Bacteria Scanned

Chemists and medical researchers, in an unusual scientific blend, are working together to test an advanced new technique which can rapidly spot and identify the strains of harmful bacteria that cause strep throat, rheumatic fever and other infections. The new method scans bacteria for the fluorescent rays they emit and analyzes the rays for their chemical content, providing almost instantaneous "fingerprints" of individual strains of bacteria that appear similar in other diagnostic tests. Perfection of the technology could speed up diagnosis and treatment in cases where time is essential.

Insect Control Important For Gardens

Very soon vegetable gardeners across the state will begin preparing their garden sites for spring planting. Soil insects are perhaps the most destructive insects gardeners will encounter at this time of year and if not controlled could cause a reduction in vegetable quality and yield. The best time to control soil insects is before the garden plot is planted.

Most soil insecticides, in order to be effective, must be applied at least two weeks ahead of planting and must be thoroughly mixed into the soil at a depth of 4-6 inches. This of course cannot be adequately done if vegetable seeds and transplants are planted first.

Soil insects that vegetable gardeners are most likely to encounter are wireworms, white grubs, seed corn maggots, cabbage maggots, mole crickets, sowbugs, slugs, snails and cutworms. Since soil insects have different feeding habits, some may destroy plant seeds, roots, tubers and underground stem parts, while others may cut off young plants at or near the soil surface.

Garden sites planted for the first time or those previously in grass or weeds are more likely to harbor damaging numbers of soil pests. Vegetable gardeners should inspect their garden site to determine if insecticide treatments are needed. Use a shovel or spade and randomly sample the soil at several locations to a depth of 5-6 inches. Remove one square foot section of soil from each location and record the number of soil insects pests present. As a general rule an average of one or more soil insect pests per sampled location suggests the need to treat with an approved insecticide. However, this is not a fast rule since insect damaging levels will vary, with the crop grown and the insects involved.

Most soil insects can be controlled in the home garden with diazinon 25 percent liquid concentration or Spectracide 6000 applied

GARDEN

From My Garden

Depending upon where you live, the vegetable gardening season is underway or just around the corner. If you have even a small amount of space available, this is the year to set aside all excuses and discover the enjoyment that comes with planting a seed or dropping a plant that may be watched day-to-day until such time as it provides the centerpiece for a family meal.

There is great satisfaction in being able to say, "This came from my backyard garden," whether the subject is tomatoes, peppers, peas or beans. What you can do in the backyard is limited only by the space you have to work with and the quality of the soil. You can't do anything about space limitations, but you can improve soil quality as needed. Contact your county extension agent and he will tell you how easy it is to take a soil sample for an analysis to determine which amendments are needed to make the soil productive.

Infirmity should not deter you. Simply decide what you want to do and hire the services of a neighborhood teenager or handyman to till, plant and maintain at your direction. You are the director, the producer of the final product. You'll never know how satisfying it can be until it is a matter of reality.

Whether you do it yourself or hire it done, ask for and follow the guidance of your county agent relative to the vegetable varieties best suited to your growing area and particular soil conditions. He knows, and it is his intention and purpose to be helpful.

Economic activity is booming in Texas. In the first nine months of 1981 alone, over nine billion dollars in new construction was begun in our state. Yet another group of businessmen are experiencing much of the same success... They are drug smugglers, and their operations have reached in excess of three billion dollars annually.

Texas is a large and geographically diverse state... but this can be a drawback. With 644 miles of coastline and a 1200 mile border with Mexico, Texas has become a haven for drug smugglers.

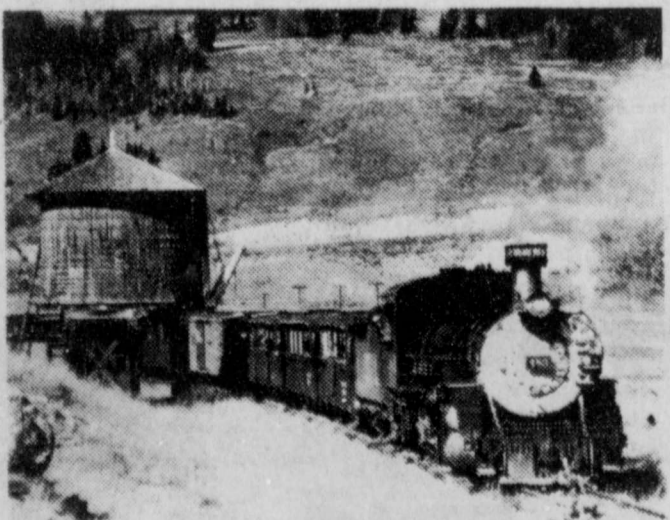

Airplanes, boats and land vehicles enter Texas daily, carrying tons of drugs and leaving countless victims behind, making drug trafficking the number one crime problem in Texas.

