Washington office of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, which has jurisdiction over migratory birds and waterfowl.

Another law forbids the killing or molesting of carrier pigeons. The author said this was necessary legislation in the present national emergency.

Sports fishermen on the coast will not be required to buy any sort of licenses, under terms of a new law. Commercial fishing licenses, however, are still required, as are licenses for sport fishermen using artificial lures in fresh water.

Another general statute provides certain closed seasons for taking shrimp in the inland salt waters of Texas, but it does not prohibit taking shrimp for bait at any time. The law also removes the five and one-half inch size limit on shrimp.

The final general law permits the killing of golden eagles or Mexican brown eagles at any time.

Full texts of these laws and all other laws passed by the legislature this year may be had for the asking by writing the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, Austin.

THE PASSING OF THE Boomtown

Oil boomtowns exist today only in the movies. The old-time "gusher" wells are gone forever.

In the early days, as long as oil flowed, the boomtowns flourished. But soon the wells failed and the booms collapsed, carrying with them the income and security of those who had depended on them.

Today, through a sound program of conserving oil and gas, hundreds of Texas communities are enjoying a permanent type of petroleum development. Furthermore, because of conservation, we have the largest oil reserves in the world, one of our greatest assets for National Defense.

Oil now builds stable communities. It provides assured tax revenues and greater ultimate tax returns than were ever possible in boomtown days. And every citizen benefits from the income oil creates.

Conservation not only protects Texas oil resources. It also assures for many years the prosperity which oil brings to every community where it is found.
