Colonel Henny takes command of wing today

The 64th Flying Training wing will end one era and begin another as Col. Bill Henny takes command during a ceremony at 2:30 p.m. today in Hangar 82.

Colonel Henny will replace Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr., who will go to the Pentagon and assume duties with the Air Staff as deputy director of personnel programs.

The ceremony will be presided over by Lt. Gen. (Gen. selectee) Robert Oaks, commander of Air Training Command. General Oaks has been selected as the new Commander in Chief, U.S. Air Forces in Europe.

Reflecting on the change of command, Colonel Henny said he is looking forward to what's ahead.

"I'm excited about continuing to work with the top-notch people here at Reese," he said. "During my tenure as base commander, I've been fortunate enough to work with some extremely enthusiastic, hard-charging, capable people — they've made my job much easier, and I have no doubt that this won't change in the future."

Colonel Sams leaves Reese after 18 months as wing commander. During his tenure the wing successfully completed the first combined Operational Readiness Inspection/Unit Effectiveness Inspection of an ATC flying wing, took second place in the command's Torchlight competition, transitioned from "blue suit" aircraft maintenance to civilian contractor and earned the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award. The award will be presented by General Oaks during today's ceremony.

A command pilot with 3,000 flying hours, Colonel Henny came to Reese in January 1989 following an assignment at Headquarters Pacific Air Forces, Hickam AFB, Hawaii. He entered the Air Force in 1967 as a distinguished graduate of ROTC at Arizona Past aircraft assignments for the colonel include the KC-135, RF-4C and T-37. He's been an instructor in both the T-37 and RF-4C, and he commanded a T-37 squadron at Williams.

Other past assignments for the colonel, a graduate of the Air War College and native of Rochester, N.Y., include Shaw AFB, S.C.; Bergstrom AFB, Texas; Nellis AFB, Nev. and the North American Aerospace Defense Command at Peterson AFB, Colo.

The colonel is married to the former Susan Buckley of Hyannis, Mass. The Henny's have a 5-year-old daughter, Lauren, living with them. Colonel Henny has four other children — Thomas (an active-duty Air Force member), John, Deborah (an active-duty Navy member) and Jangela.

64th ABG gets new commander

The 64th Air Base Group got a new commander Thursday when Col. Ray Bean assumed command from Col. Bill Henny.