Law enforcement officers cannot adequately battle these cunning criminals without the aid of concerned citizens. The Crime Stoppers

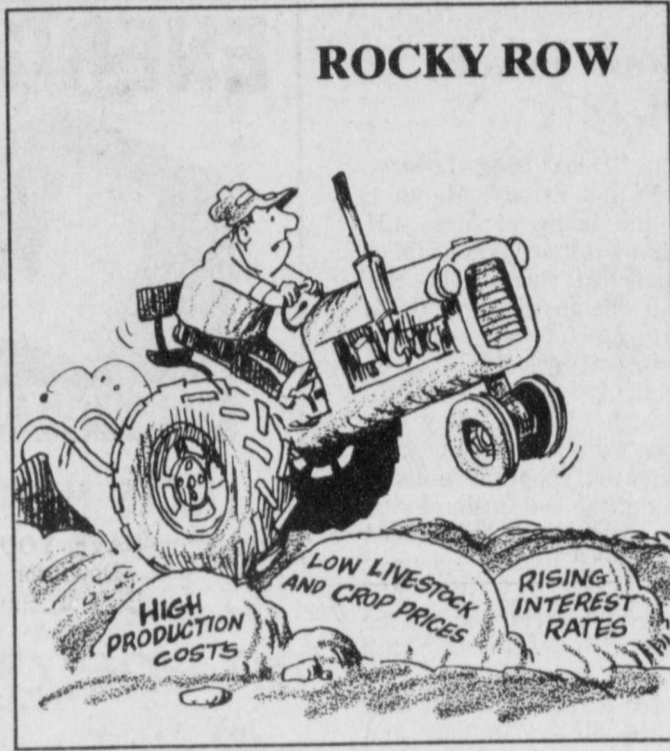

Advisory Council is ready to help bring a screeching halt to this lucrative drug business in Texas.

For the month of March, the Council will focus the "Crime of the Month" on drug smuggling. Any citizen having information on drug smuggling and trafficking operations is asked to call the anti-crime hotline at 1-800-252-TIPS. Cash rewards are available for information leading to the arrest and indictment of these criminals. Citizens do not have to reveal their name, just their information, and they will be given a unique code number for identification purposes.

Governor Clements and the Texas Legislature have provided tough new laws to fight drug trafficking, but they cannot do it alone. Call 1-800-252-TIPS today with any information you may have on drug smuggling in Texas. Help shut down this menace to our state.

Book On Early Pioneers Released

On September 5, 1816, Claiborne Wright and his family landed at Pecan Point and joined the Wetmore brothers, George and Alex, and their partner, William Mabbit, as the only permanent anglo-American settlers in what would become the Republic of Texas in 20 historically-filled years. The Wright family became the first recorded white family to settle and survive the elements of pioneer life in the wilderness.

Claiborne Wright's children would live under several governments, including that of the Missouri Territory, Arkansas Territory, Spain and Mexico. They would see their lands given to the Choctaw Nation by 1828. Claiborne Wright did not live to see the Republic of Texas nor annexation into the United States. His sons, however, became very influential in the governmental and business affairs of the new nation.

"Six Months From Tennessee" is the long-awaited story of life in what was called Miller County, Territory of Arkansas, from 1818-1829. Wright, and those who followed him to the area, would formulate the first arrivals of the soils of Texas. Many would later join with their friend, Sam Houston, to declare independence from Mexico and fight for that cause. But before that, those settlers had to defend their lands from Indians, soldiers at Fort Towson, from Andrew Jackson's will to take their land for an Indian Territory and, from the elements of nature. Finally, they were pushed south of the Red River and gave their allegiance to Mexico, in an effort to claim legal title to land.

This 250 page, hardback book, authored by former newspaper editor, Skipper Steely, the great-great-grandson of Claiborne Wright, is a history of many of those early arrivals. Most of them have been previously ignored in textbooks until today. The sources for the material in the publication come from family records, many of which have been retrieved from dusty files belonging to cousins now located across the United States. Family lore, undocumented in only a few instances, plays a large part in the narrative. But, as a whole, the entire story is told with the assistance of current materials located deep in the pages of the Arkansas Gazette, from the Territorial Papers of Arkansas, from the files of other families involved and from the archives located from Austin, Texas to Louisville, Kentucky.

