Burkburnett's History Is Written By Teacher To Commemorate City's Annual 'Heritage Week'

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 1955 Minnie Mae Benton wrote a page thesis on the colorful history of Burkburnett. She graciously consented to write a condensed version for the Star to commemorate Heritage Week.

Minnie Mae Benton teaches American and World History in Burkburnett High School. She has been a resident of Burkburnett since 1944.

Her father, S. A. King was an A.T. Railway Agent in Burkburnett for many years. Douglas lives in California. One daughter, Marian, lives in Wichita, Kansas and another, Carole, in Ames, Iowa.

She received her B.A. from the Central State Teachers College, Ada, Okla. and her M.A. from North Texas in Denton, Texas.

By MINNIE M. BENTON

On February 1, 1858, the Texas Legislature ordered the county of Burkburnett surveyed with it's county seat to be called Wichita.

The Burke's Texas Almanac of 1862, the editor wrote: "Up Red River west of Clay on the county of Wichita recently organized with Martin(?) as the county seat. This county is the recently organized county of Archer are said to be very rich in mineral wealth."

In 1867 the county here was the first unbroken cattle range. Settlements were few and far apart. Roving bands of Indians were scattered over the county and a few settlers, who had fled the wilds and lived in great isolation waited for more settlers to come to help cultivate the rich soil. Wichita county had little or no agriculture. Occasional raids of Comanches and Kiowa Indians dropped down from Indian territory to the white settlements, from which they stole horses and cattle, killed men, women and children and carried them for ransom.

The first settler in Wichita county was a man named Mable Gilbert. Mable Gilbert's sons belied his effeminate name. Regardless of how many adventuresome explorers came way, Mable Gilbert was the first to leave a permanent record on the map, and today Red River which winds an intricate route just south of Burkburnett is named for this pioneer. Gilbert is believed to have been a steamboat captain. Legend has it that he came down the Mississippi on a barge, settled on Red River where Burke Creek runs into Red River, because near the creek were cool, ever-flowing springs, named McFarland Springs, and grass and trees for logs were there. The land had been granted to Gilbert in 1856 and he probably obtained a "script" with which Texas soldiers were sold over the United States.

Gilbert brought slaves and his family and lived here a year or two before the Civil War broke the land and planted gardens. He traded trinkets to the Indians for buffalo robes and pelts. In late 1861, January, 1862, the men left their settlement to arrange transportation of pelts to the Mississippi. When they returned, they found their dugouts caved in and all the buildings burned.

Their main crop at first was corn. Nesterville was a prosperous farming community and might eventually have become the leading town between Wichita Falls and Red River if Burke Burnett had not decided to move his 6666 Ranch farther west into King, Cottle and Knox Counties, and if Frank Kell and J. A. Kemp of Wichita Falls had not decided to build a railroad through Burnett's ranch to the "Pig Pasture" in 1905. They brought 17,000 acres at eighteen dollars an acre and sold most of the land to settlers at from thirty-five to sixty-five dollars an acre. F. R. Knauth bought the first 340-acre farm.

The first depot was a wooden shack near where the present one stands today. In 1907, a corporation was organized to hold a townlot sale. Before it ended one thousand people had been persuaded to buy townlots costing from thirty-five dollars to four hundred each.

The first newspaper published in Burkburnett was called the 6666 Star. It's editor and owner was F. G. Graves (who optimistically predicted that Burkburnett, queen city of the Red River Valley, was destined to be a city of one thousand people!) In 1910, it had a grocery store, a saloon, the school and church combined, a lumber and wagon yard, two or three eating places, and a general store. There was also a livery stable with fine vehicles and good horses owned by two brothers named Fowler. The First National Bank of Burkburnett had been founded in 1907 by Mr. Hardin and the little community seemed to be gaining stability.

