

Wing member makes DG at NCO Academy

TSgt. Joseph Thompson, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron drafting engineer makes changes to building plans. Sergeant Thompson was selected as a Distinguished Graduate during the recent Noncommissioned Officer Academy Graduation Nov. 9. Also graduating was TSgt. Thomas Kelly from the 64th Supply Squadron. The Academy, located at Lackland AFB, Texas, is the third of four professional military education levels available to enlisted members.

ROUNDUP

Vol. 42, No. 46

Nov. 21, 1990

Reese AFB, Texas 79489

During the week of 14-19 Nov. the 64 FTW lost sorties due to winds and was only able to fly 761 sorties of the programmed 817 sorties. The T-37s and T-38s were able to gain on the timeline due to cross-countries and phase and course graduations.

The T-37s went from +3.28 to +3.39 days ahead. The T-38s went from +1.84 to +2.34 days ahead.

Best of the best

Wing names top enlisted members of 1990

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

The top four 64th Flying Training Wing enlisted members of the year were honored during the annual Enlisted Awards Banquet Saturday in the Officers' Open Mess.

Retired CMSAF Paul Airey was the guest speaker for the event, while Col. Bill Henny, 64th FTW commander, presented the awards to the wing's top first sergeant, senior noncommissioned officer, NCO and airman of the year.

Lubbock Mayor B.C. "Peck" McMinn also presented the award winners with letters of recognition, while Chief Airey and CMSgt. Coy Martin, 64th FTS senior enlisted advisor, offered their congratulations.

This year's theme for the enlisted awards was "Don't Forget Where You Came From."

The ceremony and awards are designed to recognize and honor the enlisted members who, during the past year, have made outstanding and significant contributions to Reese, the local community and Air Force overall. Although only four are selected as award winners, the nominees were also commended during the ceremony for their efforts put forth during the past year.

In his opening comments, Chief Airey pointed out that with the decrease in military forces, the Air Force now had to be a leaner, meaner fighting machine, and it is. "Today's Air Force is made up of the best qualified members it has ever had. And tonight's award recipients are proof of that—they are the 'best of the best,'" said Chief Airey.

This year's winners are: MSgt. Michael Braskett, 64th Supply Squadron, was named first sergeant of the year; MSgt. Richard Miller, 41st Flying Training Squadron, was announced as senior NCO of the year; SSgt. Aliane Glenn, 64th Mission Support Squadron, was selected as NCO of the year; and SrA. Michael Gaillard, SUPS, took honors as airman of the year.

The following Reese sponsors helped with this year's banquet: the First Sergeants Council, Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division, Main Exchange Barber Shop, Enlisted Wives Club, Scheduled Airline Ticket Office, Reese Federal Credit Union and NCNB Texas National Bank.

Other military organization sponsors included: the Air Force Sergeants Association, AFSA Auxiliary, NCO Academy Graduates Association and the Army/Air Force Exchange Service.

The following off-base sponsors also donated gifts and helped with planning costs: Alderson Cadillac, PioneerLincoln-Mercury, Womble Auto Plaza, Scoggin-Dickey Buick, Modern Hyundai, Copper Caboose, Black Eyed Pea, Shangri-la Restaurant, Western Sizzlin, Pizza Inn, Gardski's, Town South Flowers and Art and Eva Bullock.

For biographical and other information on this year's enlisted award winners, see page five.

Goal day Friday marks first for Reese

A favorable timeline will allow Reese to have a goal day Friday, making for a four-day Thanksgiving weekend.

The event is the first here since the inception of goal days in Air Training Command.

The wing is still ahead of the timeline in both the T-37 and T-38, despite a week of bad weather earlier this month. According to Col. John Block, 64th Flying Training Wing deputy commander for operations, the T-37s were about three-and-a-half days ahead as of Tuesday, while the T-38s were about two days ahead.

"The bad weather we experienced was offset by the cushion we had built for ourselves earlier — at one point, the T-37s were nearly five days ahead, while the T-38s were also well beyond their programmed sorties," Colonel Block said.

"This goal day is the result of a combined effort for the entire wing," Col. Bill Henny, 64th FTW commander, said. "Everyone from operations to maintenance to support played a role in this."