"I heard the stories, read the letters and thought for years of someday compiling this fascinating story into book form, not of a genealogical nature per se, but as a story that all would read," comments Steely.

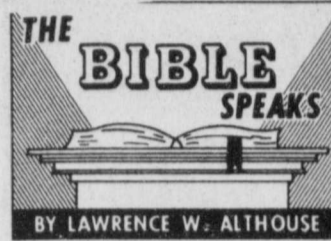

The book will be published in May and may be purchased now for $30 plus $1.50 tax for those living in Texas. "We are only going to print a number of copies equal to the orders we receive before April 1," said Steely. The address for inquiry is Claiborne Wright Historical Association, P.O. Box 94, Paris, TX 75460.

"Well, it may NOT be constitutional, son - but I'm STILL gonna say a little prayer thankin' th' Lord for a good year."

ONLY GOD KNOWS February 28, 1982

Background Scripture: Mark 13: 24-37; Luke 21: 25-32.

Devotional Reading: Psalms 119: 113-125.

The latter portion of Mark 13 is one of the darkest portions of the gospels for us to understand. Jesus warns of both dark days ahead and "the Son of man coming in clouds with great power and glory" (13: 26). The vision is concluded with this picture: "And then he will send out the angels, and gather his elect from the four winds, from the ends of the earth to the ends of heaven" (13: 27).

What is really confusing to us is the statement that: "this generation will not pass away before all these things take place" (13: 30). How shall we understand this? We know that "these things" have not taken place yet, let alone within "this generation," (referring, of course, to those who heard him).

Only The Father

On the basis of those words many Christians have claimed to know precisely when the promises were to be fulfilled. To date, all of these predictions have proven to be in error, although almost every day we read of another group or prophet warning us of the eminent demise of the world.

We can spend hours and hours speculating and arguing over these words or we can concentrate on the words we do understand: "But of that day or that hour no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but only the Father" (13: 32). If Mark 13 can teach us anything it is the truth of that statement. Only God knows when and how those promises will be fulfilled. It is therefore fruitless for us to continue to dispute and speculate on this subject.

The purpose of Christ's warning about the "Son of man coming in clouds with great power and glory" is, not to make the church a debating society, but to keep the followers of Christ vigilant to the judgment of God in Christ. The key to this whole passage is found in this admonition: "Take heed, watch; for you do not know when the time will come" (13: 33). In other words, we are to live our lives as if the day of judgment and the return of Christ were likely to be this afternoon. Then we will be motivated to do what he has commanded.

Lest You Be Found Asleep

The proper activity of the follower of Christ will not be passive waiting upon some mountaintop, but active discipleship and witness after the example which Christ set before us. We are to be vigilant "lest he come suddenly and find you asleep" (13: 36). To be found "asleep," is not to be physically asleep, but spiritually. If we are spiritually awake and alert, we will be found by him in the midst of the work of his kingdom. We will be ministering to the needs of others; we will be witnessing, not to the bad news of Armageddon, but the Good News of God's redeeming love in Christ Jesus.

SENIOR CITIZEN'S CORNER HELPFUL IDEAS FOR SUCCESSFUL RETIREMENT

DON'T ASSUME

If you are nearing retirement, you should be able to respond quickly if someone asked the monthly income you expect to receive from Retirement Day No. 1. If you don't know — and retirement is a year, even two years away — get busy. You need to know what is due you from social security, company retirement, and all other sources. And you need verification; what you "think" and what you may assume may not agree with the records that will determine your benefits from whatever sources.

Your work and salary history is important to the determination of Social Security benefits. The people who administer the program do an effective job and try in every way they can to be helpful. But mistakes happen once in a while; through the course of a work-life and several jobs, an employer may inadvertently list an incorrect salary figure or working period, and both are important. What you have earned and what you have paid into Social Security is shown on your W-2 forms.

If you will be due benefits as a union member - or the wife of a union member, be sure you know exactly what those benefits are, not what they were when you began working. Changes may have been made in the provisions of the retirement fund through the years - changes that may affect such decisions as whether or not you should retire on the day you are eligible for full benefits or continue to work for a while longer.

