Chemical Dumping Proposal Brings Reactions From Citizens, Officials

By Pat Wright
And Nanalee Nichols

A dumping ground for hazardous waste, including cancer-causing agents, has been proposed by Chem-Security Systems, Inc. for a 310 acre site six miles east of Cunningham, Texas, in southern Red River County. The site is within the Sulphur River Watershed, four miles north of Hagansport, and is owned by John Ward of Fulbright.

Chem-Security has an option, and plans to buy the land if core drill tests, completed last week, are favorable. Results of the tests are expected to be available within two or three weeks.

Representatives of the company said Thursday in a meeting with local newspaper owners Bob and Pat Wright that the site would be used to dispose of any substance which could be handled safely, according to the conditions of a permit which has yet to be issued by Vernon.

"We will be involved not only in the disposal of solid waste, but in the recovery of the Environmental Protection Agency. The only substance which the company spokesmen completely ruled out for disposal at the site was low-level nuclear waste.

Although company spokesmen said Thursday that the dump could be an asset to the area by attracting industry, the primary source for the hazardous waste material initially would be Longview, Tyler and Dallas. The chemicals would be transported to the site in a liquid state, with the most logical routing along I-30 from Dallas, through Mt. Vernon to the Red River County Site. Waste from Longview and Tyler could also be routed through Mt. Vernon to the marketplace," Roger Nelson, business development manager for Chem-Security Systems, a Bellevue, Washington based company said Thursday. "We already have the technology for recovering other substances from waste products, but the process is too expensive now. Later, when the economics are right, we could remove waste from the dump and extract the substance," Nelson said. "We can only dispose of solid waste material," Nelson continued, "no liquids, so we have to take the water from the waste at the site, then treat the water to be sure it is absolutely safe before we release the water."

Owners of the site expressed confidence in the safety of the operation. Mrs. Ward stated last week, "We have land all around the 310 acres that Chem-Security has an option on, and if we weren't convinced that it was harmless we wouldn't have done this."

Sen. Ed Howard and Rep. L. P. (Pete) Patterson have called for public forums on the dump site, in which the company would be required to explain the site to the citizens of the region. Representative Patterson stated that "I'm trying to keep an open mind, but it's hard. I am very much concerned that such a facility should be located so close to the Sulphur River Watershed. Patterson also said that he considered water one of the primary resources of East Texas, and that with only a limited number of sites for more lakes and reservoirs of the area he was concerned that such a chemical dumping facility might limit them further.

"I'm also very concerned about our high rainfall in this area, and the drainage. Flooding from Sulphur is another concern."

Patterson concluded that "until they convince me, and the people of the area that this thing is 100 per cent safe, and that it is the best for us, I'm against it." He also noted that he would be logging any calls or letters concerning this matter for the next thirty days to get public opinion, and wanted a forum on the matter.

Congressman Sam B. Hall stated he was contacted by an attorney some months ago, who said they wanted to locate a chemical waste disposal plant somewhere in the First District. He gave them the names of several area realtors after being assured that there would be absolutely no nuclear or radioactive waste dumped at the site.

Chem-Security held a meeting in Bogata on Thursday afternoon, with four or five people notified of it.

Among those present was Leslie H. Taylor, superintendent of Prairiland Schools, in whose district the facility would be.

Taylor stated that he had no prior knowledge of the plant, and the people picked up and took him to the meeting without prior notification. He stated that "At present I can't be anything but against this thing. I believe the company is honest and open, and they have had no accidents within the five years they've operated similar plants, but the long-range effects concern me very much." Besides, Taylor said, what the people in the area want is my major concern. "There will have to be a public meeting and additional information before I'll be satisfied."

Bogata Mayor, John Worth Hood, expressed concern that neither he nor any council members had been contacted about the meeting.

First National Bank of Deport president, Hugh Jeffus, Jr., expressed unhappiness that no one from the city of Deport had been contacted about the meeting, and stated "What will be the long range effects of such a facility? While it is monitored it should be safe, but what happens when the dump is full and the company no longer monitors it?"