...new base commander

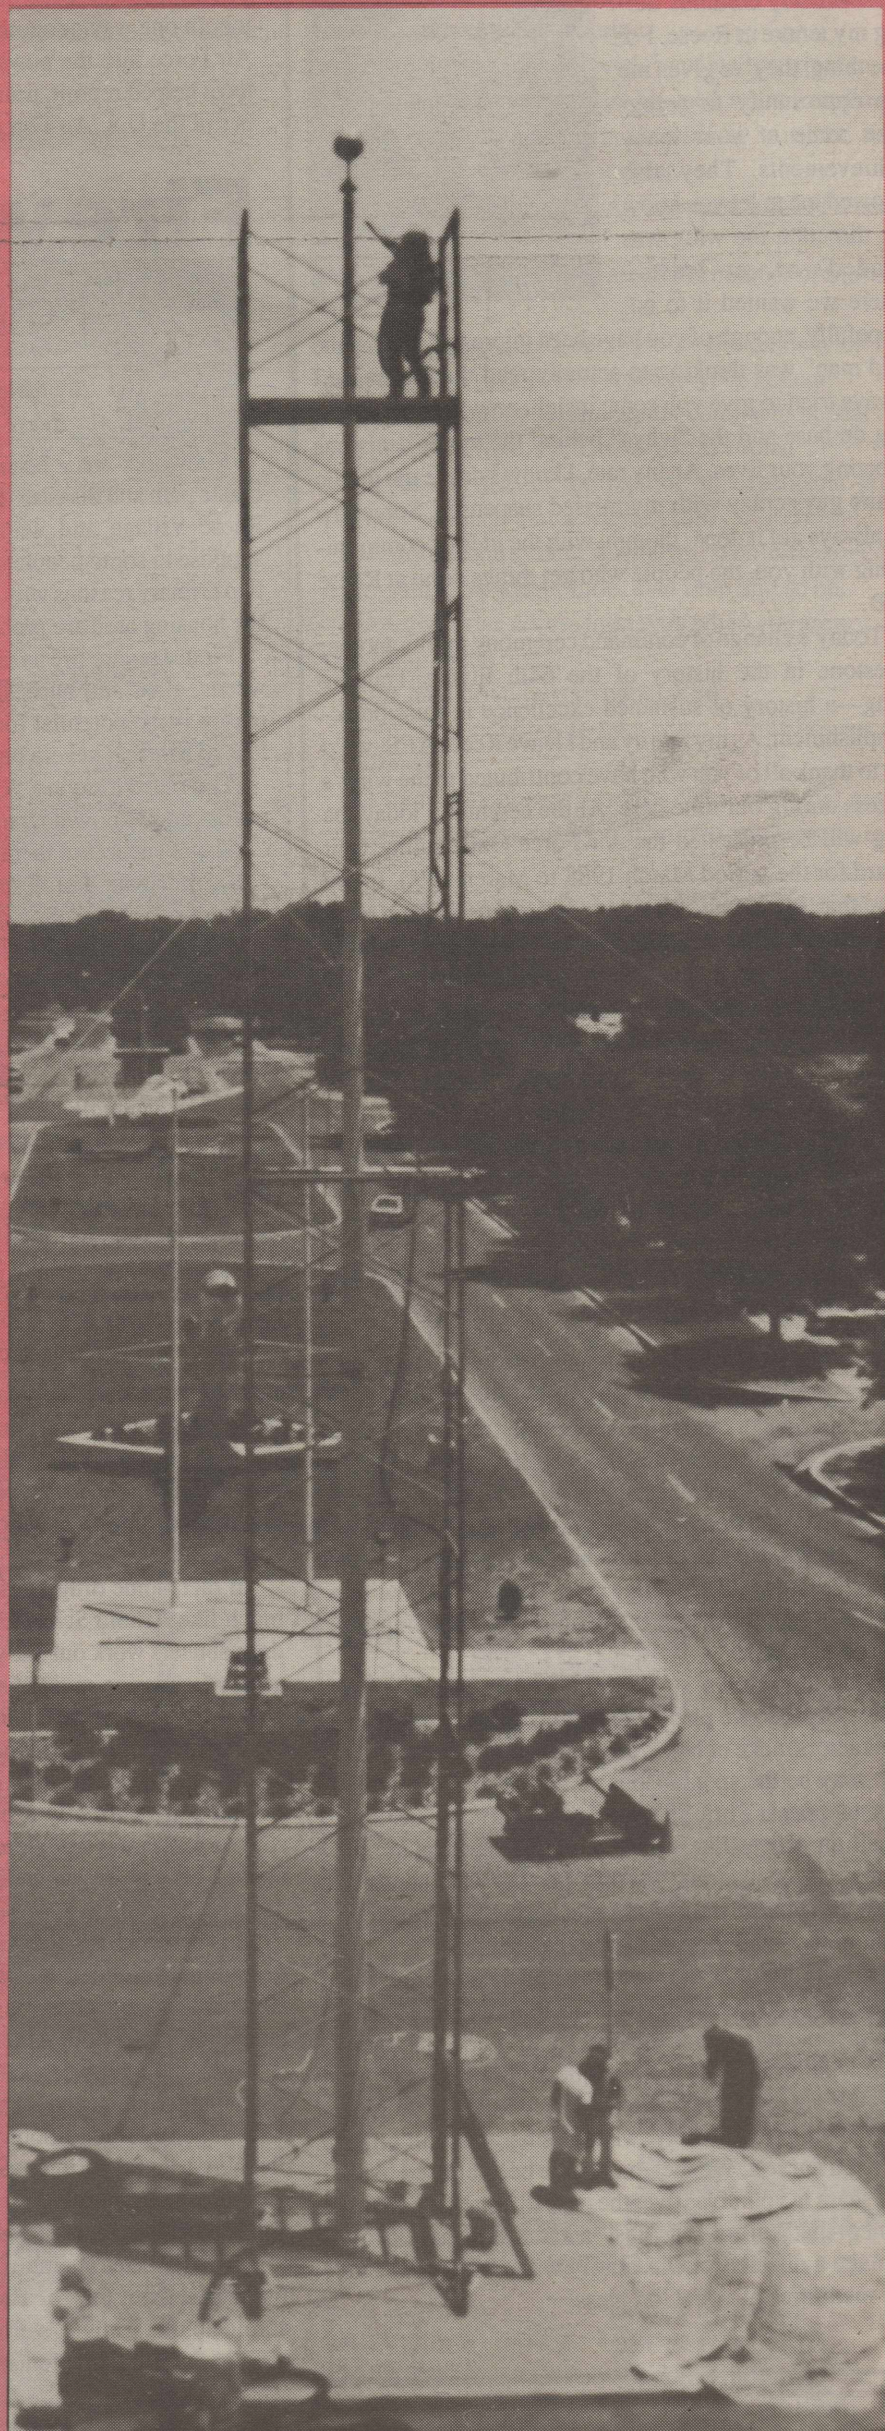

Colonel Henny will assume command of the 64th Flying Training Wing during a ceremony at 2:30 p.m. today in Hangar 82 (see related story, this page).

Colonel Bean comes to Reese from Vance AFB, Okla., where he was the 71st FTW deputy commander for Operations.

"I'm looking forward to being the base commander here," said Colonel Bean. "The people and units of Reese have an excellent reputation in the command, and I plan to do whatever is necessary to help continue that tradition of excellence."

