New CMSAF named

The senior enlisted advisor for Pacific Air Forces has been named as the next chief master sergeant of the Air Force.

CMSgt. Gary R. Pfingston, who takes over Aug. 1, will replace retiring CMSAF James C. Binnicker. Chief Binnicker has been the Air Force's top enlisted advisor since July 1986.

Other senior enlisted advisors nominated as possible successors to Chief Binnicker were:

□ CMSgt. Roy A. Boudreaux, Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

□ CMSgt. Willie A. Currie, U.S. Air Forces in Europe, Ramstein AB, West Germany.

□ CMSgt. Michael Di Gregorio, Air Force Systems Command, Andrews AFB, Md.

Established in 1967, the chief master sergeant of the Air Force serves as personal advisor to the chief of staff and secretary of the Air Force in matters concerning the enlisted force. The job entails worldwide travel, regular meetings with commanders and

Child development center fees change Aug. 1

Most Reese people will pay less for service

Most Reese families whose children attend the Reese Child Development Center on a regular basis can expect a reduction in center rates Aug. 1.

The new fee scale bases rates on the family's income as reported on their most recent Internal Revenue Service Form 1040 (line 31) or 1040A (line 13). "Therefore, families should bring a copy of their Form 1040 to the center before Aug. 1," said Viola Aiken, Reese Child Development Center director. Parents who are married but file separately need to provide both Forms 1040.

"Parents who do not provide their income information before Aug. 1 will be charged at the maximum rate for the entire school year," said Hugh Beam, Reese Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division chief.

The Department of Defense authorized a range of fees that child development centers Air Force-wide may charge families according to family incomes. The weekly fees for Reese, per child, will be:

□ Families making up to $27,000 per year will pay $41.

□ Members who gross $27,001 - 42,000 will pay $50.

□ Gross incomes of $42,001 - 59,000 will pay $55.

□ Families grossing $59,001 and more will be charged $65.

"Based on this new scale, families will no longer be given a reduced rate for additional children," said Mrs. Aiken.

Each base determined its specific weekly fees within the ranges authorized by DOD. In doing so, they were required to try to maintain their current revenue levels, according to Col. Roy D. Sheetz, director of Air Force MWR operations.

The fees parents pay, including the one-time $10 registration fee ($5 for each additional child), will only be used to pay wages for caregivers. This includes people providing direct care in preschool programs, according to Mr. Beam added.

Responsibility for the before- and after-school and summer programs will transfer to the Reese

Youth Center.

The new fees will apply to all children who participate in child development center programs on a regular basis. Meals will also be included in the fees for regular users.

"Reese parents whose children attend as drop-ins will continue to pay the $1.40 per hour rate for each child, plus any applicable meal and snack fees," Mr. Beam stated.

Income-based fees will be implemented throughout the Department of Defense. The new rates are required by the Military Child Care Act of 1989.

"The purpose of the act is to help make child care affordable to all

AUTOVON replaced with better system

In a move "transparent" to users, the Defense Department has retired its seemingly ageless AUTOVON for a more modern switching network.

The Defense Switched Network, or DSN, is capable of handling computer, video and voice communications. According to the commander of the 1958th Communications Squadron here, there is no change in the routine use of this network versus the old Automatic Voice Network. "Dialers use the same numbers they used for AUTOVON," Capt. Gerry Brown said. "Users can access DSN in the same way they used AUTOVON and, in most cases, the caller will dial the one or two digit access code and same seven digit number as used with AUTOVON. The vast majority of users haven't even noticed the change."

One thing people may have noticed is improved quality. DSN is a digital system, as opposed to analog used with the old AUTOVON network. The major difference, Captain Brown said, is a cleaner signal that is processed at each switch. With AUTOVON, the noise was cumulative, or increased in strength and intensity as it moved along the network.

The switch was made Feb. 13, effectively making the term AUTOVON obsolete from the world of military jargon. AUTOVON had been the Defense Department's principal unsecure, long-distance telephone system since 1965. (Adapted from Air Force News Service)

From my perspective

Readiness is a must

We have just finished another mobility exercise, the third for 1990. A total of 211 passengers and 24 teams processed 20,428 pounds of cargo. Those numbers are quite significant given the total Reese population. We do these exercises to maintain our readiness posture, a principle that is not really new in the history of the United States.

Although the world situation is changing rapidly, mostly for the good, the threat has not been fully eliminated. If anything, all facets of readiness should receive renewed emphasis because our smaller force structure must still maintain the capability to respond to a wide variety of contingencies. We must constantly pursue and maintain a more innovative approach toward mission accomplishment, thereby ensuring that we are always ready.

One way to keep the edge is by conducting mobility exercises, like the one held earlier this week. Squadrons and division throughout Reese came together to hone our mobility skills. Among those that participated were the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital, 64th Mission Support Squadron, 64th Security Police Squadron, 64th Supply Squadron, 64th Services Squadron, the Reese Transportation Section and many others.

In addition to the individuals who "deployed" from Reese, many other personnel left their "normal" day-to-day jobs in support of this exercise. You may have noticed slight delays in the Consolidated Base Personnel Office, or with the SPs at the Reese Pass and Identification Section. That's because numerous organizations assist the mobility process. From the personnel clerk who left to process 200 sets of orders in under two hours to a civil engineer who had to pull security duty for cargo, everyone had a job that was critical to the timely deployment of personnel and cargo.