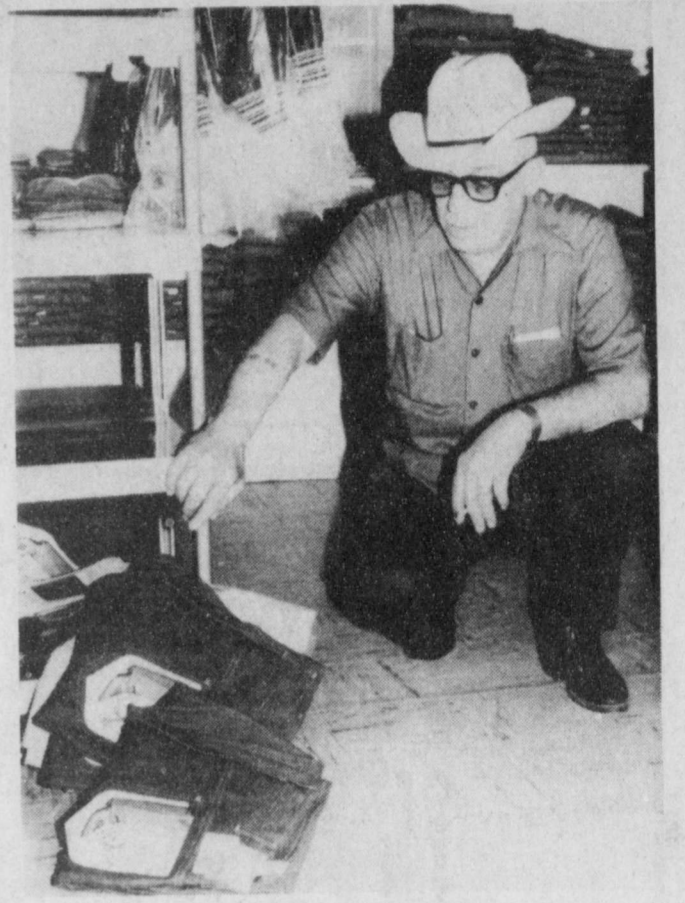

Prairiland 4-H To Meet Monday

The Prairiland 4-H club will hold a regular meeting at the Pattonville community center at 7:30 p.m. on May 11. All members are urged to attend.

Burglars Hit Deport, Bogata

Two burglaries, one in Bogata and the other in Deport, have similarities which cause authorities and store owners to believe they may have been committed by the same people.

On Wednesday night, or early Thursday morning the back door of Pat's Place, a women's clothing store, was broken down an merchandise in value of around $2400 or more was taken from the store.

On Thursday night burglars attempted to force entry into the back door of Davidson's Department Store, and when unable to open the back door threw a brick through the plate glass front door to gain entry.

At both places burglars took specific sizes, and picked out the more expensive items.

Footprints at Pat's Place indicated that one of the thieves was either a very slender man or a woman.

The burglars matched outfits, and picked out coordinated ensembles. They took Junior and childrens sizes.

At Davidson's Department Store they took two sizes of men's clothing and one child's size in jeans, shirts and underwear.

They selected only the expensive sheets, bath mats and towels.

Apparently tanking their time they matched gowns and robes up in size and color, and took only the most expensive men's shirts available.

Boots and hats in several sizes and styles were stolen.

Jo Nell Davidson, owner of the store, stated that merchandise totaled somewhere over $4000 had been taken.

A dropped plastic bag, with several items in it, indicated that the thieves had come prepared with their own bags to take away merchandise.

The case is currently under investigation by both Lamar and Red River County Sheriff offices.

It's very hard for someone who gets upset at dumped garbage bags to keep from becoming extremely concerned over the prospect of a chemical waste dumping site in our area.

Although the company appears to be of the highest quality, and regulations for such facilities are strict, the very fact is that such operations are so new that their long-range effects are truly unknown.

It is something that all area citizens should give careful thought to, for once it is done, there is no turning back. At no point after such an operation begins can it be reversed.

The company states that such a facility would bring in new industry, yet admits that much of their contract for waste disposal would be from Tyler, Longview, Dallas, and perhaps even New Orleans.