Time passed and in December of 1917, the Burkburnett Star put out a "booster edition". On the front page there was a picture showing Leonard Ramming's threshing and harvesting outfits, the chuck wagon, header boxes separator, thresher engine, tractor and crew. An article under the picture says that Burkburnett produced more than 400,000 bushels of wheat that year. World War One was effecting Burkburnett, too. The paper like so many pins in a cushion. Carl Coke Rister, author of "Oil! Titan of the Southwest," painted this graphic picture: "The streets of Burkburnett all day and until late at night. Main street is thronged with visitors. Oil companies were being formed on sidewalks or on streets. Hotels, rooming houses, private homes were running over. 'Bling tigers,' bars are stock promoters were everywhere. Burkburnett was bursting at the seams. The local post office was swamped. Office room was at a premium. As many as four families lived in one house and many thousands lived in tents or wooden shacks. Little boxcar houses sprang up all over town, the oil field's own architectural design. The outside was stripped and visitors at the front door could see straight to the back porch. Surprisingly enough, some held beautiful furniture."

said that sixty boys had joined the army in two weeks. Call Field was just fourteen miles from Burkburnett, but thumbing a ride had not then developed into the fine art it is today.

Thus Burkburnett rocked along. Mothers grieved for boys in the Army; bumper wheat crops were harvested. Twenty shallow wells, including three dusters, had been completed and local citizens hoped for better times. Little did they realize that on July 28, 1918, the first era of their community had ended and the next day, July the 29th, the "Fowler Well" would blow in!

When the news of the "Fowler Well" got around, there was a mad rush to secure townlots and to organize companies. In three weeks there were fifty-six rigs running. People thronged to the dusty, heat-baked place, and soon a solid line of derricks, scattered thickly over the little town, pointed upward

Texas built a siding and switched thirteen boxcars on to it for their extra help. Trains ran twice every morning, noon and night to Wichita Falls. Famous men rubbed elbows with the infamous. Henry L. Doherty, head of the Cities Service Oil Company visited the "Boomtown." Rex Beach bought twenty-five cent cigars over the counter at Adams Drug Store while he collected material for his "Flowing Gold" which he later published. Boyce House who said "Anything mentioned (in Burkburnett) except oil would create as much consternation as a rebel yell at a spiritualist seance," was gathering data for his book, "Oil Boom." Dressing tools on a cable tool rig, out in the field was a handsome Dutchman who later on became famous as Clark Gable in motion pictures.

Clois Green, Vernon, Texas bank clerk leased land from Bob Waggoner and organized the Burkburnett-Waggoner Oil Company. Around the Burkburnett well sprang up another mushroom boom-town called Newtown. It had its own gambling houses, dance halls, and speakeasies. However, it had a tragic end. In 1922, a storage tank was struck by lightning during a heavy rain. The released oil followed the rivulets of rain like liquid fire. The exact number of dead was never known. Newtown became known as Thrift, Texas, but it never grew back except for a post office, school house and church.

The derricks marched on for seven and one-half miles until they reached the bank of the Red River, where yet another boom town sprang up, called Bridgetown. At one time it boasted 10,000 people. It's main street of one mile had a house of prostitution at one end and a mission church at the other. In between were offices of doctors, lawyers, dance halls and picture shows.

Red River Territory in the river bed near Bridgetown was the basis of one of the longest and most costly legal suits ever tried. Part of the suit was to determine the exact location of the line separating Texas and

Dilemma Under Medicare

Parker K. Hughes, M. D., president of the Polk County, Iowa, Medical Society, recently contributed a thoughtful piece to his county's medical bulletin. It deals with the physicians' dilemma under medicare.

One problem he pointed out, is that most people apparently feel that once they reach 65, medicare will take care of all their medical needs. For a great many, the costs of care will exceed the sums provided. It will be easy, though totally unjustified, to blame the doctors for this.

Another critical problem detailed by Dr. Hughes, "... is that it is now, we are told, up to the doctors to police the utilization of the program." Even though the great majority of doctors were opposed to the law, because of the belief that it would inevitably result in a lowering of standards, they are now being called upon to prevent abuses. They, and those in related medical care fields, will certainly do the best they can. In Dr. Hughes words, "It will be a very difficult strain on patient-doctor relationships to walk in and tell your patient that although they may feel they need further hospitalization, the medicare law and the local committee have said they must go home."

