(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)
1st Lt. Ron Smith

One of them works in the skies above Reese.

The other keeps things moving on the ground.

But despite the difference in their duties, Capt. Michael DuPerier and 1st Lt. Ronald Smith have one thing in common — they are the 64th Flying Training Wing's top company grade officers for 1990.

Captain DuPerier, 33rd Flying Training Squadron, and Lieutenant Smith, Reese Transportation Division, were named the year's best in the instructor pilot and support officer categories, respectively, during a Nov. 8 awards banquet. A variety of factors contributed to their selection.

Capt. Michael DuPerier IP of the Year

The captain was cited for his outstanding work as an IP, class commander, military training officer, squadron check pilot, and wing flight examiner, just to name a few.

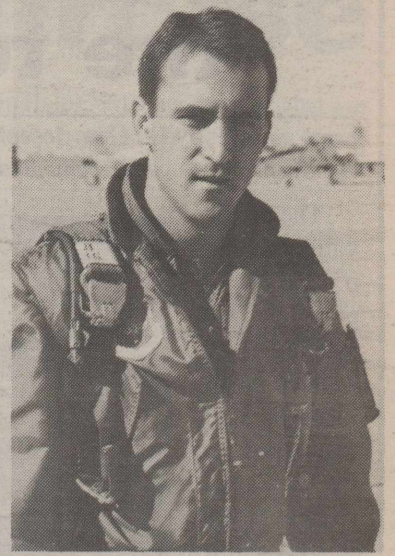

"Captain DuPerier is a great instructor pilot with tremendous commitment to the pilot training mission here at Reese," said Lt. Col. Billy Hill, 33rd FTS commander. "He probably flies as many student sorties as anyone in the squadron — and students consistently recognize his superb instruction. Two UPT classes this selected Capt. Duperier as the Outstanding T-37 IP."

Captain DuPerier also excelled during the year as a military training officer (MTO) where he oversaw the administration and officer development of more than 20 student pilots. His personal assistance to students with problems had a positive impact and resulted in their remaining in pilot training.

"Captain DuPerier's work has been so exemplary that he's now been put in charge of organizing the T-37 quality assurance evaluation program in preparation for contract simulator instruction," Colonel Hill said.

"The program will eventually become the standard for ATC's other pilot training bases."

National Family Week kicks off Sunday

by Wes Smith
TTU intern

Sunday through Nov. 24 has been designated as National Family Week. The theme for this year's family week is "Better Together."

Phil Thierry, Reese Family Support Center director, said that a goal of Family Week is to remind members of the military of the benefits of sharing time with their families. The Air Force places an unusual amount of stress on families. The Reese Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division and FSC are intended to help compensate for the high demands of the Air Force and to help strengthen family bonds.

MWR, FSC and other base agencies have scheduled many activities for Family Week and they would like to encourage all families to attend as many events as possible. The following is a list of events and the times they will take place:

□ Today through Nov. 26 — MWR Logistics is offering half-off on folding cots, sleeping bags, futons, and ice chests.

The Arts and Crafts Center is offering 10 percent off any single item purchased or ordered during the week. Also, members can get one free hour of time in the woodshop.

The Auto Hobby Shop will be providing free car inspections from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Also, a special lift fee of $1.50 per hour is being offered.

The Windmill Lanes Bowling Center is offering a children's special of three games for $1; and adults can bowl for 75 cents a game from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

View from the top

by Lt. Gen. Joseph Ashy
ATC commander

The preservation of our precious people and limited resources is obviously very important to me and must be to everyone in the Command — that's what "being safe" is all about.

We can't do our jobs unless we have the proper equipment, and, of utmost interest, keep our great Air Training Command people healthy and safe. That is why I have established safety as one of our four major Command Goals —

"Enhance Safety Awareness and Minimize Aircraft and Ground Explosives Mishaps."

In my experience, I've learned a few keys to success and I'd like to share them with you:

□ Balance risk vs. output. In any endeavor, we must think the problem through with a clear objective and balance the training risks with readiness and production rewards. In our business, we will inevitably have mishaps, but through a balanced smart approach, we can minimize them.

□ Plan for success. Plan on success ahead of time by matching your resources to the tasking. It is a leader's responsibility to ensure that his or her people have the necessary resources to accomplish their assigned task. Extending your people beyond their resources is a plan destined for failure.

□ Then execute, execute, execute. Mishaps usually are the product of poor execution. You know the risks, you have a plan, and you have properly equipped your people. Now execute smartly and don't forget to review the plan and the risks once in a while.