With your continued efforts and support, we can be confident that should the occasion arise, we will be READY!

Welcome newcomers

I'd like to extend a warm welcome to the following individuals and their families who have recently joined the Reese team:

Col. Larry and Pat Driskill. Larry assumed the position of the assistant deputy commander for Operations. Larry and Pat come to us from New Mexico, where the colonel was the professor of Aerospace Studies at New Mexico State University.

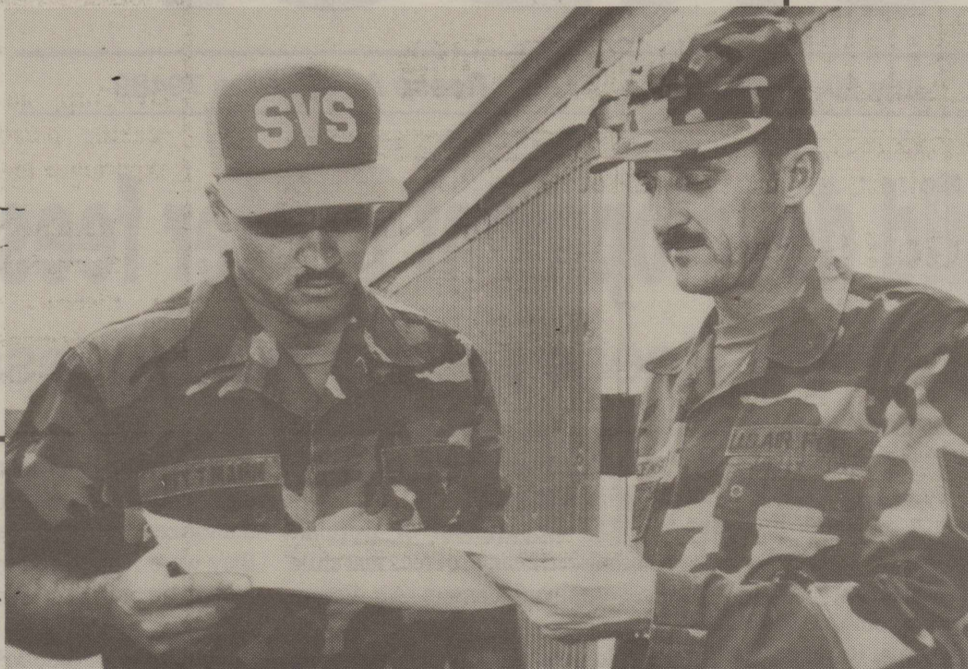

Maj. Rodney Hemmitt is our new SUPS commander. He and his wife Herman arrived here following an assignment in Cairo, Egypt.

Maj. Porter and Ann Nelson come to us from Araxos, Greece. Major Porter will be our new Base Ops officer.

MSgt. William Schutt, SUPS, took over as Contracts Supply Branch chief. Sergeant Schutt comes to us from Yokota, Japan.

MSgt. Lee and Benay Prince, HOSP, come to us from Hellenikon, Greece.

Welcome aboard!

Careline

The Careline is your direct link to me, Col. Bill Henny, 64th Flying Training Wing commander. All calls will be held in strictest confidence if the caller requests anonymity.

I urge you to leave your name and number when you call so that you can get a direct response; however, you may remain anonymous if you wish.

Before calling the Careline, consider using your chain of command to solve your problem. While you can contact the Careline directly, your immediate supervisor and/or first sergeant/commander are usually in the best position to resolve your problem.

The Careline can be reached 24 hours a day at 3273.

Getting HOSP appointments

I called the Obstetrics/Gynecology Clinic for an appointment at noon today, but there was no answer. I then called the Primary Care Clinic and was told OB/GYN closes for lunch.

Since I work in an office made up almost entirely of men, I only feel comfortable calling for an appointment during lunch when almost everyone is out of the office. Couldn't OB/GYN borrow a receptionist to answer the phones during lunch?

Thank you for bringing this to our attention. From now on, someone will always be available to answer calls during normal duty hours.

Problem with birds

I'm calling about the birds that have been nesting in between the Command Post and Consolidated Base Personnel Office.

I've heard of two people who were nearly hit by cars trying to run from these birds, which had swooped down on them. I called Environmental Health and the Wildlife Society, but they told me the birds are protected by law.

Can't something be done about this?

The birds you mention, Mississippi Blue Kites, are causing some problems for some base people. However, the bird is an endangered species and is protected by federal law.

This isn't to say that our concern for people's safety doesn't warrant action. Currently, the Environmental Health Branch is working this issue with the Federal Wildlife Department. We're not happy with the situation and will continue to pursue a fix.

For more information on the situation, please see a related article on page nine.

Air Force MWR chief calls for patron support

by Col. Roy Sheetz
Air Force MWR Operations director

There has been a lot recently in the press about the Air Force open mess system. This is because Congress has determined that military open messes must be totally self-sustaining beginning Oct. 1.