A native of Alabama, Colonel Bean is a graduate of Auburn University. He entered the Air Force in 1967 after completing Officer Training School, and he completed navigator training in 1969 at Mather AFB, Calif.

Following that, he was assigned as a

Commander's perspective

By Col. Monroe S. Sams Jr.
64th FTW commander

A final word from me—

I have enjoyed writing these weekly columns during my tenure at Reese. For one thing, they've given me the opportunity to recognize some of your many achievements. They also allowed me to let you know the direction the wing was headed—or, at least—where we wanted it to go.

Hopefully, enough of you have been interested in what the "old man" was thinking to actually read them because I always tried to give you some insight on what was occurring on base and the "whys" behind the major decisions affecting your lives. At any rate, I know I drove the public affairs guys crazy with my missed suspenses. Somehow we always got it done, though, with the idea of communicating with you, the people who get things done at Reese AFB.

Today's change of command ceremony marks another milestone in the history of the 64th Flying Training Wing—a history of sustained excellence in mission accomplishment. As my family and I leave Reese AFB, we'd like to thank all of you who have contributed to the wing's success during our time here. At the ceremony today the wing will be presented the Air Force Outstanding Unit Award for the period March 1988 to March 1990. In my view, that says it all. The 64th is an outstanding wing because a lot of outstanding people—you guys—wanted it to be. And, I got to sit at the top and watch you in action. Thanks to every member of the Reese community for making it happen. Thanks, also, to the many fine people of Lubbock and the South Plains who support the base so well. Believe me, we'll miss you all.

My wife, Lisa, and I have always shared a vision of the Air Force "family" as a supportive community where all members could feel at home. Since her commitment to the Reese community has been every bit as great as my own, I asked her to close this column so she could say farewell also to our many friends here. And from my Lady—

The past 18 months have literally "flown" by, not just because the demands of time and energy are so great on a Wing Commander, and not just because the family faces increased energy output with multiple Reese and Lubbock activities, and not even because it's just so darned much fun being surrounded by the enthusiasm of 20- and 30-year-olds. It's passed quickly because it has been so thoroughly enjoyable meeting and getting to know the many talented and delightful people who make up the Reese community!

Buddy and I have spoken often of community and family...because we place great value on these qualities. These factors make or break the very quality of your daily life. It may be the spontaneous smile of a passer-by, the nod of support at a briefing, the friendly voice everytime you call an office (like Elaine's, whose cheerful "good morning" is contagious), or the person who honestly listens when you are talking. People like these make Reese a community—and they make the difference.

Air Force life is both rewarding and demanding. The uncertainties and relocations can be draining and it takes special people to commit themselves to all of this. Individuals who bring their own unique abilities forward to share with others really make up the essence of community. The individual variety, when it's natural, will bring forth a rich harvest. We feel that we've been blessed to be able to share in your lives over the past 18 months. Always remember that you are "The Best" and that each one of you does make a difference. Our family will carry warm and happy memories of you. God bless!

Lisa

ATC commander bids farewell

Lt. Gen. Robert Oaks
ATC commander

General Welch often comments that today's Air Force is the most capable and most ready Air Force in our nation's history. That's true — and during the past two years, I have appreciated the importance of your contributions in making this possible.

As members of the "First Command," you are doing a great job. In one way or another, each of you has helped mold our Air Force into the powerful deterrent force it is today. You have helped recruit, train and motivate virtually every member of the U.S. Air Force.

Despite the turmoil associated with budget cuts, force reductions and base closures, your professionalism has enabled the command to maintain its commitment to excellence. Your dedicated efforts have helped the U.S. Air Force remain the best in the world. This in turn has allowed the United States of America to position itself on the threshold of a new era — an era of improved world relations.

Please accept my sincerest appreciation for your outstanding support and hard work over the past two years. As Gloria and I move on to Europe, we will leave a part of us with you in Air Training Command; but we will also take with us many fond memories. Thanks for everything.

Fireworks

Fourth of July fun can turn to 'fiery' fate

by MSgt. Roy D. Napper
Reese Fire Department

Fireworks are a beautiful sight to behold, but they can create pain and disaster. The use of fireworks on Reese and in Reese Village and within Lubbock is prohibited. Now I suppose to some people that sounds unreasonable. There are two primary reasons why the use of fireworks on Reese and in the housing area are prohibited.

First, a severe fire hazard potential is created due to the dry weeds, grass and bushes surrounding the base. The second reason is the potential for injury to fingers, hands and eyes; loss of hearing; severe burns; and even death!

You may be saying, "Give me a break. I am a responsible person and I know how to be safe."

That's super, but there are many adults and children who will suffer pain and destruction of property caused by improper use and handling of fireworks.

Stop to think back. Did you ever use fireworks of any type without proper supervision or perhaps seriously injure yourself or someone else?

During my life, I can remember several incidents in which fireworks caused injury. At the age of 9, I saw two older cousins accidentally burn down their barn using finger firecrackers.

