Child development center fees to depend on income

Change takes place Aug. 1 throughout Air Force

Charges for Air Force child development centers will change from set prices to fees that vary based on total family income beginning Aug. 1.

The Military Child Care Act of 1989 requires that the Defense Department set uniform fees for military child care based on total family income, according to Col. Roy D. Sheetz, director of Air Force Morale, Welfare and Recreation Operations. He said child care fees for each base will be set within the fee ranges published annually by the assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel.

"This new program will help the Air Force provide developmental care for reasonable fees," Colonel Sheetz said, "and Air Force child development programs will be more affordable for lower income families and hardship cases."

The colonel said that most families will not notice a difference in their child care costs.

"Families with a higher income may pay a little more," he said, "and families with a lower income will pay a little less."

Fees will be based on individual family income figures provided by the parents. The adjusted gross income as reported on the 1989 Form 1040, Federal Income Tax Return, will be used by each base child development center to establish family income.

"The information from a person's tax return is protected by the Privacy Act. Only persons with a need to know will have access to family financial information," the colonel said.

"Providing the financial information is optional, but DOD guidelines dictate that those who don't provide the data will be charged maximum rate."

Parents who are married but file taxes separately are required to provide both copies of the Form 1040.

The new, standardized fees will be announced in July and will go into effect in August, Colonel Sheetz said. (Air Force News Service)

Women's health night on tap

A Women's Health Night will be conducted at 7 p.m. in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess by USAF Hospital Reese, in conjunction with the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Seminar presentations will be given by Dr. Daniel McGunagle, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the center and reserve Capt. (Dr.) Mark Pessa, a professor of surgery at TTUHSC. Both physicians are on the staff and actively provide service at USAF Hospital Reese.

Topics to be presented are: breast diseases, vaginal diseases and nutrition. According to HOSP officials, these topics were selected because they are very common diseases which present numerous problems and concerns, yet many women lack knowledge of their causes, management and prevention. There will be a question-and-answer period following the presentations.

All women (military or civilian, and retired or active-duty spouses) are welcome. For details, call Edwina Thierry at 3285.

E-7 promotion rate not as low as it seemed

The Reese selection rate for master sergeant promotions was not as low as it appeared, according to the Reese Military Personnel Office.

The local rate for promotions, announced May 31, was 8.14 percent vs. 20.36 percent in Air Training Command and 19.52 percent throughout the Air Force.

Conversion figures in misperception

"Our rate for promotions locally wasn't as bad as the comparison to ATC and Air Force made it appear," said MSgt. Artie Frazier of military personnel. "Although the number of Reese selectees (seven) was accurate, the selection rate was based on manning before the maintenance conversion. The result was a rate that didn't accurately reflect the promotion success of Reese noncommissioned officers."

Wing members deploy for exercise

Sgt. Terry Carpenter, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, sets up a tent during a wing deployment exercise in May 1989. People from throughout the wing deployed this week to the deployment area on the western edge of Reese. Photos and full details on this exercise will appear in the June 15 Roundup.

Commander's perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
64th FTW commander

In past columns I've written about various "centers of excellence" around Reese — small groups of professionals whose impact on the mission is much larger than their size would suggest. The trouble is that Reese people are so good that there are too many candidates for that title to do justice to them all.

It's hard to single out one unit when so many are doing such an outstanding job. So, when something special in an organization is brought to my attention, I'll continue to spotlight it — hoping you all understand that there are still plenty more out there to write about. With that in mind, here's a couple more "centers of excellence" deserving our recognition.

If you judge success of a service organization by the feedback you get from its customers, then our Dental Clinic stands above the crowd. In our student pilot course completion critiques, the dental clinic is consistently rated outstanding due to the professional attitude and skill displayed by the staff (and you thought I never read those things).

Not one to actively seek the services of a dentist myself, I was recently captured for the dental portion of my annual flight physical. Two pros, TSgt. Norvell Smith and Sgt. Todd Caro, took good care of me; and even my session with the clinic's chief dentist, Lt. Col. (Dr.) Ed Wright, was relatively enjoyable (look mom, no cavities!). I had experienced first hand what I already knew from the wing population: that our dental clinic people are professional, courteous, organized and firm believers in the work ethic.