As a result of the four-day weekend, the following base service facilities will have modified hours:

❑ Closed for Thanksgiving — Officers' open mess, Mathis Recreation Center, High Plains Golf Course, Windmill Lanes Bowling Center, library, child development center, auto hobby shop, youth center, morale, welfare and recreation logistics, arts and crafts center, main exchange, service station, commissary, post office, bank and credit union. Also, the 64th FTW Hospital's clinics, laboratory and pharmacy will be closed, but the emergency room will be open.

❑ Also on Thanksgiving — The fitness center will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; the shoppette will be open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and the Class Six Store will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

❑ Friday (goal day) — The main exchange will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m., while the Class Six will be open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. The shoppette and service station will observe normal hours.

The hospital will observe its Thanksgiving schedule. MWR facilities will observe normal hours, except for the OOM, which won't open until 4 p.m. The commissary and thrift shop will be closed Friday, but the commissary will be open as usual Saturday. Other facilities are expected to operate normally on Saturday and Sunday.

From my perspective

by Col. Bill Henny
64th FTW commander

I trust you and yours will have an enjoyable Thanksgiving. This is a time when we gather with family and friends to reflect on the many blessings we enjoy as citizens of the greatest nation on the planet.

As members of the military, the holiday holds special significance.

We are charged with preserving the peace that allows Americans to enjoy their prosperity, and this year, that responsibility is underscored by Operation Desert Shield.

Armed Forces members have responded in typical American fashion to the crisis in the Middle East, showing once again that we are always ready to defend freedom and confront tyranny throughout the world. As you all know, the operation hits home at Reese — a number of wing members are deployed in support of it.

The service and commitment of the deployed members from Reese and throughout our military highlight the vital part that we play in preserving the things that Americans can be thankful for.

As we gather with loved ones this holiday, let's all take a moment to be especially thankful for those men and women who won't be home this Thanksgiving. It's their sacrifices that give this holiday meaning.

Safety and the long weekend.

This Friday is a wing goal day. Each of you has worked hard toward our primary mission of training the finest pilots in the world, so please enjoy your Thanksgiving weekend — you have earned every hour of it.

I ask that you and your families "play it safe" this weekend. Wear seatbelts, don't drink and drive, be careful when traveling (especially in bad weather) and follow all the safety rules that the Air Force and common sense dictate.

Remember, you are our most valuable resource. Let's make this holiday a safe as well as a happy one.

Commanders send holiday wishes

by Dick Cheney
secretary of Defense

Just like the Pilgrims at Plymouth Colony, we use Thanksgiving Day to reflect on our blessings and give thanks for all we have, as individuals, families, and as a nation.

In the time that has passed since that first Thanksgiving in 1621, our nation, too, has survived difficulties. And we still face clear threats to those freedoms which the Pilgrims set about to find in a New World.

Today, many of you among the men and women of our Armed Forces stand at the forefront against aggression in the Middle East. With your vigilance and dedication, you are our nation's strength. Because of your professionalism and patriotism, our nation inspires freedom-loving people everywhere.

Whether you are in the Persian Gulf or on duty elsewhere away from your families this Thanksgiving, I offer special recognition and thanks for your sacrifice.

To all of you in uniform, your families, and to Department of Defense civilians who serve a vital role, I offer my personal best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving.

by Donald B. Rice
secretary of the Air Force

and Gen. Merrill A. McPeak
chief of staff

Thanksgiving holds a special meaning for all of us. As you gather with family and friends on this day, we ask that you give special thanks for the Air Force men and women on duty around the world, especially those who are serving in the Middle East.

Their sacrifices and courage in this time of uncertainty underscore the values Americans in uniform stand for — the preservation and protection of freedom.

Our special thanks to all of you and best wishes for a happy Thanksgiving.

by Lt. Gen. Joseph Ashy
ATC commander

Thanksgiving is a time for gathering together with family and friends — and to take time to reflect on that which we have to be thankful.

History tells us that Thanksgiving has its roots in the pilgrims' first celebration in 1621, when they joined with the local Indians in giving thanks for a bountiful crop and their survival through a rough, bitter winter.

Over the years, Thanksgiving has evolved into a time to give thanks for the wealth of freedoms we enjoy — freedoms the pilgrim fathers only dreamed of. Freedom to live and work where we want, worship as we choose, and speak out in a country that enjoys freedoms of speech and press.

Just as we enjoy our freedoms in America, we also enjoy dozens of other personal liberties which are special and unique. All of these are what this official day of Thanksgiving is about. It's also about taking time to pause and reflect...to bring our blessings into perspective.