At 12, I tried to outsmart some leftover firecrackers. Since I had no matches, I used the stove burner to light the fuses. To my great surprise, I forgot that the back door was locked. By the time I reached the back porch, the firecracker had exploded in my right hand.

At first I thought my hand was gone. Instantly, my hand was tingling and my thumb hurt tremendously from second degree burns.

I was extremely lucky! At the same age, I witnessed my next door neighbor get third degree burns on his stomach and chest when his brother accidentally ignited several sparklers that he had tucked into his pants. He didn't know to "stop, drop and roll." Five years later, when I last saw him, he still had serious scars.

Fireworks can be like life — very unpredictable. If you do use fireworks in an area that does not prohibit them, be sure to follow specific safety rules, and use common sense! Fireworks are explosives!

I like to see fireworks displays, but I don't like to see injuries or fires caused by fireworks. Believe me, it can happen to any of us. The fire department wants everyone to have a "no-fire" day on the Fourth of July.

To all Reese people, have a happy Fourth of July and remember that the use of fireworks on Reese and in Reese Village is prohibited.

Drug abusers come in all forms

by Maj. Howard Altschwager
Reese staff judge advocate

Drug abuse has many faces. Most of us, when we hear the term "drug abuser," visualize an emaciated, glassy-eyed derelict with hypodermic needle in one hand and a vial of crack cocaine in the other. However, there are some drug abusers and addicts among us who don't meet such common stereotypes.

In fact, some drug abusers look healthy — very healthy, much like Arnold Schwarzenegger or Walter Payton. These drug abusers work out daily, sometimes many times a day, to achieve superior muscle size, strength and definition and would never consider taking a mind-altering drug. And yet these drug abusers continue to risk their physical health and well-being by taking anabolic steroids.

There are currently a number of scientific and medical studies indicating that steroid abuse can cause severe detrimental effects on an individual's health, including liver damage, heart disease and even death.

This evidence is so convincing that the Air Force now lists steroids as prohibited substances under Air Force Regulation 30-2 and steroid abuse is now a reason for discharge or separation under both AFR 39-10 and AFR 36-2.

Under paragraph 5-50.1 of AFR 39-10, an airman can be discharged for misconduct and issued a discharge under other than honorable conditions or a general discharge for the illegal, wrongful or improper use or possession of anabolic and androgenic steroids.

This fact was recently and forcefully brought to the attention of an enlisted member and local bodybuilder who was discharged from the Air Force with a general discharge for steroid abuse. Similar "steroid abuse" provisions exist under AFR 36-2 for the involuntary separation of officers for misconduct or moral or professional dereliction.

As the scientific and medical evidence of the dangers of steroid abuse continue to increase, many state legislatures have added steroids to their lists of controlled substances. The 71st Texas Legislature added human growth hormone and certain anabolic steroids to the Texas Controlled Substance Act.

As a result of this legislation, the intentional, knowing and unlawful possession of human growth hormone or any of the prohibited anabolic steroids is now a crime in Texas that is punishable by confinement in the county jail for up to 180 days and a fine not to exceed $1,000.00 (for possession of 200 grams or less); or confinement in prison for not less than five years nor more than 99 years or life and a fine not to exceed $50,000.00 (for possession of 200 grams or more).

Using Article 134 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the Federal Assimilated Crimes Act, the Air Force can now adopt Texas law and court-martial or impose nonjudicial punishment on an Air Force member who intentionally or knowingly uses or possesses human growth hormone or any anabolic steroid. To help assist in the detection of steroid abuse, the Air Force has recently started a test urinalysis program which is expected to be introduced to the entire Air Force in the near future.

In 1988, Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson was stripped of an Olympic gold medal because of steroid abuse. No one thought of Ben Johnson as a drug abuser, but he was. All Air Force personnel should be aware that abusing steroids can now result in their discharge from the Air Force and their prosecution under both the UCMJ and Texas law.

In the final analysis, steroid abuse is not only dangerous to your health, but it may result in prosecution and jail time. And that's an even higher penalty than Ben Johnson had to pay.

Virus

Safeguards can prevent computer 'infection'

by Tyree Marshall Jr.
1958th COMM

A computer virus can spread like a common cold. We can't prevent a cold; however, with some planning, we can prevent a computer virus from spreading.

The following list of precautionary steps can decrease your chances of contracting a computer virus.

□ Stress that Air Force Regulation 205-16, para. 8-7, specifies minimum requirements on software authorized for use in Air Force computers. Software that does not fall within these parameters is not authorized for use in Air Force computers.

□ Make backup copies of all software and backup files on a regular basis.

□ Write protect all boot diskettes and master diskettes.

□ Do not connect to any bulletin board that does not have designated approval authority.

□ A number of commercial "vaccine" programs are available; however, caution must be used when installing these programs — the programs themselves must be tested to ensure they don't contain a virus.