With the disestablishment of our two maintenance squadrons, the clinic has recently expanded their services to family members and retirees, to include dentures, bridge work and other needed services to the extent allowed by regulation.

Now for all you other fine people in the hospital, I know there are other centers of excellence that customers mention often. Try our Pharmacy, Patient Administration, Primary Care Clinic and Emergency Room for starters. I can't mention them all, as explained in the first portion.

Next, let me mention some real "unsung heroes" who have created a center of excellence to conduct the wing's mobility mission. Resource Management's Mobility and Transportation Sections and Mario Manfre, program manager, provide the keys to unlock the mobility process. When the mobilization orders are received, Capt. Steve Whitt and his folks in the Mobility Control Center along with the dedicated people who man the processing lines are ready to overcome all obstacles in getting our folks processed and ready to fight. First Lt. Ron Smith and his transportation crew are always there to put our people on the road or in the air to the battle zone.

But when you mention mobility, you must also talk about all the unit mobilization officers and noncommissioned officers, augmentees, and...don't forget the individuals who actually process to fight the war.

Like I say: refer to paragraph one. You're all pros.

Finally, let me close with an organization that is striving to become a Reese center of excellence — our Family Support Center. Having been fully funded only recently, the FSC has already had one "trial by fire" as they assisted our relocating maintenance families. The highly dedicated staff of Phil Thierry, MSgt. Donald Minnis and Margaret Ramey are working hard to establish viable services in counselling referral, spouse employment, volunteer resources and educational programs for Reese families. They have taken the initiative to sponsor the relocation, job search and major command flying information seminars developed by wing wives for the spouses of our student pilots. Coupled with our outstanding Family Services Center team, they have the potential to be a dynamite addition to the Reese community.

Watch for their grand opening when the new FSC office is completed soon at the Mathis Recreation Center. With your support, they too will become a center of excellence.

Tornadoes

'Children of thunderstorms' can wreak havoc

by Capt. Phil Moore
Reese Disaster Preparedness Office chief

July 1989 was just another average summer month in the United States.

Tucson, Ariz. experienced its most violent thunderstorm in years. Wind gusts up to 65 miles per hour and heavy rains caused damage in the millions. Tornadoes passed through several cities across the nation, reaping destruction and death.

It's estimated that at any given moment, nearly 2,000 thunderstorms are in progress somewhere over the earth's surface. Their frequency and potential for violence make them one of nature's great killers and destroyers.

The most destructive "child" of a thunderstorm is the tornado, a violently rotating column of air which descends from a thunderstorm. Let's face it — in West Texas, we get a lot of them this time of year.

Tornadoes are very unpredictable. They can move very slowly or at speeds in excess of 60 mph. The average path of a tornado is about a quarter of a mile wide and a few miles long. However, some have cut a swath a mile wide and over 300 miles long with winds well over 200 miles per hour.

In an average year, tornadoes in the United States claim about 100 lives and cause hundreds of millions in damage.

There are things you can do to protect yourself and your loved ones. The most important thing is to be educated on the danger signs and protective measures.

A tornado watch means there is a chance of dangerous weather later with damaging winds. In essence, conditions are right for a tornado. A tornado warning means a tornado has been sighted nearby and that you should go at once to a safe location (basement, center of house, etc.)

If you see or hear the tornado coming, do not hesitate — go to your shelter area if there is time. If not, curl up (face down) on the floor or ground, draw your knees up under you, and cover the back of your head with your hands. Only a fool will sight-see during a tornado warning.

We can't prevent tornadoes, but we can prevent needless loss of life. For more detailed information, contact the Disaster Preparedness Office at extension 3701/3702/3703, or visit us in Bldg. 230, second floor.

Careline

The Careline is your direct link to me, Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., 64th Flying Training Wing commander. All calls will be held in strictest confidence if the caller requests anonymity.

I urge you to leave your name and number when you call so that you can get a direct response; however, you may remain anonymous if you wish.

Before calling the Careline, consider using your chain of command to solve your problem. While you can contact the Careline directly, your immediate supervisor and/or first sergeant/commander are usually in the best position to resolve your problem.