If waste dumping facilities are safe, and they may very well be, why aren't they located closer to the plants? Why must they be put in isolated areas?

Questions should be asked NOW, no later, and a serious look at this proposal taken.

We have something very precious in our area—clean air, water and rich soil. Although this company promises that a waste dumping facility would not harm that, we must consider, is it worth even the slightest chance of losing our natural resources to provide a dumping site for industry?

State, Environmentalists Disagree On Chem-Nuclear Company

By Pat Wright

Although officials with the Oregon State Government have nothing but praise for Chem-Security, Inc., a Washington based company which proposes to build a chemical disposal site near Cunningham in Red River County, at least one environmentalist in the area takes issue not only with Chem-Security, but with the way the state of Oregon administers the waste disposal laws.

Nancie Fadely, a former state representative and chairman of the House Environmental and Energy committee in Oregon, said Tuesday that "my impression is that it's a rather well run place. They have been cooperative and met all the requirements."

George Ward, a consulting civil engineer in Portland, said he has opposed the manner in which the state agencies have handled the hazardous waste disposal problem, citing the 1968 dumping of 25,000 barrels of toxic waste on a dry lake bed, Alkali Lake, and the subsequent burial of that waste by Chem-Nuclear Systems, the parent company of Chem-

Security Systems. However, the decision to bury the barrels was made by the state, and Chem-Nuclear was just the contractor on the job. When the barrels began leaking, cancer-causing agents were released into the ground water.

"Alkali Lake was just a horrible experience that the state and everyone else learned from," Gary Whitehouse with the "Lakeview Examiner" said Tuesday. "I think everyone is pretty happy at this time. The state is taking steps to see that it doesn't happen again, and dealing with it in a fairly realistic way."

The Red River County site, according to Roger Nelson, business development manager for Chem-Security, will probably be composed of trenches 200' wide, 600' long and 40' deep packed with clay. The site will be open until filled, kept dry by draining and treating the rainwater which falls into the trench, then closed with another layer of clay. The trench will then be covered with topsoil and planted with grass, Nelson said. In addition to the packing around the trenches, the area will be encircled with monitoring wells. Money to ensure the continuous monitoring of the site for 30 years following closure in the event of the total collapse of the company is placed in trust in three different funds, Nelson commented, including money which pays for the expense of the government to monitor the site while in operation.

This method of chemical disposal, "entombment" is not the answer to chemical disposal, according to engineer Ward, who has been awarded two National Science Foundation grants for the purpose of studying the disposal of chemical waste.

Dear Editor:
I am a citizen of Southwest Red River County and proud of it. Perhaps Red River County has had some problem in the past, but in my opinion we have had no problems as un-surmountable as the problem we will have if there is a Chemical Waste Disposal facility located in Red River County.

There was no one in this community, and most of the people of Red River County did not know that anyone was considering building a chemical waste disposal plant in the county until they read the article in the Paris News on Wednesday, April 29 edition. Although it was stated in that edition that a representative of the company would meet with leaders of Red River County on Thursday the people were not informed as to the place or the time the meeting would take place, however, I read in the Friday, May 1 edition of the Paris News that a meeting was held in Bogata Texas on Thursday, and a resident of Lamar County, Leslie Taylor was quoted. Why would Lamar County citizens be notified and not Red River County residents, along with those in Cass and Bowie County, since these counties are affected by the water from the Sulphur River Water shed.

I live three-tenths of a mile from the proposed site of the disposal plant, and I was not notified that such a facility was being considered, under my very nose. Is this the definition of being honest and wanting to keep everything above board? Although I am not a geologist, I have lived fifty years of my fifty-five years within a few miles of my present home. I definitely think there would be some seepage thereby reaching Sulphur River.

We have to think of the people who live in the vicinity and the people who get their drinking water from Sulphur River area, such as Texarkana, Hooks, New Boston, DeKalb, Avery, Ammona and about one-third of the rural area of Red River County.