The American Medical Association is working with the government authorities in an effort to make the law perform as well as possible. But the medical fraternity didn't create the difficulties, and it has only very limited power to reduce their impact. To quote Dr. Hughes once more, "I think it is of utmost importance that we make every effort to inform the public of these problems. Hopefully then, when the chaos which will inevitably develop occurs, the entire responsibility for the dilemma will not be thrown in the doctor's lap..."

Federal Control Of Education

State and local governments have abdicated, willingly or otherwise, all manner of responsibilities to the federal government. The result has been to put the non-federal governments in much the position of mendicants, going hat in hand to Washington for more and more of their needs and wants.

A particularly alarming trend is found in the field of education. The proposed federal budget for the next fiscal year contains appropriations totaling an astonishing $10 billion for education. According to the Portland Oregonian, not long ago only about $1 in each $100 spent for education at the local level came from the federal government. Now the figure approaches $10 in each $100.

This caused the paper to say: "... the states should not leave the doing to the federal government. The states and localities must remain the senior partner in education unless they are willing to acquiesce in a fundamental change in American education in which central control is substituted for local control — an arrangement which is not recommended by its practice in many other countries."

When the federal government pays, the federal government controls and orders. If the present trend continues, it won't be long until Washington is the almost absolute boss of education everywhere in this country, and local authorities are virtually powerless administrative agencies through which federal funds are siphoned for purposes and programs decided upon by federal agencies. One can hardly conceive of a less appealing situation than that.

Dr. W. Allen Wallis, President of the University of Rochester says, "Inflation can be generated only by government." Here's how he explained it: "Business firms, labor unions or consumers with excessive market power can do many objectionable things that are contrary to the public interest. But one objectionable thing that they cannot do is to cause inflation — or for that matter, prevent it."

The Citizens Public Expenditure Survey, a statewide taxpayer organization in New York state, provides this lesson from recent history: "Over an 11-year period (1954-1965), the total predicted federal budget deficits came to 13.2 billion. The actual deficits totaled $43.1 billion — so the federal predictors were off nearly $30 billion."

According to a report issued by the U. S. Department of Commerce, state governments spent $45.5 billion in fiscal 1965, including $4.2 billion paid in unemployment compensation and other insurance trust systems.

News From The County Agent

Young grasshoppers are appearing in abundant numbers in several areas. Grasshoppers are relatively easy to control when they are young but become increasingly difficult to control as they near maturity. They are best controlled in their hatching areas before they begin to migrate over larger areas. Frequently, spot treatment of the hatching areas will prevent later wide-spread damage.

While farmers have achieved more progress the past 30 years than in all previous history, there is still one area of farm and ranch life that needs improvement.

There are still too many farm and ranch accidents, according to county agent B. T. Haws. To call attention to the need for preventing accidents, the week of July 24 has been proclaimed National Farm Safety Week.

One accident is too many, and we wish we could stop it there but the problem is still around. In 1964, for example, farm-resident accidents accounted for 8,300 deaths and 760,000 disabling injuries in the nation. And 1,900 of the deaths were home accidents and 2,500 work accidents.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture and the National Safety Council co-sponsor the observance of National Farm Safety Week nationally. The Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, Agricultural Extension Service, farm organizations, the farm press, radio, television, and other groups cooperate with national sponsors on the local level in an effort to make residents aware of what they can do to prevent farm home accidents.

What isn't done today has to be done tomorrow, you will probably be just busy tomorrow as you are today.

Southwestern Bell Declares War On Anonymous Telephone Callers

Southwestern Bell Telephone Company today declared an all-out war on anonymous nuisance telephone callers.

"When the telephone becomes a source of annoyance or terror to even one customer, it is a matter of serious concern to us," said C. A. Deuschle, Manager, for the company.

"We are assuming responsibility for combating this problem, and we will use every available, legitimate means to do so."

Deuschle said telephone employees are being given special training in how to counsel and aid customers who receive annoying and harassing telephone calls. And in cases involving threats to property or bodily harm, the company's security experts will respond immediately to assist customers and law enforcement agencies.

"Although line identification is by no means the only way, or even the most effective way, of solving most annoyance call complaints, we now have available several techniques for identifying the telephone number from which offending calls are made," Deuschle said.

"Experience gained in a number of cities has proved most valuable," he added. "We are confident of our ability to assist customers in coping with this problem."