□ Safety. Every leader must constantly strive to instill a safety awareness in all of their people. Be the "chief of safety" — at all levels. Our success is contingent upon that first echelon of leadership's safety awareness.

□ Teamwork. Work as a team! Help each other whether on-duty or off-duty. It's that simple.

Our Command has a good safety record; but I believe we can do better. That's why we have goals and standards and a plan to measure ourselves regularly. I appreciate your continued support in this vitally important area.

Reese promotes anti-smoking efforts

Maj. Rodney Hemmitt
Reese anti-smoking campaign officer

Cigarette smoking is one of the major causes of health problems in our country, and because of that, the Department of Defense and the Air Force have established Anti-Smoking Policies.

The goal of the program is to educate all personnel on the hazards associated with using tobacco products, discourage and deglamorize smoking and to provide help for those who wish to quit smoking. The Air Training Command goal is to reduce the number of people who smoke by 10 percent by the end of fiscal year 1991. At Reese there are about 300 military members who smoke, giving Reese a goal of getting 30 people to quit.

Over the next few months, we will publicize the Air Force, ATC and wing policies regarding smoking. To emphasize the seriousness that ATC is approaching the problem, the following will be implemented command wide:

□ Each wing will establish a data base to measure progress quarterly to achieve the 10 percent reduction.

□ Anti-smoking classes will be incorporated into all initial military training courses including basic, ROTC, Officer Training School, and the Air Force Academy.

□ ATC Professional Military Education Programs will conduct health awareness classes as part of its curriculum.

□ The term "smoke break" is no longer authorized for use in conjunction with official Air Force activities; nor is tobacco advertising permitted in commissaries or exchanges.

□ ATC Supplement 1 to Air Force Regulation 30-27, "Smoking in Air Force Facilities," will be used to the limits on smoking in ATC owned facilities.

□ Base medical facilities will offer smoking cessation classes quarterly to those who want to quit.

We here at Reese support the findings and recommendations of the U.S. Surgeon General regarding the hazards of smoking and are striving to create a healthy work environment.

Break the habit

Tips for members who want to quit

(Editor's note: This is the second set in a series of "stay quit" tips for wing members who have chosen to quit smoking. The tips have been provided by the American Cancer Society. Members can also call the Reese Health Promotions Clinic at 3554 or Mental Health Clinic at 3739 for more information or to sign up for smoking cessation classes.)

Friday — day two:

Stay positive and picture success. When you wake up in the morning, promise yourself that you won't smoke a cigarette all day. Plan ahead and think of how you'll deal with stressful situations without lighting up.

Saturday — day three:

Spread the word. Tell everyone you know that you've quit and are planning to stay off cigarettes for good. Your outward display of pride in yourself will reaffirm your commitment, and the support and encouragement you'll get from family and friends will be welcome. Also, if someone "adopted" you for the Great American Smokeout, keep him or her involved in your progress and include your "adopter" in some of your weekend plans.

Sunday — day four:

Spend your day with friends who don't smoke. Visit places where smoking is prohibited: a library, theater, church or museum. Watch movies from the "no smoking" section; travel in the "no smoking" car of your commuter train. Revisit places where you've illegally smoked in the past (elevators, supermarket) and enjoy not feeling guilty.

Monday — day five:

Eat rather than smoke, but stick to low calorie, high nutritional foods: fresh fruit; crisp, crunchy vegetables. Substitute sugarless gum for a cigarette. Other temporary "pacifiers" to keep on hand: lemon drops, pumpkin or sunflower seeds, apple slices, carrot sticks, unbuttered popcorn. Avoid spicy foods that can trigger a desire for cigarettes.

Tuesday — day six:

Take a breather. Relaxation exercises help relieve urges to smoke. Take a deep breath, hold it a second, then release it very, very slowly. Remember, urges to smoke are temporary.

Wednesday — day seven:

Scramble up your day and change habits connected with smoking. Drive a different route to work; eat lunch in a new place; leave the "scene of an urge." At home avoid your "smoking chair" after dinner, reach for gum rather than a cigarette when answering the phone.

Thursday — day eight:

It's Thanksgiving, so stretch out your meal; eat slowly and pause between bites. After dinner, instead of reaching for a cigarette, treat yourself to a mint or a cup of orange tea with honey. Or have a refreshing after-dinner glass of club soda. For dessert, grab a tangerine or pear. Or introduce everyone around you to your new pleasure — sucking stick cinnamon. Crack nuts for yourself and other guests — this will certainly keep your hands busy.

