SAVINGS ON TREES

Trees play a very important part in our environment. They breathe in carbon dioxide and release oxygen in our atmosphere. Trees protect our watersheds and provide soil cover. They combat erosion, and safeguard our ground water resources.

So it makes sense to protect trees. By the year 2000, we will have to have a forest area that can yield a volume twice as great as that of today's in order to meet the needs of this country. This future forest area will have to be grown with less acreage for there will be approximately 10 million less acres of productive timberlands by the turn of the century than there is today.

How will this need be met and can it be done? The answer to these questions is "yes," with a well-managed reforestation program of "Super Trees." Hudson Pulp & Paper Corp., maker of Hudson Napkins, Towels and Tissue products, maintains a superior tree orchard in Florida where the trees are nurtured and cared for and studied constantly for their outstanding characteristics. Cones are harvested annually, and the seeds from these select cones are sent to the Florida Division of Forestry Nursery to be raised into seedlings.

Grafting is also done to establish select tree stock for the orchard. Branches are removed from the crowns of select trees and healthy branch tips, called scions, are carefully removed and grafted on to pine seedling root stock. Measurements of superior tree offspring are taken periodically during the growing season to determine the growth rate of these superior trees. Tests show a 25 per cent growth increase on an average over the non-select trees.

Hudson is also helping to save trees. All Hudson brand napkins, towels and tissue products contain over 70 per cent Reclaimed Virgin Fiber. This is fiber made from by-products and trims of plywood and lumber mills. This is Virgin Fiber in contrast to recycled paper, which is waste paper that has been reprocessed. In the past, this virgin wood used to be burned or discarded. Today, Hudson uses this perfectly good wood and makes it into soft, strong paper towels, napkins, facial and bathroom tissue. Because it becomes paper instead of smoke or refuse, Hudson helps cut down pollution and waste. And it means fewer trees are cut down. In order to remind consumers of Reclaimed Virgin Fiber, every Hudson product carries a trademarked "tree" symbol. Look for the symbol at your local store.

As our nation's population growth continues, it requires the withdrawal of more land from forest areas. The management of the remaining timberlands is of utmost importance. So next time you're in a forest treat it with tender loving care and it will be a love affair that will last all your lifetime.

HINTS ON HOW YOUR FAMILY CAN FIGHT POLLUTION

Q. Do household paper products add very much to the solid waste generated in the home?

A. They add very little. Products such as facial tissue, towels and napkins represent only about 2 to 3 per cent of the total paper waste from the average household. They are readily and safely incinerated, often serving as a source of clean, pollution-free fuel in municipal incinerators. Paper products are easily disposed of since paper is biodegradable material. This means that after disposal it will break down into simple, stable elements such as water and carbon dioxide (the air you exhale).

Q. Do the dyes used in colored tissue products contribute to pollution problems?

A. Not at all, say experts at Hudson Pulp & Paper Corp., maker of Hudson brand napkins, towels and tissue products. The dyes are not toxic and represent at most only 1/10 of 1 per cent of the content of colored tissue products. The dyes themselves will degrade and decompose harmlessly. You have probably noticed what happens when colored tissue is exposed to sunlight. It begins to fade. That is a sign that the dye is beginning to break down.

Q. Is it true that our forests are being depleted by industry's use of trees to make paper and wood products?

A. You may not be aware of the fact that nearly 1/4 of the nation's total consumption of fiber used for all types of paper comes from what was once considered waste fiber and not from newly harvested trees. About 25 per cent comes from the wood fiber left over from sawmill and lumbering operations which was formerly burned or discarded. Hudson brand paper contains over 70 per cent of such Reclaimed Virgin Fiber, and because it becomes paper instead of smoke or refuse it helps cut down pollution and waste. Another 22 per cent is recycled fiber reprocessed from high quality grades of waste paper. Continuing research and technological development will enable the paper industry to use more reclaimed and recycled fiber in the future.

If you are really interested in finding out how to fight pollution right in your own home, send for a new, free booklet called Household Paper Products and the Environment, to Hudson Pulp & Paper Corp., 477 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10022.