Also listed below are common symptoms of a computer virus:

□ An unexplained increase in the number of files on your disk.

□ An unexplained decrease in the amount of random access memory, or RAM, space in your system.

□ An operating system status command appears which you did not invoke, such as "1 file(s) copied".

□ An increase in the size of an executable program, possibly so much that it will not run.

□ Any general system slowdown, such as the execution of a program, disk access time, load time and so on.

□ A disk drive access light is on when you are not reading or writing to the disk.

□ A hard drive fails to boot (start).

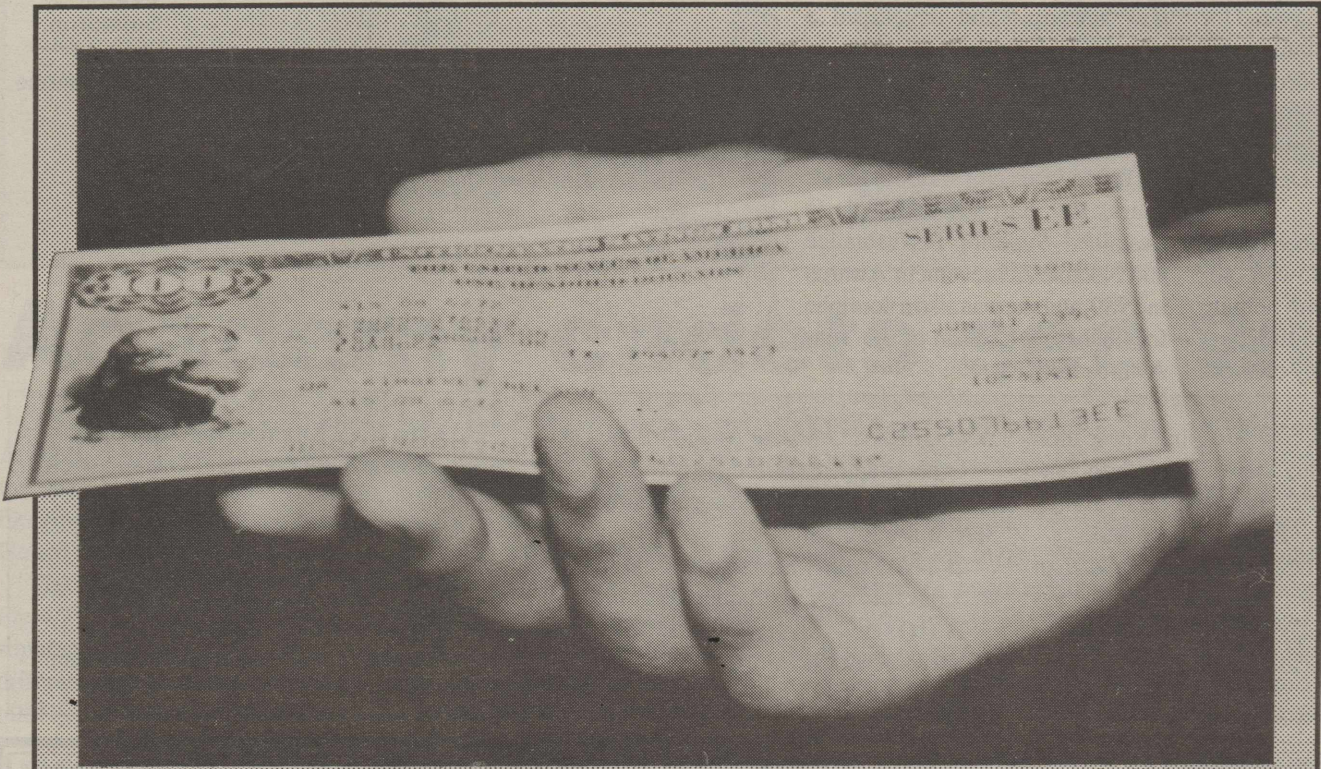

Here are guidelines to take when a virus is suspected or confirmed:

□ Immediately stop work on the system and notify the computer system security officer. Do not turn the machine off.

□ Document and report incidents through the responsible CSSO to the appropriate major command communications-computer systems security manager.

□ If connected to a network, immediately break the connection either physically or logically.

For more information, call me at 3707.

Air Force's BEST

MSS member takes personnel award

The 64th Mission Support Squadron's Judy Grimm has taken honors as the Air Force's best base-level personnel specialist for 1989.

Mrs. Grimm, supervisor of the Officer Evaluation/Enlisted Performance Reports Section in the Reese Military Personnel Office, is the reason why Reese is recognized throughout Air Training Command as the best when it comes to the OER/EPR system, according to the MSS commander.

"Reese is the only base in ATC to meet their report goal every month," said Maj. Sherill Donaldson. "This was why Judy was selected for this award at command level (in March). Winning for the entire Air Force is further proof of her abilities and the quality of her performance during the year."