The Careline can be reached 24 hours a day at 3273.

Lack of fair treatment?

There are organizations around the base area using the Reese name that do not appear to be supporting equal opportunity hiring programs. Can the base do anything to change the policies of these organizations?

There are a number of civilian organizations near Reese that use the base's name. They do not fall under the government and therefore are not subject to federal EOT standards.

If you believe that discrimination exists, you should speak to the manager or owner of the particular agency or contact the appropriate local/state human rights agency.

Bus stop causes problem

I live right by the school bus stop in Reese Village. My problem is with the behavior of the children.

They make a deliberate point of making noise, they are very disrespectful, and they often burn paper. I've told them not to do these things, but they have responded by throwing rocks at my house. Something needs to be done about this.

We've looked into ways to resolve the problems associated with the location of the bus stop. During the summer, we will relocate the stop east to the area by the playground.

Also, as the next school year approaches, we will solicit volunteers to monitor the stop during pick-up and drop-off times.

Handicapped parking on base

About two months ago, I put in a request for a handicapped parking spot by the Maintenance Complex. I was told that this would not be a problem when they finished the new parking lot, which was under construction at the time.

Right now, there is still not handicapped spot. I was hoping you could look into this.

Your request for a handicapped parking spot was never received by the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron. Somehow, it slipped through the cracks.

However, two handicapped spots have now been authorized — one on either side of the loading zone. A work request is in to install handicapped parking signs and construct a ramp in the loading zone. Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Thank you

During the past two weeks, the loss, grief and pain our family has suffered over the death of my wife, Alma, has been lessened by the overwhelming support and care we received from the wonderful people at Reese.

My family and I are grateful for the donations, flowers, visits and cards we received in our time of sorrow. Please accept our sincere thanks and may God bless each and every one of you.

Sincerely,
SrA. Michael Stuart & Family

101 Days

call for even greater safety awareness

by 1st Lt. Mitch Jett
Reese Social Actions chief

Safety Mission.

What do these two terms have in common? They are words that cannot (and should not) exist apart from each other. They operate together, in harmony, and without one you cannot have the other.

I bring this up because over the course of the summer (from Memorial Day to Labor Day), we will get a chance to see how well we put this theory into practice.

This period, called "The 101 Critical Days of Summer," is the time of the year when more people have accidents than at any other time of the year.

A combination of factors cause these high rates. The weather is nice, we travel more, and (if we're completely honest) we also get more careless about how we have fun.

Unfortunately, two factors that contribute to accidents with saddening regularity are lack of seatbelt use and drinking and driving. Over and over again, these two factors contribute to more accidents on our nation's highways than any other cause.

If you've seen the commercials on television showing what happens to unbuckled occupants in a car, you know what I mean. There is literally nothing to stop them in an accident except the windshield and dashboard. Neither will save you.

In a head-on collision, at the very least you'll most likely be crippled, and in a worst-case scenario, you'll be killed or kill someone else.

Alcohol use while driving is another easy way to die. Alcohol abuse contributes to between 30-50 percent of the deaths on the highway each year. In two years, there were enough people killed (about 55,000) to equal the number of men and women killed in the entire Vietnam War.

Astounding, isn't it? It's sad that most of that is completely preventable. I don't think you want to become a statistic.

I also don't think you want to be part of a casualty notification team that arrives at a house to notify a spouse that her husband and children were killed by a drunk driver. I don't think you want to see someone plow into your car because the driver said, "I'm o.k. to drive" even though that wasn't the case. These tragedies happen daily, but every day we have opportunities to see that they don't. The prevention is, in most cases, easy and quick.

Here are some guidelines for a happy, safe summer:

☐ Absolutely, positively, never ever drink and drive. If you choose to drink away from home, have a designated driver or call a taxi.

If you are at a Reese club and you feel you are too intoxicated to drive, club personnel will call a taxi for you and put it on your club bill.

☐ Always, always, ALWAYS wear a seatbelt. Ensure that your children are buckled in, too.

☐ Plan your trips ahead of time. Get plenty of rest, and plan breaks accordingly. If you're tired, stop and sleep.