This year, as our perspective focuses on those who are deployed to Southwest Asia and who won't be home for Thanksgiving, I hope you'll take an extra moment to remember that many of our blessings have and will continue to come from those who serve our nation.

Best wishes for an enjoyable and safe Thanksgiving holiday!

Quitting for good

Tips help members break the smoking habit

(Editor's note: This is the third set in a series of "stay quit" tips for wing members who have chosen to quit smoking. The tips have been provided by the American Cancer Society. Members can also call the Reese Health Promotions Clinic at 3554 or Mental Health Clinic at 3739 for more information or to sign up for smoking cessation classes.)

Sunday — day 11:

Arts and crafts: You've always wanted to master the kazoo, right? Many new ex-smokers take up hobbies to keep their minds and hands off cigarettes. For the holidays, you might want to make some gifts yourself; string popcorn, or try new, inventive ways to wrap gifts.

Monday — day 12:

Eat three meals. This maintains constant blood sugar levels, thus preventing urges to smoke. Avoid sugar-laden foods and spicy items that can trigger a desire for cigarettes.

Tuesday — day 13:

Work out; exercise, such as swimming, running and racket sports, helps relieve tension and your urge to smoke. Also, you'll enjoy holiday feasts without having to worry about dieting later.

Nov. 28 — day 14:

Change your habits connected with smoking. Leave the dinner table soon after eating to avoid the desire to light up. When answering the phone, reach for gum rather than a cigarette.

Nov. 29 — day 15:

Cleanse your body of nicotine. Drink liquids — lots of them. Water (6-8 glasses daily), herbal teas, fruit juices and caffeine-free soft drinks all fit the bill. Pass up coffee, caffeinated soft drinks and alcohol, as they can increase your urge to smoke.

Nov. 30 — day 16:

Reward yourself with oral substitutes in the same way you may have used cigarettes. Good examples: sugarless gum, lemon drops, pumpkin or sunflower seeds, apple slices, carrot sticks, unbuttered popcorn.

Dec. 1 — day 17:

Treat your body and soul with kindness. Indulge in a bath, massage, nap. Listen to your favorite music. Enjoying these activities in the absence of smoking will help you realize that you don't need a cigarette to have a good time.

Dec. 2 — day 18:

Keep your hands — and mind — busy. Work on a crossword puzzle, knit a sweater, balance your checkbook, fix something around the house, shampoo the dog.

Dec. 3 — day 19:

Exercise to help relieve tension. Climb stairs rather than take the elevator, park the car a block or two from your destination and walk the rest of the way. At home, practice touching your toes, jog in place, do jumping jacks.

Foul turkey can foil holiday fun

Family and friends are just sitting down to the holiday dinner, and everything, from the turkey to the dessert, has to be just right.

By following a few simple guidelines, the turkey placed on the table will be nicely browned and succulent, instead of underdone or overdone, say U.S. Department of Agriculture poultry experts.

Also, common sense and a little extra care will ensure a happy holiday season, the department's experts said. Otherwise, overlooking basic health precautions when preparing a turkey and its accompanying dishes could cause food poisoning.

As such, you should wash anything that touches raw poultry with soapy water before it's used again to prevent the spread of any bacteria. This includes hands, utensils, kitchen counters and sink.

Picking out a turkey for the meal is not as simple as it used to be. Now the decision is whether to buy a fresh, frozen, frozen and stuffed, or precooked bird. Each type has specific time requirements for thawing and cooking.

The department's tips include temperatures to store the birds at and how long to allow for thawing and cooking.

Buy a fresh turkey and refrigerate it at 40 degrees Fahrenheit or colder for no more than one to two days before cooking. A frozen bird should stay in the freezer at 0 degrees or colder until it's time to thaw it. Cook it as soon as it is thawed, officials say. Don't keep it in the refrigerator after thawing.

Thawing a frozen turkey in the refrigerator can take from one to five days, while thawing it in cold water may take anywhere from four to 12 hours. The length of time and the power level for thawing the bird in a microwave oven should be provided with its instruction manual.

After thawing the bird, remove the neck and giblet package from inside it, and wash the bird inside and outside with cold water. Allow it to drain well.

Stuff the turkey loosely just before cooking, allowing about three-quarters of a cup of stuffing per pound of bird. The dressing's dry ingredients may be mixed ahead of time, with the perishable ones added just before stuffing the bird. As soon as the turkey is done, remove the dressing.

The turkey's inside temperature should reach at least 180 degrees Fahrenheit, which will cook the dressing. Directions for cooking times and temperatures are available in basic cookbooks or on the bird's wrapper.

