World War II Still Real In England

By Nanalee Nichols

Editor's Note: This is the second in a travel series on England. From the response to last week's column, you folks must be enjoying it, so here we go for another column.

On Saturday, we woke to rain and gray skies, a change from our Texas temperatures that delighted us.

The morning was spent doing laundry. This means washing in the kitchen sink, then fitting clothes into a spin dryer which extracts the excess water most efficiently. Then, the clothes had to be hung inside to dry. Laundromats are available, but unhandy to get to on the bus since a lot of people don't have cars.

The afternoon was devoted to the Royal Air Force Museum at Hendon Airfield and the British Air Museum. Here, Thomas simply went a little crazy. So many planes, so beautifully displayed. A short film on the Battle of Britain, complete with air raid sirens, brought tears to Mic's eyes as she was taken back to the dreadful days when bombings came every day, night after night.

Both Mic and Lee were in the women's services during the second World War. They drew a crowd wherever people overheard them telling us just what it was like.

The realization of just how much England lost during that war soaked in on us during the week with them as never before. As Americans, we suffered some shortages...and lost a lot of soldiers.

But we never knew what it was like to huddle night after night in the underground stations while bombs laid waste to our cities overhead. We never knew real hunger, nor what it was like to not even be able to purchase a needle for years on end!

As we proceeded through the museum, hearing recordings of Winston Churchill's inspiring speeches, looking at uniforms and displays showing what life was like, Mic became quieter and quieter, finally beginning to tell us about the dreadful nights that she lay awake, waiting for the British and American bombers to return from their own bombing raids...and how the numbers returning were so horribly short of the numbers that had gone out.

It was a sombering, eloquent experience to have the times brought so alive to us.

After practically having to drag Thomas from the planes, we went to a Finchely china shop for some gift buying, then to Lee's apartment for a buffet dinner. Mic's daughter, Sue, and husband, Neil, were there, along with Pam, Lee, Mic and Thomas and myself.

Sunday was spent in London...the one square mile that makes up the actual city of London. For me, going to Fleet Street, the hub of the newspaper industry in Britain, was a special treat.

Even the pubs on that street have newspaper related names, and the whole street is geared towards newspaper production and life.

At St. Bride's Church, we were treated to the most beautiful choir we had ever heard. The famous choir and organ blended together to send hymns echoing throughout. Underneath the church, we went through the exhibits showing the various artifacts found when the church was bombed during the war. Roman walls and ruins were found when the bomb rubble was cleared, then artifacts from later ages.

St. Bride's Church is located on what is considered to be the oldest site for Christian worship in England...dating from 60 A.D.! It was a moving experience to see the remains left behind by such early Christians while modern day music drifted down the stone steps into the crypt.

Also included on our day with Lee and Pam in downtown central London was a visit to Dr. Johnson's house, and a trip to the Old Curiosity Shop, made famous by Charles Dickens.

Then we headed for the tower of London. A tour courier friend had provided the entry tickets to the tower in advance, and promptly at 2, when the gates opened, we rushed through, leaving lines of people behind. We were able to have a leisurely view of the crown jewels while everyone else was waiting in line for their tickets!

Those jewels are absolutely awesome. The workmanship and beauty is exquisite, while the size and number of the jewels simply boggles the imagination!

Afterwards we toured parts of the tower, including a visit to the tower ravens. Legend says that if the ravens ever leave the tower it will crumble...and taking no chances, they clip a few wing feathers to make sure it doesn't happen!

The bloody history of beheadings, murders and executions bring some of the struggles that took place for control of the empire over the centuries.

As usual, we were awed by the age of things. For a nation with only a little over two hundred years of history, seeing buildings six, seven or eight hundred years old is really something.

Where we slap a historical marker on anything over 100 years of age, they simply figure it's nearly new housing and just getting broken in good!

After the tower, we drove along the embankment...the road that runs along the River Thames. Cleopatra's needle, a huge stone obelisk given to the nation during the 1800's, rears up alongside the water, guarded by two sphinxes...one with shrapnel holes torn from an exploding bomb in World War II.

A monument designed by the famous Christopher Wren commemorates the Great Fire of London, which devastated the city in 1666...but also broke the plague that had been killing people for the previous year.

We walked through the area peopled by barristers, solicitors and judges, impressed with the gracious dwellings the legal profession inhabits.

In a crowded city, parks are the saving grace. St. James and Regents Parks provide gorgeous expanses of green grass, stately trees and ponds for people to enjoy.

A special surprise was revealed near Regents Park, as Lee leaped out of the car and dragged us down a narrow hallway. There on the wall was a simple plaque marked "Texas Legion". It marked the room where the Texas Delegation from the Republic stayed during the time the state was it's own republic and sent ambassadors and delegates to what was then the most powerful empire in the world...Great Britain. It's a fair bet that few tourists from Texas ever even know of it's existence.

A meal on Indian food completed a busy day. Indian food, from India, not "our" kind of Indians, of course.

Hot and spicy, it capped a day well spent roaming through what may be the world's most famous city.