"Our experience has shown us that certain types of annoying and harassing calls generally follow very definite patterns."

The problem of annoyance calls is not great in terms of total numbers. But statistics mean little to the victim. He may have been through one of the most harrowing experiences in his life.

To help discourage annoyance calling, Deuschle suggests the following steps:

1. Hang up if the caller doesn't say anything, or at the first obscene word. Also, hang up if the caller doesn't identify himself to your satisfaction. Don't keep talking. This only encourages him to persist.

2. Call the telephone business office if annoyance calls persist, or if you receive a threatening call. The company will cooperate fully in dealing with the problem.

Deuschle added that when a number of calls are received, it will be helpful to the company if the victim keeps a log of the dates and times of the calls. He said, too, that the victim should try to listen for unusual voice inflections, background noises or other clues which might help an investigator.

Annoyance calling can be effectively controlled by the intelligent coordination and cooperation of victims, telephone people and, when appropriate, law enforcement agencies. Most annoyance call problems can be cleared up without restoring to line identification—although we do have techniques and devices which can be effectively employed under all circumstances and with all types of central office equipment and we won't hesitate to use them when necessary.

Anyone bothered by obscene or annoying-harassing telephone calls should heed the following suggestions:

—Don't keep talking to the caller. What the caller really wants is an audience. Don't give him one.

—Hang up immediately if the caller doesn't say anything or if he doesn't identify himself to your satisfaction. And hang up immediately at the first suggestion of obscenity.

—If obscene or harassing calls persist, call the telephone company business office. We want to help and we can.

—If you're threatened with bodily harm or property damage, call the police. And call the telephone company, too. We'll give you and the law enforcement authorities all the assistance we can, promptly.

INFLATION AND RETIREMENT

Babson Park, Mass., June 16 — The squeeze of inflation hurts anybody whose income is not rising at least as fast as the cost of living. Workers don't have to worry too much if their pay rates are automatically hitched to any hikes recorded by the consumer price index, as is the case in many union escalator contracts. Salaries for many executives, government employees, and others in favored positions manage to keep up with—or even ahead of—the relentless climb in the cost of retail goods and services.

Fixed-Income Recipients Are Victims

There are, however, approximately 40 million people in this country who are living on pensions, insured retirement allotments, and other forms of fixed income. Thus far, there is no way for these people—most of them in the senior-citizen bracket—to bargain for income gains to match the rising prices. They don't have to read in the paper that it cost them $112.50 in April, 1966 to buy what cost only $100 during the consumer-price-index base period of 1957-1959. They have already felt their dollar shrinking.

From April, 1965 to April, 1966 there was an over-all advance of 2.9% in the nation's cost of living. In terms of the national average, fixed-income people had to pay 6.2% more for food, 3.5% more for medical care, 2.3% more for clothing and its upkeep, and 1.9% more for housing. Families in general felt the upward pressure, of course; but pensioners and retirees of other types had very little chance of upping their income take. They could only cut back their outlays for their daily needs enough to balance their limited funds against their expenses.

Great Society Funds Will Not Help Much

While the White House has asked Congress to place $3.2 billion more at its disposal for Great Society plans during the next fiscal year than for the current year, fixed incomers can't expect much help. There have been breakthroughs in health programs, and there may be more of these as time goes by. But this will not give great encouragement to the millions of healthy men and women whose set number of shrinking dollars must somehow continue to take care of their homes and maintenance, food, clothing, transportation and essential services.

Naturally, if price deflation should have its turn, pensioners' and retirees' dollars would become worth more. But what are the chances of such a reversal in the near future? An inflationary explosion of runaway proportions would surely be followed by a downward cascade in prices. History tells us that. Yet, the stand-pat attitude taken so far by the government would seem to promise continuation of the semi-contained wage-price upspiral with price inflation not yet ready to give way to deflation.

Pressures Still on Upside

Even the shakeout in stocks has not yet been reflected in barometers that could indicate early deflation. Employment is bursting through the roof; unemployment is so low that employers have to bid higher and higher to get new workers. Costs of the Vietnam war are climbing, as are Great Society financial needs. Labor is going all out for raises and fringe gains during the remainder of this year and 1967. The guidepost of 3.2% annual pay hikes has been bulldozed flat by the unions. Cost pressures are ever upward.