Times for roasting a turkey vary, depending on the bird's size and if it's stuffed. A stuffed bird takes longer to cook. For example, at 325 degrees Fahrenheit, an unstuffed, 16-pound turkey takes from 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 hours to cook, while a stuffed bird the same size needs 4 1/2 to 5 1/2 hours in the oven.

Refrigerate leftover turkey within two hours after cooking, Department of Agriculture experts say. The best way to store turkey is to divide leftovers into small portions and store in several small containers. Turkey stored in the refrigerator will keep for three or four days, but leftover dressing should be eaten within two days. Eat frozen leftover poultry or dressing within a month.

The Department of Agriculture has a toll-free, year-round meat and poultry hotline that can provide information on how to buy, cook, carve and use leftover turkey. For ideas or answers, call 1-800-535-4555.

The hotline is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 22, the lines will be answered from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. (American Forces Information Service)

Knowledge of fire prevention is 'kid stuff'

by MSgt. Roy Napper
Assistant chief for fire prevention

One of the worst mistakes a person can make is to assume everyone has an elementary knowledge of fire prevention. If that were the case, fire losses each year would be greatly lessened.

In 1988 over two million acres of forest land burned; 790 homes were destroyed; 21 firefighters were killed; and 2,500 people sustained serious burn injuries.

Fire prevention is a sales job. You're selling a product. Whether it is a home escape plan, use of smoke detectors or total safety awareness, you have to market the product, put it in the right package and provide an attractive format. Then you have to know to whom you are selling: kitchen staff, third graders or a facility manager.

Fire prevention is a marketable product that's positive and free. But if it has all these positive qualities, why is it so hard to get the public to heed it?

Communication is the secret to increasing public awareness of fire prevention techniques that save lives and property. If you cannot get your message, no matter how important it is or how many resources you have, you're wasting your time!

In the fire department's programs for children, there is a little rule for communication with children: whatever we talk about — and how we relate it — must be compatible with their world and their experience. For example, a booster tank doesn't mean much to them, but a big bathtub of water on a truck does.

With younger age groups, we must rely on showmanship, be entertaining, to keep their attention and make them realize that we are doing it for their safety. When you see the subject the way our young audiences do, teaching fire safety is really kid's stuff. Communicating through a "child's-eye view" has definitely helped the fire prevention personnel help children. The Fire Safety House project will provide a valuable tool so that children and adults can benefit and learn vital information on fire safety.

UPT class honors wing members for their efforts throughout year

Eight permanent-party wing members received recognition for their work with Reese Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 91-02 during graduation ceremonies Friday at the Officers' Open Mess.

Cpts. Dean Michals (T-37) and Mark Robertson (T-38) were selected as the outstanding academic instructor pilots; while 1st Lts. Perry Elvin (T-37) and Rick Denton (T-38) were selected as the outstanding flightline IPs.

Dalby Griffiss (T-37) and John Bates (T-38) of Lockheed were selected as outstanding crew chiefs.

William Hoffpaur Lockheed, was selected as the top maintenance specialist.

Amn. Angela Williams, 1958th Communications Squadron, was selected as the outstanding mission maker for her duties as a 64th Security Police Squadron augmentee.

During the graduation ceremony, six of the graduates were presented awards for their performance during the year of training.

Capt. Jerry Dobson won the Commander's Trophy, signifying the class's top graduate, and the Flying Training Award ("Top Stick"). He also was selected as a Distinguished Graduate, and received the Leadership Award.

Second Lt. Michael Zenobi was also selected as a Distinguished Graduate.

First Lt. Dwayne Opella received the Academics and Citizenship Awards, while 2nd Lt. Brad Courtney was presented the Outstanding Second Lieutenant Award.

Wing names top enlisted of 1990

MSgt. Michael Braskett
First Sergeant of the Year

Unit: 64th Supply Squadron
Time in Service: 22 years
Time at Reese: Five years
Hometown: Columbus, Ohio
Achievements during the quarter: Sergeant Braskett is an exceptional leader, according to Maj. Rodney Hemmitt, SUPS commander.
"He is a rare combination of superior ability, enthusiasm, creativity and professionalism," Major Hemmitt added.
Sergeant Braskett is responsible for providing guidance, counseling and consolation to the more than 200 enlisted members assigned to the squadron. His counseling abilities and the advice he is able to provide are a substantial part of why the squadron is able to maintain such a low percentage rate for disciplinary actions.