This means that $32 million in supplies, capital equipment and managers' salaries must be paid for with nonappropriated funds, rather than with taxpayers' dollars as in the past.

The key to our open messes continuing to provide us with a place to meet and play relies upon membership involvement and participation.

Meanwhile, open mess managers throughout the world are concentrating on improving services, programs and quality.

For example, dining room menus and food specials are targeting today's changing lifestyles; entertainment and special event programs are diversifying; and catering departments are upgrading their capabilities to meet your needs.

Comparatively speaking, open messes are still our best deal. From ethnic and international food specialties to healthy alternative meals and pizza to go; from dinner theaters to discos; from cocktail receptions and picnic baskets to gourmet foods; open messes will offer more and better programs and services to their members in the 1990s and beyond. (Air Force News Service)

ROUNDUP

There's only one 'first impression'

New ATC commander talks about image

by Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Ashy
ATC commander

In no major command is it more important to make a good first impression than in Air Training Command. We are the first Air Force experience for many young men and women who pass through the gates for training—military, flying and technical.

Many parents visit our students, and for them we need to make a great first impression. I'm confident we do it well, but we must remember we never get a second chance to make a good first impression.

When visitors arrive at the front gate, the first person they meet is the security police gate guard. That one individual—courteous, sharp and professional—leaves a lasting first impression of the caliber of people in ATC and the Air Force.

Civilian guests at on-base events invariably comment about the courtesy, friendliness and sharp appearance of the guard who greeted them. That's as it should be.

The same opportunity for a great first impression exists when aircrews visit. Traveling crews should be able to expect first-class treatment and facilities on ATC bases—on the flightline, in billeting or at the bowling alley.

Each of us has had something go wrong from the start. It can go smoothly from there, but we will always recall what went wrong, no matter if the problem was rectified later.

We're doing great, but we can never afford to let our attention lapse. From the gate guards to all ATC people who serve visitors at our bases, keep on making that lasting good first impression.

No matter what our jobs, the opportunity to put our best foot forward comes many times a day. Our visitors can ask no more of us.

We should expect nothing less of ourselves.

EES

New rating system still working well

Despite concerns about Enlisted Evaluation System expectations, early results indicate raters are objectively evaluating their subordinates' performance.

Concerns that these ratings expectations could be construed as quotas have, in most cases, been put to rest by Air Training Command personnel briefing teams, which addressed more than 17,000 people in the command, said Charlie Jones, chief of the evaluation branch at ATC.

The team visited every ATC base and explained how the new evaluation system is intended to work. The result is to make the EES an integral part of the weighted airman promotion system by grading people on performance, said Mr. Jones.

"The idea of the system is to make performance count more than in the past," said CMSgt. Stephen Greenwell, superintendent of the Reese Military Personnel Office. "Previously, most enlisted members had 135 airman performance report points for promotion, which made testing the key to getting promoted."

Mr. Jones explained that the key to making the evaluation system work is feedback. Although feedback is mandated by regulation, some people aren't getting feedback from their raters. In those cases, commanders and first sergeants need to know.

"If supervisors are shirking their responsibility to provide feedback, or the feedback they are providing is ineffective, the commander needs to consider removing them from supervisory duties," said Chief Greenwell.

Although feedback may not have been given in some instances, that should not be used as the sole purpose for challenging the rating on an enlisted performance report. "Something in the report needs to be inaccurate or unjust before a performance report can be challenged," Mr. Jones added.

The feedback and report system was developed after surveys showed that nearly 80 percent of the enlisted force were in agreement that the previous APR system "needed to be changed." Chief Greenwell pointed out. However, those surveyed also thought "they earned their high rating."

ATC officials are tracking the number of EPR ratings and comparing the results with the expectations.

The EPRs processed as of June 30 showed the command is "pretty much in line" with the expectation percentages, with the exception of senior and chief master sergeants, which were a little high, said Mr. Jones.

"Performance should drive the ratings, not expectations," stated Chief Greenwell.

Therefore, commanders and first sergeants need to look at each performance report to ensure that only those who really deserve a five are getting a five.

"We can't afford to go back to the inflationary ratings of the past," Mr. Jones said. "To do so denies us the ability to identify the truly superior performers." (Adapted from ATC News Service)

Summer can give rise to incidents of food poisoning

"Summertime and the livin' is easy." Of course, George Gershwin was not thinking about bacteria that cause food poisoning when he wrote the famous song. But according to an article in FDA Consumer, 95 percent of the salmonella-caused illnesses in New York state last year occurred in summer. Of course, given the right conditions, salmonella can strike in any season.

Salmonella has caused concern among public health officials because the rate of infection has been going up. According to Dr. Robert Tauxe of the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control, the reported rate of salmonella has increased more than sixfold in the northeastern United States since 1976. The rates have also increased in the southern United States and foreign countries.