THOUGHT FOR FOOD By GOULD CROOK

CHILI-CHEESE CASSEROLE

- 2 cans (4 oz. each) whole green chilies, drained and seeded
- 2 cups chopped tomatoes
- 2 cups shredded Cheddar cheese (about 8 oz.)
- 1 cup Bisquick baking mix
- 1 cup milk
- 3 eggs
- 1/2 tsp. salt

Heat oven to 375°. Grease square baking dish, 8x8x2 inches. Arrange chilies in single layer in dish. Sprinkle with tomatoes and cheese. Beat remaining ingredients with hand beater until smooth; pour over top. Bake until knife inserted in center comes out clean, 30 to 35 min. 6 to 8 servings.

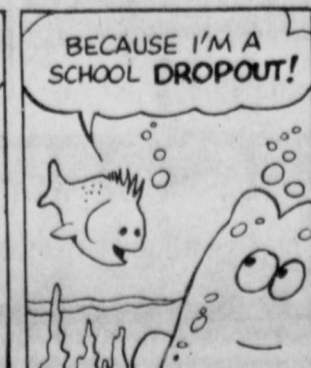

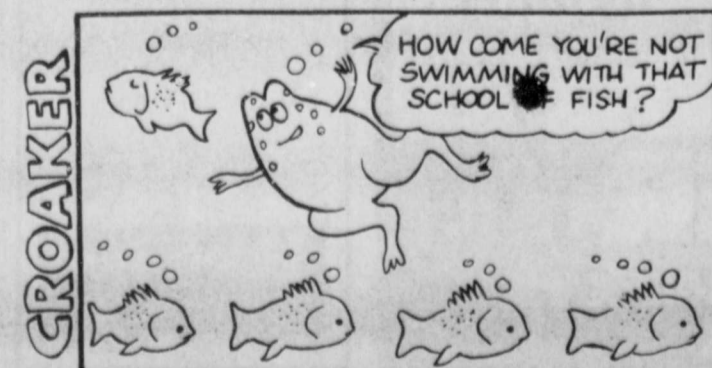

CHEESE STORAGE

Buying cheese in quantity (several pounds or more) can provide convenience as well as economy, but only if you keep it fresh until it is used.

Cheese, including processed cheese, keeps best in the refrigerator although some varieties can be frozen. Hard cheeses such as Cheddar and Swiss keep much longer than soft cheeses such as cottage and Neufchatel. Cheddar, Swiss and other hard varieties, if tightly wrapped, will keep for several months unless mold develops. (Mold can be cut off and the remainder of the cheese used.)

For best results, leave the cheese in its original wrapper. Paraffin wrappers keep air from reaching the cheese and drying it out. Plastic wrappers should be pressed to remove air, then fastened securely.

Nichols Worth

By Nanalee Nichols
Sitting at my desk and listening to the pleasant little "dee deedit dee det die" of the long distance direct dialing call going through, I recalled just how far telephones have progressed over the past years.

As angry and frustrated as we sometimes get with the phones nowadays, most of us can remember when phones were hefty chunks that came in any color wanted, as long as you wanted black.

Being on the wrong side of thirty now, I can barely recall when there was a wooden box on the wall and the ear phone hung on the side of the little box. To call, one cranked a little crank and waited for the local operator.

When long distance was desired, one called the operator up, and she would start putting through the call. The caller then hung up and sat around and waited until the operator called back to say "Your call is ready now, sir". One plus dialing isn't such a hassle after all, is it?

Even further back in time, when each little town had it's own phone company, they tell me that folks didn't even trust the new fangled contraption.

During the big flu epidemic about fifty years ago, lots of folks would answer their telephone for fear that flu germs would be transmitted over the phone lines!

The telephone has progressed to the point where they come in more colors than a rainbow, may not even have a dial, or are shaped like a famous mouse, but their basic usefulness is still undiminished, and being able to talk anywhere almost immediately is still a minor miracle!

Managing The Piney Woods

By R. Haddock
Over 250,000 acres is covered with pine and hardwood timber in Red River County. Pine and hardwood stands are found on much of the uplands, and hardwoods generally predominate on bottomlands along the rivers and creeks. Some landowners have good stands of commercial trees in the county, although stocking and growth rates are well below their potential.

When talking and discussing the family forest with landowners, I've found that the management mostly consist of "just cutting when it gets big enough." Like a cattle herd, if not properly managed, after several years the quality and quantity gets very low.