The sergeant is a strong supporter of the Air Force motto, "We take care of our own." He is continually striving for ways to improve the military life style for both on- and off-base residents.
His on-base efforts have been especially evident in the quality-of-life improvements he's been working on for dormitory residents.
In addition to providing support during the day to squadron workers, Sergeant Braskett can often be found visiting hospitalized members and the families of deployed members.
"If someone needs something, whether it be financial aid, assistance with a work-related problem or just moral support, Sergeant Braskett is always there," Major Hemmitt said.

When the winners were announced at the banquet, Sergeant Braskett said he was "very surprised, overwhelmed and humbled."
Education: He is nearing completion of an associates degree in logistics management through the Community College of the Air Force.
Goals: Sergeant Braskett's main goal is to make SUPS the best squadron on base, "I'd also like to make it so that people will want to be a supply squadron member."
Hobbies: He enjoys playing golf and challenging friends to darts.

MSgt. Richard Miller
Senior NCO of the Year
Duty Title: Life support noncommissioned officer in charge
Time in Service: 13 years
Time at Reese: Two years
Hometown: Austin, Texas
Achievements during the quarter: "When it comes to 'top-notch' performers, Sergeant Miller leads the way," said Lt. Col. John DiPiero, 41st FTS commander.
As the NCOIC of life support, Sergeant Miller is responsible for the management of more than 3,000 pieces of life support equipment used to support about 800 aircrew members and valued at nearly $900,000.

He also manages an annual budget in excess of $380,000.
Sergeant Miller initiated or reinstated numerous programs designed to help enhance technician upgrade and aircrew continuation training. Some of these include the Reese Life Support Training Assistance Program, the Hanging Harness Training Program and the Aircrew Equipment Hands-on Training Program. The aircrew program was adopted by and is in use by many wings throughout the command.
Also, the sergeant's suggestion to revise the previous repair format of life rafts was implemented Air Force wide and has been estimated to save about $225 per raft.
"Sergeant Miller's knowledge, abilities and self-initiative are evidenced everyday while both on and off the job," Colonel DiPiero said.

When Sergeant Miller's name was announced in succession with the senior NCO of the year, he said he was shocked. "I was very pleased and humbled to have been selected and hope I can continue to live up to the expectations that come with the title."
Education: Sergeant Miller is currently working on a Community College of the Air Force degree in survival and rescue operations.
Goals: His goal is to make chief before retirement and to do his best to reduce the amount of paperwork in the military.
Hobbies: Sergeant Miller is actively in-involved in the local Cub Scouts and also enjoys carpentry work.

SSgt. Aliane Glenn
NCO of the Year

Unit: 64th Mission Support Squadron
Duty title: Social Actions Office equal opportunity and human resources NCOIC
Time in Service: Six years
Time at Reese: One year
Hometown: Roseville, Mich.
Achievements during the quarter: She's a true professional in every sense of the word, said 1st Lt. Mitch Sibley-Jett, Social Actions Office chief.
"Sergeant Glenn is continually working to improve the efficiency of mission accomplishment, as well as the overall quality of life for the members at Reese," Lieutenant Sibley-Jett added.
Her initiation and follow through of the new "Out-and-About" Program at Reese has enabled her to discover and resolve potentially unfavorable situations around base before they became actual problems. She has also assisted various units in enhancing working relations among their members. To date, she has made more than 100 out-and-about visits.

Sergeant Glenn initiated a staff assistance visit program through which she provides feedback of each unit's performance to the unit commanders.
Since the recent initiation of the program, she has completed three unit visits and has scheduled three more to complete by the first of the year.
"Sergeant Glenn has accomplished so much in such a short period of time that she has set an exceptionally high standard for others to follow," Lieutenant Sibley-Jett said.

A little unbelieving at first, Sergeant Glenn said that she had really not expected to be selected when they finally announced the winners.
Education: She is currently working on a bachelor's degree in human services, specializing in criminal law, through Waylon Baptist University.
Goals: Sergeant Glenn said that she would like to continue her college education into law school and eventually become a lawyer.
Hobbies: She enjoys working out and weight lifting.