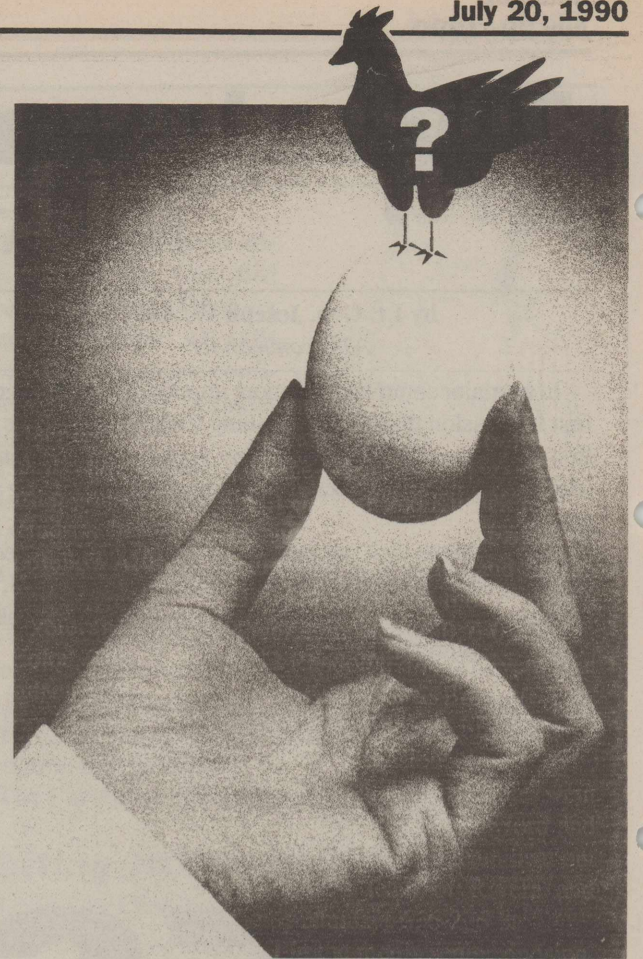

According to Capt. Stan Pelfery, 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital, symptoms of salmonella poisoning include diarrhea, vomiting, abdominal pain, chills, fever and headache. Much more frequently than not, healthy people make full recoveries from the nasty bug. But the bacteria sometimes invades organs outside the gastrointestinal tract, which can lead to complications requiring even the previously healthy to stay in a hospital.

FDA Consumer advises that while this should not cause alarm, people should be careful. Pregnant women (because the infection can pass to the unborn child), the elderly and people with weakened immune systems should be particularly cautious.

Food and Drug Administration writer Dale Blumenthal reported that last July, 21 guests at a baby shower become ill after eating a pasta dish made with raw egg. The honored guest, who was 38 weeks pregnant, delivered her baby while ill. The newborn required lengthy hospitalization for salmonella blood poisoning. In another case, a healthy adult man died after contracting salmonella poisoning from an egg-based custard pie at a company party.

Raw or undercooked shell eggs are the suspects in more than half of salmonella cases. Therefore, Captain Pelfery recommended the following egg safety tips:

- Use pasteurized eggs that have been broken and heat processed.
- Avoid serving raw eggs and foods containing them. Caesar salad, Hollandaise sauce, homemade ice cream and homemade mayonnaise can carry the bacteria.

□ Avoid lightly cooked egg dishes, such as French toast, if you are in a high risk group.

□ Cook eggs until both the yolk and white are firm, not runny.

Cook scrambled eggs for one minute at 250 degrees Fahrenheit; poach eggs for five minutes in boiling water; cook sunnyside eggs for seven minutes at 250 degrees Fahrenheit; and boil eggs for seven minutes. (Adapted from American Forces Information Service)

HOT HOT HOT

New regulation helps in 'heated' conditions

by Sgt. Kimberly Nelson
assistant editor

The heat rolls on. Although the record-breaking temperatures of June have eased, the end of July and August — historically the hottest time of the year — are yet to come. In an effort to prevent wing members from being affected by heat stress and other heat disorders, Reese has implemented a new regulation designed to reduce these risks.

The new Air Training Command regulation 161-2, "Prevention of Heat Stress Disorders," was implemented July 6 and provides guidance for ATC bases on operations in excessively hot weather conditions. It applies mainly to those people who work in hot conditions, such as non-air conditioned facilities and outdoors.

"It can also apply to members working in a normally cool facility in which the air conditioning is temporarily not working," said 2nd Lt. John Bell, Reese Bioenvironmental Engineering Section chief. Therefore, all squadron commanders and supervisors must ensure they are on the distribution list for this regulation.

The requirement for this regulation, according to Lieutenant Bell, was initiated in 1988 when ATC's inspector general suggested a "re-look" at safety and training to refine specific special interest areas, such as heat stress. ATC then decided to provide the command with uniform guidelines for the prevention of heat stress disorders.

A wing supplement, which will provide additional guidance to wing members, is presently in the developmental stages. Once it is completed, guidelines defining the various colors of flags and notification procedures, along with a definition of the Wet Bulb Globe Temperature index and its related stages will be available.

As outlined in the regulation, when the weather's forecast is for 80 degrees, bioenvironmental staff members will take WBGT index readings every two hours. This index formulates percentages of the weather, wet bulb (simulation of a sweating person), black globe (simulation of a clothed body) and dry bulb (humidity rating) temperatures.

"Based on these readings, we will be able to determine the amount of stress the heat is causing a person's body," said Lieutenant Bell. Once the WBGT index reaches 85 degrees fahrenheit, a reading will be taken every hour (normally from 2-5 p.m.).

