By Nanalee Nichols

Remember my hamster story? The one about how my friend's hamster escaped, and I brought them a replacement hamster that gave me all kinds of trouble. Then, a few days later, how the first hamster showed up again?

Wellll...let me continue this

You see, the hamster that I got was supposed to be of the same gender as the first one. It wasn't. Now, I didn't check it, the girl at the store did.

My friends are convinced that I lid this on purpose. Nothing I can say or do seems to convince them I did NOT inflict hamsters of different genders upon their lives.

They found out that their hamsters weren't both females the hard way. That's when one of them had eight (count 'em if you can) ba-

Eight. Eight tiny, pink seethrough little hamsters.

Being sensible souls they decided to make the best of a bad bargain and turn this in to a learning experience for their son.

They studied all about little hamsters.

That's when I received the phone call. The excited phone call. The phone call threatening to give me all the baby hamsters. The phone call threatening me with a slow death by torture. The phone call that accussed me of being the cause of all this.

I tried to point out to them that I only did as instructed. That I was guiltless in this whole matter.

It seems that from the day they are born it takes only 4 weeks before baby hamsters become adults. Adults as in "begin to re-

Well, I laughed at them. I couldn't help it. I know it was rude, but it was also hilariously funny.

How good is your math? Try figuering out just how many little hamsters eight can have! Um huh, pretty amazing numbers aren't they?

Well, the weeks have simply flown by. Those tiny pink hamsters have gone from thumb sized minatures of their parents to almost as big as their parents.

This Thursday (today) is "H" day. All the hamsters have to go. They are pretty sure that a pet store is going to take them.

But if not, what ever are they going to do?

The threat still stands..they are going to leave them at my house. I keep pointing out that I have nine cats..so that isn't going to work unless they want them to be cat bait.

They know I won't do that. So, for now, in between chuckling over this situation, I'm saying a tiny little prayer that the pet store will take them. In fact, I may even call and tell them I'll PAY them something if they'll take em.

I DON'T want hamsters . Not any. Not even one.

Oh, my, I do hope this is the last chapter in the hamster saga!

Before you climb a ladder, look above you to make sure that there aren't power lines nearby. If your ladder could come into contact with a power line, place it in another location. Most ladders conduct electricity, so you could be shocked just by holding a ladder that touches a power line.

SPACE TOMATOES!-Jacob Bryant, a seventh grader at Deport Junior High School, has planted and is growing special tomato seeds that have been in space. Jacob saw an ad in a magazine and brought it to Mr. Hatcher, his science teacher. Mr. Hatcher ordered the seed from Park Seed Co. The NASA tomato seeds were flown in space aboard LDEF launched in 1984 on Space Shuttle Challenge and returned in January 1990 on Columbia. Strangely, the tomatoes that were fertilized aren't growing while those that weren't fertilized are up and doing well! (Staff Photo by Nanalee Nichols)