So broad was the original concept of the Great Society that some have proposed a compensating system to protect citizens dependent upon a fixed income. About the only way this could be done would be to make up—say, each month or each quarter—the difference between the value of the dollar when a pension or retirement arrangement went into effect and its current depreciated value. The paper work would be so overwhelming and the cost so heavy that it probably could not pass Congress at this time. But we are certain you will hear much more of this as inflation continues to eat a bigger and bigger share of our senior citizen's income. Meanwhile, pensioners will just have to keep a close eye on their budgets.

THE SPA LIFE

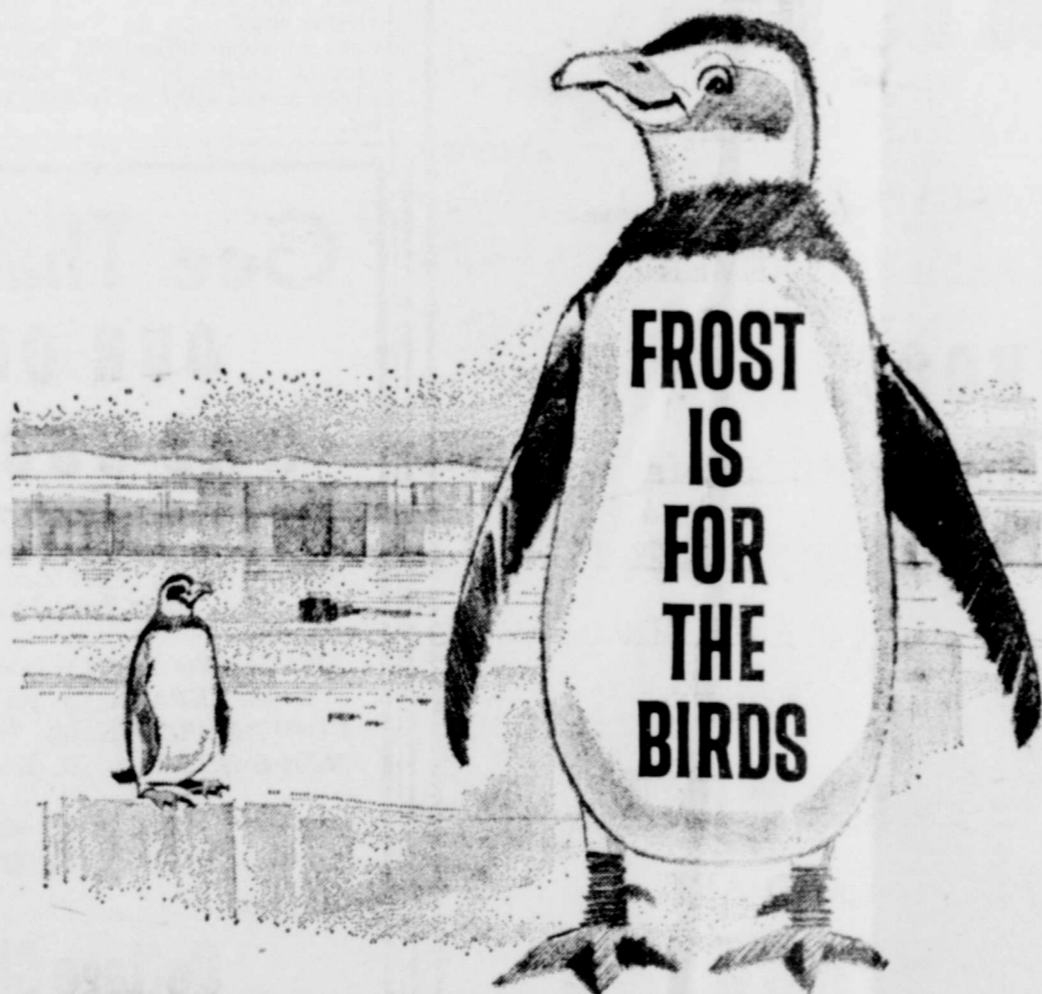

The word "spa" derives from the name of a Belgian city known for its mineral springs. Marienbad, a leading spa became popular in the 1900's when society came to "take the waters." Over 40,000 visitors—mostly elderly people—came annually to this famous European resort for the "cure."