I consider this proposed plant dangerous and I am opposed to it.
Thank you,
Mrs. P.C. Abernathy

Farmer Union Has Specific Goals

"Farmers have to organize in order to protest, demonstrate, and work for legislation for a better price for their products," according to Kenneth Moss, Organizational Specialist for the Texas Farmers Union. Moss was speaking at the first reorganizational meeting of the Lamar County Farmers Union, April 28 at the Paris Horse and Rodeo Club meeting room.

Farmers in Lamar County, concerned about the 1981 Farm Bill which will be written in the near future, asked the Texas Farmers Union to assist them in rechartering the local. The Farmers Union lobbies for 100 per cent of parity for agricultural products across the nation and represents over 9,000 farm families. The Lamar County Union is beginning with almost 60 families and expects that number to grow rapidly, according to newly elected President, Jim West.

The organization elected the following members to serve on the Board of Directors: (Three years) James B. West, Craig Zant, Jerry M. Campbell, Jack Nelson and Bill Knight. (Two years) Glenn Goggans, Max Fair, Lannie Hicks, Randall W. Stephens and David Rutherford. (One year) Joe Donald Mashburn, Gary Nixon, Darrell Daughtery, D.D. Whitten and Ronnie Hicks.

be used to totally devour highly toxic chemicals," according to Ward, who says he proved the theory in a laboratory.

The microorganism method is already in use by Chem-Security in the Arlington, Oregon, plant, according to company president Patrick Wicks, who says there are still a lot of chemicals which can't be handled in this way.

Ward also takes issue with Wicks, who worked as the administrator of Hazardous Waste Management Section in Land Quality Division of Oregon Department of Water Quality before going to work for Chem-Nuclear.

"Wicks wrote the permit for Chem-Nuclear, then quit and went to work for them," Ward charged.

"I was involved in the writing of the permit," Wicks said, "but I feel there was no conflict of interest here, even though we knew there would be suspicions. I came from industry into government, and feel quite comfortable going back into industry. I felt I had accomplished all I could in government. They (Chem-Nuclear) offered me a job with the prior approval of my boss, the head of the department of environmental quality."

While with the government, Wicks filed suit against the company which dumped the barrels on Alkali Lake, but lost the case in court. The loss made the state of Oregon responsible for cleanup of the site. Within a year of the time Wicks left his government job to work for Chem-Security, the company was awarded the contract to bury the barrels at Alkali Lake.

In spite of the charges of conflicts, Chem-Nuclear has no record of problems in the 11 years it has been operating a low-level nuclear waste site in Barnwell, S.C., and no major problems with the Arlington, Ore., site.

"We have had some problems with leakage at the Arlington site in trenches lined with asphalt," Wicks said, "but they were contained and controlled. We are phasing this method (asphalt lining) out of our operation."

East Texas Eating

By Margie Rice
Fresh Strawberry Shortcake is THE April dessert, in my opinion. Recipes and methods of putting the shortcake together vary from cook to cook. My favorite is made by splitting individual shortcakes, hot from the oven, and layering with red-ripe strawberries, straight from the garden, and real whipped cream. I always serve the shortcakes on our prettiest dessert plates and with our silverest forks because they just seem to go together.
Here is the recipe for Favorite Strawberry Shortcake. It is delicious. And, it is quick and easy. Whip the cream and slice the strawberries, if you desire, during the 10 to 12 minutes the shortcakes are baking.
Favorite Strawberry Shortcake
(serves 4 to 6, depending upon size of shortcakes)
1 quart ripe, fresh strawberries, rinsed, drained and hulled.
1 pint whipping cream
Shortcakes:
2 and one third cups Bisquick baking mix
3 Tbsp. sugar
3 Tbsp. butter, milted
1/2 cup milk
Heat oven to 425degrees F. Mix ingredients until soft dough forms.
Gently smooth into a ball on a floured surface.
Knead the dough 8 to 10 times
Roll 1/8 inch thick.
Cut with 3 or 4 1/2 inch cutter dipped in flour or baking mix
Bake on ungreased cookie sheet until golden brown, 10 to 12 minutes.
Split each shortcake when it comes from the oven.
Top the bottom layer with whipped cream then strawberries.
Put on the top layer and repeat the layers of whipped cream and strawberries.

