Nichols Worth

By Nanalee Nichols

Last week I had the flu. Actually, I've still got the flu, it's just that' I've become one of the walking wounded instead of bedfast.

I've never in my entire life, until now, spent 7 straight days in bed. Never...no matter what!

But anyway, as I crawled out of the house into the real world again Monday morning, it was amazing the changes that had taken place. Or, if not changes, it was amazing the things that one notices after an abscence of only seven days.

The first thing that was noticable was that all our pools were full once again. The front "moat", dry now for months, was brim full. The ducks, as if they had never seen something so wonderful, were paddling and quacking around on it in obvious satisfaction.

We knew, in our misery, that it had rained, but didn't realise how much!

The frost sparkled crisp, clean and and eighth of an inch deep on everything, while a heavy mist swirled and rose above the earth.

It was beautiful out there! The air smelled new-washed and healthy, and the cold actually felt good. Driving along the road new calves kicked and scampered on long, thin legs. The old blue heron stalked majestically in the newly flooded ditch. Oh, it was wonderful to be out again. The familiar faces of people opening businesses and waving good morning looked new and Downtown looked fabulous! The office, with it's stacks and stacks of undone business to at tend to, was momentarily daunting...but then the very familiarity of it re-asserted itself. Oh, yes, it was wonderful! How grand to be out, about, healthy (well, healthier) and back at work instead of huddled up in that stupid sick bed. If I ever needed an illustration of just how wonderful it is to be up and around I got it. The world is a wonderful place..appreciate every single day that you are able be up and about to see it!

Have You Seen Them In Action?

By Nanalee Nichols

We all appreciate our volunteer firemen, right? Or do we? Do we really appreciate the thin line they form between us and disaster?

Unless you've watched them in action repeatedly, or even been a part of some of that action, you just can't appreciate what these people

Have you seen firefighters entering blazing buildings with only an air pack between themselves and asphyxiation, weilding a hose and desperately trying to make sure that an elderly person isn't still within the confines of the blazing structure?

Have you seen them on their hands and knees, vomiting and gasping for air after suffering smoke inhalation.

Have you seen them overcome by heat, pouring sweat, faces flushed as red as the flames they fight, on a 100 degree day, battling a house fire? Or beating at a tearing line of flames, higher than their head, with rubber paddles because the terrain is too rough for a truck?

Have you seen them trying to get a hose hooked up when the water is freezing to ice faster than it can run?

Have you seen them inadequately dressed, with ice on their eye brows and a wind whipping the flames they are trying to tame, at 2 in the morning?

But there's another aspect of the volunteer fire fighter that doesn't deal

Have you seen them time after time at wrecks and accidents, working rapidly to free someone from the twisted wreckage of a vehicle, or hosing down flammable gasoline to prevent a fire? Have you seen them breaking out the plastic body bag to put some poor soul into, or locating a sheet to lend dignity to someone's remains?

Have you seen them climbing down into the icy, trash-filled depths of an abandoned cistern to recover a child's

Or wading chest deep while they recover a long-drowned victim? Have you seen them searching the ashes of a house for the body of a fire

Have you seen them combing woods and neighborhoods for a lost Have you seen them with their hair and eyebrows singed by a butane explosion? I've seen them doing all of that, and a whole lot more. I've seen them comfort the dying, and those who have sustained the loss of all they own. I've seen them pull back to the fire station to drain lines, refill tanks and make sure there is plenty of gas when all they feel like doing is crawling home for a hot bath and bed.

During twelve long years of following the red trucks I've come to have an incredible amount of respect for these people.

They aren't professionals...oh no. No one has ever paid them a dime for their services. Many of them work shift work, and give up the time they should be sleeping to help. Many of them are local businesspeople, who cost themselves money by being away from their business.

They aren't always young, and they aren't always in tip top physical con-

They don't always have the very best equipment to work with.

The trucks are frequently old, understaffed, and under equipped.

But they are there. Always, they are there.

We take them for granted. We don't worry that there will be no big city, tax-supported firefighters to show up at our rural or small-town fires or emergencies.

We don't have to worry, we have our own. Bogata, Blossom Cunningham, Deport, Faught, Taylortown, Talco, Detroit, Cuthand, Pattonville, the list goes on. Community fire firghting units, equipped by local donations, staffed by local people.

The next time you think about it, tell them that they aren't taken for granted, and that they do have your respect, and appreciation. It's the only pay they ever get. They don't expect that...but they are bound to appreci-

Patriots Split With Winnsboro, Lose To' Quitman

In an unsuccessful bid Friday, January 19, on the home court, the Prairiland Patriots failed to win the game that would keep them out of a tie breaker for the 1st half of district play. The boys took a loss of 61-57 to Quitman, and the girls lost 41-38.

Jan Scudder led the first quarter with 6 for the Lady Patriots, but fell short of the 12 points the Lady Bulldogs racked up.

the second quarter ended in a tie of 19-19 with both teams keeping the pressure on on another.

Scudder, Ruckman, Bradford and add all scored critical pints in the ird stanza, but it was still not enough to take the lead from Quitman and the score ended 37-13.

In the fourth quarter the Lady Pats scored only 7 points while the Lady Bulldogs were held to only 4 points. But it was "too little, too late" as Quitman came out on top 41-38. Scudder was high pint with 15 and Ruckman had 10 points.

In the boys heart-stopping game, with all team members giving all they had, the Pats led at the end of the first quarter by one point with the score 19-18.

At the half it was evident that neither team wanted to give in with a 34-34 tie as foul shots kept the Pats in the

The third quarter action did not let up, and the end was still close-49-47 in favor of the Bulldogs, but it still was anyone's ballgame.

Fourth quarter stayed the same, with the Pats hitting for ten points and Quitman twelve but up until the last seconds it was strictly a case of "who could tell". But when the buzzer rang, it was the Bulldgos with the final say, winning 61-57.

The Red Raiders fell to the boys from Prairiland 67-58.

NOTICE

Due to the posibility of water cut offs being damaged or broken inside meter boxes customers are hereby notified that they should consult the Water Department of Deport before entering any meter box.

Meter boxes are city property and water customers should have their own water cutoff located outside of the meter box. If you need to get into a meter box for any reason, contact the water department, do not do it yourself.

Jerry Burns City of Deport Water and Sewer Superintendent

people are talking about our nation's crumbling, congested highways. Hundreds of billions of dollars must be spent, it is said, to pave over more land in order to ease highway congestion and to refurbish existing highways that were built 30 years ago to last only 20 years. Is money the only solution?

Maybe there is a better way--rail. While the nation's highways are crowded and crumbling, our rail lines are solid and underused. Rail operations are environmentally benign in terms of energy consumption, air pollution, public safety and land use disruption. Easing the load on highways by moving more freight by rail would cost American taxpayers nothing, because railroads own, maintain and pay taxes on their rights-of-way.

On the other hand, large trucks-the railroads' major competitors--pay as little as 50 percent of their highway cost responsibility and make no contribution to highway overhead costs. The remainder is borne by taxpayers and highway users in cars and light trucks.

One heavy truck can cause the same highway damage as 9,600 passenger cars. Drivers say it's not fair to force other vehicles to subsidize trucks.

Our federal government can eliminate this subsidy. Then, more freight would move to the nation's rails--benefiting all citizens, while costing them nothing in subsidies.