As index readings climb, the time members are authorized to work each hour will decrease while rest time increases. The work/rest ratios will be broken into 15-minute intervals based on the WBGT index and workers' workload, beginning with 45 minutes on, 15 off during a WBGT of 80.1-81.9 degrees and a moderate workload. (See related chart, this page.)

Once the index reaches 90 degrees or higher, the only members who will continue working in less-than-suitable conditions will be those who are mission-essential. "Commanders may waive this regulation, but must provide just cause and must take actions to ensure the safety of those individuals," said the lieutenant.

Since the beginning of July, the average conditions at Reese have been in stage one from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., stage two from 2-3 p.m., then stage three from 3-5 p.m. After 5 p.m., the temperatures begin to taper off.

During the 107-degree day in June, by 3 p.m. the WBGT index read 89 degrees, which placed Reese in stage four.

"The continual winds have kept us from going into a higher stage. If a day were to hit 100 degrees and there was no wind, it would be very likely that Reese could be in stage 4 or 5 by noon," explained Lieutenant Bell.

Members working in "hot" environments are also required to receive training in heat stress prevention procedures, recognizing symptoms and knowing what to do when someone experiences heat stress. Bioengineering is currently working on a program to provide training to those affected.

"Commanders and supervisors should adhere to the regulation," said Col. Bill Henny, 64th Flying Training Wing commander. "Even though, at times, this could require modifying the way we do our job," for example:

□ Rescheduling work hours. Supervisors may have to reestablish work hours to allow for minimal work to be done between 2-4 p.m., the hottest part of the day. Platooning — where one half of the personnel are working while others are resting — may also be considered.

□ Lightening the workload. Another solution may be to reorganize the work day so any indoor projects may be done in the afternoon, while outdoor work is completed in the morning through early afternoon.

□ Shortening the hours. During exercises, especially, supervisors and commanders must keep in mind that fatigue plays a big part in the development of heat stress, and therefore may have to shorten the amount of hours everyone is active. The regulation also provides a guideline pertaining to the wear of chemical warfare gear ensembles.

According to the regulation, all wing members who work daily in "hot" conditions must be acclimatized, or allowed time to adapt to the environment, as follows:

□ Members who have been here for a considerable period of time are required to be reacclimatized annually.

□ Members arriving from a colder climate must be allowed a minimum of two weeks to acclimatize. Longer periods may be necessary based on the individual's last assignment and the time of year.

□ Members who are sick and out of work for four or more days, or on leave for nine or more days, must be allowed a minimal four days to reacclimatize.

During the "hot" period, people are reminded to drink lots of water (about one pint every 20-30 minutes is suggested). "Beverages such as coffee, tea, milk and carbonated sodas should not be used as a replacement for water," said Lieutenant Bell. People should also omit excessive sugar and salt intake and avoid greasy, fatty and heavy foods whenever possible. Clothes should fit loosely, especially around the neck and wrists.

"Although this regulation may impact the amount of people working at any given time, it does not validate a request for additional manpower. Therefore, all jobs must be performed with the people assigned," said Colonel Henny.

As index readings climb, the time members are authorized to work each hour will decrease...Once the index reaches 90 degrees, only mission-essential members will be allowed to work.

Defense accounting operations combine

The Air Force Accounting and Finance Center will be affected when military accounting and finance operations are being consolidated into a single organization.

Deputy Secretary of Defense Donald Atwood announced the consolidation July 5, emphasizing that it will strengthen the overall effectiveness of financial management within the department.

The action will result in increased efficiency, improved accounting service and reduced costs, he said, as called for in Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney's July 1989 Defense Management Report to the president.

Air Force officials estimate $150 million will be saved annually once the consolidation is complete.

The new combined organization falls under the direction of the Department of Defense's comptroller and also includes:

- Army Finance and Accounting Center, Indianapolis.
- Navy Accounting and Finance Center, Crystal City, Va.
- Navy Finance Center, Cleveland.
- Marine Corps Finance Center,

Kansas City, Kan.

□ Defense Logistics Agency Finance Center, Columbus, Ohio.

□ Washington Headquarters Services Finance and Accounting Operations, Arlington, Va.

"There is a great need within the department for standardization of financial and accounting information," Secretary Atwood said. "The integrated defense finance and accounting organization will enable us to use our limited resources with greater efficiency."

A team of senior personnel is developing a detailed plan and schedule for the formation of the new organization. The plan will be submitted within six months to Secretary Atwood for approval.

The services' finance and accounting activities currently operate largely independent of each other. A recent DOD study indicates that a single organization, when operational, will streamline accounting and finance functions throughout DOD, improve accounting operations and result in significant annual savings. Reese TV station operations underway

"The medium is the message." Fortunately for Reese and Reese Village viewers who subscribe to Mission Cable, a medium for getting the most up-to-date messages regarding wing activities is now available through Cable Channel 32. The channel has been operational since July 13.

The station, operated by the Reese Visual Information Branch, features a continual scroll of messages offering an additional source of information for the Reese community.

Submitting items for broadcast requires a visit to the Reese Public Affairs Division, Bldg. 800.