Please, let's all work together to have a happy, safe summer. We all benefit from the safe actions of people everywhere. Thanks, and have fun!

Supervisors are key to financial responsibility

The chief master sergeant of the Air Force is not about to recommend extending the length of basic training so financial planning can be added to the curriculum.

"It's the supervisor's responsibility, first and foremost, to be responsible for the people in their charge," said CMSAF James C. Binnicker, "and to care for them in every aspect of life." That includes discussing finances.

But some supervisors may feel they shouldn't be that involved, said Chief Binnicker. "Some say basic training should cover things like financial planning." Basic training is called basic training for a reason, said the chief. It's "basic" training.

"And in that six weeks, because of all the transitions these young men and women are making, it's difficult to sit down and discuss the philosophical merits of financial planning.

"We can discuss how to write a check and how to balance a checkbook, but I suspect that beyond that you lose the audience. You don't have time to cover everything.

And I don't think we should extend the length of basic training to do it."

It is a supervisor's responsibility to talk about financial planning, according to the head of Reese's Personal Financial Management Program.

"Supervisors need to ensure that their troops are aware of the responsibility they have for their finances, and of the programs that exist to help them manage their money, if needed," said Capt. Russell Roberts during a separate interview.

"This is especially true of supervisors people who are relatively new to their the service."

Financial planning is an area in the enlisted world "where we fall short," said the chief. "We don't do a very good job of teaching our young airmen and NCOs the need for it and the importance of it.

"Success has a lot to do with one's financial comfort," Chief Binnicker said. "Failure has a lot to do with one's inability to manage one's financial situation. First sergeants will tell you one of the quickest ways to end a career is to get in financial difficulties."

And it affects everything, Captain Roberts said.

"It affects your performance on the job because if the phone rings you're wondering if it's a creditor trying to find you...or 'Is it the first sergeant looking for me? Or is it my spouse calling to say they're repossessing the furniture?'"

"It impacts in the home because you're not happy when you're having to pinch pennies; when you're living from payday to payday. It breaks up marriages. And something that important ought to be paid more attention to."

Supervisors can offer advice to their troops without singling out someone with a problem.

"Approach it as a positive thing," said the chief. "Make sure everybody gets the same kind of treatment, the same tender, loving care, the same kind of instructions.

For information on the financial management assistance at Reese, call Captain Roberts at 3432. (Adapted from Air Force News Service)

Exercise

Members need to know how to react by 2nd Lt. Liesl Daniel

Reese BEET member

Disaster!

Would you know how to respond?

Would you assist in creating a cordon to minimize more damage and injury, or help in clean up and reconstruction? Could you assist in protecting and caring for individuals needing medical attention?

The answer to all these questions should be yes. If they are not, then priorities need to be re-evaluated.

Each of us has certain responsibilities at Reese, civilian and military alike. Whatever you do as an individual on a daily basis contributes to the success of our mission as a wing. However, during an exercise or "real-world" situation, your primary area of responsibility can shift.

There are specific organizations whose missions are designed to incorporate the requirements of exercise scenarios with real-world situations. But the responsibility for carrying out the exercise and ending with a successful, positive outcome does not lie solely with them. As members of the Reese family and the Lubbock community, we have a commitment to one another, on or off duty, to assist in time of need.

The Base Exercise Evaluation Team designs and implements various types of exercises to ensure wing members are ready to respond accordingly to similar real-world situations. These exercises are not designed to inconvenience anyone, nor are they designed to be avoided by passers by. If you accidentally stumble into an exercise, treat it as though it were real and not as a burden or a game. Actively participate — assist as you are needed and do as you are told regardless of rank or daily duties.

Once you've been tasked to take part in an exercise, it becomes your primary mission. However, if you are involved in a bona fide, mission-essential activity during the course of an exercise (i.e. instructor and student pilots enroute to flying or flying-related activities), you will be excused from participating.

Exercise or real-world, there is no choice to be made. There is no such thing as an unimportant job. Accept responsibility; ask for responsibility. In time of need, the subject is "we," not "I." Remember:

□ If you are tasked as a cordon guard, accept it as your primary responsibility. Preventing entry could prevent more damage, injury or loss of life.

