Nichols Worth

By: Nanalee Nichols

What is common is frequently without value. It's a tried and tested fact.

Mankind, and womankind too, strives constantly to grow or obtain that which is the hardest to have.

Trees, for instance. No one would think of planting a mimosa tree or bois d'arc tree in their precious yard space. Chances are there are plenty of those around already, frequently so many that they have to be cut down.

Yet up in the northern states, mimosa's sell for high prices and bois d'arcs are so rare that whole neighborhoods will watch and cherish one that is surviving!

Down here, we persist in trying to grow spruce trees and other things that can't survive the hot, dry summers. Up north they persist in trying to grow trees that can't survive the long, bitter cold winters.

The same thing goes with grass. We prepare seed beds, fertilize, sod and cherish St. Augustine grass, or special blends of grass, or at the very least some very special breed of bermuda grass. Left alone, there will be grass on a yard. It just won't be the KIND we want!

Flowers are the same way. We don't ever plant those that will multiply and spread...oh nooooo.....we want those that require careful tending...special watering.

Vegetables are much the same again. The greens and cabbages, tomatoes and okra that do well here require special cultivation in different parts of the country. The broctolli and cauliflower, special peas and such we labor over down here.

Why? Is human nature such that we have to place more challenges in our path than we already have? Must we practice against adversity?

Is it simply that the grass always looks greener on the other side of the fence?

Whatever the reason, few of us are exempt from it. It's an amusing facet of human nature...and one that has to have a reason somewhere!

Once There Was A Hydrogen Explosion

By Wm. C. Barnard

W.J. Holloway and his wife Syble, taught in the Deport High School in 1924 and 1925. Mr. Holloway was the superintendent and taught mathematics and science. Mrs. Holloway taught English. They were two of the best teachers that I ever had. There were no professional counselors in high school in those days, but Mr. Holloway was a counselor and a good one. We had some options as to subjects that we could take. He would discuss with us these various subjects, and give us an opportunity to make the right choices. He would discuss with us individually our goal in life and what we should do to reach that goal. I probably never would have gone to college except for his encouragement. If anyone was having difficulty with some of his school work, he was invited and welcomed to go to their home in the evening for some special tutoring.

Mr. Holloway taught Physics, and sometimes he would have me to set up the laboratory apparatus for the demonstration. Once while we were studying electric currents and electrolysis, he asked me to set up the apparatus for, and demonstrate the electrolysis of water. The apparatus consisted of a couple of interconnected glass tubes shaped like the letter H, and set in a vertical position. There was an electrode, or electrical connection at the bottom of each leg of the H and a stop cock at the top of each leg. The glass tubing was then completely filled with water. When an electric voltage was applied at the two connections at the bottom of the tubes, gas bubbles would form and rise to the top. The demonstration was to show that the electric current passing through the water would break it down into its two components of hydrogen and oxygen. The oxygen would rise above the positive electrode and the hydrogen above the negative electrode. After sufficient gas was accumulated, a test would be made by applying a lighted match to each of the opened stop cocks at the top of the tubes. The oxygen should cause the match to flare up and burn brighter. The hydrogen gas should catch fire and burn like ordinary natural gas.

In setting up the demonstration, it was discovered that the dry cell batteries that were to be used were dead, and there was no direct current to energize the experiment. It was almost class time and rather than postpone the demonstration, I rigged up the electrical connections to the alternating current of the house lighting system. By then it was class time.

Everyone gathered around the table to view the demonstration. After the necessary remarks about the decomposition of water and the phenomenon of electrolysis, the electricity was turned on. Immediately bubbles began to form at the electrodes and rise to the top of the tubes. The volume of hydrogen was supposed to be double that of the oxygen, but in our experiment the volume in the two tubes was the same. That was strange, because that was not what the book said.

We continued with the experiment and after three or four cubic centimeters of gas had formed, I applied a lighted match to one of the gas openings, and BOOM!!!! with the sound of a pistol shot, water and shattered glass went all over the table. Fortunately no one was injured by the flying glass.

I was embarrassed. I knew instantly the cause of the blast, but it was too late to call it back. I expected Mr. Holloway to give me a good dressing down, and discharge me from my job as laboratory assistant.

Instead he calmly said to me, "You will now tell the class what caused the explosion and how the apparatus will be set up next time."

I think the experiment was performed, made more of a lasting impression on all of us than it would have if it had been carried out in an uneventful manner.

Prairiland Defeats Pitts

By James VanDeaver

The Prairiland Patriots opened their district season in baseball Tuesday night in Pittsburg as they defeated the Pirates 11-0 in a 6 inning affair.

After having been retired four times on four pitches, the Patriots got rolling offensively in the second inning. Jay Ingram initiated the barrage with a sharp single through the right side of the field. After swiping second base, John David Loyd plated Ingram with the first run of the game with a double.

Loyd promptly scored run number two as Chris Sparks singled and the ball was misplayed. Sparks continued the base thievery for the Patriots as he stole third base and was driven in by a Mike Connot single for run number three.