Visual information has prepared a form that is to be completed by those who wish to make an input. Messages will be reviewed by PA prior to being televised.

People needing a promotional outlet in addition to existing avenues should "tune in" to Mission Cable Channel 32.

Chief Pflingston, the 10th chief master sergeant of the Air Force, entered basic training in 1962. Throughout his career, he has worked extensively in the aircraft maintenance career field in the Strategic Air Command, Military Airlift Command and Tactical Air Command.

Chief Pflingston was a military training instructor at Lackland AFB, Texas, from 1973 to 1975. While at Lackland, he also was the chief of the military training division for the Basic Military Training School and in 1979 became the commandant of the Military Training Instructor School.

Other key assignments he has had include senior enlisted advisor to the 831st Air Division, George AFB, Calif., and senior enlisted advisor to TAC's 12th Air Force, Bergstrom AFB, Texas.

He took over as PACAF's senior enlisted advisor in January 1989.

Chief Pflingston, a native of Torrance, Calif., is married to the former Marsha A. Hunt, also of Torrance. They have two sons, Mark and Brad. (Air Force News Service)

Command news

New SDI director named

Ambassador Henry F. Cooper, former chief negotiator for the U.S. Defense and Space Arms Talks with the Soviet Union, has been selected as director of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization. Ambassador Cooper will be SDI's third director.

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney selected Ambassador Cooper to replace Air Force Lt. Gen. George L. Monahan Jr., who retired July 1.

The ambassador served as chief negotiator with the defense and space group, nuclear and space arms talks from 1987 to 1989. Prior to that, he was the group's deputy negotiator in Geneva.

Ambassador Cooper will assume leadership of the SDI program in its seventh year of research to determine the feasibility of effective defenses against ballistic missiles. (Air Force News Service)

MWR Careerline established

A "Morale, Welfare and Recreation Careerline" has been established for registrants and potential registrants in the Nonappropriated and Appropriated Fund Career Programs.

The line can be reached by calling DSN (previously known as AUTOVON) 487-3703 or commercial 512-652-3703. The line has eight different selections for callers, such as career program information, intern program information and so on.

People needing more information than is available on the careerline can still call their career program administrator at DSN 487-4055.

Reserve commander picked

The president has nominated a Texas A&M University graduate for promotion to major general and assignment as chief of the Air Force Reserve, and commander, Headquarters Air Force Reserve.

Currently deputy to the AFRES chief, Brig. Gen. John J. Closser III will succeed retiring Maj. Gen. Roger P. Scheer. Pending Senate confirmation, General Closser will begin his four-year tour Nov. 1.

General Closser has been assigned to a number of command positions, including AFRES's 10th Air Force, Bergstrom AFB, Texas, and the Reserve's first F-16 wing, the 419th Tactical Fighter Wing, Hill AFB, Utah.

General Closser earned his commission through the Air Force ROTC. He is a command pilot with more than 5,000 flying hours, all in fighter aircraft. (Air Force News Service)

by SSgt. Mike Breslin

"Whoosh!!!"

This has become a familiar sound for some people at Reese since a group of Mississippi Kites—distant cousins of the falcon—staked a claim on certain areas of Reese. Since their arrival in early spring, they've made one thing perfectly clear.

They like their privacy.

"The kites have established nesting areas in some trees on base," explained Virgil Gatlin, superintendent of the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron Entomology Section. "Once they establish their 'territory,' they become extremely protective because they have their young with them.

"When someone gets too close to their tree, the kites will often 'swoop' down on the passer-by," he added.

The kites, which have a wingspan up to three feet, have been noticed on the High Plains Golf Course (particularly by the third hole), Reese Village, the 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital main entrance, and in a tree between the Consolidated Base Personnel Office and the Operations Complex parking lot.

According to the Environmental Health Office, the base is limited in what it can do about the birds.

"Because the kite is a protected species, it's illegal to harm them in any way," said SSgt. Jeanette Yiaras of environmental health. "There is a fine for hurting them."

This doesn't mean base officials aren't working on the problem.

"Obviously, we're concerned about the safety of people on base," said Col. Ray Bean, 64th Air Base Group commander. "Preliminary discussions indicate that we may be in the 'self defense' mode at this point in time.

"The most effective preventive measures the base can take are those taken prior to the nesting period," the colonel continued. "We appear to be beyond that point now. However, we are still working with the Texas Fish and Wildlife Department to see if we can reduce the number of incidents of people being 'buzzed.'"

The kites are expected to be in the area until they head south sometime in October. Until then, entomology officials advised wing members to take the following precautions:

□ Whenever possible, avoid areas where the kites are known to be.

□ If it's necessary to go into one of these areas, try walking parallel to the line of trees. Also, as strange as it may sound, stay close to the trees. The kites are more apt to swoop into open areas.

Bioenvironmental officials also said people should wear hats when they are in kite areas, since kites tend to strike at the highest point on their target.