□ If you are told to assist in the clean up after an attack or disaster, to assist with shelter management or any disaster preparedness team, do it.

□ If medical technicians need your assistance to save a life, it's because that injured person needs you.

□ If you pass by an area distant to an exercise or real-world cordon and see someone badly injured and unattended, it is your primary responsibility to find care for them.

□ If you are required to man your work area while co-workers are utilized in an exercise, accept that responsibility and press on.

□ Express a willingness to be involved, honor cordons and demonstrate a sense of urgency.

Remember, each of us will come to depend on one another in a real-world attack or disaster. Although our individual responsibilities may differ, our basic needs are the same. Treat exercises as real!

Sgt. Phillip Duffy, part of the Reese Disaster Preparedness Support Team, goes through the procedures involved with checking for radioactive contamination during a recent exercise. All wing members play a part in successfully responding to contingencies, whether they are "real-world" or exercise.

Local news

Volunteers to be recognized

Volunteer Recognition Week locally is set for June 25-29, and the Reese Family Support Center is aiming to ensure all base volunteers are recognized.

All individuals who have volunteered their time to the Reese and/or local communities in any way should contact the center by June 22 so they can receive a letter entitling them to discounts at various base facilities during the recognition week.

The letter will list participating facilities. The center can be reached at 3305/6394.

CGOC meets June 14

The Reese Company Grade Officers Council will meet at 4:15 p.m. Thursday in the Officers' Open Mess.

The CGOC is open to lieutenants and captains. Council officials said that the CGOC offers its members benefits such as the chance for professional development and grass roots networking.

Billeting limited

Officials in the Reese Billeting Office are advising wing members that billeting space on Reese will be limited from June 19-23 due to change-of-command ceremonies. They ask that people schedule around these dates as much as possible.

For more information, call billeting at 3155.

Sign warrants attention

A new sign recently appeared at Reese's main gate that lists the number of days the base has gone without a driving-under-the-influence charge. The sign deserves the attention of base people, according to the chief of Reese Social Actions.

"Since the sign affects us all, we should all be concerned with keeping the number (of days) as high as possible," said 1st Lt. Mitch Jett. "We all know people who choose to drink. We also probably know individuals that choose to drink and drive — an unwise move.

The lieutenant pointed out that the sign, which read 19 days as of Thursday morning, can be set back to zero by anyone here, be they a military or family member, civilian employee or contractor.

"I hope everyone will do their best to work with people to ensure they get home safely," he urged.

CBPO section offers help

The customer service section in the Reese Consolidated Base Personnel Office is the first stop people should make for the personnel needs. Located in the front lobby of CBPO, the section operates from 7:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. weekdays (except for Thursdays, when they open at 9 p.m. to allow for training).

The section can help wing members with a wide variety of personnel needs, such as new identification cards, assignment preference updates, address changes and performance report reviews.

Those who work at night can also get help from the section by filling out an Air Force Form 99, "CBPO Customer Service Inquiry." The forms are available at unit orderly rooms, and they will be processed by the section as soon as possible.

TMO can aid members

The Reese Traffic Management Office is available to assist wing members who making temporary and permanent moves.

Once people get their orders, they can bring them by TMO in Bldg. 920, Room 208; seven copies of orders are needed; when making an appointment for a TMO briefing, individuals should have some idea of when they want to make their move. For details, call TMO at 3837.

Bonds

Allotment amounts change in October

Series EE $50 and $75 Savings Bonds will not be available through payroll deduction after Oct. 1, according to Treasury Department officials. The minimum amount available will be the $100 Series EE Savings Bond.

Bonds bought through payroll deductions will be converted to $100 Series EE Savings Bonds when a new purchase schedule starts between now and Oct. 1.

To simplify the conversion process, Air Force accounting and finance officials are encouraging members to stop any $50 or $75 bonds during the 1990 Savings Bond drive June 1-30, and start new $100 bonds.

Civilian payroll office members will notify employees in advance of any adjustment to biweekly deduction and that the bond will be converted to a $100 bond after their next $50 or $75 bond is issued.

The conversions are done automatically unless members want to discontinue their present arrangement. If they decide to do that, they must fill out new bond authorization forms.