Mrs. Grimm was being cited for her work even before winning this award at the ATC or Air force level. Before her selection, she was selected to go to Williams AFB, Ariz., to help with the OER/EPR system there.

In Williams' unit effectiveness inspection which followed her visit, she was credited with helping that section avoid a low rating.

In the face of the many changes that occurred in the rating systems during the year, Mrs. Grimm and her section handled the task of keeping the base informed of the changes. She gave briefings on the new systems and developed a handout to aid wing members in their understanding of the changes.

Mrs. Grimm, a native of Pennsylvania, has been with civil service for 15 years and at Reese for 12 years. Her past awards include Sustained Superior Performance and Notable Achievement Awards in 1989, and she was also a nominee for the base's Civilian of the Year Awards last year.

Judy Grimm, 64th Mission Support Squadron, reviews performance reports.

Academy cadets see wing at work

About 1,100 U.S. Air Force Academy cadets will find out what the operational Air Force is really like when they visit bases across the United States this summer.

The program, called "CONUS Field Trip," offers cadets who are sophomores a three-day visit to 34 different Air Force bases. Approximately 60 cadets visited Reese from June 4-10 and will visit Saturday through June 30, said Capt. J. R. McDonald, Reese project officer for the visits.

"We want to give cadets a first hand look at the challenges they will face as junior officers," said Commandant of Cadets Brig. Gen. Joseph Redden.

"The CONUS Field Trip is designed to do that by introducing the cadets to bases with different operational missions."

The field trip gives cadets maximum exposure to activities and perceptions of junior officers and provides them insight into operational and support missions.

During their visit they will have one-on-one contact with lieutenants and captains and receive briefings, tour several areas on base and may have an opportunity to fly in operational aircraft.

"Because we're training young men and women who will be the future leaders of the Air Force, CONUS Field Trip serves as an aid to prepare them for their leadership roles and shows them the contributions they can make as Air Force officers. As a result of these trips, cadets return to the academy with a better understanding of the Air Force," said General Redden.

"If you see cadets on base, welcome them to Reese. They don't warrant a salute, but they would love to hear your views of the Air Force," said Captain McDonald.

Command news

Dental plan improving

Several benefits will be added or improved when the 3-year-old Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan's new contract starts Aug. 1.

The new $140.1 million contract runs for one year, with four additional one-year options. The program will still be operated by Delta Dental Plan of California.

Under the contract, a new, fully paid benefit will be sealants on permanent molars for patients under age 14. These patients will also be covered for space maintainers needed because of premature loss of baby teeth.

New cost-shared benefits are prefabricated resin crowns for baby front teeth, and partial payment for some other crowns.

All current benefits under the plan will continue. For more details about the Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan, call the Reese health benefits adviser at 3385, or call the contractor at (313) 489-2240 (east of the Mississippi) or (916) 381-9368 (west of the Mississippi). (Air Force News Service)

Joint commissary sales benefit

Military commissary commands have combined their buying power to get deep price cuts for their customers in two joint-service sales.

The Army Troop Support Agency and the Air Force Commissary Service have teamed up first for a month-long sale in July. The Reese Commissary will be taking part in the sale.

The sale, a first in the continental United States, will feature 19.3 percent to 53.6 percent savings on 149 items. These savings are in addition to the 26.4 percent savings already enjoyed by commissary shoppers over commercial supermarkets.

Items featured in the sale include detergents, toothpastes, cereals, canned vegetables, drinks, frozen pizzas, dog foods, candies, cookies and frozen dinners. Thirty-eight sale items offer even greater savings via coupons. The second sale, in January 1991, will be joint Army-Navy-Air Force.

"The January sale will be the first time all three services have participated in a stateside joint sale," said Jim Shelton, an AFCOMS merchandiser. "Items in almost every department will be on sale." (Air Force News Service)

Quarterly award winners

SrA. Michael Gaillard Airman of the Quarter

Unit: 64th Supply Squadron
Duty Title: Tail number bin monitor

Time in Service: Two years, eight months

Time at Reese: One year, eight months

Hometown: Virginia Beach, Va.

Achievements during the quarter: Upon becoming a bin monitor, Airman Gaillard set his sights on reorganizing the entire tail number bin program. Results of this included providing maintainers with an enhanced listing of assets available and convenient access to commonly needed parts. He also provides the mission support unit with daily TNB listings, which in turn help to prevent emergency parts requests.

"His efforts in obtaining, issuing and monitoring required priority assets have greatly assisted in meeting the wing's mission," said Lt. Col. Mike Boyd, 64th Supply Squadron commander.

Airman Gaillard processes about 30 TNB transactions daily on three different computer systems, errorlessly. "Airman Gaillard's dedication to the Air Force enables him to accomplish his duties to the highest degree of excellence," the colonel said.

Airman Gaillard is also an acknowledged member of the Reese Honor Guard and Rifle Drill Team.

Past awards: Airman Gaillard was named squadron airman of the quarter for January through March. He was also selected for a senior airman below-the-zone promotion.