SrA. Michael Gaillard
Airman of the Year
Unit: 64th Supply Squadron
Duty Title: Mission capable specialist
Time in Service: Two years, six months
Time at Reese: Two years
Hometown: Virginia Beach, Va.
Achievements during the quarter: Dedication. According to Maj. Rodney Hemmitt, SUPS commander, that is the best word to describe Airman Gaillard.
"Forever striving to improve himself both professionally and personally Airman Gaillard wants to be the best he can be," Major Hemmitt added.
"Airman Gaillard's ability to make sound judgement in all his duties has enabled the squadron to provide optimum supply support to the maintenance complex," the major added.

Through professional improvements, he reorganized the Tail Number Bin Program to provide maintainers with an enhanced picture of readily available assets.
The reorganization also allows maintainers easy access to parts stored in the TNB area and provides the Reese Mission Support Unit daily TNB listings that help prevent future mission capable incidents.
Airman Gaillard's efforts in obtaining, issuing and monitoring required assets for the base have directly supported the 64th Flying Training Wing's ability to meet its mission, pointed out Major Hemmitt.

Airman Gaillard is also and acknowledged member of the Reese Honor Guard and Rifle Drill Team.
When the selection was announced at the banquet, Airman Gaillard said he felt excited to be selected and also relieved that the decision was finally made. "It was a good feeling to be selected," he added.
Education: He has a bachelor's degree in political science from the Old Dominion University, Va.
Goals: Airman Gaillard hopes to get selected for commissioning. But he plans to stay in the Air Force as long as possible.
Hobbies: Airman Gaillard enjoys weight lifting and various other types of sports activities. He is very active on the squadron's intramural teams.

Reese town meeting on tap

Communication.
It's the key to the success of an organization, and Reese is no exception. As such, wing members will have a chance to voice their opinions and suggestions at a "town meeting" 7 p.m. Nov. 29 in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess.
The meeting is the third of its kind since its inception last year. The success of the first two meetings prompted this session.
"This sort of forum is invaluable when dealing with quality -of-life issues on base," Col. Ray Bean, 64th Air Base Group commander, said. "This will be my first town meeting since taking over the group, and I'm looking forward to it."

Citing the frankness displayed at past meetings, the colonel encouraged everyone to attend.
In addition to Colonel Bean, a number of other base officials will be on hand. At press time, they included representatives from the Commissary, Main Exchange, 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, 64th Mission Support Squadron, 64th Security Police Squadron, Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division, Public Affairs and others. The meeting will be an open forum, with emphasis on the issues facing the Reese community.

"This meeting belongs to the people at Reese," Colonel Bean said. "The whole purpose is to find out how we can make life better for everyone who works and lives here, and that's where communication comes in. We need feedback to make it work."

Be safe, don't take chances

With the long weekend coming up, wing members are advised to take extra care when traveling or socializing.
Due to the time of year it is, the weather can change from warm and pleasing to cold and miserable at a moment's notice. People planning to go away for the holiday should allow themselves extra time to get to and return from their destiny.
While out, whether it be visiting friends or family locally or leaving the area, remember to watch out for the other driver. Never assume they are watching out for you.
As a last, but most important reminder, DO NOT drink and drive... play it safe and ARRIVE ALIVE!

ECI announces changes

Career development course changes took effect Nov. 1, which now make it impossible to enroll voluntarily for CDCs and that also raise the passing grade for all CDCs and specialized courses from 60 to 65. For details, call the Reese Education Center at 3469.

Backlog affects computers

Problems are occurring for people who are trying to order or ship UNISYS Desktop III computers, officials at the Air Force Standard Systems Center at Gunter AFB, Ala., have advised. The complexity of the contract and ordering procedures have created a major backlog for UNISYS, according to Linda Huffman 1958th Communications Squadron equipment control officer. Air Force Communications Command is working with the Gunter center to sort through the ordering process and start moving computers into the field.

As a result, the systems center has asked that all orders for new computer systems be stopped until the backlog is taken care of. Ms. Huffman said the center is allocating computers to the various major commands to aid in faster distribution. Once Air Training Command gets this allocation, the command will distribute computers to the field. For details, call 3089.

New facilities affect orders

Commercial lodging facilities are now available on Yongsan Army Garrison, Korea, and Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. According to officials in the Reese Accounting and Finance Office, these facilities are considered government quarters and should be claimed as such on temporary-duty assignment travel vouchers.

In addition, the availability of government quarters makes it necessary to deduct government meals. For more information, call MSgt. Roy Threadgill at 6323.

Shield updates

Mideast rotation update

The Department of Defense has no immediate plans to rotate units in Operation Desert Shield, and deploying new troops to the Persian Gulf is to add to those forces already in place, the Pentagon said.