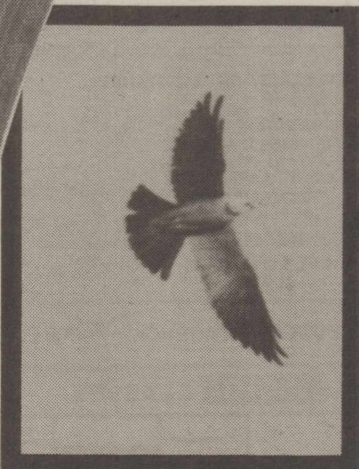

Hopefully, these tips can help wing members avoid the sound that's being heard lately on Reese.

Host families honored for contributions

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

EOM

Membership drive nearing end

As of Wednesday, the Reese Enlisted Open Mess had reached 11 percent of its planned goal of 150 new memberships.

That number was expected to drastically increase with the membership night that was held Thursday, according to Otis Burchfield, EOM manager. Actual figures were not available by press time.

"The EOM is working to provide the best service to its customers," said Mr. Burchfield. "This includes extending many of the hours of operation." Revised hours are:

□ Mamma Reesione's extended its hours to 4-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 4-10 p.m. Friday; 2-10 p.m. Saturday; and 2-9 p.m. Sunday.

□ The main lounge is now open from 3-11 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 3 p.m. to 2 a.m. Friday and Saturday; and is closed Sundays and holidays.

□ The casual lounge's extended hours are 4-8 p.m. Friday; noon to 7 p.m. Saturday; and 1:30-9 p.m. Sundays and holidays.

□ The cashier's cage is now only open from 3-8 p.m. Monday through Friday. People who need to pay their bills or outprocess can do so in the Morale, Welfare and Recreation Division, Bldg. 230.

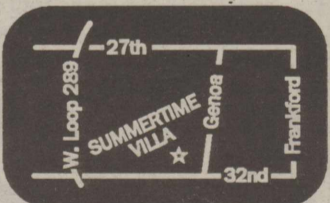

The extension of hours is one way the EOM is working to improve its service, other ways include the organization of special events. This includes a Mongolian barbecue from 6-9 p.m. July 26 on the patio for $5.95. Jody Maxx will be on hand from 8-11 p.m. in the main lounge.

Time is running short on the membership drive, and Mr. Burchfield would like to remind everyone that the unit receiving the most sign-ups during the month will receive $50 credit towards a party at the EOM.

For more information on memberships and the drive, call the EOM at 3156.

Two wing members take third in ATC tournament

(Sgt. Kimberly Nelson)

Quincey Roberts, 64th Supply Squadron, returns a serve while practicing for the 1990 Air Training Command Tennis Tournament.

Two wing members finished in third place overall during the 1990 Air Training Command Tennis Tournament July 9-12 at Lackland AFB, Texas.

Don Hudson, 41st Flying Training Squadron, took the title in the men's single division consolation finals Thursday. Hudson beat out Terry Wilson, Goodfellow AFB, 6-4 and 7-5.

Men's junior veteran single competitor Jorge Colon, 64th Security Police Squadron, defeated Dennis Sedlack from Keesler AFB, Miss., in a two-round consolation final (7-5, 6-1).

By taking first in the consolation finals, Hudson and Colon placed third overall in the tournament.

The Lackland team took the team title, followed closely by the team from Randolph AFB, Texas. Both bases also took four combined single and double titles each.

In the women's open division, Lackland's Gale Gilmore defeated teammate Trish Kittrick 6-3, 6-3, to take the title.

Gilmore and Kittrick teamed up against the Keesler AFB, Miss., team of Barb Wiltgen and Sandra Howard, to take the women's doubles division (6-0, 6-0).

Randolph's Jose Rivera beat out Keesler's Kurtis Brown (6-2, 6-1) to win top honors in the men's open single division.

The men's open doubles went to Lackland's Luke Crawford and Mike Ngu-Yen. The team beat out Randolph's team of Rivera and Sundry Muniz 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

In the men's senior division, Randolph's Jerry Hendrix defeated

Siegers Hartgers of Lowry AFB, Colo., 6-3, 7-5, to take the title.

Hendrix paired with Joseph Hanson to beat David Wiesenfeld and Don Bradley of Lackland 6-3, 7-5.

The junior veteran's singles division title went to Randolph's Stephen Chiabotti, who beat Larry Wiggins of Sheppard AFB, Texas, 6-3, 6-3.

Lackland teammates Ben Briley and Robert Gibson defeated Chiabotti and James Loppe in a three-set match (4-6, 6-3, 7-5), giving them the junior veteran's doubles championship.

Reese's other players include Jody Vernlund, 33rd Flying Training Squadron; Robin Lake, 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital; and Quincey Roberts, 64th Supply Squadron.

Golf: Enlisted awards tournament turns out to be tight contest

Two points separated the first and third place teams in the 1990 Enlisted Awards Tournament Saturday.

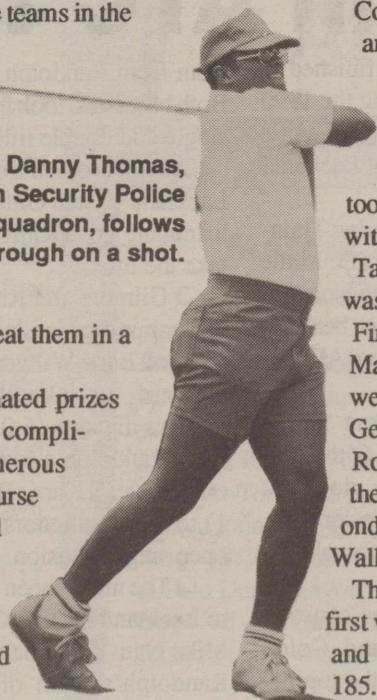

Taking first with a par of 57 was the team of Coy Martin, John Wolfe, W.B. Davis and Steve Greenwell.