Friday — day nine:

Try your best to stay away from alcoholic beverages; stick to club soda, nonalcoholic punch or spicy drinks (for example, apple cider with cinnamon or a Bloody Mary without vodka). This will curb the urge to light up while you're drinking, and will keep extra pounds off.

Saturday — day 10:

Holiday shopping can be maddening for smokers and non-smokers. Long lines at cashiers' stations, gift wrapping counters, and highway toll booths can test anyone's patience. Just when you're ready to lose control and grab a cigarette, consider alternate strategies: start an upbeat conversation with the person in front of or behind you in line, or bring along a book or catalog to look through. Enjoy that new cassette on your stereo cassette player.

Understanding before designating can prevent disaster

Many military members at one time or another have been advised to name the beneficiaries of their Serviceman's Group Life Insurance through use of the "by law" designation.

While appropriate in some instances, use of the designation without a sound understanding of what it means legally can result in disaster.

The case of Lanier vs. Traub, heard this year before the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida, is yet another example of the problems associated with a "by law" designation of SGLI. Army Sgt. Daniel Traub had used the "by law" designation for naming the beneficiaries of his SGLI policy. On the same day, Traub had completed a "Record of Emergency Data," Department of Defense Form 93, designating his mother and stepfather as 50 percent co-beneficiaries of all unpaid pay and allowances and of his death gratuity.

The DD Form 93 also required in several places that Sergeant Traub enter the name of his natural father; however, he instead entered his stepfather's name in those places.

After Sergeant Traub's death, his natural father and his stepfather both made claims for the SGLI proceeds. His natural father argued that Traub's designation of "by law" was clear and unambiguous and not subject to attack.

The SGLI beneficiary form, which the sergeant had filled out, clearly lists the order of payment when the servicemember makes the "by law" designation.

The natural father asked the court not to look beyond the form to find evidence of Sergeant Traub's intent and cited the strong public policy against using other evidence to rewrite contracts. The court, however, refused to ignore the significance of a contrary designation on the DD Form 93.

Even if the court reached the right decision, this case stands as another compelling example against making by-law beneficiary designations.

If the court was correct, a specific designation would have spared the parties the expense and inconvenience associated with litigating the issue.

A more disturbing possible consequence of the by-law designation is that the court incorrectly identified the intended beneficiary.

If you have any questions about the advisability of using the by-law designation on your SGLI, call the legal office at 3505.

ROUNDUP

HOSP evaluates local exercise

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

At about 1:30 p.m. Nov. 8 a school bus, carrying 27 Hale Center High School seniors, was hit by a passing car while heading eastbound on FM 1914 from Hale Center, Texas.

The icy roads caused the bus driver to lose control after impact, which sent the bus into several rolls before landing upright. The car's driver escaped the collision uninjured and quickly ran to a nearby house to call for help.

In less than three minutes, the sound of emergency vehicles approached the glass and blood covered accident site, while scattered inside the bus lay the pain-shrieking accident victims. One student was pronounced dead on the scene and many others were listed in critical condition, according to Hale Center's Hi Plains Hospital emergency officials.

The paramedics and fire department personnel worked quickly preparing the victims for emergency ambulatory transport to the hospital. Additionally, those who could be were treated at the scene.

The emergency personnel treated injuries ranging from an amputated finger to multiple cuts and bruises to a broken neck and spinal injuries. At the same time, they were also in combat with the weather elements, such as the excessive cold and wind, to prevent the injured from receiving frostbite or possibly freezing to death.

Through the use of two ambulances and the local fire department's suburban, which rotated back and forth from the scene and hospital, all victims were eventually taken to the hospital.

This was only an exercise. "If it had have been a real-life crisis, from what we were able to determine through our evaluations, the Hale Center's emergency team does possess the ability to handle the situation successfully," said 2nd Lt. Michael Hunter, 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital medical readiness officer.

"Also, in a real crisis, Hale Center would have had access to about 40 ambulances and a medivac helicopter from the surrounding area," added the lieutenant.

The scene was set up by Reese medical personnel to test Hale Center's ability to respond to a multiple-crisis situation. "We planned everything, from the actual accident to the types of casualties. The people in Hale Center had no idea what was really going to happen or how extensive it was going to be," said SSgt. Lynne Davenport, HOSP medical readiness non-commissioned officer in charge.