Methodist Tea Features Rainbows, Fashions

There were "Pots of Pleasure" at the end of Rainbows at the Deport United Methodist Church on Saturday May 2, 1981. The United Methodist Women were entertaining with their second Annual Tea for the Ladies of the Community as invited through their church. Decorations of Rainbows throughout the Fellowship Hall, gave effect to the theme "Rainbows of God's Love". Tables of decorative finger foods had as a center piece a basket of wildflowers highlighted with rainbow colored cupcakes. The tablecloth was hand embroidered by the Grandmother of Elizabeth Barnett, Mrs. E.K. Gunn in 1910. Matching punch bowls were at each end of the table. An arrangement of Rainbow colored carnations and roses was a gift from the Ladies of the First Baptist Church that added greatly to the theme. Jo Davidson presented style show with local talent used as models. Laura Wright, Vicki Gooding, Luanne Sparks, Suzy Kelsey, Pat Norrell, Juanita Sparks, Marlene Morgan and Shirley Gifford modeled appropriate and attractive designs chosen to their individual needs. The highlight of the show was the entrance of Andrea Allen and Lindsey Wright followed by Christopher Holt, Chip Adams, Brad Allen and Zackary Allen attired in Western wear complete with feathered hats and polka dot bonnets.

The program concluded with a Review presented by Mrs. Belva Nelms of Fort Worth, Texas. She chose the book "Ashes in the Wind" by Catherine Woodwise. The review was entertaining and tastefully presented.

More than 75 registered guests joined in the fellowship of an event that will be an Annual Affair.

NEVER BUY ON IMPULSE

Organize your shopping list according to how foods are grouped in the store. This way, there's less chance of forgetting an important item when you shop and less chance of buying on impulse. Don't confuse impulse buying with being flexible and alert to unadvertised specials.

Sometimes specials can be great money savers. To help you decide, the Extension home economists recommend that you ask yourself: Do I need this food? Does my family like this food? Do I have the other ingredients needed to go with it? Is this a reduced price? Sometimes specials are lower in price—you need to know the normal price to make a good cost comparison.

Whenever possible, make your shopping trip a private affair.

Lawn Should Be Chosen To Fit Needs

During late spring, lawn grass planting time, the question is often asked, "What is the perfect lawn grass to plant?" There is no perfect lawn grass. Every choice has good and bad qualities. A good turf selection will depend on the conditions of your lawn, or the conditions under which the grass must grow.

There are six basic permanent lawn grasses from which to choose in North East Texas: ST. AUGUSTINE, which is popular on average-sized lawns, is perhaps best known for its shade tolerance. It is also known for its serious insect and disease problems. St. Augustine, which cannot be planted from seed, demands high maintenance with regard to fertilization, summer watering, frequent mowing and insect and disease control. This grass will offer the grower a dark green turf of reasonable fast growth and coverage. Floratam, a St. Augustine hybrid, is now available yet risky in our area due to possible cold damage.

perhaps the most popular lawn grass in North and East Texas. This grass, which may be established from seed, is quick and comparatively inexpensive to establish. The major disadvantage of common bermuda is its inability to grow in shade or beneath trees. Bermuda grass insect and disease problems are not serious; yet its maintenance is high in regard to fertilization, summer watering, and control of the underground runners in flower beds and cultivated areas.

HYBRID BERMUDAS are high maintenance grasses and are relatively expensive to establish, as they cannot be planted from seed. Hybrid bermudas, which are popular on highly maintained golf greens, demand continual and exacting mowing, fertilization and summer watering. These bermudas, which include U-3, Texturf 10, Tifgreen, Tifway, Nomow and others, are slow to establish compared to common bermuda and are not recommended for the average gardener.

selection for our area, cannot be seeded, and is rather slow to establish. It, too, like the hybrid bermudas, is a fine-textured grass which demands high maintenance. Three types of zoysias are used in Texas: "Zoysia Meyer", "Emerald", and the very slow-growing "Midwest".