Heating natural waters and therapeutic baths have frequently alleviated both major and minor discomforts. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was a regular visitor to Warm Springs, Georgia, one of America's leading spas where he found the waters beneficial and healthful.

Today elderly people suffer from Xeroderma—commonly called dry skin—a condition not treated in spas. Skin specialists recommend bathing with a therapeutic non-prescription bath oil called Alpha Keri. Clinical studies show Alpha Keri softens the skin and locks in moisture, relieving the dry itchy feeling that causes so much discomfort.

PSORIASIS

Psoriasis is a skin disorder which affects at least one of 50 million in the United States. It is pronounced so-RYE-ah-sis. Most often psoriasis appears as silvery-scaled red patches on the elbows, knees, scalp and the back. It is said in TODAY'S HEALTH magazine of the American Medical Association.

Individual lesions will appear and disappear, but once they have occurred, they usually will exist in varying degrees of severity for the rest of the person's life.

The exact cause of psoriasis is not known. There is no cure. Some skin specialists have noted that the tendency to this disease may be hereditary. Sometimes the lesions appear following injury to the skin, such as a cut or a burn. Psoriasis often is seasonal, worsening in the winter and improving in the summer. Many patients have flare-ups of the disease during periods of physical and emotional stress.

Some doctors have found that psoriasis responds well to sunlight or from sunlamp treatments. Ointments, creams and lotions for external treatment abound. In recent years skin specialists have had some success with cortico-steroid creams and lotions, particularly when the areas are covered with thin plastic film wrappings. Therapy with tar and ultraviolet light often is recommended in addition to the creams.

Recently, some particularly stubborn cases of psoriasis have responded to some of the drugs commonly used in treatment of certain types of blood diseases and tumors.

The hazards of undesirable side effects are many, and careful medical supervision is mandatory if disastrous complications are to be avoided.

Research continues into the nature of psoriasis. Until there is more knowledge of the many mysteries of the disease, the patient's understanding of the disease and sympathetic understanding by his friends, family, physician and others will greatly lessen the burden for those who live with psoriasis.

In agreement with UNICEF's efforts to combat malnutrition with vegetable proteins, Dr. Jerome Harrington of the Rockefeller Foundation indicates that "A ten-ounce beef steak requires 17 pounds of corn, four pounds of hay and two pounds of protein supplement to produce. Obviously, it would be more efficient to provide vegetable products directly to the populace."

WHAT IS THE FATHER'S WILL AS TO HOW WE MUST BEGIN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE?

In connection with the command to be baptized (Acts 2:38), as brought out in last week's message, we invite you to answer these questions:

Have you been baptized? Or, have you been sprinkled or poured? Or, have you not been baptized? WHY were you baptized? Because you felt you were ALREADY saved? Why were THOSE people to be baptized? Because they WERE saved? Or, FOR remission of sins? "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with Him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." Romans 6:3,4. Into WHOM were they baptized? Were they sprinkled or poured into Christ? FROM YOUR BIBLE, supply the word to fill in this blank: "Therefore we are _____ with Him by baptism into death." Romans 6:4. Have you been BURIED with Him? What did those who gladly received His word do? Acts 2:41. WHY were they baptized? Have YOU gladly received His word? Won't you INSIST that someone BAPTIZE YOU (IMMERSE) YOU — "FOR the forgiveness of your sins"? Acts 2:38 RSV.

Postal Records Recalling Town's Early History Are On Display During Annual 'Heritage Days'

By MARJORIE KAUER

The old books are yellowed and their pages crumbling, but the writing, entered on the pages 59 years ago, is still legible.

The books contain the money orders and cash records of the post office which opened Oct. 2, 1907. Present postmaster W. T. (Dub) Zimmerman, recently found the records while going through a stack of aging books.

The books, used before the boom days of the town, are on display this week during Burkburnett's "Heritage Week," marking the town's 59th birthday. Also in the windows of business will be other historical artifacts and articles from generations past.