Connot then showed off some more Patriot row speed as he stole second base and came in to score run number four on a deep double off the bat of Tony Duncan. Scott Scudder drove in the fifth and final run of the second inning with a single as Prairiland led 5-0.

Prairiland was quick to jump aboard the bases in the third inning as well, as John Dusenberry started the inning with a bang with a shot to right which amounted to a single. After an Ingram walk, a Pirate wild pitch was unleashed putting on third and second base. Dusenberry came in to score on a Loyd sacrifice and Ingram moved over to third.

Chris Sparks followed with a walk and then Ingram scored the seventh run of the game on a Mike Connot ground-out. That ended the Patriot scoring in the third and Prairiland led 7-0.

The fourth inning was a low scoring one for the Patriots but was another productive one. Scott Scudder led off the inning with a walk and then stole second, made it to third on an error, and scored on a Heath Kennedy ground-out as Prairiland led 8-0.

Prairiland got another lone run in the fifth inning as John David Loyd started the inning with a single which was followed by a Chris Sparks single. Loyd came in to score the ninth run of the contest on a Mike Connot solid single to centerfield.

The sixth inning was the final inning as Prairiland used the 10 run after five inning rule. The tenth and eleventh runs of the game came as a result of consecutive hits by Dusenberry, Ingram, Loyd and Sparks.

The Patriots got another strong outing out of junior flame thrower, Scott Scudder as he gave up three hits while striking out sixteen. With Scudder pitching a masterpiece and the Patriot offense running on all cylinders, the Patriots won 11-0.

Presbyterian Women Meet

Presbyterian Women met Tuesday evening, March 18 in the home of Mrs. Gary Nixon. Nine members were present for the meeting.

Mrs. Farris Read, president, opened the meeting with the mission yearbook of prayer. She gave a report on the work being done in the Presbytery of Pittsburg, PA stating they support 37 mission projects, some in cooperation with other Christian groups. These projects include soup kitchens, campus ministries, counseling, youth programs, literary training, food pantries, and hospital chaplaincies.

Mrs. Sam Rice led in a special prayer for missions.

Mrs. John Moore, treasurer, reported the pledges for the first quarter had been sent, including the White Cross offering.

The study of the twelve minor prophets was continued. Mrs. Ara Fuller reviewed the book of Zephaniah. The theme of this book was humility.

Miss Edith Fuller presented the books of Nahum, Obadiah and Habakkuk. The theme of these books was "The Righteous Shall Live by Faith".

The offering of the Least Coin was collected, also an offering for the Presbyterian Children's Home in Waxahachie.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

This was followed by a social hour when Mrs. Nixon served a refreshment plate.

Straight Answers to Your Questions

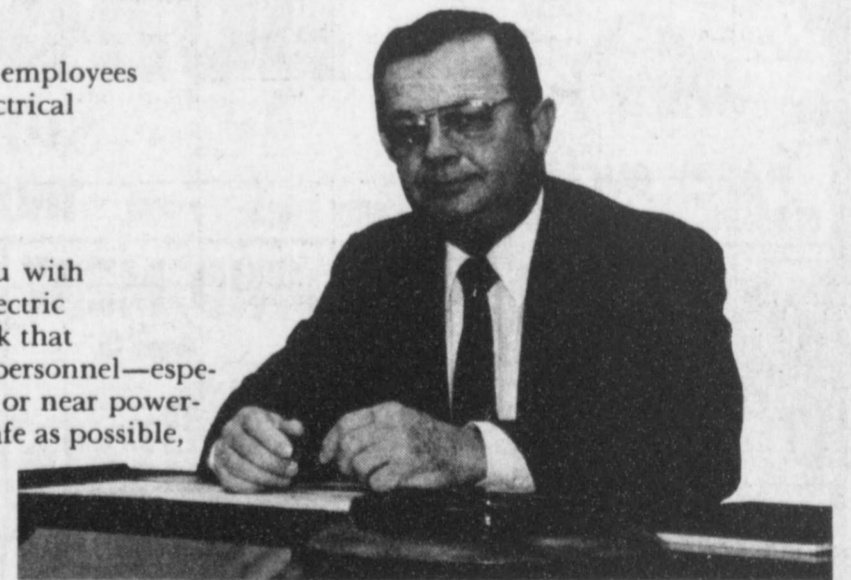

Q: Why are TNP employees trained in electrical safety?

A: Supplying you with dependable electric service is a task that requires a lot of trained personnel—especially when working on or near powerlines. In order to be as safe as possible, our linemen and construction crews are thoroughly trained to work with electricity safely.

Even though you and your family do not work with powerlines, you should make it a practice to use electricity safely every day. Here are a few guidelines: Always use tools and appliances which are properly grounded; never allow electrical appliances, such as hair dryers and radios, near the bathtub; replace worn or damaged electric cords.

When working outdoors, be aware of overhead powerlines and avoid contact with these lines. TV antennas, masts, tree pruners, ladders and other metal objects are extremely dangerous when used near powerlines. If you see a downed powerline, do not touch it.

With electricity, you cannot be too careful, so always handle electricity with care and respect.

TNP Vice President-Corporate Services Lloyd Parker is in charge of electrical safety training at Texas-New Mexico Power Company.