CENTPEDE grass is very much at home in the sandy, acid soils of East and North Texas. Compared to other lawn grasses, this one demands the least maintenance in that it does not like high fertilization, is heat tolerant, and has few insect and disease problems. Centipede will grow in partial of filtered shade and may be planted from seed. Seeding, however, may result in erratic germination; therefore, it is best planted from vegetative parts.

CARPET grass, too, is low maintenance grass; yet one that lacks the beauty and polish of other lawn grasses. Carpet is often used over large areas where maintenance becomes a serious problem. It has no major insects and diseases; yet poor drought tolerance. Carpet grass may be planted from seed.

Regardless of the type lawn grass the homeowner selects, the real success of the grass will depend on proper planting and care. Spring and early summer is grass planting time. Make a wise grass selection based on your growing conditions and the amount of time you can provide toward maintenance.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Revenue Forecast May Wait Until After Legislature

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said a increase or decrease in his state revenue forecast may have to wait until after the Legislature goes home.

Bullock's revenue estimate limits what the Legislature can spend on the budget for the coming two years under the Constitution's pay-as-you-go provision. "I would like to have the revised forecast done by the time the House and Senate iron out their differences in the budget, but I make no promises," Bullock said. "But I can promise Texans one thing, the state will not go into the red."

Bullock said that uncertainty about President Reagan's economic policy proposals and the changing nature of the Texas economy might hold up final revisions of the forecast. Bullock noted also that figures only now coming in are critical in analyzing sales tax income.

Managing Clovers

How to properly manage clovers in pastureland is a question often asked us at the Soil Conservation Service. To a large extent the answer depends on the landowners particular type of pasture and how it is managed.

Growing clovers and grasses in combination does require more management than if either plant were grown by itself. But, there are a number of advantages in growing a combination of both. Besides offering additional grazing in the late winter and early spring, clovers will increase the protein of the forage. They also add nitrogen to the soil by taking it from the air and fixing it in small nodules on the root system of the plant.

To be successful in growing clovers in your pasture there are several things that must be done. The top growth of the grass should be reduced to about four inches around October 1. The seed should be treated with the proper inoculant. A good fertilizer with phosphate and potassium plus a small amount of nitrogen should be used in the fall. To get continued reseeding from the clover it must be deferred for about 30 days. This will insure good seed production.

For more information on growing clovers and grasses in combination, contact the Soil Conservation Service in Clarksville in the basement of the Post Office building.

Minimum Tillage Has Advantages

Minimum tillage is a system of farming in which cultivation is limited to those operations essential to crop production. It uses herbicides to control competition. The ideal system is one that prepares a seedbed, plants the seed, and applies herbicides and fertilizer in one operation. The benefits depend upon the type of system installed, crops grown and equipment used. With most minimum tillage systems only one or two cultural operations are required. Fewer trips across the field mean savings in labor, fuel and equipment.

The residues left on the soil keep the temperature cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter. Plus you get only about half the direct evaporation losses from your fields. Probably the most important benefit is reduced soil erosion. It contributes to environmental improvement by reducing pollution from sediment and blowing dust. On land susceptible to erosion, minimum tillage can often keep soil losses so low that cultivation could become feasible. However, this does not mean Class VII land becomes capable of cropland.

Double-cropping soybeans after wheat is becoming more popular in Red River County. Minimum tillage is ideally suited to this type of cropping system. In fact the wheat could be harvested and the soybeans planted in the same field the same day. Before starting a minimum tillage system, there are a number of points to consider. Special equipment is needed to plant in the previous years residue. This equipment must be purchased or adapted from equipment already on hand.

HAVE YOU GOT WHAT IT TAKES?

Imagination and energy. That's what it takes to plan nutritious meals today.

Before you shop, consider your family and their nutritional needs, their food likes and dislikes. Include foods from the fruits and vegetables group; the breads and cereals group; the milk and cheese group; and the meats, poultry, fish, eggs and legumes groups in each day's meals.

Consecutive

Dry your clothes in consecutive loads. The energy used to bring the dryer up to the desired temperature shouldn't be allowed to go to waste.

A POSTER Contest awarded a $10 prize from the Deport PTA to the children with the best poster featuring good