This change does not affect over-the-counter sales of $50 and $75 Savings Bonds which will still be available through financial institutions across the country.

The accounting and finance conversion schedule is:

□ $75 bonds with a $7.50 monthly deduction for five months will be stopped in the fifth month of purchase and started as a $6.25 deduction for eight months. For instance, a $75 bond stopped in July will be converted to a $100 bond buying plan in August at $6.25 for eight months.

□ $75 bonds with a $18.75 monthly deduction for two months will be stopped in the second month and started as a $12.50 deduction for four months.

For instance, bonds stopped in September will be converted to the $100 bond plan in October at $12.50 a month for four months.

□ $75 bonds with a $37.50 monthly deduction for one month will be stopped in September and started as a $25 deduction for two months beginning in October.

□ All other $50 and $75 allotments will be stopped in September. Allotments will remain the same, but the number of months will increase. For instance, a $75 bond at $12.50 a month was three months and will now go to four months for the $100 bond. Fifty dollar bonds allotted at $5, $6.25, $12.50 and $25 will be converted to 10, eight, four and two months for the $100 bond. Previously it was five, four, two and one months respectively.

Courts uphold military 'safe sex' order

The Armed Services' so-called "safe-sex" order won another victory May 10 from the U.S. Court of Military Appeals.

The court ruled that the services may require their HIV-infected members to tell their prospective sexual partners, whether military or civilian, of their condition before having intercourse and to take precautions when engaging in sexual activity.

"The court rejected a senior airman's argument that the order had no military purpose because his sex partner was a civilian," says Maj. Paul Capofari, a lawyer with the criminal division of the Army's judge advocate general's staff at the Pentagon.

"An earlier case that had upheld the safe-sex order involved sex between two service members. This decision makes it clear that preventing the spread of the disease is an important military objective, and hence, the order is valid."

The U.S. Court of Military Appeals now has upheld the government's position in each AIDS issue that has come before it, Major Capofari said. Unprotected, unwarned sexual intercourse may be alleged as a violation of Article 134, or as an aggravated assault, whether the intercourse is heterosexual or homosexual.

Summarizing the court decisions, Major Capofari said, "This and other recent rulings mean that soldiers may be punished for disobeying the commander's safe-sex order if they don't warn prospective sexual partners of their condition — even when they take precautions during intercourse, or whether the partner is military or civilian."

The latest ruling answers the last open question in the AIDS prosecution area. The court has "absolutely no doubt that (the order represents) a public duty of the highest order" and is therefore enforceable under Article 90 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

All the services require that persons diagnosed with AIDS receive the safe-sex order.

The order does not extend to relations between husband and wife, although spouses of infected soldiers are told of their condition. (Air Force News Service)

Command news

Plan benefits survivors

The Survivor's Benefits Plan is a form of insurance which provides a guaranteed monthly annuity for life to eligible beneficiaries of military members, according to the Reese Personal Affairs Office.

Because retiree pay stops upon the death of the retiree, a decision not to participate in the benefits plan could place a severe financial hardship for survivors. For details on the plan and how it can help members secure their family's future, call personal affairs at 3402.

Transition assistance available

Separating or retiring Air Force people are going to get help readjusting to civilian life through a new trial program, known as the Transition Assistance Program.

The program seeks to prevent possible long-term unemployment problems, enhance employment services to disabled veterans and young soldiers, and improve the perception of military people at separation.

TAP, featuring three-day employment workshops and other career counseling services, will be available at various times and military installations through the end of 1990 and at more sites during 1991-92.

The Disabled Transition Assistance Program, a four-hour employment assistance program run in addition to TAP, will be available initially at three military hospitals for military members being separated because of a service-connected disability.

The workshops are open to separating or retiring members within 180 days before separation.

TAP workshops offer assistance and counseling in areas including personal appraisal, goal and objective setting, making career and life decisions, initiating a job search, resumes and cover letters, job applications, interviewing techniques, dressing for success, and veterans benefits.

DTAP participants are introduced to the computerized civilian occupation labor market information system. The program provides one-on-one or small group employment assistance and information sessions.

Services are provided after an individual has been notified of the physical evaluation board determination to discharge because of a service-connected disability.