While there's been no plan announced to rotate forces, DOD officials said a rotation policy is being considered and they are still studying the issue.

Originally, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said they were looking at approximately a six-month rotation. A unit would be in Saudi Arabia for about six months and then replaced by another unit.

After announcing the increase in size of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf Nov. 8, Secretary Cheney said those troops now in Saudi Arabia will be staying for the time being.

"After Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait, we said our deployment would continue as long as necessary," Secretary Cheney said. "As these new U.S. forces come into place, they will clearly give us additional offensive capability, should it be needed." He added that he would not put a cap or ceiling on the current deployment, and would not rule out any additional reinforcements.

President George Bush said U.S. troops will be brought home as soon as possible.

The United States already has sent more than 230,000 troops to the Middle East since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait. (Air Force News Service)

New bill ups pay; cuts force, spending

President George Bush signed the fiscal 1991 defense authorization and appropriations bills into law earlier this month. This rose military and civilian pay by 4.1 percent, but cut force strength and defense spending.

Overall, the $274.5 billion defense budget represents a massive, compromise budget measure that aims to help reduce the federal deficit by nearly $500 billion over the next five years. The $274.5 billion figure represents $17.837 billion below the fiscal 1990 appropriated amount.

Among the measures in the bills are a cut of 80,000 from the 2.1 million people on active duty world wide, just over $2 billion in procurement and $1.75 billion in research and development to continue the B-2 program and $2.9 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

$600 million from SDI was blocked, but the final bill came in at $1.7 billion less than the president's request.

Adoption of the defense bill also cut back procurement funds for the C-17. Only $400 million in procurement was authorized for two C-17, a system the Air Force says it will need to support the "airlift force for the long-term."

The C-17 transport promises to carry twice the load of a C-141 Starlifter, currently the Air Force's airlift mainstay.

In the September-October edition of Defense 90, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney called the C-17 "out best airlift option for all likely scenarios in all regions of the world."

The bills authorized $600 million but appropriated $950 million for the MILSTAR communications satellite system and over $900 million for the Advanced Tactical Fighter.

For research and development, the bills cleared $680 million for the MX rail-garrison and small ICBM programs, and approved funds for 12 MX ICBMs.

In other military spending issues, the defense bill provided a package of benefits for people deployed in Operation Desert Shield.

The benefits include free postal service, authority for imminent danger pay, authority for a savings program, reimbursement for accrued leave for activated reservists and authority to pay medical special pays and VHA to activated reservists.

On reservist related matters, the defense bill now gives the president authority to change the limit from 180 to 360 days for active-duty service associated with Desert Shield. (Air Force News Service)

Second Lt. Edward Nevin gets help pinning on his new wings from his mother after graduation ceremonies for Reese Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 91-01 Oct. 26.

New pilots finish one challenge, ready for next

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

(Editor's note: This is the sixth and last installment in a series about what it's like to go through undergraduate pilot training at Reese.)

Twenty student pilots stand ready for the moment they've waited a year for — getting their wings.

They arrived on Reese and began training Oct. 19, 1989. Many of them new to the Air Force; all of them new to military flying. And now, one year later on Oct. 26, the members of Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 91-01 are ready to put their trainer jets and instructors aside and take to the sky on their own — as Air Force pilots.

The final six weeks

After assignment night on Sept. 14, they knew where they were going. Now it was just a matter of passing their formation and navigational check rides before they graduate.

"Once we got past assignment night, the tension seemed to let up and we could relax some," said 2nd Lt. Jeff Miller, a member of class 91-01 who has been assigned to fly C-141s at Travis AFB, Calif.

"We were no longer under the pressure of doing our best in hopes to get the aircraft assignment we wanted. We knew where we were going and now it was just a matter of keeping up our flying skills so we could pass the final check," Lieutenant Miller added.

"Being a member of the Ohio Air National Guard, I knew before I even got here what my assignment was going to be, but that didn't make things any easier throughout the year," said 2nd Lt. Doug Cligrow, another member of 91-01 who will be returning to Ohio to fly A-7s. "I'll agree though, once we got past assignment night, it was a relief knowing the end, and my wings, were clearly in sight."

From assignment night until graduation, students went on cross-country flights, flew more "out-and-backs" and continued work on perfecting their instrument, navigational and formation flying skills.