The entire planning took about six weeks. The day of the exercise, 10 HOSP people spent about three hours beforehand "making the scene" by moulaging the students, handing out casualty cards and giving the students a crash course in "pain" acting. Once the exercise began, Reese people were responsible for evaluating the Hale Center people.

"We evaluated everything from the initial time it took for emergency vehicles to arrive on scene, the care provided both in the field and at the hospital, the response from all individuals involved (police, fire department, paramedics and hospital staff) and, most importantly, if it were a real-life situation what the overall results would have been," said Lieutenant Hunter, explaining the exercise went well.

This is just one more way in which Reese people use their field expertise to assist the local communities. The HOSP will be evaluating another exercise the end of this month in Brownfield, Texas.

SVS participates in Cannon exercise

Teamwork between bases results in successful training

The members of the 64th Services Squadron Prime Readiness in Base Services Team deployed to Cannon AFB, N.M., to support Tactical Air Command members in their local exercise Nov. 5-9.

This was the first time Prime RIB members deployed to support another base during its exercise.

The members who deployed were Capt. Steve Governale (SVS commander), TSgt. Johnny Hicks, SSgt. Kenneth Posey, Sgt. Annette Lyons and A1C Robert Boyea. Also participating in the exercise was MSgt. Johnny Sherbert who is an individual mobilization augmentee for the services squadron.

According to Captain Governale, their mission was to provide food support for the 27th Tactical Fighter Wing through the use of the mobile kitchen trailer. More than 800 meals were provided during one day, to include dinner and midnight meals.

Despite the below-freezing temperatures each day, Reese members spent more than 14 hours a day helping out with the exercise.

"The team worked magnificently together, even under the austere conditions," said Captain Governale.

"I'm proud of the way they represented Reese and Air Training Command. In addition to assisting Cannon members, the team was able to gain excellent training in preparation for the next home exercise.

"We received many positive compliments about our ability to provide support to others," concluded the captain.

Proposed furlough is non-existent

Civilian furloughs that were based on sequestering funds to meet deficit reduction goals no longer exist now that the fiscal 1991 defense authorization and appropriations bills have been signed into law, Air Force civilian personnel officials said.

"All notices of proposed furloughs issued are canceled, and the Air Force regrets the necessity of having had to issue the notices of proposed furlough. However, the new budget is extremely austere and will require a variety of savings actions to be taken," Air Force officials said.

"There are no immediate signs that would drive us for the necessity of civilian furloughs in fiscal 1991," said Bill Lewis of the defense department's Force Management and Civilian Personnel Policy Office.

Mr. Lewis said the issue of "furloughs" first came up because money was not available for the federal government to operate above certain levels. Air Force policy is that furlough will be used only as a last resort.

The on and off threat of furloughs for civilian workers came about after the 101st Congress used five stopgap funding measures to keep the government operating. The proposed furloughs happened in the interim before the Congress managed to clear all 13 regular appropriations bills for fiscal 1991, a Congressional report on deficit-reduction for the federal budget said.

Sequestration for fiscal 1991, which was the basis for the proposed furlough, was also brought about because of the 1985 Gramm-Rudman law which set annual limits for the federal deficit.

In fiscal 1991, the deficit exceeded the $74 billion limit and the law required automatic spending cuts, known as a sequester.

"Under Gramm-Rudman, the president had already made the determination to exempt military pay from a cut, but he could not make that same determination on the civilian side," Mr. Lewis said.

"Therefore, there was a very real dilemma that sequestering would have had a very severe impact on the amount of money available.

"If you don't have the money to pay people, you can't work them for free."

Mr. Lewis said DOD didn't want to resort to a reduction in force for workers, because that takes them off the rolls permanently. The only alternative, he said, was to furlough, or temporarily layoff workers because the work continues.

Pay is always a very large part of the budget, and although there are appropriated dollars for fiscal 1991, "DOD is going to get smaller and it's still going to be a tough year," he said. (Air Force News Service)

Shield updates

Space support for Mideast

The Air Force is using space-based command and control systems to give U.S. field commanders and forces the edge in defending Middle East countries against a possible Iraqi attack.

By controlling "the high ground," space systems are meeting the battle commander's most urgent needs in rapidly evolving scenarios, the Air Force said in the report, "Global Reach - Global Power."

Space-based communications provide secure and reliable command and control of forces. They offer warning and threat assessments, regardless of the location of conflict, the report said.