Hobbies: Weight lifting is his favorite, but he enjoys various types of sport activities.

TSgt David Gatewood NCO of the quarter

Unit: 64th Civil Engineering Squadron

Duty title: Noncommissioned officer in charge of the sheet metal shop

Time in Service: Nine years, 10 months

Time at Reese: One year, eight months

Hometown: Spotsylvania, Va.

Achievements during the quarter: As the shop NCOIC, Sergeant Gatewood does whatever is necessary to prevent changes in man-hour and material costs on each job, even if this includes reviewing each work order package prior to sending it to the site. CES's once backlog of more than 50 work requests was quickly reduced to less than 20 as a result of the sergeant's conscientious management techniques.

During inclement seasons, Sergeant Gatewood's repair assistance, both on- and off-duty, helped ensure the wing's snow and ice control equipment were operational when needed.

Taking over a position normally filled by a senior master sergeant, Sergeant Gatewood filled in as the structural superintendent. In this position, he was responsible for the management of a multicraft work force, which also required coordination between shops and precise scheduling of man-hours.

"Sergeant Gatewood is the type of person that leads by example," said Lt. Col. Pete Kloeber, CES commander. "His outstanding attitude supports his efforts toward instilling positive attitudes in his subordinates."

Sergeant Gatewood is also the NCOIC of Prime BEEF's B flight. As such, he is responsible for ensuring that all predeployment and deployment actions meet mobility requirements.

Past awards: He also was named squadron NCO of the quarter for January to March.

Hobbies: He enjoys weight lifting, basketball and fishing.

SMSGt. James Smith Senior NCO of the Quarter

Unit: 64th Civil Engineering Squadron

Duty Title: Fire chief,

Time in Service: 14 years, three months

Time at Reese: One year

Hometown: Valdosta, Ga.

Achievements during the quarter: After a thorough study of prefire plan information and training aids, Sergeant Smith developed and implemented a large-frame aircraft accident training program for Reese. This program helped to improve the fire fighting techniques of Reese firefighters.

Sergeant Smith also developed an operational plan that requires fewer people and resources, yet upholds the wing's mission requirements to their fullest. This was a direct result of the recent early release program and the lowered budgets throughout the military.

"Sergeant Smith is the epitome of a professional," said Lt. Col. Pete Kloeber, CES commander. "His military bearing and personal appearance are of the highest Air Force standards."

Sergeant Smith also tries to ensure that Reese's capabilities are kept up to standards. In doing so, he assisted with the development of a training program for hazardous material incidents that complies with the Office of Safety and Health Administration requirements. This program improved the department's response capabilities.

Past awards: He was named squadron senior NCO of the quarter (January through March).

Hobbies: Sergeant Smith enjoys all types of sports — jogging and racketball are at the top of his list.

Easter Seals camp benefits all involved

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

Fun.
Hard work.

These are some of the words one could use to describe Easter Seals Day Camp at Reese, which ends today. Thirty-nine campers, ages 5-30, and about 20 full- and part-time volunteer counselors participated in the week-long camp.

The week began when each counselor was assigned to one or two campers — each camper having some handicap. It was then that counselor's responsibility to ensure the camper had the best week possible.

The counselors had many different reasons for volunteering to help with the camp.

Some came because they wanted to meet the different individuals who were attending — such as the case for A1C Bob Boyea, 64th Services Squadron.

SSgt. Ada Jimenez, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, volunteered because "I wanted the opportunity to work with the handicapped, to help people do things they otherwise would not ever have the chance to do."

As time went by, friendships were formed between camper and counselor — some that would even continue beyond the camp.

The varied disabilities created many challenges for the counselors and some limitations for the campers. But the amount of admiration the campers had for the counselors for helping to make this an enjoyable week had no limit. This was displayed through the many smiles and hugs that filled the camp each day. As Airman Boyea noted, "It was great to see the enthusiasm of everyone, especially the kids."

Daily activities opened the door to new experiences for everyone involved. Throughout the week, people enjoyed a variety of events. These ranged from sporting events such as bowling, volleyball and swimming to creative events like designing sun visors, making pottery and setting up the camp for "Carnival Day."

"The swimming pool was the best," according to Airman Boyea. "While in the pools, they (the campers) seemed to be free — they'd splash and jump around — and the kids could be kids."

By the end of the week, counselors realized that the only real handicap these campers had is what some people perceive them as having. As Camp Director Vivian Henderson told all counselors the first day, "The only restrictions these campers have are those that you, as counselors, place upon them."

Late during the week, Mrs. Henderson was positive in her assessment of the camp's success.

"The camp was a good experience — and one that the campers will talk about until next year," she said.

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

Five-year-old Kolby Trotter's enjoyment is evident during the first day of the Easter Seals camp Monday at Reese.

Volunteers$

They may not get paid, but some people say they're worth a million

(MSGt. Ralph Monson)

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
editor

They devote countless hours to the community, yet they receive no pay.