Dan Beattie is a forester landowner and is trying to improve his woodland farm in the northeastern part of the county. The one hundred seventy five acres consist mostly of loblolly pine plantation. "All the plantation has been cut over one time" states Beattie. The trees were properly marked by a professional forester, selecting the right trees to be cut. "All trees left are outstanding trees, full crain, straight, and not diseased," says Beattie, while examining one of the trees.

Beattie, still not satied with all the buildup of hazardous fuel on the ground, has decided to do more managing, that includes a prescribed burn. While talking with Beattie, he pointed to several trees that were killed by wildfire. "After the wildfire came across the edge of the planation, I was scared of fire and what it did to the trees" he explained, "but a fire properly managed can be useful to us woodland owners.

The primary reason for a prescribed burn is to remove accumulated brush, leaves, and pine needles from the forest floor, thereby limiting the fuel source from potential wildfire.

Beattie like many other landowners here in the county is very interested in what effect burning will have on wildlife. Prescribed burns are usually in smaller tracts and are slower moving and allow animals to move out of the way of the fire and avoid injury, unlike the situation in forest wildfires. Also, prescribed burning removes much of the inedible or "junk growth" from the forest and allows the tender browse, favored by deer, a chance to grow.

The best months for burning is December, January, and February. There are not many days during any year when weather conditions are right for prescribed burning. There are usually only 20 to 30 optimum burning days each year. After a burn is completed the woods will look rather bad for a few weeks, but usually after the first rain most of the black look will be replaced with green growth. And with the "freen up" of spring, the woods will have the "open" park look.

Forest landowners who are interested in using the cost-effective prescribed burning technique should notify the Texas Forest Service before doing any burning. Texas Forest Service provides weather conditions and other information for such burns.

Mrs. Harper Honored

Mrs. Julia Harper was honored March 14 at her home with a birthday dinner on her 89th birthday. Her daughters, Ila May Brown of Mt. Pleasant and Louise Smith of Dallas and her sister and a niece, Mrs. Millie Harper and Mrs. Hazel Brown of Bogata were hostesses.

Attending were Eugene Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Blalock, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brown of Mt. Pleasant, sister, Mrs. Lizzie McWilliams of Pittsburg, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Brown and Carl and Dianne Brown and Christye of Clarksville, Mrs. Nina Stewart, Regina, Tina and Julia Kay, Janet Harper and Craig Brown of Bogata, Dale Smith and daughter and husband and children of Dallas, the hostesses and honoree.

Mrs. Harper received many nice gifts.

"You say you're an animal trainer," said the circus manager, "but you're only a midget."

"Exactly," replied the midget. "The animals look at me and say to themselves, 'I'll just wait till he gets a little fatter.'"

Customer: I'd like to have my money refunded. Clerk: What's the problem sir? Customer: I bought some of your bird seed and planted it and not a single bird came up.

TROTTERS—The Trotters are a member of the Rivercrest Youth Basketball teams being organized in the Bogata area, and are coached by Britt Morgan and Jimmy Smith. Youngsters are ages 8, 9 and 10. (Staff Photo)

Gilmer Program For Dairymen

Dairymen throughout the area are invited to attend a program at the Yamboree Building in Gilmer, Wednesday, March 31 to hear a nationally known authority speak on milking system and analysis and milking procedures. Dr. Paul Blackmer, veterinarian, Chino, Ca., will conduct the one day program, according to Glenn Aubrey, Upshur County Extension agent.

Dr. Blackmer, founder of Mastitis Prevention Services, Inc., has been a practicing dairy veterinarian for the past 10 years. He has been a consultant to large dairies in several states and has lectured and written numerous articles on milking procedures.

According to Aubrey, the actual harvesting of milk is very important regardless of how good a job of breeding and feeding the dairyman has done. The program begins with a get acquainted session at 10 a.m. with Dr. Blackmer speaking from 10:30 to 12 noon. Following lunch, Dr. Blackmer will again speak from 12:30 to 2 p.m. A question and answer session is planned until 3 p.m.

All dairymen are encouraged to attend the meeting and learn the latest techniques of proper milking procedures.

OVERDRIVE
If you are buying a new car, by all means buy one with overdrive. This excellent investment will pay for itself in a short time. Overdrive can improve highway fuel economy up to 25%. Some new cars have a 5-speed transmission instead of overdrive, the fifth or highest gear acts much the same as an overdrive.