The team of Paul Hulgán, Dick Coakley, Russ Ritchey and Michael Stephens who tied at par 59 with teammates Harry Eastus, Phil Scruggs, Lee Reynolds and Larry Hurd, then went on to defeat them in a one-hole playoff.

More than 40 Lubbock establishments donated prizes ranging from free balls and gift certificates to complimentary dinners and hotel stays. "The generous amount of gifts enable the High Plains Golf Course to award each tournament entrant a prize," said Bonnie Martin, golf course official.

High Plains Golf Course and base championships were decided during a three-game series held June 30 through July 1 tournament.

Danny Thomas, 64th Security Police Squadron, follows through on a shot.

Course championship went to Rich Alexander who finished with a combined par of 141. Alexander also took the title in the Championship Flight.

Dan Willson, who took second place in the Championship Flight, took the title as the base champion golfer, with a par of 142.

Taking third in the Championship Flight was Mac Jeffries who finished with 143.

First place in the First Flight went to Coy Martin, who parred at 150. Second place went to Don Neff with 152, followed by Gene Seward who had 155.

Ronald Boswell scored 162 to take first in the Second Flight. He was followed in second place by Chuck Noel with 165, and Wally Dolan with 167.

Third Flight titles went to Steve Baker in first with 179, Ernie Petrash who scored 183 and Craig Anderson who took third with 185.

Three teams battle for IM lead

Three teams are battling for lead control of the Reese Intramural Softball League.

Currently holding 14-win records are the 1958th Communications Squadron (14-2), 64th Civil Engineering Squadron "B" team (14-3) and Resources Management "A" team, (14-5).

The three top teams moved into the lead during IM action July 11-12:

July 11 on field 2, COMM won over CES "A" 15-3. CES started the scoring with two runs in the second inning. COMM's attack hit hard during the same inning to drive in eight. During the third and fourth innings, COMM was the only team to score, raising their lead to 13-2. In the fifth, CES managed another run, while COMM drove in two to end the game 15-3.

Next up was RM "A", who defeated CES "B" 9-6. Opening the game, RM scored two in the first. CES scored their first three runs in the second, which gave them the lead. RM took back the lead in the third when they drove home another two.

In the fifth, RM widened their lead with another run, followed by four in the sixth. CES attempted a comeback in the sixth with two and another in the seventh but were unable to catch RM's three-point lead.

RM's "B" team — POL — improved their standings when they defeated the 54th Flying Training Squadron, 15-8. POL opened the scoring with one in the first, followed by five in the second. They scored another four in the fourth before the 54th FTS put a two runs on the score board.

POL added another three runs to their side in the fifth, while the 54th FTS drove in five (13-7). POL players circled the bases to score two in the seventh. The 54th FTS added one more before the game ended, 15-8.

July 12 the 64th Mission Support Squadron beat CES "A" 15-2 on field 1. CES drove one run home in the first inning, but was basically shut out by MSS's 13. Taking no pity on CES, MSS players drove in two more in the second (15-1). CES picked up their final run in the top of the third.

Lockheed took on CES "A" in the following game and won 15-4. In the opening inning both games scored once each. In the third, Lockheed drove home nine to take an uncatchable lead, 10-1. CES scored one in the fourth and two in the fifth, then Lockheed scored another five to end the game.

Eager to win again, Lockheed took on the 64th Flying Training Wing Hospital, but lost 12-2. In the opening of the game, HOSP scored four, followed by five in the second. Lockheed scored their first run in the second inning and their last run in the fourth.

On field 2, COMM won over POL 13-7. By the time POL scored their first three in the top of the fourth inning, COMM had already posted 10. In an attempt to narrow the gap, POL drove home four in the fifth, but then scored no more. One COMM player crossed the plate in each of the fifth, sixth and seventh innings to end the game with a six-point COMM victory.

In the next game, RM "A" defeated the 35th FTS 19-8. Scoring started with two in the first inning for RM "A". The 35th FTS came back with one in the second, but was quickly pushed behind by RM's three in the second. Ensuring their hold on the game, RM scored another four in the third (9-1).

The 35th FTS scored three in the fourth and four in the fifth, but that had little effect as RM drove home seven in the fifth. RM scored another three in the sixth to end the game 19-8.

In the final game of the night, the 54th FTS beat the 64th Security Police Squadron 17-12. In the first inning, both teams stood tied, 3-3. The 54th FTS took the lead in the second with two, but lost it in the third when SPS scored four (6-4).

The 54th FTS players showed their stuff and crossed the plate for eight in the fifth.

During that inning, SPS drove home three. The 54th FTS scored another four in the sixth and SPS tried to catch up with two as the game ended.

Next week is the last week of regular season games before the finals begin July 31.