The post office helped supply the name of the town Founder Burk Burnett, a legendary Texas rancher, wanted to name the town Burk or Burnett, but the post office said there were already other towns with both those names.

Town's Name

Legend has it President Theodore Roosevelt, while on the famed Red River wolf hunt in 1907, was told of Burnett's dilemma and suggested, "Why not call it Burkburnett?"

Reporting the event, the Wichita Falls Times said:

"On the first train which pulled out of the Falls city for the new town this morning were 300 passengers, of whom 19 were women. About 75 lots were sold before dinner and the prices realized were good. Burk Burnett, for whom the town was named, purchased the first two lots offered for sale, paying $585 apiece for them."

These old books bear the signature of Maggie Weaver as postmaster, but who was Maggie Weaver and how did she happen to be the first postmaster of Burkburnett, so many years before women were allowed to vote?

The questions remain largely unanswered, as Mrs. Weaver's son, Orville, who now lives in Oklahoma, can supply only a few details, having been a young boy during the family's stay in Wichita County.

The family migrated from Tennessee in 1905 and rented farms of about 500 acres from the Burk Burnett and the Daniels ranches. All that remains of one of the family homes is a grove of chinaberry trees east of Burkburnett, near a ford on Red River.

Recalls Store

Mrs. Hester Kirkpatrick, whose family homesteaded in Oklahoma Territory early in 1907, recalls the Weavers had a combination store-post office near the ford.

Her father, W. C. Gammill, had already built a house for the family in Oklahoma and came to Wichita Falls in a wagon to meet his wife and daughter. As they returned to Oklahoma, they passed the Weaver place and started to cross the river. One of the mules was naturally balky and when the cold water struck the sweating animal, it began to pitch, became entangled in the harness and went down in the stream. Seeing the distress of the family, several men from a nearby construction camp and from the Weaver farm came to the rescue and saved the struggling animal.

The Weavers raised wheat, corn and oats on their farms and Weaver, who was known to all as Doc, supplied hay to contractors for the teams used in building the railroad from Wichita Falls to Burkburnett, DeVol Grandfield and points north in Oklahoma.

Doc Weaver had also homesteaded a farm in Oklahoma, near the Gammill farm, and was working on a house for his family when he became ill and died in 1907. Mrs. Weaver moved her family to Oklahoma in 1908, ending her connection with the Burkburnett post office.

Remembers Ranchers

Orville Weaver may not remember much about his mother's duties as postmaster, but he has clear recollections of Burk Burnett and Tom Burnett, his son, two of the most romantic figures in Wichita County history. Orville remembers Tom Burnett as a tall, handsome man with a devilish expression in his eyes. Both father and son were strong allies to their friend and equally strong opponents to those who disagreed with them.

Burk Burnett came to Doc Weaver one time, complaining about cattle being rustled by the "damn nesters," as he called the settlers. One rustled heifer found her way back to the Weaver farm and Doc jokingly remarked, "Burk, you might as well give the heifer to me, the nesters will only steal her again." Burnett glared at Weaver and said, "Heck no. I won't give her to you," then turning to young Orville, he said, "But, son, she's yours." The heifer was still among the family stock when the move was made to Oklahoma.

Tom Burnett was equally strong-minded about his personal property. He had a much loved daughter, Annie, who kept her personal horse in a corral on the Weaver farm. Orville was strictly forbidden to touch any of the Burnett horses, but, being boy-like, he hankered to ride "Miss Annie's" mare. He rode her, only to get caught by Tom Burnett himself. Over 50 years later, he still vividly recalls the tongue-lashing he got.

Orville has another vivid recollection of his boyhood days,

Twins Take Twin Awards

Army ROTC graduates Patrick J. and Martin D. Walsh, Arlington, Va., received degrees and Second Lieutenant's commissions during June commencement exercises at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va. More than 10,350 other cadets are being similarly honored—at the 247 Army ROTC colleges and universities across the country—for their twin achievement of winning college diplomas and officer commissions in the U.S. Army or Army Reserve.

Rummage Sale

A Rummage Sale will be held Saturday, June 25 at 406 2nd St., behind the Christian Church.