Many of them have vast experience in their fields, but that doesn't necessarily mean they're "employed."

They're volunteers — and Monday through Friday is their week at Reese.

The five-day period has been designated Reese Volunteer Recognition Week. It's purpose, according to the Reese Family Support Center director, is to repay base volunteers for the selflessness they exhibit daily.

"Volunteers play a vital role in any base community, but this is especially true at Reese," said Phil Thierry. "When we underwent the maintenance conversion, the base lost a lot of people filling key positions on Reese — volunteers have done a lot to take up that slack."

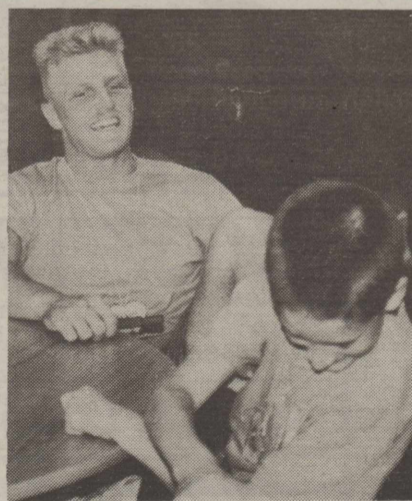

"Of course, Reese people volunteering on Reese is only one side of the story," he added. "There are many base people, both military and civilian, who give freely of their time in the Lubbock community with agencies like Big Brothers and Sisters, Meals on Wheels and the like."

Some of the week's activities will include a volunteer appreciation luncheon at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday in the Officers' Open Mess Jack Davis Room, and throughout the week various base facilities will offer discounts to base volunteers (see "The week at a glance," this page). In order to take advantage of these specials, volunteers need to contact family support today to get a letter entitling them to the discounts.

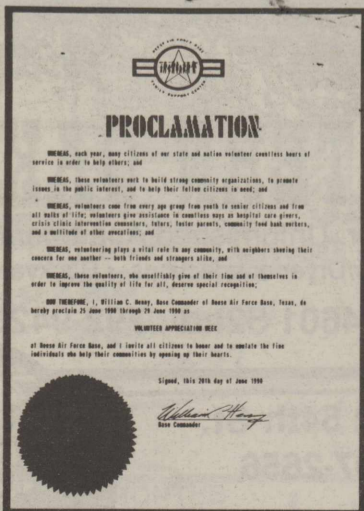

Currently, the "volunteer spirit" is evident at agencies throughout the base. However, there are four agencies which are run exclusively by volunteers — the Family Services Center, the Red Cross Office, the Thrift Shop and the Retiree Activities Office.

According to Mr. Thierry, family support is working to provide a central point of contact for base volunteer efforts. The center's Volunteer Resource Program manager's position is currently unfilled, but should be occupied soon.

"What we're aiming for is to provide a clearinghouse of sorts for all the voluntarism on base — in effect, we'd be able to make it easier to get volunteers to organizations that need them and where those volunteers will be happy working," he said.

Elia Tucker (right) helps a customer in the Reese Thrift Shop. The shop is run by Volunteers from the Officers' Wives Club.

"All right," you say, "that's all well and fine. But why should I volunteer?"

"For one thing, people can gain experience in their chosen field while setting their own hours," said MSgt. Don Mennis of family support. "Although it may not involve any pay, many employers view volunteer experience the same way they view any other work experience."

"In addition, volunteering is a good way for people new to the area to get to know others," added Sergeant Mennis, who himself volunteers some of his free time to Meals on Wheels, which serves elderly and handicapped people in Lubbock. "Even if you've been on Reese for a while, it's still a good way to meet people while helping others."

Mr. Thierry pointed out that when people do volunteer, every effort is made to ensure they'll enjoy the experience.

"One of the keys to keeping volunteers is ensuring they're put in a position where they'll be happy," he said. "We try to match up people to jobs based on their abilities and desires — that way, they're not likely to 'burn out' after a short time."

People who want to know more about volunteer opportunities on base, and agencies needing volunteers, should call the center at 3305/6394.

Reese tennis team decided

Five Reese tennis players have earned spots on the base team that will compete at the 1990 Air Training Command Tennis Tournament July 8-13 at Lackland AFB, Texas. Team members are:

- Jody Vernlund, 33rd Flying Trianing Squadron, women's open.
- Jorge Colon, 64th Security Police Squadron, men's junior veteran (age 35-39).
- Quincy Roberts, 64th Supply Squadron, men's junior veteran.
- Don Hudson, 41st Flying Training Squadron, men's open.
- Robin Lake, USAF Hospital

Reese, men's open.

The Reese team was determined during two weeks of single-elimination competition which ended earlier this week. Matches were based on the best two of three sets. "Competition in all the divisions was extremely heated," said Randy Pratt, Reese Physical Fitness Center. "I'm sure the team will represent Reese well."
