Editor's note: Achin Al-corn, philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Sulphur, probably is unnecessarily worried this week, but that's his worry, not ours.

Dear Editar: I don't like to be an alarmist, but the Supreme just ain't familiar with farming. Court is about to decide on an When the price drops, all it they do so they'll know whether raises. Yours faithfully, A. A. death to the farmer.

According to an article I read in a newspaper this morning while I was deciding whether to plow or think — it sometimes takes me longer than a court to decide such things and if I didn't do any more thinking than I did plowing this morning, a half day was sure wasted—one big milk company is suing another for selling milk below cost, and the Supreme Court is going to decide whether it's against the law to sell at below cost.

I tell you, let the Supreme Court rule it's unlawful to sell below cost and it'll wreck agriculture.

Ever since farming started, one Terita Hill, Virgil Jones, Jimmy of the inalienable rights of a farmer has been to sell below

Easy Does It!

Automatic ELECTRIC Cooking

Cooking is easy as the flick of your wrist when you cook electrically. Simply put food for a meal in the oven and set the automatic controls. The oven turns itself on at a pre-set time, cooks dinner to a perfection, then turns itself off. You after-dinner chores are easier, too, with clean, flameless electric cooking. No more scouring soot or smoke from pots and pans. Why not cook carefree with a modern automatic electric range?