Military leaders have expressed "surprise by the dominant role of space systems compared to conventional capabilities. They've been surprised by the flexibility and responsiveness of those systems" said Richard M. McCormick, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for space plans and policy.

In supporting Desert Shield, space systems are focusing five times the support on the region than was available before the crisis, Mr. McCormick said.

Space systems also have been a "positive agent of change" in the new world, Mr. McCormick said.

Orbiting systems provide the command and control of the global forces needed to deter attack and contain the threats in the Mideast.

The importance of space-based support to combat operations was demonstrated in December when thousands of American soldiers landed in Panama during Operation Just Cause. (Air Force News Service)

1st Lt. Ronald Smith Support Officer of the Year

Another sterling leader, Lieutenant Smith excelled in numerous areas during the year.

As chief of transportation, he oversees an $800,000-per-year contract operation that covers operation and maintenance of a 248-vehicle fleet. Vehicles on Reese averaged a 98.9-serviceability rate — the best in Air Training Command.

Vehicles aren't the lieutenant's only responsibility. He worked the deployment of 23 Reese people in support of Operation Desert Shield, making arrangements to move one team on only three hours notice. Moving people under pressure, however, is nothing new to Lieutenant Smith.

"While he was still the traffic management officer, he planned moves for more than 700 people affected by the maintenance conversion," said Col. Ford Barrett, wing deputy commander for Logistics and Resource Management.

"His ability to accurately predict and plan for the needs of the maintainers made the conversion a much easier process for the entire wing," noted Colonel Barrett, who served as deputy commander for Maintenance during that period.

One of the greatest logistical challenges is in the support of our T-38 Accelerated Copilot Enrichment Program located at Strategic Air Command bases. When Lieutenant Smith noted less-than-desireable movement of high-value mission essential parts needed to repair those aircraft, he aggressively sought a suitable solution, eventually recommending commercial overnight delivery.

In addition to his normal duties, Lieutenant Smith handles the largest operation in the base's mobility "machine" and serves as a member of the Base Exercise Evaluation Team. The superb method in which he converted the wing's Pacer Wheels Program into the Top Wheels Program, which enhances maintenance of the Reese vehicle fleet, again demonstrated his strong staff skills.

Holiday operating hours set for wing service organizations

Several Reese service organizations have revised their operating hours for Thanksgiving Day.

The Officers' Open Mess, Mathis Recreation Center, High Plains Golf Course, Windmill Lanes Bowling Center, Base Library, Child Development Center, Auto Hobby Shop, Youth Center, Logistics, Veterinary Clinic, and Arts and Crafts Center, Main Exchange, Clothing Sales, Gas Station, Commissary, Post Office, NCNB Texas National Bank and the Reese Federal Credit Union will be closed.

64th Flying Training Wing Hospital's clinics, radiology, laboratory and pharmacy will all be closed. The emergency room will be available for members needing care. The same will apply for the hospital's goals day on Nov. 23.

The Physical Fitness Center will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Shopette will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and the Class VI will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Red Raiders Greg Burden, 98, and Mike Liscio, 91, close in on a Baylor ball carrier during mid-season play at Jones Stadium. Texas Tech takes on the SMU mustangs Saturday. Tech has reserved 3,000 seats for Reese members and their families.

We'll be there

Tech invites Reese to join Spike

Hey "Spike," we'll be there!

Texas Tech University is making it possible for Reese members and their families to show their support for head coach Spike Dykes and the Red Raiders by reserving a special block of seats for Saturdays home game against the SMU mustangs.

According to university officials, there are general admission seats being reserved in observance of Veteran's Day and in recognition of Reese's support for Texas Tech and the Lubbock community activities.

Reese members who wish to attend the game should go to Gate 3 on the northeast side of the stadium. No tickets will be issued. Reese members and their families will be admitted upon presentation of a current Department of Defense identification card (this includes military, dependent, civilian and contractor identification cards). The gate will open at 12:30 p.m. Attendees are asked to fill up section 16 (lower level northeast corner) first. Any overflow will be seated in section 116 (diectly above section 16).

Red Raider fans are encouraged to arrive at the stadium by 1:30 p.m. to enjoy the pregame ceremonies. Several Air Force units will participate in pregame and halftime activities, including the Reese color guard and rifle firing team, the 50 state flag unit and the Air Force Band of the West from Lackland AFB, Texas. There will also be a four-ship flyover of Reese T-37 Tweets.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2 p.m.