A few of the items for sale include: men's and woman's clothing and shoes; floor lamps, table lamps and desk lamps, chairs and lawn chairs; tire pump; paint; cook stove; windows, 30x40; doors; pup tent; rugs; full size bed springs; electric appliances; rabbit ears; 35 ft. Tv antenna; and a lot of odds and ends. Any of these items may be seen before Saturday by calling L. R. Todd, 569-3474.

During the threshing season, he was sent to Wichita Falls in a buggy to get binder twine. The 24-mile round trip took quite a while and by the time he was halfway home, a violent thunderstorm had blown up. The buggy slogged on through the rugged country road until the horse was suddenly struck by lightning and killed. The young boy was unhurt and sought refuge in the nearby farm home of the Hy Willis family, one of the early settlers in the county.

Business Slow

Entries on the first page of the money order book, covering the dates Oct. 2-27, 1907, reveals business was not brisk in the little hamlet. The largest entry was a money order from I. F. Day to J. R. Echols, Lueders, Tex., for $80. Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward were popular, three money orders being made to them, the largest $21.41, a tidy sum in 1907.

The people in the community must have like to read, for there was the money order to Times Publishing Co.; the Constitution Publishing Co., Lawton; Texas Farm and Ranch Publishing Co., Dallas; Gallatine Democrat, Gallatine, Mo.; and Threshermans Review, Alton, Ill.

Boomtown Chapter ABWA Has Meeting Monday At Sloan's

The Boomtown Chapter of ABWA held its regular monthly meeting Monday night at Sloan's Restaurant with 27 members and 10 guests present. The meeting was called to order by the President Nita McNish. Mrs. Pat Trones gave the invocation.

The speaker for the meeting was Mrs. Virginia Bradbury, voice teacher at Midwestern University who gave a very interesting and inspirational talk on the Magic of Music. She played examples of the types of music that they had in the centuries past and then closed her talk with the modern day type which is not played by musicians at all but by computers and electronic machines.

The vocational talk was given by Mrs. Valrie Matherly, Science teacher in Burk Public Schools. She told the group about the many types of science and how the text books were behind the time before they reached the desk of the student.

The chairman of the Library Board, Claude Adams was present to accept the fifty dollar check which the chapter donated to the fund. This was raised from the recent garage sale. Mr. Adams accepted the check with the words that it was greatly appreciated by the Board and also complimented the chapter on the interest shown in this community project.

It was voted to send our president, Nita McNish, as delegate and Laura Powell, the Woman of the Year, as alternate to the National Convention to be held in Tulsa, in October.

Three new members were installed at the close of the business meeting. They were Rita Hudson, teller at the Burkburnett Bank, Mrs. Pauline Evans and Mrs. Ava Buck, teachers at the Burkburnett Public School System.

Other guests were Mrs. Mable Mabry, Mrs. Myrtle Mabry, from the Tumblewood Chapter in Wichita Falls, Mrs. Fran Moore, Betty Moore and Mary Weeks.

Mrs. Beverly Greene gave the benediction.

Straight as an Arrow

In Archery you score only when you hit the target. To score well, you must have straight arrows.

When you attend church, it makes it easier to stay on the straight path. The church wants to help you in all ways of life, but can only do so, if you stay within its circle. Attend church and know the joy of a good life.

"For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

Vanquish Headaches

NINETY per cent of headaches, say experts, are the vascular type caused when distended vessels in the head press on sensitive nerves. The way to get long-lasting relief is to relieve both the pain and the vascular pressure. To do this, a group of researchers developed Vanquish, which contains more ingredients than any other non-prescription analgesic—two pain relievers, two unique buffers and an agent that acts as an anti-depressant.

A Barbecue Bonanza

A BOON to barbecue chefs is a new kind of heavy duty Swing-Out motor with switch and cord minder by Structo Division of King-Seecley Thermos Co. "This invention protects the chef's hands from the heat of the coals as he manipulates the roast or bird," said W. A. Wenner, Structo vice president, marketing. Tapered heavy gauge steel legs are another Structo innovation which provides extra stability as well as a high style look to motorized braziers.