Students receiving fighter or instructor assignments spent some of the time until graduation learning four-ship formation flying. Those selected for transport, tanker or bomber aircraft practiced low-level navigation flying, map reading and instrument work in the T-38's rear cockpit.

Concentration was the key to making it through the last weeks. "The days leading up to our final checks were filled with anticipation and pressure," said Lieutenant Miller.

Lieutenant Cligrow completed his check on Oct. 17 in a flight to Vance AFB, Okla. Two days later, Lieutenant Miller's flight took him to Laughlin AFB, Texas. Both were a success, as were check flights of the other class members.

Graduation day arrives

Wrapping things up and still having about 10 days until graduation, students spent time closing out grade books, inspection-proofing uniforms, getting their new assignment patches sewn on, outprocessing and making arrival arrangements for their next base.

Then, the day finally arrives. Students from 91-01 gather upon the stage in the Simler Theater. As the first graduation of the fiscal year, the ceremony also marks the beginning of a new chain of graduation events. At 10 a.m. the moment arrives and students stand ready to receive recognition for their year of hard work.

Today, twenty new pilots are borne to the sky in defense of the nation and all it stands for — life, liberty and justice for all.

Local scout troop seeks scouts, offers challenges

"Be prepared." True to their motto, members of Boy Scout Troop 548 gave up part of their weekend earlier this month to help people less fortunate than themselves prepare for the holiday season.

The scouts collected food donations in Reese Village Nov. 10, using a method designed to make donating convenient for village residents. Scoutmaster MSgt. Matt Alvarez explained that the scouts placed bags on village porches so that people could place food items in them at their convenience.

"This meant that people didn't have to wait around for the scouts to come to their home, and they could avoid interruptions to their day," he added.

As a result of their effort, the troop collected a truckload of food items for the needy, with the help of

Cub Scout Pack 548.

The food drive served as a precursor to an ongoing membership drive. Sergeant Alvarez indicated that he wants to bolster the current troop strength to 40 scouts and six troop leaders, noting that added troop strength means more activity and merit badge opportunities.

Troop meetings are held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesdays in the Scout Hut next to the Reese Preschool on War Highway.

Scouts should wear either an official uniform or a colored T-shirt at all troop events. In discussing uniform requirements, the scoutmaster said that the troop is in need of used uniforms.

For more information on the membership drive or the need for uniforms, call Sergeant Alvarez at 3796 (days) or 885-2426 (evenings).

Crashing the boards

HOSP member joins military's elite athletes

by Sgt. Greg Spraggins
Reese Public Affairs Division

Everyone knows Bo. Everyone knows Jordan. And before long, everyone will know Frank Parker, a 6'6" slammin' jammin' forward for the Reese Rattlers.

Parker, assigned to the 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital Physiological Training Unit, is in an elite class of athletes in the military.

Highly recruited out of high school, Parker elected to stay close to home, which he calls New Orleans, and play ball for Southern University in New Orleans.

During his junior year, he was recruited by the Cleveland Cavaliers and the Atlanta Hawks. He went to training camp in the Southern California Pro-Am League, where many American and European teams showcase future talents.

After playing only four games with a free-agent Texas team, Parker was picked by the Detroit Spirits, a team in the Continental Basketball Association. Parker played with the Spirits for one year, and then played for the Toronto Tornados, a team in the northern conference of the CBA.

In 1985, after chances failed in being picked up by a European team, Parker enlisted in the Air Force and was eventually assigned to Kadena AB, Japan.

During the next five years, he excelled to the elite rank of Air Force athletes, being selected for the Pacific Air Forces team five years in a row, the Air Force team once, and just this past September, the Armed Forces team.

Parker, who was assigned to Reese in February, was selected to go to the Armed Forces training camp. Out of about 20 people selected for camp, 10 made the team. Parker was one of them.

The team played in the Conseil International du Sport Militaire, a European tournament held in Dijon, France. The Armed Forces team went 6-2 in the tournament, with only three points in two losses separating them from the championship.

The 30-year-old sergeant is currently working on the transition from playing to coaching, and is nine hours from his bachelors degree in management.

He hopes to earn a commission and work in the medical field. Parker is one of the major talents on the Reese Rattlers varsity squad, which is undefeated in the Lubbock downtown league.

So if your in the gym, and you see someone flying through the air, it's not Bo and it's not Jordan. It's the other guy.

Sporting his colors from his days at Kadena AB, Japan, Number 24 Frank Parker crashes the boards during intramural action in the Reese Physical Fitness Center.