Air Force installations participating in the 1990 Transition Assistance Program are Brooks AFB, Texas; Kelly AFB, Texas; Lackland AFB, Texas; Randolph AFB, Texas; and Langley AFB, Va.

For details, call the Reese Separations Office at 6189. (Air Force News Service)

Space training applications due

Applications for undergraduate space training are due to the Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center here by July 6.

About 40 officers will be chosen when the selection board meets Aug. 20.

Classes start in spring of 1991 and are scheduled monthly to prepare officers for space operations duty. Space operations includes the following areas: space surveillance; missile warning; satellite operations; space launch operations; space flight operations; and battle management, command, control and communication operations.

These areas cover functions such as command, program formulation, policy planning, inspection, and direction of space systems activities.

For details, call the Reese Classification and Training Office at 3436. (Air Force News Service)

Lithograph supply fading

The supply of Air Force "lithographs," or aircraft posters, has become extremely limited and is not likely to increase, according to the publishing agency.

The Air Force News Center at Kelly AFB, Texas, recently announced that the supply of lithographs is unlikely to increase due to printing fund cuts. In the event that future supplies become available and are sent to Reese, wing members will be informed through the Roundup.

For details, contact the Reese Public Affairs Division at 3236.

CHAMPUS tips offered

CHAMPUS-eligible members should always try to get health care from a uniformed service hospital or clinic before using CHAMPUS, the Civilian Health and Medical Plan of the Uniformed Services.

According to the Reese Health Benefits Office, even if someone lives far from a military hospital, it can still cost less to get care at one — particularly for expensive major procedures. Transportation to the hospital could be less than the CHAMPUS cost-share. In some cases, the military may be able to help with transportation.

Outpatient care from a military hospital is free. Inpatient care costs only a small amount each day, much less than the daily costs in a civilian hospital.

Also, people living in certain zip codes around a military hospital must try to use that hospital for other than emergency inpatient care. If care isn't available, they must get a nonavailability statement from the military hospital. Otherwise, CHAMPUS can't help pay for the claim.

For more information, call the health benefits office at 3581. (Air Force News Service)

EOM

Club offers wide variety of recreation options

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
editor

Nothing to do?
Looking for some entertainment?

Is your body beginning to meld to your couch?

Members of the Reese Enlisted Mess are unlikely to have any of these problems. The EOM has a variety of recreational activities every week for its members.

"The emphasis we've placed on food service lately doesn't mean that we've forgotten about our members' needs for recreation," said Otis Burchfield, EOM manager. "The club has something going on every day."

Some of these events include:

□ Bingo — The EOM has bingo six days a week. It's held from 5-7 p.m. Monday through Friday in the lounge; and from 7-10 p.m. Tuesdays in the ballroom.

The club recently added a Sunday session to its bingo schedule. It's held from 4-7 p.m. in the main lounge. In addition, the EOM holds kiddie games from 1-3 p.m. Sundays. Children in these games play for prizes rather than cash.

Various forms of bingo are played during the adult games, such as postage stamp, layer cake, 80-20 split, to name a few.

□ Club card drawings — Held between 7 and 7:30 p.m. weekdays in the lounge, card numbers are randomly selected and those with that number win cash prizes if they are present. The amount awarded becomes progressively bigger if winners are not present to collect their prize. In the past, the amount has been as big as $275.

□ Music — Live disc jockeys are at the club every Friday and Saturday night for members' listening and dancing pleasure. The musical styles of the DJs range from top 40 and country to soul and disco.

The club also occasionally hires live bands whenever customer demand and cost considerations warrant.

Currently, EOM membership dues range from $4-7, depending on membership category (ie. airman, noncommissioned officer, senior NCO, civilian and so on).

"Considering the small membership fees involved, the club really is a good deal," Mr. Burchfield said. "People unfamiliar with our operation should do themselves a favor and find out about it—it'll be to their benefit."

Everybody in the pool!
The Reese Beach and Sea Breeze pools hours of operation are: Reese Beach — 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily; Sea Breeze — 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday and holidays; and 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Thursday (for lap swimming only). Pool fees vary. For details, call the Reese Physical Fitness Center at 6020/3783.