LONDON's finest clown around with tourists and native Londoners alike. These two were more than willing to pose for pictures with Nanalee, far left, Lee, and Mic, far right. They are tactful and helpful, but expert at crowd control and other police functions. Known as "bobbies" they have a distinct uniform. (Staff Photo)

THERE WERE little dogs dipped for fleas and ticks at the Kiwanis

I DON'T LIKE THIS-This border collie belonging to Forrest Parks was more than a little outraged at the tick and flea dipping and the rabies vaccination he received at

Deport Kiwanis Still Dipping Dogs!

The Deport Kiwanis Club held the first of two dog dippings on Saturday, dipping about 50 dogs for fleas and ticks, and vaccinating a number for rabies.

On August 8, this Saturday, they will hold their second dipping. It will be and the office of Dr. Sam Kelsey, Veterinarian, located on U.S. Highway 271, one mile west of Deport. Dr. Kelsey will be on hand to supervise the dipping and to vaccinate animals for rabies. Hours will be from 9 a.m. until noon. The charge will be $4.00 per animal for dipping, unless you brought your animal to the first dipping. In that case, dipping will be free.

Dr. Kelsey will vaccinate any dog dipped by the Kiwanis Club for half of the regular $7.50 charge. Bring pets out for dipping, and vaccination if needed.

Disney Channel, which is stimulating and educational as well as entertaining. We also want to do what we can to encourage children and their families to keep reading. The Family Reading Program is an excellent way to build a partnership between quality television and quality literature."

In an effort to make this excellent programming available to as many people as possible, Home Cable TV will offer a Back To School Sale for new subscribers to The Disney Channel, featuring free installation and a free first month's service. "The offer begins August 1 and ends August 31," said Short. Anyone who is interested in subscribing or getting more information about the Family Reading Program is invited to contact Home Cable TV at 784-0991.

"Granny Mc" Makes Good Food!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY
AUGUST 8th
We Love You,
Daddy & Mama

By Nanalee Nichols
* When Dora McIntire cooks, she takes it seriously. Good food is a dedication with her, and her customers at Granny Mc's Cafe appreciate that fact.
One of Dora's specialties is home made yeast rolls, hot, made fresh daily, and delicious.
She's always up early at the cafe, getting them ready for the customers.
Having a cafe was a life-long dream "one I never really thought would come true."
She opened up last year on Highway 271 in Deport, and business has been booming ever since. Before that she worked in a cafe at Blossom. She and another employee of the cafe, Mary Bove, were happy to move back to Deport because it's "home."
The McIntires have lived just north of Deport since 1949. She and her husband, Hildon, moved there just after their marriage. Before that, she lived at English.
Opening the cafe was a challenge. She had many "ups and downs" learning the right amount of food to cook, when to begin cooking and what people liked. But she always made sure of one thing...that they were well fed with the best food she could provide.

Now, she has it down to a smooth, efficient science. Oh, there are occasional lapses...one morning she couldn't figure out why those rolls weren't rising. An investigation proved that she had made them with salt, not sugar! Needless to say, she had to start over!
Another busy day, someone grabbed up the cinnamon instead of chili powder. The chili, she said, was definitely weird! It too, had to be redone.
The McIntires have four children, two boys and two girls. The girls both work at the cafe, and the boys are always ready to help remodel, repair or rig up something for her.
As well as being a wonderful cook, Dora paints, too. Her paintings have sold as far away as Mississippi and Indians are her favorite subject.
"I'm fascinated by the Indian culture and lore. I love to paint them, and to read about them."
Several of her pictures are on display to brighten up the cafe.
Another hobby is hiking and camping. Small and spry, she loves to roam the mountain ridges in Arkansas or Missouri.
She recently attended a food show in Mineola in an attempt to find new ways to make the cafe better. A salad bar supper night is in the offing, having been tried once and being successful.
Attractive means of serving food was something else she is interested in. Pies of almost sinful richness are yet another specialty at Granny Mc's. Anyone who has ever watched a fork sink through the thick meringue into her fabulous fillings can appreciate them.

The Deport Kiwanis Club utilizes her services every Saturday morning as they sit down to a hearty breakfast of homemade biscuits, gravy and all the other goodies of a country cooked morning meal.
Folks from all over come for the food she cooks.
"I may be a little slower than some places, but I don't like fast food," she smiles. "I think folks would rather wait just a few minutes longer to have real, slow cooked, quality meals."
Folks, it seems, surely would, as they have learned to appreciate the small cafe on the highway. Granny Mc's, it can surely be said, has been a dream come true for a lot more people than just Dora McIntire.

Keeping Healthy

Hot Weather Hard on the Elderly

Older people have an increased risk of heat-related illness and the National Institute of Aging of the National Institutes of Health warns against heat exhaustion, heat cramps and heat stroke.
The Institute suggests several ways to cool off during a hot spell: taking lukewarm or cool baths or showers, allowing the body to air dry; placing an ice bag or wet towels on the body; staying out of direct sunlight and avoiding strenuous activity; wearing lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing; wearing a hat outdoors. Whenever possible, remaining indoors in a cool place is advisable.
Another suggestion from the Institute is to drink plenty of water or fruit juices to replace fluids lost through perspiration but to avoid alcoholic beverages.
Elderly relatives or neighbors should be checked on routinely, and especially those who live alone. Danger signs such as nausea, dizziness, fatigue or fever require prompt medical attention.
